The Tempest

ACT 1

Scene 1: A tempestuous noise of thunder and lightning heard. A ship is seen

A Ship-master and a Boatswain

MASTER. Bos'n!

BOATSWAIN. Here, master: what cheer?

MASTER. Good: speak to th'mariners: fall to't—yarely—or we run ourselves aground. Bestir, bestir.

He goes

Enter mariners

BOATSWAIN. Heigh my hearts! cheerly, cheerly my hearts . . . yare, yare . . . take in the topsail . . . tend to th' master's whistle . . . Blow till thou burst thy wind—if room enough!

Alonso, Sebastian, Antonio, Ferdinand, Gonzalo, and others come on deck

ALONSO. Good bos'n, have care, Where's the master? Play the men.

BOATSWAIN. I pray now, keep below.

ANTONIO. Where is the master, bos'n?

BOATSWAIN. Do you not hear him? You mar our labour. Keep your cabins: you do assist the storm.

GONZALO. Nay, good, be patient.

BOATSWAIN. When the sea is . . . Hence!
What care these roarers for the name of king?
To cabin . . . silence . . . trouble us not!

GONZALO. Good, yet remember whom thou hast aboard.

BOATSWAIN. None that I more love than myself . . . You are a Councillor—if you can command these elements to silence, and work the peace of the present, we will not hand a rope more. Use your authority . . . If you cannot, give thanks you have lived so long, and make yourself ready in your cabin for the mischance of the hour, if it so hap . . . Cheerly, good hearts . . . Out of our way, I say.

He goes

GONZALO. I have great comfort from this fellow . . . Methinks he hath no drowning mark upon him, his complexion is perfect gallows . . . Stand fast, good Fate, to his hanging, make the rope of his destiny our cable, for our own doth little advantage . . . If he be born to be hanged, our case is miserable.

They go below

Boatswain returns

BOATSWAIN. Down with the topmast . . . yare, lower, lower! bring her to try with main-course. . . . [A cry is heard below] A plague upon this howling . . . they are louder than the weather, or our office . . .

Sebastian, Antonio, and Gonzalo return

Yet again? What do you here? Shall we give o'er and drown? Have you a mind to sink?

SEBASTIAN. A pox o' your throat, you bawling, blasphemous, incharitable dog!

BOATSWAIN. Work you, then.

ANTONIO. Hang, cur; hang, you whoreson, insolent noise-maker! we are less afraid to be drowned than thou art.

GONZALO. I'll warrant him for drowning, though the ship were no stronger than a nutshell, and as leaky as an unstaunched wench.

BOATSWAIN. Lay her a-hold, a-hold! Set her two courses. Off to sea again! lay her off!

Enter mariners wet

MARINERS. All lost! to prayers, to prayers! all lost!

BOATSWAIN. What, must our mouths be cold?

GONZALO. The king and prince at prayers. Let's assist them,
For our case is as theirs.

SEBASTIAN. I am out of patience.

ANTONIO. We are merely cheated of our lives by drunkards—
This wide-chopped rascal—would thou mightst lie drowning
The washing of ten tides!'

GONZALO. He'll be hanged yet,
Though every drop of water swear against it,
And gape at wid'st to glut him.
[A confused noise below] Mercy on us!—
We split, we split!—Farewell, my wife and children!—
Farewell, brother!—We split, we split, we split!

ANTONIO. Let's all sink wi' th' king.

SEBASTIAN. Let's take leave of him.

They go below

GONZALO. Now would I give a thousand furlongs of sea—for an acre of barren ground . . . long heath; brown furze, any thing . . . The wills above be done, but I would fain die a dry death!

Scene 2: The Island. The entrance of a cave

Enter Miranda and Prospero

MIRANDA. If by your art—my dearest father—you have Put the wild waters in this roar—allay them:
The sky, it seems, would pour down stinking pitch,
But that the sea, mounting to th' welkin's cheek,
Dashes the fire out. . . . O! I have suffered
With those that I saw suffer: A brave vessel,
(Who had no doubt some noble creature in her!)
Dashed all to pieces: O the cry did knock
Against my very heart . . . poor souls, they perished. . . .
Had I been any god of power, I would
Have sunk the sea within the earth, or o'er
It should the good ship so have swallowed, and
The fraughting souls within her.

PROSPERO. Be collected,
No more amazement: Tell your piteous heart
There's no harm done.

MIRANDA. O woe the day!

PROSPERO. No harm:
I have done nothing, but in care of thee
(Of thee, my dear one; thee, my daughter) who
Art ignorant of what thou art . . . nought knowing
Of whence I am . . . nor that I am more better
Than Prospero, master of a full poor cell,
And thy no greater father.
MIRANDA. More to know
Did never meddle with my thoughts.
PROSPERO. 'Tis time
I should inform thee farther: Lend thy hand
And pluck my magic garment from me . . . So,
He lays aside his mantle
Lie there my art: Wipe thou thine eyes, have comfort,
The direful spectacle of the wreck, which touched
The very virtue of compassion in thee . . .
I have with such provision in mine art
So safely ordered, that there is no soil,
No, not so much perdition as an hair,
Betid to any creature in the vessel
Which thou heard'st cry, which thou saw'st sink: Sit down,
For thou must now know farther.
MIRANDA. You have often
Begun to tell me what I am, but stopped,
And left me to a bootless inquisition,
Concluding, 'Stay: not yet.'
PROSPERO. The hour's now come,
The very minute bids thee ope thine ear,
Obey, and be attentive. . . . Canst thou remember
A time before we came unto this cell?
I do not think thou canst, for then thou wast not
Out three years old.
MIRANDA. Certainly sir, I can.
PROSPERO. By what? by any other house, or person?
Of any thing the image, tell me, that
Hath kept with thy remembrance.
MIRANDA. 'Tis far off . . .
And rather like a dream, than an assurance
That my remembrance warrants . . . Had I not
Four—or five—women once, that tended me?
PROSPERO. Thou hadst; and more, Miranda: But how is it,
That this lives in thy mind? What seest thou else
In the dark backward and abysm of time?
If thou remembrest aught ere thou cam'st here,
How thou cam'st here thou mayst.
MIRANDA. But that I do not.
PROSPERO. Twelve year since—Miranda—twelve year since,
Thy father was the Duke of Milan and
A prince of power . . .
MIRANDA. Sir, are not you my father?
PROSPERO. Thy mother was a piece of virtue, and
She said thou wast my daughter; and thy father
Was Duke of Milan, and his only heir—
A princess; no worse issued.
MIRANDA. O the heavens,
What foul play had we, that we came from thence?
Or blesséd was't we did?
PROSPERO. Both, both, my girl. . . .
By foul play—as thou sayst—were we heaved thence,
But blessedly holp hither.
MIRANDA. O my heart bleeds
To think o'th' teen that I have turned you to,
Which is from my remembrance. Please you, farther . . .
PROSPERO. My brother, and thy uncle, called Antonio . . .
I pray thee mark me, that a brother should
Be so perfidious . . . he, whom next thyself
Of all the world I loved, and to him put
The manage of my state, as at that time
Through all the signories it was the first,
And Prospero, the prime duke, being so reputed
In dignity—and for the liberal arts,
Without a parallel; those being all my study,
The government I cast upon my brother,
And to my state grew stranger, being transported
And rapt in secret studies. Thy false uncle—
Dost thou attend me?
MIRANDA. Sir, most heedfully.
PROSPERO. Being once perfected how to grant suits,
How to deny them: who t'advance, and who
To trash for over-topping; new created
The creatures that were mine, I say, or changed 'em,
Or else new formed 'em; having both the key
Of officer and office, set all hearts i'th' state
To what tune pleased his ear, that now he was
The ivy which had hid my princely trunk,
And sucked my verdure out on't: Thou attend'st not!
MIRANDA. O good sir, I do.
PROSPERO. I pray thee mark me . . .
I thus neglecting worldly ends, all dedicated
To closeness, and the bettering of my mind
With that which, but by being so retired,
O'er-prized all popular rate, in my false brother
Awaked an evil nature; and my trust,
Like a good parent, did beget of him
A falsehood in its contrary, as great
As my trust was, which had indeed no limit,
A confidence sans bound. . . . He, being thus lorded,
Not only with what my revénue yielded,
But what my power might else exact. . . . like one,
Who having minted truth by telling of it,
Made such a sinner of his memory,
To credit his own lie, he did believe
He was indeed the duke, out o'th' substitution
And executing th'outward face of royalty
With all prerogative: Hence his ambition growing . . .
Dost thou hear?
MIRANDA. Your tale, sir, would cure deafness.
PROSPERO. To have no screen between this part he played
And him he played it for, he needs will be
Absolute Milan—me (poor man) my library
Was dukedom large enough: of temporal royalties
He thinks me now incapable. . . . confederates
(So dry he was for sway) wi' th' King of Naples
To give him annual tribute, do him homage,
Subject his 'coronet' to his 'crown,' and bend
The dukedom yet unbowed (alas, poor Milan!)
To most ignoble stooping.
MIRANDA. O the heavens!
PROSPERO. Mark his condition, and th'event, then tell me,
If this might be a brother.
MIRANDA. I should sin

To think but nobly of my grandmother,
Good wombs have borne bad sons.
PROSPERO. Now the condition....
This King of Naples, being an enemy
To me inveterate, hearkens my brother's suit,
Which was, that he in lieu o'th' premises
Of homage, and I know not how much tribute,
Should presently extirpate me and mine
Out of the dukedom, and confer fair Milan,
With all the honours, on my brother: Whereon,
A treacherous army levied, one midnight,
Fated to th' purpose, did Antonio open
The gates of Milan, and i'th' dead of darkness
The ministers for th' purpose hurried thence
Me—and thy crying self.
MIRANDA. Alack, for pity:
I not remembering how I cried out then
Will cry it o'er again: it is a hint
That wrings mine eyes to't.
PROSPERO. Hear a little further
And then I'll bring thee to the present business
Which now's upon's: without the which, this story
Were most impertinent.
MIRANDA. Wherefore did they not
That hour destroy us?
PROSPERO. Well demanded, wench:
My tale provokes that question. Dear, they durst not,
So dear the love my people bore me: nor set
A mark so bloody on the business; but
With colours fairer painted their foul ends....
In few, they hurried us aboard a bark,
Bore us some leagues to sea; where they prepared
A rotten carcass of a butt, not rigged,
Nor tackle, sail, nor mast, the very rats
Instinctively have quit it: There they hoist us
To cry to th' sea, that roared to us; to sigh
To th' winds, whose pity sighing back again
Did us but loving wrong.
MIRANDA. Alack, what trouble
Was I then to you!
PROSPERO. O, a cherubin
Thou wast that did preserve me; thou didst smile,
Infuséd with a fortitude from heaven—
When I have decked the sea with drops full salt,
Under my burden groaned—which raised in me
An undergoing stomach, to bear up
Against what should ensue.
MIRANDA. How came we ashore?
PROSPERO. By Providence divine....
Some food we had, and some fresh water, that
A noble Neapolitan, Gonzalo,
Out of his charity, who being then appointed
Master of this design, did give us, with
Rich garments, linens, stuffs, and necessaries,
Which since have steaded much. So of his gentleness,
Knowing I love my books, he furnished me
From mine own library with volumes that
I prize above my dukedom.
MIRANDA. Would I might
But ever see that man.
PROSPERO. Now I arise,
Sit still and hear the last of our sea-sorrow ...
He resumes his mantle
Here in this island we arrived, and here
Have I, thy schoolmaster, made thee more profit
Than other princess' can, that have more time
For vainer hours—and tutors not so careful.
MIRANDA. Heaven thank you for't.... And now I pray you sir—
For still 'tis beating in my mind—your reason
For raising this sea-storm?
PROSPERO. Know thus far forth.
By accident most strange, bountiful Fortune—
Now my dear lady—hath mine enemies
Brought to this shore: and by my prescience
I find my zenith doth depend upon
A most auspicious star, whose influence
If now I court not, but omit, my fortunes
Will ever after droop: Here cease more questions.
Thou art inclined to sleep ... 'tis a good dulness,
And give it way ... I know thou canst not choose...
She sleeps
Come away, servant, come; I am ready now,
Approach my Ariel.... Come!

Ariel appears

ARIEL. All hail, great master, grave sir, hail: I come
To answer thy best pleasure; be't to fly,
To swim, to dive into the fire ... to ride
On the curled clouds, to thy strong bidding task
Ariel, and all his quality.
PROSPERO. Hast thou, spirit,
Performed to point the tempest that I bade thee?
ARIEL. To every article....
I boarded the king's ship: now on the beak,
Now in the waist, the deck, in every cabin,
I flamed amazement. Sometime I'ld divide
And burn in many places; on the topmast,
The yards and bowsprit, would I flame distinctly,
Then meet, and join; Jove's lightning, the precursors
O'th' dreadful thunder-claps, more momentary
And sight-outrunning were not; the fire and cracks
Of sulphurous roaring the most mighty Neptune
Seem to besiege, and make his bold waves tremble,
Yea, his dread trident shake.
PROSPERO. My brave spirit!
Who was so firm, so constant that this coil
Would not infect his reason?
ARIEL. Not a soul
But felt a fever of the mad, and played
Some tricks of desperation; all but mariners
Plunged in the foaming brine, and quit the vessel;
Then all afire with me the king's son Ferdinand,
With hair up-staring—then like reeds, not hair—
Was the first man that leaped; cried, 'Hell is empty,
And all the devils are here.'
PROSPERO. Why, that's my spirit:
But was not this nigh shore?
ARIEL. Close by, my master.
PROSPERO. But are they, Ariel, safe?
ARIEL. Not a hair perished:
On their sustaining garments not a blemish,
But fresher than before: and, as thou bad'st me,
In troops I have dispersed them 'bout the isle:
The king's son have I landed by himself,
Whom I left cooling of the air with sighs,
In an odd angle of the isle, and sitting,
His arms in this sad knot.
PROSPERO. Of the king's ship,
The mariners, say, how thou hast disposed,

And all the rest o'th' fleet?
ARIEL. Safely in harbour
Is the king's ship; in the deep nook, where once
Thou call'dst me up at midnight to fetch dew
From the still-vexed Bermoothes, there she's hid;
The mariners all under hatches stowed,
Who, with a charm joined to their suff'red labour,
I have left asleep: and for the rest o'th' fleet,
Which I dispersed, they all have met again,
And are upon the Mediterranean flote
Bound sadly home for Naples,
Supposing that they saw the king's ship wrecked,
And his great person perish.
PROSPERO. Ariel, thy charge
Exactly is performed; but there's more work:
What is the time o'th' day?
ARIEL. Past the mid season.
PROSPERO. At least two glasses . . . The time 'twixt six and now,
Must by us both be spent most preciously.
ARIEL. Is there more toil? Since thou dost give me pains,
Let me remember thee what thou hast promised,
Which is not yet performed me.
PROSPERO. How now? moody?
What is't thou canst demand?
ARIEL. My liberty.
PROSPERO. Before the time be out? no more . . .
ARIEL. I prithee,
Remember I have done thee worthy service,
Told thee no lies, made no mistakings, served
Without or grudge or grumblings; thou didst promise
To bate me a full year.
PROSPERO. Dost thou forget
From what a torment I did free thee?
ARIEL. No.
PROSPERO. Thou dost: and think'st it much to tread the ooze
Of the salt deep,
To run upon the sharp wind of the north,
To do me business in the veins o'th'earth
When it is baked with frost.
ARIEL. I do not, sir.
PROSPERO. Thou liest, malignant thing: hast thou forgot
The foul witch Sycorax, who with age and envy
Was grown into a hoop? hast thou forgot her?
ARIEL. No, sir.
PROSPERO. Thou hast, Where was she born? speak: tell me . . .
ARIEL. Sir, in Argier.
PROSPERO. O, was she so? I must
Once in a month recount what thou hast been,
Which thou forget'st. . . . This damned witch, Sycorax,
For mischiefs manifold, and sorceries terrible
To enter human hearing, from Argier
Thou know'st was banished: for one thing she did
They would not take her life . . . Is not this true?
ARIEL. Ay, sir.
PROSPERO. This blue-eyed hag was hither brought with child,
And here was left by th' sailors; thou, my slave,
As thou report'st thyself, was then her servant,
And for thou wast a spirit too delicate
To act her earthy and abhorred commands,
Refusing her grand hests, she did confine thee,
By help of her more potent ministers,
And in her most unmitigable rage,
Into a cloven pine—within which rift
Imprisoned, thou didst painfully remain
A dozen years: within which space she died,
And left thee there: where thou didst vent thy groans,
As fast as mill-wheels strike: Then was this island,
(Save for the son that she did litter here,
A freckled whelp, hag-born) not honoured with
A human shape.
ARIEL. Yes: Caliban her son.
PROSPERO. Dull thing, I say so: he, that Caliban
Who now I keep in service. Thou best know'st
What torment I did find thee in; thy groans
Did make wolves howl, and penetrate the breasts
Of ever-angry bears; it was a torment
To lay upon the damned, which Sycorax
Could not again undo: it was mine art,
When I arrived, and heard thee, that made gape
The pine, and let thee out.
ARIEL. I thank thee master.
PROSPERO. If thou more murmur'st, I will rend an oak,
And peg thee in his knotty entrails, till
Thou hast howled away twelve winters.
ARIEL. Pardon, master.
I will be correspondent to command,
And do my spriting gently.
PROSPERO. Do so: and after two days I will discharge thee.
ARIEL. That's my noble master!
What shall I do? say what? what shall I do?
PROSPERO. Go make thyself like a nymph o'th' sea, be subject
To no sight but thine and mine; invisible
To every eye-ball else: go take this shape,
And hither come in't . . . go . . . hence
With diligence. Ariel vanishes
Awake, dear heart, awake, thou hast slept well,
Awake.
MIRANDA. The strangeness of your story put
Heaviness in me.
PROSPERO. Shake it off . . . Come on,
We'll visit Caliban, my slave, who never
Yields us kind answer. They approach a hole
MIRANDA. 'Tis a villain, sir,
I do not love to look on.
PROSPERO. But, as 'tis,
We cannot miss him: he does make our fire,
Fetch in our wood, and serves in offices
That profit us . . . What ho! slave! Caliban!
Thou earth, thou! speak.
CALIBAN [from the hole]. There's wood enough within.
PROSPERO. Come forth, I say, there's other business for thee:
Come, thou tortoise, when?

Ariel reappears, like a water-nymph

Fine apparition: my quaint Ariel,
Hark in thine ear.
ARIEL. My lord, it shall be done.
Vanishes
PROSPERO. Thou poisonous slave, got by the devil himself

Upon thy wicked dam; come forth.

Caliban comes from the hole

CALIBAN. As wicked dew as e'er my mother brushed
With raven's feather from unwholesome fen
Drop on you both: a south-west blow on ye,
And blister you all o'er!
PROSPERO. For this, be sure, to-night thou shalt have cramps,
Side-stitches that shall pen thy breath up—urchins
Shall, for that vast of night that they may work,
All exercise on thee: thou shalt be pinched
As thick as honeycomb, each pinch more stinging
Than bees had made 'em.
CALIBAN. I must eat my dinner . . .
This island's mine, by Sycorax my mother,
Which thou tak'st from me: when thou cam'st first,
Thou strok'st me, and made much of me . . . wouldst give me
Water with berries in't; and teach me how
To name the bigger light, and how the less,
That burn by day and night: and then I loved thee,
And showed thee all the qualities o'th'isle,
The fresh springs, brine-pits, barren place and fertile.
Curst be I that did so! All the charms
Of Sycorax: toads, bettles, bats, light on you!
For I am all the subjects that you have,
Which first was mine own king: and here you sty me
In this hard rock, whiles you do keep from me
The rest o'th'island.
PROSPERO. Thou most lying slave,
Whom stripes may move, not kindness: I have used thee—
Filth as thou art!—with human care, and lodged thee
In mine own cell, till thou didst seek to violate
The honour of my child.
CALIBAN. O ho, O ho! would't had been done!
Thou didst prevent me—I had peopled else
This isle with Calibans.
MIRANDA. Abhorréd slave,
Which any print of goodness will not take,
Being capable of all ill: I pitied thee,
Took pains to make thee speak, taught thee each hour
One thing or other: when thou didst not—savage!—
Know thine own meaning, but wouldst gabble like
A thing most brutish, I endowed thy purposes
With words that made them known. But thy vile race,
Though thou didst learn, had that in't which good natures
Could not abide to be with; therefore wast thou
Deservedly confined into this rock,
Who hadst deserved more than a prison.
CALIBAN. You taught me language, and my profit on't
Is, I know how to curse: the red-plague rid you,
For learning me your language.
PROSPERO. Hag-seed, hence . . .
Fetch us in fuel, and be quick thou'rt best
To answer other business: Shrug'st thou, malice?
If thou neglect'st, or dost unwillingly
What I command, I'll rack thee with old cramps,
Fill all thy bones with achës, make thee roar,
That beasts shall tremble at thy din.
CALIBAN. No, pray thee. . . .
[aside] I must obey—his art is of such power,
It would control my dam's god Setebos,
And make a vassal of him.
PROSPERO. So, slave, hence!
Caliban goes

Enter Ferdinand, and Ariel invisible, playing and singing

Ariel's SONG.
Come unto these yellow sands,
And then take hands:
Curtsied when you have, and kissed
The wild waves whist:
Foot it featly here and there,
And sweet sprites bear
The burthen . . . Hark!
Hark!
BURTHEN [dispersedly]. Bow-wow!
ARIEL. The watch-dogs bark:
BURTHEN. Bow-wow!
ARIEL. Hark, hark, I hear
The strain of strutting chanticleer
Cry—
BURTHEN. Cockadiddle-dow!
FERDINAND. Where should this music be? i'th'air, or th'earth?
It sounds no more: and sure it waits upon
Some god o'th'island. Sitting on a bank,
Weeping again the king my father's wreck. . . .
This music crept by me upon the waters,
Allaying both their fury and my passion
With its sweet air: thence I have followed it—
Or it hath drawn me rather. But 'tis gone. . . .
No, it begins again.

Ariel's SONG.
Full fathom five thy father lies,
Of his bones are coral made:
Those are pearls that were his eyes.
Nothing of him that doth fade,
But doth suffer a sea-change
Into something rich and strange . . .
Sea-nymphs hourly ring his knell.
BURTHEN. Ding-dong.
ARIEL. Hark! now I hear them—
Ding-dong bell.
FERDINAND. The ditty does remember my drowned father.
This is no mortal business, nor no sound
That the earth owes: I hear it now above me.
PROSPERO. The fringéd curtains of thine eye advance,
And say what thou seest yond.
MIRANDA. What is't? a spirit?
Lord, how it looks about . . . Believe me, sir,
It carries a brave form. . . . But 'tis a spirit.
PROSPERO. No wench, it eats and sleeps and hath such senses
As we have—such. . . . This gallant which thou seest
Was in the wreck: and but he's something stained
With grief—that's beauty's canker—thou mightst call him
A goodly person: he hath lost his fellows,
And strays about to find 'em.

MIRANDA. I might call him
A thing divine—for nothing natural
I ever saw so noble.
PROSPERO [holding back]. It goes on I see,
As my soul prompts it ... Spirit, fine spirit, I'll free thee
Within two days for this.
FERDINAND. Most sure, the goddess
On whom these airs attend ... Vouchsafe my prayer
May know if you remain upon this island,
And that you will some good instruction give
How I may bear me here ... My prime request,
Which I do last pronounce, is—O you wonder!—
If you be maid, or no?
MIRANDA. No wonder, sir,
But certainly a maid.
FERDINAND. My language? heavens ...
I am the best of them that speak this speech,
Were I but where 'tis spoken.
PROSPERO. How? the best?
What wert thou if the King of Naples heard thee?
FERDINAND. A single thing, as I am now, that wonders
To hear thee speak of Naples ... He does hear me,
And that he does, I weep: myself am Naples,
Who with mine eyes—never since at ebb—beheld
The king my father wrecked.
MIRANDA. Alack, for mercy!
FERDINAND. Yes, faith, and all his lords—the Duke of Milan
And his brave son being twain.
PROSPERO [to himself]. The Duke of Milan
And his more braver daughter could control thee,
If now 'twere fit to do't .... At the first sight
They have changed eyes ... Delicate Ariel,
I'll set thee free for this.... A word, good sir.
I fear you have done yourself some wrong: a word.
MIRANDA. Why speaks my father so ungently? This
Is the third man that e'er I saw ... the first,
That e'er I sighed for: pity move my father
To be inclined my way.
FERDINAND. O, if a virgin,
And your affection not gone forth, I'll make you
The queen of Naples.
PROSPERO. Soft, sir, one word more....
They are both in either's powers: but this swift business
I must uneasy make, lest too light winning
Make the prize light.... One word more: I charge thee
That thou attend me: thou dost here usurp
The name thou ow'st not—and hast put thyself
Upon this island, as a spy, to win it
From me, the lord on't.
FERDINAND. No, as I am a man.
MIRANDA. There's nothing ill can dwell in such a temple.
If the ill spirit have so fair a house,
Good things will strive to dwell with't.
PROSPERO. Follow me ...
Speak not you for him: he's a traitor ... Come,
I'll manacle thy neck and feet together:
Sea-water shalt thou drink: thy food shall be
The fresh-brook mussels, withered roots, and husks
Wherein the acorn cradled.... Follow.
FERDINAND. No,
I will resist such entertainment, till
Mine enemy has more power.
He draws and is charmed from moving
MIRANDA. O dear father,
Make not too rash a trial of him, for
He's gentle, and not fearful.
PROSPERO. What, I say,
My foot my tutor! Put thy sword up traitor,
Who mak'st a show, but dar'st not strike, thy conscience
Is so possessed with guilt: come, from thy ward,
For I can here disarm thee with this stick,
And make thy weapon drop.
MIRANDA. Beseech you father.
PROSPERO. Hence: hang not on my garments.
MIRANDA. Sir have pity,
I'll be his surety.
PROSPERO. Silence: one word more
Shall make me chide thee, if not hate thee: what,
An advocate for an impostor! Hush:
Thou think'st there is no more such shapes as he,
Having seen but him and Caliban ... Foolish wench,
To th' most of men, this is a Caliban,
And they to him are angels.
MIRANDA. My affections
Are then most humble: I have no ambition
To see a goodlier man.
PROSPERO. Come on, obey:
Thy nerves are in their infancy again,
And have no vigour in them.
FERDINAND. So they are:
My spirits, as in a dream, are all bound up ...
My father's loss, the weakness which I feel,
The wreck of all my friends, nor this man's threats,
To whom I am subdued, are but light to me,
Might I but through my prison once a day
Behold this maid: all corners else o'th'earth
Let liberty make use of ... space enough
Have I in such a prison.
PROSPERO. It works ... [to Ferdinand] Come on....
[to Ariel] Thou hast done well, fine Ariel ...
[to Ferdinand] Follow me.
[to Ariel] Hark what thou else shalt do me.
MIRANDA. Be of comfort,
My father's of a better nature, sir,
Than he appears by speech: this is unwonted
Which now came from him.
PROSPERO. Thou shalt be as free
As mountain winds; but then exactly do
All points of my command.
ARIEL. To th'syllable.
PROPERO [to Ferdinand]. Come, follow:
[to Miranda] speak not for him.

ACT 2

Scene 1: Another part of the Island

King Alonso, Gonzalo, Adrian, Francisco, Sebastian, Antonio and others

GONZALO. Beseech you, sir, be merry; you have cause,
So have we all, of joy; for our escape
Is much beyond our loss; our hint of woe
Is common—every day some sailor's wife,
The masters of some merchant, and the merchant,
Have just our theme of woe: But for the miracle—
I mean our preservation—few in millions
Can speak like us: then wisely, good sir, weigh

Our sorrow with our comfort.
ALONSO. Prithee, peace.
SEBASTIAN. He receives comfort like cold porridge.
ANTONIO. The visitor will not give him o'er so.
SEBASTIAN. Look, he's winding up the watch of his wit—by and by it will strike.
GONZALO. Sir—
SEBASTIAN. One ... tell.
GONZALO. When every grief is entertained that's offered,
Comes to the entertainer—
SEBASTIAN. A dollar.
GONZALO. Dolour comes to him, indeed. You have spoken truer than you purposed.
SEBASTIAN. You have taken it wiselier than I meant you should.
GONZALO. Therefore, my lord,—
ANTONIO. Fie, what a spendthrift is he of his tongue.
ALONSO. I prithee, spare.
GONZALO. Well, I have done: But yet—
SEBASTIAN. He will be talking.
ANTONIO. Which, of he or Adrian, for a good wager, first begins to crow?
SEBASTIAN. The old cock.
ANTONIO. The cockerel.
SEBASTIAN. Done: the wager?
ANTONIO. A laughter.
SEBASTIAN. A match!
ADRIAN. Though this island seem to be desert,—
ANTONIO. Ha, ha, ha!
SEBASTIAN. So! you're paid.
ADRIAN. —uninhabitable, and almost inaccessible,—
SEBASTIAN. Yet—
ADRIAN. —yet—
ANTONIO. He could not miss't.
ADRIAN. —it must needs be of subtle, tender and delicate temperance.
ANTONIO. 'Temperance' was a delicate wench.
SEBASTIAN. Ay, and a subtle, as he most learnedly delivered.
ADRIAN. The air breathes upon us here most sweetly.
SEBASTIAN. As if it had lungs, and rotten ones.
ANTONIO. Or, as 'twere perfumed by a fen.
GONZALO. Here is every thing advantageous to life.
ANTONIO. True, save means to live.
SEBASTIAN. Of that there's none, or little.
GONZALO. How lush and lusty the grass looks! how green!
ANTONIO. The ground, indeed, is tawny.
SEBASTIAN. With an eye of green in't.
ANTONIO. He misses not much.
SEBASTIAN. No: he doth but mistake the truth totally.
GONZALO. But the rarity of it is, which is indeed almost beyond credit,—
SEBASTIAN. As many vouched rarities are.
GONZALO. —that our garments, being, as they were, drenched in the sea, hold notwithstanding their freshness and glosses, being rather new dyed than stained with salt water.
ANTONIO. If but one of his pockets could speak, would it not say he lies?
SEBASTIAN. Ay, or very falsely pocket up his report.
GONZALO. Methinks our garments are now as fresh as when we put them on first in Afric, at the marriage of the king's fair daughter Claribel to the King of Tunis.
SEBASTIAN. 'Twas a sweet marriage, and we prosper well in our return.
ADRIAN. Tunis was never graced before with such a paragon to their queen.
GONZALO. Not since widow Dido's time.
ANTONIO. Widow? a pox o'that: How came that widow in? Widow Dido!
SEBASTIAN. What if he had said 'widower Æneas' too? Good Lord, how you take it!
ADRIAN. Widow Dido, said you? you make me study of that: She was of Carthage, not of Tunis.
GONZALO. This Tunis, sir, was Carthage.
ADRIAN. Carthage?
GONZALO. I assure you, Carthage.
ANTONIO. His word is more than the miraculous harp.
SEBASTIAN. He hath raised the wall, and houses too.
ANTONIO. What impossible matter will he make easy next?
SEBASTIAN. I think he will carry this island home in his pocket, and give it his son for an apple.
ANTONIO. And, sowing the kernels of it in the sea, bring forth more islands.
GONZALO. Ay.
ANTONIO. Why, in good time.
GONZALO. Sir, we were talking, that our garments seem now as fresh as when we were at Tunis at the marriage of your daughter, who is now queen.
ANTONIO. And the rarest that e'er came there.
SEBASTIAN. Bate, I beseech you, widow Dido.
ANTONIO. O, widow Dido! ay, widow Dido.
GONZALO. Is not, sir, my doublet as fresh as the first day I wore it? I mean, in a sort.
ANTONIO. That sort was well fished for.
GONZALO. When I wore it at your daughter's marriage?
ALONSO. You cram these words into mine ears, against
The stomach of my sense ... Would I had never Married my daughter there: for, coming thence,
My son is lost, and, in my rate, she too,
Who is so far from Italy removed,
I ne'er again shall see her ... O thou mine heir
Of Naples and of Milan, what strange fish
Hath made his meal on thee?
FRANCISCO. Sir, he may live.
I saw him beat the surges under him,
And ride upon their backs; he trod the water,
Whose enmity he flung aside, and breasted
The surge most swoln that met him: his bold head
'Bove the contentious waves he kept, and oared
Himself with his good arms in lusty stroke
To th' shore, that o'er his wave-worn basis bowed,
As stooping to relieve him: I not doubt
He came alive to land.
ALONSO. No, no, he's gone.
SEBASTIAN. Sir, you may thank yourself for this great loss,
That would not bless our Europe with your daughter,
But rather loose her to an African,
Where she, at least, is banished from your eye,
Who hath cause to wet the grief on't.
ALONSO. Prithee, peace.
SEBASTIAN. You were kneeled to, and importuned otherwise
By all of us: and the fair soul herself
Weighed between loathness and obedience, at

Which end o'th' beam sh'ould bow ... We have lost your son,
I fear, for ever: Milan and Naples have
Moe widows in them of this business' making,
Than we bring men to comfort them:
The fault's your own.
ALONSO. So is the dear'st o'th' loss.
GONZALO. My lord Sebastian,
The truth you speak doth lack some gentleness,
And time to speak it in: you rub the sore,
When you should bring the plaster.
SEBASTIAN. Very well.
ANTONIO. And most chirurgeonly.
GONZALO. It is foul weather in us all, good sir,
When you are cloudy.
SEBASTIAN. Foul weather?
ANTONIO. Very foul.
GONZALO. Had I plantation of this isle, my lord,—
ANTONIO. He'd sow't with nettle-seed.
SEBASTIAN. Or docks, or mallows.
GONZALO. And were the king on't, what would I do?
SEBASTIAN. 'Scape being drunk, for want of wine.
GONZALO. I'th' commonwealth I would by contraries
Execute all things: for no kind of traffic
Would I admit: no name of magistrate:
Letters should not be known: riches, poverty,
And use of service—none: contract, succession,
Bourn, bound of land, tilth, vineyard—none:
No use of metal, corn, or wine, or oil:
No occupation, all men idle, all:
And women too, but innocent and pure:
No sovereignty—
SEBASTIAN. Yet he would be king on't.
ANTONIO. The latter end of his commonwealth forgets the beginning.
GONZALO. All things in common nature should produce
Without sweat or endeavour: treason, felony,
Sword, pike, knife, gun, or need of any engine,
Would I not have: but nature should bring forth,
Of its own kind, all foison, all abundance,
To feed my innocent people.
SEBASTIAN. No marrying 'mong his subjects?
ANTONIO. None, man, all idle; whores and knaves ...
GONZALO. I would with such perfection govern, sir,
T'excel the golden age, and—
SEBASTIAN. 'Save his majesty!
ANTONIO. Long live Gonzalo!
GONZALO. Do you mark me, sir?
ALONSO. Prithee, no more: thou dost talk nothing to me.
GONZALO. I do well believe your highness, and did it to minister occasion to these gentlemen, who are of such sensible and nimble lungs, that they always use to laugh at nothing.
ANTONIO. 'Twas you we laughed at.
GONZALO. Who, in this kind of merry fooling, am nothing to you: so you may continue, and laugh at nothing still.
ANTONIO. What a blow was there given!
SEBASTIAN. An it had not fallen flat-long.
GONZALO. You are gentlemen of brave mettle: you would lift the moon out of her sphere—if she would continue in it five weeks without changing!

Ariel appears aloft, playing solemn music

SEBASTIAN. We would so, and then go a bat-fowling.
ANTONIO. Nay, good my lord, be not angry.
GONZALO. No, I warrant you. I will not adventure my discretion so weakly ... Will you laugh me asleep, for I am very heavy?
ANTONIO. Go sleep, and hear us.
All sleep but Alonso, Sebastian and Antonio
ALONSO. What, all so soon asleep? I wish mine eyes
Would, with themselves, shut up my thoughts. I find,
They are inclined to do so.
SEBASTIAN. Please you, sir,
Do not omit the heavy offer of it:
It seldom visits sorrow; when it doth,
It is a comforter.
ANTONIO. We two, my lord,
Will guard your person, while you take your rest,
And watch your safety.
ALONSO. Thank you ... wondrous heavy.
Alonso sleeps. Ariel vanishes
SEBASTIAN. What a strange drowsiness possesses them!
ANTONIO. It is the quality o'th' climate.
SEBASTIAN. Why
Doth it not then our eyelids sink? I find not Myself disposed to sleep.
ANTONIO. Nor I. My spirits are nimble:
They fell together all, as by consent;
They dropped—as by a thunder-stroke ... What might,
Worthy Sebastian? O, what might? No more ...
And yet, methinks, I see it in thy face,
What thou shouldst be: th'occasion speaks thee, and
My strong imagination sees a crown
Dropping upon thy head.
SEBASTIAN. What! art thou waking?
ANTONIO. Do you not hear me speak?
SEBASTIAN. I do, and surely
It is a sleepy language; and thou speak'st
Out of thy sleep: What is it thou didst say?
This is a strange repose, to be asleep
With eyes wide open; standing, speaking, moving ...
And yet so fast asleep.
ANTONIO. Noble Sebastian,
Thou let'st thy fortune sleep ... die rather ... wink'st
Whiles thou art waking.
SEBASTIAN. Thou dost snore distinctly,
There's meaning in thy snores.
ANTONIO. I am more serious than my custom: you
Must be so too, if heed me: which to do,
Trebles thee o'er.
SEBASTIAN. Well: I am standing water.
ANTONIO. I'll teach you how to flow.
SEBASTIAN. Do so: to ebb
Hereditary sloth instructs me.
ANTONIO. O!
If you but knew how you the purpose cherish
Whiles thus you mock it: how, in stripping it,
You more invest it: ebbing men, indeed,—
Most often—do so near the bottom run
By their own fear, or sloth.
SEBASTIAN. Prithee, say on.
The setting of thine eye and cheek proclaim
A matter from thee; and a birth, indeed,
Which throes thee much to yield.

ANTONIO. Thus, sir:
Although this lord of weak remembrance; this,
Who shall be of as little memory
When he is earthed, hath here almost persuaded—
For he's a spirit of persuasion, only
Professes to persuade—the king his son's alive,
'Tis as impossible that he's undrowned,
As he that sleeps here swims.
SEBASTIAN. I have no hope
That he's undrowned.
ANTONIO. O, out of that 'no hope'
What great hope have you! no hope, that way, is Another way so high an hope, that even
Ambition cannot pierce a wink beyond,
But doubt discovery there. Will you grant with me
That Ferdinand is drowned?
SEBASTIAN. He's gone.
ANTONIO. Then, tell me,
Who's the next heir of Naples?
SEBASTIAN. Claribel.
ANTONIO. She that is queen of Tunis: she that dwells
Ten leagues beyond man's life: she that from Naples
Can have no note—unless the sun were post:
The man i'th' moon's too slow—till new-born chins
Be rough and razorable: she that . . . from whom
We were all sea-swallowed, though some cast again,
And that by destiny—to perform an act,
Whereof what's past is prologue; what to come,
In yours and my discharge.
SEBASTIAN. What stuff is this? How say you?
'Tis true, my brother's daughter's queen of Tunis,
So is she heir of Naples—'twixt which regions
There is some space.
ANTONIO. A space whose every cubit
Seems to cry out, 'How shall that Claribel
Measure us back to Naples? Keep in Tunis,
And let Sebastian wake' . . . Say, this were death
That now hath seized them—why, they were no worse
Than now they are: There be that can rule Naples,
As well as he that sleeps: lords, that can prate
As amply and unnecessarily
As this Gonzalo: I myself could make
A chough of as deep chat: O, that you bore
The mind that I do; what a sleep were this
For your advancement! Do you understand me?
SEBASTIAN. Methinks I do.
ANTONIO. And how does your content
Tender your own good fortune?
SEBASTIAN. I remember
You did supplant your brother Prospero.
ANTONIO. True:
And look how well my garments sit upon me,
Much feater than before: my brother's servants
Were then my fellows, now they are my men.
SEBASTIAN. But, for your conscience?
ANTONIO. Ay, sir: where lies that? if 'twere a kibe,
'Twould put me to my slipper: but I feel not
This deity in my bosom . . . Twenty consciences,
That stand 'twixt me and Milan, candied be they,
And melt ere they molest . . . Here lies your brother,
No better than the earth he lies upon.
If he were that which now he's like—that's dead—
Whom I with this obedient steel—three inches of it—
Can lay to bed for ever . . . whiles you, doing thus,
To the perpetual wink for aye might put
This ancient morsel . . . this Sir Prudence, who Should not upbraid our course . . . For all the rest,
They'll take suggestion, as a cat laps milk—
They'll tell the clock to any business that
We say befits the hour.
SEBASTIAN. Thy case, dear friend,
Shall be my precedent: as thou got'st Milan,
I'll come by Naples . . . Draw thy sword. One stroke
Shall free thee from the tribute which thou payest,
And I the king shall love thee.
ANTONIO. Draw together:
And when I rear my hand, do you the like
To fall it on Gonzalo.
SEBASTIAN. O, but one word.
They talk apart

Music. Ariel appears again, unseen by them

ARIEL. My master through his art foresees the danger,
That you—his friend—are in, and sends me forth,
(For else his project dies) to keep them living.
Sings in Gonzalo's ear
While you here do snoring lie,
Open-eyed conspiracy
His time doth take:
If of life you keep a care,
Shake of slumber, and beware. . . .
Awake! Awake!
ANTONIO. Then let us both be sudden.
GONZALO [waking]. Now, good angels preserve the king!
Why, how now? Ho! awake!
Shaking Alonso, who wakes.
ALONSO. Why are you drawn?
Wherefore this ghastly looking? What's the matter?
SEBASTIAN. Whiles we stood here securing your repose,
Even now, we heard a hollow burst of bellowing
Like bulls, or rather lions—did't not wake you?
It struck mine ear most terribly.
ALONSO. I heard nothing.
ANTONIO. O, 'twas a din to fright a monster's ear;
To make an earthquake! sure, it was the roar
Of a whole herd of lions.
ALONSO. Heard you this, Gonzalo?
GONZALO. Upon mine honour, sir, I heard a humming—
And that a strange one too—which did awake me . . .
I shaked you, sir, and cried: as mine eyes opened,
I saw their weapons drawn . . . there was a noise,
That's verity. 'Tis best we stand upon our guard;
Or that we quit this place: let's draw our weapons.
ALONSO. Lead off this ground, and let's make further search
For my poor son.
GONZALO. Heavens keep him from these beasts . . .
For he is, sure, i'th'island.
ALONSO. Lead away.
ARIEL. Prospero my lord shall know what I have done. . . .
So, king, go safely on to seek thy son. Vanishes

Scene 2

Enter Caliban, with a burden of wood. A noise of thunder heard

CALIBAN. All the infections that the sun sucks up
From bogs, fens, flats, on Prosper fall, and make him
By inch-meal a disease: His spirits hear me,
And yet I needs must curse.... But they'll nor pinch,
Fright me with urchin-shows, pitch me i'th' mire,
Nor lead me, like a firebrand, in the dark
Out of my way, unless he bid 'em; but
For every trifle are they set upon me—
Sometime like apes, that mow and chatter at me,
And after bite me: then like hedgehogs which
Lie tumbling in my barefoot way, and mount
Their pricks at my footfall: sometime am I
All wound with adders, who with cloven tongues
Do hiss me into madness ...

Enter Trinculo

Lo, now, lo!
Here comes a spirit of his—and to torment me,
For bringing wood in slowly: I'll fall flat—
Perchance he will not mind me.

TRINCULO. Here's neither bush nor shrub, to bear off any weather at all ... and another storm brewing, I hear it sing i'th' wind: yond same black cloud, yond huge one, looks like a foul bombard that would shed his liquor: if it should thunder, as it did before, I know not where to hide my head: yond same cloud cannot choose but fall by pailfuls.... What have we here? a man or a fish? dead or alive? A fish, he smells like a fish ... a very ancient and fish-like smell ... a kind of not-of-the-newest poor-john: a strange fish ... Were I in England now, as once I was, and had but this fish painted,—not a holiday fool there but would give a piece of silver: there would this monster make a man: any strange beast there makes a man: when they will not give a doit to relieve a lame beggar, they will lay out ten to see a dead Indian ... Legged like a man; and his fins like arms ... Warm, o' my troth! I do now let loose my opinion; hold it no longer; this is no fish, but an islander, that hath lately suffered by a thunderbolt: [more thunder] Alas! the storm is come again: my best way is to creep under his gaberdine: there is no other shelter hereabout: misery acquaints a man with strange bed-fellows: I will here shroud till the dregs of the storm be past.

Enter Stephano, singing; a bottle in his hand

STEPHANO. I shall no more to sea, to sea,
Here shall I die ashore,—
This is a very scurvy tune to sing at a man's funeral:
Well, here's my comfort. Drinks
[sings] The master, the swabber, the bos'n, and I,
The gunner, and his mate,
Loved Mall, Meg, and Marian, and Margery,
But none of us cared for Kate....
For she had a tongue with a tang,
Would cry to a sailor, 'Go hang':
She loved not the savour of tar nor of pitch,
Yet a tailor might scratch her where'er she did itch....
Then to sea, boys, and let her go hang.
This is a scurvy tune too: but here's my comfort. Drinks

CALIBAN. Do not torment me ... O!

STEPHANO. What's the matter? Have we devils here? Do you put tricks upon's with savages and men of Ind, ha? I have not 'scaped drowning, to be afeard now of your four legs: for it hath been said; As proper a man as ever went on four legs cannot make him give ground: and it shall be said so again, while Stephano breathes at' nostrils.

CALIBAN. The spirit torments me ... O!

STEPHANO. This is some monster of the isle, with four legs; who hath got, as I take it, an ague ... Where the devil should he learn our language? I will give him some relief, if it be but for that ... If I can recover him, and keep him tame, and get to Naples with him, he's a present for any emperor that ever trod on neat's-leather.

CALIBAN. Do not torment me, prithee: I'll bring my wood home faster.

STEPHANO. He's in his fit now; and does not talk after the wisest; he shall taste of my bottle: if he have never drink wine afore, it will go near to remove his fit: if I can recover him, and keep him tame, I will not take too much for him; he shall pay for him that hath him, and that soundly.

CALIBAN. Thou dost me yet but little hurt;
Thou wilt anon, I know it by thy trembling:
Now Prosper works upon thee.

STEPHANO. Come on your ways: open your mouth: here is that which will give language to you, cat; open your mouth; this will shake your shaking, I can tell you, and that soundly ... you cannot tell who's your friend; open your chaps again.
Caliban drinks

TRINCULO. I should know that voice: It should be— but he is drowned; and these are devils; O, defend me!

STEPHANO. Four legs and two voices; a most delicate monster ... His forward voice now is to speak well of his friend; his backward voice is to utter foul speeches, and to detract: If all the wine in my bottle will recover him, I will help his ague: Come ... [Caliban drinks again] Amen, I will pour some in thy other mouth.

TRINCULO. Stephano,—

STEPHANO. Doth thy other mouth call me? Mercy, mercy! This is a devil, and no monster: I will leave him—I have no long spoon.

TRINCULO. Stephano ... if thou beest Stephano, touch me, and speak to me: for I am Trinculo; be not afeard—thy good friend Trinculo.

STEPHANO. If thou beest Trinculo ... [returns] come forth: I'll pull thee by the lesser legs: if any be Trinculo's legs, these are they: Thou art very Trinculo, indeed: How cam'st thou to be the siege of this moon-calf? Can he vent Trinculos?

TRINCULO. I took him to be killed with a thunder-stroke ... But art thou not drowned, Stephano? I hope now, thou art not drowned: Is the storm overblown? I hid me under the dead moon-calf's gaberdine, for fear of the storm: And art thou living, Stephano? O Stephano, two Neapolitans 'scaped!

STEPHANO. Prithee do not turn me about, my stomach is not constant.

CALIBAN. These be fine things, an if they be not sprites:
That's a brave god, and bears celestial liquor:
I will kneel to him.

STEPHANO. How didst thou 'scape? How cam'st thou hither? Swear by this bottle, how thou cam'st hither ... I escaped upon a butt of sack, which the sailors heaved o'er-board—by this bottle! which I made of the bark of a tree, with mine own hands, since I was cast ashore.

CALIBAN. I'll swear upon that bottle, to be thy true subject, for the liquor is not earthly.

STEPHANO. Here: swear then how thou escapedst.

TRINCULO. Swam ashore, man, like a duck ... I can swim like a duck, I'll be sworn.

STEPHANO. Here, kiss the book.... [Trinculo drinks] Though thou canst swim like a duck, thou art made like a goose

TRINCULO. O Stephano, hast any more of this?

STEPHANO. The whole butt, man. My cellar is in a rock by th' sea-side, where my wine is hid ... How now, moon-calf? how does thine ague?

CALIBAN. Hast thou not dropped from heaven?

STEPHANO. Out o'th' moon, I do assure thee.... I was the man i'th' moon, when time was.

CALIBAN. I have seen thee in her: and I do adore thee:
My mistress showed me thee, and thy dog, and thy bush.

STEPHANO. Come, swear to that: kiss the book ... I will furnish it anon with new 'contents'. Swear.

TRINCULO. By this good light, this is a very shallow monster: I afeard of him? a very weak monster ... The man i'th' moon! a most poor credulous monster ... Well drawn, monster, in good sooth.

CALIBAN. I'll show thee every fertile inch of the island:
And I will kiss thy foot: I prithee be my god.

TRINCULO. By this light, a most perfidious and drunken monster. When's god's asleep, he'll rob his bottle.

CALIBAN. I'll kiss thy foot, I'll swear myself thy subject.

STEPHANO. Come on then: down, and swear.

TRINCULO. I shall laugh myself to death at this puppy-headed monster: a most scurvy monster: I could find in my heart to beat him—

STEPHANO. Come, kiss.

TRINCULO. —but that the poor monster's in drink ... An abominable monster!

CALIBAN. I'll show thee the best springs: I'll pluck thee berries:
I'll fish for thee, and get thee wood enough....
A plague upon the tyrant that I serve;
I'll bear him no more sticks, but follow thee,
Thou wondrous man.

TRINCULO. A most ridiculous monster, to make a wonder of a poor drunkard!

CALIBAN. I prithee, let me bring thee where crabs grow;
And I with my long nails will dig thee pig-nuts;
Show thee a jay's nest, and instruct thee how
To snare the nimble marmozet: I'll bring thee
To clustring filberts, and sometimes I'll get thee
Young scamels from the rock: Wilt thou go with me?

STEPHANO. I prithee now, lead the way, without any more talking.... Trinculo, the king and all our company else being drowned, we will inherit here: Here; bear my bottle: Fellow Trinculo; we'll fill him by and by again.

CALIBAN. [sings drunkenly]. Farewell master; farewell, farewell.

TRINCULO. A howling monster: a drunken monster.

CALIBAN. No more dams I'll make for fish,
Nor fetch in firing
At requiring,
Nor scrape trenchering, nor wash dish,
'Ban 'Ban, Ca-Caliban
Has a new master—get a new man.
Freedom, high-day! high-day, freedom! freedom, high-day, freedom!

STEPHANO. O brave monster; lead the way. They go

ACT 3

Scene 1: Before Prospero's cell

Enter Ferdinand, bearing a log

FERDINAND. There be some sports are painful; and their labour
Delight in them sets off: some kinds of baseness
Are nobly undergone; and most poor matters
Point to rich ends ... This my mean task
Would be as heavy to me as odious, but
The mistress which I serve quickens what's dead,
And makes my labours—pleasures ... O, she is
Ten times more gentle than her father's crabbed;
And he's composed of harshness ... I must remove
Some thousands of these logs, and pile them up,
Upon a sore injunction; my sweet mistress
Weeps, when she sees me work, and says, such baseness
Had never like executor ... I forget ...
But these sweet thoughts do even refresh my labours—
Most busie lest, when I doe it.

Enter Miranda and Prospero, behind her, unseen

MIRANDA. Alas, now pray you,
Work not so hard: I would the lightning had
Burnt up those logs that you are enjoined to pile:
Pray, set it down, and rest you: when this burns,
'Twill weep for having wearied you ... My father
Is hard at study; pray now, rest yourself—
He's safe for these three hours.

FERDINAND. O most dear mistress,
The sun will set before I shall discharge
What I must strive to do.

MIRANDA. If you'll sit down,
I'll bear your logs the while: pray give me that,
I'll carry it to the pile.

FERDINAND. No, precious creature,—
I had rather crack my sinews, break my back,
Than you should such dishonour undergo,
While I sit lazy by.

MIRANDA. It would become me
As well as it does you; and I should do it
With much more ease: for my good will is to it,
And yours it is against.

PROSPERO. Poor worm thou art infected,
This visitation shows it.

MIRANDA. You look wearily.
FERDINAND. No, noble mistress, 'tis fresh morning with me
When you are by at night: I do beseech you—
Chiefly that I might set it in my prayers—
What is your name?
MIRANDA. Miranda,—O my father,
I have broke your hest to say so!
FERDINAND. Admired Miranda!
Indeed the top of admiration, worth
What's dearest to the world! Full many a lady
I have eyed with best regard, and many a time
Th'harmony of their tongues hath into bondage
Brought my too diligent ear: for several virtues
Have I liked several women—never any
With so full soul, but some defect in her
Did quarrel with the noblest grace she owed,
And put it to the foil.... But you, O you,
So perfect, and so peerless, are created
Of every creature's best.
MIRANDA. I do not know
One of my sex; no woman's face remember,
Save, from my glass, mine own: nor have I seen
More that I may call men than you, good friend,
And my dear father: how features are abroad,
I am skilless of; but, by my modesty—
The jewel in my dower—I would not wish
Any companion in the world but you;
Nor can imagination form a shape,
Besides yourself, to like of ... But I prattle
Something too wildly, and my father's precepts
I therein do forget.
FERDINAND. I am, in my condition,
A prince, Miranda—I do think, a king,
(I would not so!) and would no more endure
This wooden slavery, than to suffer
The flesh-fly blow my mouth ... Hear my soul speak....
The very instant that I saw you, did
My heart fly to your service, there resides
To make me slave to it, and for your sake
Am I this patient log-man.
MIRANDA. Do you love me?
FERDINAND. O heaven, O earth, bear witness to this sound,
And crown what I profess with kind event
If I speak true ... if hollowly, invert
What best is boded me to mischief ... I,
Beyond all limit of what else i'th' world,
Do love, prize, honour you.
MIRANDA. I am a fool
To weep at what I am glad of.
PROSPERO. Fair encounter
Of two most rare affections: heavens rain grace
On that which breeds between 'em!
FERDINAND. Wherefore weep you?
MIRANDA. At mine unworthiness, that dare not offer
What I desire to give; and much less take
What I shall die to want ... But this is trifling—
And all the more it seeks to hide itself,
The bigger bulk it shows ... Hence bashful cunning,
And prompt me plain and holy innocence....
I am your wife, if you will marry me;
If not, I'll die your maid: to be your fellow
You may deny me, but I'll be your servant,
Whether you will or no.
FERDINAND. My mistress,—dearest!
And I thus humble ever.
MIRANDA. My husband then?
FERDINAND. Ay, with a heart as willing
As bondage e'er of freedom: here's my hand.
MIRANDA. And mine, with my heart in't; and now farewell.
Till half an hour hence.
FERDINAND. A thousand! thousand!
Miranda and Ferdinand go their separate ways
PROSPERO. So glad of this as they I cannot be,
Who are surprised with all; but my rejoicing
At nothing can be more. I'll to my book,
For yet, ere supper time, must I perform
Much business appertaining.

Scene 2

Stephano, Trinculo and Caliban

STEPHANO. Tell not me—when the butt is out we will drink water, not a drop before; therefore bear up, and board 'em. Servant-monster, drink to me.

TRINCULO. Servant-monster! The Sophy of this island! They say there's but five upon this isle; we are three of them—if th'other two be brained like us, the state totters.

STEPHANO. Drink servant-monster when I bid thee. Thy eyes are almost set in thy head.

TRINCULO. Where should they be set else? he were a brave monster indeed, if they were set in his tail.

STEPHANO. My man-monster hath drowned his tongue in sack: for my part, the sea cannot drown me—I swam, ere I could recover the shore, five-and-thirty leagues, off and on. By this light thou shalt be my lieutenant, monster, or my standard.

TRINCULO. Your lieutenant if you list—he's no standard.

STEPHANO. We'll not run, Monsieur Monster.

TRINCULO. Nor go neither: but you'll lie, like dogs, and yet say nothing neither.

STEPHANO. Moon-calf, speak once in thy life, if thou beest a good moon-calf.

CALIBAN. How does thy honour? Let me lick thy shoe: I'll not serve him, he is not valiant.

TRINCULO. Thou liest, most ignorant monster, I am in case to justle a constable: Why, thou debauched fish thou, was there ever a man a coward, that hath drunk so much sack as I to-day? Wilt thou tell a monstrous lie, being but half a fish, and half a monster?

CALIBAN. Lo how he mocks me! wilt thou let him, my lord?

TRINCULO. 'Lord,' quoth he! that a monster should be such a natural!

CALIBAN. Lo, lo, again! bite him to death, I prithee.

STEPHANO. Trinculo, keep a good tongue in your head: if you prove a mutineer,—the next tree! The poor monster's my subject, and he shall not suffer indignity.

CALIBAN. I thank my noble lord.... Wilt thou be pleased
To hearken once again to the suit I made to thee?

STEPHANO. Marry will I: kneel and repeat it. I will stand, and so shall Trinculo.

Enter Ariel, invisible

CALIBAN. As I told thee before, I am subject to a tyrant—
A sorcerer, that by his cunning hath
Cheated me of the island.
ARIEL. Thou liest.
CALIBAN. Thou liest, thou jesting monkey, thou:
I would, my valiant master would destroy thee....
I do not lie.
STEPHANO. Trinculo, if you trouble him any more in's tale, by this hand, I will supplant some of your teeth.
TRINCULO. Why, I said nothing.
STEPHANO. Mum then, and no more: Proceed.
CALIBAN. I say, by sorcery, he got this isle—
From me he got it. If thy greatness will
Revenge it on him—for I know thou dar'st,
But this thing dare not—
STEPHANO. That's most certain.
CALIBAN. Thou shalt be lord of it, and I will serve thee.
STEPHANO. How now shall this be compassed? Canst thou bring me to the party?
CALIBAN. Yea, yea, my lord, I'll yield him thee asleep,
Where thou mayst knock a nail into his head.
ARIEL. Thou liest, thou canst not.
CALIBAN. What a pied ninny's this! Thou scurvy patch!
I do beseech thy greatness, give him blows,
And take his bottle from him: when that's gone,
He shall drink nought but brine, for I'll not show him
Where the quick freshes are.
STEPHANO. Trinculo, run into no further danger: interrupt the monster one word further, and, by this hand, I'll turn my mercy out of doors, and make a stock-fish of thee.
TRINCULO. Why, what did I? I did nothing: I'll go further off.
STEPHANO. Didst thou not say he lied?
ARIEL. Thou liest.
STEPHANO. Do I so? take thou that [strikes him]. As you like this, give me the lie another time.
TRINCULO. I did not give the lie: Out of your wits, and hearing too?
A pox o'your bottle! this can sack, and drinking do: a murrain on your monster, and the devil take your fingers!
CALIBAN. Ha, ha, ha!
STEPHANO. Now, forward with your tale ...
Prithee stand further off.
CALIBAN. Beat him enough: after a little time,
I'll beat him too.
STEPHANO. Stand further: Come, proceed.
CALIBAN. Why, as I told thee, 'tis a custom with him
I'th'afternoon to sleep: there thou mayst brain him,
Having first seized his books: or with a log
Batter his skull, or paunch him with a stake,
Or cut his wezand with thy knife.... Remember,
First to possess his books; for without them
He's but a sot, as I am; nor hath not
One spirit to command: they all do hate him,
As rootedly as I. Burn but his books.
He has brave utensils—for so he calls them—
Which, when he has a house, he'll deck withal.
And that most deeply to consider, is
The beauty of his daughter.... he himself
Calls her a nonpareil: I never saw a woman,
But only Sycorax my dam and she;
But she as far surpasseth Sycorax,
As great'st does least.
STEPHANO. Is it so brave a lass?
CALIBAN. Ay lord, she will become thy bed, I warrant,
And bring thee forth brave brood.
STEPHANO. Monster, I will kill this man: his daughter and I will be king and queen—save our graces!—and Trinculo and thyself shall be viceroys ...
Does thou like the plot, Trinculo?
TRINCULO. Excellent.
STEPHANO. Give me thy hand—I am sorry I beat thee: but, while thou liv'st, keep a good tongue in thy head.
CALIBAN. Within this half hour will he be asleep.
Wilt thou destroy him then?
STEPHANO. Ay, on mine honour.
ARIEL. This will I tell my master.
CALIBAN. Thou mak'st me merry: I am full of pleasure,
Let us be jocund.... Will you troll the catch
You taught me but while-ere?
STEPHANO. At thy request, monster, I will do reason, any reason: Come on, Trinculo, let us sing. Sings
Flout'em, and cout'em: and scout'em, and flout'em,
Thought is free.
CALIBAN. That's not the tune.

Ariel plays the tune on a tabor and pipe

STEPHANO. What is this same?
TRINCULO. This is the tune of our catch, played by the picture of Nobody.
STEPHANO. If thou beest a man, show thyself in thy likeness: if thou beest a devil, take't as thou list.
TRINCULO. O forgive me my sins!
STEPHANO. He that dies, pays all debts: I defy thee; Mercy upon us!
CALIBAN. Art thou afeard?
STEPHANO. No, monster, not I.
CALIBAN. Be not afeard—the isle is full of noises,
Sounds and sweet airs, that give delight and hurt not:
Sometimes a thousand twangling instruments
Will hum about mine ears; and sometimes voices,
That, if I then had waked after long sleep,
Will make me sleep again—and then, in dreaming,
The clouds methought would open, and show riches
Ready to drop upon me, that when I waked
I cried to dream again.
STEPHANO. This will prove a brave kingdom to me, where I shall have my music for nothing.
CALIBAN. When Prospero is destroyed.
STEPHANO. That shall be by and by: I remember the story.
TRINCULO. The sound is going away. Let's follow it, and after do our work.
STEPHANO. Lead monster, we'll follow: I would I could see this taborer—he lays it on.
TRINCULO. Wilt come? I'll follow, Stephano.
They follow Ariel

Scene 3

Enter Alonso, his train, and Gonzalo

GONZALO. By'r lakin, I can go no further, sir.
My old bones ache: here's a maze trod, indeed,

Through forth-rights and meanders: by your patience,
I needs must rest me.
ALONSO. Old lord, I cannot blame thee,
Who am myself attached with weariness,
To th' dulling of my spirits: sit down, and rest . . .
Even here I will put off my hope, and keep it
No longer for my flatterer: he is drowned
Whom thus we stray to find, and the sea mocks
Our frustrate search on land . . . well, let him go.
ANTONIO [standing, with Sebastian, apart from the rest].
I am right glad that he's so out of hope:
Do not, for one repulse, forego the purpose
That you resolved t'effect.
SEBASTIAN. The next advantage
Will we take throughly.
ANTONIO. Let it be to-night,
For, now they are oppressed with travel, they
Will not, nor cannot, use such vigilance
As when they are fresh.
SEBASTIAN. I say, to-night: no more.

Solemn and strange music and Prospero on the top, invisible

ALONSO. What harmony is this? my good friends, hark!
GONZALO. Marvellous sweet music!

Enter several strange shapes, bringing in a banquet; and dance about it with gentle actions of salutation; and, inviting the king, & c. to eat, they depart

ALONSO. Give us kind keepers, heavens: what were these?
SEBASTIAN. A living drollery: now I will believe
That there are unicorns: that in Arabia
There is one tree, the phœnix' throne, one phœnix
At this hour reigning there.
ANTONIO. I'll believe both:
And what does else want credit, come to me,
And I'll be sworn 'tis true: travellers ne'er did lie,
Though fools at home condemn 'em.
GONZALO. If in Naples
I should report this now, would they believe me?
If I should say, I saw such islanders,—
For, certes, these are people of the island,
Who, though they are of monstrous shape, yet note
Their manners are more gentle-kind, than of
Our human generation you shall find
Many, nay, almost any.
PROSPERO. Honest lord,
Thou hast said well: for some of you there present . . .
Are worse than devils.
ALONSO. I cannot too much muse
Such shapes, such gesture, and such sound, expressing—
Although they want the use of tongue—a kind
Of excellent dumb discourse.
PROSPERO. Praise in departing.
FRANCISCO. They vanished strangely.
SEBASTIAN. No matter, since
They have left their viands behind; for we have stomachs. . . .
Will't please you taste of what is here?
ALONSO. Not I.
GONZALO. Faith, sir, you need not fear. When we were boys,
Who would believe that there were mountaineers,
Dew-lapped like bulls, whose throats had hanging at 'em
Wallets of flesh? or that there were such men
Whose heads stood in their breasts? which now we find
Each putter-out of five for one that will bring us
Good warrant of.
ALONSO. I will stand to, and feed,
Although my last—no matter, since I feel
The best is past . . . Brother: my lord the duke,
Stand to and do as we.

Thunder and lightning. Enter Ariel like a harpy; claps his wings upon the table, and, with a quaint device, the banquet vanishes

ARIEL. You are three men of sin, whom destiny,
That hath to instrument this lower world
And what is in't, the never-surfeited sea
Hath caused to belch up you; and on this island,
Where man doth not inhabit, you 'mongst men
Being most unfit to live. I have made you mad;
And even with such-like valour men hang and drown
Their proper selves: [they make to attack, but are charmed from moving] You fools! I and my fellows
Are ministers of fate. The elements,
Of whom your swords are tempered, may as well
Wound the loud winds, or with bemocked-at stabs
Kill the still-closing waters, as diminish
One dowle that's in my plume: my fellow-ministers
Are like invulnerable. If you could hurt,
Your swords are now too massy for your strengths,
And will not be uplifted . . . But, remember
(For that's my business to you!) that you three
From Milan did supplant good Prospero;
Exposed unto the sea—which hath requit it!—
Him, and his innocent child: for which foul deed
The powers, delaying, not forgetting, have
Incensed the seas and shores—yea, all the creatures,
Against your peace . . . Thee of thy son, Alonso,
They have bereft; and do pronounce by me,
Ling'ring perdition (worse than any death
Can be at once!) shall step by step attend
You, and your ways; whose wraths to guard you from—
Which here, in this most desolate isle, else falls
Upon your heads—is nothing but heart's sorrow,
And a clear life ensuing.

He vanishes in thunder: then, to soft music, enter the shapes again, and dance, with mocks and mows, and carrying out the table

PROSPERO. Bravely the figure of this harpy hast thou
Performed, my Ariel,—a grace it had, devouring:
Of my instruction hast thou nothing bated
In what thou hadst to say: so, with good life
And observation strange, my meaner ministers
Their several kinds have done: my high charms work,
And these, mine enemies, are all knit up
In their distractions: they now are in my power;
And in these fits I leave them, whilst I visit
Young Ferdinand—whom they suppose is drowned—

And mine and his loved darling. He departs
GONZALO. I'th' name of something holy, sir, why stand you
In this strange stare?
ALONSO. O, it is monstrous, monstrous!
Methought the billows spoke, and told me of it,
The winds did sing it to me; and the thunder,
That deep and dreadful organ-pipe, pronounced
The name of Prosper: it did bass my trespass.
Therefore my son i'th'ooze is bedded; and
I'll seek him deeper than e'er plummet sounded,
And with him there lie mudded. He goes
SEBASTIAN. But one fiend at a time,
I'll fight their legions o'er.
ANTONIO. I'll be thy second.
They leave
GONZALO. All three of them are desperate: their great guilt,
Like poison given to work a great time after,
Now 'gins to bite the spirit: I do beseech you,
That are of suppler joints, follow them swiftly,
And hinder them from what this ecstasy
May now provoke them to.
ADRIAN. Follow, I pray you.

ACT 4
Scene 1: Before Prospero's cell

Prospero with Ferdinand and Miranda

PROSPERO. If I have too austerely punished you,
Your compensation makes amends, for I
Have given you here a third of mine own life,
Or that for which I live: who once again
I tender to thy hand ... All thy vexations
Were but my trials of thy love, and thou
Hast strangely stood the test: here, afore Heaven,
I ratify this my rich gift: O Ferdinand,
Do not smile at me that I boast hereof,
For thou shalt find she will outstrip all praise
And make it halt behind her.
FERDINAND. I do believe it
Against an oracle.
PROSPERO. Then, as my gift, and thine own acquisition
Worthily purchased, take my daughter: but
If thou dost break her virgin-knot before
All sanctimonious ceremonies may
With full and holy rite be minist'red,
No sweet aspersion shall the heavens let fall
To make this contract grow; but barren hate,
Sour-eyed disdain and discord shall bestrew
The union of your bed with weeds so loathly
That you shall hate it both: therefore take heed,
As Hymen's lamp shall light you.
FERDINAND. As I hope
For quiet days, fair issue, and long life,
With such love as 'tis now, the murkiest den,
The most oppórtune place, the strong'st suggestion
Our worser genius can, shall never melt
Mine honour into lust, to take away
The edge of that day's celebration,
When I shall think, or Phœbus' steeds are foundered,
Or Night kept chained below.
PROSPERO. Fairly spoke;
Sit then, and talk with her, she is thine own ...
What, Ariel; my industrious servant Ariel!

Ariel appears

ARIEL. What would my potent master? here I am.
PROSPERO. Thou and thy meaner fellows your last service
Did worthily perform: and I must use you
In such another trick: go, bring the rabble,
(O'er whom I give thee power) here, to this place:
Incite them to quick motion, for I must
Bestow upon the eyes of this young couple
Some vanity of mine art: it is my promise,
And they expect it from me.
ARIEL. Presently?
PROSPERO. Ay: with a twink.
ARIEL. Before you can say 'come' and 'go,'
And breathe twice; and cry 'so, so',
Each one, tripping on his toe,
Will be here with mop and mow....
Do you love me, master? no?
PROSPERO. Dearly, my delicate Ariel ... Do not approach,
Till thou dost hear me call.
ARIEL. Well: I conceive. Vanishes
PROSPERO. Look thou be true: do not give dalliance
Too much the rein: the strongest oaths are straw
To th' fire i'th' blood: be more abstemious,
Or else good night your vow.
FERDINAND. I warrant you, sir,
The white cold virgin snow upon my heart
Abates the ardour of my liver.
PROSPERO. Well....
Now come my Ariel. Bring a corollary,
Rather than want a spirit; appear, and pertly!
No tongue ... all eyes ... be silent. Soft music

THE MASQUE

Iris appears

IRIS. Ceres, most bounteous lady, thy rich leas
Of wheat, rye, barley, vetches, oats, and pease;
Thy turfy mountains, where live nibbling sheep,
And flat meads thatched with stover, them to keep:
Thy banks with pionéd and twilléd brims,
Which spongy April at thy hest betrims—
To make cold nymphs chaste crowns; and thy broom-groves,
Whose shadow the dismisséd bachelor loves,
Being lass-lorn; thy poll-clipt vinëyard;
And thy sea-marge, sterile and rocky-hard,
Where thou thyself dost air—the queen o'th' sky,
Whose watry arch and messenger am I,
Bids thee leave these, and with her sovereign grace,
Here on this grass-plot, in this very place,
To come and sport: her peacocks fly amain:
Juno's car appears in the sky
Approach, rich Ceres, her to entertain.

Enter Ceres

CERES. Hail, many-coloured messenger, that ne'er
Dost disobey the wife of Jupiter:
Who, with thy saffron wings, upon my flowers
Diffusest honey-drops, refreshing showers,
And with each end of thy blue bow dost crown
My bosky acres, and my unshrubbed down,
Rich scarf to my proud earth ... why hath thy queen

Summoned me hither, to this short-grassed green?
IRIS. A contract of true love to celebrate,
And some donation freely to estate
On the blessed lovers.
CERES. Tell me, heavenly bow,
If Venus or her son, as thou dost know,
Do now attend the queen? since they did plot
The means that dusky Dis my daughter got,
Her and her blind boy's scandalled company
I have forsworn.
IRIS. Of her society
Be not afraid: I met her deity
Cutting the clouds towards Paphos; and her son
Dove-drawn with her: here thought they to have done
Some wanton charm upon this man and maid,
Whose vows are, that no bed-rite shall be paid
Till Hymen's torch be lighted: but in vain
Mars's hot minion is returned again
Her waspish-headed son has broke his arrows,
Swears he will shoot no more, but play with sparrows
And be a boy right out.

Juno alights from her car

CERES. Highest queen of state,
Great Juno comes; I know her by her gait.
JUNO. How does my bounteous sister? Go with me
To bless this twain, that they may prosperous be,
And honoured in their issue. They sing
JUNO. Honour, riches, marriage-blessing,
Long continuance, and increasing,
Hourly joys be still upon you!
Juno sings her blessings on you.
CERES. Earth's increase, foison plenty,
Barns and garners never empty,
Vines with clustring bunches growing,
Plants with goodly burden bowing;
Spring come to you, at the farthest,
In the very end of harvest!
Scarcity and want shall shun you;
Ceres' blessing so is on you.
FERDINAND. This is a most majestic vision, and Harmonious charmingly: may I be bold
To think these spirits?
PROSPERO. Spirits, which by mine art
I have from their confines called to enact
My present fancies.
FERDINAND. Let me live here ever—
So rare a wond'red father and a wise
Makes this place Paradise.

Juno and Ceres whisper, and send Iris on employment

PROSPERO. Sweet, now silence:
Juno and Ceres whisper seriously.
There's something else to do: hush, and be mute.
Or else our spell is marred.
IRIS. You nymphs, called Naiads, of the wand'ring brooks,
With your sedged crowns and ever harmless looks,
Leave your crisp channels, and on this green land
Answer your summons; Juno does command....
Come, temperate nymphs, and help to celebrate
A contract of true love: be not too late.

Enter certain Nymphs

You sunburnt sicklemen, of August weary,
Come hither from the furrow, and be merry.
Make holiday: your rye-straw hats put on,
And these fresh nymphs encounter every one
In country footing.

Enter certain Reapers, properly habited: they join with the Nymphs in a graceful dance; towards the end whereof Prospero starts suddenly, and speaks; after which, to a strange, hollow, and confused noise, they heavily vanish

PROSPERO [to himself]. I had forgot that foul conspiracy
Of the beast Caliban and his confederates
Against my life: the minute of their plot
Is almost come: [to the spirits] Well done! avoid: no more.
FERDINAND. This is strange: your father's in some passion,
That works him strongly.
MIRANDA. Never till this day,
Saw I him touched with anger so distempered.
PROSPERO. You do look, my son, in a moved sort,
As if you were dismayed: be cheerful, sir.
Our revels now are ended . . . These our actors,
As I foretold you, were all spirits, and
Are melted into air, into thin air,
And, like the baseless fabric of this vision,
The cloud-capped towers, the gorgeous palaces,
The solemn temples, the great globe itself,
Yea, all which it inherit, shall dissolve,
And, like this insubstantial pageant faded,
Leave not a rack behind: we are such stuff
As dreams are made on; and our little life
Is rounded with a sleep . . . Sir, I am vexed.
Bear with my weakness, my old brain is troubled:
Be not disturbed with my infirmity.
If you be pleased, retire into my cell,
And there repose. A turn or two I'll walk,
To still my beating mind.
FERDINAND, MIRANDA [retiring]. We wish your peace.
PROSPERO. Come with a thought; I think thee.
Ariel: come.

Ariel appears

ARIEL. Thy thoughts I cleave to. What's thy pleasure?
PROSPERO. Spirit,
We must prepare to meet with Caliban.
ARIEL. Ay, my commander; when I presented Ceres,
I thought to have told thee of it, but I feared
Lest I might anger thee.
PROSPERO. Say again, where didst thou leave these varlets?
ARIEL. I told you, sir, they were red-hot with drinking—
So full of valour, that they smote the air
For breathing in their faces: beat the ground
For kissing of their feet; yet always bending
Towards their project: Then I beat my tabor,
At which like unbacked colts they pricked their ears,
Advanced their eyelids, lifted up their noses,
As they smelt music. So I charmed their ears
That calf-like they my lowing followed, through
Toothed briers, sharp furzes, pricking gorse, and thorns,
Which ent'red their frail shins: at last I left them

I'th' filthy mantled pool beyond your cell,
There dancing up to th' chins, that the foul lake
O'er-stunk their sweat.
PROSPERO. This was well done, my bird.
Thy shape invisible retain thou still:
The trumpery in my house, go, bring it hither,
For stale to catch these thieves.
ARIEL. I go, I go.
PROSPERO. A devil, a born devil, on whose nature
Nurture can never stick: on whom my pains,
Humanely taken, all, all lost, quite lost—
And as with age his body uglier grows,
So his mind cankers. I will plague them all,
Even to roaring.

Ariel returns loaden with glistering apparel, etc.

Come, hang them on this line.

Prospero and Ariel remain invisible. Enter Caliban, Stephano, and Trinculo, all wet

CALIBAN. Pray you, tread softly, that the blind mole may
Not hear a foot fall: we now are near his cell.

STEPHANO. Monster, your fairy, which you say is a harmless fairy, has done little better than played the Jack with us.

TRINCULO. Monster, I do smell all horse-piss, at which my nose is in great indignation.

STEPHANO. So is mine. Do you hear, monster? If I should take a displeasure against you: look you.

TRINCULO. Thou wert but a lost monster.

CALIBAN. Good my lord, give me thy favour still.
Be patient, for the prize I'll bring thee to
Shall hoodwink this mischance: therefore, speak softly—
All's hushed as midnight yet.

TRINCULO. Ay, but to lose our bottles in the pool,—

STEPHANO. There is not only disgrace and dishonour in that, monster, but an infinite loss.

TRINCULO. That's more to me than my wetting: yet this is your harmless fairy, monster.

STEPHANO. I will fetch off my bottle, though I be o'er ears for my labour.

CALIBAN. Prithee, my king, be quiet.... Seest thou here,
This is the mouth o'th' cell ... no noise, and enter ...
Do that good mischief which may make this island
Thine own for ever, and I, thy Caliban,
For aye thy foot-licker.

STEPHANO. Give me thy hand. I do begin to have bloody thoughts.

TRINCULO. O King Stephano, O peer! O worthy Stephano, look what a wardrobe here is for thee!

CALIBAN. Let it alone, thou fool—it is but trash.

TRINCULO. O, ho, monster: we know what belongs to a frippery. O King Stephano!

STEPHANO. Put off that gown, Trinculo. By this hand, I'll have that gown.

TRINCULO. Thy grace shall have it.

CALIBAN. The dropsy drown this fool! what do you mean,
To dote thus on such luggage? Let't alone!
And do the murder first: if he awake,
From toe to crown he'll fill our skins with pinches—
Make us strange stuff.

STEPHANO. Be you quiet, monster. Mistress line, is not this my jerkin? Now is the jerkin under the line: now jerkin you are like to lose your hair, and prove a bald jerkin.

TRINCULO. Do, do! We steal by line and level, an't like your grace.

STEPHANO. I thank thee for that jest; here's a garment for't: wit shall not go unrewarded while I am king of this country: 'steal by line and level' is an excellent pass of pate; there's another garment for't.

TRINCULO. Monster, come, put some lime upon your fingers, and away with the rest.

CALIBAN. I will have none on't: we shall lose our time,
And all be turned to barnacles, or to apes
With foreheads villainous low.

STEPHANO. Monster, lay-to your fingers: help to bear this away where my hogshead of wine is, or I'll turn you out of my kingdom: go to, carry this.

TRINCULO. And this.

STEPHANO. Ay, and this.

A noise of hunters heard. Enter divers spirits, in shape of dogs and hounds, hunting them about; Prospero and Ariel setting them on PROSPERO. Hey, Mountain, hey!

ARIEL. Silver ... there it goes, Silver!
PROSPERO. Fury, Fury ... there, Tyrant, there ... hark, hark!

Caliban, Stephano and Trinculo are driven out

Go, charge my goblins, that they grind their joints
With dry convulsions, shorten up their sinews
With agéd cramps, and more pinch-spotted make them
Than pard or cat o' mountain.
ARIEL. Hark, they roar.
PROSPERO. Let them be hunted soundly ... At this hour
Lies at my mercy all mine enemies:
Shortly shall all my labours end, and thou
Shalt have the air at freedom: for a little
Follow, and do me service. They go

ACT 5
Scene 1

Prospero in his magic robes and Ariel

PROSPERO. Now does my project gather to a head:
My charms crack not: my spirits obey, and Time
Goes upright with his carriage ... How's the day?
ARIEL. On the sixth hour, at which time, my lord,
You said our work should cease.
PROSPERO. I did say so,
When first I raised the tempest. Say, my spirit,
How fares the king and's followers?
ARIEL. Confined together
In the same fashion as you gave in charge,
Just as you left them—all prisoners, sir,
In the line-grove which weather-fends your cell.
They cannot budge till your release: The king,
His brother, and yours, abide all three distracted;
And the remainder mourning over them,
Brimful of sorrow and dismay: but chiefly
Him you termed, sir, 'The good old lord, Gonzalo.'
His tears run down his beard, like winter's drops
From eaves of reeds ... Your charm so strongly works 'em,

That if you now beheld them, your affections
Would become tender.
PROSPERO. Dost thou think so, spirit?
ARIEL. Mine would, sir, were I human.
PROSPERO. And mine shall....
Hast thou—which art but air—a touch, a feeling
Of their afflictions, and shall not myself,
One of their kind, that relish all as sharply,
Passion as they, be kindlier moved than thou art?
Though with their high wrongs I am struck to th' quick,
Yet, with my nobler reason, 'gainst my fury
Do I take part: the rarer action is
In virtue than in vengeance: they being penitent,
The sole drift of my purpose doth extend
Not a frown further. Go, release them, Ariel.
My charms I'll break, their senses I'll restore,
And they shall be themselves.
ARIEL. I'll fetch them, sir. Vanishes
PROSPERO [traces a magic circle with his staff]. Ye elves of hills, brooks, standing lakes and groves,
And ye, that on the sands with printless foot
Do chase the ebbing Neptune, and do fly him
When he comes back; you demi-puppets that
By moonshine do the green-sour ringlets make,
Whereof the ewe not bites: and you, whose pastime
Is to make midnight mushrooms, that rejoice
To hear the solemn curfew,—by whose aid,
Weak ministers though ye be, I have bedimmed
The noontide sun, called forth the mutinous winds,
And 'twixt the green sea and the azured vault
Set roaring war: to the dread rattling thunder
Have I given fire, and rifted Jove's stout oak
With his own bolt: the strong-based promontory
Have I made shake, and by the spurs plucked up
The pine and cedar: graves at my command
Have waked their sleepers, oped, and let 'em forth
By my so potent art. But this rough magic
I here abjure: and, when I have required
Some heavenly music—which even now I do—
To work mine end upon their senses, that
This airy charm is for, I'll break my staff,
Bury it certain fathoms in the earth,
And deeper than did ever plummet sound
I'll drown my book. Solemn music

Here enters Ariel before: then Alonso, with a frantic gesture, attended by Gonzalo; Sebastian and Antonio in like manner, attended by Adrian and Francisco: they all enter the circle which Prospero had made, and there stand charmed; which Prospero observing, speaks

A solemn air, and the best comforter To Alonso
To an unsettled fancy, cure thy brains,
Now useless boil within thy skull. There stand,
For you are spell-stopped....
Holy Gonzalo, honourable man,
Mine eyes, ev'n sociable to the show of thine,
Fall fellowly drops ... The charm dissolves apace,
And as the morning steals upon the night,
Melting the darkness, so their rising senses
Begin to chase the ignorant fumes that mantle
Their clearer reason.... O good Gonzalo,
My true preserver, and a loyal sir
To him thou follow'st; I will pay thy graces
Home, both in word and deed ... Most cruelly
Didst thou, Alonso, use me and my daughter:
Thy brother was a furtherer in the act—
Thou art pinched for't now, Sebastian. Flesh and blood,
You, brother mine, that entertained ambition,
Expelled remorse and nature—who, with Sebastian,
(Whose inward pinches therefore are most strong)
Would here have killed your king—I do forgive thee,
Unnatural though thou art ... Their understanding
Begins to swell, and the approaching tide
Will shortly fill the reasonable shores
That now lies foul and muddy. Not one of them
That yet looks on me, or would know me. Ariel,
Fetch me the hat and rapier in my cell.
Ariel goes to the cave
I will discase me, and myself present
As I was sometime Milan: quickly spirit,
Thou shalt ere long be free.

Returning Ariel sings, and helps to attire him

ARIEL. Where the bee sucks, there suck I.
In a cowslip's bell I lie.
There I couch, when owls do cry.
On the bat's back I do fly
After summer merrily....
Merrily, merrily, shall I live now,
Under the blossom that hangs on the bough.
PROSPERO. Why, that's my dainty Ariel: I shall miss thee,
But yet thou shalt have freedom: so, so, so....
To the king's ship, invisible as thou art—
There shalt thou find the mariners asleep
Under the hatches: the master and the boatswain
Being awake, enforce them to this place;
And presently, I prithee.
ARIEL. I drink the air before me, and return
Or ere your pulse twice beat. Vanishes
GONZALO. All torment, trouble, wonder, and amazement
Inhabits here: some heavenly power guide us
Out of this fearful country.
PROSPERO. Behold, sir king,
The wrongéd Duke of Milan, Prospero:
For more assurance that a living prince
Does now speak to thee, I embrace thy body,
And to thee and thy company I bid
A hearty welcome.
ALONSO. Whe'er thou be'st he or no,
Or some enchanted trifle to abuse me,
As late I have been, I not know: thy pulse
Beats, as of flesh and blood: and, since I saw thee,
Th'affliction of my mind amends, with which
I fear a madness held me: this must crave—
An if this be at all—a most strange story.
Thy dukedom I resign, and do entreat
Thou pardon me my wrongs ... But how should Prospero
Be living, and be here?
PROSPERO [to Gonzalo]. First, noble friend,
Let me embrace thine age, whose honour cannot
Be measured or confined.
GONZALO. Whether this be
Or be not, I'll not swear.
PROSPERO. You do yet taste
Some subtilties o'th'isle, that will not let you
Believe things certain: Welcome, my friends all!

[aside to Sebastian and Antonio] But you, my brace of lords, were I so minded,
I here could pluck his highness' frown upon you,
And justify you traitors: at this time
I will tell no tales.
SEBASTIAN [aside to Antonio]. The devil speaks in him ...
PROSPERO. No ...
For you—most wicked sir—whom to call brother
Would even infect my mouth, I do forgive
Thy rankest fault—all of them; and require
My dukedom of thee, which, perforce, I know,
Thou must restore.
ALONSO. If thou beest Prospero,
Give us particulars of thy preservation,
How thou hast met us here, who three hours since
Were wrecked upon this shore; where I have lost—
How sharp the point of this remembrance is!—
My dear son Ferdinand.
PROSPERO. I am woe for't, sir.
ALONSO. Irreparable is the loss, and patience
Says it is past her cure.
PROSPERO. I rather think
You have not sought her help, of whose soft grace
For the like loss I have her sovereign aid,
And rest myself content.
ALONSO. You the like loss?
PROSPERO. As great to me as late, and súpportable
To make the dear loss, have I means much weaker
Than you may call to comfort you; for I
Have lost my daughter.
ALONSO. A daughter?
O heavens, that they were living both in Naples,
The king and queen there! that they were, I wish
Myself were mudded in that oozy bed
Where my son lies ... When did you lose your daughter?
PROSPERO. In this last tempest.... I perceive these lords
At this encounter do so much admire
That they devour their reason, and scarce think
Their eyes do offices of truth, their words
Are natural breath: but, howsoe'er you have
Been justled from your senses, know for certain,
That I am Prospero, and that very duke
Which was thrust forth of Milan, who most strangely
Upon this shore, where you were wrecked, was landed,
To be the lord on't: No more yet of this,
For 'tis a chronicle of day by day,
Not a relation for a breakfast, nor
Befitting this first meeting: Welcome, sir;
This cell's my court: here have I few attendants,
And subjects none abroad: pray you, look in:
My dukedom since you have given me again,
I will requite you with as good a thing—
At least, bring forth a wonder, to content ye
As much as me my dukedom.

Here Prospero discovers Ferdinand and Miranda, playing at chess

MIRANDA. Sweet lord, you play me false.
FERDINAND. My dearest love,
I would not for the world.
MIRANDA. Yet, for a score of kingdoms you should wrangle,
And I would call it fair play.
ALONSO. If this prove
A vision of the island, one dear son
Shall I twice lose.
SEBASTIAN. A most high miracle!
FERDINAND. Though the seas threaten, they are merciful—
I have cursed them without cause. He kneels
ALONSO. Now all the blessings
Of a glad father compass thee about:
Arise, and say how thou cam'st here.
MIRANDA. O, wonder!
How many goodly creatures are there here!
How beauteous mankind is! O brave new world,
That has such people in't!
PROSPERO. 'Tis new to thee.
ALONSO. What is this maid, with whom thou wast at play?
Your eld'st acquaintance cannot be three hours:
Is she the goddess that hath severed us,
And brought us thus together?
FERDINAND. Sir, she is mortal;
But, by immortal Providence, she's mine;
I chose her when I could not ask my father
For his advice, nor thought I had one: She
Is daughter to this famous Duke of Milan,
Of whom so often I have heard renown,
But never saw before: of whom I have Received a second life; and second father
This lady makes him to me.
ALONSO. I am hers;
But O, how oddly will it sound, that I
Must ask my child forgiveness!
PROSPERO. There, sir, stop.
Let us not burden our remembrance with
A heaviness that's gone.
GONZALO. I have inly wept,
Or should have spoke ere this ... Look down, you gods,
And on this couple drop a blessèd crown;
For it is you that have chalked forth the way
Which brought us hither.
ALONSO. I say 'Amen,' Gonzalo.
GONZALO. Was Milan thrust from Milan, that his issue
Should become kings of Naples? O, rejoice
Beyond a common joy, and set it down
With gold on lasting pillars: 'In one voyage
Did Claribel her husband find at Tunis,
And Ferdinand, her brother, found a wife,
Where he himself was lost, Prospero his dukedom
In a poor isle, and all of us ourselves,
When no man was his own.'
ALONSO [to Ferdinand and Miranda]. Give me your hands:
Let grief and sorrow still embrace his heart
That doth not wish you joy.
GONZALO. Be it so, Amen.

Enter Ariel with the Master and Boatswain amazedly following

O look sir, look sir, here is more of us ...
I prophesied, if a gallows were on land,
This fellow could not drown. Now, blasphemy,
That swear'st grace o'er-board, not an oath on shore?
Hast thou no mouth by land?

What is the news?
BOATSWAIN. The best news is, that we have safely found
Our king and company: the next, our ship,
Which, but three glasses since, we gave out split,
Is tight and yare and bravely rigged as when
We first put out to sea.
ARIEL [at Prospero's ear]. Sir, all this service
Have I done since I went.
PROSPERO. My tricksy spirit!
ALONSO. These are not natural events—they strengthen
From strange to stranger: say, how came you hither?
BOATSWAIN. If I did think, sir, I were well awake,
I'ld strive to tell you . . . We were dead of sleep,
And—how we know not—all clapped under hatches,
Where, but even now, with strange and several noises
Of roaring, shrieking, howling, jingling chains,
And moe diversity of sounds, all horrible,
We were awaked . . . straightway, at liberty;
Where we, in all her trim, freshly beheld
Our royal, good, and gallant ship: our master
Cap'ring to eye her . . . On a trice, so please you,
Even in a dream, were we divided from them,
And were brought moping hither.
ARIEL [at Prospero's ear]. Was't well done?
PROSPERO. Bravely, my diligence,—thou shalt be free.
ALONSO. This is as strange a maze as e'er men trod.
And there is in this business more than nature
Was ever conduct of: some oracle
Must rectify our knowledge.
PROSPERO. Sir, my liege,
Do not infest your mind with beating on
The strangeness of this business. At picked leisure,
Which shall be shortly single, I'll resolve you—
Which to you shall seem probable—of every
These happened accidents: till when, be cheerful
And think of each thing well. . . . [to Ariel] Come hither, spirit.
Set Caliban and his companions free:
Untie the spell . . . [Ariel goes] How fares my gracious sir?
There are yet missing of your company
Some few odd lads, that you remember not.

Enter Ariel, driving in Caliban, Stephano, and Trinculo, in their stolen apparel

STEPHANO. Every man shift for all the rest, and let no man take care for himself; for all is but fortune: coragio, bully-monster, coragio!
TRINCULO. If these be true spies which I wear in my head, here's a goodly sight.
CALIBAN. O Setebos, these be brave spirits, indeed:
How fine my master is! I am afraid
He will chastise me.
SEBASTIAN. Ha, ha!
What things are these, my lord Antonio?
Will money buy 'em?
ANTONIO. Very like: one of them
Is a plain fish, and no doubt marketable.
PROSPERO. Mark but the badges of these men, my lords,
Then say if they be true. This mis-shaped knave—
His mother was a witch, and one so strong
That could control the moon, make flows and ebbs,
And deal in her command without her power.
These three have robbed me, and this demi-devil—
For he's a bastard one—had plotted with them
To take my life. Two of these fellows you
Must know and own, this thing of darkness I
Acknowledge mine.
CALIBAN. I shall be pinched to death.
ALONSO. Is not this Stephano, my drunken butler?
SEBASTIAN. He is drunk now; where had he wine?
ALONSO. And Trinculo is reeling ripe: where should they Find this grand liquor that hath gilded 'em?
How cam'st thou in this pickle?
TRINCULO. I have been in such a pickle since I saw you last that, I fear me, will never out of my bones: I shall not fear fly-blowing.
SEBASTIAN. Why, how now, Stephano?
STEPHANO. O, touch me not—I am not Stephano, but a cramp.
PROSPERO. You'ld be king o'th'isle, sirrah?
STEPHANO. I should have been a sore one then.
ALONSO. This is as strange a thing as e'er I looked on.
Pointing at Caliban
PROSPERO. He is as disproportioned in his manners
As in his shape. Go, sirrah, to my cell;
Take with you your companions; as you look
To have my pardon, trim it handsomely.
CALIBAN. Ay, that I will: and I'll be wise hereafter,
And seek for grace. What a thrice-double ass
Was I, to take this drunkard for a god!
And worship this dull fool!
PROSPERO. Go to, away.
ALONSO. Hence—and bestow your luggage where you found it.
SEBASTIAN. Or stole it rather.
Caliban, Stephano and Trinculo depart
PROSPERO. Sir, I invite your Highness and your train
To my poor cell: where you shall take your rest
For this one night, which—part of it—I'll waste
With such discourse as, I not doubt, shall make it
Go quick away . . . the story of my life,
And the particular accidents gone by
Since I came to this isle: and in the morn
I'll bring you to your ship, and so to Naples,
Where I have hope to see the nuptial
Of these our dear-beloved solémnizéd—
And thence retire me to my Milan, where
Every third thought shall be my grave.
ALONSO. I long
To hear the story of your life; which must
Take the ear strangely.
PROSPERO. I'll deliver all—
And promise you calm seas, auspicious gales,
And sail so expeditious, that shall catch
Your royal fleet far off . . . My Ariel—chick,
That is thy charge: then to the elements
Be free, and fare thou well . . . Please you draw near.
They all go

EPILOGUE

SPOKEN BY PROSPERO

Now my charms are all o'erthrown,
And what strength I have's mine own,

Which is most faint: now, 'tis true,
I must be here confined by you,
Or sent to Naples. Let me not,
Since I have my dukedom got,
And pardoned the deceiver, dwell
In this bare island, by your spell.
But release me from my bands,
With the help of your good hands:
Gentle breath of yours my sails
Must fill, or else my project fails,
Which was to please: Now I want
Spirits to enforce ... art to enchant—
And my ending is despair,
Unless I be reliev'd by prayer,
Which pierces so, that it assaults
Mercy itself, and frees all faults....
 As you from crimes would pardoned be,
 Let your indulgence set me free.

The Two Gentlemen of Verona

ACT 1

Scene I: Verona: a street near Julia's house

Valentine and Proteus

VALENTINE. Cease to persuade, my loving Proteus;
Home-keeping youth have ever homely wits.
Were't not affection chains thy tender days
To the sweet glances of thy honoured love,
I rather would entreat thy company
To see the wonders of the world abroad,
Than, living dully sluggardized at home,
Wear out thy youth with shapeless idleness. . . .
But, since thou lov'st; love still and thrive therein,
Even as I would when I to love begin.
PROTEUS. Wilt thou be gone? Sweet Valentine, adieu.
Think on thy Proteus, when thou—haply—seest
Some rare note-worthy object in thy travel. . . .
Wish me partaker in thy happiness,
When thou dost meet good hap; and in thy danger—
If ever danger do environ thee—
Commend thy grievance to my holy prayers,
For I will be thy beadsman, Valentine.
VALENTINE. And on a love-book pray for my success!
PROTEUS. Upon some book I love I'll pray for thee.
VALENTINE. That's on some shallow story of deep love,
How young Leander crossed the Hellespont.
PROTEUS. That's a deep story of a deeper love,
For he was more than over-shoes in love.
VALENTINE. 'Tis true; for you are over-boots in love,
And yet you never swam the Hellespont.
PROTEUS. Over the boots? nay, give me not the boots.
VALENTINE. No, I will not; for it boots thee not.
PROTEUS. What?
VALENTINE. To be in love; where scorn is bought with groans:
Coy looks, with heart-sore sighs: one fading moment's mirth,
With twenty watchful, weary, tedious nights;
If haply won, perhaps a hapless gain;
If lost, why then a grievous labour won;
How ever . . . but a folly bought with wit,
Or else a wit by folly vanquishéd.
PROTEUS. So, by your circumstance, you call me fool.
VALENTINE. So, by your circumstance, I fear, you'll prove.
PROTEUS. 'Tis Love you cavil at. I am not Love.
VALENTINE. Love is your master, for he masters you;
And he that is so yokéd by a fool,
Methinks should not be chronicled for wise.
PROTEUS. Yet writers say; As in the sweetest bud
The eating canker dwells, so eating love
Inhabits in the finest wits of all.
VALENTINE. And writers say; As the most forward bud
Is eaten by the canker ere it blow,
Even so by love the young and tender wit
Is turned to folly—blasting in the bud,
Losing his verdure even in the prime,
And all the fair effects of future hopes. . . .
But wherefore waste I time to counsel thee
That art a votary to fond desire?
Once more adieu: my father at the road
Expects my coming, there to see me shipped.
PROTEUS. And thither will I bring thee, Valentine.
VALENTINE. Sweet Proteus, no: now let us take our leave;
To Milan let me hear from thee by letters
Of thy success in love; and what news else
Betideth here in absence of thy friend:
And I likewise will visit thee with mine.
PROTEUS. All happiness bechance to thee in Milan.
VALENTINE. As much to you at home: and so, farewell.
Valentine goes
PROTEUS. He after honour hunts, I after love;
He leaves his friends, to dignify them more;
I leave myself, my friends, and all for love . . .
Thou, Julia, thou hast metamorphosed me:
Made me neglect my studies, loose my time;
War with good counsel; set the world at nought;
Made wit with musing, weak; heart sick with thought.

Speed runs up

SPEED. Sir Proteus . . . 'save you . . . saw you my master?
PROTEUS. But now he parted hence to embark for Milan.
SPEED. Twenty to one then he is shipped already,
And I have played the sheep in losing him.
PROTEUS. Indeed a sheep doth very often stray,
An if the shepherd be awhile away.
SPEED. You conclude that my master is a shepherd then, and I a sheep?
PROTEUS. I do.
SPEED. Why then my horns are his horns, whether I wake or sleep.
PROTEUS. A silly answer, and fitting well a sheep.
SPEED. This proves me still a sheep.
PROTEUS. True: and thy master a shepherd.
SPEED. Nay, that I can deny by a circumstance.
PROTEUS. It shall go hard but I'll prove it by another.
SPEED. The shepherd seeks the sheep, and not the sheep the shepherd; but I seek my master, and my master seeks not me: therefore I am no sheep.
PROTEUS. The sheep for fodder follow the shepherd, the shepherd for food follows not the sheep: thou for wages followest thy master, thy master for wages follows not thee: therefore thou art a sheep.
SPEED. Such another proof will make me cry 'baa.'
PROTEUS. But dost thou hear? gav'st thou my letter to Julia?
SPEED. Ay, sir: I, a lost mutton, gave your letter to her, a laced mutton, and she, a laced mutton, gave me, a lost mutton, nothing for my labour.
PROTEUS. Here's too small a pasture for such store of muttons.
SPEED. If the ground be overcharged, you were best stick her.
PROTEUS. Nay, in that you are a-stray . . . 'twere best pound you.

SPEED. Nay sir, less than a pound shall serve me for carrying your letter.
PROTEUS. You mistake; I mean the pound, a pinfold.
SPEED. From a pound to a pin—fold it over and over,
'Tis threefold too little for carrying a letter to your lover.
PROTEUS. But what said she? [Speed nods] Nod?
SPEED. Ay.
PROTEUS. Nod-ay, why that's noddy.
SPEED. You mistook, sir: I say she did nod; and you ask me if she did nod, and I say, 'Ay.'
PROTEUS. And that set together, is 'noddy.'
SPEED. Now you have taken the pains to set it together, take it for your pains.
PROTEUS. No, no, you shall have it for bearing the letter.
SPEED. Well, I perceive I must be fain to bear with you.
PROTEUS. Why, sir, how do you bear with me?
SPEED. Marry sir, the letter very orderly—having nothing but the word 'noddy' for my pains.
PROTEUS. Beshrew me, but you have a quick wit.
SPEED. And yet it cannot overtake your slow purse.
PROTEUS. Come, come, open the matter in brief; what said she?
SPEED. Open your purse, that the money and the matter may be both at once delivered.
PROTEUS. Well, sir: here is for your pains... What said she?
SPEED. Truly sir, I think you'll hardly win her.
PROTEUS. Why! couldst thou perceive so much from her?
SPEED. Sir, I could perceive nothing at all from her;
No, not so much as a ducat for delivering your letter:
And being so hard to me that brought your mind;
I fear she'll prove as hard to you in telling your mind....
Give her no token but stones, for she's as hard as steel.
PROTEUS. What, said she—nothing?
SPEED. No, not so much as 'Take this for thy pains'... To testify your bounty, I thank you, you have testerned me; in requital whereof, henceforth carry your letters yourself; and so, sir, I'll commend you to my master. He goes off
PROTEUS. Go, go, be gone, to save your ship from wrack,
Which cannot perish having thee aboard,
Being destined to a drier death on shore...
I must go send some better messenger.
I fear my Julia would not deign my lines,
Receiving them from such a worthless post.
He goes

Scene 2

Enter Julia and Lucetta

JULIA. But say, Lucetta—now we are alone—
Wouldst thou then counsel me to fall in love?
LUCETTA. Ay madam, so you stumble not unheedfully.
JULIA. Of all the fair resort of gentlemen
That every day with parle encounter me,
In thy opinion which is worthiest love?
LUCETTA. Please you repeat their names, I'll show my mind
According to my shallow simple skill.
JULIA. What think'st thou of the fair Sir Eglamour?
LUCETTA. As of a knight, well-spoken, neat, and fine;
But, were I you, he never should be mine.
JULIA. What think'st thou of the rich Mercatio?
LUCETTA. Well of his wealth; but of himself, so, so.
JULIA. What think'st thou of the gentle Proteus?
LUCETTA. Lord, lord... to see what folly reigns in us!
JULIA. How now! what means this passion at his name?
LUCETTA. Pardon, dear madam—'tis a passing shame,
That I (unworthy body as I am!)
Should censure thus on lovely gentlemen.
JULIA. Why not on Proteus, as of all the rest?
LUCETTA. Then thus... of many good I think him best.
JULIA. Your reason?
LUCETTA. I have no other but a woman's reason:
I think him so, because I think him so.
JULIA. And wouldst thou have me cast my love on him?
LUCETTA. Ay... if you thought your love not cast away.
JULIA. Why, he, of all the rest, hath never moved me.
LUCETTA. Yet he, of all the rest, I think best loves ye.
JULIA. His little speaking shows his love but small.
LUCETTA. Fire, that's closest kept, burns most of all.
JULIA. They do not love, that do not show their love.
LUCETTA. O they love least, that let me know their love.
JULIA. I would, I knew his mind.
LUCETTA. Peruse this paper, madam.
JULIA. 'To Julia'... Say, from whom?
LUCETTA. That the contents will show.
JULIA. Say, say... who gave it thee?
LUCETTA. Sir Valentine's page: and sent,
I think, from Proteus;
He would have given it you, but I, being in the way,
Did in your name receive it: pardon the fault, I pray.
JULIA. Now—by my modesty!—a goodly broker...
Dare you presume to harbour wanton lines?
To whisper, and conspire against my youth?
Now trust me, 'tis an office of great worth,
And you an officer fit for the place...
There... take the paper!.. see it be returned,
Or else return no more into my sight.
LUCETTA. To plead for love deserves more fee than hate.
JULIA. Will you be gone?
LUCETTA [going within]. That you may ruminate.
JULIA. And yet I would I had o'erlooked the letter;
It were a shame to call her back again,
And pray her to a fault for which I chid her....
What 'fool is she, that knows I am a maid,
And would not force the letter to my view?
Since maids, in modesty, say 'no' to that
Which they would have the profferer construe 'ay'....
Fie, fie! how wayward is this foolish love;
That, like a testy babe, will scratch the nurse,
And presently, all humbled, kiss the rod!
How churlishly I chid Lucetta hence,
When willingly I would have had her here!
How angerly I taught my brow to frown,

When inward joy enforced my heart to smile!
My penance is, to call Lucetta back
And ask remission for my folly past....
What ho! Lucetta!

Lucetta returns

LUCETTA. What would your ladyship?
JULIA. Is it near dinner-time?
LUCETTA. I would it were—
That you might kill your stomach on your meat,
And not upon your maid.
JULIA. What is't that you
Took up so gingerly?
LUCETTA. Nothing.
JULIA. Why didst thou stoop then?
LUCETTA. To take a paper up, that I let fall.
JULIA. And is that paper nothing?
LUCETTA. Nothing concerning me.
JULIA. Then let it lie, for those that it concerns.
LUCETTA. Madam, it will not lie where it concerns,
Unless it have a false interpreter.
JULIA. Some love of yours hath writ to you in rhyme.
LUCETTA. That I might sing it, madam, to a tune . . .
Give me a note—your ladyship can set.
JULIA. As little by such toys as may be possible:
Best sing it to the tune of 'Light o' love.'
LUCETTA. It is too heavy for so light a tune.
JULIA. Heavy? belike it hath some burden then.
LUCETTA. Ay . . . and melodious were it, would you sing it.
JULIA. And why not you?
LUCETTA. I cannot reach so high.
JULIA. Let's see your song . . .

She snatches at the letter

How now, minion!
LUCETTA. Keep tune there still; so you will sing it out . . .
And yet, methinks, I do not like this tune.
JULIA. You do not?
LUCETTA. No, madam, 'tis too sharp.
JULIA. You—minion—are too saucy.
LUCETTA. Nay, now you are too flat;
And mar the concord, with too harsh a descant:
There wanteth but a 'mean' to fill your song.
JULIA. The mean is drowned with your unruly bass.
LUCETTA. Indeed, I 'bid the base' for Proteus.
JULIA. This babble shall not henceforth trouble me;
She tears the letter
Here is a coil with protestation . . .
Go, get you gone . . . and let the papers lie . . .
You would be fingring them, to anger me.
LUCETTA. She makes it strange, but she would be best pleased
To be so angred with another letter.
She goes within
JULIA. Nay, would I were so angred with the same . . .
O hateful hands, to tear such loving words;
Injurious wasps, to feed on such sweet honey,
And kill the bees that yield it with your stings;
I'll kiss each several paper, for amends . . .
Look, here is writ 'kind Julia' . . . unkind Julia,
As in revenge of thy ingratitude,
I throw thy name against the bruising stones,
Trampling contemptuously on thy disdain....
And here is writ 'love-wounded Proteus'....
Poor wounded name: my bosom, as a bed,
Shall lodge thee till thy wound be throughly healed;
And thus I search it with a sovereign kiss....
But twice, or thrice, was 'Proteus' written down . . .
Be calm, good wind, blow not a word away,
Till I have found each letter in the letter,
Except mine own name: that, some whirlwind bear
Unto a ragged, fearful-hanging rock,
And throw it thence into the raging sea....
Lo, here in one line is his name twice writ:
'Poor forlorn Proteus, passionate Proteus:
To the sweet Julia' . . . that I'll tear away . . .
And yet I will not, sith so prettily
He couples it to his complaining names;
Thus will I fold them, one upon another;
Now kiss, embrace, contend, do what you will.

Lucetta returns

LUCETTA. Madam . . .
Dinner is ready . . . and your father stays.
JULIA. Well, let us go.
LUCETTA. What, shall these papers lie like tell-tales here?
JULIA. If you respect them, best to take them up.
LUCETTA. Nay, I was taken up for laying them down....
Yet here they shall not lie, for catching cold.
JULIA. I see you have a month's mind to them.
LUCETTA. Ay, madam, you may say what sights you see;
I see things too, although you judge I wink.
JULIA. Come, come, will't please you go? They go

Scene 3: Verona: Antonio's house

Antonio enters with Panthino, his man

ANTONIO. Tell me, Panthino, what sad talk was that,
Wherewith my brother held you in the cloister?
PANTHINO. 'Twas of his nephew Proteus, your son.
ANTONIO. Why? what of him?
PANTHINO. He wondred that your lordship
Would suffer him to spend his youth at home,
While other men, of slender reputation,
Put forth their sons to seek preferment out:
Some to the wars, to try their fortune there;
Some, to discover islands far away;
Some, to the studious universities.
For any or for all these exercises
He said that Proteus, your son, was meet;
And did request me to importune you
To let him spend his time no more at home;
Which would be great impeachment to his age,
In having known no travel in his youth.
ANTONIO. Nor need'st thou much importune me to that
Whereon this month I have been hammering....
I have considered well his loss of time,
And how he cannot be a perfect man,

Not being tried and tutored in the world:
Experience is by industry achieved,
And perfected by the swift course of time:
Then, tell me, whither were I best to send him?
PANTHINO. I think your lordship is not ignorant,
How his companion, youthful Valentine,
Attends the emperor in his royal court.
ANTONIO. I know it well.
PANTHINO. 'Twere good, I think, your lordship sent him thither.
There shall he practise tilts and tournaments,
Hear sweet discourse, converse with noblemen,
And be in eye of every exercise
Worthy his youth and nobleness of birth.
ANTONIO. I like thy counsel ... well hast thou advised ...
And that thou mayst perceive how well I like it,
The execution of it shall make known;
Even with the speediest expedition
I will despatch him to the emperor's court.
PANTHINO. To-morrow, may it please you, Don Alphonso,
With other gentlemen of good esteem,
Are journeying to salute the emperor,
And to commend their service to his will.
ANTONIO. Good company: with them shall Proteus go ...

Proteus enters

And in good time ... now will we break with him.
PROTEUS. Sweet love, sweet lines, sweet life—
Here is her hand, the agent of her heart;
Here is her oath for love, her honour's pawn:
O, that our fathers would applaud our loves,
To seal our happiness with their consents....
O heavenly Julia....
ANTONIO. How now! what letter are you reading there?
PROTEUS. May't please your lordship, 'tis a word or two
Of commendations sent from Valentine;
Delivered by a friend that came from him.
ANTONIO. Lend me the letter: let me see what news.
PROTEUS. There is no news, my lord, but that he writes
How happily he lives, how well beloved,
And daily gracéd by the emperor;
Wishing me with him, partner of his fortune.
ANTONIO. And how stand you affected to his wish?
PROTEUS. As one relying on your lordship's will,
And not depending on his friendly wish.
ANTONIO. My will is something sorted with his wish:
Muse not that I thus suddenly proceed;
For what I will, I will, and there an end ...
I am resolved that thou shalt spend some time
With Valentinus in the emperor's court:
What maintenance he from his friends receives,
Like exhibition thou shalt have from me.
To-morrow be in readiness to go—
Excuse it not ... for I am péremptory.
PROTEUS. My lord, I cannot be so soon provided,
Please you deliberate a day or two.
ANTONIO. Look, what thou want'st shall be sent after thee:
No more of stay; to-morrow thou must go:
Come on, Panthino; you shall be employed
To hasten on his expedition.

Antonio goes out, followed by Panthino

PROTEUS. Thus have I shunned the fire, for fear of burning,
And drenched me in the sea, where I am drowned....
I feared to show my father Julia's letter,
Lest he should take exceptions to my love,
And with the vantage of mine own excuse
Hath he excepted most against my love....
O, how this spring of love resembleth
The uncertain glory of an April day,
Which now shows all the beauty of the sun,
And by and by a cloud takes all away.

Panthino returns

PANTHINO. Sir Proteus, your father calls for you—
He is in haste, therefore I pray you go.
PROTEUS. Why, this it is: my heart accords thereto,
And yet a thousand times it answers 'no.'

He goes out

ACT 2

Scene 1: A street in Milan

Enter Valentine with Speed following

SPEED. Sir, your glove.
VALENTINE. Not mine: my gloves are on.
SPEED. Why then this may be yours, for this is but one.
VALENTINE. Ha! let me see ... ay, give it me, it's mine ...
Sweet ornament that decks a thing divine—
Ah Silvia, Silvia.
SPEED [calls]. Madam Silvia! Madam Silvia!
VALENTINE. How now, sirrah!
SPEED. She is not within hearing, sir.
VALENTINE. Why, sir, who bade you call her?
SPEED. Your worship, sir, or else I mistook.
VALENTINE. Well: you'll still be too forward.
SPEED. And yet I was last chidden for being too slow.
VALENTINE. Go to, sir, tell me: do you know Madam Silvia?
SPEED. She that your worship loves?
VALENTINE. Why, how know you that I am in love?

SPEED. Marry, by these special marks: first, you have learned—like Sir Proteus—to wreath your arms like a malcontent; to relish a love-song, like a robin-redbreast; to walk alone, like one that had the pestilence; to sigh, like a school-boy that had lost his A B C; to weep, like a young wench that had buried her grandam; to fast, like one that takes diet; to watch, like one that fears robbing; to speak puling, like a beggar at Hallowmas ... You were wont, when you laughed, to crow like a cock; when you walked, to walk like one of the lions; when you fasted, it was presently after dinner; when you looked sadly, it was for want of money: and now you are metamorphosed with a mistress, that, when I look on you, I can hardly think you my master.

VALENTINE. Are all these things perceived in me?
SPEED. They are all perceived without ye.
VALENTINE. Without me? they cannot.

SPEED. Without you? nay, that's certain; for, without you were so simple, none else would: but you are so without these follies, that these follies are within you, and shine through you like the water in an urinal: that not an eye that sees you, but is a physician to comment on your malady.

VALENTINE. But tell me: dost thou know my Lady Silvia?

SPEED. She that you gaze on so, as she sits at supper?

VALENTINE. Hast thou observed that? even she I mean.

SPEED. Why sir, I know her not.

VALENTINE. Dost thou know her by my gazing on her, and yet know'st her not?

SPEED. Is she not hard-favoured, sir?

VALENTINE. Not so fair, boy, as well-favoured.

SPEED. Sir, I know that well enough.

VALENTINE. What dost thou know?

SPEED. That she is not so fair, as (of you) well-favoured.

VALENTINE. I mean that her beauty is exquisite, but her favour infinite.

SPEED. That's because the one is painted, and the other out of all count.

VALENTINE. How painted? and how out of count?

SPEED. Marry, sir, so painted, to make her fair, that no man counts of her beauty.

VALENTINE. How esteem'st thou me? I account of her beauty.

SPEED. You never saw her since she was deformed.

VALENTINE. How long hath she been deformed?

SPEED. Ever since you loved her.

VALENTINE. I have loved her ever since I saw her, and still I see her beautiful.

SPEED. If you love her, you cannot see her.

VALENTINE. Why?

SPEED. Because love is blind... O, that you had mine eyes, or your own eyes had the lights they were wont to have, when you chid at Sir Proteus for going ungartered.

VALENTINE. What should I see then?

SPEED. Your own present folly, and her passing deformity: for he, being in love, could not see to garter his hose; and you, being in love, cannot see to put on your hose.

VALENTINE. Belike, boy, then you are in love—for last morning you could not see to wipe my shoes.

SPEED. True, sir: I was in love with my bed. I thank you, you swinged me for my love, which makes me the bolder to chide you for yours.

VALENTINE. In conclusion, I stand affected to her.

SPEED. I would you were set, so your affection would cease.

VALENTINE. Last night she enjoined me to write some lines to one she loves.

SPEED. And have you?

VALENTINE. I have.

SPEED. Are they not lamely writ?

VALENTINE. No, boy, but as well as I can do them...
Peace, here she comes.

Silvia approaches

SPEED. O excellent motion... O exceeding puppet... now will he interpret to her.

VALENTINE. Madam and mistress, a thousand good-morrows.

SPEED. O, 'give-ye-good-e'en... here's a million of manners!

SILVIA. Sir Valentine and servant, to you two thousand.

SPEED. He should give her interest: and she gives it him.

VALENTINE. As you enjoined me; I have writ your letter
Unto the secret nameless friend of yours...
Which I was much unwilling to proceed in,
But for my duty to your ladyship.

SILVIA. I thank you, gentle servant—'tis very clerkly done.

VALENTINE. Now trust me, madam, it came hardly off:
For, being ignorant to whom it goes,
I writ at random, very doubtfully.

SILVIA. Perchance you think too much of so much pains?

VALENTINE. No, madam, so it stead you, I will write—
Please you command—a thousand times as much...
And yet—

SILVIA. A pretty period... well... I guess the sequel;
'And yet I will not name it': 'and yet I care not'....
And yet take this again: and yet I thank you:
Meaning henceforth to trouble you no more.

SPEED. And yet you will: and yet another 'yet.'

VALENTINE [flushing]. What means your ladyship? Do you not like it?

SILVIA. Yes, yes: the lines are very quaintly writ,
But—since unwillingly—take them again....
Nay, take them.

VALENTINE. Madam, they are for you.

SILVIA. Ay, ay: you writ them, sir, at my request,
But I will none of them: they are for you:
I would have had them writ more movingly...

VALENTINE. Please you, I'll write your ladyship another.

SILVIA. And when it's writ... for my sake read it over,
And, if it please you, so... if not... why, so...

VALENTINE. If it please me, madam, what then?

SILVIA. Why, if it please you, take it for your labour;
And so good-morrow, servant. She passes on

SPEED. O jest unseen... inscrutable... invisible,
As a nose on a man's face, or a weathercock on a steeple...
My master sues to her: and she hath taught her suitor,
He being her pupil, to become her tutor....
O excellent device! was there ever heard a better?
That my master, being scribe, to himself should write the letter?

VALENTINE. How now, sir! what are you reasoning with yourself?

SPEED. Nay... I was rhyming... 'tis you that have the reason.

VALENTINE. To do what?

SPEED. To be a spokesman from Madam Silvia.

VALENTINE. To whom?

SPEED. To yourself... why, she wooes you by a figure.

VALENTINE. What figure?

SPEED. By a letter, I should say.

VALENTINE. Why, she hath not writ to me?

SPEED. What need she, when she hath made you write to yourself? Why, do you not perceive the jest?

VALENTINE. No, believe me.

SPEED. No believing you indeed, sir:

But did you perceive her earnest?
VALENTINE. She gave me none, except an angry word.
SPEED. Why, she hath given you a letter.
VALENTINE. That's the letter I writ to her friend.
SPEED. And that letter hath she delivered, and there an end.
VALENTINE. I would it were no worse.
SPEED. I'll warrant you, 'tis as well:
For often you have writ to her: and she, in modesty,
Or else for want of idle time, could not again reply—
Or fearing else some messenger, that might her mind discover,
Herself hath taught her love himself to write unto her lover!
All this I speak in print, for in print I found it....
Why muse you, sir? 'tis dinner-time.
VALENTINE. I have dined.
SPEED. Ay, but hearken, sir: though the chameleon Love can feed on the air, I am one that am nourished by my victuals; and would fain have meat: O, be not like your mistress—be moved, be moved.
They move on

Scene 2: Verona: the street near Julia's house

Enter Proteus and Julia

PROTEUS. Have patience, gentle Julia ...
JULIA. I must, where is no remedy.
PROTEUS. When possibly I can, I will return.
JULIA. If you turn not ... you will return the sooner:
Keep this remembrance for thy Julia's sake.
She gives him a ring
PROTEUS. Why then we'll make exchange; here, take you this.
JULIA. And seal the bargain with a holy kiss.
PROTEUS. Here is my hand for my true constancy ...
And when that hour o'er-slips me in the day,
Wherein I sigh not, Julia, for thy sake,
The next ensuing hour home foul mischance
Torment me for my love's forgetfulness ...
My father stays my coming ... answer not ...
The tide is now; nay, not thy tide of tears—
That tide will stay me longer than I should....
Julia, farewell ... She goes within
What! gone without a word?
Ay, so true love should do: it cannot speak—
For truth hath better deeds than words to grace it.

Panthino appears

PANTHINO. Sir Proteus! you are stayed for.
PROTEUS. Go ... I come, I come ...
Alas, this parting strikes poor lovers dumb.
He goes

Scene 3

Launce approaches, leading a dog

LAUNCE. Nay, 'twill be this hour ere I have done weeping: all the kind of the Launces have this very fault ... I have received my proportion, like the Prodigious Son, and am going with Sir Proteus to the Imperial's court ... I think Crab, my dog, be the sourest-natured dog that lives: my mother weeping; my father wailing; my sister crying; our maid howling; our cat wringing her hands; and all our house in a great perplexity—yet did not this cruel-hearted cur shed one tear: he is a stone, a very pebble-stone, and has no more pity in him than a dog: a Jew would have wept to have seen our parting: why, my grandam having no eyes, look you, wept herself blind at my parting: nay, I'll show you the manner of it.... This shoe is my father ... no, this left shoe is my father; no, no, this left shoe is my mother ... nay, that cannot be so neither ... yes; it is so, it is so: it hath the worser sole ... this shoe, with the hole in it, is my mother, and this my father ... a vengeance on't! there 'tis.... Now, sir, this staff is my sister; for, look you, she is as white as a lily, and as small as a wand: this hat is Nan, our maid: I am the dog ... no, the dog is himself, and I am the dog ... O, the dog is me, and I am myself: ay; so, so ... Now come I to my father; 'Father, your blessing': now should not the shoe speak a word for weeping: now should I kiss my father; well, he weeps on ... Now come I to my mother: O, that she could speak now, like a wood woman: well, I kiss her: why there 'tis; here's my mother's breath up and down ... Now come I to my sister; mark the moan she makes ... now the dog all this while sheds not a tear; nor speaks a word: but see how I lay the dust with my tears.

Panthino returns

PANTHINO. Launce, away, away ... aboard ... thy master is shipped, and thou art to post after with oars ... What's the matter? why weep'st thou, man? Away ass, you'll lose the tide, if you tarry any longer.
LAUNCE. It is no matter if the tied were lost, for it is the unkindest tied that ever any man tied.
PANTHINO. What's the unkindest tide?
LAUNCE. Why, he that's tied here, Crab, my dog.
PANTHINO. Tut, man: I mean thou'lt lose the flood, and in losing the flood lose thy voyage, and in losing thy voyage lose thy master, and in losing thy master lose thy service, and in losing thy service—why dost thou stop my mouth?
LAUNCE. For fear thou shouldst lose thy tongue.
PANTHINO. Where should I lose my tongue?
LAUNCE. In thy tale.
PANTHINO. In my tail!
LAUNCE. Lose the tide, and the voyage, and the master, and the service—and the tied ... Why, man, if the river were dry, I am able to fill it with my tears; if the wind were down, I could drive the boat with my sighs.
PANTHINO. Come: come away, man—I was sent to call thee.
LAUNCE. Sir ... call me what thou dar'st!
PANTHINO. Wilt thou go?
LAUNCE. Well, I will go. They depart

Scene 4: Milan: the Duke's palace

Enter Valentine, Silvia, Speed and Sir Thurio

SILVIA. Servant.
VALENTINE. Mistress!
SPEED. Master, Sir Thurio frowns on you.
VALENTINE. Ay, boy, it's for love.
SPEED. Not of you.
VALENTINE. Of my mistress then.

SPEED. 'Twere good you knocked him. He goes out
SILVIA. Servant, you are sad.
VALENTINE. Indeed, madam, I seem so.
THURIO. Seem you that you are not?
VALENTINE. Haply I do.
THURIO. So do counterfeits.
VALENTINE. So do you.
THURIO. What seem I that I am not?
VALENTINE. Wise.
THURIO. What instance of the contrary?
VALENTINE. Your folly.
THURIO. And how quote you my folly?
VALENTINE. I quote it in your jerkin.
THURIO. My jerkin is a doublet.
VALENTINE. Well, then, I'll double your folly.
THURIO. How!
SILVIA. What, angry, Sir Thurio? do you change colour?
VALENTINE. Give him leave, madam— he is a kind of chameleon.
THURIO. That hath more mind to feed on your blood, than live in your air.
VALENTINE. You have said, sir.
THURIO. Ay, sir, and done too, for this time.
VALENTINE. I know it well, sir, you always end ere you begin.
SILVIA. A fine volley of words, gentlemen, and quickly shot off.
VALENTINE. 'Tis indeed, madam—we thank the giver.
SILVIA. Who is that, servant?
VALENTINE. Yourself, sweet lady, for you gave the fire. Sir Thurio borrows his wit from your ladyship's looks, and spends what he borrows, kindly in your company.
THURIO. Sir, if you spend word for word with me, I shall make your wit bankrupt.
VALENTINE. I know it well, sir: you have an exchequer of words, and, I think, no other treasure to give your followers: for it appears by their bare liveries, that they live by your bare words.
SILVIA. No more, gentlemen, no more . . . Here comes my father.

The Duke enters

DUKE. Now, daughter Silvia, you are hard beset. . . .
Sir Valentine, your father is in good health—
What say you to a letter from your friends
Of much good news?
VALENTINE. My lord, I will be thankful
To any happy messenger from thence.
DUKE. Know you Don Antonio, your countryman?
VALENTINE. Ay, my good lord, I know the gentleman
To be of worth, and worthy estimation,
And not without desert so well reputed.
DUKE. Hath he not a son?
VALENTINE. Ay, my good lord—a son that well deserves
The honour and regard of such a father.
DUKE. You know him well?
VALENTINE. I know him as myself: for from our infancy
We have conversed, and spent our hours together,
And though myself have been an idle truant,
Omitting the sweet benefit of time
To clothe mine age with angel-like perfection . . .
Yet hath Sir Proteus, for that's his name,
Made use and fair advantage of his days:
His years but young, but his experience old:
His head unmellowed, but his judgement ripe:
And, in a word, (for far behind his worth
Come all the praises that I now bestow)
He is complete in feature and in mind,
With all good grace, to grace a gentleman.
DUKE. Beshrew me, sir, but if he make this good,
He is as worthy for an empress' love,
As meet to be an emperor's counsellor . . .
Well, sir: this gentleman is come to me
With commendation from great potentates,
And here he means to spend his time awhile.
I think 'tis no unwelcome news to you.
VALENTINE. Should I have wished a thing, it had been he.
DUKE. Welcome him then according to his worth:
Silvia, I speak to you, and you, Sir Thurio—
For Valentine, I need not cite him to it.
I will send him hither to you presently. He goes out
VALENTINE. This is the gentleman I told your ladyship
Had come along with me, but that his mistress
Did hold his eyes locked in her crystal looks.
SILVIA. Belike that now she hath enfranchised them
Upon some other pawn for fealty.
VALENTINE. Nay, sure, I think she holds them prisoners still.
SILVIA. Nay, then he should be blind—and, being blind,
How could he see his way to seek out you?
VALENTINE. Why, lady, love hath twenty pair of eyes.
THURIO. They say that Love hath not an eye at all.
VALENTINE. To see such lovers, Thurio, as yourself—
Upon a homely object love can wink.
SILVIA. Have done, have done: here comes the gentleman. Thurio goes out

Proteus enters

VALENTINE. Welcome, dear Proteus . . . Mistress, I beseech you,
Confirm his welcome with some special favour.
SILVIA. His worth is warrant for his welcome hither,
If this be he you oft have wished to hear from.
VALENTINE. Mistress, it is . . . Sweet lady, entertain him
To be my fellow-servant to your ladyship.
SILVIA [bowing]. Too low a mistress for so high a servant.
PROTEUS. Not so, sweet lady, but too mean a servant
To have a look of such a worthy mistress.
VALENTINE. Leave off discourse of disability . . .
Sweet lady, entertain him for your servant.
PROTEUS. My duty will I boast of, nothing else.
SILVIA. And duty never yet did want his meed. . . .
Servant, you are welcome to a worthless mistress.
PROTEUS. I'll die on him that says so, but yourself.
SILVIA. That you are welcome?
PROTEUS. That you are worthless.

Thurio returns

THURIO. Madam, my lord your father would speak with you.
SILVIA. I wait upon his pleasure . . . Come, Sir Thurio,
Go with me . . . Once more, new servant, welcome;
I'll leave you to confer of home-affairs.

When you have done, we look to hear from you.
PROTEUS. We'll both attend upon your ladyship.
Silvia goes out, with Thurio
VALENTINE. Now tell me: how do all from whence you came?
PROTEUS. Your friends are well, and have them much commended.
VALENTINE. And how do yours?
PROTEUS. I left them all in health.
VALENTINE. How does your lady? and how thrives your love?
PROTEUS. My tales of love were wont to weary you,
I know you joy not in a love-discourse.
VALENTINE. Ay, Proteus, but that life is altered now.
I have done penance for contemning Love,
Whose high imperious thoughts have punished me
With bitter fasts, with penitential groans,
With nightly tears, and daily heart-sore sighs,
For, in revenge of my contempt of love,
Love hath chased sleep from my enthrallèd eyes,
And made them watchers of mine own heart's sorrow....
O, gentle Proteus, Love's a mighty lord,
And hath so humbled me, as I confess
There is no woe to his correction,
Nor to his service no such joy on earth:
Now, no discourse, except it be of love:
Now can I break my fast, dine, sup, and sleep,
Upon the very naked name of love.
PROTEUS. Enough; I read your fortune in your eye:
Was this the idol that you worship so?
VALENTINE. Even she; and is she not a heavenly saint?
PROTEUS. No; but she is an earthly paragon.
VALENTINE. Call her divine.
PROTEUS. I will not flatter her.
VALENTINE. O, flatter me; for love delights in praises.
PROTEUS. When I was sick, you gave me bitter pills,
And I must minister the like to you.
VALENTINE. Then speak the truth by her; if not divine,
Yet let her be a principality,
Sovereign to all the creatures on the earth.
PROTEUS. Except my mistress.
VALENTINE. Sweet: except not any,
Except thou wilt except against my love.
PROTEUS. Have I not reason to prefer mine own?
VALENTINE. And I will help thee to prefer her too:
She shall be dignified with this high honour—
To bear my lady's train, lest the base earth
Should from her vesture chance to steal a kiss,
And, of so great a favour growing proud,
Disdain to root the summer-swelling flower,
And make rough winter everlastingly.
PROTEUS. Why, Valentine, what braggardism is this?
VALENTINE. Pardon me, Proteus, all I can is nothing
To her, whose worth makes other worthies nothing;
She is alone.
PROTEUS. Then let her alone.
VALENTINE. Not for the world: why man, she is mine own,
And I as rich in having such a jewel
As twenty seas, if all their sand were pearl,
The water nectar, and the rocks pure gold....
Forgive me that I do not dream on thee,
Because thou seest me dote upon my love:
My foolish rival, that her father likes—
Only for his possessions are so huge—
Is gone with her along, and I must after,
For love, thou know'st, is full of jealousy.
PROTEUS. But she loves you?
VALENTINE. Ay, and we are betrothed: nay more, our marriage hour,
With all the cunning manner of our flight,
Determined of: how I must climb her window—
The ladder made of cords—and all the means
Plotted and 'greed on for my happiness....
Good Proteus, go with me to my chamber,
In these affairs to aid me with thy counsel.
PROTEUS. Go on before: I shall enquire you forth:
I must unto the road, to disembark
Some necessaries that I needs must use,
And then I'll presently attend you.
VALENTINE. Will you make haste?
PROTEUS. I will.... Valentine departs
Even as one heat another heat expels,
Or as one nail by strength drives out another,
So the remembrance of my former love
Is by a newer object quite forgotten.
It is mine.... or Valentine's praise,
Her true perfection, or my false transgression,
That makes me, reasonless, to reason thus?
She is fair; and so is Julia that I love—
That I did love, for now my love is thawed,
Which, like a waxen image 'gainst a fire,
Bears no impression of the thing it was....
Methinks my zeal to Valentine is cold,
And that I love him not as I was wont:
O, but I love his lady too-too much,
And that's the reason I love him so little....
How shall I dote on her with more advice,
That thus without advice begin to love her?
'Tis but her picture I have yet beheld,
And that hath dazzlèd my reason's light:
But when I look on her perfections,
There is no reason but I shall be blind....
If I can check my erring love, I will—
If not, to compass her I'll use my skill.
He goes out

Scene 5: Milan: a street

Speed meeting Launce

SPEED. Launce! by mine honesty, welcome to Padua.

LAUNCE. Forswear not thyself, sweet youth, for I am not welcome.... I reckon this always—that a man is never undone till he be hanged, nor never welcome to a place till some certain shot be paid and the hostess say 'welcome.'

SPEED. Come on, you madcap: I'll to the alehouse with you presently; where, for one shot of five pence, thou shalt have five thousand welcomes ... But, sirrah, how did thy master part with Madam Julia?

LAUNCE. Marry, after they closed in earnest, they parted very fairly in jest.

SPEED. But shall she marry him?

LAUNCE. No.

SPEED. How then? Shall he marry her?

LAUNCE. No, neither.

SPEED. What, are they broken?

LAUNCE. No; they are both as whole as a fish.

SPEED. Why then, how stands the matter with them?

LAUNCE. Marry, thus—when it stands well with him, it stands well with her.

SPEED. What an ass art thou! I understand thee not.

LAUNCE. What a block art thou, that thou canst not! My staff understands me!

SPEED. What thou sayst?

LAUNCE. Ay, and what I do too: look thee, I'll but lean, and my staff understands me.

SPEED. It stands under thee, indeed.

LAUNCE. Why, stand under . . . and understand is all one.

SPEED. But tell me true, will't be a match?

LAUNCE. Ask my dog—if he say 'ay,' it will: if he say 'no,' it will: if he shake his tail and say nothing, it will.

SPEED. The conclusion is then, that it will.

LAUNCE. Thou shalt never get such a secret from me, but by a parable.

SPEED. 'Tis well that I get it so . . . But Launce, how sayst thou, that my master is become a notable lover?

LAUNCE. I never knew him otherwise.

SPEED. Than how?

LAUNCE. A notable lubber: as thou reportest him to be.

SPEED. Why, thou whoreson ass, thou mistak'st me.

LAUNCE. Why, fool, I meant not thee, I meant thy master.

SPEED. I tell thee, my master is become a hot lover.

LAUNCE. Why, I tell thee, I care not though he burn himself in love. . . . If thou wilt, go with me to the alehouse; if not, thou art an Hebrew, a Jew, and not worth the name of a Christian.

SPEED. Why?

LAUNCE. Because thou hast not so much charity in thee, as to 'go to the ale' with a Christian . . . Wilt thou go?

SPEED. At thy service. They go

Scene 6

Enter Proteus

PROTEUS. To leave my Julia . . . shall I be forsworn?
To love fair Silvia . . . shall I be forsworn?
To wrong my friend, I shall be much forsworn. . . .
And e'en that power, which gave me first my oath,
Provokes me to this threefold perjury. . . .
Love bade me swear, and love bids me forswear;
O sweet-suggesting Love, if thou has sinned,
Teach me—thy tempted subject—to excuse it. . . .
At first I did adore a twinkling star,
But now I worship a celestial sun:
Unheedful vows may heedfully be broken,
And he wants wit that wants resolvéd will
To learn his wit t'exchange the bad for better;
Fie, fie, unreverend tongue, to call her bad,
Whose sovereignty so oft thou hast preferred
With twenty thousand soul-confirming oaths. . . .
I cannot leave to love; and yet I do:
But there I leave to love where I should love. . . .
Julia I lose, and Valentine I lose—
If I keep them, I needs must lose myself:
If I lose them, thus find I by their loss—
For Valentine, myself: for Julia, Silvia. . . .
I to myself am dearer than a friend,
For love is still more precious in itself:
And Silvia—witness Heaven, that made her fair!—
Shews Julia but a swarthy Ethiop. . . .
I will forget that Julia is alive,
Remembering that my love to her is dead. . . .
And Valentine I'll hold an enemy,
Aiming at Silvia as a sweeter friend. . . .
I cannot now prove constant to myself,
Without some treachery used to Valentine. . . .
This night he meaneth with a corded ladder
To climb celestial Silvia's chamber-window,
Myself in counsel his competitor. . . .
Now presently I'll give her father notice
Of their disguising and pretended flight:
Who, all enraged, will banish Valentine:
For Thurio he intends shall wed his daughter.
But, Valentine being gone, I'll quickly cross
By some sly trick blunt Thurio's dull proceeding. . . .
Love, lend me wings to make my purpose swift,
As thou hast lent me wit to plot this drift!
He continues his way

Scene 7: Verona: Julia's house

Enter Julia and Lucetta

JULIA. Counsel, Lucetta, gentle girl assist me.
And, e'en in kind love, I do cónjure thee,
Who art the table wherein all my thoughts
Are visibly charáctered and engraved,
To lesson me, and tell me some good mean,
How, with my honour, I may undertake
A journey to my loving Proteus.
LUCETTA. Alas, the way is wearisome and long.
JULIA. A true-devoted pilgrim is not weary
To measure kingdoms with his feeble steps—
Much less shall she that hath Love's wings to fly,
And when the flight is made to one so dear,
Of such divine perfection, as Sir Proteus.
LUCETTA. Better forbear till Proteus make return.
JULIA. O, know'st thou not his looks are my soul's food?
Pity the dearth that I have pinéd in,
By longing for that food so long a time. . . .
Didst thou but know the inly touch of love,
Thou wouldst as soon go kindle fire with snow,
As seek to quench the fire of love with words.
LUCETTA. I do not seek to quench your love's hot fire,
But qualify the fire's éxtreme rage,
Lest it should burn above the bounds of reason.
JULIA. The more thou damm'st it up, the more it burns:
The current that with gentle murmur glides,
Thou know'st, being stopped, impatiently doth rage:
But when his fair course is not hinderéd
He makes sweet music with th'enamelled stones,
Giving a gentle kiss to every sedge
He overtaketh in his pilgrimage;
And so by many winding nooks he strays,
With willing sport, to the wild ocean. . . .
Then let me go, and hinder not my course:
I'll be as patient as a gentle stream,
And make a pastime of each weary step,
Till the last step have brought me to my love—
And there I'll rest, as after much turmoil
A blesséd soul doth in Elysium.
LUCETTA. But in what habit will you go along?
JULIA. Not like a woman, for I would prevent
The loose encounters of lascivious men:
Gentle Lucetta, fit me with such weeds

As may beseem some well-reputed page.
LUCETTA. Why then your ladyship must cut your hair.
JULIA. No, girl, I'll knit it up in silken strings,
With twenty odd-conceited true-love knots:
To be fantastic may become a youth
Of greater time than I shall show to be.
LUCETTA. What fashion—madam—shall I make your breeches?
JULIA. That fits as well as 'Tell me, good my lord,
What compass will you wear your farthingale?'
Why, e'en what fashion thou best likes, Lucetta.
LUCETTA. You must needs have them with a cod-piece, madam.
JULIA. Out, out, Lucetta! that will be ill-favoured.
LUCETTA. A round hose, madam, now's not worth a pin,
Unless you have a cod-piece to stick pins on.
JULIA. Lucetta, as thou lov'st me, let me have
What thou think'st meet, and is most mannerly....
But tell me, wench, how will the world repute me
For undertaking so unstaid a journey?
I fear me, it will make me scandalized.
LUCETTA. If you think so, then stay at home and go not.
JULIA. Nay, that I will not.
LUCETTA. Then never dream on infamy, but go:
If Proteus like your journey when you come,
No matter who's displeased when you are gone:
I fear me, he will scarce be pleased with all.
JULIA. That is the least, Lucetta, of my fear:
A thousand oaths, an ocean of his tears,
And instances of infinite of love,
Warrant me welcome to my Proteus.
LUCETTA. All these are servants to deceitful men.
JULIA. Base men, that use them to so base effect;
But truer stars did govern Proteus' birth—
His words are bonds, his oaths are oracles,
His love sincere, his thoughts immaculate,
His tears pure messengers sent from his heart,
His heart as far from fraud as heaven from earth.
LUCETTA. Pray heaven he prove so, when you come to him.
JULIA. Now, as thou lov'st me, do him not that wrong
To bear a hard opinion of his truth:
Only deserve my love by loving him,
And presently go with me to my chamber,
To take a note of what I stand in need of
To furnish me upon my longing journey:
All that is mine I leave at thy dispose,
My goods, my lands, my reputation,
Only, in lieu thereof, dispatch me hence:
Come; answer not: but to it presently—
I am impatient of my tarriance. They go out

ACT 3

Scene 1: Milan: the Duke's palace

Enter the Duke, Thurio, and Proteus

DUKE. Sir Thurio, give us leave, I pray, awhile—
We have some secrets to confer about....
Thurio departs
Now, tell me, Proteus, what's your will with me?
PROTEUS. My gracious lord, that which I would discover
The law of friendship bids me to conceal,
But when I call to mind your gracious favours
Done to me—undeserving as I am—
My duty pricks me on to utter that
Which else no worldly good should draw from me:
Know, worthy prince, Sir Valentine, my friend,
This night intends to steal away your daughter:
Myself am one made privy to the plot....
I know you have determined to bestow her
On Thurio, whom your gentle daughter hates,
And should she thus be stol'n away from you,
It would be much vexation to your age....
Thus—for my duty's sake—I rather chose
To cross my friend in his intended drift,
Than, by concealing it, heap on your head
A pack of sorrows which would press you down,
Being unprevented, to your timeless grave.
DUKE. Proteus, I thank thee for thine honest care,
Which to requite, command me while I live....
This love of theirs myself have often seen,
Haply when they have judged me fast asleep,
And oftentimes have purposed to forbid
Sir Valentine her company and my court:
But, fearing lest my jealous aim might err,
And so, unworthily, disgrace the man—
A rashness that I ever yet have shunned—
I gave him gentle looks, thereby to find
That which thyself hast now disclosed to me....
And, that thou mayst perceive my fear of this,
Knowing that tender youth is soon suggested,
I nightly lodge her in an upper tower,
The key whereof myself have ever kept:
And thence she cannot be conveyed away.
PROTEUS. Know, noble lord, they have devised a mean
How he her chamber-window will ascend,
And with a corded ladder fetch her down:
For which the youthful lover now is gone,
And this way comes he with it presently;
Where, if it please you, you may intercept him....
But, good my lord, do it so cunningly,
That my discovery be not aimèd at:
For love of you, not hate unto my friend,
Hath made me publisher of this pretence.
DUKE. Upon mine honour, he shall never know
That I had any light from thee of this.
PROTEUS. Adieu, my lord, Sir Valentine is coming.
He retires

Valentine passes

DUKE. Sir Valentine, whither away so fast?
VALENTINE. Please it your grace, there is a messenger
That stays to bear my letters to my friends,
And I am going to deliver them.
DUKE. Be they of much import?
VALENTINE. The tenour of them doth but signify
My health and happy being at your court.
DUKE. Nay then, no matter: stay with me awhile—
I am to break with thee of some affairs
That touch me near: wherein thou must be secret....
'Tis not unknown to thee, that I have sought
To match my friend Sir Thurio to my daughter.
VALENTINE. I know it well, my lord—and, sure, the match
Were rich and honourable: besides, the gentleman

Is full of virtue, bounty, worth, and qualities
Beseeming such a wife as your fair daughter:
Cannot your grace win her to fancy him?
DUKE. No, trust me, she is peevish, sullen, froward,
Proud, disobedient, stubborn, lacking duty,
Neither regarding that she is my child,
Nor fearing me as if I were her father:
And, may I say to thee, this pride of hers—
Upon advice—hath drawn my love from her,
And where I thought the remnant of mine age
Should have been cherished by her child-like duty,
I now am full resolved to take a wife,
And turn her out to who will take her in:
Then let her beauty be her wedding-dower:
For me, and my possessions, she esteems not.
VALENTINE. What would your grace have me to do in this?
DUKE. There is a lady in Verona here
Whom I affect: but she is nice and coy,
And nought esteems my agéd eloquence....
Now, therefore, would I have thee to my tutor—
For long agone I have forgot to court,
Besides, the fashion of the time is changed—
How and which way I may bestow myself
To be regarded in her sun-bright eye.
VALENTINE. Win her with gifts, if she respect not words.
Dumb jewels often, in their silent kind,
More than quick words do move a woman's mind.
DUKE. But she did scorn a present that I sent her.
VALENTINE. A woman sometime scorns what best contents her....
Send her another: never give her o'er—
For scorn at first makes after-love the more:
If she do frown, 'tis not in hate of you,
But rather to beget more love in you:
If she do chide, 'tis not to have you gone,
For why, the fools are mad, if left alone:
Take no repulse, whatever she doth say—
For 'get you gone' she doth not mean 'away':
Flatter and praise, commend, extol their graces:
Though ne'er so black, say they have angels' faces.
That man that hath a tongue, I say, is no man,
If with his tongue he cannot win a woman.
DUKE. But she I mean is promised by her friends
Unto a youthful gentleman of worth,
And kept severely from resort of men,
That no man hath access by day to her.
VALENTINE. Why, then, I would resort to her by night.
DUKE. Ay, but the doors be locked and keys kept safe,
That no man hath recourse to her by night.
VALENTINE. What lets but one may enter at her window?
DUKE. Her chamber is aloft, far from the ground,
And built so shelving, that one cannot climb it
Without apparent hazard of his life.
VALENTINE. Why, then, a ladder quaintly made of cords,
To cast up, with a pair of anchoring hooks,
Would serve to scale another Hero's tower,
So bold Leander would adventure it.
DUKE. Now, as thou art a gentleman of blood,
Advise me where I may have such a ladder.
VALENTINE. When would you use it? pray sir, tell me that.
DUKE. This very night; for Love is like a child,
That longs for every thing that he can come by.
VALENTINE. By seven o'clock I'll get you such a ladder.
DUKE. But, hark thee: I will go to her alone—
How shall I best convey the ladder thither?
VALENTINE. It will be light, my lord, that you may bear it
Under a cloak that is of any length.
DUKE. A cloak as long as thine will serve the turn?
VALENTINE. Ay, my good lord.
DUKE. Then let me see thy cloak—
I'll get me one of such another length.
VALENTINE. Why, any cloak will serve the turn, my lord.
DUKE. How shall I fashion me to wear a cloak?
I pray thee, let me feel thy cloak upon me....
What letter is this same? What's here?—'To Silvia'?
And here an engine fit for my proceeding!
I'll be so bold to break the seal for once.
He reads
'My thoughts do harbour with my Silvia nightly,
'And slaves they are to me, that send them flying.
'O, could their master come, and go as lightly,
'Himself would lodge, where—senseless—they are lying.
'My herald thoughts in thy pure bosom rest them,
'Why I, their king, that thither them importune,
'Do curse the grace that with such grace hath blessed them,
'Because myself do want my servants' fortune.
'I curse myself, for they are sent by me,
'That they should harbour where their lord should be.'
What's here?
'Silvia, this night I will enfranchise thee'....
'Tis so: and here's the ladder for the purpose....
Why, Phaethon—for thou art Merops' son!—
Wilt thou aspire to guide the heavenly car,
And with thy daring folly burn the world?
Wilt thou reach stars, because they shine on thee?
Go base intruder, over-weening slave,
Bestow thy fawning smiles on equal mates,
And think my patience, more than thy desert,
Is privilege for thy departure hence....
Thank me for this more than for all the favours,
Which—all too much!—I have bestowed on thee....
But if thou linger in my territories
Longer than swiftest expedition
Will give thee time to leave our royal court,
By heaven, my wrath shall far exceed the love
I ever bore my daughter, or thyself....
Be gone, I will not hear thy vain excuse,
But, as thou lov'st thy life, make speed from hence.
He goes
VALENTINE. And why not death, rather than living torment?
To die, is to be banished from myself,
And Silvia is myself: banished from her,
Is self from self.... Ah! deadly banishment:
What light is light, if Silvia be not seen?
What joy is joy, if Silvia be not by?
Unless it be to think that she is by,
And feed upon the shadow of perfection....
Except I be by Silvia in the night,
There is no music in the nightingale....

Unless I look on Silvia in the day,
There is no day for me to look upon....
She is my essence—and I leave to be,
If I be not by her fair influence
Fostered, illumined, cherished, kept alive....
I fly not death, to fly his deadly doom—
Tarry I here, I but attend on death—
But, fly I hence, I fly away from life.

Enter Proteus and Launce

PROTEUS. Run, boy, run, run, and seek him out.
LAUNCE. So-ho! so-ho!
PROTEUS. What seest thou?
LAUNCE. Him we go to find.
There's not a hair on's head but 'tis a valentine.
PROTEUS. Valentine!
VALENTINE. No.
PROTEUS. Who then? his spirit?
VALENTINE. Neither.
PROTEUS. What then?
VALENTINE. Nothing.
LAUNCE. Can nothing speak? Master, shall I strike?
PROTEUS. Who wouldst thou strike?
LAUNCE. Nothing.
PROTEUS. Villain, forbear.
LAUNCE. Why, sir, I'll strike nothing: I pray you—
PROTEUS. Sirrah, I say, forbear ... Friend Valentine, a word.
VALENTINE. My ears are stopped, and cannot hear good news,
So much of bad already hath possessed them.
PROTEUS. Then in dumb silence will I bury mine,
For they are harsh, untuneable and bad.
VALENTINE. Is Silvia dead?
PROTEUS. No, Valentine.
VALENTINE. No Valentine, indeed, for sacred Silvia.
Hath she forsworn me?
PROTEUS. No, Valentine.
VALENTINE. No valentine, if Silvia have forsworn me—
What is your news?
LAUNCE. Sir, there is a proclamation that you are vanished.
PROTEUS. That thou art banishéd ... O, that's the news—
From hence, from Silvia, and from me thy friend.
VALENTINE. O, I have fed upon this woe already,
And now excess of it will make me surfeit....
Doth Silvia know that I am banishéd?
PROTEUS. Ay, ay: and she hath offered to the doom—
Which, unreversed, stands in effectual force—
A sea of melting pearl, which some call tears;
Those at her father's churlish feet she tendered,
With them, upon her knees, her humble self,
Wringing her hands, whose whiteness so became them,
As if but now they waxéd pale for woe:
But neither bended knees, pure hands held up,
Sad sighs, deep groans, nor silver-shedding tears,
Could penetrate her uncompassionate sire;
But Valentine, if he be ta'en, must die....
Besides, her intercession chafed him so,
When she for thy repeal was suppliant,
That to close prison he commanded her,
With many bitter threats of biding there.
VALENTINE. No more ... unless the next word that thou speak'st
Have some malignant power upon my life:
If so ... I pray thee breathe it in mine ear,
As ending anthem of my endless dolour.
PROTEUS. Cease to lament for that thou canst not help,
And study help for that which thou lament'st.
Time is the nurse and breeder of all good;
Here if thou stay, thou canst not see thy love:
Besides, thy staying will abridge thy life:
Hope is a lover's staff—walk hence with that,
And manage it against despairing thoughts:
Thy letters may be here, though thou art hence,
Which, being writ to me, shall be delivered
Even in the milk-white bosom of thy love....
The time now serves not to expostulate—
Come, I'll convey thee through the city-gate....
And, ere I part with thee, confer at large
Of all that may concern thy love-affairs:
As thou lov'st Silvia, though not for thyself,
Regard thy danger, and along with me.
VALENTINE. I pray thee, Launce, an if thou seest my boy,
Bid him make haste and meet me at the North-gate.
PROTEUS. Go, sirrah, find him out.... Come, Valentine.
VALENTINE. O my dear Silvia; hapless Valentine.
They go

LAUNCE. I am but a fool, look you, and yet I have the wit to think my master is a kind of a knave: but that's all one, if he be but one knave ... He lives not now that knows me to be in love—yet I am in love—but a team of horse shall not pluck that from me: nor who 'tis I love: and yet 'tis a woman; but what woman, I will not tell myself: and yet 'tis a milk-maid: yet 'tis not a maid: for she hath had gossips: yet 'tis a maid, for she is her master's maid, and serves for wages.... She hath more qualities than a water-spaniel—which is much in a bare Christian.... [pulls out a paper] Here is the catalogue of her condition. 'Inprimis, She can fetch and carry' ... Why, a horse can do no more; nay, a horse cannot fetch, but only carry; therefore is she better than a jade. 'Item, She can milk'—look you, a sweet virtue in a maid with clean hands.

Speed comes up

SPEED. How now, Signior Launce! what news with your mastership?
LAUNCE. With my master's ship? why, it is at sea.
SPEED. Well, your old vice still: mistake the word ... What news, then, in your paper?
LAUNCE. The black'st news that ever thou heard'st.
SPEED. Why, man, how black?
LAUNCE. Why, as black as ink.
SPEED. Let me read them.
LAUNCE. Fie on thee jolthead, thou canst not read.
SPEED. Thou liest ... I can.
LAUNCE. I will try thee: tell me this: who begot thee?
SPEED. Marry, the son of my grandfather.
LAUNCE. O illiterate loiterer; it was the son of thy grandmother ... This proves that thou canst not read.
SPEED. Come, fool, come: try me in thy paper.
LAUNCE. There ... and Saint Nicholas be thy speed!

SPEED. 'Inprimis, She can milk.'

LAUNCE. Ay, that she can.

SPEED. 'Item, She brews good ale.'

LAUNCE. And thereof comes the proverb: 'Blessing of your heart, you brew good ale.'

SPEED. 'Item, She can sew.'

LAUNCE. That's as much as to say, 'Can she so?'

SPEED. 'Item, She can knit.'

LAUNCE. What need a man care for a stock with a wench, when she can knit him a stock.

SPEED. 'Item, She can wash and scour.'

LAUNCE. A special virtue: for then she need not be washed and scoured.

SPEED. 'Item, She can spin.'

LAUNCE. Then may I set the world on wheels, when she can spin for her living.

SPEED. 'Item, She hath many nameless virtues.'

LAUNCE. That's as much as to say, bastard virtues: that, indeed, know not their fathers; and therefore have no names.

SPEED. 'Here follow her vices.'

LAUNCE. Close at the heels of her virtues.

SPEED. 'Item, She is not to be—fasting, in respect of her breath.'

LAUNCE. Well ... that may be mended with a breakfast .... Read on.

SPEED. 'Item, She hath a sweet mouth.'

LAUNCE. That makes amends for her sour breath.

SPEED. 'Item, She doth talk in her sleep.'

LAUNCE. It's no matter for that; so she slip not in her talk.

SPEED. 'Item, She is slow in words.'

LAUNCE. O villain, that set this down among her vices! To be slow in words is a woman's only virtue: I pray thee, out with't, and place it for her chief virtue.

SPEED. 'Item, She is proud.'

LAUNCE. Out with that too ... It was Eve's legacy, and cannot be ta'en from her.

SPEED. 'Item, She hath no teeth.'

LAUNCE. I care not for that neither ... because I love crusts.

SPEED. 'Item, She is curst.'

LAUNCE. Well ... the best is, she hath no teeth to bite.

SPEED. 'Item, She will often praise her liquor.'

LAUNCE. If her liquor be good, she shall: if she will not, I will; for good things should be praised.

SPEED. 'Item, She is too liberal.'

LAUNCE. Of her tongue she cannot; for that's writ down she is slow of: of her purse she shall not, for that I'll keep shut: now, of another thing she may, and that cannot I help.... Well, proceed.

SPEED. 'Item, She hath more hair than wit, and more faults than hairs, and more wealth than faults.'

LAUNCE. Stop there ... I'll have her ... she was mine, and not mine, twice or thrice in that last article: rehearse that once more.

SPEED. 'Item, She hath more hair than wit'—

LAUNCE. More hair than wit: it may be I'll prove it ... The cover of the salt hides the salt, and therefore it is more than the salt; the hair that covers the wit is more than the wit; for the greater hides the less ... What's next?

SPEED. —'And more faults than hairs'—

LAUNCE. That's monstrous: O, that that were out!

SPEED. —'And more wealth than faults.'

LAUNCE. Why, that word makes the faults gracious ... Well, I'll have her: and if it be a match, as nothing is impossible—

SPEED. What then?

LAUNCE. Why, then will I tell thee—that thy master stays for thee at the North-gate.

SPEED. For me!

LAUNCE. For thee? ay, who art thou? he hath stayed for a better man than thee.

SPEED. And must I go to him?

LAUNCE. Thou must run to him; for thou hast stayed so long, that going will scarce serve the turn.

SPEED. Why didst not tell me sooner? 'pox of your love-letters! He runs off

LAUNCE. Now will he be swinged for reading my letter ...
An unmannerly slave, that will thrust himself into secrets ...
I'll after, to rejoice in the boy's correction.
He follows

Scene 2

Enter the Duke and Thurio

DUKE. Sir Thurio, fear not but that she will love you,
Now Valentine is banished from her sight.

THURIO. Since his exile she hath despised me most,
Forsworn my company and railed at me,
That I am desperate of obtaining her.

DUKE. This weak impress of love is as a figure
Trenchéd in ice, which with an hour's heat
Dissolves to water and doth lose his form....
A little time will melt her frozen thoughts,
And worthless Valentine shall be forgot....

Proteus enters

How now, Sir Proteus! Is your countryman,
According to our proclamation, gone?

PROTEUS. Gone, my good lord.

DUKE. My daughter takes his going grievously!

PROTEUS. A little time, my lord, will kill that grief.

DUKE. So I believe: but Thurio thinks not so ...
Proteus, the good conceit I hold of thee—
For thou hast shown some sign of good desert—
Makes me the better to confer with thee.

PROTEUS. Longer than I prove loyal to your grace
Let me not live to look upon your grace.

DUKE. Thou know'st how willingly I would effect
The match between Sir Thurio and my daughter?

PROTEUS. I do, my lord.

DUKE. And also, I think, thou art not ignorant
How she opposes her against my will?

PROTEUS. She did, my lord, when Valentine was here.

DUKE. Ay, and perversely she persévers so ...
What might we do to make the girl forget
The love of Valentine, and love Sir Thurio?

PROTEUS. The best way is to slander Valentine
With falsehood, cowardice, and poor descent:
Three things that women highly hold in hate.

DUKE. Ay, but she'll think that it is spoke in hate.

PROTEUS. Ay, if his enemy deliver it....
Therefore it must with circumstance be spoken
By one whom she esteemeth as his friend.

DUKE. Then you must undertake to slander him.

PROTEUS. And that, my lord, I shall be loath to do ...
'Tis an ill office for a gentleman,

Especially against his very friend.
DUKE. Where your good word cannot advantage him,
Your slander never can endamage him;
Therefore the office is indifferent,
Being entreated to it by your friend.
PROTEUS. You have prevailed, my lord. If I can do it,
By aught that I can speak in his dispraise,
She shall not long continue love to him:
But say this weed her love from Valentine,
It follows not that she will love Sir Thurio.
THURIO. Therefore, as you unwind her love from him—
Lest it should ravel and be good to none—
You must provide to bottom it on me:
Which must be done, by praising me as much
As you in worth dispraise Sir Valentine.
DUKE. And, Proteus, we dare trust you in this kind
Because we know, on Valentine's report,
You are already Love's firm votary,
And cannot soon revolt and change your mind...
Upon this warrant, shall you have access
Where you with Silvia may confer at large....
For she is lumpish, heavy, melancholy,
And—for your friend's sake—will be glad of you;
Where you may temper her, by your persuasion,
To hate young Valentine and love my friend.
PROTEUS. As much as I can do, I will effect ...
But you, Sir Thurio, are not sharp enough:
You must lay lime to tangle her desires
By wailful sonnets, whose composéd rhymes
Should be full-fraught with serviceable vows.
DUKE. Ay,
Much is the force of heaven-bred poesy.
PROTEUS. Say that upon the altar of her beauty
You sacrifice your tears, your sighs, your heart:
Write till your ink be dry: and with your tears
Moist it again: and frame some feeling line
That may discover such integrity ...
For Orpheus' lute was strung with poets' sinews—
Whose golden touch could soften steel and stones;
Make tigers tame and huge leviathans
Forsake unsounded deeps to dance on sands....
After your dire-lamenting elegies,
Visit by night your lady's chamber-window
With some sweet consort; to their instruments
Tune a deploring dump: the night's dead silence
Will well become such sweet-complaining grievance ...
This, or else nothing, will inherit her.
DUKE. This discipline shows thou hast been in love.
THURIO. And thy advice, this night, I'll put in practice:
Therefore, sweet Proteus, my direction-giver,
Let us into the city presently
To sort some gentlemen well skilled in music....
I have a sonnet that will serve the turn
To give the onset to thy good advice.
DUKE. About it, gentlemen.
PROTEUS. We'll wait upon your grace till after supper,
And afterward determine our proceedings.
DUKE. Even now about it. I will pardon you.
They go

ACT 4
Scene 1: A forest

Enter three outlaws, Valentine and Speed

1 OUTLAW. Fellows, stand fast ... I see a passenger.
2 OUTLAW. If there be ten, shrink not, but down with 'em.
3 OUTLAW. Stand, sir, and throw us that you have about ye....
If not ... we'll make you sit, and rifle you.
SPEED. Sir, we are undone; these are the villains
That all the travellers do fear so much.
VALENTINE. My friends—
1 OUTLAW. That's not so, sir: we are your enemies.
2 OUTLAW. Peace ... we'll hear him.
3 OUTLAW. Ay, by my beard, will we: for he's a proper man.
VALENTINE. Then know, that I have little wealth to lose;
A man I am crossed with adversity:
My riches are these poor habiliments,
Of which if you should here disfurnish me,
You take the sum and substance that I have.
2 OUTLAW. Whither travel you?
VALENTINE. To Verona.
1 OUTLAW. Whence came you?
VALENTINE. From Milan.
3 OUTLAW. Have you long sojourned there?
VALENTINE. Some sixteen months, and longer might have stayed,
If crooked fortune had not thwarted me.
1 OUTLAW. What, were you banished thence?
VALENTINE. I was.
2 OUTLAW. For what offence?
VALENTINE. For that which now torments me to rehearse;
I killed a man, whose death I much repent.
But yet I slew him manfully in fight,
Without false vantage, or base treachery.
1 OUTLAW. Why, ne'er repent it, if it were done so;
But were you banished for so small a fault?
VALENTINE. I was, and held me glad of such a doom.
2 OUTLAW. Have you the tongues?
VALENTINE. My youthful travel therein made me happy;
Or else I often had been miserable.
3 OUTLAW. By the bare scalp of Robin Hood's fat friar,
This fellow were a king for our wild faction.
1 OUTLAW. We'll have him ... Sirs, a word.
SPEED. Master, be one of them:
It's an honourable kind of thievery.
VALENTINE. Peace, villain.
2 OUTLAW. Tell us this: have you any thing to take to?
VALENTINE. Nothing but my fortune.
3 OUTLAW. Know then, that some of us are gentlemen,
Such as the fury of ungoverned youth
Thrust from the company of awful men....
Myself was from Verona banished,
For practising to steal away a lady,
An heir, and near allied unto the duke.
2 OUTLAW. And I from Mantua, for a gentleman
Whom, in my mood, I stabbed unto the heart.
1 OUTLAW. And I, for such like petty crimes as these....
But to the purpose: for we cite our faults,

That they may hold excused our lawless lives;
And partly, seeing you are beautified
With goodly shape, and by your own report
A linguist, and a man of such perfection
As we do in our quality much want—

2 OUTLAW. Indeed, because you are a banished man,
Therefore, above the rest, we parley to you:
Are you content to be our general?
To make a virtue of necessity,
And live as we do in this wilderness?

3 OUTLAW. What sayst thou? wilt thou be of our consórt?
Say 'ay,' and be the captain of us all:
We'll do thee homage and be ruled by thee,
Love thee as our commander and our king.

1 OUTLAW. But if thou scorn our courtesy, thou diest.

2 OUTLAW. Thou shalt not live to brag what we have offered.

VALENTINE. I take your offer, and will live with you,
Provided that you do no outrages
On silly women or poor passengers.

3 OUTLAW. No, we detest such vile base practices....
Come, go with us, we'll bring thee to our crew,
And show thee all the treasure we have got;
Which, with ourselves, all rest at thy dispose.
They go

Scene 2: Behind the Duke's palace

Enter Proteus

PROTEUS. Already have I been false to Valentine,
And now I must be as unjust to Thurio.
Under the colour of commending him,
I have access my own love to prefer....
But Silvia is too fair, too true, too holy,
To be corrupted with my worthless gifts;
When I protest true loyalty to her,
She twits me with my falsehood to my friend;
When to her beauty I commend my vows,
She bids me think how I have been forsworn
In breaking faith with Julia whom I loved;
And notwithstanding all her sudden quips,
The least whereof would quell a lover's hope ...
Yet, spaniel-like, the more she spurns my love,
The more it grows, and fawneth on her still;

Enter Thurio and musicians

But here comes Thurio; now must we to her window,
And give some evening music to her ear.

THURIO. How now, Sir Proteus, are you crept before us?

PROTEUS. Ay, gentle Thurio, for you know that love
Will creep in service where it cannot go.

THURIO. Ay, but I hope, sir, that you love not here.

PROTEUS. Sir, but I do: or else I would be hence.

THURIO. Who? Silvia?

PROTEUS. Ay, Silvia—for your sake.

THURIO. I thank you for your own ... Now, gentlemen,
Let's tune, and to it lustily awhile.

Enter an old Host and Julia, disguised as a boy

HOST. Now, my young guest; methinks you're allicholy; I pray you, why is it?

JULIA. Marry, mine host, because I cannot be merry.

HOST. Come, we'll have you merry: I'll bring you where you shall hear music, and see the gentleman that you asked for.

JULIA. But shall I hear him speak?

HOST. Ay, that you shall.

JULIA. That will be music. The musicians strike up

HOST. Hark! hark!

JULIA. Is he among these?

HOST. Ay: but peace, let's hear 'em.

SONG.

Who is Silvia? what is she,
That all our swains commend her?
Holy, fair, and wise is she.
The heaven such grace did lend her,
That she might admiréd be.

Is she kind as she is fair?
For beauty lives with kindness:
Love doth to her eyes repair,
To help him of his blindness:
And, being helped, inhabits there.

Then to Silvia let us sing,
That Silvia is excelling;
She excels each mortal thing,
Upon the dull earth dwelling.
To her let us garlands bring.

HOST. How now! are you sadder than you were before? How do you, man? the music likes you not.

JULIA. You mistake: the musician likes me not.

HOST. Why, my pretty youth?

JULIA. He plays false, father.

HOST. How? out of tune on the strings?

JULIA. Not so: but yet so false, that he grieves my very heart-strings.

HOST. You have a quick ear.

JULIA. Ay, I would I were deaf ... it makes me have a slow heart.

HOST. I perceive you delight not in music.

JULIA. Not a whit, when it jars so.

HOST. Hark, what fine change is in the music!

JULIA. Ay: that change is the spite.

HOST. You would have them always play but one thing.

JULIA. I would always have one play but one thing....
But, host, doth this Sir Proteus that we talk on
Often resort unto this gentlewoman?

HOST. I tell you what Launce, his man, told me—he loved her out of all nick.

JULIA. Where is Launce?

HOST. Gone to seek his dog, which to-morrow, by his master's command, he must carry for a present to his lady.

JULIA. Peace, stand aside, the company parts.

PROTEUS. Sir Thurio, fear not you. I will so plead,
That you shall say my cunning drift excels.

THURIO. Where meet we?

PROTEUS. At Saint Gregory's well.

THURIO. Farewell.
Thurio and the musicians go

Silvia appears on balcony above

PROTEUS. Madam: good even to your ladyship.

SILVIA. I thank you for your music, gentlemen.
Who is that that spake?

PROTEUS. One, lady, if you knew his pure heart's truth,
You would quickly learn to know him by his voice.

SILVIA. Sir Proteus, as I take it.
PROTEUS. Sir Proteus, gentle lady, and your servant.
SILVIA. What is your will?
PROTEUS. That I may compass yours.
SILVIA. You have your wish: my will is even this—
That presently you hie you home to bed ...
Thou subtle, perjured, false, disloyal man!
Think'st thou I am so shallow, so conceitless,
To be seducéd by thy flattery,
That hast deceived so many with thy vows?
Return, return, and make thy love amends:
For me—by this pale queen of night I swear!
I am so far from granting thy request,
That I despise thee for thy wrongful suit;
And by and by intend to chide myself
Even for this time I spend in talking to thee.
PROTEUS. I grant, sweet love, that I did love a lady—
But she is dead:
JULIA. 'Twere false, if I should speak it;
For I am sure she is not buriéd.
SILVIA. Say that she be: yet Valentine thy friend
Survives; to whom—thyself art witness—
I am betrothed; and art thou not ashamed
To wrong him with thy importúnacy?
PROTEUS. I likewise hear that Valentine is dead.
SILVIA. And so suppose am I; for in his grave
Assure thyself my love is buriéd.
PROTEUS. Sweet lady, let me rake it from the earth.
SILVIA. Go to thy lady's grave and call her's thence
Or, at the least, in her's sepúlchre thine.
JULIA. He heard not that.
PROTEUS. Madam ... if your heart be so obdurate ...
Vouchsafe me yet your picture for my love,
The picture that is hanging in your chamber:
To that I'll speak, to that I'll sigh and weep:
For since the substance of your perfect self
Is else devoted, I am but a shadow;
And to your shadow—will I make true love.
JULIA. If 'twere a substance, you would, sure, deceive it,
And make it but a shadow, as I am.
SILVIA. I am very loath to be your idol, sir;
But, since your falsehood shall become you well
To worship shadows and adore false shapes,
Send to me in the morning, and I'll send it:
And so, good rest. She shuts her window
PROTEUS. As wretches have o'ernight
That wait for execution in the morn. He goes
JULIA. Host, will you go?
HOST. By my halidom, I was fast asleep.
JULIA. Pray you, where lies Sir Proteus?
HOST. Marry, at my house ... Trust me, I think 'tis almost day.
JULIA. Not so: but it hath been the longest night,
That e'er I watched, and the most heaviest.
They go

Scene 3

Enter Eglamour

EGLAMOUR. This is the hour that Madam Silvia
Entreated me to call and know her mind:
There's some great matter she'ld employ me in....
Madam, madam!

The window opens and Silvia appears

SILVIA. Who calls?
EGLAMOUR. Your servant, and your friend;
One that attends your ladyship's command.
SILVIA. Sir Eglamour, a thousand times good morrow.
EGLAMOUR. As many, worthy lady, to yourself ...
According to your ladyship's impose,
I am thus early come to know what service
It is your pleasure to command me in.
SILVIA. O Eglamour, thou art a gentleman—
Think not I flatter, for I swear I do not—
Valiant, wise, remorseful, well-accomplished.
Thou art not ignorant what dear good will
I bear unto the banished Valentine ...
Nor how my father would enforce me marry
Vain Thurio—whom my very soul abhors....
Thyself hast loved, and I have heard thee say
No grief did ever come so near thy heart,
As when thy lady and thy true love died,
Upon whose grave thou vow'dst pure chastity ...
Sir Eglamour ... I would to Valentine,
To Mantua, where I hear he makes abode;
And, for the ways are dangerous to pass,
I do desire thy worthy company,
Upon whose faith and honour I repose....
Urge not my father's anger, Eglamour,
But think upon my grief—a lady's grief—
And on the justice of my flying hence,
To keep me from a most unholy match,
Which heaven and fortune still rewards with plagues....
I do desire thee, even from a heart
As full of sorrows as the sea of sands,
To bear me company, and go with me:
If not, to hide what I have said to thee,
That I may venture to depart alone.
EGLAMOUR. Madam, I pity much your grievances,
Which since I know they virtuously are placed,
I give consent to go along with you,
Recking as little what betideth me,
As much I wish all good befortune you....
When will you go?
SILVIA. This evening coming.
EGLAMOUR. Where shall I meet you?
SILVIA. At Friar Patrick's cell,
Where I intend holy confession.
EGLAMOUR. I will not fail your ladyship: good morrow, gentle lady. He goes
SILVIA. Good morrow, kind Sir Eglamour.
She closes her window

Scene 4

Enter Launce, with his dog

LAUNCE. When a man's servant shall play the cur with him—look you—it goes hard: one that I brought up of a puppy: one that I saved from drowning, when three or four of his blind brothers and sisters went to it: I have taught him—even as one would say precisely, 'Thus I would teach a dog.' I was sent to deliver him, as a present to Mistress Silvia from my master; and I came no sooner into the dining-chamber, but he steps me to her trencher, and steals her capon's leg ... O, 'tis a foul thing, when a cur cannot keep himself in all companies: I would have—as one should say—one that takes upon him to be a dog indeed, to be, as it were, a dog at all things....

If I had not had more wit than he, to take a fault upon me that he did, I think verily he had been hanged for't: sure as I live, he had suffered for't: you shall judge ... He thrusts me himself into the company of three or four gentlemen-like dogs, under the duke's table: he had not been there (bless the mark!) a pissing-while, but all the chamber smelt him ... 'Out with the dog,' says one—'What cur is that?' says another—'Whip him out,' says the third—'Hang him up,' says the duke.... I, having been acquainted with the smell before, knew it was Crab; and goes me to the fellow that whips the dogs: 'Friend,' quoth I, 'you mean to whip the dog?' 'Ay, marry, do I,' quoth he. 'You do him the more wrong,' quoth I, ''twas I did the thing you wot of': he makes me no more ado, but whips me out of the chamber ... How many masters would do this for his servant? Nay, I'll be sworn, I have sat in the stocks for puddings he hath stol'n, otherwise he had been executed: I have stood on the pillory for geese he hath killed, otherwise he had suffered for't ... Thou think'st not of this now ... Nay, I remember the trick you served me, when I took my leave of Madam Silvia: did not I bid thee still mark me, and do as I do? when didst thou see me heave up my leg, and make water against a gentlewoman's farthingale? didst thou ever see me do such a trick?

Proteus and Julia (disguised as a boy) pass by

PROTEUS. Sebastian is thy name: I like thee well,
And will employ thee in some service presently.
JULIA. In what you please. I will do what I can.
PROTEUS. I hope thou wilt ... [he spies Launce] How now, you whoreson peasant!
Where have you been these two days loitering?
LAUNCE. Marry, sir, I carried Mistress Silvia the dog you bade me.
PROTEUS. And what says she to my little Jewel?
LAUNCE. Marry, she says your dog was a cur, and tells you currish thanks is good enough for such a present.
PROTEUS. But she received my dog?
LAUNCE. No, indeed, did she not: here have I brought him back again.
PROTEUS. What! didst thou offer her this from me?
LAUNCE. Ay sir, the other squirrel was stol'n from me by the hangman boys in the market-place, and then I offered her mine own, who is a dog as big as ten of yours, and therefore the gift the greater.
PROTEUS. Go, get thee hence, and find my dog again,
Or ne'er return again into my sight....
Away, I say ... stayest thou to vex me here?
A slave, that still an-end turns me to shame ...

Launce goes

Sebastian, I have entertainéd thee,
Partly that I have need of such a youth,
That can with some discretion do my business ...
For 'tis no trusting to yond foolish lout ...
But chiefly for thy face and thy behaviour,
Which, if my augury deceive me not,
Witness good bringing up, fortune, and truth:
Therefore know thou, for this I entertain thee....
Go presently, and take this ring with thee,
Deliver it to Madam Silvia ...
She loved me well delivered it to me.
JULIA. It seems you loved not her, nor love her token ...
She is dead, belike?
PROTEUS. Not so ... I think she lives.
JULIA. Alas!
PROTEUS. Why dost thou cry 'alas'?
JULIA. I cannot choose but pity her.
PROTEUS. Wherefore shouldst thou pity her?
JULIA. Because, methinks, that she loved you as well
As you do love your lady Silvia ...
She dreams on him that has forgot her love—
You dote on her that cares not for your love....
'Tis pity love should be so contrary:
And thinking on it makes me cry, 'alas!'
PROTEUS. Well ... give her that ring, and therewithal
This letter ... That's her chamber ... Tell my lady
I claim the promise for her heavenly picture:
Your message done, hie home unto my chamber,
Where thou shalt find me sad—and solitary.

He goes

JULIA. How many women would do such a message?
Alas, poor Proteus, thou hast entertained
A fox to be the shepherd of thy lambs;
Alas, poor fool, why do I pity him
That with his very heart despiseth me?
Because he loves her, he despiseth me—
Because I love him, I must pity him....
This ring I gave him, when he parted from me,
To bind him to remember my good will:
And now am I—unhappy messenger!—
To plead for that, which I would not obtain;
To carry that, which I would have refused;
To praise his faith, which I would have dispraised....
I am my master's true confirméd love,
But cannot be true servant to my master,
Unless I prove false traitor to myself....
Yet will I woo for him, but yet so coldly,
As, heaven it knows, I would not have him speed....

Silvia comes in

Gentlewoman, good day: I pray you be my mean
To bring me where to speak with Madam Silvia.
SILVIA. What would you with her, if that I be she?
JULIA. If you be she, I do entreat your patience
To hear me speak the message I am sent on.
SILVIA. From whom?
JULIA. From my master, Sir Proteus, madam.
SILVIA. O ... he sends you for a picture?
JULIA. Ay, madam.
SILVIA [calling]. Ursula, bring my picture there.

The maid brings the picture

Go give your master this: tell him from me,
One Julia, that his changing thoughts forget,
Would better fit his chamber than this shadow.
JULIA. Madam, please you peruse this letter ...
Pardon me, madam, I have unadvised
Delivered you a paper that I should not ...
This is the letter to your ladyship.
SILVIA. I pray thee, let me look on that again.
JULIA. It may not be: good madam, pardon me.
SILVIA. There, hold ...
I will not look upon your master's lines:
I know they are stuffed with protestations,
And full of new-found oaths, which he will break
As easily as I do tear his paper.
JULIA. Madam, he sends your ladyship this ring.
SILVIA. The more shame for him, that he sends it me;

For I have heard him say a thousand times
His Julia gave it him at his departure:
Though his false finger have profaned the ring,
Mine shall not do his Julia so much wrong.
JULIA. She thanks you.
SILVIA. What sayst thou?
JULIA. I thank you, madam, that you tender her:
Poor gentlewoman, my master wrongs her much.
SILVIA. Dost thou know her?
JULIA. Almost as well as I do know myself....
To think upon her woes, I do protest
That I have wept a hundred several times.
SILVIA. Belike she thinks that Proteus hath forsook her?
JULIA. I think she doth: and that's her cause of sorrow.
SILVIA. Is she not passing fair?
JULIA. She hath been fairer, madam, than she is;
When she did think my master loved her well,
She, in my judgement, was as fair as you....
But since she did neglect her looking-glass,
And threw her sun-expelling mask away,
The air hath starved the roses in her cheeks,
And pinched the lily-tincture of her face,
That now she is become as black as I.
SILVIA. How tall was she?
JULIA. About my stature: for, at Pentecost,
When all our pageants of delight were played,
Our youth got me to play the woman's part,
And I was trimmed in Madam Julia's gown,
Which servéd me as fit, by all men's judgement,
As if the garment had been made for me:
Therefore, I know she is about my height.
And at that time I made her weep agood,
For I did play a lamentable part....
Madam, 'twas Ariadne, passioning
For Theseus' perjury and unjust flight;
Which I so lively acted with my tears ...
That my poor mistress, movéd therewithal,
Wept bitterly ... and, would I might be dead,
If I in thought felt not her very sorrow.
SILVIA. She is beholding to thee, gentle youth.
Alas, poor lady! desolate and left;
I weep myself to think upon thy words ...
Here, youth: there is my purse; I give thee this
For thy sweet mistress' sake, because thou lov'st her.
Farewell.
JULIA. And she shall thank you for't, if e'er you know her.... Silvia goes
A virtuous gentlewoman, mild, and beautiful....
I hope my master's suit will be but cold,
Since she respects my mistress' love so much....
Alas, how love can trifle with itself:
Here is her picture ... Let me see. I think
If I had such a tire, this face of mine
Were full as lovely as is this of hers;
And yet the painter flattered her a little,
Unless I flatter with myself too much....
Her hair is auburn, mine is perfect yellow;
If that be all the difference in his love,
I'll get me such a coloured periwig:
Her eyes are grey as glass, and so are mine:
Ay, but her forehead's low, and mine's as high:
What should it be that he respects in her,
But I can make respective in myself,
If this fond Love were not a blinded god?
Come, shadow, come, and take this shadow up,
For 'tis thy rival: O thou senseless form,
Thou shalt be worshipped, kissed, loved, and adored;
And, were there sense in his idolatry,
My substance should be statue in thy stead....
I'll use thee kindly, for thy mistress' sake
That used me so .... or else, by Jove I vow,
I should have scratched out your unseeing eyes,
To make my master out of love with thee.
She bears away the picture

ACT 5

Scene 1: An abbey near Milan

Eglamour

EGLAMOUR. The sun begins to gild the western sky,
And now it is about the very hour
That Silvia, at Friar Patrick's cell, should meet me.
She will not fail; for lovers break not hours,
Unless it be to come before their time—
So much they spur their expedition....

Silvia approaches

See, where she comes ... Lady, a happy evening!
SILVIA. Amen, amen ... go on, good Eglamour,
Out at the postern by the abbey-wall;
I fear I am attended by some spies.
EGLAMOUR. Fear not: the forest is not three leagues off.
If we recover that, we are sure enough.
They depart

Scene 2: Milan: the Duke's palace

Enter Thurio, Proteus and Julia (as Sebastian)

THURIO. Sir Proteus, what says Silvia to my suit?
PROTEUS. O sir, I find her milder than she was,
And yet she takes exceptions at your person.
THURIO. What?—that my leg is too long?
PROTEUS. No, that it is too little.
THURIO. I'll wear a boot, to make it somewhat rounder.
JULIA. But love will not be spurred to what it loathes.
THURIO. What says she to my face?
PROTEUS. She says it is a fair one.
THURIO. Nay then the wanton lies: my face is black.
PROTEUS. But pearls are fair; and the old saying is,
Black men are pearls in beauteous ladies' eyes.
JULIA. 'Tis true, such pearls as put out ladies' eyes,
For I had rather wink than look on them.
THURIO. How likes she my discourse?
PROTEUS. Ill, when you talk of war.
THURIO. But well, when I discourse of love and peace.
JULIA. But better, indeed, when you hold your peace.
THURIO. What says she to my valour?
PROTEUS. O sir, she makes no doubt of that.
JULIA. She needs not, when she knows it cowardice.
THURIO. What says she to my birth?
PROTEUS. That you are well derived.
JULIA. True: from a gentleman to a fool.
THURIO. Considers she my possessions?
PROTEUS. O, ay: and pities them.
THURIO. Wherefore?
JULIA. That such an ass should owe them.
PROTEUS. That they are out by lease.
JULIA. Here comes the duke.

The Duke enters

DUKE. How now, Sir Proteus! how now, Thurio!
Which of you saw Sir Eglamour of late?
THURIO. Not I.
PROTEUS. Nor I.
DUKE. Saw you my daughter?
PROTEUS. Neither.
DUKE. Why then,
She's fled unto that peasant Valentine;
And Eglamour is in her company:
Tis true . . . for Friar Laurence met them both,
As he in penance wandered through the forest:
Him he knew well: and guessed that it was she,
But, being masked, he was not sure of it. . . .
Besides, she did intend confession
At Patrick's cell this even—and there she was not. . . .
These likelihoods confirm her flight from hence;
Therefore, I pray you, stand not to discourse,
But mount you presently, and meet with me
Upon the rising of the mountain-foot
That leads towards Mantua, whither they are fled:
Dispatch—sweet gentlemen!—and follow me.
He goes out
THURIO. Why, this it is to be a peevish girl,
That flies her fortune when it follows her:
I'll after; more to be revenged on Eglamour
Than for the love of reckless Silvia. He follows
PROTEUS. And I will follow, more for Silvia's love
Than hate of Eglamour that goes with her.
He follows
JULIA. And I will follow, more to cross that love
Than hate for Silvia that is gone for love.
She follows

Scene 3: The forest

Enter Silvia and the Outlaws

1 OUTLAW. Come, come, be patient: we must bring you to our captain.
SILVIA. A thousand more mischances than this one
Have learned me how to brook this patiently.
2 OUTLAW. Come, bring her away.
1 OUTLAW. Where is the gentleman that was with her?
3 OUTLAW. Being nimble-footed, he hath outrun us. . . .
But Moses and Valerius follow him:
Go thou with her to the west end of the wood,
There is our captain: we'll follow him that's fled—
The thicket is beset, he cannot 'scape.
1 OUTLAW. Come, I must bring you to our captain's cave. . . .
Fear not: he bears an honourable mind,
And will not use a woman lawlessly.
SILVIA. O Valentine . . . this I endure for thee.
They go

Scene 4

VALENTINE. How use doth breed a habit in a man!
This shadowy desert, unfrequented woods,
I better brook than flourishing peopled towns:
Here can I sit alone, unseen of any,
And to the nightingale's complaining notes
Tune my distresses and record my woes. . . .
O thou that dost inhabit in my breast,
Leave not the mansion so long tenantless,
Lest, growing ruinous, the building fall,
And leave no memory of what it was.
Repair me with thy presence, Silvia:
Thou gentle nymph, cherish thy forlorn swain. . . .

Cries and the sound of blows are heard

What halloing and what stir is this to-day?
These are my mates, that make their wills their law,
Have some unhappy passenger in chase;
They love me well: yet I have much to do,
To keep them from uncivil outrages. . . .
Withdraw thee, Valentine; who's this comes here?

He withdraws: Silvia comes in, Proteus and Julia (as Sebastian) following

PROTEUS. Madam, this service I have done for you—
Though you respect not aught your servant doth—
To hazard life and rescue you from him
That would have forced your honour and your love.
Vouchsafe me, for my meed, but one fair look:
A smaller boon than this I cannot beg,
And less than this, I am sure, you cannot give.
VALENTINE [aside]. How like a dream is this! I see—and hear . . .
Love, lend me patience to forbear awhile.
SILVIA. O miserable, unhappy that I am!
PROTEUS. Unhappy were you, madam, ere I came:
But, by my coming, I have made you happy.
SILVIA. By thy approach thou mak'st me most unhappy.
JULIA [aside]. And me, when he approacheth to your presence.
SILVIA. Had I been seizéd by a hungry lion,
I would have been a breakfast to the beast,
Rather than have false Proteus rescue me:
O, heaven be judge, how I love Valentine,
Whose life's as tender to me as my soul—
And full as much (for more there cannot be!)
I do detest false perjured Proteus . . .
Therefore be gone, solicit me no more.
PROTEUS. What dangerous action, stood it next to death,
Would I not undergo for one calm look?
O, 'tis the curse in love, and still approved,
When women cannot love where they're beloved.
SILVIA. When Proteus cannot love where he's beloved . . .
Read over Julia's heart—thy first best love—
For whose dear sake thou didst then rend thy faith
Into a thousand oaths; and, all those oaths
Descended into perjury—to love me.
Thou hast no faith left now, unless thou'dst two,
And that's far worse than none: better have none
Than plural faith, which is too much by one . . .
Thou counterfeit, to thy true friend!
PROTEUS. In love,
Who respects friend?
SILVIA. All men but Proteus.
PROTEUS. Nay, if the gentle spirit of moving words
Can no way change you to a milder form . . .
I'll woo you like a soldier, at arms' end,
And love you 'gainst the nature of love . . . force ye.
SILVIA. O heaven!
PROTEUS. I'll force thee yield to my desire.
VALENTINE. Ruffian! [leaping out upon him] let go that rude uncivil touch,
Thou friend of an ill fashion!

PROTEUS. Valentine!
VALENTINE. Thou common friend, that's without faith or love—
For such is a friend now: treacherous man,
Thou hast beguiled my hopes; nought but mine eye
Could have persuaded me: now I dare not say
I have one friend alive; thou wouldst disprove me . . .
Who should be trusted, when one's own right hand
Is perjured to the bosom? Proteus,
I am sorry I must never trust thee more,
But count the world a stranger for thy sake:
The private wound is deepest: O time, most accurst . . .
'Mongst all foes that a friend should be the worst!
PROTEUS. My shame and guilt confounds me . . .
Forgive me, Valentine . . . if hearty sorrow
Be a sufficient ransom for offence,
I tender't here; I do as truly suffer,
As e'er I did commit.
VALENTINE. Then I am paid:
And once again I do receive thee honest;
Who by repentance is not satisfied,
Is nor of heaven nor earth; for these are pleased:
By penitence th'Eternal's wrath's appeased . . .
And that my love may appear plain and free,
All that was mine in Silvia I give thee.
JULIA. O me, unhappy! She swoons
PROTEUS. Look to the boy.
VALENTINE. Why, boy!
Why wag! how now? what's the matter? Look up: speak.
JULIA. O good sir, my master charged me to deliver a ring to Madam Silvia . . . which, out of my neglect, was never done.
PROTEUS. Where is that ring, boy?
JULIA. Here 'tis. . . . this is it.
PROTEUS. How! let me see. . . . Taking it
Why this is the ring I gave to Julia.
JULIA. O, cry you mercy, sir, I have mistook:
This is the ring you sent to Silvia.
She proffers another ring
PROTEUS. But how cam'st thou by this ring? at my depart
I gave this unto Julia.
JULIA. And Julia herself did give it me—
And Julia herself hath brought it hither.
PROTEUS. How! Julia!
JULIA. Behold her that gave aim to all thy oaths,
And entertained 'em deeply in her heart. . . .
How oft hast thou with perjury cleft the root!
O Proteus, let this habit make thee blush. . . .
Be thou ashamed that I have took upon me
Such an immodest raiment; if shame live
In a disguise of love!
It is the lesser blot, modesty finds,
Women to change their shapes than men their minds.
PROTEUS. Than men their minds? 'tis true . . . O heaven, were man
But constant, he were perfect; that one error
Fills him with faults . . . makes him run through all th'sins;
Inconstancy falls off ere it begins:
What is in Silvia's face, but I may spy
More fresh in Julia's with a constant eye?
VALENTINE. Come, come: a hand from either:
Let me be blest to make this happy close:
'Twere pity two such friends should be long foes.
PROTEUS. Bear witness, heaven, I have my wish for ever.
JULIA. And I mine.

Outlaws appear with the Duke and Thurio

OUTLAW. A prize . . . a prize . . . a prize!
VALENTINE. Forbear, forbear, I say: it is my lord the duke. . . .
Your grace is welcome to a man disgraced,
Banishéd Valentine.
DUKE. Sir Valentine!
THURIO. Yonder is Silvia: and Silvia's mine.
VALENTINE. Thurio give back; or else embrace thy death:
Come not within the measure of my wrath:
Do not name Silvia thine: if once again,
Verona shall not hold thee . . . Here she stands,
Take but possession of her—with a touch . . .
I dare thee but to breathe upon my love!
THURIO. Sir Valentine, I care not for her, I:
I hold him but a fool that will endanger
His body for a girl that loves him not:
I claim her not, and therefore she is thine.
DUKE. The more degenerate and base art thou,
To make such means for her as thou hast done,
And leave her on such slight conditions. . . .
Now, by the honour of my ancestry,
I do applaud thy spirit, Valentine,
And think thee worthy of an empress' love:
Know then, I here forget all former griefs,
Cancel all grudge, repeal thee home again,
Plead a new state in thy unrivalled merit,
To which I thus subscribe: Sir Valentine,
Thou art a gentleman, and well derived.
Take thou thy Silvia, for thou hast deserved her.
VALENTINE. I thank your grace; the gift hath made me happy:
I now beseech you—for your daughter's sake—
To grant one boon that I shall ask of you.
DUKE. I grant it—for thine own—whate'er it be.
VALENTINE. These banished men, that I have kept withal,
Are men endued with worthy qualities:
Forgive them what they have committed here,
And let them be recalled from their exile:
They are reforméd, civil, full of good,
And fit for great employment, worthy lord.
DUKE. Thou hast prevailed, I pardon them and thee:
Dispose of them, as thou know'st their deserts. . . .
Come, let us go. We will include all jars
With triumphs, mirth, and rare solemnity.
VALENTINE. And, as we walk along, I dare be bold
With our discourse to make your grace to smile. . . .
What think you of this page, my lord?
DUKE. I think the boy hath grace in him—he blushes.
VALENTINE. I warrant you, my lord, more grace than boy.
DUKE. What mean you by that saying?
VALENTINE. Please you, I'll tell you as we pass along,
That you will wonder what hath fortunéd:
Come Proteus, 'tis your penance but to hear
The story of your loves discoveréd. . . .
That done, our day of marriage shall be yours—
One feast, one house, one mutual happiness.
They go

The Merry Wives of Windsor

ACT 1

Scene I: Windsor, before the house of Master Page

Justice Shallow, Slender, and Sir Hugh Evans approach

SHALLOW. Sir Hugh, persuade me not: I will make a Star-chamber matter of it. If he were twenty Sir John Falstaffs, he shall not abuse Robert Shallow, esquire.

SLENDER. In the county of Gloucester, justice of peace and 'Coram.'

SHALLOW. Ay, cousin Slender, and 'Custalorum.'

SLENDER. Ay, and 'Ratolorum' too; and a gentleman born, master parson, who writes himself 'Armigero,' in any bill, warrant, quittance, or obligation —'Armigero.'

SHALLOW. Ay, that I do, and have done any time these three hundred years.

SLENDER. All his successors—gone before him—have done't: and all his ancestors—that come after him—may ... They may give the dozen white luces in their coat.

SHALLOW. It is an old coat.

EVANS. The dozen white louses do become an old coat well: it agrees well, passant: it is a familiar beast to man, and signifies love.

SHALLOW. The luce is the fresh fish—the salt fish is an old cod.

SLENDER. I may quarter, coz.

SHALLOW. You may—by marrying.

EVANS. It is marring indeed, if he quarter it.

SHALLOW. Not a whit.

EVANS. Yes, py'rlady: if he has a quarter of your coat, there is but three skirts for yourself, in my simple conjectures; but that is all one ... If Sir John Falstaff have committed disparagements unto you, I am of the Church, and will be glad to do my benevolence, to make atonements and compromises between you.

SHALLOW. The Council shall hear it! it is a riot.

EVANS. It is not meet the council hear a riot: there is no fear of Got in a riot: the council, look you, shall desire to hear the fear of Got, and not to hear a riot: take your vizaments in that.

SHALLOW. Ha ... o'my life, if I were young again, the sword should end it.

EVANS. It is petter that friends is the swort, and end it: and there is also another device in my prain, which peradventure prings goot discretions with it.... There is Anne Page, which is daughter to Master Thomas Page, which is pretty virginity.

SLENDER. Mistress Anne Page? She has brown hair, and speaks small like a woman.

EVANS. It is that fery person for all the 'orld, as just as you will desire, and seven hundred pounds of moneys, and gold, and silver, is her grandsire, upon his death's-bed—Got deliver to a joyful resurrections!—give, when she is able to overtake seventeen years old.... It were a goot motion if we leave our pribbles and prabbles, and desire a marriage between Master Abraham and Mistress Anne Page.

SHALLOW. Did her grandsire leave her seven hundred pound?

EVANS. Ay, and her father is make her a petter penny.

SHALLOW. I know the young gentlewoman. She has good gifts.

EVANS. Seven hundred pounds, and possibilities, is goot gifts.

SHALLOW. Well, let us see honest Master Page ... Is Falstaff there?

EVANS. Shall I tell you a lie? I do despise a liar as I do despise one that is false, or as I despise one that is not true: the knight, Sir John, is there, and I beseech you be ruled by your well-willers: I will peat the door for Master Page.... [knocks] What, ho! Got-pless your house here!

PAGE [within]. Who's there?

EVANS. Here is Got's plessing, and your friend, and Justice Shallow, and here young Master Slender ... that peradventures shall tell you another tale, if matters grow to your likings.

PAGE [opens the door and comes out]. I am glad to see your worships well ... I thank you for my venison, Master Shallow.

SHALLOW. Master Page, I am glad to see you: much good do it your good heart: I wished your venison better—it was ill killed ... How doth good Mistress Page?—and I thank you always with my heart, la! with my heart.

PAGE. Sir, I thank you.

SHALLOW. Sir, I thank you: by yea and no, I do.

PAGE. I am glad to see you, good Master Slender.

SLENDER. How does your fallow greyhound, sir? I heard say he was outrun on Cotsall.

PAGE. It could not be judged, sir.

SLENDER. You'll not confess ... you'll not confess.

SHALLOW. That he will not. 'Tis your fault, 'tis your fault: 'tis a good dog.

PAGE. A cur, sir.

SHALLOW. Sir: he's a good dog, and a fair dog—can there be more said? he is 'good and fair'.... Is Sir John Falstaff here?

PAGE. Sir, he is within: and I would I could do a good office between you.

EVANS. It is spoke as a Christians ought to speak.

SHALLOW. He hath wronged me, Master Page.

PAGE. Sir, he doth in some sort confess it.

SHALLOW. If it be confessed, it is not redressed; is not that so, Master Page? He hath wronged me, indeed he hath, at a word he hath: believe me—Robert Shallow, esquire, saith he is wronged.

PAGE. Here comes Sir John.

Enter Sir John Falstaff, Bardolph, Nym, and Pistol

FALSTAFF. Now, Master Shallow, you'll complain of me to the king?

SHALLOW. Knight, you have beaten my men, killed my deer, and broke open my lodge.

FALSTAFF. But not kissed your keeper's daughter!

SHALLOW. Tut, a pin! this shall be answered.

FALSTAFF. I will answer it straight. I have done all this . . . That is now answered.

SHALLOW. The Council shall know this.

FALSTAFF. 'Twere better for you, if it were known in counsel: you'll be laughed at.

EVANS. Pauca verba; Sir John—goot worts.

FALSTAFF. Good worts! good cabbage . . . Slender, I broke your head: what matter have you against me?

SLENDER. Marry, sir, I have matter in my head against you, and against your cony-catching rascals, Bardolph, Nym, and Pistol. [They carried me to the tavern, and made me drunk, and afterward picked my pocket.]

BARDOLPH. You Banbury cheese!

SLENDER. Ay, it is no matter.

PISTOL. How now, Mephostophilus!

SLENDER. Ay, it is no matter.

NYM. Slice, I say; pauca, pauca: slice! that's my humour.

SLENDER. Where's Simple, my man? can you tell, cousin?

EVANS. Peace, I pray you . . . Now let us understand . . . There is three umpires in this matter, as I understand; that is, Master Page (fidelicet Master Page) and there is myself (fidelicet myself) and the three party is (lastly and finally) mine host of the Garter.

PAGE. We three, to hear it and end it between them.

EVANS. Fery goot. I will make a prief of it in my notebook, and we will afterwards 'ork upon the cause, with as great discreetly as we can.

FALSTAFF. Pistol.

PISTOL. He hears with ears.

EVANS. The tevil and his tam! what phrase is this, 'He hears with ear'? why, it is affectations.

FALSTAFF. Pistol, did you pick Master Slender's purse?

SLENDER. Ay, by these gloves, did he—or I would I might never come in mine own great chamber again else—of seven groats in mill-sixpences, and two Edward shovel-boards, that cost me two shilling and two pence a-piece of Yed Miller . . . by these gloves!

FALSTAFF. Is this true, Pistol?

EVANS. No, it is false, if it is a pick-purse.

PISTOL. Ha, thou mountain-foreigner! Sir John, and master mine,
I combat challenge of this latten bilbo:
Word of denial in thy labras here;
Word of denial; froth and scum, thou liest!

SLENDER. By these gloves, then 'twas he.

NYM. Be advised, sir, and pass good humours: I will say 'marry trap' with you, if you run the nuthook's humour on me—that is the very note of it.

SLENDER. By this hat, then he in the red face had it: for though I cannot remember what I did when you made me drunk, yet I am not altogether an ass.

FALSTAFF. What say you, Scarlet and John?

BARDOLPH. Why, sir, for my part, I say the gentleman had drunk himself out of his five sentences.

EVANS. It is his five senses: fie, what the ignorance is!

BARDOLPH. And being fap, sir, was, as they say, cashiered . . . and so conclusions passed the careers.

SLENDER. Ay, you spake in Latin then too: but 'tis no matter; I'll ne'er be drunk whilst I live again, but in honest, civil, godly company, for this trick: if I be drunk, I'll be drunk with those that have the fear of God, and not with drunken knaves.

EVANS. So Got-'udge me, that is a virtuous mind.

FALSTAFF. You hear all these matters denied, gentlemen; you hear it.

Enter Anne Page, bearing wine, with Mistress Page and Mistress Ford

PAGE. Nay daughter, carry the wine in—we'll drink within. She goes

SLENDER. O heaven . . . this is Mistress Anne Page!

PAGE. How now, Mistress Ford!

FALSTAFF. Mistress Ford, by my troth, you are very well met: by your leave, good mistress. Kisses her

PAGE. Wife, bid these gentlemen welcome . . . Come, we have a hot venison pasty to dinner; come, gentlemen, I hope we shall drink down all unkindness. All but Slender go

SLENDER. I had rather than forty shillings I had my Book of Songs and Sonnets here . . .

Enter Simple

How now Simple, where have you been? I must wait on myself, must I? You have not the Book of Riddles about you, have you?

SIMPLE. Book of Riddles? why, did you not lend it to Alice Shortcake upon Allhallowmas last, a fortnight afore Michaelmas?

Shallow and Evans return to look for Slender

SHALLOW. Come coz, come coz, we stay for you . . . A word with you, coz . . . marry, this, coz . . . there is as 'twere a tender, a kind of tender, made afar off by Sir Hugh here . . . Do you understand me?

SLENDER. Ay, sir, you shall find me reasonable; if it be so, I shall do that that is reason.

SHALLOW. Nay, but understand me.

SLENDER. So I do, sir.

EVANS. Give ear to his motions; Master Slender, I will description the matter to you, if you be capacity of it.

SLENDER. Nay, I will do as my cousin Shallow says: I pray you pardon me—he's a justice of peace in his country, simple though I stand here.

EVANS. But that is not the question: the question is concerning your marriage.

SHALLOW. Ay, there's the point, sir.

EVANS. Marry, is it: the very point of it—to Mistress Anne Page.

SLENDER. Why, if it be so . . . I will marry her upon any reasonable demands.

EVANS. But can you affection the 'oman? Let us command to know that of your mouth, or of your lips: for divers philosophers hold that the lips is parcel of the mouth: therefore, precisely, can you carry your good will to the maid?

SHALLOW. Cousin Abraham Slender, can you love her?

SLENDER. I hope, sir, I will do as it shall become one that would do reason.

EVANS. Nay, Got's lords and his ladies! you must speak possitable, if you can carry-her your desires towards her.

SHALLOW. That you must . . . Will you—upon good dowry—marry her?

SLENDER. I will do a greater thing than that, upon your request, cousin, in any reason.

SHALLOW. Nay, conceive me, conceive me, sweet coz:

what I do is to pleasure you, coz: can you love the maid?

SLENDER. I will marry her, sir, at your request; but if there be no great love in the beginning, yet heaven may decrease it upon better acquaintance, when we are married and have more occasion to know one another: I hope upon familiarity will grow more contempt: but if you say, 'marry her,' I will marry her—that I am freely dissolved, and dissolutely.

EVANS. It is a fery discretion-answer; save the fall is in the 'ort 'dissolutely': the 'ort is, according to our meaning, 'resolutely': his meaning is goot.

SHALLOW. Ay . . . I think my cousin meant well.

SLENDER. Ay, or else I would I might be hanged, la!

Anne Page returns

SHALLOW. Here comes fair Mistress Anne; Would I were young for your sake, Mistress Anne!

ANNE. The dinner is on the table. My father desires your worships' company.

SHALLOW. I will wait on him, fair Mistress Anne.

EVANS. Od's plessed-will . . . I will not be absence at the grace. Evans and Shallow leave

ANNE. Will't please your worship to come in, sir?

SLENDER. No—I thank you forsooth—heartily; I am very well.

ANNE. The dinner attends you, sir.

SLENDER. I am not a-hungry, I thank you, forsooth . . . Go, sirrah, for all you are my man, go wait upon my cousin Shallow . . . [Simple goes] A justice of peace sometime may be beholding to his friend, for a man; I keep but three men and a boy yet, till my mother be dead: but what though? yet I live like a poor gentleman born.

ANNE. I may not go in without your worship: they will not sit till you come.

SLENDER. I'faith, I'll eat nothing: I thank you as much as though I did.

ANNE. I pray you sir walk in.

SLENDER. I had rather walk here—I thank you. I bruised my shin th'other day with playing at sword and dagger with a master of fence—three veneys for a dish of stewed prunes—[and I with my ward defending my head, he hot my shin,] and, by my troth, I cannot abide the smell of hot meat since. . . . Why do your dogs bark so? be there bears i'th' town?

ANNE. I think there are, sir. I heard them talked of.

SLENDER. I love the sport well, but I shall as soon quarrel at it as any man in England . . . You are afraid, if you see the bear loose, are you not?

ANNE. Ay, indeed, sir.

SLENDER. That's meat and drink to me, now: I have seen Sackerson loose—twenty times, and have taken him by the chain: but, I warrant you, the women have so cried and shrieked at it, that it passed . . . But women, indeed, cannot abide 'em—they are very ill-favoured rough things.

Enter Page

PAGE. Come, gentle Master Slender, come; we stay for you.

SLENDER. I'll eat nothing, I thank you, sir.

PAGE. By cock and pie, you shall not choose, sir: come, come!

SLENDER. Nay, pray you lead the way.

PAGE. Come on, sir.

SLENDER. Mistress Anne . . . yourself shall go first.

ANNE. Not I, sir! pray you keep on.

SLENDER. Truly, I will not go first: truly, la! I will not do you that wrong.

ANNE. I pray you, sir.

SLENDER. I'll rather be unmannerly than troublesome: you do yourself wrong, indeed, la! They go

Scene 2

Sir Hugh Evans and Simple enter

EVANS. Go your ways, and ask of Doctor Caius' house which is the way; and there dwells one Mistress Quickly; which is in the manner of his nurse—or his dry nurse—or his cook—or his laundry—his washer and his wringer.

SIMPLE. Well, sir.

EVANS. Nay, it is petter yet . . . Give her this letter; for it is a 'oman, that altogether's acquaintance with Mistress Anne Page; and the letter is to desire and require her to solicit your master's desires to Mistress Anne Page: I pray you, be gone . . . I will make an end of my dinner; there's pippins and seese to come. They go

Scene 3: A room in the Garter Inn

Falstaff, Host, Pistol, Nym, Bardolph and Robin

FALSTAFF. Mine host of the Garter!

HOST. What says my bully-rook? speak scholarly and wisely.

FALSTAFF. Truly, mine host; I must turn away some of my followers.

HOST. Discard, bully Hercules, cashier; let them wag; trot, trot.

FALSTAFF. I sit at ten pounds a week.

HOST. Thou'rt an emperor—Cæsar, Keisar, and Pheazar. I will entertain Bardolph: he shall draw; he shall tap; said I well, bully Hector?

FALSTAFF. Do so, good mine host.

HOST. I have spoke: let him follow . . . [to Bardolph] Let me see thee froth and lime: I am at a word: follow. He goes out

FALSTAFF. Bardolph, follow him: a tapster is a good trade: an old cloak makes a new jerkin: a withered serving-man a fresh tapster . . . Go, adieu.

BARDOLPH. It is a life that I have desired: I will thrive.

PISTOL. O base Hungarian wight: wilt thou the spigot wield? Bardolph follows Host

NYM. He was gotten in drink. [His mind is not heroic, and there's the humour of it] . . . Is not the humour conceited?

FALSTAFF. I am glad I am so acquit of this tinderbox: his thefts were too open: his filching was like an unskilful singer, he kept not time.

NYM. The good humour is to steal at a minim-rest.

PISTOL. 'Convey,' the wise it call . . . 'Steal!' foh! a fico for the phrase.

FALSTAFF. Well, sirs, I am almost out at heels.

PISTOL. Why, then, let kibes ensue.

FALSTAFF. There is no remedy: I must cony-catch, I must shift.

PISTOL. Young ravens must have food.

FALSTAFF. Which of you know Ford of this town?

PISTOL. I ken the wight: he is of substance good.

FALSTAFF. My honest lads, I will tell you what I am about.

PISTOL. Two yards, and more.

FALSTAFF. No quips now, Pistol . . . Indeed, I am in the waist two yards about: but I am now about no waste: I am about thrift—Briefly: I do mean to make love to Ford's wife: I spy entertainment in her: she discourses: she carves: she gives the leer of invitation . . . I can construe the action of her familiar style, and the hardest voice of her behaviour—to be Englished rightly—is, 'I am Sir John Falstaff's.'

PISTOL. He hath studied her well, and translated her will . . . out of honesty into English.

NYM. The anchor is deep: will that humour pass?

FALSTAFF. Now, the report goes she has all the rule of her husband's purse: he hath a legion of angels.

PISTOL. As many devils entertain! and 'To her, Boy,' say I.

NYM. The humour rises: it is good: humour me the angels.

FALSTAFF. I have writ me here a letter to her: and here another to Page's wife; who even now gave me good eyes too; examined my parts with most judicious œillades: sometimes the beam of her view gilded my foot . . . sometimes my portly belly.

PISTOL. Then did the sun on dunghill shine.

NYM. I thank thee for that humour.

FALSTAFF. O, she did so course o'er my exteriors with such a greedy intention, that the appetite of her eye did seem to scorch me up like a burning-glass . . . Here's another letter to her: she bears the purse too: she is a region in Guiana: all gold and bounty . . . I will be cheaters to them both, and they shall be exchequers to me: they shall be my East and West Indies, and I will trade to them both . . . Go, bear thou this letter to Mistress Page; and thou this to Mistress Ford: we will thrive, lads, we will thrive.

PISTOL. Shall I Sir Pandarus of Troy become—
And by my side wear steel! then, Lucifer take all!

NYM. I will run no base humour: here, take the humour-letter; I will keep the haviour of reputation.

FALSTAFF [to Robin]. Hold, sirrah, bear you these letters tightly,
Sail like my pinnace to these golden shores. . . .
Rogues, hence, avaunt, vanish like hail-stones; go!
Trudge; plod away i'th' hoof; seek shelter, pack . . .
Falstaff will learn the humour of this age,
French thrift, you rogues—myself and skirted page!

He goes out, with Robin following

PISTOL. Let vultures gripe thy guts: for gourd and fullam holds,
And high and low beguiles the rich and poor:
Tester I'll have in pouch when thou shalt lack,
Base Phrygian Turk!

NYM. I have operations [in my head] which be humours of revenge.

PISTOL. Wilt thou revenge?

NYM. By welkin and her star!

PISTOL. With wit or steel?

NYM. With both the humours, I:
I will discuss the humour of this love to Page.

PISTOL. And I to Ford shall eke unfold,
How Falstaff, varlet vile,
His dove will prove, his gold will hold,
And his soft couch defile.

NYM. My humour shall not cool: I will incense Page to deal with poison: I will possess him with' yellows, for the revolt of mind is dangerous: that is my true humour.

PISTOL. Thou art the Mars of malcontents: I second thee: troop on. They go

Scene 4: A room in Doctor Caius' house

Enter Mistress Quickly and Simple

QUICKLY [calling]. What, John Rugby!

Rugby enters

I pray thee, go to the casement, and see if you can see my master, Master Doctor Caius, coming: if he do, i'faith, and find any body in the house . . . here will be an old abusing of God's patience and the king's English.

RUGBY. I'll go watch.

QUICKLY. Go, and we'll have a posset for't soon at night, in faith at the latter end of a sea-coal fire . . . [Rugby goes to the window] An honest, willing, kind fellow, as ever servant shall come in house withal: and, I warrant you, no tell-tale nor no breed-bate: his worst fault is, that he is given to prayer; he is something peevish that way: but nobody but has his fault: but let that pass. . . . Peter Simple, you say your name is?

SIMPLE. Ay . . . for fault of a better.

QUICKLY. And Master Slender's your master?

SIMPLE. Ay, forsooth.

QUICKLY. Does he not wear a great round beard, like a glover's paring-knife?

SIMPLE. No, forsooth: he hath but a little whey-face; with a little yellow beard . . . a cane-coloured beard.

QUICKLY. A softly-sprighted man, is he not?

SIMPLE. Ay, forsooth: but he is as tall a man of his hands as any is between this and his head: he hath fought with a warrener!

QUICKLY. How say you?—O, I should remember him: does he not hold up his head, as it were, and strut in his gait?

SIMPLE. Yes, indeed, does he.

QUICKLY. Well, heaven send Anne Page no worse fortune . . . Tell Master Parson Evans I will do what I can for your master: Anne is a good girl, and I wish—

RUGBY [calls from the window]. Out, alas! here comes my master.

QUICKLY. We shall all be shent . . . Run in here, good young man: go into this closet . . . [she shuts Simple in the closet] He will not stay long . . . What, John Rugby! John! what, John, I say!

Caius enters

Go, John, go enquire for my master. I doubt he be not well, that he comes not home . . . She sings
And down, down, adown-a, &c.

CAIUS. Vat is you sing? I do not like des toys: pray you, go and vetch me in my closet un boitier vert; a box, a green-a box . . . Do intend vat I speak? a green-a box.

QUICKLY. Ay, forsooth, I'll fetch it you . . . [to Rugby] I am glad he went not in himself: if he had found the young man, he would have been horn-mad.

CAIUS. Fe, fe, fe, fe! ma foi, il fait fort chaud. Je m'en vais à la cour—la grande affaire.

QUICKLY. Is it this, sir?

CAIUS. Oui, mette le au mon pocket, dépêche Quickly . . . Vere is dat knave Rugby?

QUICKLY. What, John Rugby! John!

RUGBY [comes forward]. Here, sir.

CAIUS. You are John Rugby, and you are Jack Rugby . . . Come, tak-a your rapier, and come after my heel to de court.

RUGBY. 'Tis ready, sir, here in the porch.

CAIUS. By my trot: I tarry too long . . . Od's me . . . Qu'ai-j'oublié! dere is some simples in my closet, dat I vill not for the varld I shall leave behind.

QUICKLY. Ay me, he'll find the young man there, and be mad.

CAIUS [discovers Simple]. O diable, diable! vat is in my closet? Villainy! laroon! [pulling him out] Rugby, my rapier.

QUICKLY. Good master, be content.

CAIUS. Verefore shall I be content-a?

QUICKLY. The young man is an honest man.

CAIUS. Vat shall de honest man do in my closet? dere is no honest man dat shall come in my closet.

QUICKLY. I beseech you, be not so phlegmatic: hear the truth of it. . . . He came of an errand to me from Parson Hugh.

CAIUS. Vell.

SIMPLE. Ay, forsooth . . . to desire her to—

QUICKLY. Peace, I pray you.

CAIUS. Peac-a your tongue . . . Speak-a your tale.

SIMPLE. To desire this honest gentlewoman, your maid, to speak a good word to Mistress Anne Page —for my master in the way of marriage.

QUICKLY. This is all, indeed, la! but I'll ne'er put my finger in the fire, and need not.

CAIUS. Sir Hugh send-a you! Rugby, baillez me some paper . . . tarry you a littl-a while. He writes

QUICKLY [draws Simple aside]. I am glad he is so quiet: if he had been throughly moved, you should have heard him so loud, and so melancholy . . . But notwithstanding, man, I'll do your master what good I can: and the very yea and the no is, the French doctor, my master—I may call him my master, look you, for I keep his house; and I wash, wring, brew, bake, scour, dress meat and drink, make the beds, and do all myself—

SIMPLE. 'Tis a great charge to come under one body's hand.

QUICKLY. Are you avised o'that? you shall find it a great charge: and to be up early, and down late . . . but notwithstanding (to tell you in your ear, I would have no words of it) my master himself is in love with Mistress Anne Page: but notwithstanding that I know Anne's mind, that's neither here nor there.

CAIUS. You, jack'nape! giv-a this letter to Sir Hugh. By gar, it is a shallenge: I vill cut his troat in de Park, and I vill teach a scurvy jack-a-nape priest to meddle or make!—You may be gone: it is not good you tarry here . . . [Simple goes] By gar, I vill cut all his two stones: by gar, he shall not have a stone to trow at his dog.

QUICKLY. Alas: he speaks but for his friend.

CAIUS. It is no matter-a ver dat: do not you tell-a me dat I shall have Anne Page for myself? By gar, I vill kill de Jack-priest . . . and I have appointed mine host of de Jarteer to measure our weapon . . . by gar, I vill myself have Anne Page.

QUICKLY. Sir, the maid loves you, and all shall be well:
We must give folks leave to prate . . .
What the good-jer!

CAIUS. Rugby, come to the court vit me . . . By gar, if I have not Anne Page, I shall turn your head out of my door . . . Follow my heels, Rugby.

He goes out, followed by Rugby

QUICKLY. You shall have An fool's-head of your own . . . No, I know Anne's mind for that: never a woman in Windsor knows more of Anne's mind than I do, nor can do more than I do with her, I thank heaven.

FENTON [from outside]. Who's within there, ho!

QUICKLY. Who's there, I trow? Come near the house, I pray you.

Fenton enters

FENTON. How now, good woman, how dost thou?

QUICKLY. The better that it pleases your good worship to ask.

FENTON. What news? how does pretty Mistress Anne?

QUICKLY. In truth, sir, and she is pretty, and honest, and gentle, and one that is your friend, I can tell you that by the way, I praise heaven for it.

FENTON. Shall I do any good, think'st thou? Shall I not lose my suit?

QUICKLY. Troth, sir, all is in his hands above: but notwithstanding, Master Fenton, I'll be sworn on a book she loves you . . . Have not your worship a wart above your eye?

FENTON. Yes marry have I, what of that?

QUICKLY. Well, thereby hangs a tale . . . good faith, it is such another Nan; but—I detest—an honest maid as ever broke bread . . . We had an hour's talk of that wart; I shall never laugh but in that maid's company . . . but, indeed, she is given too much to allicholy and musing . . . But for you—well—go to—

FENTON. Well . . . I shall see her to-day: hold, there's money for thee . . . Let me have thy voice in my behalf: if thou seest her before me, commend me—

QUICKLY. Will I? i'faith, that we will: and I will tell your worship more of the wart the next time we have confidence, and of other wooers.

FENTON. Well, farewell. I am in great haste now.

He goes out

QUICKLY. Farewell to your worship . . . Truly, an honest gentleman: but Anne loves him not: for I know Anne's mind as well as another does . . . Out upon't! what have I forgot? She hurries away

ACT 2

Scene 1: Before the house of Master Page

Mistress Page, with a letter

MISTRESS PAGE. What, have I 'scaped love-letters in the holiday time of my beauty, and am I now a subject for them? Let me see! She reads
'Ask me no reason why I love you, for though Love use Reason for his precisian, he admits him not for his councillor . . . You are not young, no more am I: go to then, there's sympathy . . . you are merry, so am I: ha! ha! then there's more sympathy . . . you love sack, and so do I: would you desire better sympathy? Let it suffice thee, Mistress Page, at the least if the love of a soldier can suffice, that I love thee: I will not say, pity me—'tis not a soldier-like phrase; but I say, love me . . .

By me, thine own true knight, by day or night:
Or any kind of light, with all his might,
For thee to fight.
JOHN FALSTAFF.'

What a Herod of Jewry is this! O wicked, wicked world! One that is well-nigh worn to pieces with age to show himself a young gallant! What an unweighed behaviour hath this Flemish drunkard picked (with the devil's name!) out of my conversation, that he dares in this manner assay me? Why, he hath not been thrice in my company: what should I say to him? I was then frugal of my mirth . . . Heaven forgive me! Why, I'll exhibit a bill in the parliament for the putting down of men . . . How shall I be revenged on him? for revenged I will be!—as sure as his guts are made of puddings.

Mistress Ford appears

MISTRESS FORD. Mistress Page! trust me, I was going to your house.

MISTRESS PAGE. And, trust me, I was coming to you . . . You look very ill.

MISTRESS FORD. Nay, I'll ne'er believe that; I have to show to the contrary.

MISTRESS PAGE. Faith, but you do, in my mind.

MISTRESS FORD. Well: I do then: yet, I say, I could show you to the contrary . . . O Mistress Page, give me some counsel!

MISTRESS PAGE. What's the matter, woman?

MISTRESS FORD. O woman . . . if it were not for one trifling respect, I could come to such honour.

MISTRESS PAGE. Hang the trifle, woman, take the honour: what is it? Dispense with trifles: what is it?

MISTRESS FORD. If I would but go to hell for an eternal moment or so . . . I could be knighted!

MISTRESS PAGE. What? thou liest! Sir Alice Ford! These knights will hack, and so thou shouldst not alter the article of thy gentry.

MISTRESS FORD. We burn day-light . . . Here, read, read: perceive how I might be knighted. I shall think the worse of fat men, as long as I have an eye to make difference of men's liking: and yet he would not swear; praised women's modesty; and gave such orderly and well-behaved reproof to all uncomeliness, that I would have sworn his disposition would have gone to the truth of his words: but they do no more adhere and keep place together than the Hundredth Psalm to the tune of 'Green-sleeves' . . . What tempest, I trow, threw this whale, with so many tuns of oil in his belly, ashore at Windsor? How shall I be revenged on him? I think the best way were to entertain him with hope, till the wicked fire of lust have melted him in his own grease . . . Did you ever hear the like?

MISTRESS PAGE. Letter for letter; but that the name of Page and Ford differs . . . To thy great comfort in this mystery of ill opinions, here's the twin-brother of thy letter: but let thine inherit first, for I protest mine never shall: I warrant he hath a thousand of these letters, writ with blank space for different names—sure more!—and these are of the second edition: he will print them out of doubt; for he cares not what he puts into the press, when he would put us two . . . I had rather be a giantess, and lie under Mount Pelion . . . Well; I will find you twenty lascivious turtles ere one chaste man.

MISTRESS FORD. Why, this is the very same . . . the very hand . . . the very words! What doth he think of us?

MISTRESS PAGE. Nay, I know not: it makes me almost ready to wrangle with mine own honesty: I'll entertain myself like one that I am not acquainted withal; for, sure, unless he know some strain in me, that I know not myself, he would never have boarded me in this fury.

MISTRESS FORD. 'Boarding,' call you it? I'll be sure to keep him above deck.

MISTRESS PAGE. So will I: if he come under my hatches, I'll never to sea again . . . Let's be revenged on him: let's appoint him a meeting; give him a show of comfort in his suit, and lead him on with a fine-baited delay, till he hath pawned his horses to mine host of the Garter.

MISTRESS FORD. Nay, I will consent to act any villainy against him, that may not sully the chariness of our honesty . . . O, that my husband saw this letter: it would give eternal food to his jealousy.

MISTRESS PAGE. Why, look where he comes; and my good man too: he's as far from jealousy, as I am from giving him cause—and that, I hope, is an unmeasurable distance.

MISTRESS FORD. You are the happier woman.

MISTRESS PAGE. Let's consult together against this greasy knight . . . Come hither.

They seat themselves unseen, within earshot: Ford and Pistol, Page and Nym come up in pairs

FORD. Well . . . I hope it be not so.

PISTOL. Hope is a curtal-dog in some affairs:
Sir John affects thy wife.

FORD. Why, sir, my wife is not young.

PISTOL. He wooes both high and low, both rich and poor,
Both young and old, one with another, Ford.
He loves the gallimaufry—Ford, perpend.

FORD. Love my wife!

PISTOL. With liver burning hot: prevent . . . or go thou,
Like Sir Actæon be, with Ringwood at thy heels . . .
O, odious is the name!

FORD. What name, sir?

PISTOL. The horn, I say . . . Farewell . . .
Take heed, have open eye, for thieves do foot by night. . . .
Take heed, ere summer comes or cuckoo-birds do sing. . . .
Away, Sir Corporal Nym . . . [to Page] Believe it, he speaks sense. Pistol goes off

FORD. I will be patient . . . I will find out this.

NYM [to Page]. And this is true: I like not the humour of lying: he hath wronged me in some humours: I should have borne the humoured letter to her: but I have a sword: and it shall bite upon my necessity: he loves your wife; there's the short and the long . . .
My name is Coporal Nym: I speak, and I avouch;
'Tis true: my name is Nym: and Falstaff loves your wife
. . . Adieu. I love not the humour of bread and cheese, [and there's the humour of it] . . . Adieu.

He follows Pistol

PAGE. 'The humour of it,' quoth 'a! here's a fellow frights English out of his wits.

FORD. I will seek out Falstaff.

PAGE. I never heard such a drawling, affecting rogue.

FORD. If I do find it . . . well.

PAGE. I will not believe such a Cataian, though the priest o'th' town commended him for a true man.

FORD. 'Twas a good sensible fellow . . . well.

Mistress Page and Mistress Ford come forward

PAGE. How now, Meg!

MISTRESS PAGE. Whither go you, George? Hark you.

MISTRESS FORD. How now, sweet Frank! why art thou melancholy?

FORD. I melancholy? I am not melancholy . . . Get you home: go.

MISTRESS FORD. Faith, thou hast some crotchets in thy head now . . . Will you go, Mistress Page?

MISTRESS PAGE. Have with you. . . . You'll come to dinner, George? [in Mistress Ford's ear] Look, who comes yonder: she shall be our messenger to this paltry knight.

MISTRESS FORD. Trust me, I thought on her: she'll fit it.

Mistress Quickly comes up

MISTRESS PAGE. You are come to see my daughter Anne?

QUICKLY. Ay, forsooth: and, I pray, how does good Mistress Anne?

MISTRESS PAGE. Go in with us and see: we have an hour's talk with you. They go within

PAGE. How now, Master Ford!

FORD. You heard what this knave told me, did you not?

PAGE. Yes, and you heard what the other told me?

FORD. Do you think there is truth in them?

PAGE. Hang 'em, slaves: I do not think the knight would offer it: but these that accuse him in his intent towards our wives are a yoke of his discarded men . . . very rogues, now they be out of service.

FORD. Were they his men?

PAGE. Marry, were they.

FORD. I like it never the better for that. Does he lie at the Garter?

PAGE. Ay, marry, does he . . . If he should intend this voyage towards my wife, I would turn her loose to him; and what he gets more of her than sharp words, let it lie on my head.

FORD. I do not misdoubt my wife . . . but I would be loath to turn them together . . . a man may be too confident . . . I would have nothing lie on my head . . . I cannot be thus satisfied.

Host approaches with Shallow following

PAGE. Look where my ranting host of the Garter comes: there is either liquor in his pate, or money in his purse, when he looks so merrily . . . How now, mine host!

HOST. How now, bully-rook! thou'rt a gentleman. Cavaliero-justice, I say!

SHALLOW. I follow, mine host, I follow. . . . Good even and twenty, good Master Page! Master Page, will you go with us? we have sport in hand.

HOST. Tell him, cavaliero-justice: tell him, bully-rook.

SHALLOW. Sir, there is a fray to be fought, between Sir Hugh the Welsh priest and Caius the French doctor.

FORD. Good mine host o'th' Garter . . . a word with you.

HOST. What sayst thou, my bully-rook?

They talk together apart

SHALLOW [to Page]. Will you go with us to behold it? My merry host hath had the measuring of their weapons; and, I think, hath appointed them contrary places: for, believe me, I hear the parson is no jester: hark, I will tell you what our sport shall be.

They talk together apart

HOST. Hast thou no suit against my knight, my guest-cavalier?

FORD. None, I protest: but I'll give you a pottle of burnt sack to give me recourse to him, and tell him my name is Brook . . . only for a jest.

HOST. My hand, bully: thou shalt have egress and regress—said I well?—and thy name shall be Brook. . . . It is a merry knight: Will you go, Ameers? Going

SHALLOW. Have with you, mine host.

PAGE. I have heard the Frenchman hath good skill in his rapier.

SHALLOW. Tut, sir! I could have told you more: in these times you stand on distance . . . your passes, stoccadoes, and I know not what . . . 'tis the heart, Master Page—'tis here, 'tis here: I have seen the time, with my long sword I would have made you four tall fellows skip like rats.

HOST. Here, boys, here, here! shall we wag?

PAGE. Have with you . . . I had rather hear them scold than fight. Shallow and Page follow Host

FORD. Though Page be a secure fool, and stands so firmly on his wife's frailty—yet I cannot put off my opinion so easily: she was in his company at Page's house . . . and, what they made there, I know not. . . . Well, I will look further into't, and I have a disguise to sound Falstaff . . . If I find her honest, I lose not my labour: if she be otherwise, 'tis labour well bestowed. He goes

Scene 2: The room in the Garter Inn

Enter Falstaff and Pistol

[PISTOL. I will retort the sum in equipage.]

FALSTAFF. I will not lend thee a penny.

PISTOL. Why, then the world's mine oyster,
Which I with sword will open.

FALSTAFF. Not a penny: I have been content, sir, you should lay my countenance to pawn: I have grated upon my good friends for three reprieves for you and your coach-fellow, Nym; or else you had looked through the grate, like a geminy of baboons: I am damned in hell for swearing to gentlemen my friends, you were good soldiers and tall fellows. . . . and when Mistress Bridget lost the handle of her fan, I took't upon mine honour thou hadst it not.

PISTOL. Didst thou not share? hadst thou not fifteen pence?

FALSTAFF. Reason, you rogue, reason: think'st thou I'll endanger my soul gratis? At a word, hang no more about me, I am no gibbet for you . . . Go—a short knife and a throng—to your manor of Pickt-hatch . . . Go. You'll not bear a letter for me, you rogue! you stand upon your honour! why, thou unconfinable baseness, it is as much as I can do, to keep the terms of my honour precise ... Ay, ay, I myself sometimes, leaving the fear of God on the left hand, and hiding mine honour in my necessity, am fain to shuffle, to hedge, and to lurch—and yet you, rogue, will ensconce your rags, your cat-a-mountain looks, your red-lattice phrases, and your bold-beating oaths, under the shelter of your honour! You will not do it? you!

PISTOL. I do relent: what wouldst thou more of man?

Robin enters

ROBIN. Sir, here's a woman would speak with you.

FALSTAFF. Let her approach.

Mistress Quickly enters

QUICKLY. Give your worship good-morrow.

FALSTAFF. Good-morrow, good wife.

QUICKLY. Not so, an't please your worship.

FALSTAFF. Good maid, then.

QUICKLY. I'll be sworn,
As my mother was, the first hour I was born.

FALSTAFF. I do believe the swearer; what with me?

QUICKLY. Shall I vouchsafe your worship a word or two?

FALSTAFF. Two thousand—fair woman—and I'll vouch-safe thee the hearing.

QUICKLY. There is one Mistress Ford—Sir, I pray, come a little nearer this ways ... I myself dwell with Master Doctor Caius ...

FALSTAFF. Well, on; Mistress Ford, you say—

QUICKLY. Your worship says very true: I pray your worship, come a little nearer this ways.

FALSTAFF. I warrant thee, nobody hears: mine own people, mine own people.

QUICKLY. Are they so? God bless them, and make them his servants!

FALSTAFF. Well; Mistress Ford, what of her?

QUICKLY. Why, sir; she's a good creature; Lord, Lord! your worship's a wanton ... well ... God forgive you, and all of us, I pray—

FALSTAFF. Mistress Ford ... come, Mistress Ford.

QUICKLY. Marry, this is the short and the long of it: you have brought her into such a canaries, as 'tis wonderful: the best courtier of them all (when the court lay at Windsor) could never have brought her to such a canary: yet there has been knights, and lords, and gentlemen, with their coaches; I warrant you, coach after coach, letter after letter, gift after gift; smelling so sweetly, all musk, and so rushling, I warrant you, in silk and gold, and in such alligant terms, and in such wine and sugar of the best, and the fairest, that would have won any woman's heart: and, I warrant you, they could never get an eye-wink of her: I had myself twenty angels given me this morning, but I defy all angels—in any such sort, as they say—but in the way of honesty: and, I warrant you, they could never get her so much as sip on a cup with the proudest of them all, and yet there has been earls ... nay, which is more, pensioners—but, I warrant you, all is one with her.

FALSTAFF. But what say, she to me? be brief, my good she-Mercury.

QUICKLY. Marry, she hath received your letter: for the which she thanks you a thousand times: and she gives you to notify that her husband will be absence from his house between ten and eleven.

FALSTAFF. Ten and eleven.

QUICKLY. Ay, forsooth: and then you may come and see the picture, she says, that you wot of: Master Ford, her husband, will be from home: alas! the sweet woman leads an ill life with him: he's a very jealousy man; she leads a very frampold life with him—good heart!

FALSTAFF. Ten and eleven.... Woman, commend me to her. I will not fail her.

QUICKLY. Why, you say well ... But I have another messenger to your worship: Mistress Page hath her hearty commendations to you, too: and let me tell you in your ear, she's as fartuous a civil modest wife, and one, I tell you, that will not miss you morning nor evening prayer, as any is in Windsor, whoe'er be the other: and she bade me tell your worship that her husband is seldom from home, but she hopes there will come a time.... I never knew a woman so dote upon a man; surely, I think you have charms, la ... yes, in truth.

FALSTAFF. Not I, I assure thee; setting the attraction of my good parts aside, I have no other charms.

QUICKLY. Blessing on your heart for't!

FALSTAFF. But I pray thee tell me this: has Ford's wife, and Page's wife, acquainted each other how they love me?

QUICKLY. That were a jest, indeed! they have not so little grace, I hope—that were a trick, indeed! But Mistress Page would desire you to send her your little page, of all loves: her husband has a marvellous infection to the little page: and, truly, Master Page is an honest man: never a wife in Windsor leads a better life than she does: do what she will, say what she will, take all, pay all, go to bed when she list, rise when she list, all is as she will: and, truly, she deserves it; for if there be a kind woman in Windsor, she is one: you must send her your page—no remedy.

FALSTAFF. Why, I will.

QUICKLY. Nay, but do so then—and, look you, he may come and go between you both: and, in any case, have a nay-word, that you may know one another's mind, and the boy never need to understand any thing; for 'tis not good that children should know any wickedness: old folks, you know, have discretion, as they say, and know the world.

FALSTAFF. Fare thee well. Commend me to them both: there's my purse—I am yet thy debtor ... Boy, go along with this woman. [Quickly and Robin go out] This news distracts me....

PISTOL. This pink is one of Cupid's carriers—
Clap on more sails, pursue: up with your fights:
Give fire: she is my prize, or ocean whelm them all!
He pursues them

FALSTAFF. Sayst thou so, old Jack? go thy ways: I'll make more of thy old body than I have done: will they yet look after thee? wilt thou, after the expense of so much money, be now a gainer? Good body, I thank thee: let them say 'tis grossly done—so it be fairly done, no matter.

Bardolph enters

BARDOLPH. Sir John, there's one Master Brook below would fain speak with you, and be acquainted with you; and hath sent your worship a morning's draught of sack.

FALSTAFF. Brook is his name?

BARDOLPH. Ay, sir.

FALSTAFF. Call him in ... [Bardolph goes out] Such Brooks are welcome to me, that o'erflow such liquor ... Ah, ha! Mistress Ford and Mistress Page, have I encompassed you? go to, via!

Bardolph returns, with Ford disguised

FORD. Bless you, sir.

FALSTAFF. And you, sir: would you speak with me?

FORD. I make bold, to press with so little preparation upon you.

FALSTAFF. You're welcome. What's your will? Give us leave, drawer. Bardolph leaves them

FORD. Sir, I am a gentleman that have spent much. My name is Brook.

FALSTAFF. Good Master Brook, I desire more acquaintance of you.

FORD. Good Sir John, I sue for yours: not to charge you, for I must let you understand I think myself in better plight for a lender than you are: the which hath something emboldened me to this unseasoned intrusion: for they say, if money go before, all ways do lie open.

FALSTAFF. Money is a good soldier, sir, and will on.

FORD. Troth, and I have a bag of money here troubles me: if you will help me to bear it, Sir John, take all, or half, for easing me of the carriage.

FALSTAFF. Sir, I know not how I may deserve to be your porter.

FORD. I will tell you, sir, if you will give me the hearing.

FALSTAFF. Speak, good Master Brook. I shall be glad to be your servant.

FORD. Sir, I hear you are a scholar—I will be brief with you—and you have been a man long known to me, though I had never so good means, as desire, to make myself acquainted with you..... I shall discover a thing to you, wherein I must very much lay open mine own imperfection: but, good Sir John, as you have one eye upon my follies, as you hear them unfolded, turn another into the register of your own, that I may pass with a reproof the easier, sith you yourself know how easy it is to be such an offender.

FALSTAFF. Very well, sir. Proceed.

FORD. There is a gentlewoman in this town—her husband's name is Ford.

FALSTAFF. Well, sir.

FORD. I have long loved her, and, I protest to you, bestowed much on her: followed her with a doting observance; engrossed opportunities to meet her; fee'd every slight occasion that could but niggardly give me sight of her; not only bought many presents to give her, but have given largely to many to know what she would have given: briefly, I have pursued her, as love hath pursued me, which hath been on the wing of all occasions ... but whatsoever I have merited—either in my mind or in my means—meed, I am sure, I have received none, unless experience be a jewel. That I have purchased at an infinite rate, and that hath taught me to say this—
"Love like a shadow flies when substance love pursues,
"Pursuing that that flies, and flying what pursues."

FALSTAFF. Have you received no promise of satisfaction at her hands?

FORD. Never.

FALSTAFF. Have you importuned her to such a purpose?

FORD. Never.

FALSTAFF. Of what quality was your love, then?

FORD. Like a fair house built upon another man's ground—so that I have lost my edifice by mistaking the place where I erected it.

FALSTAFF. To what purpose have you unfolded this to me?

FORD. When I have told you that, I have told you all ... Some say, that though she appear honest to me, yet in other places she enlargeth her mirth so far that there is shrewd construction made of her.... Now, Sir John, here is the heart of my purpose: you are a gentleman of excellent breeding, admirable discourse, of great admittance, authentic in your place and person, generally allowed for your many warlike, court-like, and learned preparations.

FALSTAFF. O, sir!

FORD. Believe it, for you know it ... There is money. Spend it, spend it, spend more; spend all I have, only give me so much of your time in exchange of it, as to lay an amiable siege to the honesty of this Ford's wife: use your art of wooing; win her to consent to you: if any man may, you may as soon as any.

FALSTAFF. Would it apply well to the vehemency of your affection, that I should win what you would enjoy? Methinks you prescribe to yourself very preposterously.

FORD. O, understand my drift: she dwells so securely on the excellency of her honour, that the folly of my soul dares not present itself; she is too bright to be looked against.... Now, could I come to her with any detection in my hand ... my desires had instance and argument to commend themselves. I could drive her then from the ward of her purity, her reputation, her marriage-vow, and a thousand other her defences, which now are too-too strongly embattled against me: what say you to't, Sir John?

FALSTAFF. Master Brook, I will first make bold with your money; next, give me your hand; and last, as I am a gentleman, you shall, if you will, enjoy Ford's wife.

FORD. O good sir!

FALSTAFF. I say you shall.

FORD. Want no money, Sir John, you shall want none.

FALSTAFF. Want no Mistress Ford, Master Brook, you shall want none: I shall be with her—I may tell you—by her own appointment. Even as you came in to me, her assistant, or go-between, parted from me: I say I shall be with her between ten and eleven; for at that time the jealous rascally knave, her husband, will be forth ... Come you to me at night, you shall know how I speed.

FORD. I am blest in your acquaintance ... Do you know Ford, sir?

FALSTAFF. Hang him, poor cuckoldly knave! I know him not: yet I wrong him to call him poor: they say the jealous wittolly knave hath masses of money, for the which his wife seems to me well-favoured: I will use her as the key of the cuckoldly rogue's coffer—and there's my harvest-home.

FORD. I would you knew Ford, sir, that you might avoid him, if you saw him.

FALSTAFF. Hang him, mechanical salt-butter rogue! I will stare him out of his wits: I will awe him with my cudgel: it shall hang like a meteor o'er the cuckold's horns . . . Master Brook, thou shalt know, I will predominate over the peasant, and thou shalt lie with his wife. . . . Come to me soon at night: Ford's a knave, and I will aggravate his style: thou, Master Brook, shalt know him for knave—and cuckold. . . . Come to me soon at night. He goes

FORD. What a damned Epicurean rascal is this! My heart is ready to crack with impatience . . . Who says this is improvident jealousy? my wife hath sent to him, the hour is fixed, the match is made . . . Would any man have thought this? See the hell of having a false woman: my bed shall be abused, my coffers ransacked, my reputation gnawn at, and I shall not only receive this villainous wrong, but stand under the adoption of abominable terms, and by him that does me this wrong . . . Terms, names! Amaimon sounds well; Lucifer, well; Barbason, well; yet they are devils' additions, the names of fiends: but Cuckold! Wittol!—Cuckold! the devil himself hath not such a name. . . . Page is an ass, a secure ass; he will trust his wife, he will not be jealous: I will rather trust a Fleming with my butter, Parson Hugh the Welshman with my cheese, an Irishman with my aqua-vitæ bottle, or a thief to walk my ambling gelding, than my wife with herself. . . . Then she plots, then she ruminates, then she devises: and what they think in their hearts they may effect, they will break their hearts but they will effect. . . . God be praised for my jealousy . . . Eleven o'clock the hour. I will prevent this, detect my wife, be revenged on Falstaff, and laugh at Page. . . . I will about it—better three hours too soon, than a minute too late. . . . Fie, fie, fie! cuckold! cuckold! cuckold! He goes

Scene 3: A field near Windsor

CAIUS. I pray you, bear vitness that me have stay six or seven, two, tree hours for him, and he is no-come.

SHALLOW. He is the wiser man, master doctor! he is a curer of souls, and you a curer of bodies: if you should fight, you go against the hair of your professions: is it not true, Master Page?

PAGE. Master Shallow . . . you have yourself been a great fighter, though now a man of peace.

SHALLOW. Bodykins, Master Page, though I now be old, and of the peace . . . if I see a sword out, my finger itches to make one . . . Though we are justices, and doctors, and churchmen, Master Page, we have some salt of our youth in us—we are the sons of women, Master Page.

PAGE. 'Tis true, Master Shallow.

SHALLOW. It will be found so, Master Page . . . Master Doctor Caius, I am come to fetch you home . . . I am sworn of the peace: you have showed yourself a wise physician, and Sir Hugh hath shown himself a wise and patient churchman . . . You must go with me, master doctor.

HOST. Pardon, guest-justice . . . a [word,] Mounseur Mock-water.

CAIUS. Mock-vater? vat is dat?

HOST. Mock-water, in our English tongue, is valour, bully.

CAIUS. By gar, then I have as much mock-vater as de Englishman . . . scurvy jack-dog priest! by gar, me vill cut his ears.

HOST. He will clapper-claw thee tightly, bully.

CAIUS. Clapper-de-claw! vat is dat?

HOST. That is, he will make thee amends.

CAIUS. By gar, me do look he shall clapper-de-claw me—for, by gar, me vill have it.

HOST. And I will provoke him to't, or let him wag.

CAIUS. Me tank you for dat.

HOST. And moreover, bully,—[aside] But first, master guest, and Master Page, and eke Cavaliero Slender, go you through the town to Frogmore.

PAGE. Sir Hugh is there, is he?

HOST. He is there. See what humour he is in; and I will bring the doctor about by the fields: will it do well?

SHALLOW. We will do it.

PAGE, SHALLOW, SLENDER. Adieu, good master doctor. They depart

CAIUS. By gar, me vill kill de priest, for he speak for a jack-an-ape to Anne Page.

HOST. Let him die: [but, first,] sheathe thy impatience; throw cold water on thy choler: go about the fields with me through Frogmore. I will bring thee where Mistress Anne Page is, at a farm-house a-feasting; and thou shalt woo her . . . Cried-game, said I well?

CAIUS. By gar, me dank you vor dat: by gar, I love you; and I shall procur-a you de good guest: de earl, de knight, de lords, de gentlemen, my patients.

HOST. For the which, I will be thy adversary toward Anne Page: said I well?

CAIUS. By gar, 'tis good: vell said.

HOST. Let us wag then.

CAIUS. Come at my heels, Jack Rugby.

They go off

ACT 3

Scene 1: A meadow near Frogmore

Sir Hugh Evans, Simple

EVANS. I pray you now, good Master Slender's serving-man, and friend Simple by your name, which way have you looked for Master Caius, that calls himself doctor of physic?

SIMPLE. Marry, sir, the pittie-ward, the park-ward, every way: old Windsor way, and every way but the town way.

EVANS. I most fehemently desire you, you will also look that way.

SIMPLE. I will, sir.

EVANS. Pless my soul! how full of cholers I am, and trempling of mind... I shall be glad, if he have deceived me... how melancholies I am!—I will knog his urinals about his knave's costard, when I have goot opportunities for the 'ork... Pless my soul! He sings

To shallow rivers, to whose falls:
Melodious birds sing madrigals:
There will we make our peds of roses:
And a thousand fragrant posies....
To shallow—

Mercy on me! I have a great dispositions to cry.... He sings again

Melodious birds sing madrigals—
When as I sat in Pabylon—
And a thousand vagram posies....
To shallow, etc.—

SIMPLE. Yonder he is coming, this way, Sir Hugh.

EVANS. He's welcome... [sings] To shallow rivers, to whose falls... Heaven prosper the right... What weapons is he?

SIMPLE. No weapons, sir... There comes my master, Master Shallow, and another gentleman; from Frogmore, over the stile, this way.

EVANS. Pray you, give me my gown—or else keep it in your arms.

Page and Shallow come in, with Slender following

SHALLOW. How now, master parson! Good-morrow, good Sir Hugh... Keep a gamester from the dice, and a good student from his book, and it is wonderful.

SLENDER [sighs]. Ah, sweet Anne Page.

PAGE. Save you, good Sir Hugh.

EVANS. Got-pless you from his mercy sake, all of you.

SHALLOW. What! the Sword and the Word! do you study them both, master parson?

PAGE. And youthful still, in your doublet and hose, this raw rheumatic day?

EVANS. There is reasons and causes for it.

PAGE. We are come to you, to do a good office, master parson.

EVANS. Fery well: what is it?

PAGE. Yonder is a most reverend gentleman; who belike, having received wrong by some person, is at most odds with his own gravity and patience that ever you saw.

SHALLOW. I have lived fourscore years and upward: I never heard a man of his place, gravity, and learning, so wide of his own respect.

EVANS. What is he? Host, Caius and Rugby approach

PAGE. I think you know him... Master Doctor Caius, the renowned French physician!

EVANS. Got's will, and his passion of my heart! I had as lief you would tell me of a mess of porridge.

PAGE. Why?

EVANS. He has no more knowledge in Hibocrates and Galen—and he is a knave besides: a cowardly knave as you would desires to be acquainted withal.

PAGE. I warrant you, he's the man should fight with him.

SLENDER [sighs]. O, sweet Anne Page!

SHALLOW. It appears so, by his weapons... Keep them asunder... Here comes Doctor Caius!

PAGE. Nay, good master parson, keep in your weapon.

SHALLOW. So do you, good master doctor.

HOST. Disarm them, and let them question: let them keep their limbs whole, and hack our English.

CAIUS. I pray you, let-a me speak a word with your ear; Verefore vill you not meet-a me?

EVANS. Pray you, use your patience in good time.

CAIUS. By gar, you are de coward... de Jack-dog... John ape.

EVANS [aside]. Pray you, let us not be laughing-stogs to other men's humours: I desire you in friendship, and I will one way or other make you amends... [aloud] I will knog your urinals about your knave's cogscomb, [for missing your meetings and appointments!]

CAIUS. Diable... Jack Rugby... mine host de Jarteer... have I not stay for him, to kill him? have I not, at de place I did appoint?

EVANS. As I am a Christians-soul, now look you: this is the place appointed—I'll be judgement by mine host of the Garter.

HOST. Peace, I say, Gallia and Gaul, French and Welsh, soul-curer and body-curer.

CAIUS. Ay, dat is very good! excellent!

HOST. Peace, I say; hear mine host of the Garter. Am I politic? am I subtle? am I a Machiavel? Shall I lose my doctor? no—he gives me the potions and the motions.... Shall I lose my parson? my priest? my Sir Hugh? no—he gives me the proverbs and the no-verbs.... [Give me thy hand, terrestrial; so...] Give me thy hand, celestial; so... Boys of art, I have deceived you both: I have directed you to wrong places: your hearts are mighty, your skins are whole, and let burnt sack be the issue... Come, lay their swords to pawn... Follow me, lads of peace—follow, follow, follow. He goes SHALLOW. Trust me, a mad host... Follow, gentlemen, follow.

SLENDER [sighs]. O, sweet Anne Page!

Shallow, Page and Slender follow Host

CAIUS. Ha! do I perceive dat? have you mak-a de sot of us? ha, ha!

EVANS. This is well! he has made us his vlouting-stog... I desire you that we may be friends: and let us knog our prains together to be revenge on this same scall, scurvy, cogging companion, the host of the Garter.

CAIUS. By gar, with all my heart: he promise to bring me where is Anne Page: by gar, he deceive me too.

EVANS. Well, I will smite his noddles ... Pray you, follow. They go

Scene 2: A street in Windsor

Mistress Page approaches with Robin

MISTRESS PAGE. Nay, keep your way, little gallant; you were wont to be a follower, but now you are a leader ... Whether had you rather, lead mine eyes or eye your master's heels?

ROBIN. I had rather, forsooth, go before you like a man than follow him like a dwarf.

MISTRESS PAGE. O you are a flattering boy. Now, I see, you'll be a courtier.

Ford comes up

FORD. Well met, Mistress Page.... Whither go you?

MISTRESS PAGE. Truly, sir, to see your wife. Is she at home?

FORD. Ay—and as idle as she may hang together, for want of company: I think, if your husbands were dead, you two would marry.

MISTRESS PAGE. Be sure of that—two other husbands.

FORD. Where had you this pretty weathercock?

MISTRESS PAGE. I cannot tell what the dickens his name is my husband had him of. What do you call your knight's name, sirrah?

ROBIN. Sir John Falstaff.

FORD. Sir John Falstaff!

MISTRESS PAGE. He, he—I can never hit on's name; there is such a league between my good man and he! Is your wife at home, indeed?

FORD. Indeed she is.

MISTRESS PAGE. By your leave, sir. I am sick, till I see her. She leaves with Robin

FORD. Has Page any brains? hath he any eyes? hath he any thinking? Sure, they sleep—he hath no use of them ... Why, this boy will carry a letter twenty mile as easy—as a cannon will shoot point blank twelve score! He pieces out his wife's inclination; he gives her folly motion and advantage: and now she's going to my wife, and Falstaff's boy with her ... A man may hear this shower sing in the wind ... and Falstaff's boy with her ... good plots, they are laid, and our revolted wives share damnation together ... Well, I will take him, then torture my wife, pluck the borrowed veil of modesty from the so-seeming Mistress Page, divulge Page himself for a secure and wilful Actæon—and to these violent proceedings all my neighbours shall cry aim.... [the town-clock strikes] The clock gives me my cue, and my assurance bids me search—there I shall find Falstaff ... I shall be rather praised for this than mocked; for it is as positive as the earth is firm that Falstaff is there ... I will go.

Page, Shallow, Slender, Host, Sir Hugh Evans, Caius, and Rugby come up

ALL. Well met, Master Ford.

FORD. Trust me, a good knot; I have good cheer at home, and I pray you all go with me.

SHALLOW. I must excuse myself, Master Ford.

SLENDER. And so must I, sir. We have appointed to dine with Mistress Anne, and I would not break with her for more money than I'll speak of.

SHALLOW. We have lingered about a match between Anne Page and my cousin Slender, and this day we shall have our answer.

SLENDER. I hope I have your good will, father Page.

PAGE. You have, Master Slender. I stand wholly for you—but my wife, master doctor, is for you altogether.

CAIUS. Ay, be-gar, and de maid is lov-a me: my nursh-a Quickly tell me so mush.

HOST. What say you to young Master Fenton? he capers, he dances, he has eyes of youth ... he writes verses, he speaks holiday, he smells April and May. He will carry't, he will carry't—'tis in his buttons—he will carry't.

PAGE. Not by my consent, I promise you.... The gentleman is of no having—he kept company with the wild Prince and Poins: he is of too high a region, he knows too much ... No, he shall not knit a knot in his fortunes with the finger of my substance: if he take her, let him take her simply: the wealth I have waits on my consent, and my consent goes not that way.

FORD. I beseech you, heartily, some of you go home with me to dinner: besides your cheer, you shall have sport—I will show you a monster! Master doctor, you shall go—so shall you, Master Page—and you, Sir Hugh.

SHALLOW. Well, fare you well: we shall have the freer wooing at Master Page's. He goes off with Slender

CAIUS. Go home, John Rugby. I come anon. Rugby goes

HOST. Farewell, my hearts. I will to my honest knight Falstaff, and drink canary with him. He follows Rugby

FORD [aside]. I think I shall drink in pipe-wine first with him—I'll make him dance!
[aloud] Will you go, gentles?

PAGE, CAIUS, EVANS. Have with you, to see this monster. They go with Ford

Scene 3: The hall of Master Ford's house

Enter Mistress Ford and Mistress Page

MISTRESS FORD. What, John! what, Robert!

MISTRESS PAGE. Quickly, quickly ... is the buck-basket—

MISTRESS FORD. I warrant.... What, Robin, I say!

Two servants enter carrying a large basket

MISTRESS PAGE. Come, come, come!

MISTRESS FORD. Here, set it down.

MISTRESS PAGE. Give your men the charge. We must be brief.

MISTRESS FORD. Marry, as I told you before, John and Robert, be ready here hard by in the brew-house, and when I suddenly call you, come forth, and—without any pause or staggering—take this basket on your shoulders: that done, trudge with it in all haste, and carry it among the whitsters in Datchet-mead, and there empty it in the muddy ditch, close by the Thames side.

MISTRESS PAGE. You will do it?

MISTRESS FORD. I ha' told them over and over. They lack no direction.... Be gone, and come when you are called. The servants go out; Robin enters

MISTRESS PAGE. Here comes little Robin.

MISTRESS FORD. How now, my eyas-musket! what news with you?

ROBIN. My master, Sir John, is come in at your back-door, Mistress Ford, and requests your company.

MISTRESS PAGE. You little Jack-a-lent, have you been true to us?

ROBIN. Ay, I'll be sworn ... My master knows not of your being here: and hath threatened to put me into everlasting liberty, if I tell you of it; for he swears he'll turn me away.

MISTRESS PAGE. Thou'rt a good boy: this secrecy of thine shall be a tailor to thee, and shall make thee a new doublet and hose.... I'll go hide me.

MISTRESS FORD. Do so ... Go tell thy master, I am alone ... [he goes] Mistress Page, remember you your cue.

MISTRESS PAGE. I warrant thee. If I do not act it, hiss me.

MISTRESS FORD. Go to then: we'll use this unwholesome humidity, this gross watery pumpion; we'll teach him to know turtles from jays.

Mistress Page goes; Falstaff enters

FALSTAFF. 'Have I caught my heavenly jewel?' Why, now let me die, for I have lived long enough ... This is the period of my ambition ... O this blessed hour!

MISTRESS FORD. O sweet Sir John!

FALSTAFF. Mistress Ford, I cannot cog, I cannot prate, Mistress Ford. Now shall I sin in my wish; I would thy husband were dead. I'll speak it before the best lord, I would make thee my lady.

MISTRESS FORD. I your lady, Sir John! alas, I should be a pitiful lady.

FALSTAFF. Let the court of France show me such another: I see how thine eye would emulate the diamond: thou hast the right arched beauty of the brow that becomes the ship-tire, the tire-valiant, or any tire of Venetian admittance.

MISTRESS FORD. A plain kerchief, Sir John: my brows become nothing else—nor that well, neither.

FALSTAFF. Thou art a tyrant to say so: thou wouldst make an absolute courtier, and the firm fixture of thy foot would give an excellent motion to thy gait, in a semi-circled farthingale.... I see what thou wert, if fortune thy foe were not, nature thy friend ... Come, thou canst not hide it.

MISTRESS FORD. Believe me, there's no such thing in me.

FALSTAFF. What made me love thee? let that persuade thee there's something extraordinary in thee ... Come, I cannot cog and say thou art this and that, like a many of these lisping hawthorn-buds, that come like women in men's apparel, and smell like Bucklersbury in simple-time: I cannot—but I love thee; none but thee; and thou deserv'st it.

MISTRESS FORD. Do not betray me, sir. I fear you love Mistress Page.

FALSTAFF. Thou mightst as well say, I love to walk by the Counter-gate, which is as hateful to me as the reek of a lime-kiln.

MISTRESS FORD. Well, heaven knows how I love you—and you shall one day find it.

FALSTAFF. Keep in that mind. I'll deserve it.

MISTRESS FORD. Nay, I must tell you, so you do; or else 3·3 I could not be in that mind.

Robin enters

ROBIN. Mistress Ford, Mistress Ford! here's Mistress Page at the door, sweating, and blowing, and looking wildly, and would needs speak with you presently.

FALSTAFF. She shall not see me. I will ensconce me behind the arras.

MISTRESS FORD. Pray you, do so—she's a very tattling woman.... Falstaff stands behind the arras

Mistress Page enters

What's the matter? how now!

MISTRESS PAGE. O Mistress Ford, what have you done? You're shamed, you're overthrown, you're undone for ever!

MISTRESS FORD. What's the matter, good Mistress Page?

MISTRESS PAGE. O well-a-day, Mistress Ford! having an honest man to your husband, to give him such cause of suspicion!

MISTRESS FORD. What cause of suspicion?

MISTRESS PAGE. What cause of suspicion! Out upon you! how am I mistook in you!

MISTRESS FORD. Why, alas, what's the matter?

MISTRESS PAGE. Your husband's coming hither, woman, with all the officers in Windsor, to search for a gentleman that he says is here now in the house—by your consent—to take an ill advantage of his absence ... You are undone.

MISTRESS FORD. 'Tis not so, I hope.

MISTRESS PAGE. Pray heaven it be not so, that you have such a man here: but 'tis most certain your husband's coming, with half Windsor at his heels, to search for such a one. I come before to tell you ... If you know yourself clear, why I am glad of it: but if you have a friend here, convey, convey him out.... Be not amazed, call all your senses to you, defend your reputation, or bid farewell to your good life for ever.

MISTRESS FORD. What shall I do? There is a gentleman, my dear friend: and I fear not mine own shame so much—as his peril.... I had rather than a thousand pound, he were out of the house.

MISTRESS PAGE. For shame, never stand 'you had rather,' and 'you had rather': your husband's here at hand! Bethink you of some conveyance: in the house you cannot hide him.... O, how have you deceived me! Look, here is a basket, if he be of any reasonable stature, he may creep in here—and throw foul linen upon him, as if it were going to bucking: or—it is whiting-time—send him by your two men to Datchet-mead.

MISTRESS FORD. He's too big to go in there: what shall I do?

Falstaff thrusting the arras aside, rushes towards the basket

FALSTAFF. Let me see't, let me see't, O let me see't ... I'll in, I'll in ... follow your friend's counsel—I'll in.

MISTRESS PAGE. What! Sir John Falstaff! [in his ear] Are these your letters, knight?

FALSTAFF [climbing into the basket]. I love thee, help me away . . . let me creep in here . . . I'll never—

He crouches; they cover him with foul linen

MISTRESS PAGE. Help to cover your master, boy! Call your men, Mistress Ford. . . . You dissembling knight!

MISTRESS FORD. What, John, Robert, John!

Robin goes; servants enter

Go take up these clothes here, quickly . . . Where's the cowl-staff? look, how you drumble . . . Carry them to the laundress in Datchet-mead . . . quickly, come!

Ford, Page, Caius, and Sir Hugh Evans enter

FORD. Pray you, come near: if I suspect without cause, why then make sport at me, then let me be your jest—I deserve it . . . How now! [who goes here?] whither bear you this?

SERVANTS. To the laundress, forsooth.

MISTRESS FORD. Why, what have you to do whither they bear it? You were best meddle with buck-washing.

FORD. Buck? I would I could wash myself of the buck! Buck, buck, buck! Ay, buck: I warrant you, buck—and of the season too it shall appear. . . . [the servants bear away the basket] Gentlemen, I have dreamed to-night. I'll tell you my dream . . . Here, here, here be my keys. Ascend my chambers, search, seek, find out: I'll warrant we'll unkennel the fox. . . . [goes to the door] Let me stop this way first . . . [locks it] So, now untapis!

PAGE. Good Master Ford, be contented: you wrong yourself too much.

FORD. True, Master Page. Up, gentlemen—you shall see sport anon . . . Follow me, gentlemen.

He goes

EVANS. This is fery fantastical humours and jealousies.

CAIUS. By gar, 'tis no the fashion of France: it is not jealous in France.

PAGE. Nay, follow him, gentlemen. See the issue of his search.

They go after Ford

MISTRESS PAGE. Is there not a double excellency in this?

MISTRESS FORD. I know not which pleases me better, that my husband is deceived, or Sir John.

MISTRESS PAGE. What a taking was he in, when your husband asked who was in the basket!

MISTRESS FORD. I am half afraid he will have need of washing: so throwing him into the water will do him a benefit.

MISTRESS PAGE. Hang him, dishonest rascal . . . I would all of the same strain were in the same distress.

MISTRESS FORD. I think my husband hath some special suspicion of Falstaff's being here; for I never saw him so gross in his jealousy till now.

MISTRESS PAGE. I will lay a plot to try that—and we will yet have more tricks with Falstaff: his dissolute disease will scarce obey this medicine.

MISTRESS FORD. Shall we send that foolish carrion, Mistress Quickly, to him, and excuse this throwing into the water, and give him another hope, to betray him to another punishment?

MISTRESS PAGE. We will do it: let him be sent for to-morrow, eight o'clock, to have amends.

The seekers return

FORD. I cannot find him: may be the knave bragged of that he could not compass.

MISTRESS PAGE. Heard you that?

MISTRESS FORD. You use me well, Master Ford, do you?

FORD. Ay, I do so.

MISTRESS FORD. Heaven make you better than your thoughts.

FORD. Amen.

MISTRESS PAGE. You do yourself mighty wrong, Master Ford.

FORD. Ay, ay: I must bear it.

EVANS. If there be any pody in the house, and in the chambers, and in the coffers, and in the presses . . . heaven forgive my sins at the day of judgement!

CAIUS. By gar, nor I too: there is no bodies.

PAGE. Fie, fie, Master Ford! are you not ashamed? What spirit, what devil suggests this imagination? I would not ha' your distemper in this kind, for the wealth of Windsor Castle.

FORD. 'Tis my fault, Master Page—I suffer for it.

EVANS. You suffer for a pad conscience: your wife is as honest a 'omans, as I will desires among five thousand, and five hundred too.

CAIUS. By gar, I see 'tis an honest woman.

FORD. Well, I promised you a dinner . . . Come, come, walk in the Park: I pray you, pardon me: I will hereafter make known to you why I have done this. . . . Come, wife; come, Mistress Page—I pray you pardon me. . . . Pray heartily, pardon me.

Mistress Ford and Mistress Page go

PAGE. Let's go in, gentlemen—but, trust me, we'll mock him . . . I do invite you to-morrow morning to my house to breakfast: after, we'll a-birding together—I have a fine hawk for the bush. . . . Shall it be so?

FORD. Any thing.

EVANS. If there is one, I shall make two in the company.

CAIUS. If there be one or two, I shall mak-a the turd.

FORD. Pray you go, Master Page.

Ford and Page go

EVANS. I pray you now, remembrance to-morrow on the lousy knave, mine host.

CAIUS. Dat is good, by gar—vit all my heart.

EVANS. A lousy knave, to have his gibes and his mockeries.

They follow Ford and Page

Scene 4: Before the house of Master Page

Enter Fenton and Anne

FENTON. I see I cannot get thy father's love,
Therefore no more turn me to him, sweet Nan.

ANNE. Alas, how then?

FENTON. Why, thou must be thyself. . . .
He doth object I am too great of birth,
And that, my state being galled with my expense,
I seek to heal it only by his wealth. . . .
Besides these, other bars he lays before me—
My riots past, my wild societies—
And tells me 'tis a thing impossible

I should love thee but as a property . . .
ANNE. May be he tells you true.
FENTON. No, heaven so speed me in my time to come!
Albeit I will confess thy father's wealth
Was the first motive that I wooed thee, Anne:
Yet, wooing thee, I found thee of more value
Than stamps in gold or sums in sealéd bags:
And 'tis the very riches of thyself
That now I aim at.
ANNE. Gentle Master Fenton,
Yet seek my father's love—still seek it, sir.
If opportunity and humblest suit
Cannot attain it, why then hark you hither!

Shallow and Slender come forth with Mistress Quickly

SHALLOW. Break their talk, Mistress Quickly. My kinsman shall speak for himself.

SLENDER. I'll make a shaft or a bolt on't. 'Slid, 'tis but venturing.

SHALLOW. Be not dismayed.

SLENDER. No, she shall not dismay me: I care not for that—but that I am afeard.

QUICKLY. Hark ye, Master Slender would speak a word with you.

ANNE. I come to him. . . . [to Fenton] This is my father's choice:
O, what a world of vile ill-favoured faults
Looks handsome in three hundred pounds a-year!

QUICKLY. And how does good Master Fenton? Pray you, a word with you.

SHALLOW. She's coming; to her, coz . . . O boy, thou hadst a father!

SLENDER. I had a father, Mistress Anne. My uncle can tell you good jests of him: pray you, uncle, tell Mistress Anne the jest, how my father stole two geese out of a pen, good uncle.

SHALLOW. Mistress Anne, my cousin loves you.

SLENDER. Ay, that I do—as well as I love any woman in Gloucestershire.

SHALLOW. He will maintain you like a gentlewoman.

SLENDER. Ay, that I will, come cut and long-tail—under the degree of a squire.

SHALLOW. He will make you a hundred and fifty pounds jointure.

ANNE. Good Master Shallow, let him woo for himself.

SHALLOW. Marry, I thank you for it: I thank you for that good comfort . . . She calls you, coz. I'll leave you.

ANNE. Now, Master Slender.

SLENDER. Now, good Mistress Anne.

ANNE. What is your will?

SLENDER. My will! od's heartlings, that's a pretty jest, indeed. I ne'er made my will yet, I thank heaven! I am not such a sickly creature, I give heaven praise.

ANNE. I mean, Master Slender, what would you with me?

SLENDER. Truly, for mine own part, I would little or nothing with you . . . Your father and my uncle hath made motions: if it be my luck, so; if not, happy man be his dole! They can tell you how things go, better than I can: you may ask your father; here he comes.

Page and Mistress Page come up

PAGE. Now, Master Slender; love him, daughter Anne. . . .
Why, how now! what does Master Fenton here?
You wrong me, sir, thus still to haunt my house. . . .
I told you, sir, my daughter is disposed of.
FENTON. Nay, Master Page, be not impatient.
MISTRESS PAGE. Good Master Fenton, come not to my child.
PAGE. She is no match for you.
FENTON. Sir, will you hear me?
PAGE. No, good Master Fenton. . . .
Come, Master Shallow; come, son Slender, in . . .
Knowing my mind, you wrong me, Master Fenton. Page, Shallow and Slender go QUICKLY. Speak to Mistress Page.
FENTON. Good Mistress Page, for that I love your daughter
In such a righteous fashion as I do,
Perforce, against all checks, rebukes and manners,
I must advance the colours of my love,
And not retire. . . . Let me have your good will.
ANNE. Good mother, do not marry me to yond fool.
MISTRESS PAGE. I mean it not. I seek you a better husband.
QUICKLY. That's my master, master doctor.
ANNE. Alas, I had rather be set quick i'th'earth,
And bowled to death with turnips.
MISTRESS PAGE. Come, trouble not yourself good Master Fenton,
I will not be your friend nor enemy:
My daughter will I question how she loves you,
And as I find her, so am I affected:
Till then, farewell, sir. She must needs go in—
Her father will be angry.

Mistress Page goes, Anne follows

FENTON. Farewell, gentle mistress: farewell, Nan.

QUICKLY. This is my doing now: 'Nay,' said I, 'will you cast away your child on a fool, and a physician? Look on Master Fenton.' This is my doing.

FENTON. I thank thee; and I pray thee, once to-night
Give my sweet Nan this ring . . . There's for thy pains. He departs

QUICKLY. Now heaven send thee good fortune! A kind heart he hath: a woman would run through fire and water for such a kind heart. . . . But yet, I would my master had Mistress Anne; or I would Master Slender had her; or, in sooth, I would Master Fenton had her: I will do what I can for them all three—for so I have promised, and I'll be as good as my word, but speciously for Master Fenton. . . . Well, I must of another errand to Sir John Falstaff from my two mistresses: what a beast am I to slack it! She goes away

Scene 5: The room in the Garter Inn

Falstaff enters

FALSTAFF. Bardolph, I say!

BARDOLPH [runs in]. Here, sir.

FALSTAFF. Go fetch me a quart of sack—put a toast in't. . . . [Bardolph goes] Have I lived to be carried in a basket, like a barrow of butcher's offal, and to be thrown in the Thames? Well, if I be served such another trick, I'll have my brains ta'en out, and buttered, and give them to a dog for a new-year's gift. . . . The rogues slighted me into the river with as little remorse as they would have drowned a blind bitch's puppies, fifteen i'th' litter: and you may know by my size, that I have a kind of alacrity in sinking; if the bottom were as deep as hell, I should down. . . . I had been drowned, but that the shore was shelvy and shallow . . . a death that I abhor; for the water swells a man; and what a thing should I have been, when I had been swelled! I should have been a mountain of mummy.

Bardolph returns with sack

BARDOLPH. Here's Mistress Quickly, sir, to speak with you.

FALSTAFF. Come, let me pour in some sack to the Thames water; for my belly's as cold as if I had swallowed snowballs for pills to cool the reins. . . . Call her in.

BARDOLPH. Come in, woman.

Mistress Quickly enters

QUICKLY. By your leave . . . I cry you mercy! Give your worship good-morrow.

FALSTAFF. Take away these chalices . . . Go brew me a pottle of sack finely.

BARDOLPH. With eggs, sir?

FALSTAFF. Simple of itself; I'll no pullet-sperm in my brewage. . . . [Bardolph leaves] How now!

QUICKLY. Marry, sir, I come to your worship from Mistress Ford.

FALSTAFF. Mistress Ford! I have had ford enough: I was thrown into the ford; I have my belly full of ford.

QUICKLY. Alas the day! good heart, that was not her fault: she does so take on with her men; they mistook their erection.

FALSTAFF. So did I mine, to build upon a foolish woman's promise.

QUICKLY. Well, she laments, sir, for it, that it would yearn your heart to see it . . . Her husband goes this morning a-birding; she desires you once more to come to her, between eight and nine: I must carry her word quickly. She'll make you amends, I warrant you.

FALSTAFF. Well, I will visit her. Tell her so; and bid her think what a man is: let her consider his frailty, and then judge of my merit.

QUICKLY. I will tell her.

FALSTAFF. Do so. . . . Between nine and ten, sayst thou?

QUICKLY. Eight and nine, sir.

FALSTAFF. Well, be gone: I will not miss her.

QUICKLY. Peace be with you, sir! She goes

FALSTAFF. I marvel I hear not of Master Brook; he sent me word to stay within: I like his money well. . . . O, here he comes.

Ford enters, disguised as Brook

FORD. Bless you, sir!

FALSTAFF. Now, Master Brook—you come to know what hath passed between me and Ford's wife?

FORD. That, indeed, Sir John, is my business.

FALSTAFF. Master Brook, I will not lie to you. I was at her house the hour she appointed me—

FORD. And sped you, sir?

FALSTAFF. Very ill-favouredly, Master Brook.

FORD. How so, sir? Did she change her determination?

FALSTAFF. No, Master Brook—but the peaking cornuto her husband, Master Brook, dwelling in a continual 'larum of jealousy, comes me in the instant of our encounter, after we had embraced, kissed, protested, and, as it were, spoke the prologue of our comedy; and at his heels a rabble of his companions, thither provoked and instigated by his distemper, and, forsooth, to search his house for his wife's love.

FORD. What! while you were there?

FALSTAFF. While I was there.

FORD. And did he search for you, and could not find you?

FALSTAFF. You shall hear. . . . As good luck would have it, comes in one Mistress Page, gives intelligence of Ford's approach . . . . and, in her invention and Ford's wife's distraction, they conveyed me into a buck-basket.

FORD. A buck-basket!

FALSTAFF. [By the Lord,] a buck-basket: rammed me in with foul shirts and smocks, socks, foul stockings, greasy napkins—that, Master Brook, there was the rankest compound of villainous smell, that ever offended nostril.

FORD. And how long lay you there?

FALSTAFF. Nay, you shall hear, Master Brook, what I have suffered to bring this woman to evil for your good . . . Being thus crammed in the basket, a couple of Ford's knaves, his hinds, were called forth by their mistress, to carry me in the name of foul clothes to Datchet-lane: they took me on their shoulders; met the jealous knave their master in the door; who asked them once or twice what they had in their basket! I quaked for fear, lest the lunatic knave would have searched it; but fate, ordaining he should be a cuckold, held his hand . . . Well, on went he for a search, and away went I for foul clothes: but mark the sequel, Master Brook. I suffered the pangs of three several deaths: first, an intolerable fright, to be detected with a jealous rotten bell-wether; next, to be compassed, like a good bilbo, in the circumference of a peck, hilt to point, heel to head. . . . and then, to be stopped in, like a strong distillation, with stinking clothes that fretted in their own grease . . . think of that—a man of my kidney; think of that—that am as subject to heat, as butter; a man of continual dissolution and thaw; it was a miracle to 'scape suffocation. . . . And in the height of this bath, when I was more than half stewed in grease, like a Dutch dish, to be thrown into the Thames, and cooled, glowing-hot (in that surge!) like a horse-shoe; think of that—hissing hot; think of that, Master Brook!

FORD. In good sadness, sir, I am sorry that for my sake you have suffered all this. . . . My suit then is desperate: you'll undertake her no more?

FALSTAFF. Master Brook . . . I will be thrown into Etna, as I have been into Thames, ere I will leave her thus . . . Her husband is this morning gone a-birding: I have received from her another embassy of meeting: 'twixt eight and nine is the hour, Master Brook.

FORD. 'Tis past eight already, sir.

FALSTAFF. Is it? I will then address me to my appointment . . . Come to me at your convenient leisure, and you shall know how I speed: and the conclusion shall be crowned with your enjoying her . . . Adieu . . . You shall have her, Master Brook. Master Brook, you shall cuckold Ford. He goes out

FORD. Hum . . . ha! is this a vision? is this a dream? do

I sleep? Master Ford awake, awake Master Ford! there’s a hole made in your best coat, Master Ford . . . This ’tis to be married; this ’tis to have linen and buck-baskets . . . Well, I will proclaim myself what I am: I will now take the lecher: he is at my house: he cannot ’scape me: ’tis impossible he should: he cannot creep into a halfpenny purse, nor into a pepper-box . . . but, lest the devil that guides him should aid him, I will search impossible places . . . Though what I am I cannot avoid, yet to be what I would not shall not make me tame: if I have horns to make one mad, let the proverb go with me—I’ll be horn-mad. He goes out

ACT 4

Scene 1: The street before the house of Master Page

Mistress Page, with Mistress Quickly and William

MISTRESS PAGE. Is he at Master Ford’s already, think’st thou?

QUICKLY. Sure, he is by this; or will be presently; but truly he is very courageous mad, about his throwing into the water. . . . Mistress Ford desires you to come suddenly.

MISTRESS PAGE. I’ll be with her by and by: I’ll but bring my young man here to school . . . Look where his master comes; ’tis a playing-day, I see . . .

Sir Hugh Evans approaches

How now, Sir Hugh! no school to-day?

EVANS. No: Master Slender is let the boys leave to play.

QUICKLY. Blessing of his heart!

MISTRESS PAGE. Sir Hugh, my husband says my son profits nothing in the world at his book: I pray you, ask him some questions in his accidence.

EVANS. Come hither, William; hold up your head; come.

MISTRESS PAGE. Come on, sirrah; hold up your head; answer your master, be not afraid.

EVANS. William, how many numbers is in nouns?

WILLIAM. Two.

QUICKLY. Truly, I thought there had been one number more; because they say, ‘Od’s nouns.’

EVANS. Peace your tattlings! What is ‘fair,’ William?

WILLIAM. Pulcher.

QUICKLY. Polecats! there are fairer things than polecats, sure.

EVANS. You are a very simplicity ’oman; I pray you, peace. . . . What is ‘lapis,’ William?

WILLIAM. A stone.

EVANS. And what is ‘a stone,’ William?

WILLIAM. A pebble.

EVANS. No; it is ‘lapis’: I pray you remember in your prain.

WILLIAM. Lapis.

EVANS. That is a good William . . . What is he, William, that does lend articles?

WILLIAM. Articles are borrowed of the pronoun; and be thus declined, Singulariter, nominativo, hic, hæc, hoc.

EVANS. Nominativo, hig, hag, hog: pray you, mark: genitivo, hujus . . . Well: what is your accusative case?

WILLIAM. Accusativo, hinc.

EVANS. I pray you, have your remembrance, child—accusativo, hung, hang, hog.

QUICKLY. ‘Hang-hog’ is Latin for bacon, I warrant you.

EVANS. Leave your prabbles, ’oman. . . . What is the focative case, William?

WILLIAM. O! vocativo—O.

EVANS. Remember, William—focative is caret.

QUICKLY. And that’s a good root.

EVANS. ’Oman, forbear.

MISTRESS PAGE. Peace.

EVANS. What is your genitive case plural, William?

WILLIAM. Genitive case?

EVANS. Ay.

WILLIAM. Genitive—horum, harum, horum.

QUICKLY. Vengeance of Jenny’s case! fie on her! never name her, child, if she be a whore.

EVANS. For shame, ’oman.

QUICKLY. You do ill to teach the child such words: he teaches him to hick and to hack—which they’ll do fast enough of themselves, and to call ‘horum’; fie upon you!

EVANS. ’Oman, art thou lunatics? hast thou no understandings for thy cases, and the numbers of the genders? Thou art as foolish Christian creatures as I would desires.

MISTRESS PAGE. Prithee hold thy peace.

EVANS. Show me now, William, some declensions of your pronouns.

WILLIAM. Forsooth, I have forgot.

EVANS. It is qui quæ, quod; if you forget your qui’s, your quæ’s, and your quod’s, you must be preeches . . . Go your ways and play, go.

MISTRESS PAGE. He is a better scholar than I thought he was.

EVANS. He is a good sprag memory . . . Farewell, Mistress Page. He goes

MISTRESS PAGE. Adieu, good Sir Hugh . . . Get you home, boy. Come, we stay too long. She goes off with Mistress Quickly

Scene 2: The hall in Master Ford’s house

Enter Falstaff and Mistress Ford

FALSTAFF. Mistress Ford, your sorrow hath eaten up my sufferance; I see you are obsequious in your love, and I profess requital to a hair’s breadth, not only, Mistress Ford, in the simple office of love, but in all the accoutrement, complement, and ceremony of it . . . But are you sure of your husband now?

MISTRESS FORD. He’s a-birding, sweet Sir John.

MISTRESS PAGE [calling without]. What ho, gossip Ford! what ho!

MISTRESS FORD. Step into th’ chamber, Sir John. Falstaff goes

Mistress Page enters

MISTRESS PAGE. How now, sweetheart! who’s at home besides yourself?

MISTRESS FORD. Why, none but mine own people.

MISTRESS PAGE. Indeed?

MISTRESS FORD. No, certainly . . . [whispers] Speak louder.

MISTRESS PAGE. Truly, I am so glad you have nobody here.

MISTRESS FORD. Why?

MISTRESS PAGE. Why, woman, your husband is in his old lunes again: he so takes on yonder with my husband; so rails against all married mankind; so curses all Eve's daughters, of what complexion soever; and so buffets himself on the forehead, crying, 'Peer out, peer out!' that any madness I ever yet beheld seemed but tameness, civility, and patience, to this his distemper he is in now ... I am glad the fat knight is not here.

MISTRESS FORD. Why, does he talk of him?

MISTRESS PAGE. Of none but him—and swears he was carried out the last time he searched for him in a basket; protests to my husband he is now here; and hath drawn him and the rest of their company from their sport, to make another experiment of his suspicion ... But I am glad the knight is not here; now he shall see his own foolery.

MISTRESS FORD. How near is he, Mistress Page?

MISTRESS PAGE. Hard by, at street end; he will be here anon.

MISTRESS FORD. I am undone!—the knight is here.

MISTRESS PAGE. Why, then you are utterly shamed, and he's but a dead man... What a woman are you! Away with him, away with him: better shame than murder!

MISTRESS FORD. Which way should he go? how should I bestow him? Shall I put him into the basket again?

FALSTAFF [rushes forward]. No, I'll come no more i'th' basket ... May I not go out, ere he come?

MISTRESS PAGE. Alas: three of Master Ford's brothers watch the door with pistols, that none shall issue out: otherwise you might slip away ere he came ... But what make you here?

FALSTAFF. What shall I do?—I'll creep up into the chimney.

MISTRESS PAGE. There they always use to discharge their birding-pieces ... Creep into the kiln-hole.

FALSTAFF. Where is it?

MISTRESS FORD. He will seek there on my word ... Neither press, coffer, chest, trunk, well, vault, but he hath an abstract for the remembrance of such places, and goes to them by his note ... There is no hiding you in the house.

FALSTAFF. I'll go out then.

MISTRESS PAGE. If you go out in your own semblance,
You die, Sir John—unless you go out disguised.

MISTRESS FORD. How might we disguise him?

MISTRESS PAGE. Alas the day, I know not. There is no woman's gown big enough for him; otherwise, he might put on a hat, a muffler, and a kerchief, and so escape.

FALSTAFF. Good hearts, devise something: any extremity, rather than a mischief.

MISTRESS FORD. My maid's aunt, the fat woman of Brainford, has a gown above.

MISTRESS PAGE. On my word, it will serve him; she's as big as he is: and there's her thrummed hat, and her muffler too ... Run up, Sir John.

MISTRESS FORD. Go, go, sweet Sir John ... Mistress Page and I will look some linen for your head.

MISTRESS PAGE. Quick, quick! we'll come dress you straight: put on the gown the while.

Falstaff goes

MISTRESS FORD. I would my husband would meet him in this shape: he cannot abide the old woman of Brainford; he swears she's a witch, forbade her my house, and hath threatened to beat her.

MISTRESS PAGE. Heaven guide him to thy husband's cudgel: and the devil guide his cudgel afterwards!

MISTRESS FORD. But is my husband coming?

MISTRESS PAGE. Ay, in good sadness, is he—and talks of the basket too, howsoever he hath had intelligence.

MISTRESS FORD. We'll try that; for I'll appoint my men to carry the basket again, to meet him at the door with it, as they did last time.

MISTRESS PAGE. Nay, but he'll be here presently: let's go dress him like the witch of Brainford.

MISTRESS FORD. I'll first direct my men what they shall do with the basket ... Go up, I'll bring linen for him straight. She goes

MISTRESS PAGE. Hang him, dishonest varlet! we cannot misuse him enough ...

We'll leave a proof, by that which we will do,
Wives may be merry, and yet honest too:
We do not act that often jest and laugh—
'Tis old but true, 'Still swine eats all the draff.'

She goes

Mistress Ford returns with the two servants

MISTRESS FORD. Go, sirs, take the basket again on your shoulders: your master is hard at door: if he bid you set it down, obey him ... quickly, dispatch.

She goes

FIRST SERVANT. Come, come, take it up.

SECOND SERVANT. Pray heaven it be not full of knight again.

FIRST SERVANT. I hope not. I had as lief bear so much lead.

Ford, Page, Shallow, Caius, and Sir Hugh Evans enter

FORD. Ay, but if it prove true, Master Page, have you any way then to unfool me again? ... Set down the basket, villain ... Somebody call my wife ... Youth in a basket ... O, you pandarly rascals! there's a knot ... a ging, a pack, a conspiracy against me ... Now shall the devil be shamed.... What! wife, I say ... Come, come forth ... Behold what honest clothes you send forth to bleaching!

PAGE. Why, this passes, Master Ford! you are not to go loose any longer—you must be pinioned.

EVANS. Why, this is lunatics! this is mad, as a mad dog!

SHALLOW. Indeed, Master Ford, this is not well, indeed.

FORD. So say I too, sir. [Mistress Ford appears] Come hither, Mistress Ford! Mistress Ford, the honest woman, the modest wife, the virtuous creature, that hath the jealous fool to her husband ... I suspect without cause, mistress, do I?

MISTRESS FORD. Heaven be my witness you do, if you suspect me in any dishonesty.

FORD. Well said, brazen-face, hold it out ... Come forth, sirrah. Plucking out the clothes

PAGE. This passes!

MISTRESS FORD. Are you not ashamed? let the clothes alone.

FORD. I shall find you anon.

EVANS. 'Tis unreasonable! Will you take up your wife's clothes? Come, away!

FORD. Empty the basket, I say.

MISTRESS FORD. Why, man, why?

FORD. Master Page, as I am a man, there was one conveyed out of my house yesterday in this basket: why may not he be there again? In my house I am sure he is: my intelligence is true, my jealousy is reasonable, pluck me out all the linen!

MISTRESS FORD. If you find a man there, he shall die a flea's death.

PAGE. Here's no man.

SHALLOW. By my fidelity, this is not well, Master Ford: this wrongs you.

EVANS. Master Ford, you must pray, and not follow the imaginations of your own heart: this is jealousies.

FORD. Well, he's not here I seek for.

PAGE. No, nor nowhere else but in your brain.

FORD. Help to search my house this one time: if I find not what I seek, show no colour for my extremity . . . let me for ever be your table-sport . . . let them say of me, 'As jealous as Ford, that searched a hollow walnut for his wife's leman'. . . . Satisfy me once more, once more search with me.

MISTRESS FORD. What ho, Mistress Page! come you and the old woman down: my husband will come into the chamber.

FORD. Old woman! What old woman's that?

MISTRESS FORD. Why, it is my maid's aunt of Brainford.

FORD. A witch, a quean, an old cozening quean! Have I not forbid her my house? She comes of errands, does she? We are simple men, we do not know what's brought to pass under the profession of fortune-telling. . . . She works by charms, by spells, by th' figure, and such daubery as this is, beyond our element: we know nothing. . . . Come down, you witch, you hag you, come down, I say.

MISTRESS FORD. Nay, good, sweet husband—good gentlemen, let him not strike the old woman.

Enter Falstaff, in women's clothes, and Mistress Page

MISTRESS PAGE. Come, Mother Prat, come, give me your hand.

FORD. I'll prat her . . . [Falstaff runs; Ford cudgels] Out of my door, you witch, you rag, you baggage, you polecat, you ronyon! out! out! I'll conjure you, I'll fortune-tell you. Falstaff goes

MISTRESS PAGE. Are you not ashamed? I think, you have killed the poor woman.

MISTRESS FORD. Nay, he will do it. 'Tis a goodly credit for you.

FORD. Hang her, witch!

EVANS. By yea and no, I think the 'oman is a witch indeed: I like not when a 'oman has a great peard; I spy a great peard under his muffler.

FORD. Will you follow, gentlemen? I beseech you, follow: see but the issue of my jealousy: if I cry out thus upon no trail, never trust me when I open again.

PAGE. Let's obey his humour a little further . . . Come, gentlemen. They follow him out

MISTRESS PAGE. Trust me, he beat him most pitifully.

MISTRESS PAGE. Nay, by th' mass, that he did not: he beat him most unpitifully methought.

MISTRESS PAGE. I'll have the cudgel hallowed and hung o'er the altar—it hath done meritorious service.

MISTRESS FORD. What think you? May we, with the warrant of womanhood and the witness of a good conscience, pursue him with any further revenge?

MISTRESS PAGE. The spirit of wantonness is, sure, scared out of him. If the devil have him not in fee-simple, with fine and recovery, he will never, I think, in the way of waste, attempt us again.

MISTRESS FORD. Shall we tell our husbands how we have served him?

MISTRESS PAGE. Yes, by all means; if it be but to scrape the figures out of your husband's brains . . . If they can find in their hearts the poor unvirtuous fat knight shall be any further afflicted, we two will still be the ministers.

MISTRESS FORD. I'll warrant they'll have him publicly shamed—and methinks there would be no period to the jest, should he not be publicly shamed.

MISTRESS PAGE. Come, to the forge with it! then shape it: I would not have things cool. They go

Scene 3: The room in the Garter Inn

Host and Bardolph enter

BARDOLPH. Sir, the Germans desire to have three of your horses: the duke himself will be to-morrow at court, and they are going to meet him.

HOST. What duke should that be comes so secretly? I hear not of him in the court . . . Let me speak with the gentlemen—they speak English?

BARDOLPH. Ay, sir; I'll call them to you.

HOST. They shall have my horses, but I'll make them pay: I'll sauce them. They have had my house a week at command; I have turned away my other guests. They must come off. I'll sauce them, come. They go out

Scene 4: The hall in Master Ford's house

Enter Page, Ford, Mistress Page, Mistress Ford, and Sir Hugh Evans

EVANS. 'Tis one of the pest discretions of a 'oman as ever I did look upon.

PAGE. And did he send you both these letters at an instant?

MISTRESS PAGE. Within a quarter of an hour.

FORD. Pardon me, wife. Henceforth do what thou wilt:
I rather will suspect the sun with cold
Than thee with wantonness: now doth thy honour stand,
In him that was of late an heretic,
As firm as faith.

PAGE. 'Tis well, 'tis well—no more:
Be not as extreme in submission,
As in offence.
But let our plot go forward: let our wives
Yet once again, to make us public sport,
Appoint a meeting with this old fat fellow,
Where we may take him, and disgrace him for it.

FORD. There is no better way than that they spoke of.

PAGE. How? to send him word they'll meet him in the Park at midnight? fie, fie! he'll never come.

EVANS. You say he has been thrown in the rivers, and has been grievously peaten, as an old 'oman: methinks there should be terrors in him, that he should not come: methinks his flesh is punished, he shall have no desires.

PAGE. So think I too.

MISTRESS FORD. Devise but how you'll use him, when he comes,
And let us two devise to bring him thither.

MISTRESS PAGE. There is an old tale goes, that Herne the hunter,
Sometime a keeper here in Windsor forest,
Doth all the winter-time, at still midnight,
Walk round about an oak, with great ragg'd horns—
And there he blasts the tree, and takes the cattle,
And makes milch-kine yield blood, and shakes a chain
In a most hideous and dreadful manner....
You have heard of such a spirit, and well you know
The superstitious idle-headed eld
Received, and did deliver to our age,
This tale of Herne the hunter for a truth.
PAGE. Why, yet there want not many that do fear
In deep of night to walk by this Herne's oak:
But what of this?
MISTRESS FORD. Marry, this is our device—
That Falstaff at that oak shall meet with us,
[Disguised like Herne, with huge horns on his head.]
PAGE. Well, let it not be doubted but he'll come,
And in this shape. When you have brought him thither,
What shall be done with him? what is your plot?
MISTRESS PAGE. That likewise have we thought upon, and thus:
Nan Page my daughter and my little son
And three or four more of their growth we'll dress
Like urchins, ouphs, and fairies, green and white,
With rounds of waxen tapers on their heads,
And rattles in their hands; upon a sudden,
As Falstaff, she, and I are newly met,
Let them from forth a saw-pit rush at once
With some diffuséd song: upon their sight,
We two in great amazedness will fly:
Then let them all encircle him about,
And, fairy-like, to pinch the unclean knight;
And ask him why, that hour of fairy revel,
In their so sacred paths he dares to tread
In shape profane.
MISTRESS FORD. And till he tell the truth,
Let the supposéd fairies pinch him sound,
And burn him with their tapers.
MISTRESS PAGE. The truth being known,
We'll all present ourselves; dis-horn the spirit,
And mock him home to Windsor.
FORD. The children must
Be practised well to this, or they'll ne'er do't.
EVANS. I will teach the children their behaviours: and I will be like a jack-an-apes also, to burn the knight with my taber.
FORD. That will be excellent. I'll go buy them vizards.
MISTRESS PAGE. My Nan shall be the queen of all the fairies,
Finely attiréd in a robe of white.
PAGE. That silk will I go buy—[aside] and in that time
Shall Master Slender steal my Nan away,
And marry her at Eton ... Go, send to Falstaff straight.
FORD. Nay, I'll to him again in name of Brook:
He'll tell me all his purpose: sure, he'll come.
MISTRESS PAGE. Fear not you that ... Go, get us properties,
And tricking for our fairies.
EVANS. Let us about it: it is admirable pleasures and fery honest knaveries.

Page, Ford, and Evans depart

MISTRESS PAGE. Go, Mistress Ford,
Send Quickly to Sir John, to know his mind . . .

Mistress Ford goes

I'll to the doctor—he hath my good will,
And none but he, to marry with Nan Page . . .
That Slender, though well landed, is an idiot;
And he my husband best of all affects:
The doctor is well moneyed, and his friends
Potent at court: he, none but he, shall have her,
Though twenty thousand worthier come to crave her.

She goes

Scene 5

Simple stands waiting; Host enters

HOST. What wouldst thou have, boor? what, thick-skin? speak, breathe, discuss; brief, short, quick, snap.

SIMPLE. Marry, sir, I come to speak with Sir John Falstaff from Master Slender.

HOST. There's his chamber, his house, his castle, his standing-bed, and truckle-bed; 'tis painted about with the story of the Prodigal, fresh and new: go, knock and call: he'll speak like an Anthropophaginian unto thee: knock, I say.

SIMPLE. There's an old woman, a fat woman, gone up into his chamber: I'll be so bold as stay, sir, till she come down: I come to speak with her, indeed.

HOST. Ha! a fat woman! the knight may be robbed: I'll call. . . . Bully knight! bully Sir John! speak from thy lungs military: art thou there? it is thine host, thine Ephesian, calls.

FALSTAFF [above]. How now, mine host?

HOST. Here's a Bohemian-Tartar tarries the coming down of thy fat woman . . . Let her descend, bully, let her descend: my chambers are honourable: fie! privacy? fie!

Falstaff enters

FALSTAFF. There was, mine host, an old fat woman even now with me—but she's gone.

SIMPLE. Pray you, sir, was't not the wise woman of Brainford?

FALSTAFF. Ay, marry, was it, mussel-shell—what would you with her?

SIMPLE. My master, sir, Master Slender, sent to her, seeing her go thorough the streets, to know, sir, whether one Nym, sir, that beguiled him of a chain, had the chain, or no.

FALSTAFF. I spake with the old woman about it.

SIMPLE. And what says she, I pray, sir?

FALSTAFF. Marry, she says that the very same man that beguiled Master Slender of his chain cozened him of it.

SIMPLE. I would I could have spoken with the woman herself. I had other things to have spoken with her too, from him.

FALSTAFF. What are they? let us know.

HOST. Ay . . . come . . . quick!

SIMPLE. I may not conceal them, sir.

HOST. Conceal them, or thou diest.

SIMPLE. Why, sir, they were nothing but about Mistress Anne Page—to know if it were my master's fortune to have her, or no.

FALSTAFF. 'Tis, 'tis his fortune.

SIMPLE. What, sir?

FALSTAFF. To have her, or no . . . Go; say the woman told me so.

SIMPLE. May I be so bold to say so, sir?

FALSTAFF. Ay, Sir Tyke; who more bold?

SIMPLE. I thank your worship: I shall make my master glad with these tidings. He goes out

HOST. Thou art clerkly! thou art clerkly, Sir John. Was there a wise woman with thee?

FALSTAFF. Ay, that there was, mine host—one that hath taught me more wit than ever I learned before in my life: and I paid nothing for it neither, but was paid for my learning.

Bardolph enters

BARDOLPH. Out, alas, sir! cozenage . . . mere cozenage!

HOST. Where be my horses? speak well of them, varletto.

BARDOLPH. Run away with the cozeners . . . for so soon as I came beyond Eton, they threw me off, from behind one of them, in a slough of mire . . . and set spurs, and away . . . like three German devils . . . three Doctor Faustuses.

HOST. They are gone but to meet the duke, villain. Do not say, they be fled; Germans are honest men.

Sir Hugh Evans enters

EVANS. Where is mine host?

HOST. What is the matter, sir?

EVANS. Have a care of your entertainments: there is a friend of mine come to town, tells me there is three cozen-germans that has cozened all the hosts of Readins, of Maidenhead, of Colebrook, of horses and money . . . I tell you for good will, look you! you are wise, and full of gibes and vlouting-stogs . . . and 'tis not convenient you should be cozened! Fare you well. He goes

Doctor Caius enters

CAIUS. Vere is mine host de Jarteer?

HOST. Here, master doctor, in perplexity and doubtful dilemma.

CAIUS. I cannot tell vat is dat: but it is tell-a me dat you make grand preparation for a duke de Jarmany: by my trot, dere is no duke, dat de court is know to come: I tell you for good vill: adieu. He goes

HOST. Hue and cry, villain! go . . . Assist me, knight. I am undone . . . Fly, run . . . hue and cry, villain! I am undone! He goes with Bardolph after FALSTAFF. I would all the world might be cozened, for I have been cozened and beaten too . . . If it should come to the ear of the court, how I have been transformed . . . and how my transformation hath been washed and cudgelled, they would melt me out of my fat, drop by drop, and liquor fishermen's boots with me: I warrant they would whip me with their fine wits till I were as crest-fallen as a dried pear . . . I never prospered since I forswore myself at primero: well, if my wind were but long enough [to say my prayers], I would repent . . .

Mistress Quickly enters

Now! whence come you?

QUICKLY. From the two parties, forsooth.

FALSTAFF. The devil take one party, and his dam the other! and so they shall be both bestowed . . . I have suffered more for their sakes—more than the villainous inconstancy of man's disposition is able to bear.

QUICKLY. And have not they suffered? Yes, I warrant; speciously one of them; Mistress Ford, good heart! is beaten black and blue, that you cannot see a white spot about her.

FALSTAFF. What, tell'st thou me of black and blue! I was beaten myself into all the colours of the rainbow: and I was like to be apprehended for the witch of Brainford. But that my admirable dexterity of wit, my counterfeiting the action of an old woman, delivered me, the knave constable had set me i'th' common stocks, for a witch.

QUICKLY. Sir: let me speak with you in your chamber, you shall hear how things go, and I warrant to your content . . . Here is a letter will say somewhat . . . Good hearts, what ado here is to bring you together! Sure, one of you does not serve heaven well, that you are so crossed.

FALSTAFF. Come up into my chamber. They go

Scene 6

Host returns, with Fenton

HOST. Master Fenton, talk not to me,
My mind is heavy: I will give over all.

FENTON. Yet hear me speak: assist me in my purpose,
And, as I am a gentleman, I'll give thee
A hundred pound in gold more than your loss.

HOST. I will hear you, Master Fenton; and I will at the least keep your counsel.

FENTON. From time to time I have acquainted you
With the dear love I bear to fair Anne Page,
Who mutually hath answered my affection,
So far forth as herself might be her chooser,
Even to my wish; I have a letter from her
Of such contents as you will wonder at;
The mirth whereof so larded with my matter,
That neither, singly, can be manifested,
Without the show of both: fat Falstaff
Hath a great scene; the image of the jest
I'll show you here at large. Hark, good mine host . . .
To-night at Herne's oak, just 'twixt twelve and one,
Must my sweet Nan present the Fairy-Queen . . .
The purpose why, is here . . . in which disguise,
While other jests are something rank on foot,
Her father hath commanded her to slip
Away with Slender, and with him at Eton
Immediately to marry: she hath consented . . .
Now, sir,
Her mother, ever strong against that match
And firm for Doctor Caius, hath appointed
That he shall likewise shuffle her away,
While other sports are tasking of their minds,
And at the deanery, where a priest attends,
Straight marry her: to this her mother's plot
She seemingly obedient likewise hath
Made promise to the doctor . . . Now, thus it rests—
Her father means she shall be all in white;
And in that habit, when Slender sees his time
To take her by the hand and bid her go,
She shall go with him: her mother hath intended—
The better to denote her to the doctor.

For they must all be masked and vizarded—
That quaint in green she shall be loose enrobed,
With ribands pendent, flaring 'bout her head;
And when the doctor spies his vantage ripe,
To pinch her by the hand, and, on that token,
The maid hath given consent to go with him.

HOST. Which means she to deceive? father or mother?

FENTON. Both, my good host, to go along with me:
And here it rests—that you'll procure the vicar
To stay for me at church, 'twixt twelve and one,
And, in the lawful name of marrying,
To give our hearts united ceremony.

HOST. Well, husband your device; I'll to the vicar.
Bring you the maid, you shall not lack a priest.

FENTON. So shall I evermore be bound to thee;
Besides, I'll make a present recompence.
They go out

ACT 5

Scene 1

Falstaff and Mistress Quickly come in

FALSTAFF. Prithee, no more prattling: go. I'll hold. This is the third time: I hope good luck lies in odd numbers . . . Away, go. They say there is divinity in odd numbers, either in nativity, chance, or death . . . Away!

QUICKLY. I'll provide you a chain, and I'll do what I can to get you a pair of horns.

FALSTAFF. Away, I say—time wears—hold up your head, and mince. . . .

Mistress Quickly goes out; Ford enters

How now, Master Brook! Master Brook, the matter will be known to-night, or never. . . . Be you in the Park about midnight, at Herne's oak, and you shall see wonders.

FORD. Went you not to her yesterday, sir, as you told me you had appointed?

FALSTAFF. I went to her, Master Brook, as you see, like a poor old man, but I came from her, Master Brook, like a poor old woman . . . That same knave Ford, her husband, hath the finest mad devil of jealousy in him, Master Brook, that ever governed frenzy. . . . I will tell you he beat me grievously, in the shape of a woman: for in the shape of man, Master Brook, I fear not Goliath with a weaver's beam, because I know also life is a shuttle. I am in haste—go along with me—I'll tell you all, Master Brook . . . Since I plucked geese, played truant, and whipped top, I knew not what it was to be beaten, till lately. . . . Follow me. I'll tell you strange things of this knave Ford, on whom to-night I will be revenged, and I will deliver his wife into your hand. . . . [goes out] Follow. Strange things in hand, Master Brook! follow. Ford follows

Scene 2: The outskirts of Windsor Park

Page, Shallow, and Slender appear

PAGE. Come, come; we'll couch i'th' castle-ditch till we see the light of our fairies. . . . Remember, son Slender, my daughter.

SLENDER. Ay, forsooth—I have spoke with her, and we have a nay-word how to know one another. . . . I come to her in white, and cry 'mum'; she cries 'budget,' and by that we know one another.

SHALLOW. That's good too: but what needs either your 'mum' or her 'budget'? the white will decipher her well enough. . . . It hath struck ten o'clock.

PAGE. The night is dark—light and spirits will become it well . . . Heaven prosper our sport! No man means evil but the devil, and we shall know him by his horns. . . . Let's away; follow me. They depart

Scene 3

Mistress Page, Mistress Ford, and Doctor Caius come up

MISTRESS PAGE. Master doctor, my daughter is in green. When you see your time, take her by the hand, away with her to the deanery, and dispatch it quickly . . . Go before into the Park: we two must go together.

CAIUS. I know vat I have to do. Adieu. He goes

MISTRESS PAGE. Fare you well, sir. . . . My husband will not rejoice so much at the abuse of Falstaff as he will chafe at the doctor's marrying my daughter: but 'tis no matter; better a little chiding than a great deal of heart-break.

MISTRESS FORD. Where is Nan now, and her troop of fairies, and the Welsh devil-hern?

MISTRESS PAGE. They are all couched in a pit hard by Herne's oak, with obscured lights; which at the very instant of Falstaff's and our meeting, they will at once display to the night.

MISTRESS FORD. That cannot choose but amaze him.

MISTRESS PAGE. If he be not amazed, he will be mocked; if he be amazed, he will every way be mocked.

MISTRESS FORD. We'll betray him finely.

MISTRESS PAGE. Against such lewdsters and their lechery
Those that betray them do no treachery.

MISTRESS FORD. The hour draws on . . . To the oak, to the oak! They depart

Scene 4

Enter Sir Hugh Evans, disguised as a Satyr, Pistol, Quickly, Anne Page, William, and many other boys, disguised as Fairies

EVANS. Trib, trib, fairies; come; and remember your parts: be pold, I pray you; follow me into the pit; and when I give the watch-'ords, do as I pid you . . . Come, come—trib, trib. They go

Scene 5: In Windsor Park

Enter Falstaff disguised as Herne the hunter, with a buck's head upon him

FALSTAFF. The Windsor bell hath struck twelve: the minute draws on . . . Now, the hot-blooded gods assist me! Remember, Jove, thou wast a bull for thy Europa—love set on thy horns. . . . O powerful love, that, in some respects, makes a beast a man; in some other, a man a beast. . . . You were also, Jupiter, a swan, for the love of Leda . . . O omnipotent love, how near the god drew to the complexion of a goose: a fault done first in the form of a beast—O Jove, a beastly fault—and then another fault in the semblance of a fowl—think on't, Jove, a foul fault! When gods have hot backs, what shall poor men do? For me, I am here a Windsor stag, and the fattest, I think, i'th' forest.... Send me a cool rut-time, Jove, or who can blame me to piss my tallow? Who comes here? my doe?

Mistress Ford comes in, Mistress Page following

MISTRESS FORD. Sir John? art thou there—my deer? my male deer?

FALSTAFF. My doe with the black scut! Let the sky rain potatoes; let it thunder to the tune of 'Greensleeves,' hail kissing-comfits, and snow eringoes; let there come a tempest of provocation, I will shelter me here. He embraces her

MISTRESS FORD. Mistress Page is come with me, sweetheart.

FALSTAFF. Divide me like a bribed-duck, each a haunch: I will keep my sides to myself, my shoulders for the fellow of this walk—and my horns I bequeath your husbands! Am I a woodman, ha? Speak I like Herne the hunter? Why, now is Cupid a child of conscience—he makes restitution.... As I am a true spirit, welcome!

There is a noise of horns

MISTRESS PAGE. Alas! what noise?

MISTRESS FORD. Heaven forgive our sins!

FALSTAFF. What should this be?

MISTRESS FORD, MISTRESS PAGE. Away, away!

The two women run away

FALSTAFF. I think the devil will not have me damned,
Lest the oil that's in me should set hell on fire;
—he would never else cross me thus.

The Fairies appear, led by a Satyr holding a taper; they dance towards Falstaff, singing

FAIRY-QUEEN. Fairies, black, grey, green, and white,
You moonshine revellers, and shades of night,
You orphan heirs of fixéd destiny,
Attend your office, and your quality....
Crier Hobgoblin, make the fairy oyes.

PUCK. Elves, list your names: silence, you airy toys....
Crickét, to Windsor chimneys shalt thou leap;
Where fires thou find'st unraked and hearths unswept,
There pinch the maids as blue as bilberry.
Our radiant queen hates sluts and sluttery.

FALSTAFF. They are fairies! he that speaks to them shall die
I'll wink and couch: no man their works must eye.

He lies upon his face

SATYR. Where's Bead? Go you, and where you find a maid
That, ere she sleep, has thrice her prayers said,
Raise up the organs of her fantasy,
Sleep she as sound as careless infancy.
But those as sleep and think not on their sins,
Pinch them, arms, legs, backs, shoulders, sides, and shins.

FAIRY-QUEEN. About, about ...
Search Windsor Castle, elves, within and out....
Strew good luck, ouphs, on every sacred room,
That it may stand till the perpetual doom,
In state as wholesome as in state 'tis fit,
Worthy the owner, and the owner it....
The several chairs of order look you scour
With juice of balm, and every precious flower:
Each fair instalment, coat, and several crest,
With loyal blazon, evermore be blest!
And nightly, meadow-fairies, look you sing,
Like to the Garter's compass, in a ring.
Th'expressure that it bears, green let it be,
More fertile-fresh than all the field to see;
And, 'Honi soit qui mal y pense' write,
In emerald tufts, flowers purple, blue, and white—
Like sapphire, pearl, and rich embroidery,
Buckled below fair knighthood's bending knee:
Fairies use flowers for their charáctery....
Away, disperse! but till 'tis one o'clock,
Our dance of custom round about the oak
Of Herne the hunter, let us not forget.

SATYR. Pray you, lock hand in hand; yourselves in order set ...
And twenty glow-worms shall our lanterns be,
To guide our measure round about the tree....
But stay—I smell a man of middle earth.

FALSTAFF. Heavens defend me from that Welsh fairy,
Lest he transform me to a piece of cheese!

PUCK. Vile worm, thou wast o'er-looked even in thy birth.

FAIRY-QUEEN. With trial-fire touch me his finger-end:
If he be chaste, the flame will back descend,
And turn him to no pain; but if he start,
It is the flesh of a corrupted heart.

PUCK. A trial, come!

SATYR. Come: will this wood take fire?

They put the tapers to his fingers, and he starts

FALSTAFF. Oh, oh, oh!

FAIRY-QUEEN. Corrupt, corrupt, and tainted in desire!
About him, fairies, sing a scornful rhyme—
And, as you trip, still pinch him to your time.

The Fairies sing

Fie on sinful fantasy: fie on lust and luxury:
Lust is but a bloody fire, kindled with unchaste desire,
Fed in heart, whose flames aspire,
As thoughts do blow them, higher and higher.
Pinch him, fairies, mutually: pinch him for his villainy.
Pinch him, and burn him, and turn him about,
Till candles, and star-light, and moon-shine be out.

As they sing, they pinch Falstaff. Doctor Caius comes one way, and steals away a fairy in green; Slender another way, and takes off a fairy in white; and Fenton comes, and steals away Mistress Anne Page. A noise of hunting is heard; and all the Fairies run away. Falstaff rises up, pulls off his buck's head, and would escape, but Page, Ford, Mistress Page, and Mistress Ford confront him.

PAGE. Nay, do not fly! I think we have watched you now ...
Will none but Herne the hunter serve your turn?

MISTRESS PAGE. I pray you, come, hold up the jest no higher....
Now, good Sir John, how like you Windsor wives?
See you these, husband? do not these fair yokes
Become the forest better than the town?

FORD. Now, sir, who's a cuckold now?—Master Brook, Falstaff's a knave, a cuckoldly knave—here are his horns, Master Brook ... And, Master Brook, he hath enjoyed nothing of Ford's but his buck-basket, his cudgel, and twenty pounds of money, which must be paid to Master Brook—his horses are arrested for it, Master Brook.

MISTRESS FORD. Sir John, we have had ill luck; we could never mate . . . I will never take you for my love again but I will always count you my deer.

FALSTAFF. I do begin to perceive that I am made an ass.

FORD. Ay, and an ox too: both the proofs are extant.

FALSTAFF. And these are not fairies! I was three or four times in the thought they were not fairies—and yet the guiltiness of my mind, the sudden surprise of my powers, drove the grossness of the foppery into a received belief, in despite of the teeth of all rhyme and reason, that they were fairies. . . . See now, how wit may be made a Jack-a-lent, when 'tis upon ill employment!

EVANS [returns]. Sir John Falstaff, serve Got, and leave your desires, and fairies will not pinse you.

FORD. Well said, fairy Hugh.

EVANS. And leave you your jealousies too, I pray you.

FORD. I will never mistrust my wife again, till thou art able to woo her in good English.

FALSTAFF. Have I laid my brain in the sun, and dried it, that it wants matter to prevent so gross o'erreaching as this? Am I ridden with a Welsh goat too? shall I have a coxcomb of frieze? 'tis time I were choked with a piece of toasted cheese.

EVANS. Seese is not good to give putter; your pelly is all putter.

FALSTAFF. 'Seese' and 'putter'! Have I lived to stand at the taunt of one that makes fritters of English? This is enough to be the decay of lust and late-walking through the realm.

MISTRESS PAGE. Why, Sir John, do you think, though we would have thrust virtue out of our hearts by the head and shoulders, and have given ourselves without scruple to hell, that ever the devil could have made you our delight?

FORD. What, a hodge-pudding? a bag of flax?

MISTRESS PAGE. A puffed man?

PAGE. Old, cold, withered, and of intolerable entrails?

FORD. And one that is as slanderous as Satan?

PAGE. And as poor as Job?

FORD. And as wicked as his wife?

EVANS. And given to fornications, and to taverns, and sack, and wine, and metheglins, and to drinkings, and swearings and starings, pribbles and prabbles?

FALSTAFF. Well, I am your theme . . . you have the start of me, I am dejected . . . I am not able to answer the Welsh flannel. Ignorance itself is a plummet o'er me. Use me as you will.

FORD. Marry, sir, we'll bring you to Windsor, to one Master Brook, that you have cozened of money, to whom you should have been a pandar: over and above that you have suffered, I think to repay that money will be a biting affliction.

PAGE. Yet be cheerful, knight: thou shalt eat a posset to-night at my house, where I will desire thee to laugh at my wife, that now laughs at thee . . . Tell her Master Slender hath married her daughter.

MISTRESS PAGE. Doctors doubt that . . . [aside] If Anne Page be my daughter, she is, by this, Doctor Caius' wife.

Slender enters

SLENDER. Whoa, ho, ho! father Page!

PAGE. Son, how now! how now, son! have you dispatched?

SLENDER. Dispatched! I'll make the best in Gloucestershire know on't; would I were hanged, la, else.

PAGE. Of what, son?

SLENDER. I came yonder at Eton to marry Mistress Anne Page, and she's a great lubberly boy. . . . If it had not been i'th' church, I would have swinged him, or he should have swinged me. . . . If I did not think it had been Anne Page, would I might never stir—and 'tis a postmaster's boy!

PAGE. Upon my life, then, you took the wrong.

SLENDER. What need you tell me that? I think so, when I took a boy for a girl . . . If I had been married to him, for all he was in woman's apparel, I would not have had him.

PAGE. Why, this is your own folly. Did not I tell you, how you should know my daughter—by her garments?

SLENDER. I went to her in white, and cried 'mum,' and she cried 'budget,' as Anne and I had appointed, and yet it was not Anne, but a postmaster's boy.

MISTRESS PAGE. Good George, be not angry. I knew of your purpose . . . turned my daughter into green—and, indeed, she is now with the doctor at the deanery, and there married.

Caius enters

CAIUS. Vere is Mistress Page? By gar, I am cozened! I ha' married un garçon, a boy; un paysan, by gar. . . . a boy! it is not Anne Page—by gar, I am cozened!

MISTRESS PAGE. Why! did you take her in green?

CAIUS. Ay, by gar, and 'tis a boy: by gar, I'll raise all Windsor! He goes away

FORD. This is strange . . . Who hath got the right Anne?

PAGE. My heart misgives me—here comes Master Fenton. . . .

Fenton and Anne Page appear

How now, Master Fenton!

ANNE. Pardon, good father! good my mother, pardon!

PAGE. Now, Mistress! how chance you went not with Master Slender?

MISTRESS PAGE. Why went you not with master doctor, maid?

FENTON. You do amaze her . . . Hear the truth of it.
You would have married her most shamefully,
Where there was no proportion held in love . . .
The truth is, she and I—long since contracted—
Are now so sure that nothing can dissolve us . . .
Th'offence is holy that she hath committed,
And this deceit loses the name of craft,
Of disobedience or unduteous title,
Since therein she doth evitate and shun
A thousand irreligious curséd hours,
Which forcéd marriage would have brought upon her.

FORD. Stand not amazed. Here is no remedy:
In love, the heavens themselves do guide the state—
Money buys lands, and wives are sold by fate.

FALSTAFF. I am glad, though you have ta'en a special stand to strike at me, that your arrow hath glanced.

PAGE. Well, what remedy? Fenton, heaven give thee joy!
What cannot be eschewed, must be embraced.

FALSTAFF. When night-dogs run, all sorts of deer are chased.
MISTRESS PAGE. Well, I will muse no further... Master Fenton,
Heaven give you many, many merry days!
Good husband, let us every one go home,
And laugh this sport o'er by a country fire—
Sir John and all.
FORD. Let it be so. Sir John,
To Master Brook you yet shall hold your word,
For he to-night shall lie with Mistress Ford.

ACT 1

Scene 1: The Duke's palace

Escalus, councillors, the Duke and attendants

DUKE. Escalus.
ESCALUS. My lord.
DUKE. Of government the properties to unfold
Would seem in me t'affect speech and discourse,
Since I am put to know that your own science
Exceeds, in that, the lists of all advice
My strength can give you: then no more remains
But that to your sufficiency, as your worth is able,
And let them work . . . The nature of our people,
Our city's institutions, and the terms
For common justice, y'are as pregnant in
As art and practice hath enrichéd any
That we remember . . . There is our commission,
From which we would not have you warp . . . Call hither,
I say, bid come before us Angelo . . .
An attendant goes
What figure of us think you he will bear?
For you must know, we have with special soul
Elected him our absence to supply;
Lent him our terror, dressed him with our love,
And given his deputation all the organs
Of our own power: what think you of it?
ESCALUS. If any in Vienna be of worth
To undergo such ample grace and honour,
It is Lord Angelo.
DUKE. Look where he comes.

Angelo enters

ANGELO. Always obedient to your grace's will,
I come to know your pleasure.
DUKE. Angelo . . .
There is a kind of character in thy life,
That to th'observer doth thy history
Fully unfold: thyself and thy belongings
Are not thine own so proper, as to waste
Thyself upon thy virtues, they on thee.
Heaven doth with us as we with torches do,
Not light them for themselves: for if our virtues
Did not go forth of us, 'twere all alike
As if we had them not: spirits are not finely touched
But to fine issues: nor Nature never lends
The smallest scruple of her excellence,
But, like a thrifty goddess, she determines
Herself the glory of a creditor,
Both thanks and use . . . But I do bend my speech
To one that can my part in him advértise;
Hold therefore, Angelo . . .
In our remove, be thou at full ourself:
Mortality and mercy in Vienna
Live in thy tongue, and heart . . . Old Escalus,
Though first in question, is thy secondary. . . .
Take thy commission.
ANGELO. Now, good my lord,
Let there be some more test made of my mettle,
Before so noble and so great a figure
Be stamped upon it.
DUKE. No more evasion:
We have with a leavened and preparéd choice
Proceeded to you; therefore take your honours . . .
Our haste from thence is of so quick condition,
That it prefers itself, and leaves unquestioned
Matters of needful value . . . We shall write to you,
As time and our concernings shall impórtune,
How it goes with us—and do look to know
What doth befall you here. . . . So, fare you well:
To th'hopeful execution do I leave you
Of your commissions.
ANGELO. Yet give leave, my lord,
That we may bring you something on the way.
DUKE. My haste may not admit it,
Nor need you, on mine honour, have to do
With any scruple: your scope is as mine own,
So to enforce or qualify the laws,
As to your soul seems good . . . Give me your hand.
I'll privily away: I love the people,
But do not like to stage me to their eyes:
Though it do well, I do not relish well
Their loud applause and 'aves' vehement:
Nor do I think the man of safe discretion
That does affect it. . . . Once more, fare you well.
ANGELO. The heavens give safety to your purposes.
ESCALUS. Lead forth and bring you back in happiness.
DUKE. I thank you. Fare you well. He departs
ESCALUS. I shall desire you, sir, to give me leave
To have free speech with you; and it concerns me
To look into the bottom of my place:
A power I have—but of what strength and nature
I am not yet instructed.
ANGELO. 'Tis so with me . . . Let us withdraw together,
And we may soon our satisfaction have
Touching that point.
ESCALUS. I'll wait upon your honour.
They go

Scene 2: A street

Lucio and two gentlemen enter

LUCIO. If the duke, with the other dukes, come not to composition with the King of Hungary, why then all the dukes fall upon the king.

FIRST GENTLEMAN. Heaven grant us its peace, but not the King of Hungary's!

SECOND GENTLEMAN. Amen.

LUCIO. Thou conclud'st like the sanctimonious pirate, that went to sea with the Ten Commandments, but scraped one out of the table.

SECOND GENTLEMAN. 'Thou shalt not steal'?

LUCIO. Ay, that he razed.

FIRST GENTLEMAN. Why, 'twas a commandment to command the captain and all the rest from their functions: they put forth to steal . . . There's not a soldier of us all, that, in the thanksgiving before meat, do relish the petition well that prays for peace.

SECOND GENTLEMAN. I never heard any soldier dislike it.

LUCIO. I believe thee: for I think thou never wast where grace was said.

SECOND GENTLEMAN. No? a dozen times at least.

FIRST GENTLEMAN. What? in metre?

LUCIO. In any proportion or in any language.

FIRST GENTLEMAN. I think, or in any religion.

LUCIO. Ay, why not? Grace is grace, despite of all controversy: as for example; thou thyself art a wicked villain, despite of all grace.

FIRST GENTLEMAN. Well: there went but a pair of shears between us.

LUCIO. I grant: as there may between the lists and the velvet.... Thou art the list.

FIRST GENTLEMAN. And thou the velvet; thou art good velvet; thou'rt a three-piled piece, I warrant thee ... I had as lief be a list of an English kersey, as be piled, as thou art piled, for a French velvet.... Do I speak feelingly now?

LUCIO. I think thou dost: and, indeed, with most painful feeling of thy speech: I will, out of thine own confession, learn to begin thy health; but, whilst I live, forget to drink after thee.

FIRST GENTLEMAN. I think I have done myself wrong, have I not?

SECOND GENTLEMAN. Yes, that thou hast; whether thou art tainted or free.

Enter Mistress Overdone the bawd

LUCIO. Behold, behold, where Madam Mitigation comes! I have purchased as many diseases under her roof, as come to—

SECOND GENTLEMAN. To what, I pray?

LUCIO. Judge.

SECOND GENTLEMAN. To three thousand dolours a year.

FIRST GENTLEMAN. Ay, and more.

LUCIO. A French crown more.

FIRST GENTLEMAN. Thou art always figuring diseases in me; but thou art full of error—I am sound.

LUCIO. Nay, not as one would say, healthy: but so sound as things that are hollow; thy bones are hollow; impiety has made a feast of thee.

FIRST GENTLEMAN. How now! Which of your hips has the most profound sciatica?

OVERDONE. Well, well: there's one yonder arrested and carried to prison was worth five thousand of you all.

SECOND GENTLEMAN. Who's that, I pray thee?

OVERDONE. Marry, sir, that's Claudio, Signior Claudio.

FIRST GENTLEMAN. Claudio to prison! 'tis not so.

OVERDONE. Nay, but I know 'tis so: I saw him arrested ... saw him carried away ... and, which is more, within these three days his head to be chopped off.

LUCIO. But, after all this fooling, I would not have it so ... Art thou sure of this?

OVERDONE. I am too sure of it: and it is for getting Madam Julietta with child.

LUCIO. Believe me, this may be: he promised to meet me two hours since; and he was ever precise in promise-keeping.

SECOND GENTLEMAN. Besides, you know, it draws something near to the speech we had to such a purpose.

FIRST GENTLEMAN. But most of all agreeing with the proclamation.

LUCIO. Away: let's go learn the truth of it.

Lucio and the gentlemen go

OVERDONE. Thus, what with the war, what with the sweat, what with the gallows, and what with poverty, I am custom-shrunk.

Pompey approaches

How now! what's the news with you?

POMPEY. Yonder man is carried to prison.

OVERDONE. Well: what has he done?

POMPEY. A woman.

OVERDONE. But what's his offence?

POMPEY. Groping for trouts in a peculiar river.

OVERDONE. What, is there a maid with child by him?

POMPEY. No: but there's a woman with maid by him ... You have not heard of the proclamation, have you?

OVERDONE. What proclamation, man?

POMPEY. All houses in the suburbs of Vienna must be plucked down.

OVERDONE. And what shall become of those in the city?

POMPEY. They shall stand for seed: they had gone down too, but that a wise burgher put in for them.

OVERDONE. But shall all our houses of resort in the suburbs be pulled down?

POMPEY. To the ground, mistress.

OVERDONE. Why, here's a change indeed in the commonwealth ... What shall become of me?

POMPEY. Come: fear not you: good counsellors lack no clients: though you change your place, you need not change your trade: I'll be your tapster still ... Courage, there will be pity taken on you; you, that have worn your eyes almost out in the service, you will be considered.

OVERDONE. What's to do here, Thomas Tapster? Let's withdraw.

POMPEY. Here comes Signior Claudio, led by the provost to prison: and there's Madam Juliet.

They go

Enter the Provost, officers, Claudio and Juliet; Lucio and the two gentlemen following

CLAUDIO. Fellow, why dost thou show me thus to th' world?
Bear me to prison, where I am committed.

PROVOST. I do it not in evil disposition,
But from Lord Angelo by special charge.

CLAUDIO. Thus can the demi-god, Authority,
Make us pay down for our offence by weight—
The words of heaven; on whom it will, it will—
On whom it will not, so. Yet still 'tis just.

LUCIO. Why, how now, Claudio! whence comes this restraint?

CLAUDIO. From too much liberty, my Lucio, liberty:
As surfeit is the father of much fast,
So every scope by the immoderate use
Turns to restraint: Our natures do pursue,
Like rats that ravin down their proper bane,
A thirsty evil—and, when we drink, we die.

LUCIO. If I could speak so wisely under an arrest, I would send for certain of my creditors: and yet, to say the truth, I had as lief have the foppery of freedom as the morality of imprisonment... What's thy offence, Claudio?

CLAUDIO. What (but to speak of) would offend again.

LUCIO. What is't? murder?

CLAUDIO. No.

LUCIO. Lechery?

CLAUDIO. Call it so.

PROVOST. Away, sir! you must go.

CLAUDIO. One word, good friend ... Lucio, a word with you.

LUCIO. A hundred, if they'll do you any good ...
Is lechery so looked after?

CLAUDIO. Thus stands it with me: upon a true contract
I got possession of Julietta's bed.
You know the lady—she is fast my wife,
Save that we do the denunciation lack
Of outward order.... This we came not to,
Only for propagation of a dower
Remaining in the coffer of her friends,
From whom we thought it meet to hide our love
Till time had made them for us.... But it chances
The stealth of our most mutual entertainment
With character too gross is writ on Juliet.

LUCIO. With child, perhaps?

CLAUDIO. Unhappily, even so.
And the new deputy, now for the duke,—
Whether it be the fault and glimpse of newness,
Or whether that the body public be
A horse whereon the governor doth ride,
Who, newly in the seat, that it may know
He can command, lets it straight feel the spur:
Whether the tyranny be in his place,
Or in his eminence that fills it up,
I stagger in ... But this new governor
Awakes me all the enrollèd penalties,
Which have, like unscoured armour, hung by th' wall
So long, that nineteen zodiacs have gone round,
And none of them been worn; and, for a name,
Now puts the drowsy and neglected act
Freshly on me ... 'tis surely for a name.

LUCIO. I warrant, it is: and thy head stands so tickle on thy shoulders, that a milk-maid, if she be in love, may sigh it off ... Send after the duke, and appeal to him.

CLAUDIO. I have done so, but he's not to be found....
I prithee, Lucio, do me this kind service:
This day my sister should the cloister enter,
And there receive her approbation...
Acquaint her with the danger of my state,
Implore her, in my voice, that she make friends
To the strict deputy: bid herself assay him—
I have great hope in that: for in her youth
There is a prone and speechless dialect,
Such as move men: beside, she hath prosperous art
When she will play with reason and discourse,
And well she can persuade.

LUCIO. I pray she may; as well for the encouragement of the like, which else would stand under grievous imposition, as for the enjoying of thy life, who I would be sorry should be thus foolishly lost at a game of tick-tack ...
I'll to her.

CLAUDIO. I thank you, good friend Lucio.

LUCIO. Within two hours.

CLAUDIO. Come, officer, away. They go

Scene 3: A friar's cell

Enter Duke and Friar Thomas

DUKE. No ... holy father, throw away that thought.
Believe not that the dribbling dart of love
Can pierce a cómplete bosom: why I desire thee
To give me secret harbour, hath a purpose
More grave and wrinkled than the aims and ends
Of burning youth.

FRIAR. May your grace speak of it?

DUKE. My holy sir, none better knows than you
How I have ever loved the life removed,
And held in idle price to haunt assemblies,
Where youth and cost a witless bravery keeps....
I have delivered to Lord Angelo,
A man of stricture and firm abstinence,
My absolute power and place here in Vienna,
And he supposes me travelled to Poland—
For so I have strewed it in the common ear,
And so it is received ... Now, pious sir,
You will demand of me why I do this?

FRIAR. Gladly, my lord.

DUKE. We have strict statutes and most biting laws,
The needful bits and curbs for headstrong steeds,
Which for these fourteen years we have let slip,
Even like an o'ergrown lion in a cave,
That goes not out to prey ... Now, as fond fathers,
Having bound up the threat'ning twigs of birch,
Only to stick it in their children's sight,
For terror, not to use ... in time the rod
Becomes more mocked than feared ... so our decrees,
Dead to infliction, to themselves are dead,
And liberty plucks justice by the nose;
The baby beats the nurse, and quite athwart
Goes all decorum.

FRIAR. It rested in your grace
To unloose this tied-up justice when you pleased:
And it in you more dreadful would have seemed
Than in Lord Angelo.

DUKE. I do fear ... too dreadful:
Sith 'twas my fault to give the people scope,
'Twould be my tyranny to strike and gall them
For what I bid them do: for we bid this be done,
When evil deeds have their permissive pass,
And not the punishment ... Therefore, indeed, my father,
I have on Angelo imposed the office,
Who may, in th'ambush of my name, strike home,
And yet my nature never in the fight,
To do it slander ... And to behold his sway,
I will, as 'twere a brother of your order,
Visit both prince and people: Therefore, I prithee,
Supply me with the habit, and instruct
How I may formally in person bear me
Like a true friar ... Moe reasons for this action
At our more leisure shall I render you;
Only, this one: Lord Angelo is precise;
Stands at a guard with envy; scarce confesses
That his blood flows; or that his appetite
Is more to bread than stone: hence shall we see,
If power change purpose ... what our seemers be.
They go

Scene 4: A nunnery

Enter Isabella and Francisca, a nun

ISABELLA. And have you nuns no farther privileges?
NUN. Are not these large enough?
ISABELLA. Yes, truly; I speak not as desiring more,
But rather wishing a more strict restraint
Upon the sisterhood, the votarists of Saint Clare.
A VOICE WITHOUT. Ho! Peace be in this place!
ISABELLA. Who's that which calls?
NUN. It is a man's voice: gentle Isabella,
Turn you the key, and know his business of him;
You may; I may not: you are yet unsworn:
When you have vowed, you must not speak with men
But in the presence of the prioress;
Then, if you speak, you must not show your face;
Or, if you show your face, you must not speak....
He calls again: I pray you, answer him.
ISABELLA. Peace and prosperity! Who is't that calls?

Lucio enters

LUCIO. Hail, virgin, if you be, as those cheek-roses
Proclaim you are no less ... Can you so stead me
As bring me to the sight of Isabella,
A novice of this place, and the fair sister
To her unhappy brother Claudio?
ISABELLA. Why 'her unhappy brother'? Let me ask,
The rather for I now must make you know
I am that Isabella and his sister.
LUCIO. Gentle and fair ... your brother kindly greets you;
Not to be weary with you—he's in prison.
ISABELLA. Woe me; for what?
LUCIO. For that which, if myself might be his judge,
He should receive his punishment in thanks:
He hath got his friend with child.
ISABELLA. Sir, make me not your story.
LUCIO. It is true;
I would not—though 'tis my familiar sin
With maids to seem the lapwing, and to jest,
Tongue far from heart—play with all virgins so:
I hold you as a thing enskied and sainted,
By your renouncement—an immortal spirit,
And to be talked with in sincerity,
As with a saint.
ISABELLA. You do blaspheme the good, in mocking me.
LUCIO. Do not believe it ... Fewness and truth, 'tis thus—
Your brother and his lover have embraced;
As those that feed grow full ... as blossoming time,
That from the seedness the bare fallow brings
To teeming foison ... even so her plenteous womb
Expresseth his full tilth and husbandry.
ISABELLA. Some one with child by him? My cousin Juliet?
LUCIO. Is she your cousin?
ISABELLA. Adoptedly—as school-maids change their names,
By vain though apt affection.
LUCIO. She it is.
ISABELLA. O, let him marry her.
LUCIO. This is the point....
The duke is very strangely gone from hence;
Bore many gentlemen, myself being one,
In hand on hope of action: but we do learn
By those that know the very nerves of state,
His givings-out were of an infinite distance
From his true-meant design ... Upon his place,
And with full line of his authority,
Governs Lord Angelo; a man whose blood
Is very snow-broth; one who never feels
The wanton stings and motions of the sense;
But doth rebate and blunt his natural edge
With profits of the mind, study and fast.
He—to give fear to use and liberty,
Which have for long run by the hideous law,
As mice by lions—hath picked out an act,
Under whose heavy sense your brother's life
Falls into forfeit: he arrests him on it,
And follows close the rigour of the statute,
To make him an example ... All hope is gone,
Unless you have the grace by your fair prayer
To soften Angelo: and that's my pith of business
'Twixt you and your poor brother.
ISABELLA. Doth he so seek his life?
LUCIO. Has censured him
Already—and, as I hear, the provost hath
A warrant for his execution.
ISABELLA. Alas ... what poor ability's in me
To do him good?
LUCIO. Assay the power you have.
ISABELLA. My power! alas, I doubt—
LUCIO. Our doubts are traitors,
And make us lose the good we oft might win,
By fearing to attempt ... Go to Lord Angelo,
And let him learn to know, when maidens sue,
Men give like gods: but when they weep and kneel,
All their petitions are as freely theirs
As they themselves would owe them.
ISABELLA. I'll see what I can do.
LUCIO. But speedily.
ISABELLA. I will about it straight;
No longer staying but to give the Mother
Notice of my affair ... I humbly thank you:
Commend me to my brother: soon at night
I'll send him certain word of my success.
LUCIO. I take my leave of you.
ISABELLA. Good sir, adieu. They go

ACT 2

Scene 1: A Court of Justice

Enter Angelo, Escalus, a Justice, the Provost, officers and other attendants

ANGELO. We must not make a scarecrow of the law,
Setting it up to fear the birds of prey,
And let it keep one shape, till custom make it
Their perch and not their terror.
ESCALUS. Ay, but yet
Let us be keen and rather cut a little,
Than fall, and bruise to death ... Alas, this gentleman,
Whom I would save, had a most noble father.
Let but your honour know,
Whom I believe to be most strait in virtue,
That, in the working of your own affections,
Had time cohered with place or place with wishing,
Or that the resolute acting of your blood

Could have attained th'effect of your own purpose,
Whether you had not sometime in your life
Erred in this point which now you censure him,
And pulled the law upon you.

ANGELO. 'Tis one thing to be tempted, Escalus,
Another thing to fall . . . I not deny,
The jury, passing on the prisoner's life,
May in the sworn twelve have a thief or two
Guiltier than him they try . . . What's open made to justice,
That justice seizes. What knows the laws
That thieves do pass on thieves? 'Tis very pregnant,
The jewel that we find, we stoop and take't,
Because we see it; but what we do not see
We tread upon, and never think of it. . . .
You may not so extenuate his offence,
For I have had such faults; but rather tell me,
When I, that censure him, do so offend,
Let mine own judgement pattern out my death,
And nothing come in partial. . . . Sir, he must die.

ESCALUS. Be it as your wisdom will.

ANGELO. Where is the provost?

PROVOST. Here, if it like your honour.

ANGELO. See that Claudio
Be executed by nine to-morrow morning.
Bring him his confessor, let him be prepared—
For that's the utmost of his pilgrimage.

The Provost goes out

ESCALUS. Well . . . heaven forgive him; and forgive us all . . .
Some rise by sin, and some by virtue fall:
Some run from breaks of ice, and answer none;
And some condemnéd for a fault alone.

Enter Elbow, officers, Pompey and Froth

ELBOW. Come, bring them away: if these be good people in a commonweal, that do nothing but use their abuses in common houses, I know no law: bring them away.

ANGELO. How now, sir! What's your name? and what's the matter?

ELBOW. If it please your honour, I am the poor duke's constable, and my name is Elbow; I do lean upon justice, sir, and do bring in here before your good honour two notorious benefactors.

ANGELO. Benefactors! Well: what benefactors are they? are they not malefactors?

ELBOW. If it please your honour, I know not well what they are: but precise villains they are, that I am sure of: and void of all profanation in the world that good Christians ought to have.

ESCALUS. This comes off well: here's a wise officer.

ANGELO. Go to: what quality are they of? Elbow is your name? why dost thou not speak, Elbow?

POMPEY. He cannot, sir: he's out at elbow.

ANGELO. What are you, sir?

ELBOW. He sir? a tapster, sir: parcel-bawd: one that serves a bad woman: whose house, sir, was, as they say, plucked down in the suburbs: and now she professes a hot-house; which, I think, is a very ill house too.

ESCALUS. How know you that?

ELBOW. My wife, sir, whom I detest before heaven and your honour—

ESCALUS. How! thy wife?

ELBOW. Ay, sir: whom, I thank heaven, is an honest woman—

ESCALUS. Dost thou detest her therefore?

ELBOW. I say, sir, I will detest myself also, as well as she, that this house, if it be not a bawd's house, it is pity of her life, for it is a naughty house.

ESCALUS. How dost thou know that, constable?

ELBOW. Marry, sir, by my wife—who, if she had been a woman cardinally given, might have been accused in fornication, adultery, and all uncleanliness there.

ESCALUS. By the woman's means?

ELBOW. Ay, sir, by Mistress Overdone's means: but, as she spit in his face, so she defied him.

POMPEY. Sir, if it please your honour, this is not so.

ELBOW. Prove it before these varlets here, thou honourable man, prove it.

ESCALUS [to Angelo]. Do you hear how he misplaces?

POMPEY. Sir, she came in great with child: and longing—saving your honour's reverence!—for stewed prunes; sir, we had but two in the house, which at that very distant time stood, as it were, in a fruit-dish, a dish of some threepence; your honours have seen such dishes—they are not China-dishes, but very good dishes.

ESCALUS. Go to: go to: no matter for the dish, sir.

POMPEY. No, indeed, sir, not of a pin; you are therein in the right: but, to the point . . . As I say, this Mistress Elbow, being, as I say, with child, and being great-bellied, and longing, as I said, for prunes: and having but two in the dish, as I said, Master Froth here, this very man, having eaten the rest, as I said, and, as I say, paying for them very honestly: for, as you know, Master Froth, I could not give you threepence again.

FROTH. No, indeed.

POMPEY. Very well: you being then, if you be remembred, cracking the stones of the foresaid prunes—

FROTH. Ay, so I did, indeed.

POMPEY. Why, very well: I telling you then, if you be remembred, that such a one and such a one were past cure of the thing you wot of, unless they kept very good diet, as I told you—

FROTH. All this is true.

POMPEY. Why, very well then—

ESCALUS. Come; you are a tedious fool: to the purpose . . . What was done to Elbow's wife, that he hath cause to complain of? Come me to what was done to her.

POMPEY. Sir, your honour cannot come to that yet.

ESCALUS. No, sir, nor I mean it not.

POMPEY. Sir, but you shall come to it, by your honour's leave . . . And, I beseech you, look into Master Froth here, sir—a man of fourscore pound a year; whose father died at Hallowmas . . . was't not at Hallowmas, Master Froth?

FROTH. All-hallond eve.

POMPEY. Why, very well: I hope here be truths . . . He, sir, sitting, as I say, in a lower chair, sir—'twas in the Bunch of Grapes, where, indeed, you have a delight to sit, have you not?

FROTH. I have so, because it is an open room, and good for winter.

POMPEY. Why, very well then: I hope here be truths—

ANGELO. This will last out a night in Russia,
When nights are longest there: I'll take my leave,
And leave you to the hearing of the cause;

Hoping you'll find good cause to whip them all.

ESCALUS. I think no less: good morrow to your lordship . . . Angelo goes out

Now, sir, come on: what was done to Elbow's wife, once more?

POMPEY. Once, sir? there was nothing done to her once.

ELBOW. I beseech you, sir, ask him what this man did to my wife.

POMPEY. I beseech your honour, ask me.

ESCALUS. Well, sir, what did this gentleman to her?

POMPEY. I beseech you, sir, look in this gentleman's face . . . Good Master Froth, look upon his honour; 'tis for a good purpose . . . Doth your honour mark his face?

ESCALUS. Ay, sir, very well.

POMPEY. Nay, I beseech you, mark it well.

ESCALUS. Well, I do so.

POMPEY. Doth your honour see any harm in his face?

ESCALUS. Why, no.

POMPEY. I'll be supposed upon a book, his face is the worst thing about him . . . Good then: if his face be the worst thing about him, how could Master Froth do the constable's wife any harm? I would know that of your honour.

ESCALUS. He's in the right. Constable, what say you to it?

ELBOW. First, an it like you, the house is a respected house; next, this is a respected fellow; and his mistress is a respected woman.

POMPEY. By this hand, sir, his wife is a more respected person than any of us all.

ELBOW. Varlet, thou liest; thou liest, wicked varlet: the time is yet to come that she was ever respected with man, woman, or child.

POMPEY. Sir, she was respected with him, before he married with her.

ESCALUS. Which is the wiser here? Justice or Iniquity? Is this true?

ELBOW. O thou caitiff . . . O thou varlet . . . O thou wicked Hannibal . . . I respected with her, before I was married to her! If ever I was respected with her, or she with me, let not your worship think me the poor duke's officer . . . Prove this, thou wicked Hannibal, or I'll have mine action of batt'ry on thee.

ESCALUS. If he took you a box o'th'ear, you might have your action of slander too.

ELBOW. Marry, I thank your good worship for it: what is't your worship's pleasure I shall do with this wicked caitiff?

ESCALUS. Truly, officer, because he hath some offences in him that thou wouldst discover if thou couldst, let him continue in his courses till thou know'st what they are.

ELBOW. Marry, I thank your worship for it . . . Thou seest, thou wicked varlet now, what's come upon thee! Thou art to continue now, thou varlet, thou art to continue.

ESCALUS. Where you were born, friend?

FROTH. Here in Vienna, sir.

ESCALUS. Are you of fourscore pounds a year?

FROTH. Yes, an't please you, sir.

ESCALUS. So . . . [to Pompey] What trade are you of, sir?

POMPEY. A tapster—a poor widow's tapster.

ESCALUS. Your mistress' name?

POMPEY. Mistress Overdone.

ESCALUS. Hath she had any more than one husband?

POMPEY. Nine, sir: Overdone by the last.

ESCALUS. Nine! Come hither to me, Master Froth . . . Master Froth, I would not have you acquainted with tapsters; they will draw you, Master Froth, and you will hang them . . . Get you gone, and let me hear no more of you.

FROTH. I thank your worship . . . For mine own part, I never come into any room in a taphouse, but I am drawn in.

ESCALUS. Well: no more of it, Master Froth: farewell . . . [Froth goes] Come you hither to me, Master Tapster: what's your name, Master Tapster?

POMPEY. Pompey.

ESCALUS. What else?

POMPEY. Bum, sir.

ESCALUS. Troth, and your bum is the greatest thing about you, so that, in the beastliest sense, you are Pompey the Great . . . Pompey, you are partly a bawd, Pompey—howsoever you colour it in being a tapster—are you not? Come, tell me true. It shall be the better for you.

POMPEY. Truly, sir, I am a poor fellow that would live.

ESCALUS. How would you live, Pompey? by being a bawd? What do you think of the trade, Pompey? is it a lawful trade?

POMPEY. If the law would allow it, sir.

ESCALUS. But the law will not allow it, Pompey; nor it shall not be allowed in Vienna.

POMPEY. Does your worship mean to geld and splay all the youth of the city?

ESCALUS. No, Pompey.

POMPEY. Truly, sir, in my poor opinion, they will to't then . . . If your worship will take order for the drabs and the knaves, you need not to fear the bawds.

ESCALUS. There is pretty orders beginning, I can tell you: it is but heading and hanging.

POMPEY. If you head and hang all that offend that way but for ten year together, you'll be glad to give out a commission for more heads . . . If this law hold in Vienna ten year, I'll rent the fairest house in it after threepence a bay: if you live to see this come to pass, say Pompey told you so.

ESCALUS. Thank you, good Pompey: and, in requital of your prophecy, hark you: I advise you let me not find you before me again upon any complaint whatsoever; no, not for dwelling where you do: if I do, Pompey, I shall beat you to your tent, and prove a shrewd Cæsar to you: in plain dealing, Pompey, I shall have you whipt; so, for this time, Pompey, fare you well.

POMPEY. I thank your worship for your good counsel; [aside] but I shall follow it as the flesh and fortune shall better determine . . .
Whip me? No, no, let carman whip his jade;
The valiant heart's not whipt out of his trade.
He goes

ESCALUS. Come hither to me, Master Elbow: come hither, master constable . . . How long have you been in this place of constable?

ELBOW. Seven year and a half, sir.

ESCALUS. I thought, by the readiness in the office, you had continued in it some time . . . You say, seven years together?

ELBOW. And a half, sir.
ESCALUS. Alas, it hath been great pains to you: they do you wrong to put you so oft upon't.... Are there not men in your ward sufficient to serve it?
ELBOW. Faith, sir, few of any wit in such matters: as they are chosen, they are glad to choose me for them; I do it for some piece of money, and go through with all.
ESCALUS. Look you bring me in the names of some six or seven, the most sufficient of your parish.
ELBOW. To your worship's house, sir?
ESCALUS. To my house: fare you well ... Elbow goes
What's o'clock, think you?
JUSTICE. Eleven, sir.
ESCALUS. I pray you home to dinner with me.
JUSTICE. I humbly thank you.
ESCALUS. It grieves me for the death of Claudio—
But there's no remedy.
JUSTICE. Lord Angelo is severe.
ESCALUS. It is but needful....
Mercy is not itself, that oft looks so,
Pardon is still the nurse of second woe ...
But yet, poor Claudio! There is no remedy....
Come, sir. They depart

Scene 2: The Provost enters with a servant

SERVANT. He's hearing of a cause; he will come straight.
I'll tell him of you. He goes
PROVOST. Pray you, do ... I'll know
His pleasure—may be he will relent ... Alas,
He hath but as offended in a dream.
All sects, all ages smack of this vice—and he
To die for't!

Angelo enters

ANGELO. Now, what's the matter, provost?
PROVOST. Is it your will Claudio shall die to-morrow?
ANGELO. Did I not tell thee yea? hadst thou not order?
Why dost thou ask again?
PROVOST. Lest I might be too rash:
Under your good correction, I have seen,
When, after execution, Judgement hath
Repented o'er his doom.
ANGELO. Go to; let that be mine.
Do you your office, or give up your place,
And you shall well be spared.
PROVOST. I crave your honour's pardon ...
What shall be done, sir, with the groaning Juliet?
She's very near her hour.
ANGELO. Dispose of her
To some more fitter place; and that with speed.

The servant comes to the door

SERVANT. Here is the sister of the man condemned
Desires access to you.
ANGELO. Hath he a sister?
PROVOST. Ay, my good lord—a very virtuous maid,
And to be shortly of a sisterhood,
If not already.
ANGELO. Well: let her be admitted.
The servant departs
See you, the fornicatress be removed.
Let her have needful, but not lavish, means.
There shall be order for't.

Enter Isabella and Lucio

PROVOST. Save your honour!
ANGELO. Stay a little while ... [to Isabella] Y'are welcome: what's your will?
ISABELLA. I am a woeful suitor to your honour,
Please but your honour hear me.
ANGELO. Well: what's your suit?
ISABELLA. There is a vice that most I do abhor,
And most desire should meet the blow of justice;
For which I would not plead, but that I must—
For which I must not plead, but that I am
At war 'twixt will and will not.
ANGELO. Well: the matter?
ISABELLA. I have a brother is condemned to die,
I do beseech you, let it be his fault,
And not my brother.
PROVOST. Heaven give thee moving graces!
ANGELO. Condemn the fault, and not the actor of it?
Why, every fault's condemned ere it be done:
Mine were the very cipher of a function,
To fine the faults whose fine stands in record,
And let go by the actor.
ISABELLA. O just, but severe law ...
I had a brother then; heaven keep your honour.
LUCIO. Give't not o'er so: to him again, entreat him,
Kneel down before him, hang upon his gown.
You are too cold: if you should need a pin,
You could not with more tame a tongue desire it:
To him, I say.
ISABELLA. Must he needs die?
ANGELO. Maiden, no remedy.
ISABELLA. Yes: I do think that you might pardon him,
And neither heaven nor man grieve at the mercy.
ANGELO. I will not do't.
ISABELLA. But can you, if you would?
ANGELO. Look what I will not, that I cannot do.
ISABELLA. But might you do't, and do the world no wrong,
If so your heart were touched with that remorse
As mine is to him!
ANGELO. He's sentenced—'tis too late.
LUCIO. You are too cold.
ISABELLA. Too late? why, no: I, that do speak a word,
May call it in again ... Well, believe this,
No ceremony that to great ones 'longs,
Not the king's crown ... nor the deputed sword,
The marshal's truncheon, nor the judge's robe,
Become them with one half so good a grace
As mercy does ...
If he had been as you, and you as he,
You would have slipped like him—but he, like you,
Would not have been so stern.
ANGELO. Pray you, be gone.
ISABELLA. I would to heaven I had your potency,
And you were Isabel ... should it then be thus?
No: I would tell what 'twere to be a judge,
And what a prisoner.
LUCIO. Ay, touch him: there's the vein.
ANGELO. Your brother is a forfeit of the law,
And you but waste your words.
ISABELLA. Alas, alas.
Why, all the souls that were were forfeit once,
And He that might the vantage best have took
Found out the remedy: how would you be,
If He, which is the top of judgement, should

But judge you, as you are? O, think on that,
And mercy then will breathe within your lips,
Like man new made.
ANGELO. Be you content—fair maid.
It is the law, not I, condemns your brother.
Were he my kinsman, brother, or my son,
It should be thus with him: he must die to-morrow.
ISABELLA. To-morrow? O, that's sudden.
Spare him, spare him . . .
He's not prepared for death . . . even for our kitchens
We kill the fowl of season . . . shall we serve heaven
With less respect than we do minister
To our gross selves? Good, good my lord, bethink you;
Who is it that hath died for this offence?
There's many have committed it.
LUCIO. Ay, well said.
ANGELO. The law hath not been dead, though it hath slept.
Those many had not dared to do that evil,
If that the first that did th'edict infringe
Had answered for his deed. . . . Now 'tis awake,
Takes note of what is done, and, like a prophet,
Looks in a glass that shows what future evils—
Either new or by remissness new-conceived,
And so in progress to be hatched and born—
Are now to have no súccessive degrees,
But, ere they live, to end.
ISABELLA. Yet show some pity.
ANGELO. I show it most of all when I show justice;
For then I pity those I do not know,
Which a dismissed offence would after gall,
And do him right that, answering one foul wrong,
Lives not to act another. . . . Be satisfied;
Your brother dies to-morrow; be content.
ISABELLA. So you must be the first that gives this sentence,
And he, that suffers . . . O, it is excellent
To have a giant's strength: but it is tyrannous
To use it like a giant.
LUCIO. That's well said.
ISABELLA. Could great men thunder
As Jove himself does, Jove would ne'er be quiet,
For every pelting, petty officer
Would use his heaven for thunder;
Nothing but thunder . . . Merciful heaven,
Thou rather with thy sharp and sulphurous bolt
Splits the unwedgeable and gnarléd oak
Than the soft myrtle: but man, proud man,
Dressed in a little brief authority,
Most ignorant of what he's most assured—
His glassy essence—like an angry ape,
Plays such fantastic tricks before high heaven
As make the angels weep; who, with our spleens,
Would all themselves laugh mortal.
LUCIO. O, to him, to him, wench: he will relent.
He's coming: I perceive't.
PROVOST. Pray heaven, she win him.
ISABELLA. We cannot weigh our brother with ourself.
Great men may jest with saints: 'tis wit in them,
But in the less foul profanation.
LUCIO. Thou'rt i'th' right, girl—more o'that.
ISABELLA. That in the captain's but a choleric word,
Which in the soldier is flat blasphemy.
LUCIO. Art avised o'that? more on't.
ANGELO. Why do you put these sayings upon me?
ISABELLA. Because authority, though it err like others,
Hath yet a kind of medicine in itself,
That skins the vice o'th' top; go to your bosom,
Knock there, and ask your heart what it doth know
That's like my brother's fault: if it confess
A natural guiltiness such as is his,
Let it not sound a thought upon your tongue
Against my brother's life.
ANGELO. She speaks, and 'tis such sense,
That my sense breeds with it . . . [aloud] Fare you well.
ISABELLA. Gentle my lord, turn back.
ANGELO. I will bethink me: come again to-morrow.
ISABELLA. Hark how I'll bribe you: good my lord, turn back.
ANGELO. How! bribe me!
ISABELLA. Ay, with such gifts that heaven shall share with you.
LUCIO. You had marred all else.
ISABELLA. Not with fond sicles of the tested gold,
Or stones whose rates are either rich or poor
As fancy values them: but with true prayers,
That shall be up at heaven and enter there
Ere sun-rise: prayers from preservéd souls,
From fasting maids whose minds are dedicate
To nothing temporal.
ANGELO. Well: come to me to-morrow.
LUCIO. Go to; 'tis well; away.
ISABELLA. Heaven keep your honour safe!
ANGELO. Amen. . . .
For I am that way going to temptation,
Where prayers cross.
ISABELLA. At what hour to-morrow
Shall I attend your lordship?
ANGELO. At any time 'fore-noon.
ISABELLA. 'Save your honour!
She goes out followed by Lucio and the Provost
ANGELO. From thee . . . even from thy virtue. . . .
What's this? what's this? is this her fault, or mine?
The tempter, or the tempted, who sins most?
Ha! not she . . . nor doth she tempt . . . but it is I
That, lying by the violet in the sun,
Do as the carrion does, not as the flower,
Corrupt with virtuous season . . . Can it be,
That modesty may more betray our sense
Than woman's lightness? Having waste ground enough,
Shall we desire to raze the sanctuary,
And pitch our evils there? O, fie, fie, fie . . .
What dost thou? or what art thou, Angelo?
Dost thou desire her foully for those things
That make her good? O, let her brother live:
Thieves for their robbery have authority,
When judges steal themselves . . . What, do I love her,
That I desire to hear her speak again?
And feast upon her eyes? What is't I dream on?
O cunning enemy, that, to catch a saint,
With saints dost bait thy hook: most dangerous
Is that temptation that doth goad us on
To sin, in loving virtue: never could the strumpet,
With all her double vigour, art, and nature,

Once stir my temper: but this virtuous maid
Subdues me quite ... Ever till now,
When men were fond, I smiled, and wond'red how.
He goes

Scene 3: Prison

Enter the Duke, disguised as a friar and the Provost

DUKE. Hail to you, provost—so, I think you are.
PROVOST. I am the provost ... What's your will, good friar?
DUKE. Bound by my charity and my blest order,
I come to visit the afflicted spirits
Here in the prison: do me the common right
To let me see them ... and to make me know
The nature of their crimes, that I may minister
To them accordingly.
PROVOST. I would do more than that, if more were needful.

Enter Juliet

Look, here comes one: a gentlewoman of mine,
Who, falling in the flaws of her own youth,
Hath blistered her report ... She is with child,
And he that got it, sentenced: a young man
More fit to do another such offence,
Than die for this.
DUKE. When must he die?
PROVOST. As I do think, to-morrow....
I have provided for you—stay awhile, To Juliet
And you shall be conducted.
DUKE. Repent you, fair one, of the sin you carry?
JULIET. I do; and bear the shame most patiently.
DUKE. I'll teach you how you shall arraign your conscience,
And try your penitence, if it be sound,
Or hollowly put on.
JULIET. I'll gladly learn.
DUKE. Love you the man that wronged you?
JULIET. Yes, as I love the woman that wronged him.
DUKE. So then it seems your most offenceful act
Was mutually committed?
JULIET. Mutually
DUKE. Then was your sin of heavier kind than his.
JULIET. I do confess it, and repent it, father.
DUKE. 'Tis meet so, daughter—but lest you do repent,
As that the sin hath brought you to this shame,
Which sorrow is always toward ourselves, not heaven;
Showing, we would not spare heaven as we love it,
But as we stand in fear—
JULIET. I do repent me, as it is an evil;
And take the shame with joy.
DUKE. There rest ...
Your partner, as I hear, must die to-morrow,
And I am going with instruction to him ...
Grace go with you. Benedicite! He goes
JULIET. Must die to-morrow! O, injurious law,
That respites me a life, whose very comfort
Is still a dying horror.
PROVOST. 'Tis pity of him.
They leave

Scene 4: A room in the house of Lord Angelo

Enter Angelo

ANGELO. When I would pray and think, I think and pray
To several subjects: heaven hath my empty words,
Whilst my invention, hearing not my tongue,
Anchors on Isabel: heaven in my mouth,
As if I did but only chew his name,
And in my heart the strong and swelling evil
Of my conception ... The state whereon I studied
Is like a good thing, being often read,
Grown sere and tedious: yea, my gravity,
Wherein (let no man hear me) I take pride,
Could I, with boot, change for an idle plume,
Which the air beats for vain ... O place, O form,
How often dost thou with thy case, thy habit,
Wrench awe from fools, and tie the wiser souls
To thy false seeming! Blood, thou art blood—
Let's write 'good Angel' on the devil's horn,
'Tis not the devil's crest.

A servant enters

How now, who's there?
SERVANT. One Isabel, a sister, desires access to you.
ANGELO. Teach her the way ... [the servant goes]
O heavens,
Why does my blood thus muster to my heart,
Making both it unable for itself,
And dispossessing all my other parts
Of necessary fitness?
So play the foolish throngs with one that swoons—
Come all to help him, and so stop the air
By which he should revive: and even so
The general, subject to a well-wished king,
Quit their own part, and in obsequious fondness
Crowd to his presence, where their untaught love
Must needs appear offence.

Isabella enters

How now, fair maid?
ISABELLA. I am come to know your pleasure.
ANGELO. That you might know it, would much better please me,
Than to demand what 'tis ... Your brother cannot live.
ISABELLA. Even so ... Heaven keep your honour.
ANGELO. Yet may he live awhile: and, it may be,
As long as you or I ... Yet he must die.
ISABELLA. Under your sentence?
ANGELO. Yea.
ISABELLA. When, I beseech you? that in his reprieve,
Longer or shorter, he may be so fitted
That his soul sicken not.
ANGELO. Ha! fie, these filthy vices: it were as good
To pardon him, that hath from nature stol'n
A man already made, as to remit
Their saucy sweetness, that do coin heaven's image,
In stamps that are forbid: 'tis all as easy
Falsely to take away a life true made,
As to put mettle in restrainéd mints,
To make a false one.
ISABELLA. 'Tis set down so in heaven, but not in earth.
ANGELO. Say you so? then I shall pose you quickly....
Which had you rather—that the most just law
Now took your brother's life, or to redeem him
Give up your body to such sweet uncleanness
As she that he hath stained?

ISABELLA. Sir, believe this,
I had rather give my body than my soul.
ANGELO. I talk not of your soul: our compelled sins
Stand more for number than accompt.
ISABELLA. How say you?
ANGELO. Nay, I'll not warrant that: for I can speak
Against the thing I say . . . Answer to this—
I (now the voice of the recorded law)
Pronounce a sentence on your brother's life:
Might there not be a charity in sin,
To save this brother's life?
ISABELLA. Please you to do't,
I'll take it as a peril to my soul,
It is no sin at all, but charity.
ANGELO. Pleased you to do't at peril of your soul,
Were equal poise of sin and charity.
ISABELLA. That I do beg his life, if it be sin,
Heaven let me bear it! You granting of my suit,
If that be sin, I'll make it my morn-prayer
To have it added to the faults of mine,
And nothing of your answer.
ANGELO. Nay, but hear me.
Your sense pursues not mine: either you are ignorant,
Or seem so, craftily; and that's not good.
ISABELLA. Let me be ignorant, and in nothing good,
But graciously to know I am no better.
ANGELO. Thus wisdom wishes to appear most bright,
When it doth tax itself: as these black masques
Proclaim an enshield beauty ten times louder
Than beauty could displayed . . . But mark me—
To be received plain, I'll speak more gross:
Your brother is to die.
ISABELLA. So.
ANGELO. And his offence is so, as it appears,
Accountant to the law upon that pain.
ISABELLA. True.
ANGELO. Admit no other way to save his life—
As I subscribe not that, nor any other,
But in the loose of question—that you, his sister,
Finding yourself desired of such a person,
Whose credit with the judge, or own great place,
Could fetch your brother from the manacles
Of the all-binding law: and that there were
No earthly mean to save him, but that either
You must lay down the treasures of your body
To this supposed, or else to let him suffer . . .
What would you do?
ISABELLA. As much for my poor brother, as myself . . .
That is: were I under the terms of death,
Th'impression of keen whips I'ld wear as rubies,
And strip myself to death, as to a bed
That long I have been sick for, ere I'ld yield
My body up to shame.
ANGELO. Then must your brother die.
ISABELLA. And 'twere the cheaper way:
Better it were, a brother died at once,
Than that a sister, by redeeming him,
Should die for ever.
ANGELO. Were not you then as cruel as the sentence
That you have slandered so?
ISABELLA. Ignomy in ransom and free pardon
Are of two houses: lawful mercy
Is nothing kin to foul redemption.
ANGELO. You seemed of late to make the law a tyrant,
And rather proved the sliding of your brother
A merriment than a vice.
ISABELLA. O, pardon me, my lord, it oft falls out,
To have what we would have, we speak not what we mean:
I something do excuse the thing I hate,
For his advantage that I dearly love.
ANGELO. We are all frail.
ISABELLA. Else let my brother die,
If not a fedary, but only he,
Owe and succeed thy weakness.
ANGELO. Nay, women are frail too.
ISABELLA. Ay, as the glasses where they view themselves,
Which are as easy broke as they make forms:
Women! help heaven; men their creation mar
In profiting by them . . . Nay, call us ten times frail,
For we are soft as our complexions are,
And credulous to false prints.
ANGELO. I think it well:
And from this testimony of your own sex—
Since I suppose we are made to be no stronger
Than faults may shake our frames—let me be bold;
I do arrest your words. . . . Be that you are,
That is, a woman; if you be more, you're none. . . .
If you be one (as you are well expressed
By all external warrants) show it now,
By putting on the destined livery.
ISABELLA. I have no tongue but one; gentle my lord,
Let me entreat you speak the former language.
ANGELO. Plainly conceive, I love you.
ISABELLA. My brother did love Juliet,
And you tell me that he shall die for't.
ANGELO. He shall not, Isabel, if you give me love.
ISABELLA. I know your virtue hath a licence in't,
Which seems a little fouler than it is,
To pluck on others.
ANGELO. Believe me, on mine honour,
My words express my purpose.
ISABELLA. Ha! little honour to be much believed,
And most pernicious purpose . . . Seeming, seeming. . . .
I will proclaim thee, Angelo—look for't!
Sign me a present pardon for my brother,
Or with an outstretched throat I'll tell the world aloud
What man thou art.
ANGELO. Who will believe thee, Isabel?
My unsoiled name, th'austereness of my life,
My vouch against you, and my place i'th' state,
Will so your accusation overweigh,
That you shall stifle in your own report,
And smell of calumny. . . . I have begun,
And now I give my sensual race the rein.
Fit thy consent to my sharp appetite,
Lay by all nicety and prolixious blushes
That banish what they sue for . . . redeem thy brother
By yielding up thy body to my will,
Or else he must not only die the death,
But thy unkindness shall his death draw out
To ling'ring sufferance . . . Answer me to-morrow,
Or, by the affection that now guides me most,
I'll prove a tyrant to him. . . . As for you,
Say what you can; my false o'erweighs your true.
He leaves her
ISABELLA. To whom should I complain? Did I tell this,

Who would believe me? O perilous mouths,
That bear in them one and the self-same tongue,
Either of condemnation or approof,
Bidding the law make curtsy to their will,
Hooking both right and wrong to th'appetite,
To follow as it draws.... I'll to my brother.
Though he hath fall'n by prompture of the blood,
Yet hath he in him such a mind of honour,
That had he twenty heads to tender down
On twenty bloody blocks, he'ld yield them up,
Before his sister should her body stoop
To such abhorred pollution....
Then Isabel live chaste, and brother die;
'More than our brother is our chastity....'
I'll tell him yet of Angelo's request,
And fit his mind to death, for his soul's rest.
She departs

ACT 3

Scene I: The prison

The disguised Duke, Claudio, and the Provost

DUKE. So then you hope of pardon from Lord Angelo?
CLAUDIO. The miserable have no other medicine
But only hope:
I 'have hope to live, and am prepared to die.
DUKE. Be absolute for death: either death or life
Shall thereby be the sweeter.... Reason thus with life:
If I do lose thee, I do lose a thing
That none but fools would keep: a breath thou art,
Servile to all the skyey influences,
That dost this habitation where thou keep'st
Hourly afflict: merely, thou art death's fool,
For him thou labour'st by thy flight to shun,
And yet runn'st toward him still.... Thou art not noble,
For all th'accommodations that thou bear'st,
Are nursed by baseness ... Thou'rt by no means valiant,
For thou dost fear the soft and tender fork
Of a poor worm: thy best of rest is sleep,
And that thou oft provok'st, yet grossly fear'st
Thy death, which is no more.... Thou art not thyself,
For thou exists on many a thousand grains
That issue out of dust.... Happy thou art not,
For what thou hast not, still thou striv'st to get,
And what thou hast, forget'st.... Thou art not certain,
For thy complexion shifts to strange effects,
After the moon ... If thou art rich, thou'rt poor,
For like an ass whose back with ingots bows,
Thou bear'st thy heavy riches but a journey,
And death unloads thee ... Friend hast thou none,
For thine own bowels, which do call thee sire,
The mere effusion of thy proper loins,
Do curse the gout, serpigo, and the rheum,
For ending thee no sooner.... Thou hast nor youth nor age,
But as it were an after-dinner's sleep,
Dreaming on both—for all thy blessèd youth
Becomes as agéd, and doth beg the alms
Of palsied eld: and when thou art old and rich,
Thou hast neither heat, affection, limb, nor beauty,
To make thy riches pleasant ... What's yet in this,
That bears the name of life? Yet in this life
Lie hid moe thousand deaths; yet death we fear,
That makes these odds all even.
CLAUDIO. I humbly thank you....
To sue to live, I find I seek to die—
And, seeking death, find life: let it come on.
A VOICE WITHOUT. What, ho! Peace here; grace and good company.
PROVOST. Who's there? come in, the wish deserves a welcome.

Isabella enters

DUKE. Dear sir, ere long I'll visit you again.
CLAUDIO. Most holy sir, I thank you.
ISABELLA. My business is a word or two with Claudio.
PROVOST. And very welcome ... Look, signior, here's your sister.
DUKE. Provost a word with you.
PROVOST. As many as you please.
DUKE. Bring me to hear them speak, where I may be concealed. The Duke and Provost withdraw
CLAUDIO. Now, sister, what's the comfort?
ISABELLA. Why,
As all comforts are: most good, most good indeed.
Lord Angelo, having affairs to heaven,
Intends you for his swift ambassador,
Where you shall be an everlasting leiger;
Therefore your best appointment make with speed—
To-morrow you set on.
CLAUDIO. Is there no remedy?
ISABELLA. None, but such remedy as, to save a head,
To cleave a heart in twain ...
CLAUDIO. But is there any?
ISABELLA. Yes, brother, you may live;
There is a devilish mercy in the judge,
If you'll implore it, that will free your life,
But fetter you till death.
CLAUDIO. Perpetual durance?
ISABELLA. Ay, just—perpetual durance, a restraint,
Though all the world's vastidity you had,
To a determined scope.
CLAUDIO. But in what nature?
ISABELLA. In such a one as, you consenting to't,
Would bark your honour from that trunk you bear,
And leave you naked.
CLAUDIO. Let me know the point.
ISABELLA. O, I do fear thee Claudio, and I quake,
Lest thou a feverous life shouldst entertain,
And six or seven winters more respect
Than a perpetual honour.... Dar'st thou die?
The sense of death is most in apprehension,
And the poor beetle that we tread upon
In corporal sufferance finds a pang as great
As when a giant dies.
CLAUDIO. Why give you me this shame?
Think you I can a resolution fetch
From flowery tenderness? If I must die,
I will encounter darkness as a bride,
And hug it in mine arms.
ISABELLA. There spake my brother: there my father's grave
Did utter forth a voice.... Yes, thou must die:
Thou art too noble to conserve a life
In base appliances.... This outward-sainted deputy,

Whose settled visage and deliberate word
Nips youth i'th' head, and follies doth enew,
As falcon doth the fowl, is yet a devil:
His filth within being cast, he would appear
A pond as deep as hell.
CLAUDIO. The prenzie Angelo!
ISABELLA. O, 'tis the cunning livery of hell,
The damned'st body to invest and cover
In prenzie guards . . . Dost thou think, Claudio—
If I would yield him my virginity,
Thou mightst be freed!
CLAUDIO. O, heavens! it cannot be.
ISABELLA. Yes, he would give't thee; from this rank offence
So to offend him still. . . . This night's the time
That I should do what I abhor to name,
Or else thou diest to-morrow.
CLAUDIO. Thou shalt not do't.
ISABELLA. O, were it but my life,
I'd throw it down for your deliverance
As frankly as a pin.
CLAUDIO. Thanks, dear Isabel.
ISABELLA. Be ready, Claudio, for your death to-morrow.
CLAUDIO. Yes. . . . Has he affections in him,
That thus can make him bite the law by th' nose,
When he would force it? Sure it is no sin—
Or of the deadly seven it is the least.
ISABELLA. Which is the least?
CLAUDIO. If it were damnable, he being so wise,
Why would he for the momentary trick
Be perdurably fined? O Isabel!
ISABELLA. What says my brother?
CLAUDIO. Death is a fearful thing.
ISABELLA. And shamèd life a hateful.
CLAUDIO. Ay, but to die, and go we know not where,
To lie in cold obstruction, and to rot,
This sensible warm motion—to become
A kneaded clod; and the delighted spirit
To bathe in fiery floods, or to reside
In thrilling region of thick-ribbèd ice,
To be imprisoned in the viewless winds
And blown with restless violence round about
The pendent world . . . or to be worse than worst
Of those that lawless and incertain thoughts
Imagine howling—'tis too horrible. . . .
The weariest and most loathèd worldly life
That age, ache, penury, and imprisonment
Can lay on nature—is a paradise
To what we fear of death.
ISABELLA. Alas! alas!
CLAUDIO. Sweet sister, let me live. . . .
What sin you do, to save a brother's life,
Nature dispenses with the deed so far,
That it becomes a virtue.
ISABELLA. O, you beast,
O, faithless coward, O, dishonest wretch,
Wilt thou be made a man out of my vice?
Is't not a kind of incest, to take life
From thine own sister's shame? What should I think?
Heaven shield my mother played my father fair . . .
For such a warpèd slip of wilderness
Ne'er issued from his blood. . . . Take my defiance,
Die, perish . . . Might but my bending down
Reprieve thee from thy fate, it should proceed. . . .
I'll pray a thousand prayers for thy death,
No word to save thee.
CLAUDIO. Nay, hear me, Isabel.
ISABELLA. O, fie, fie, fie . . .
Thy sin's not accidental, but a trade;
Mercy to thee would prove itself a bawd.
'Tis best that thou diest quickly.
CLAUDIO. O hear me, Isabella.

The Duke comes forward

DUKE. Vouchsafe a word, young sister, but one word.
ISABELLA. What is your will?

DUKE. Might you dispense with your leisure, I would by and by have some speech with you: the satisfaction I would require is likewise your own benefit.

ISABELLA. I have no superfluous leisure. My stay must be stolen out of other affairs: but I will attend you a while.

DUKE [takes Claudio aside]. Son, I have overheard what hath passed between you and your sister. . . . Angelo had never the purpose to corrupt her; only he hath made an assay of her virtue, to practise his judgement with the disposition of natures. . . . She, having the truth of honour in her, hath made him that gracious denial which he is most glad to receive: I am confessor to Angelo, and I know this to be true. Therefore prepare yourself to death: do not satisfy your resolution with hopes that are fallible. To-morrow you must die—go to your knees, and make ready.

CLAUDIO. Let me ask my sister pardon. I am so out of love with life, that I will sue to be rid of it.

DUKE. Hold you there: farewell . . .

Claudio goes; the Provost enters

Provost, a word with you.

PROVOST. What's your will, father?

DUKE. That now you are come, you will be gone: leave me awhile with the maid. My mind promises with my habit, no loss shall touch her by my company.

PROVOST. In good time. He goes

DUKE [turns to Isabella]. The hand that hath made you fair hath made you good: the goodness that is cheap in beauty makes beauty brief in goodness; but grace, being the soul of your complexion, shall keep the body of it ever fair . . . The assault that Angelo hath made to you, fortune hath conveyed to my understanding; and, but that frailty hath examples for his falling, I should wonder at Angelo . . . How will you do to content this substitute, and to save your brother?

ISABELLA. I am now going to resolve him: I had rather my brother die by the law than my son should be unlawfully born. . . . But, O, how much is the good duke deceived in Angelo: if ever he return, and I can speak to him, I will open my lips in vain, or discover his government.

DUKE. That shall not be much amiss: yet, as the matter now stands, he will avoid your accusation: he made trial of you only. . . . Therefore fasten your ear on my advisings. To the love I have in doing good a remedy presents itself. . . . I do make myself believe that you may most uprighteously do a poor wronged lady a merited benefit; redeem your brother from the angry law; do no stain to your own gracious person; and much please the absent duke, if peradventure he shall ever return to have hearing of this business.

ISABELLA. Let me hear you speak farther; I have spirit to do any thing that appears not foul in the truth of my spirit.

DUKE. Virtue is bold, and goodness never fearful . . . Have you not heard speak of Mariana, the sister of Frederick, the great soldier who miscarried at sea?

ISABELLA. I have heard of the lady, and good words went with her name.

DUKE. She should this Angelo have married: was affianced to her by oath, and the nuptial appointed: between which time of the contract and limit of the solemnity, her brother Frederick was wrecked at sea, having in that perished vessel the dowry of his sister . . . But mark how heavily this befell to the poor gentlewoman. There she lost a noble and renowned brother, in his love toward her ever most kind and natural: with him the portion and sinew of her fortune, her marriage-dowry: with both, her combinate-husband, this well-seeming Angelo.

ISABELLA. Can this be so? Did Angelo so leave her?

DUKE. Left her in her tears, and dried not one of them with his comfort: swallowed his vows whole, pretending in her discoveries of dishonour: in few, bestowed her on her own lamentation, which she yet wears for his sake: and he, a marble to her tears, is washed with them, but relents not.

ISABELLA. What a merit were it in death to take this poor maid from the world! What corruption in this life, that it will let this man live! But how out of this can she avail?

DUKE. It is a rupture that you may easily heal: and the cure of it not only saves your brother, but keeps you from dishonour in doing it.

ISABELLA. Show me how, good father.

DUKE. This forenamed maid hath yet in her the continuance of her first affection: his unjust unkindness, that in all reason should have quenched her love, hath, like an impediment in the current, made it more violent and unruly . . . Go you to Angelo, answer his requiring with a plausible obedience, agree with his demands to the point: only refer yourself to this advantage; first, that your stay with him may not be long; that the time may have all shadow and silence in it; and the place answer to convenience . . . This being granted in course, and now follows all: we shall advise this wronged maid to stead up your appointment, go in your place: if the encounter acknowledge itself hereafter, it may compel him to her recompense; and here, by this, is your brother saved, your honour untainted, the poor Mariana advantaged, and the corrupt deputy scaled. . . . The maid will I frame and make fit for his attempt. . . . If you think well to carry this as you may, the doubleness of the benefit defends the deceit from reproof. . . . What think you of it?

ISABELLA. The image of it gives me content already, and I trust it will grow to a most prosperous perfection.

DUKE. It lies much in your holding up . . . Haste you speedily to Angelo—if for this night he entreat you to his bed, give him promise of satisfaction . . . I will presently to Saint Luke's; there, at the moated grange, resides this dejected Mariana; at that place call upon me—and dispatch with Angelo, that it may be quickly.

ISABELLA. I thank you for this comfort: fare you well, good father. She goes out

Scene 2

Elbow enters with officers and Pompey

ELBOW. Nay, if there be no remedy for it, but that you will needs buy and sell men and women like beasts, we shall have all the world drink brown and white bastard.

DUKE. O, heavens, what stuff is here?

POMPEY. 'Twas never merry world since, of two usuries, the merriest was put down, and the worser allowed by order of law a furred gown to keep him warm; and furred with fox on lamb-skins too, to signify that craft, being richer than innocency, stands for the facing.

ELBOW. Come your way, sir . . . Bless you, good father friar.

DUKE. And you, good brother father . . . What offence
Hath this man made you, sir?

ELBOW. Marry, sir, he hath offended the law; and, sir, we take him to be a thief too, sir . . . for we have found upon him, sir, a strange picklock, which we have sent to the deputy.

DUKE. Fie, sirrah, a bawd, a wicked bawd!
The evil that thou causest to be done,
That is thy means to live. . . . Do thou but think
What 'tis to cram a maw or clothe a back
From such a filthy vice: say to thyself,
'From their abominable and beastly touches
I drink, I eat, array myself, and live' . . .
Canst thou believe thy living is a life,
So stinkingly depending? Go mend, go mend.

POMPEY. Indeed, it does stink in some sort, sir; but yet, sir, I would prove—

DUKE. Nay, if the devil have given thee proofs for sin,
Thou wilt prove his. . . . Take him to prison, officer:
Correction and instruction must both work,
Ere this rude beast will profit.

ELBOW. He must before the deputy, sir—he has given him warning: the deputy cannot abide a whoremaster: if he be a whoremonger, and comes before him, he were as good go a mile on his errand.

DUKE. That we were all, as some would seem to be,
Free from our faults, as faults from seeming free!

Lucio enters

ELBOW. His neck will come to your waist—a cord, sir.

POMPEY. I spy comfort, I cry, bail . . . Here's a gentleman and a friend of mine.

LUCIO. How now, noble Pompey? What, at the wheels of Cæsar? Art thou led in triumph? What, is there none of Pygmalion's images, newly made woman, to be had now, for putting the hand in the pocket and extracting it clutched? What reply, ha? What say'st thou to this tune, matter, and method? Is't not drowned i'th' last rain, ha? What say'st thou, trot? Is the world as it was, man? Which is the way? Is it sad, and few words? Or how? The trick of it?

DUKE. Still thus, and thus: still worse!

LUCIO. How doth my dear morsel, thy mistress? Procures she still, ha?

POMPEY. Troth, sir, she hath eaten up all her beef, and she is herself in the tub.

LUCIO. Why, 'tis good: it is the right of it: it must be so. . . . Ever your fresh whore, and your powdered bawd—an unshunned consequence, it must be so. . . . Are going to prison, Pompey?

POMPEY. Yes, faith, sir.

LUCIO. Why, 'tis not amiss, Pompey: farewell: go, say I sent thee thither . . . For debt, Pompey, or how?

ELBOW. For being a bawd, for being a bawd.

LUCIO. Well, then imprison him: if imprisonment be the due of a bawd, why, 'tis his right. . . . Bawd is he, doubtless, and of antiquity too: bawd-born. . . . Farewell, good Pompey: commend me to the prison, Pompey. You will turn good husband now, Pompey—you will keep the house.

POMPEY. I hope, sir, your good worship will be my bail?

LUCIO. No, indeed, will I not, Pompey—it is not the wear . . . I will pray, Pompey, to increase your bondage: if you take it not patiently—why, your mettle is the more . . . Adieu, trusty Pompey. . . . Bless you, friar.

DUKE. And you.

LUCIO. Does Bridget paint still, Pompey, ha?

ELBOW. Come your ways, sir—come.

POMPEY. You will not bail me then, sir?

LUCIO. Then, Pompey, nor now . . . What news abroad, friar? what news?

ELBOW. Come your ways, sir—come.

LUCIO. Go to kennel, Pompey, go . . .

Elbow, officers and Pompey go

What news, friar, of the duke?

DUKE. I know none: can you tell me of any?

LUCIO. Some say he is with the Emperor of Russia: other some, he is in Rome: but where is he, think you?

DUKE. I know not where: but wheresoever, I wish him well.

LUCIO. It was a mad fantastical trick of him to steal from the state, and usurp the beggary he was never born to . . . Lord Angelo dukes it well in his absence: he puts transgression to't.

DUKE. He does well in't.

LUCIO. A little more lenity to lechery would do no harm in him: something too crabbed that way, friar.

DUKE. It is too general a vice, and severity must cure it.

LUCIO. Yes, in good sooth, the vice is of a great kindred; it is well allied—but it is impossible to extirp it quite, friar, till eating and drinking be put down. They say this Angelo was not made by man and woman, after the downright way of creation: is it true, think you?

DUKE. How should he be made then?

LUCIO. Some report a sea-maid spawned him. . . . some, that he was begot between two stock-fishes. . . . But it is certain, that when he makes water, his urine is congealed ice—that I know to be true: and he is a motion generative—that's infallible.

DUKE. You are pleasant, sir, and speak apace.

LUCIO. Why, what a ruthless thing is this in him, for the rebellion of a codpiece to take away the life of a man? Would the duke that is absent have done this? Ere he would have hanged a man for the getting a hundred bastards, he would have paid for the nursing a thousand. . . . He had some feeling of the sport—he knew the service, and that instructed him to mercy.

DUKE. I never heard the absent duke much detected for women—he was not inclined that way.

LUCIO. O, sir, you are deceived.

DUKE. 'Tis not possible.

LUCIO. Who? not the duke? Yes, your beggar of fifty . . . and his use was to put a ducat in her clack-dish; the duke had crotchets in him. . . . He would be drunk too—that let me inform you.

DUKE. You do him wrong, surely.

LUCIO. Sir, I was an inward of his . . . A shy fellow was the duke—and I believe I know the cause of his withdrawing.

DUKE. What, I prithee, might be the cause?

LUCIO. No, pardon: 'tis a secret must be locked within the teeth and the lips: but this I can let you understand, the greater file of the subject held the duke to be wise.

DUKE. Wise! why, no question but he was.

LUCIO. A very superficial, ignorant, unweighing fellow.

DUKE. Either this is envy in you, folly, or mistaking: the very stream of his life and the business he hath helmed must, upon a warranted need, give him a better proclamation. . . . Let him be but testimonied in his own bringings-forth, and he shall appear to the envious a scholar, a statesman and a soldier . . . Therefore you speak unskilfully: or, if your knowledge be more, it is much darkened in your malice.

LUCIO. Sir, I know him, and I love him.

DUKE. Love talks with better knowledge, and knowledge with dearer love.

LUCIO. Come, sir, I know what I know.

DUKE. I can hardly believe that, since you know not what you speak. . . . But, if ever the duke return, as our prayers are he may, let me desire you to make your answer before him: if it be honest you have spoke, you have courage to maintain it; I am bound to call upon you, and I pray you your name?

LUCIO. Sir, my name is Lucio, well known to the duke.

DUKE. He shall know you better, sir, if I may live to report you.

LUCIO. I fear you not.

DUKE. O, you hope the duke will return no more: or you imagine me too unhurtful an opposite . . . But, indeed, I can do you little harm: you'll forswear this again!

LUCIO. I'll be hanged first: thou art deceived in me, friar. . . . But no more of this: canst thou tell if Claudio die to-morrow or no?

DUKE. Why should he die, sir?

LUCIO. Why? for filling a bottle with a tun-dish . . . I would the duke we talk of were returned again: this ungenitured agent will unpeople the province with continency. . . Sparrows must not build in his house-eaves, because they are lecherous . . . The duke yet would have dark deeds darkly answered—he would never bring them to light: would he were returned. . . . Marry, this Claudio is condemned for untrussing. . . . Farewell, good friar. I prithee, pray for me . . . The duke, I say to thee again, would eat mutton on Fridays . . . He's now past it, yet (and I say to thee now), he would mouth with a beggar, though she smelt brown bread and garlic: say that I said so . . . Farewell. He goes

DUKE. No might nor greatness in mortality
Can censure 'scape: back-wounding calumny
The whitest virtue strikes.... What king so strong
Can tie the gall up in the slanderous tongue?
But who comes here?

Enter Escalus and the Provost, with officers guarding Mistress Overdone

ESCALUS. Go, away with her to prison.

OVERDONE. Good my lord, be good to me—your honour is accounted a merciful man ... good my lord.

ESCALUS. Double and treble admonition, and still forfeit in the same kind? This would make mercy swear and play the tyrant.

PROVOST. A bawd of eleven years' continuance, may it please your honour.

OVERDONE. My lord, this is one Lucio's information against me. Mistress Kate Keepdown was with child by him in the duke's time—he promised her marriage: his child is a year and a quarter old, come Philip and Jacob: I have kept it myself; and see how he goes about to abuse me.

ESCALUS. That fellow is a fellow of much license: let him be called before us.... Away with her to prison: go to, no more words.... [the officers take her away] Provost, my brother Angelo will not be altered, Claudio must die to-morrow: let him be furnished with divines, and have all charitable preparation.... If my brother wrought by my pity, it should not be so with him.

PROVOST. So please you, this friar hath been with him, and advised him for th'entertainment of death.

ESCALUS. Good even, good father.

DUKE. Bliss and goodness on you!

ESCALUS. Of whence are you?

DUKE. Not of this country, though my chance is now
To use it for my time: I am a brother
Of gracious order, late come from the See,
In special business from his Holiness.

ESCALUS. What news abroad i'th' world?

DUKE. None; but that there is so great a fever on goodness, that the dissolution of it must cure it. Novelty is only in request, and it is as dangerous to be aged in any kind of course, as it is virtuous to be inconstant in any undertaking.... There is scarce truth enough alive to make societies secure, but security enough to make fellowships accursed: much upon this riddle runs the wisdom of the world ... This news is old enough, yet it is every day's news.... I pray you, sir, of what disposition was the duke?

ESCALUS. One, that, above all other strifes, contended especially to know himself.

DUKE. What pleasure was he given to?

ESCALUS. Rather rejoicing to see another merry, than merry at any thing which professed to make him rejoice: a gentleman of all temperance.... But leave we him to his events, with a prayer they may prove prosperous, and let me desire to know how you find Claudio prepared. I am made to understand that you have lent him visitation.

DUKE. He professes to have received no sinister measure from his judge, but most willingly humbles himself to the determination of justice: yet had he framed to himself, by the instruction of his frailty, many deceiving promises of life, which I, by my good leisure, have discredited to him, and now is he resolved to die.

ESCALUS. You have paid the heavens your function, and the prisoner the very debt of your calling.... I have laboured for the poor gentleman to the extremest shore of my modesty—but my brother-justice have I found so severe, that he hath forced me to tell him he is indeed Justice.

DUKE. If his own life answer the straitness of his proceeding, it shall become him well: wherein if he chance to fail, he hath sentenced himself.

ESCALUS. I am going to visit the prisoner. Fare you well.

DUKE. Peace be with you....

Escalus and the Provost go

He, who the sword of heaven will bear,
Should be as holy as severe:
Pattern in himself to know,
Grace to stand, an virtue go:
More nor less to others paying,
Than by self-offences weighing....
Shame to him whose cruel striking
Kills for faults of his own liking:
Twice treble shame on Angelo,
To weed my vice and let his grow....
O, what may man within him hide,
Though angel on the outward side!
How may likeness, made in crimes,
Making practice on the times,
To draw with idle spiders' strings
Most ponderous and substantial things!
Craft against vice I must apply....
With Angelo to-night shall lie
His old betrothéd, but despiséd:
So disguise shall, by th' disguiséd,
Pay with falsehood false exacting,
And perform an old contracting. He goes

ACT 4

Scene 1: The moated grange

Mariana and a page

The boy sings

Take, oh take those lips away,
  That so sweetly were forsworn,
And those eyes ... the break of day,
  Lights that do mislead the morn;
But my kisses bring again, bring again,
Seals of love, but sealed in vain, sealed in vain.

The disguised Duke enters

MARIANA. Break off thy song, and haste thee quick away.
Here comes a man of comfort, whose advice
Hath often stilled my brawling discontent....
The boy goes
I cry you mercy, sir, and well could wish
You had not found me here so musical....
Let me excuse me, and believe me so,
My mirth it much displeased, but pleased my woe.

DUKE. 'Tis good; though music oft hath such a charm
To make a bad good, and good provoke to harm....
I pray you tell me, hath any body inquired for me

here to-day? much upon this time have I promised here to meet.

MARIANA. You have not been inquired after: I have sat here all day.

Isabella approaches

DUKE. I do constantly believe you . . . The time is come, even now. . . . I shall crave your forbearance a little—may be I will call upon you anon, for some advantage to yourself.

MARIANA. I am always bound to you. Mariana goes

DUKE. Very well met, and well come . . .
What is the news from this good deputy?
ISABELLA. He hath a garden circummured with brick,
Whose western side is with a vineyard backed;
And to that vineyard is a planchéd gate,
That makes his opening with this bigger key:
This other doth command a little door,
Which from the vineyard to the garden leads—
There have I made my promise
Upon the heavy middle of the night
To call upon him.
DUKE. But shall you on your knowledge find this way?
ISABELLA. I have ta'en a due and wary note upon't.
With whispering and most guilty diligence,
In action all of precept he did show me
The way twice o'er.
DUKE. Are there no other tokens
Between you 'greed concerning her observance?
ISABELLA. No: none, but only a repair i'th' dark,
And that I have possessed him my most stay
Can be but brief: for I have made him know
I have a servant comes with me along,
That stays upon me; whose persuasion is
I come about my brother.
DUKE. 'Tis well borne up. . . .
I have not yet made known to Mariana
A word of this . . . What ho, within! come forth!

Mariana returns

I pray you, be acquainted with this maid—
She comes to do you good.
ISABELLA. I do desire the like.
DUKE. Do you persuade yourself that I respect you?

MARIANA. Good friar, I know you do, and have found it.

DUKE. Take then this your companion by the hand,
Who hath a story ready for your ear:
I shall attend your leisure, but make haste—
The vaporous night approaches.
MARIANA. Will't please you walk aside?
They withdraw
DUKE. O place and greatness . . . millions of false eyes
Are stuck upon thee: volumes of report
Run with these false and most contrarious quests
Upon thy doings: thousand escapes of wit
Make thee the father of their idle dream,
And rack thee in their fancies. . . .

Mariana and Isabella return

Welcome, how agreed?
ISABELLA. She'll take the enterprise upon her, father,
If you advise it.
DUKE. It is not my consent,
But my entreaty too.
ISABELLA. Little have you to say
When you depart from him, but, soft and low,
'Remember now my brother.'
MARIANA. Fear me not.
DUKE. Nor, gentle daughter, fear you not at all:
He is your husband on a pre-contráct:
To bring you thus together 'tis no sin,
Sith that the justice of your title to him
Doth flourish the deceit. . . . Come, let us go;
Our corn's to reap, for yet our tilth's to sow.
They depart

Scene 2: The prison

The Provost enters followed by Pompey

PROVOST. Come hither, sirrah; can you cut off a man's head?

POMPEY. If the man be a bachelor, sir, I can: but if he be a married man, he's his wife's head, and I can never cut off a woman's head.

PROVOST. Come, sir, leave me your snatches, and yield me a direct answer. . . . To-morrow morning are to die Claudio and Barnardine: here is in our prison a common executioner, who in his office lacks a helper. If you will take it on you to assist him, it shall redeem you from your gyves: if not, you shall have your full time of imprisonment, and your deliverance with an unpitied whipping; for you have been a notorious bawd.

POMPEY. Sir, I have been an unlawful bawd, time out of mind, but yet I will be content to be a lawful hangman . . . I would be glad to receive some instruction from my fellow partner.

PROVOST. What ho! Abhorson . . . Where's Abhorson, there?

Abhorson comes in

ABHORSON. Do you call, sir?

PROVOST. Sirrah, here's a fellow will help you to-morrow in your execution: if you think it meet, compound with him by the year, and let him abide here with you—if not, use him for the present, and dismiss him. He cannot plead his estimation with you: he hath been a bawd.

ABHORSON. A bawd, sir? Fie upon him, he will discredit our mystery.

PROVOST. Go to, sir, you weigh equally: a feather will turn the scale. He goes out

POMPEY. Pray, sir, by your good favour . . . for surely, sir, a good favour you have, but that you have a hanging look . . . do you call, sir, your occupation a mystery?

ABHORSON. Ay sir, a mystery.

POMPEY. Painting, sir, I have heard say, is a mystery; and your whores, sir, being members of my occupation, using painting, do prove my occupation a mystery: but what mystery there should be in hanging, if I should be hanged, I cannot imagine.

ABHORSON. Sir, it is a mystery.

POMPEY. Proof?

ABHORSON. Every true man's apparel fits your thief: if it be too little for your thief, your true man thinks it big enough; if it be too big for your thief, your thief thinks it little enough: so every true man's apparel fits your thief.

The Provost returns

PROVOST. Are you agreed?
POMPEY. Sir, I will serve him: for I do find your hangman is a more penitent trade than your bawd: he doth oftener ask forgiveness.
PROVOST. You, sirrah, provide your block and your axe to-morrow, four o'clock.
ABHORSON. Come on, bawd, I will instruct thee in my trade: follow.
POMPEY. I do desire to learn, sir: and, I hope, if you have occasion to use me for your own turn, you shall find me yare.... for, truly sir, for your kindness, I owe you a good turn.
PROVOST. Call hither Barnardine and Claudio ...
Pompey and Abhorson go out
Th'one has my pity; not a jot the other,
Being a murderer, though he were my brother.

Claudio enters

Look, here's the warrant, Claudio, for thy death.
'Tis now dead midnight, and by eight to-morrow
Thou must be made immortal.... Where's Barnardine?
CLAUDIO. As fast locked up in sleep, as guiltless labour,
When it lies starkly in the traveller's bones.
He will not wake.
PROVOST. Who can do good on him?
Well, go, prepare yourself.... Knocking without
But hark, what noise?
Heaven give your spirits comfort ... Claudio goes
By and by!
I hope it is some pardon, or reprieve,
For the most gentle Claudio....

The disguised Duke enters

Welcome, father
DUKE. The best and wholesom'st spirits of the night
Envelop you, good provost ... Who called here of late?
PROVOST. None, since the curfew rung.
DUKE. Not Isabel?
PROVOST. No.
DUKE. They will then, ere't be long.
PROVOST. What comfort is for Claudio?
DUKE. There's some in hope.
PROVOST. It is a bitter deputy.
DUKE. Not so, not so: his life is paralleled
Even with the stroke and line of his great justice:
He doth with holy abstinence subdue
That in himself which he spurs on his power
To qualify in others: were he mealed with that
Which he corrects, then were he tyrannous—
But this being so, he's just.... Now are they come....

More knocking; the Provost goes within

This is a gentle provost. Seldom, when
The steeléd gaoler is the friend of men ...
The knocking grows louder
How now! What noise? That spirit's possessed with haste,
That wounds the resisting postern with these strokes. The Provost returns
PROVOST. There he must stay until the officer
Arise to let him in: he is called up.
DUKE. Have you no countermand for Claudio yet,
But he must die to-morrow?
PROVOST. None, sir, none.
DUKE. As near the dawning, provost, as it is,
You shall hear more ere morning.
PROVOST. Happily
You something know: yet I believe there comes
No countermand: no such example have we ...
Besides, upon the very siege of justice,
Lord Angelo hath to the public ear
Professed the contrary.

A messenger enters

This is his lordship's man.
DUKE. And here comes Claudio's pardon.
MESSENGER [delivers a letter]. My lord hath sent you this note, and by me this further charge; that you swerve not from the smallest article of it, neither in time, matter, or any other circumstance.... Good morrow: for, as I take it, it is almost day.
He goes
PROVOST. I shall obey him.
DUKE. This is his pardon, purchased by such sin
For which the pardoner himself is in:
Hence that offence his quick celerity,
When it is borne in high authority....
When vice makes mercy, mercy's so extended,
That for the fault's love is th'offender friended....
Now, sir, what news?
PROVOST. I told you ... Lord Angelo, belike thinking me remiss in mine office, awakens me with this unwonted putting on—methinks, strangely ... for he hath not used it before.
DUKE. Pray you, let's hear.
PROVOST [reads]. 'Whatsoever you may hear to the contrary, let Claudio be executed by four of the clock, and in the afternoon Barnardine: for my better satisfaction, let me have Claudio's head sent me by five.... Let this be duly performed, with a thought that more depends on it than we must yet deliver.... Thus fail not to do your office, as you will answer it at your peril.'
What say you to this, sir?
DUKE. What is that Barnardine, who is to be executed in th'afternoon?
PROVOST. A Bohemian born: but here nursed up and bred—
One that is a prisoner nine years old.
DUKE. How came it that the absent duke had not either delivered him to his liberty or executed him? I have heard it was ever his manner to do so.
PROVOST. His friends still wrought reprieves for him: and, indeed, his fact, till now in the government of Lord Angelo, came not to an undoubtful proof.
DUKE. It is now apparent?
PROVOST. Most manifest, and not denied by himself.
DUKE. Hath he borne himself penitently in prison? How seems he to be touched?
PROVOST. A man that apprehends death no more dreadfully but as a drunken sleep—careless, reckless, and fearless of what's past, present, or to come: insensible of mortality, and desperately mortal.
DUKE. He wants advice.
PROVOST. He will hear none: he hath evermore had the liberty of the prison: give him leave to escape hence, he would not.... Drunk many times a day, if not many days entirely drunk.... We have very oft awaked him, as if to carry him to execution, and showed him a seeming warrant for it—it hath not moved him at all.

DUKE. More of him anon . . . There is written in your brow, provost, honesty and constancy; if I read it not truly, my ancient skill beguiles me: but in the boldness of my cunning, I will lay myself in hazard . . . Claudio, whom here you have warrant to execute, is no greater forfeit to the law than Angelo who hath sentenced him. . . . To make you understand this in a manifested effect, I crave but four days' respite: for the which you are to do me both a present, and a dangerous, courtesy.

PROVOST. Pray, sir, in what?

DUKE. In the delaying death.

PROVOST. Alack, how may I do it, having the hour limited, and an express command, under penalty, to deliver his head in the view of Angelo? I may make my case as Claudio's, to cross this in the smallest.

DUKE. By the vow of mine order, I warrant you.
If my instructions may be your guide,
Let this Barnardine be this morning executed,
And his head borne to Angelo.

PROVOST. Angelo hath seen them both, and will discover the favour.

DUKE. O, death's a great disguiser, and you may add to it . . . Shave the head, and tie the beard, and say it was the desire of the penitent to be so bared before his death: you know the course is common. . . . If any thing fall to you upon this more than thanks and good fortune, by the saint whom I profess, I will plead against it with my life.

PROVOST. Pardon me, good father—it is against my oath.

DUKE. Were you sworn to the duke, or to the deputy?

PROVOST. To him, and to his substitutes.

DUKE. You will think you have made no offence, if the duke avouch the justice of your dealing?

PROVOST. But what likelihood is in that?

DUKE. Not a resemblance, but a certainty; yet since I see you fearful, that neither my coat, integrity, nor persuasion can with ease attempt you, I will go further than I meant, to pluck all fears out of you. . . . Look you, sir, here is the hand and seal of the duke: you know the character, I doubt not, and the signet is not strange to you.

PROVOST. I know them both.

DUKE. The contents of this is the return of the duke; you shall anon over-read it at your pleasure: where you shall find within these two days he will be here. . . . This is a thing that Angelo knows not, for he this very day receives letters of strange tenour—perchance of the duke's death, perchance entering into some monastery, but by chance nothing of what is writ. . . . Look, th'unfolding star calls up the shepherd . . . Put not yourself into amazement how these things should be; all difficulties are but easy when they are known. . . . Call your executioner, and off with Barnardine's head: I will give him a present shrift, and advise him for a better place. . . . Yet you are amazed, but this shall absolutely resolve you . . . Come away, it is almost clear dawn.

They go out

Scene 3

Pompey enters

POMPEY. I am as well acquainted here as I was in our house of profession: one would think it were Mistress Overdone's own house, for here be many of her old customers. . . . First, here's young Master Rash; he's in for a commodity of brown paper and old ginger—ninescore and seventeen pounds, of which he made five marks, ready money: marry then ginger was not much in request, for the old women were all dead. . . . Then is there here one Master Caper, at the suit of Master Three-pile the mercer, for some four suits of peach-coloured satin, which now peaches him a beggar. . . . Then have we here young Dizy, and young Master Deepvow, and Master Copperspur, and Master Starvelackey the rapier and dagger man, and young Dropheir that killed lusty Pudding, and Master Forthright the tilter, and brave Master Shoetie the great traveller, and wild Halfcan that stabbed Pots, and, I think, forty more—all great doers in our trade, and are now 'for the Lord's sake.'

Abhorson comes in

ABHORSON. Sirrah, bring Barnardine hither.

POMPEY. Master Barnardine! you must rise and be hanged, Master Barnardine!

ABHORSON. What, ho, Barnardine!

BARNARDINE [from within]. A pox o' your throats! Who makes that noise there? What are you?

POMPEY. Your friends, sir—the hangman . . . You must be so good, sir, to rise and be put to death.

BARNARDINE. Away, you rogue, away. I am sleepy.

ABHORSON. Tell him, he must awake, and that quickly too.

POMPEY. Pray, Master Barnardine, awake till you are executed, and sleep afterwards.

ABHORSON. Go in to him, and fetch him out.

POMPEY. He is coming, sir, he is coming . . . I hear his straw rustle.

Barnardine enters

ABHORSON. Is the axe upon the block, sirrah?

POMPEY. Very ready, sir.

BARNARDINE. How now, Abhorson! what's the news with you?

ABHORSON. Truly, sir, I would desire you to clap into your prayers: for, look you, the warrant's come.

BARNARDINE. You rogue, I have been drinking all night, I am not fitted for't.

POMPEY. O, the better, sir: for he that drinks all night, and is hanged betimes in the morning, may sleep the sounder all the next day.

The disguised Duke enters

ABHORSON. Look you, sir, here comes your ghostly father: do we jest now, think you?

DUKE. Sir, induced by my charity, and hearing how hastily you are to depart, I am come to advise you, comfort you, and pray with you.

BARNARDINE. Friar, not I: I have been drinking hard all night, and I will have more time to prepare me, or they shall beat out my brains with billets . . . I will not consent to die this day, that's certain.

DUKE. O, sir, you must: and therefore I beseech you

Look forward on the journey you shall go.
BARNARDINE. I swear I will not die to-day for any man's persuasion.
DUKE. But hear you . . .
BARNARDINE. Not a word: if you have any thing to say to me, come to my ward: for thence will not I to-day. He goes

The Provost enters

DUKE. Unfit to live or die . . . O, gravel heart!
After him, fellows, bring him to the block.
Abhorson and Pompey go
PROVOST. Now, sir, how do you find the prisoner?
DUKE. A creature unprepared, unmeet for death;
And to transport him in the mind he is
Were damnable.
PROVOST. Here in the prison, father,
There died this morning of a cruel fever
One Ragozine, a most notorious pirate,
A man of Claudio's years: his beard and head
Just of his colour. . . . What if we do omit
This reprobate, till he were well inclined,
And satisfy the deputy with the visage
Of Ragozine, more like to Claudio?
DUKE. O, 'tis an accident that heaven provides . . .
Dispatch it presently, the hour draws on
Prefixed by Angelo . . . See this be done,
And sent according to command, whiles I
Persuade this rude wretch willingly to die.
PROVOST. This shall be done, good father, presently:
But Barnardine must die this afternoon—
And how shall we continue Claudio,
To save me from the danger that might come,
If he were known alive?
DUKE. Let this be done—
Put them in secret holds, both Barnardine
And Claudio.
Ere twice the sun hath made his journal greeting
To th'under generation, you shall find
Your safety manifested.
PROVOST. I am your free dependant.
DUKE. Quick, dispatch, and send the head to Angelo.

The Provost goes out

Now will I write letters to Angelo—
The provost, he shall bear them—whose contents
Shall witness to him I am near at home:
And that, by great injunctions, I am bound
To enter publicly: him I'll desire
To meet me at the consecrated fount,
A league below the city; and from thence,
By cold gradation and well-balanced form,
We shall proceed with Angelo.

The Provost returns

PROVOST. Here is the head—I'll carry it myself.
DUKE. Convenient is it . . . Make a swift return,
For I would commune with you of such things
That want no ear but yours.
PROVOST. I'll make all speed. He goes
A VOICE WITHOUT. Peace, ho, be here!
DUKE. The tongue of Isabel. . . . She's come to know
If yet her brother's pardon be come hither:
But I will keep her ignorant of her good,
To make her heavenly comforts of despair,
When it is least expected.

Isabella enters

ISABELLA. Ho, by your leave!
DUKE. Good morning to you, fair and gracious daughter.
ISABELLA. The better, given me by so holy a man.
Hath yet the deputy sent my brother's pardon?
DUKE. He hath released him, Isabel, from the world.
His head is off and sent to Angelo.
ISABELLA. Nay, but it is not so.
DUKE. It is no other. Show your wisdom, daughter,
In your close patience.
ISABELLA. O, I will to him, and pluck out his eyes.
DUKE. You shall not be admitted to his sight.
ISABELLA. Unhappy Claudio, wretched Isabel,
Injurious world, most damnéd Angelo!
DUKE. This nor hurts him, nor profits you a jot.
Forbear it therefore, give your cause to heaven.
Mark what I say, which you shall find
By every syllable a faithful verity. . . .
The duke comes home to-morrow: nay, dry your eyes—
One of our covent, and his confessor,
Gives me this instance: already he hath carried
Notice to Escalus and Angelo,
Who do prepare to meet him at the gates,
There to give up their power . . . If you can, pace your wisdom
In that good path that I would wish it go,
And you shall have your bosom on this wretch,
Grace of the duke, revenges to your heart,
And general honour.
ISABELLA. I am directed by you.
DUKE. This letter then to Friar Peter give—
'Tis he that sent me of the duke's return:
Say, by this token, I desire his company
As Mariana's house to-night. . . . Her cause and yours
I'll perfect him withal, and he shall bring you
Before the duke; and to the head of Angelo
Accuse him home and home. . . . For my poor self,
I am combinéd by a sacred vow,
And shall be absent. . . . Wend you with this letter:
Command these fretting waters from your eyes
With a light heart; trust not my holy order,
If I pervert your course . . . Who's here?

Lucio enters

LUCIO. Good even . . . Friar, where's the provost?
DUKE. Not within, sir.
LUCIO. O, pretty Isabella, I am pale at mine heart to see thine eyes so red: thou must be patient; I am fain to dine and sup with water and bran: I dare not for my head fill my belly. . . . one fruitful meal would set me to't . . . but they say the duke will be here to-morrow. . . . By my troth, Isabel, I loved thy brother. If the old fantastical duke of dark corners had been at home, he had lived.
Isabella goes
DUKE. Sir, the duke is marvellous little beholding to your reports—but the best is, he lives not in them.
LUCIO. Friar, thou knowest not the duke so well as I do: he's a better woodman than thou tak'st him for.
DUKE. Well: you'll answer this one day. . . . Fare ye well.

LUCIO. Nay, tarry—I'll go along with thee—I can tell thee pretty tales of the duke.

DUKE. You have told me too many of him already, sir, if they be true: if not true, none were enough.

LUCIO. I was once before him for getting a wench with child.

DUKE. Did you such a thing?

LUCIO. Yes, marry did I; but I was fain to forswear it—they would else have married me to the rotten medlar.

DUKE. Sir, your company is fairer than honest—Rest you well.

LUCIO. By my troth, I'll go with thee to the lane's end. If bawdy talk offend you, we'll have very little of it... Nay, friar, I am a kind of burr, I shall stick.
He follows the Duke out

Scene 4: A room in the house of Lord Angelo

Enter Angelo and Escalus

ESCALUS. Every letter he hath writ hath disvouched other.

ANGELO. In most uneven and distracted manner. His actions show much like to madness—pray heaven his wisdom be not tainted: and why meet him at the gates, and redeliver our authorities there?

ESCALUS. I guess not.

ANGELO. And why should we proclaim it an hour before his entring, that if any crave redress of injustice, they should exhibit their petitions in the street?

ESCALUS. He shows his reason for that: to have a dispatch of complaints, and to deliver us from devices hereafter, which shall then have no power to stand against us.

ANGELO. Well: I beseech you, let it be proclaimed.
Betimes i'th' morn, I'll call you at your house:
Give notice to such men of sort and suit
As are to meet him.

ESCALUS. I shall, sir: fare you well.

ANGELO. Good night.... Escalus departs
This deed unshapes me quite, makes me unpregnant
And dull to all proceedings.... A deflowered maid,
And by an eminent body that enforced
The law against it! But that her tender shame
Will not proclaim against her maiden loss,
How might she tongue me! Yet reason dares her no,
For my authority bears a credent bulk,
That no particular scandal once can touch,
But it confounds the breather.... He should have lived,
Save that his riotous youth, with dangerous sense,
Might in the times to come have ta'en revenge,
By so receiving a dishonoured life
With ransom of such shame... Would yet he had lived!
Alack, when once our grace we have forgot,
Nothing goes right—we would, and we would not.
He goes out

Scene 5: Outside

Enter the Duke in his own habit, and Friar Peter

DUKE [giving him papers]. These letters at fit time deliver me....
The provost knows our purpose, and our plot.
The matter being afoot, keep your instruction,
And hold you ever to our special drift,
Though sometimes you do blench from this to that,
As cause doth minister... Go, call at Flavius' house,
And tell him where I stay: give the like notice
To Valentinus, Rowland, and to Crassus,
And bid them bring the trumpets to the gate:
But send me Flavius first.

FRIAR PETER. It shall be speeded well.
He goes

Varrius comes up

DUKE. I thank thee, Varrius. Thou hast made good haste.
Come, we will walk... There's other of our friends
Will greet us here anon, my gentle Varrius.
They go

Scene 6: A street near the city-gate

Enter Isabella and Mariana

ISABELLA. To speak so indirectly I am loath.
I would say the truth—but to accuse him so,
That is your part. Yet I am advised to do it,
He says, to veil full purpose.

MARIANA. Be ruled by him.

ISABELLA. Besides, he tells me that, if peradventure
He speak against me on the adverse side,
I should not think it strange, for 'tis a physic
That's bitter to sweet end.

MARIANA. I would Friar Peter—

ISABELLA. O, peace, the friar is come.

Friar Peter comes up

FRIAR PETER. Come, I have found you out a stand most fit,
Where you may have such vantage on the duke,
He shall not pass you... Twice have the trumpets sounded;
The generous and gravest citizens
Have hent the gates, and very near upon
The duke is ent'ring... therefore hence, away.
They hasten away

ACT 5

Scene 1: A public place without the city-gates: a crowd of citizens

Angelo, Escalus, with the Provost and officers; Lucio, Isabella, Mariana veiled, and Friar Peter at their post. The Duke approaches with Varrius and other Lords

DUKE. My very worthy cousin, fairly met!
Our old and faithful friend, we are glad to see you.

ANGELO AND ESCALUS. Happy return be to your royal grace!

DUKE. Many and hearty thankings to you both:
We have made inquiry of you, and we hear
Such goodness of your justice, that our soul
Cannot but yield you forth to public thanks,
Forerunning more requital.

ANGELO. You make my bonds still greater.

DUKE. O, your desert speaks loud, and I should wrong it,
To lock it in the wards of covert bosom,
When it deserves with characters of brass
A forted residence 'gainst the tooth of time

And razure of oblivion ... Give me your hand—
And let the subject see, to make them know
That outward courtesies would fain proclaim
Favours that keep within ... Come, Escalus,
You must walk by us on our other hand:
And good supporters are you.

Friar Peter and Isabella come forward

FRIAR PETER. Now is your time—speak loud, and kneel before him.
ISABELLA. Justice, O royal duke! Vail your regard
Upon a wronged—I would fain have said a maid.
O worthy prince, dishonour not your eye
By throwing it on any other object,
Till you have heard me, in my true complaint,
And given me justice, justice, justice, justice!
DUKE. Relate your wrongs; in what? by whom? be brief:
Here is Lord Angelo shall give you justice—
Reveal yourself to him.
ISABELLA. O worthy duke,
You bid me seek redemption of the devil!
Hear me yourself: for that which I must speak
Must either punish me, not being believed,
Or wring redress from you ... Hear me, O, hear me, here.
ANGELO. My lord, her wits I fear me are not firm:
She hath been a suitor to me for her brother,
Cut off by course of justice—
ISABELLA. By course of justice!
ANGELO. And she will speak most bitterly and strange.
ISABELLA. Most strange ... but yet most truly will I speak.
That Angelo's forsworn, is it not strange?
That Angelo's a murderer, is't not strange?
That Angelo is an adulterous thief,
An hypocrite, a virgin-violator—
Is it not strange and strange?
DUKE. Nay, it is ten times strange!
ISABELLA. It is not truer he is Angelo
Than this is all as true as it is strange;
Nay, it is ten times true, for truth is truth
To th'end of reck'ning.
DUKE. Away with her ... Poor soul,
She speaks this in th'infirmity of sense.
ISABELLA. O prince, I cónjure thee, as thou believ'st
There is another comfort than this world,
That thou neglect me not, with that opinion
That I am touched with madness: make not impossible
That which but seems unlike. 'Tis not impossible
But one, the wicked'st caitiff on the ground,
May seem as shy, as grave, as just, as absolute ...
As Angelo! even so may Angelo,
In all his dressings, caracts, titles, forms,
Be an arch-villain ... Believe it, royal prince,
If he be less, he's nothing, but he's more,
Had I more name for badness.
DUKE. By mine honesty,
If she be mad—as I believe no other—
Her madness hath the oddest frame of sense,
Such a dependency of thing on thing,
As e'er I heard in madness.
ISABELLA. O, gracious duke,
Harp not on that; nor do not banish reason
For inequality, but let your reason serve
To make the truth appear where it seems hid,
And hide the false seems true.
DUKE. Many that are not mad,
Have, sure, more lack of reason ... What would you say?
ISABELLA. I am the sister of one Claudio,
Condemned upon the act of fornication
To lose his head, condemned by Angelo.
I, in probation of a sisterhood,
Was sent to by my brother; one Lucio
As then the messenger—
LUCIO. That's I, an't like your grace:
I came to her from Claudio, and desired her
To try her gracious fortune with Lord Angelo,
For her poor brother's pardon.
ISABELLA. That's he, indeed.
DUKE. You were not bid to speak.
LUCIO. No, my good lord—
Nor wished to hold my peace.
DUKE. I wish you now then.
Pray you, take note of it: and when you have
A business for yourself ... pray heaven you then
Be perfect.
LUCIO. I warrant your honour.
DUKE. The warrant's for yourself: take heed to't.
ISABELLA. This gentleman told somewhat of my tale.
LUCIO. Right.
DUKE. It may be right, but you are i'the wrong
To speak before your time.... Proceed.
ISABELLA. I went
To this pernicious caitiff deputy.
DUKE. That's somewhat madly spoken.
ISABELLA. Pardon it,
The phrase is to the matter.
DUKE. Mended again ... The matter: proceed.
ISABELLA. In brief, to set the needless process by ...
How I persuaded, how I prayed, and kneeled,
How he refelled me, and how I replied—
For this was of much length—the vile conclusion
I now begin with grief and shame to utter....
He would not, but by gift of my chaste body
To his concupiscible intemperate lust,
Release my brother; and, after much debatement,
My sisterly remorse confutes mine honour,
And I did yield to him ... But the next morn betimes,
His purpose surfeiting, he sends a warrant
For my poor brother's head.
DUKE. This is most likely!
ISABELLA. O, that it were as like, as it is true!
DUKE. By heaven, fond wretch! thou know'st not what thou speak'st,
Or else thou art suborned against his honour
In hateful practice ... First, his integrity
Stands without blemish: next, it imports no reason,
That with such vehemency he should pursue
Faults proper to himself: if he had so offended,
He would have weighed thy brother by himself,
And not have cut him off ... Some one hath set you on:
Confess the truth, and say by whose advice
Thou cam'st here to complain.
ISABELLA. And is this all?
Then, O you blessèd ministers above,
Keep me in patience, and, with ripened time
Unfold the evil, which is here wrapt up

In countenance ... Heaven shield your grace from woe,
As I, thus wronged, hence unbelievéd go.
DUKE. I know you'ld fain be gone ... An officer!
To prison with her ... Shall we thus permit
A blasting and a scandalous breath to fall
On him so near us? This needs must be a practice;
Who knew of your intent, and coming hither?
ISABELLA. One that I would were here, Friar Lodowick.
DUKE. A ghostly father, belike ... Who knows that Lodowick?
LUCIO. My lord, I know him, 'tis a meddling friar.
I do not like the man: had he been lay, my lord,
For certain words he spake against your grace
In your retirement, I had swinged him soundly.
DUKE. Words against me! This' a good friar, belike!
And to set on this wretched woman here
Against our substitute ... Let this friar be found.
LUCIO. But, yesternight, my lord, she and that friar,
I saw them at the prison: a saucy friar,
A very scurvy fellow.
FRIAR PETER. Blessed be your royal grace!
I have stood by, my lord, and I have heard
Your royal ear abused ... First hath this woman
Most wrongfully accused your substitute,
Who is as free from touch or soil with her,
As she from one ungot.
DUKE. We did believe no less....
Know you that Friar Lodowick that she speaks of?
FRIAR PETER. I know him for a man divine and holy—
Not scurvy, nor a temporary meddler,
As he's reported by this gentleman:
And, on my trust, a man that never yet
Did, as he vouches, misreport your grace.
LUCIO. My lord, most villainously—believe it.
FRIAR PETER. Well: he in time may come to clear himself;
But at this instant he is sick, my lord,
Of a strange fever ... Upon his mere request—
Being come to knowledge that there was complaint
Intended 'gainst Lord Angelo—came I hither
To speak, as from his mouth, what he doth know
Is true and false: and what he with his oath
And all probation will make up full clear,
Whensoever he's convented ... First, for this woman—
To justify this worthy nobleman,
So vulgarly and personally accused—
Her shall you hear disprovéd to her eyes,
Till she herself confess it.
DUKE. Good friar, let's hear it ...
Do you not smile at this, Lord Angelo?
O heaven! the vanity of wretched fools....
Give us some seats—Come, cousin Angelo,
In this I'll be impartial: be you judge
Of your own cause....

Mariana and Friar Peter come forward

Is this the witness, friar?
First, let her show her face, and after speak.
MARIANA. Pardon, my lord, I will not show my face
Until my husband bid me.
DUKE. What, are you married?
MARIANA. No, my lord.
DUKE. Are you a maid?
MARIANA. No, my lord.
DUKE. A widow then?
MARIANA. Neither, my lord.
DUKE. Why, you are nothing then: neither maid, widow, nor wife?
LUCIO. My lord, she may be a punk: for many of them are neither maid, widow, nor wife.
DUKE. Silence that fellow: I would, he had some cause
To prattle for himself.
LUCIO. Well, my lord.
MARIANA. My lord, I do confess I ne'er was married,
And I confess besides I am no maid.
I have known my husband, yet my husband knows not
That ever he knew me.
LUCIO. He was drunk then, my lord—it can be no better.
DUKE. For the benefit of silence, would thou wert so too.
LUCIO. Well, my lord.
DUKE. This is no witness for Lord Angelo.
MARIANA. Now I come to't, my lord....
She that accuses him of fornication,
In self-same manner doth accuse my husband,
And charges him, my lord, with such a time
When I'll depose I had him in mine arms,
With all th'effects of love.
ANGELO. Charges she moe than me?
MARIANA. Not that I know.
DUKE. No? you say your husband.
MARIANA. Why, just, my lord, and that is Angelo,
Who thinks he knows that he ne'er knew my body,
But knows, he thinks, that he knows Isabel's.
ANGELO. This is a strange abuse ... Let's see thy face.
MARIANA. My husband bids me—now I will unmask.... She puts off her veil
This is that face, thou cruel Angelo,
Which once thou swor'st was worth the looking on:
This is the hand which, with a vowed contráct,
Was fast belocked in thine: this is the body
That took away the match from Isabel,
And did supply thee at thy garden-house
In her imagined person.
DUKE. Know you this woman?
LUCIO. Carnally, she says.
DUKE. Sirrah, no more!
LUCIO. Enough, my lord.
ANGELO. My lord, I must confess, I know this woman—
And five years since there was some speech of marriage
Betwixt myself and her: which was broke off,
Partly for that her promiséd proportions
Came short of composition: but in chief,
For that her reputation was disvalued
In levity: since which time of five years
I never spake with her, saw her, nor heard from her,
Upon my faith and honour.
MARIANA. Noble prince,
As there comes light from heaven, and words from breath,
As there is sense in truth, and truth in virtue,
I am affianced this man's wife, as strongly
As words could make up vows: and, my good lord,

But Tuesday night last gone, in's garden-house,
He knew me as a wife.... As this is true,
Let me in safety raise me from my knees,
Or else for ever be confixéd here
A marble monument.

ANGELO. I did but smile till now.
Now, good my lord, give me the scope of justice—
My patience here is touched: I do perceive
These poor informal women are no more
But instruments of some more mightier member
That sets them on.... Let me have way, my lord,
To find this practice out.

DUKE. Ay, with my heart—
And punish them to your height of pleasure....
Thou foolish friar, and thou pernicious woman,
Compact with her that's gone ... think'st thou thy oaths,
Though they would swear down each particular saint,
Were testimonies against his worth and credit,
That's sealed in approbation? You, Lord Escalus,
Sit with my cousin, lend him your kind pains
To find out this abuse, whence 'tis derived....
There is another friar that set them on—
Let him be sent for.

FRIAR PETER. Would he were here, my lord, for he indeed
Hath set the women on to this complaint;
Your provost knows the place where he abides,
And he may fetch him.

DUKE. Go, do it instantly ...
The Provost goes
And you, my noble and well-warranted cousin,
Whom it concerns to hear this matter forth,
Do with your injuries as seems you best,
In any chastisement; I for a while will leave you;
But stir not you, till you have well determined
Upon these slanderers.

ESCALUS. My lord, we'll do it throughly ...
The Duke goes
Signior Lucio, did not you say you knew that Friar Lodowick to be a dishonest person?

LUCIO. 'Cucullus non facit monachum'—honest in nothing but in his clothes, and one that hath spoke most villainous speeches of the duke.

ESCALUS. We shall entreat you to abide here till he come and enforce them against him: we shall find this friar a notable fellow.

LUCIO. As any in Vienna, on my word.

ESCALUS. Call that same Isabel here once again, I would speak with her ... Pray you, my lord, give me leave to question. You shall see how I'll handle her.

LUCIO. Not better than he, by her own report.

ESCALUS. Say you?

LUCIO. Marry, sir, I think if you handled her privately, she would sooner confess—perchance, publicly, she'll be ashamed.

Isabella draws near, in custody of the officer

ESCALUS. I will go darkly to work with her.

LUCIO. That's the way: for women are light at midnight.

ESCALUS. Come on, mistress. Here's a gentlewoman denies all that you have said.

The Provost approaches, with the Duke in his friar's habit

LUCIO. My lord, here comes the rascal I spoke of—
Here with the provost.

ESCALUS. In very good time:
Speak not you to him, till we call upon you.

LUCIO. Mum.

ESCALUS. Come, sir! did you set these women on to slander Lord Angelo? they have confessed you did.

DUKE. 'Tis false.

ESCALUS. How! know you where you are?

DUKE. Respect to your great place! and let the devil
Be sometime honoured for his burning throne....
Where is the duke? 'tis he should hear me speak.

ESCALUS. The duke's in us: and we will hear you speak.
Look you speak justly.

DUKE. Boldly, at least.... But, O, poor souls,
Come you to seek the lamb here of the fox?
Good night to your redress ... Is the duke gone?
Then is your cause gone too ... The duke's unjust,
Thus to retort your manifest appeal,
And put your trial in the villain's mouth
Which here you come to accuse.

LUCIO. This is the rascal: this is he I spoke of.

ESCALUS. Why, thou unreverend and unhallowed friar:
Is't not enough thou hast suborned these women
To accuse this worthy man, but, in foul mouth,
And in the witness of his proper ear,
To call him villain?
And then to glance from him to th' duke himself,
To tax him with injustice? Take him hence;
To th' rack with him ... We'll touse you joint by joint,
But we will know his purpose ... What, 'unjust'!

DUKE. Be not so hot: the duke
Dare no more stretch this finger of mine than he Dare rack his own: his subject am I not,
Not here provincial ... My business in this state
Made me a looker-on here in Vienna,
Where I have seen corruption boil and bubble,
Till it o'er-run the stew: laws for all faults,
But faults so countenanced, that the strong statutes
Stand like the forfeits in a barber's shop,
As much in mock as mark.

ESCALUS. Slander to th' state! Away with him to prison.

ANGELO. What can you vouch against him, Signior Lucio?
Is this the man, that you did tell us of?

LUCIO. 'Tis he, my lord ... Come hither, goodman bald-pate,
Do you know me?

DUKE. I remember you, sir, by the sound of your voice. I met you at the prison, in the absence of the duke.

LUCIO. O, did you so? and do you remember what you said of the duke?

DUKE. Most notedly, sir.

LUCIO. Do you so, sir? And was the duke a flesh-monger, a fool, and a coward, as you then reported him to be?

DUKE. You must, sir, change persons with me, ere you make that my report: you, indeed, spoke so of him —and much more, much worse.

LUCIO. O thou damnable fellow! Did not I pluck thee by the nose, for thy speeches?

DUKE. I protest I love the duke, as I love myself.

ANGELO. Hark how the villain would close now, after his treasonable abuses!

ESCALUS. Such a fellow is not to be talked withal... Away with him to prison... Where is the provost? Away with him to prison: lay bolts enough upon him: let him speak no more... Away with those giglots too, and with the other confederate companion!

The Provost lays hands on the Duke

DUKE. Stay sir, stay awhile.

ANGELO. What, resists he? Help him, Lucio.

LUCIO. Come sir, come sir, come sir: foh sir, why you bald-pated lying rascal... you must be hooded, must you? Show your knave's visage, with a pox to you... show your sheep-biting face, and be hanged an hour... Will't not off?

He plucks off the friar's hood and discovers the Duke:

DUKE. Thou art the first knave that e'er mad'st
a duke....
First, provost, let me bail these gentle three...
[to Lucio] Sneak not away, sir, for the friar and you
Must have a word anon: lay hold on him.

LUCIO. This may prove worse than hanging.

DUKE [to Escalus]. What you have spoke, I pardon:
sit you down,
We'll borrow place of him; sir, by your leave...

He sits in Angelo's place

Hast thou or word, or wit, or impudence,
That yet can do thee office? If thou hast
Rely upon it, till my tale be heard,
And hold no longer out.

ANGELO. O, my dread lord,
I should be guiltier than my guiltiness,
To think I can be undiscernible,
When I perceive your grace, like power divine,
Hath looked upon my passes.... Then, good prince,
No longer session hold upon my shame,
But let my trial be mine own confession:
Immediate sentence then, and sequent death,
Is all the grace I beg.

DUKE. Come hither, Mariana.
Say: wast thou e'er contracted to this woman?

ANGELO. I was, my lord.

DUKE. Go take her hence, and marry her instantly....
Do you the office, friar—which consummate,
Return him here again... Go with him, provost.

Angelo, Mariana, Friar Peter, and the Provost depart

ESCALUS. My lord, I am more amazed at this dishonour,
Than at the strangeness of it.

DUKE. Come hither, Isabel—
Your friar is now your prince: as I was then
Advértising, and holy to your business—
Not changing heart with habit—I am still
Attorneyed at your service.

ISABELLA. O give me pardon
That I, your vassal, have employed and pained
Your unknown sovereignty.

DUKE. You are pardoned, Isabel:
And now, dear maid, be you as free to us....
Your brother's death, I know, sits at your heart:
And you may marvel why I obscured myself,
Labouring to save his life: and would not rather
Make rash remonstrance of my hidden power,
Than let him so be lost... O, most kind maid,
It was the swift celerity of his death,
Which I did think with slower foot came on,
That brained my purpose: but, peace be with him!
That life is better life, past fearing death,
Than that which lives to fear: make it your comfort,
So happy is your brother.

ISABELLA. I do, my lord.

Angelo, Mariana, Friar Peter, and the Provost return

DUKE. For this new-married man, approaching here,
Whose salt imagination yet hath wronged
Your well-defended honour... you must pardon
For Mariana's sake: but as he adjudged your brother—
Being criminal, in double violation
Of sacred chastity, and of promise-breach,
Thereon dependent, for your brother's life—
The very mercy of the law cries out
Most audible, even from his proper tongue,
'An Angelo for Claudio, death for death'...
Haste still pays haste, and leisure answers leisure;
Like doth quit like, and Measure still for Measure...
Then, Angelo, thy fault's thus manifested;
Which, though thou wouldst deny, denies thee vantage....
We do condemn thee to the very block
Where Claudio stooped to death, and with like haste....
Away with him!

MARIANA. O my most gracious lord,
I hope you will not mock me with a husband!

DUKE. It is your husband mocked you with a husband.
Consenting to the safeguard of your honour,
I thought your marriage fit: else imputation,
For that he knew you, might reproach your life,
And choke your good to come: for his possessions,
Although by confiscation they are ours,
We do instate and widow you withal,
To buy you a better husband.

MARIANA. O my dear lord,
I crave no other, nor no better man.

DUKE. Never crave him—we are definitive.

MARIANA. Gentle my liege— She kneels

DUKE. You do but lose your labour....
Away with him to death... [to Lucio] Now, sir,
to you.

MARIANA. O my good lord! Sweet Isabel, take my part,
Lend me your knees, and all my life to come
I'll lend you all my life to do you service.

DUKE. Against all sense you do impórtune her.
Should she kneel down, in mercy of this fact,
Her brother's ghost his pavéd bed would break,
And take her hence in horror.

MARIANA. Isabel...
Sweet Isabel, do yet but kneel by me,
Hold up your hands, say nothing: I'll speak all....
They say, best men are moulded out of faults,
And, for the most, become much more the better
For being a little bad: so may my husband....

O, Isabel ... will you not lend a knee?
DUKE. He dies for Claudio's death.
ISABELLA [kneels]. Most bounteous sir,
Look, if it please you, on this man condemned,
As if my brother lived: I partly think
A due sincerity governéd his deeds,
Till he did look on me: since it is so,
Let him not die ... My brother had but justice,
In that he did the thing for which he died....
For Angelo,
His act did o'ertake his bad intent,
And must be buried but as an intent
That perished by the way ... Thoughts are no subjects,
Intents but merely thoughts.
MARIANA. Merely, my lord.
DUKE. Your suit's unprofitable: stand up, I say ...
I have bethought me of another fault....
Provost, how came it Claudio was beheaded
At an unusual hour?
PROVOST. It was commanded so.
DUKE. Had you a special warrant for the deed?
PROVOST. No, my good lord: it was by private message.
DUKE. For which I do discharge you of your office.
Give up your keys.
PROVOST. Pardon me, noble lord,
I thought it was a fault, but knew it not—
You did repent me, after more advice,
For testimony whereof, one in the prison,
That should by private order else have died,
I have reserved alive.
DUKE. What's he?
PROVOST. His name is Barnardine.
DUKE. I would thou hadst done so by Claudio ...
Go, fetch him hither—let me look upon him.
The Provost goes
ESCALUS. I am sorry, one so learnéd and so wise
As you, Lord Angelo, have still appeared,
Should slip so grossly, both in the heat of blood,
And lack of tempered judgement afterward.
ANGELO. I am sorry that such sorrow I procure—
And so deep sticks it in my penitent heart,
That I crave death more willingly than mercy.
'Tis my deserving, and I do entreat it.

The Provost returns, with Barnardine, Claudio muffled, and Juliet

DUKE. Which is that Barnardine?
PROVOST. This, my lord.
DUKE. There was a friar told me of this man....
Sirrah, thou art said to have a stubborn soul,
That apprehends no further than this world,
And squar'st thy life according ... Thou'rt condemned—
But, for those earthly faults, I quit them all,
And pray thee take this mercy to provide
For better times to come ... Friar, advise him,
I leave him to your hand.... What muffled fellow's that?
PROVOST. This is another prisoner that I saved,
Who should have died when Claudio lost his head—
As like almost to Claudio as himself.
He unmuffles Claudio
DUKE [to Isabella]. If he be like your brother, for his sake
Is he pardoned—and, for your lovely sake,
Give me your hand, and say you will be mine,
He is my brother too: but fitter time for that ...
By this Lord Angelo perceives he's safe—
Methinks I see a quick'ning in his eye:
Well, Angelo, your evil quits you well....
Look that you love your wife; her worth, worth yours.
I find an apt remission in myself:
And yet here's one in place I cannot pardon—
[to Lucio] You, sirrah, that knew me for a fool, a coward,
One all of luxury, an ass, a madman ...
Wherein have I deserved so of you,
That you extol me thus?
LUCIO. Faith, my lord, I spoke it but according to the trick: if you will hang me for it, you may: but I had rather it would please you I might be whipped.
DUKE. Whipped first, sir, and hanged after.
Proclaim it, provost, round about the city,
If any woman's wronged by this lewd fellow—
As I have heard him swear himself there's one
Whom he begot with child—let her appear,
And he shall marry her: the nuptial finished,
Let him be whipped and hanged.
LUCIO. I beseech your highness, do not marry me to a whore ... Your highness said even now I made you a duke—good my lord, do not recompense me in making me a cuckold.
DUKE. Upon mine honour, thou shalt marry her. Thy slanders I forgive, and therewithal
Remit thy other forfeits ... Take him to prison:
And see our pleasure herein executed.
LUCIO. Marrying a punk, my lord, is pressing to death,
Whipping, and hanging.
DUKE. Slandering a prince deserves it ...
She, Claudio, that you wronged, look you restore....
Joy to you, Mariana—love her, Angelo:
I have confessed her, and I know her virtue....
Thanks, good friend Escalus, for thy much goodness,
There's more behind that is more gratulate....
Thanks, provost, for thy care and secrecy,
We shall employ thee in a worthier place....
Forgive him, Angelo, that brought you home
The head of Ragozine for Claudio's—
Th'offence pardons itself.... Dear Isabel,
I have a motion much imports your good,
Whereto if you'll a willing ear incline ...
What's mine is yours, and what is yours is mine.
So, bring us to our palace, where we'll show
What's yet behind, that's meet you all should know.
They pass through the gates

The Comedy of Errors

ACT I

Scene I: Ephesus

The Duke of Ephesus, attendants, a gaoler, Ægeon, officers and a crowd of citizens

ÆGEON. Proceed, Solinus, to procure my fall,
And by the doom of death end woes and all.
DUKE. Merchant of Syracusa, plead no more;
I am not partial to infringe our laws.
The enmity and discord which of late
Sprung from the rancorous outrage of your duke
To merchants, our well-dealing countrymen,
Who, wanting guilders to redeem their lives,
Have sealed his rigorous statutes with their bloods,
Excludes all pity from our threat'ning looks.
For, since the mortal and intestine jars
'Twixt thy seditious countrymen and us,
It hath in solemn synods been decreed,
Both by the Syracusians and ourselves,
To admit no traffic to our adverse towns:
Nay, more—if any born at Ephesus
Be seen at Syracusian marts and fairs;
Again, if any Syracusian born
Come to the bay of Ephesus—he dies;
His goods confiscate to the duke's dispose,
Unless a thousand marks be leviéd,
To quit the penalty and to ransom him.
Thy substance, valued at the highest rate,
Cannot amount unto a hundred marks—
Therefore by law thou art condemned to die.
ÆGEON. Yet this my comfort: when your words are done,
My woes end likewise with the evening sun.
DUKE. Well, Syracusian, say, in brief, the cause
Why thou departed'st from thy native home,
And for what cause thou cam'st to Ephesus.
ÆGEON. A heavier task could not have been imposed
Than I to speak my griefs unspeakable:
Yet, that the world may witness that my end
Was wrought by nature, not by vile offence,
I'll utter what my sorrow gives me leave.
In Syracusa was I born, and wed
Unto a woman, happy but for me,
And by me too—had not our hap been bad:
With her I lived in joy; our wealth increased
By prosperous voyages I often made
To Epidamnum; till my factor's death
And the great care of goods at random left
Drew me from kind embracements of my spouse;
From whom my absence was not six months old,
Before herself—almost at fainting under
The pleasing punishment that women bear—
Had made provision for her following me,
And soon, and safe, arrivéd where I was.
There had she not been long but she became
A joyful mother of two goodly sons:
And, which was strange, the one so like the other,
As could not be distinguished but by names.
That very hour, and in the self-same inn,
A meaner woman was deliveréd
Of such a burden male, twins both alike.
Those, for their parents were exceeding poor,
I bought, and brought up to attend my sons.
My wife, not meanly proud of two such boys,
Made daily motions for our home return:
Unwilling I agreed. Alas, too soon
We came aboard.
A league from Epidamnum had we sailed
Before the always-wind-obeying deep
Gave any tragic instance of our harm:
But longer did we not retain much hope;
For what obscuréd light the heavens did grant
Did but convey unto our fearful minds
A doubtful warrant of immediate death,
Which, though myself would gladly have embraced,
Yet the incessant weepings of my wife,
Weeping before for what she saw must come,
And piteous plainings of the pretty babes,
That mourned for fashion, ignorant what to fear,
Forced me to seek delays for them and me.
And this it was—for other means was none:
The sailors sought for safety by our boat,
And left the ship, then sinking-ripe, to us;
My wife, more careful for the latter-born,
Had fast'ned him unto a small spare mast,
Such as seafaring men provide for storms:
To him one of the other twins was bound,
Whilst I had been like heedful of the other.
The children thus disposed, my wife and I,
Fixing our eyes on whom our care was fixed,
Fast'ned ourselves at either end the mast;
And floating straight, obedient to the stream,
Were carried towards Corinth, as we thought.
At length the sun, gazing upon the earth,
Dispersed those vapours that offended us,
And, by the benefit of his wishéd light,
The seas waxed calm, and we discoveréd
Two ships from far making amain to us:
Of Corinth that, of Epidaurus this.
But ere they came—O, let me say no more!—
Gather the sequel by that went before.
DUKE. Nay, forward, old man—do not break off so,
For we may pity, though not pardon thee.
ÆGEON. O, had the gods done so, I had not now
Worthily termed them merciless to us.
For, ere the ships could meet by twice five leagues,
We were encount'red by a mighty rock,
Which being violently borne upon,
Our helpful ship was splitted in the midst;
So that, in this unjust divorce of us,
Fortune had left to both of us alike
What to delight in, what to sorrow for.
Her part, poor soul, seeming as burdenéd
With lesser weight, but not with lesser woe,
Was carried with more speed before the wind,
And in our sight they three were taken up
By fishermen of Corinth, as we thought.
At length, another ship had seized on us;
And, knowing whom it was their hap to save,

Gave healthful welcome to their shipwrecked guests—
And would have reft the fishers of their prey,
Had not their bark been very slow of sail;
And therefore homeward did they bend their course.
Thus have you heard me severed from my bliss,
That by misfortunes was my life prolonged
To tell sad stories of my own mishaps.
DUKE. And, for the sake of them thou sorrowest for,
Do me the favour to dilate at full
What hath befall'n of them and thee till now.
ÆGEON. My youngest boy, and yet my eldest care,
At eighteen years became inquisitive
After his brother; and importuned me,
That his attendant—for his case was like,
Reft of his brother, but retained his name—
Might bear him company in the quest of him;
Whom whilst I laboured of a love to see,
I hazarded the loss of whom I loved.
Five summers have I spent in farthest Greece,
Roaming clean through the bounds of Asia,
And, coasting homeward, came to Ephesus;
Hopeless to find, yet loath to leave unsought
Or that, or any place that harbours men.
But here must end the story of my life—
And happy were I in my timely death,
Could all my travels warrant me they live.
DUKE. Hapless Ægeon, whom the fates have marked
To bear the extremity of dire mishap.
Now, trust me, were it not against our laws,
Against my crown, my oath, my dignity,
Which princes, would they, may not disannul,
My soul should sue as advocate for thee:
But, though thou art adjudgéd to the death,
And passéd sentence may not be recalled
But to our honour's great disparagement.
Yet will I favour thee in what I can;
Therefore, merchant, I'll limit thee this day
To seek thy help by beneficial hap.
Try all the friends thou hast in Ephesus—
Beg thou, or borrow, to make up the sum,
And live: if no, then thou art doomed to die.
Gaoler, take him to thy custody.
GAOLER. I will, my lord.
ÆGEON. Hopeless, and helpless, doth Ægeon wend,
But to procrastinate his lifeless end. They depart

Scene 2: The Mart

Antipholus of Syrácuse, his man Dromio and a merchant enter

MERCHANT. Therefore, give out you are of Epidamnum,
Lest that your goods too soon be confiscate:
This very day, a Syracusian merchant
Is apprehended for arrival here,
And, not being able to buy out his life,
According to the statute of the town,
Dies ere the weary sun set in the west.
There is your money that I had to keep.
S. ANTIPHOLUS. Go bear it to the Centaur, where we host,
And stay there, Dromio, till I come to thee;
Within this hour it will be dinner-time;
Till that, I'll view the manners of the town,
Peruse the traders, gaze upon the buildings,
And then return and sleep within mine inn;
For with long travel I am stiff and weary.
Get thee away.
S. DROMIO. Many a man would take you at your word,
And go indeed, having so good a mean. He goes
S. ANTIPHOLUS. A trusty villain, sir, that very oft,
When I am dull with care and melancholy,
Lightens my humour with his merry jests.
What, will you walk with me about the town,
And then go to my inn, and dine with me?
MERCHANT. I am invited, sir, to certain merchants,
Of whom I hope to make much benefit:
I crave your pardon. Soon at five o'clock,
Please you, I'll meet with you upon the mart,
And afterward consort you till bed-time:
My present business calls me from you now.
S. ANTIPHOLUS. Farewell till then: I will go lose myself,
And wander up and down to view the city.
MERCHANT. Sir, I commend you to your own content.
He departs
S. ANTIPHOLUS. He, that commends me to mine own content,
Commends me to the thing I cannot get.
I to the world am like a drop of water
That in the ocean seeks another drop,
Who, falling there to find his fellow forth,
Unseen, inquisitive, confounds himself.
So I, to find a mother and a brother,
In quest of them, unhappier, lose myself.

Dromio of Ephesus enters

Here comes the almanac of my true date:
What now! How chance thou art returned so soon?
E. DROMIO. Returned so soon! rather approached too late.
The capon burns, the pig falls from the spit;
The clock hath strucken twelve upon the bell;
My mistress made it one upon my cheek:
She is so hot, because the meat is cold:
The meat is cold, because you come not home:
You come not home, because you have no stomach:
You have no stomach, having broke your fast:
But we, that know what 'tis to fast and pray,
Are penitent for your default to-day.
S. ANTIPHOLUS. Stop in your wind, sir—tell me this, I pray!
Where have you left the money that I gave you?
E. DROMIO. O—sixpence, that I had o'Wednesday last,
To pay the saddler for my mistress' crupper?
The saddler had it, sir, I kept it not.
S. ANTIPHOLUS. I am not in a sportive humour now:
Tell me, and dally not, where is the money?
We being strangers here, how dar'st thou trust
So great a charge from thine own custody?
E. DROMIO. I pray you, jest, sir, as you sit at dinner:
I from my mistress come to you in post:
If I return, I shall be post indeed,
For she will score your fault upon my pate.
Methinks your maw, like mine, should be your clock,
And strike you home without a messenger.
S. ANTIPHOLUS. Come Dromio, come, these jests are out of season:
Reserve them till a merrier hour than this.
Where is the gold I gave in charge to thee?

E. DROMIO. To me sir? why you gave no gold to me.
S. ANTIPHOLUS. Come on, sir knave, have done your foolishness,
And tell me how thou hast disposed thy charge.
E. DROMIO. My charge was but to fetch you from the mart
Home to your house, the Phœnix, sir, to dinner.
My mistress and her sister stay for you.
S. ANTIPHOLUS. Now, as I am a Christian, answer me,
In what safe place you have bestowed my money;
Or I shall break that merry sconce of yours
That stands on tricks when I am undisposed:
Where is the thousand marks thou hadst of me?
E. DROMIO. I have some marks of yours upon my pate:
Some of my mistress' marks upon my shoulders:
But not a thousand marks between you both.
If I should pay your worship those again,
Perchance you will not bear them patiently.
S. ANTIPHOLUS. Thy mistress' marks! what mistress, slave, hast thou?
E. DROMIO. Your worship's wife, my mistress at the Phœnix;
She that doth fast till you come home to dinner,
And prays that you will hie you home to dinner.
S. ANTIPHOLUS. What, wilt thou flout me thus unto my face,
Being forbid? There, take you that, sir knave.
He beats him
E. DROMIO. What mean you, sir? for God's sake hold your hands!
Nay, an you will not, sir, I'll take my heels.
He takes flight
S. ANTIPHOLUS. Upon my life, by some device or other,
The villain is o'er-raught of all my money.
They say this town is full of cozenage:
As, nimble jugglers that deceive the eye,
Dark-working sorcerers that change the mind,
Soul-killing witches that deform the body,
Disguisèd cheaters, prating mountebanks,
And many such-like liberties of sin:
If it prove so, I will be gone the sooner.
I'll to the Centaur, to go seek this slave.
I greatly fear my money is not safe.
He follows Dromio

ACT 2

Scene I: The house of Antipholus

Adriana and Luciana enter

ADRIANA. Neither my husband nor the slave returned,
That in such haste I sent to seek his master!
Sure, Luciana, it is two o'clock.
LUCIANA. Perhaps some merchant hath invited him,
And from the mart he's somewhere gone to dinner.
Good sister, let us dine, and never fret;
A man is master of his liberty:
Time is their master, and when they see time,
They'll go or come; if so, be patient, sister.
ADRIANA. Why should their liberty than ours be more?
LUCIANA. Because their business still lies out o' door.
ADRIANA. Look when I serve him so, he takes it ill.
LUCIANA. O, know he is the bridle of your will.
ADRIANA. There's none but asses will be bridled so.
LUCIANA. Why, headstrong liberty is lashed with woe:
There's nothing situate under heaven's eye
But hath his bound, in earth, in sea, in sky:
The beasts, the fishes, and the wingèd fowls
Are their males' subjects and at their controls:
Men, more divine, the masters of all these,
Lords of the wide world and wild watry seas,
Indued with intellectual sense and souls,
Of more pre-eminence than fish and fowls,
Are masters to their females, and their lords:
Then let your will attend on their accords.
ADRIANA. This servitude makes you to keep unwed.
LUCIANA. Not this, but troubles of the marriage-bed.
ADRIANA. But, were you wedded, you would bear some sway.
LUCIANA. Ere I learn love, I'll practise to obey.
ADRIANA. How if your husband start some other where?
LUCIANA. Till he come home again, I would forbear—
ADRIANA. Patience unmoved! no marvel though she pause—
They can be meek that have no other cause:
A wretched soul, bruised with adversity,
We bid be quiet when we hear it cry;
But were we burd'ned with like weight of pain,
As much, or more, we should ourselves complain:
So thou, that hast no unkind mate to grieve thee,
With urging helpless patience wouldst relieve me;
But, if thou live to see like right bereft,
This fool-begged patience in thee will be left.
LUCIANA. Well, I will marry one day, but to try.
Here comes your man, now is your husband nigh.

Dromio of Ephesus enters

ADRIANA. Say, is your tardy master now at hand?
E. DROMIO. Nay, he's at two hands with me, and that my two ears can witness.
ADRIANA. Say, didst thou speak with him? know'st thou his mind?
E. DROMIO. Ay, ay, he told his mind upon mine ear—
Beshrew his hand, I scarce could understand it.
LUCIANA. Spake he so doubtfully, thou couldst not feel his meaning?
E. DROMIO. Nay, he struck so plainly, I could too well feel his blows; and withal so doubtfully, that I could scarce understand them.
ADRIANA. But say, I prithee, is he coming home?
It seems he hath great care to please his wife.
E. DROMIO. Why, mistress, sure my master is horn-mad.
ADRIANA. Horn-mad, thou villain!
E. DROMIO. I mean not cuckold-mad—
But, sure, he is stark mad:
When I desired him to come home to dinner,
He asked me for a thousand marks in gold:
''Tis dinner-time,' quoth I: 'My gold!' quoth he:
'Your meat doth burn,' quoth I: 'My gold!' quoth he:
'Will you come home?' quoth I: 'My gold!' quoth he:
'Where is the thousand marks I gave thee, villain?'
'The pig,' quoth I, 'is burned': 'My gold!' quoth he:
'My mistress, sir—' quoth I: 'Hang up thy mistress!
I know not thy mistress, out on thy mistress!'
LUCIANA. Quoth who?
E. DROMIO. Quoth my master.
'I know,' quoth he, 'no house, no wife, no mistress.'

So that my errand, due unto my tongue,
I thank him, I bare home upon my shoulders;
For, in conclusion, he did beat me there.
ADRIANA. Go back again, thou slave, and fetch him home.
E. DROMIO. Go back again, and be new beaten home?
For God's sake send some other messenger.
ADRIANA. Back, slave, or I will break thy pate across.
E. DROMIO. And he will bless that cross with other beating:
Between you, I shall have a holy head.
ADRIANA. Hence, prating peasant; fetch thy master home.
E. DROMIO. Am I so round with you, as you with me,
That like a football you do spurn me thus?
You spurn me hence, and he will spurn me hither.
If I last in this service, you must case me in leather.
He goes
LUCIANA. Fie, how impatience loureth in your face!
ADRIANA. His company must do his minions grace,
Whilst I at home starve for a merry look:
Hath homely age th'alluring beauty took
From my poor cheek? then he hath wasted it.
Are my discourses dull? barren my wit?
If voluble and sharp discourse be marred,
Unkindness blunts it more than marble hard.
Do their gay vestments his affections bait?
That's not my fault, he's master of my state.
What ruins are in me that can be found,
By him not ruined? then is he the ground
Of my defeatures. My decayéd fair
A sunny look of his would soon repair.
But, too unruly deer, he breaks the pale,
And feeds from home; poor I am but his stale.
LUCIANA. Self-harming jealousy! fie, beat it hence.
ADRIANA. Unfeeling fools can with such wrongs dispense.
I know his eye doth homage otherwhere,
Or else what lets it but he would be here?
Sister, you know he promised me a chain—
Would that alone o' love he would detain,
So he would keep fair quarter with his bed!
I see the jewel best enamelléd
Will lose his beauty; and though gold bides still
That others touch, yet often touching will
Wear gold, and no man that hath a name
But falsehood and corruption doth it shame.
Since that my beauty cannot please his eye,
I'll weep what's left away and weeping die.
LUCIANA. How many fond fools serve mad jealousy!
They go

Scene 2: The Mart

Antipholus of Syracuse enters

S. ANTIPHOLUS. The gold I gave to Dromio is laid up
Safe at the Centaur, and the heedful slave
Is wand'red forth, in care to seek me out.
By computation and mine host's report,
I could not speak with Dromio since at first
I sent him from the mart! See, here he comes.

Dromio of Syracuse approaches

How now, sir! is your merry humour altered?
As you love strokes, so jest with me again.
You know no Centaur? you received no gold?
Your mistress sent to have me home to dinner?
My house was at the Phœnix? Wast thou mad,
That thus so madly thou didst answer me?
S. DROMIO. What answer, sir? when spake I such a word?
S. ANTIPHOLUS. Even now, even here, not half an hour since.
S. DROMIO. I did not see you since you sent me hence,
Home to the Centaur, with the gold you gave me.
S. ANTIPHOLUS. Villain, thou didst deny the gold's receipt,
And told'st me of a mistress, and a dinner—
For which, I hope, thou felt'st I was displeased.
S. DROMIO. I am glad to see you in this merry vein.
What means this jest? I pray you, master, tell me.
S. ANTIPHOLUS. Yea, dost thou jeer, and flout me in the teeth?
Think'st thou, I jest? Hold, take thou that, and that.
Beats Dromio
S. DROMIO. Hold, sir, for God's sake! now your jest is earnest.
Upon what bargain do you give it me?
S. ANTIPHOLUS. Because that I familiarly sometimes
Do use you for my fool and chat with you,
Your sauciness will jest upon my love,
And make a common of my serious hours.
When the sun shines, let foolish gnats make sport,
But creep in crannies, when he hides his beams.
If you will jest with me, know my aspéct,
And fashion your demeanour to my looks,
Or I will beat this method in your sconce.
S. DROMIO. Sconce, call you it? so you would leave battering, I had rather have it a head. An you use these blows long, I must get a sconce for my head, and ensconce it too, or else I shall seek my wit in my shoulders. But, I pray, sir, why am I beaten?
S. ANTIPHOLUS. Dost thou not know?
S. DROMIO. Nothing, sir, but that I am beaten.
S. ANTIPHOLUS. Shall I tell you why?
S. DROMIO. Ay, sir, and wherefore; for they say every why hath a wherefore.
S. ANTIPHOLUS. Why, first for flouting me, and then wherefore,
For urging it the second time to me.
S. DROMIO. Was there ever any man thus beaten out of season,
When in the why and the wherefore is neither rhyme nor reason?
Well, sir, I thank you.
S. ANTIPHOLUS. Thank me, sir, for what?
S. DROMIO. Marry, sir, for this something that you gave me for nothing.
S. ANTIPHOLUS. I'll make you amends next, to give you nothing for something. But say, sir, is it dinner-time?
S. DROMIO. No, sir. I think the meat wants that I have.
S. ANTIPHOLUS. In good time, sir: what's that?
S. DROMIO. Basting.
S. ANTIPHOLUS. Well, sir, then 'twill be dry.
S. DROMIO. If it be, sir, I pray you eat none of it.
S. ANTIPHOLUS. Your reason?
S. DROMIO. Lest it make you choleric and purchase me another dry basting.
S. ANTIPHOLUS. Well, sir, learn to jest in good time—there's a time for all things.
S. DROMIO. I durst have denied that, before you were so choleric.

S. ANTIPHOLUS. By what rule, sir?

S. DROMIO. Marry, sir, by a rule as plain as the plain bald pate of Father Time himself.

S. ANTIPHOLUS. Let's hear it.

S. DROMIO. There's no time for a man to recover his hair that grows bald by nature.

S. ANTIPHOLUS. May he not do it by fine and recovery?

S. DROMIO. Yes, to pay a fine for a periwig and recover the lost hair of another man.

S. ANTIPHOLUS. Why is Time such a niggard of hair, being, as it is, so plentiful an excrement?

S. DROMIO. Because it is a blessing that he bestows on beasts: and what he hath scanted men in hair, he hath given them in wit.

S. ANTIPHOLUS. Why, but there's many a man hath more hair than wit.

S. DROMIO. Not a man of those but he hath the wit to lose his hair.

S. ANTIPHOLUS. Why, thou didst conclude hairy men plain dealers without wit.

S. DROMIO. The plainer dealer, the sooner lost; yet he loseth it in a kind of jollity.

S. ANTIPHOLUS. For what reason?

S. DROMIO. For two—and sound ones too.

S. ANTIPHOLUS. Nay, not sound, I pray you.

S. DROMIO. Sure ones then.

S. ANTIPHOLUS. Nay, not sure, in a thing falsing.

S. DROMIO. Certain ones then.

S. ANTIPHOLUS. Name them.

S. DROMIO. The one, to save the money that he spends in tiring; the other, that at dinner they should not drop in his porridge.

S. ANTIPHOLUS. You would all this time have proved there is no time for all things.

S. DROMIO. Marry, and did, sir: namely, e'en no time to recover hair lost by nature.

S. ANTIPHOLUS. But your reason was not substantial why there is no time to recover.

S. DROMIO. Thus I mend it: Time himself is bald, and therefore, to the world's end, will have bald followers.

S. ANTIPHOLUS. I knew 'twould be a bald conclusion.
But soft, who wafts us yonder?

Adriana enters with Luciana

ADRIANA. Ay, ay, Antipholus, look strange and frown,
Some other mistress hath thy sweet aspécts:
I am not Adriana, nor thy wife.
The time was once, when thou unurged wouldst vow
That never words were music to thine ear,
That never object pleasing in thine eye,
That never touch well welcome to thy hand,
That never meat sweet-savoured in thy taste,
Unless I spake, or looked, or touched, or carved to thee.
How comes it now, my husband, O, how comes it,
That thou art then estrangéd from thyself?
Thy self I call it, being strange to me,
That, undividable, incorporate,
Am better than thy dear self's better part.
Ah, do not tear away thyself from me;
For know, my love, as easy mayst thou fall
A drop of water in the breaking gulf,
And take unmingled thence that drop again,
Without addition or diminishing,
As take from me thyself, and not me too.
How dearly would it touch thee to the quick,
Shouldst thou but hear I were licentious!
And that this body, consecrate to thee,
By ruffian lust should be contaminate!
Wouldst thou not spit at me, and spurn at me,
And hurl the name of husband in my face,
And tear the stained skin off my harlot-brow,
And from my false hand cut the wedding-ring,
And break it with a deep-divorcing vow?
I know thou canst—and therefore, see thou do it.
I am possessed with an adulterate blot,
My blood is mingled with the grime of lust:
For, if we two be one, and thou play false,
I do digest the poison of thy flesh,
Being strumpeted by thy contagion.
Keep then fair league and truce with thy true bed;
I live unstained, thou undishonoured.

S. ANTIPHOLUS. Plead you to me, fair dame? I know you not:
In Ephesus I am but two hours old,
As strange unto your town as to your talk—
Who, every word by all my wit being scanned,
Want wit in all one word to understand.

LUCIANA. Fie, brother! how the world is changed with you:
When were you wont to use my sister thus?
She sent for you by Dromio home to dinner.

S. ANTIPHOLUS. By Dromio?

S. DROMIO. By me?

ADRIANA. By thee, and this thou didst return from him—
That he did buffet thee, and in his blows
Denied my house for his, me for his wife.

S. ANTIPHOLUS. Did you converse, sir, with this gentlewoman?
What is the course and drift of your compáct?

S. DROMIO. I, sir? I never saw her till this time.

S. ANTIPHOLUS. Villain, thou liest; for even her very words
Didst thou deliver to me on the mart.

S. DROMIO. I never spake with her in all my life.

S. ANTIPHOLUS. How can she thus then call us by our names?
Unless it be by inspiration.

ADRIANA. How ill agrees it with your gravity
To counterfeit thus grossly with your slave,
Abetting him to thwart me in my mood!
Be it my wrong you are from me exempt,
But wrong not that wrong with a more contempt.
Come, I will fasten on this sleeve of thine:
Thou art an elm, my husband, I a vine,
Whose weakness, married to thy stronger state,
Makes me with thy strength to communicate:
If aught possess thee from me, it is dross,
Usurping ivy, briar, or idle moss,
Who, all for want of pruning, with intrusion
Infect thy sap and live on thy confusion.

S. ANTIPHOLUS. To me she speaks, she moves me for her theme;
What, was I married to her in my dream?
Or sleep I now, and think I hear all this?
What error drives our eyes and ears amiss?
Until I know this sure uncertainty,
I'll entertain the offered fallacy.

LUCIANA. Dromio, go bid the servants spread for dinner.
S. DROMIO. O, for my beads! I cross me for a sinner.
This is the fairy land—O, spite of spites!—
We talk with goblins, owls, and sprites;
If we obey them not, this will ensue:
They'll suck our breath, or pinch us black and blue.
LUCIANA. Why prat'st thou to thyself and answer'st not?
Dromio, thou drone, thou snail, thou slug, thou sot.
S. DROMIO. I am transformèd, master am not I?
S. ANTIPHOLUS. I think thou art in mind, and so am I.
S. DROMIO. Nay, master, both in mind and in my shape.
S. ANTIPHOLUS. Thou hast thine own form.
S. DROMIO. No, I am an ape.
LUCIANA. If thou art changed to aught, 'tis to an ass.
S. DROMIO. 'Tis true, she rides me and I long for grass.
'Tis so, I am an ass—else it could never be
But I should know her as well as she knows me.
ADRIANA. Come, come, no longer will I be a fool,
To put the finger in the eye and weep,
Whilst man and master laugh my woes to scorn.
Come, sir, to dinner. Dromio, keep the gate:
Husband, I'll dine above with you to-day,
And shrive you of a thousand idle pranks:
Sirrah, if any ask you for your master,
Say he dines forth, and let no creature enter.
Come, sister, Dromio, play the porter well.
S. ANTIPHOLUS. Am I in earth, in heaven, or in hell?
Sleeping or waking? mad or well-advised?
Known unto these, and to myself disguised!
I'll say as they say, and perséver so . . .
And in this mist at all adventures go.
S. DROMIO. Master, shall I be porter at the gate?
ADRIANA. Ay, and let none enter, lest I break your pate.
LUCIANA. Come, come, Antipholus, we dine too late.
They go

ACT 3

Scene 1: Before the house of Antipholus

Antipholus of Ephesus, his man Dromio, Angelo and Balthazar enter

E. ANTIPHOLUS. Good Signior Angelo, you must excuse us all—
My wife is shrewish when I keep not hours;
Say that I lingered with you at your shop
To see the making of her carcanet,
And that to-morrow you will bring it home.
But here's a villain that would face me down
He met me on the mart, and that I beat him,
And charged him with a thousand marks in gold,
And that I did deny my wife and house;
Thou drunkard, thou, what didst thou mean by this?
E. DROMIO. Say what you will, sir, but I know what I know—
That you beat me at the mart, I have your hand to show;
If the skin were parchment and the blows you gave were ink,
Your own handwriting would tell you what I think.
E. ANTIPHOLUS. I think thou art an ass.
E. DROMIO. Marry, so it doth appear
By the wrongs I suffer and the blows I bear.
I should kick, being kicked, and being at that pass,
You would keep from my heels and beware of an ass.
E. ANTIPHOLUS. You're sad, Signior Balthazar—pray God, our cheer
May answer my good will and your good welcome here.
BALTHAZAR. I hold your dainties cheap, sir, and your welcome dear.
E. ANTIPHOLUS. O, Signior Balthazar, either at flesh or fish,
A table-full of welcome makes scarce one dainty dish.
BALTHAZAR. Good meat, sir, is common; that every churl affords.
E. ANTIPHOLUS. And welcome more common, for that's nothing but words.
BALTHAZAR. Small cheer and great welcome makes a merry feast.
E. ANTIPHOLUS. Ay, to a niggardly host and more sparing guest.
But though my cates be mean, take them in good part.
Better cheer may you have, but not with better heart.
But soft, my door is locked; go, bid them let us in.
E. DROMIO. Maud, Bridget, Marian, Cicely, Gillian, Ginn!
S. DROMIO [from within]. Mome, malt-horse, capon, coxcomb, idiot, patch!
Either get thee from the door or sit down at the hatch.
Dost thou conjure for wenches, that thou call'st for such store,
When one is one too many? Go, get thee from the door.
E. DROMIO. What patch is made our porter? My master stays in the street.
S. DROMIO. Let him walk from whence he came, lest he catch cold on's feet.
E. ANTIPHOLUS. Who talks within there? ho, open the door!
S. DROMIO. Right sir, I'll tell you when, an you'll tell me wherefore.
E. ANTIPHOLUS. Wherefore? for my dinner: I have not dined to-day.
S. DROMIO. Nor to-day here you must not; come again when you may.
E. ANTIPHOLUS. What art thou that keep'st me out from the house I owe?
S. DROMIO. The porter for this time, sir, and my name is Dromio.
E. DROMIO. O villain, thou hast stol'n both mine office and my name.
The one ne'er got me credit, the other mickle blame . . .
If thou hadst been Dromio to-day in my place,
Thou wouldst have changed thy face for an aim, or thy name for an ass.

Enter Luce, the kitchen-maid, within

LUCE. What a coil is there, Dromio? who are those at the gate?
E. DROMIO. Let my master in, Luce.
LUCE. Faith no, he comes too late.

And so tell your master.
E. DROMIO. O lord, I must laugh!
Have at you with a proverb—Shall I set in my staff?
LUCE. Have at you with another, that's—When? can you tell?
S. DROMIO. If thy name be called Luce—Luce, thou hast answered him well.
E. ANTIPHOLUS. Do you hear, you minion? you'll let us in, I hope?
LUCE. I thought to have asked you.
S. DROMIO. And you said, no.
E. DROMIO. So, come, help—well struck—there was blow for blow.
E. ANTIPHOLUS. Thou baggage, let me in.
LUCE. Can you tell for whose sake?
E. DROMIO. Master, knock the door hard.
LUCE. Let him knock till it ache.
E. ANTIPHOLUS. You'll cry for this, minion, if I beat the door down.
LUCE. What needs all that, and a pair of stocks in the town?

Enter Adriana, within

ADRIANA. Who is that at the door that keeps all this noise?
S. DROMIO. By my troth, your town is troubled with unruly boys.
E. ANTIPHOLUS. Are you there, wife? you might have come before.
ADRIANA. Your wife, sir knave! go, get you from the door.
E. DROMIO. If you went in pain, master, this 'knave' would go sore.
ANGELO. Here is neither cheer, sir, nor welcome! We would fain have either.
BALTHAZAR. In debating which was best, we shall part with neither.
E. DROMIO. They stand at the door, master. Bid them welcome hither.
E. ANTIPHOLUS. There is something in the wind, that we cannot get in.
E. DROMIO. You would say so, master, if your garments were thin.
Your cake here is warm within: you stand here in the cold.
It would make a man mad as a buck to be so bought and sold.
E. ANTIPHOLUS. Go, fetch me something—I'll break ope the gate.
S. DROMIO. Break any breaking here, and I'll break your knave's pate.
E. DROMIO. A man may break a word with you, sir, and words are but wind:
Ay, and break it in your face, so he break it not behind.
S. DROMIO. It seems thou want'st breaking. Out upon thee, hind!
E. DROMIO. Here's too much 'out upon thee'! I pray thee, let me in.
S. DROMIO. Ay, when fowls have no feathers, and fish have no fin.
E. ANTIPHOLUS. Well, I'll break in. Go borrow me a crow.
E. DROMIO. A crow without feather? master, mean you so?
For a fish without a fin, there's a fowl without a feather.
If a crow help us in, sirrah, we'll pluck a crow together.
E. ANTIPHOLUS. Go, get thee gone, fetch me an iron crow.
BALTHAZAR. Have patience, sir—O, let it not be so!
Herein you war against your reputation,
And draw within the compass of suspect
Th'unviolated honour of your wife.
Once this—your long experience of her wisdom,
Her sober virtue, years, and modesty,
Plead on her part some cause to you unknown;
And doubt not, sir, but she will well excuse
Why at this time the doors are made against you.
Be ruled by me, depart in patience,
And let us to the Tiger all to dinner.
And, about evening, come yourself alone,
To know the reason of this strange restraint.
If by strong hand you offer to break in,
Now in the stirring passage of the day,
A vulgar comment will be made of it;
And that supposéd by the common rout
Against your yet ungallèd estimation,
That may with foul intrusion enter in
And dwell upon your grave when you are dead;
For slander lives upon succession;
For ever housed where it gets possession.
E. ANTIPHOLUS. You have prevailed. I will depart in quiet,
And, in despite of mirth, mean to be merry.
I know a wench of excellent discourse,
Pretty and witty; wild and yet, too, gentle;
There will we dine: this woman that I mean,
My wife—but, I protest, without desert—
Hath oftentimes upbraided me withal:
To her will we to dinner. [to Angelo] Get you home,
And fetch the chain—by this, I know, 'tis made—
Bring it, I pray you, to the Porpentine,
For there's the house. That chain will I bestow—
Be it for nothing but to spite my wife—
Upon mine hostess there. Good sir, make haste.
Since mine own doors refuse to entertain me,
I'll knock elsewhere, to see if they'll disdain me.
ANGELO. I'll meet you at that place some hour hence.
E. ANTIPHOLUS. Do so. This jest shall cost me some expense. They go

Scene 2

Enter Luciana and Antipholus of Syracuse

LUCIANA. And may it be that you have quite forgot
A husband's office? Shall, Antipholus, hate
Even in the spring of love thy love-springs rot?
Shall love, in building, grow so ruinate?
If you did wed my sister for her wealth,
Then for her wealth's sake use her with more kindness:
Or, if you like elsewhere, do it by stealth,
Muffle your false love with some show of blindness:
Let not my sister read it in your eye:
Be not thy tongue thy own shame's orator:
Look sweet, speak fair, become disloyalty:
Apparel vice like virtue's harbinger:
Bear a fair presence, though your heart be tainted,
Teach sin the carriage of a holy saint,

Be secret-false: what need she be acquainted?
What simple thief brags of his own attaint?
'Tis double wrong, to truant with your bed
And let her read it in thy looks at board:
Shame hath a bastard fame, well managéd;
Ill deed is doubled with an evil word.
Alas, poor women! make us but believe,
Being compact of credit, that you love us—
Though others have the arm, show us the sleeve:
We in your motion turn, and you may move us.
Then, gentle brother, get you in again;
Comfort my sister, cheer her, call her wife;
'Tis holy sport, to be a little vain,
When the sweet breath of flattery conquers strife.

S. ANTIPHOLUS. Sweet mistress—what your name is else, I know not;
Nor by what wonder you do hit of mine—
Less in your knowledge and your grace you show not
Than our earth's wonder, more than earth divine.
Teach me, dear creature, how to think and speak:
Lay open to my earthy-gross conceit,
Smoth'red in errors, feeble, shallow, weak,
The folded meaning of your words' deceit.
Against my soul's pure truth why labour you
To make it wander in an unknown field?
Are you a god? would you create me new?
Transform me, then, and to your power I'll yield.
But if that I am I, then well I know
Your weeping sister is no wife of mine,
Nor to her bed no homage do I owe:
Far more, far more, to you do I decline.
O, train me not, sweet mermaid, with thy note,
To drown me in thy sister's flood of tears:
Sing, siren, for thyself, and I will dote:
Spread o'er the silver waves thy golden hairs;
And as a bed I'll take them, and there lie:
And, in that glorious supposition, think
He gains by death that hath such means to die:
Let Love, being light, be drownéd if she sink!

LUCIANA. What, are you mad, that you do reason so?

S. ANTIPHOLUS. Not mad, but mated—how, I do not know.

LUCIANA. It is a fault that springeth from your eye.

S. ANTIPHOLUS. For gazing on your beams, fair sun, being by.

LUCIANA. Gaze where you should, and that will clear your sight.

S. ANTIPHOLUS. As good to wink, sweet love, as look on night.

LUCIANA. Why call you me love? call my sister so.

S. ANTIPHOLUS. Thy sister's sister.

LUCIANA. That's my sister.

S. ANTIPHOLUS. No:
It is thyself, mine own self's better part:
Mine eye's clear eye, my dear heart's dearer heart;
My food, my fortune, and my sweet hope's aim;
My sole earth's heaven, and my heaven's claim.

LUCIANA. All this my sister is, or else should be.

S. ANTIPHOLUS. Call thyself sister, sweet, for I am thee:
Thee will I love, and with thee lead my life;
Thou hast no husband yet, nor I no wife:
Give me thy hand.

LUCIANA. O, soft, sir, hold you still.
I'll fetch my sister, to get her good will. She goes

Dromio of Syracuse enters

S. ANTIPHOLUS. Why, how now, Dromio! where run'st thou so fast?

S. DROMIO. Do you know me, sir? am I Dromio? am I your man? am I myself?

S. ANTIPHOLUS. Thou art Dromio, thou art my man, thou art thyself.

S. DROMIO. I am an ass, I am a woman's man, and besides myself.

S. ANTIPHOLUS. What woman's man? and how besides thyself?

S. DROMIO. Marry, sir, besides myself, I am due to a woman; one that claims me, one that haunts me, one that will have me.

S. ANTIPHOLUS. What claim lays she to thee?

S. DROMIO. Marry, sir, such claim as you would lay to your horse; and she would have me as a beast—not that, I being a beast, she would have me, but that she, being a very beastly creature, lays claim to me.

S. ANTIPHOLUS. What is she?

S. DROMIO. A very reverend body: ay, such a one as a man may not speak of without he say 'Sir-reverence.' I have but lean luck in the match, and yet is she a wondrous fat marriage.

S. ANTIPHOLUS. How dost thou mean a fat marriage?

S. DROMIO. Marry, sir, she's the kitchen-wench, and all grease—and I know not what use to put her to, but to make a lamp of her, and run from her by her own light. I warrant her rags and the tallow in them will burn a Poland winter: if she lives till doomsday, she'll burn a week longer than the whole world.

S. ANTIPHOLUS. What complexion is she of?

S. DROMIO. Swart, like my shoe, but her face nothing like so clean kept: for why? she sweats, a man may go over shoes in the grime of it.

S. ANTIPHOLUS. That's a fault that water will mend.

S. DROMIO. No, sir, 'tis in grain—Noah's flood could not do it.

S. ANTIPHOLUS. What's her name?

S. DROMIO. Nell, sir: but her name and three quarters, that's an ell and three quarters, will not measure her from hip to hip.

S. ANTIPHOLUS. Then she bears some breadth?

S. DROMIO. No longer from head to foot than from hip to hip: she is spherical, like a globe: I could find out countries in her.

S. ANTIPHOLUS. In what part of her body stands Ireland?

S. DROMIO. Marry, sir, in her buttocks—I found it out by the bogs.

S. ANTIPHOLUS. Where Scotland?

S. DROMIO. I found it by the barren-nesses, hard in the palm of the hand.

S. ANTIPHOLUS. Where France?

S. DROMIO. In her forehead—armed and reverted, making war against her heir.

S. ANTIPHOLUS. Where England?

S. DROMIO. I looked for the chalky cliffs, but I could find no whiteness in them. But I guess, it stood in her chin, by the salt rheum that ran between France and it.

S. ANTIPHOLUS. Where Spain?

S. DROMIO. Faith, I saw it not: but I felt it hot in her breath.

S. ANTIPHOLUS. Where America, the Indies?

S. DROMIO. O, sir, upon her nose, all o'er embellished with rubies, carbuncles, sapphires, declining their rich aspect to the hot breath of Spain, who sent whole armadoes of carracks to be ballast at her nose.

S. ANTIPHOLUS. Where stood Belgia, the Netherlands?

S. DROMIO. O, sir, I did not look so low. To conclude, this drudge, or diviner, laid claim to me—called me Dromio, swore I was assured to her, told me what privy marks I had about me, as the mark of my shoulder, the mole in my neck, the great wart on my left arm, that I, amazed, ran from her as a witch.
And, I think, if my breast had not been made of faith, and my heart of steel,
She had transformed me to a curtal-dog, and made me turn i'th' wheel.

S. ANTIPHOLUS. Go, hie thee presently post to the road,
An if the wind blow any way from shore,
I will not harbour in this town to-night.
If any bark put forth, come to the mart,
Where I will walk till thou return to me.
If every one know us, and we know none,
'Tis time, I think, to trudge, pack, and be gone.

S. DROMIO. As from a bear a man would run for life,
So fly I from her that would be my wife. He goes

S. ANTIPHOLUS. There's none but witches do inhabit here,
And therefore 'tis high time that I were hence.
She that doth call me husband, even my soul
Doth for a wife abhor. But her fair sister,
Possessed with such a gentle sovereign grace,
Of such enchanting presence and discourse,
Hath almost made me traitor to myself:
But, lest myself be guilty to self-wrong,
I'll stop mine ears against the mermaid's song.

Enter Angelo with the chain

ANGELO. Master Antipholus—

S. ANTIPHOLUS. Ay, that's my name.

ANGELO. I know it well, sir. Lo, here is the chain.
I thought to have ta'en you at the Porpentine.
The chain unfinished made me stay thus long.

S. ANTIPHOLUS. What is your will that I shall do with this?

ANGELO. What please yourself, sir: I have made it for you.

S. ANTIPHOLUS. Made it for me, sir! I bespoke it not.

ANGELO. Not once, nor twice, but twenty times you have:
Go home with it and please your wife withal,
And soon at supper-time I'll visit you,
And then receive my money for the chain.

S. ANTIPHOLUS. I pray you, sir, receive the money now,
For fear you ne'er see chain nor money more.

ANGELO. You are a merry man, sir. Fare you well.
He goes

S. ANTIPHOLUS. What I should think of this, I cannot tell:
But this I think, there's no man is so vain
That would refuse so fair an offered chain.
I see a man here needs not live by shifts,
When in the streets he meets such golden gifts:
I'll to the mart, and there for Dromio stay—
If any ship put out, then straight away.
He departs

ACT 4

Scene 1: The Mart

Angelo, a merchant and an officer

MERCHANT. You know since Pentecost the sum is due,
And since I have not much importuned you,
Nor now I had not, but that I am bound
To Persia, and want guilders for my voyage:
Therefore make present satisfaction,
Or I'll attach you by this officer.

ANGELO. Even just the sum that I do owe to you
Is growing to me by Antipholus,
And in the instant that I met with you
He had of me a chain. At five o'clock,
I shall receive the money for the same:
Pleaseth you walk with me down to his house,
I will discharge my bond, and thank you too.

Antipholus of Ephesus, and Dromio of Ephesus come from the courtesan's

OFFICER. That labour may you save: see where he comes.

E. ANTIPHOLUS. While I go to the goldsmith's house, go thou
And buy a rope's end—that will I bestow
Among my wife and her confederates,
For locking me out of my doors by day.
But soft, I see the goldsmith; get thee gone,
Buy thou a rope, and bring it home to me.

E. DROMIO. I buy a thousand pound a year! I buy a rope! He goes

E. ANTIPHOLUS. A man is well holp up that trusts to you!
I promisèd your presence and the chain,
But neither chain nor goldsmith came to me:
Belike you thought our love would last too long,
If it were chained together; and therefore came not.

ANGELO. Saving your merry humour, here's the note,
How much your chain weighs to the utmost carat,
The fineness of the gold, and chargeful fashion—
Which doth amount to three odd ducats more
Than I stand debted to this gentleman.
I pray you, see him presently discharged,
For he is bound to sea, and stays but for it.

E. ANTIPHOLUS. I am not furnished with the present money:
Besides, I have some business in the town.
Good signior, take the stranger to my house,
And with you take the chain, and bid my wife
Disburse the sum on the receipt thereof.
Perchance I will be there as soon as you.

ANGELO. Then you will bring the chain to her yourself?

E. ANTIPHOLUS. No, bear it with you, lest I come not time enough.

ANGELO. Well, sir, I will. Have you the chain about you?

E. ANTIPHOLUS. An if I have not, sir, I hope you have:
Or else you may return without your money.

ANGELO. Nay, come, I pray you, sir, give me the chain:
Both wind and tide stays for this gentleman,
And I, to blame, have held him here too long.

E. ANTIPHOLUS. Good Lord! you use this dalliance to excuse
Your breach of promise to the Porpentine.
I should have chid you for not bringing it,

But, like a shrew, you first begin to brawl.
MERCHANT. The hour steals on—I pray you, sir, dispatch.
ANGELO. You hear how he impórtunes me—the chain!
E. ANTIPHOLUS. Why, give it to my wife, and fetch your money.
ANGELO. Come, come, you know, I gave it you even now;
Either send the chain or send by me some token.
E. ANTIPHOLUS. Fie! now you run this humour out of breath.
Come, where's the chain? I pray you, let me see it.
MERCHANT. My business cannot brook this dalliance.
Good sir, say whe'er you'll answer me or no:
If not, I'll leave him to the officer.
E. ANTIPHOLUS. I answer you! What should I answer you?
ANGELO. The money that you owe me for the chain.
ANTIPHOLUS. I owe you none till I receive the chain.
ANGELO. You know I gave it you half an hour since.
E. ANTIPHOLUS. You gave me none, you wrong me much to say so.
ANGELO. You wrong me more, sir, in denying it.
Consider how it stands upon my credit.
MERCHANT. Well, officer, arrest him at my suit.
OFFICER. I do,
And charge you in the duke's name to obey me.
ANGELO. This touches me in reputation.
Either consent to pay this sum for me,
Or I attach you by this officer.
E. ANTIPHOLUS. Consent to pay thee that I never had!
Arrest me, foolish fellow, if thou dar'st.
ANGELO. Here is thy fee, arrest him officer.
I would not spare my brother in this case,
If he should scorn me so apparently.
OFFICER. I do arrest you, sir. You hear the suit.
E. ANTIPHOLUS. I do obey thee, till I give thee bail.
But, sirrah, you shall buy this sport as dear
As all the metal in your shop will answer.
ANGELO. Sir, sir, I shall have law in Ephesus,
To your notorious shame, I doubt it not.

Dromio of Syracuse returns from the Bay

S. DROMIO. Master, there's a bark of Epidamnum,
That stays but till her owner comes aboard,
And then she bears away....Our fraughtage, sir,
I have conveyed aboard, and I have bought
The oil, the balsamum, and aqua-vitæ.
The ship is in her trim, the merry wind
Blows fair from land: they stay for nought at all
But for their owner, master, and yourself.
E. ANTIPHOLUS. How now! a madman? Why, thou peevish sheep,
What ship of Epidamnum stays for me?
S. DROMIO. A ship you sent me to, to hire waftage.
E. ANTIPHOLUS. Thou drunken slave, I sent thee for a rope,
And told thee to what purpose and what end.
S. DROMIO. You sent me for a rope's-end, sir, as soon.
You sent me to the Bay, sir, for a bark.
E. ANTIPHOLUS. I will debate this matter at more leisure,
And teach your ears to list me with more heed.
To Adriana, villain, hie thee straight:
Give her this key, and tell her, in the desk
That's covered o'er with Turkish tapestry
There is a purse of ducats—let her send it:
Tell her I am arrested in the street,
And that shall bail me: hie thee, slave—be gone.
On, officer, to prison till it come.
He departs with the officer; Angelo and the merchant following
S. DROMIO. To Adriana! that is where we dined,
Where Dowsabel did claim me for her husband.
She is too big, I hope, for me to compass.
Thither I must, although against my will;
For servants must their masters' minds fulfil.
He goes

Scene 2: The house of Antipholus

Enter Adriana and Luciana

ADRIANA. Ah, Luciana, did he tempt thee so?
Might'st thou perceive a surety in his eye,
That he did plead in earnest? yea or no?
Looked he or red or pale, or sad or merrily?
What observation mad'st thou in this case,
Of his heart's meteors tilting in his face?
LUCIANA. First, he denied you had in him no right.
ADRIANA. He meant he did me none: the more my spite.
LUCIANA. Then swore he that he was a stranger here.
ADRIANA. And true he swore, though yet forsworn he were.
LUCIANA. Then pleaded I for you.
ADRIANA And what said he?
LUCIANA. That love I begged for you, he begged of me.
ADRIANA. With what persuasion did he tempt thy love?
LUCIANA. With words that in an honest suit might move.
First, he did praise my beauty, then my speech.
ADRIANA. Didst speak him fair?
LUCIANA. Have patience, I beseech.
ADRIANA. I cannot, nor I will not, hold me still.
My tongue, though not my heart, shall have his will.
He is deforméd, crookéd, old and sere,
Ill-faced, worse bodied, shapeless every where:
Vicious, ungentle, foolish, blunt, unkind,
Stigmatical in making, worse in mind.
LUCIANA. Who would be jealous then of such a one?
No evil lost is wailed when it is gone.
ADRIANA. Ah, but I think him better than I say;
And yet would herein others' eyes were worse.
Far from her nest the lapwing cries away;
My heart prays for him, though my tongue do curse.

Dromio of Syracuse enters

S. DROMIO. Here, go—the desk, the purse! sweet now, make haste.
LUCIANA. How hast thou lost thy breath?
S. DROMIO. By running fast.
ADRIANA. Where is thy master, Dromio? is he well?
S. DROMIO. No, he's in Tartar limbo, worse than hell:
A devil in an everlasting garment hath him;
One whose hard heart is buttoned up with steel:
A fiend, a fury, pitiless and rough:
A wolf, nay worse, a fellow all in buff:
A back-friend, a shoulder-clapper, one that countermands
The passages of alleys, creeks, and narrow lands;

A hound that runs counter, and yet draws dry-foot well;
One that, before the Judgement, carries poor souls to 'hell.'
ADRIANA. Why, man, what is the matter?
S. DROMIO. I do not know the matter, he is 'rested on the case.
ADRIANA. What, is he arrested? tell me, at whose suit.
S. DROMIO. I know not at whose suit he is arrested well;
But he's in a suit of buff which 'rested him, that can I tell.
Will you send him, mistress redemption, the money in his desk?
ADRIANA. Go fetch it, sister. This I wonder at,
Luciana goes
That he, unknown to me, should be in debt.
Tell me, was he arrested on a band?
S. DROMIO. Not on a band, but on a stronger thing:
A chain, a chain! Do you not hear it ring?
ADRIANA. What, the chain?
S. DROMIO. No, no, the bell, 'tis time that I were gone!
It was two ere I left him, and now the clock strikes one.
ADRIANA. The hours come back! that did I never hear.
S. DROMIO. O yes. If any hour meet a sergeant, a' turns back for very fear.
ADRIANA. As if Time were in debt! how fondly dost thou reason!
S. DROMIO. Time is a very bankrupt, and owes more than he's worth to season.
Nay, he's a thief too: have you not heard men say,
That Time comes stealing on by night and day?
If a' be in debt and theft, and a sergeant in the way,
Hath he not reason to turn back an hour in a day?

Luciana returns with a purse

ADRIANA. Go, Dromio. There's the money, bear it straight,
And bring thy master home immediately.
Come, sister. I am pressed down with conceit:
Conceit, my comfort and my injury They go within

Scene 3: The Mart

Enter Antipholus of Syracuse

S. ANTIPHOLUS. There's not a man I meet but doth salute me
As if I were their well-acquainted friend,
And every one doth call me by my name:
Some tender money to me, some invite me;
Some other give me thanks for kindnesses;
Some offer me commodities to buy.
Even now a tailor called me in his shop,
And showed me silks that he had bought for me,
And, therewithal, took measure of my body.
Sure, these are but imaginary wiles,
And Lapland sorcerers inhabit here.

Dromio of Syracuse enters

S. DROMIO. Master, here's the gold you sent me for. Where have you got the picture of old Adam new-apparelled?

S. ANTIPHOLUS. What gold is this? What Adam dost thou mean?

S. DROMIO. Not that Adam that kept the Paradise, but that Adam that keeps the prison; he that goes in the calf's skin that was killed for the Prodigal; he that came behind you, sir, like an evil angel, and bid you forsake your liberty.

S. ANTIPHOLUS. I understand thee not.

S. DROMIO. No? why, 'tis a plain case: he that went, like a bass-viol, in a case of leather; the man, sir, that when gentlemen are tired gives them a sob, and 'rests them; he, sir, that takes pity on decayed men, and gives them suits of durance; he that sets up his rest to do more exploits with his mace than a morris-pike.

S. ANTIPHOLUS. What, thou mean'st an officer?

S. DROMIO. Ay, sir, the sergeant of the band: he that brings any man to answer it that breaks his band: one that thinks a man always going to bed, and says, 'God give you good rest!'

S. ANTIPHOLUS. Well, sir, there rest in your foolery. Is there any ship puts forth to-night? may we be gone?

S. DROMIO. Why, sir, I brought you word an hour since that the bark 'Expedition' put forth to-night, and then were you hindered by the sergeant to tarry for the hoy 'Delay'. Here are the angels that you sent for to deliver you.

S. ANTIPHOLUS. The fellow is distract, and so am I,
And here we wander in illusions:
Some blessèd power deliver us from hence!

The Courtesan enters

COURTESAN. Well met, well met, Master Antipholus.
I see, sir, you have found the goldsmith now:
Is that the chain you promised me to-day?
S. ANTIPHOLUS. Satan, avoid! I charge thee tempt me not!

S. DROMIO. Master, is this Mistress Satan?

S. ANTIPHOLUS. It is the devil.

S. DROMIO. Nay, she is worse, she is the devil's dam; and here she comes in the habit of a light wench, and thereof comes that the wenches say 'God damn me,' that's as much to say 'God make me a light wench.' It is written, they appear to men like angels of light. Light is an effect of fire, and fire will burn: ergo, light wenches will burn. Come not near her.

COURTESAN. Your man and you are marvellous merry, sir.
Will you go with me? We'll mend our dinner here.

S. DROMIO. Master, if you do, expect spoon-meat, or bespeak a long spoon.

S. ANTIPHOLUS. Why, Dromio?

S. DROMIO. Marry, he must have a long spoon that must eat with the devil.

S. ANTIPHOLUS. Avoid, thou fiend! what tell'st thou me of supping?
Thou art, as you are all, a sorceress:
I conjure thee to leave me and be gone.
COURTESAN. Give me the ring of mine you had at dinner,
Or, for my diamond, the chain you promised,
And I'll be gone, sir, and not trouble you.
S. DROMIO. Some devils ask but the parings of one's nail,
A rush, a hair, a drop of blood, a pin,

A nut, a cherry-stone;
But she, more covetous, would have a chain.
Master, be wise—an if you give it her,
The devil will shake her chain, and fright us with it.
COURTESAN. I pray you, sir, my ring, or else the chain.
I hope you do not mean to cheat me so!
S. ANTIPHOLUS. Avaunt, thou witch! Come, Dromio, let us go. He departs
S. DROMIO. 'Fly pride,' says the peacock—Mistress, that you know. He follows
COURTESAN. Now, out of doubt, Antipholus is mad,
Else would he never so demean himself.
A ring he hath of mine worth forty ducats,
And for the same he promised me a chain—
Both one and other he denies me now.
The reason that I gather he is mad,
Besides this present instance of his rage,
Is a mad tale he told to-day at dinner,
Of his own doors being shut against his entrance.
Belike his wife, acquainted with his fits,
On purpose shut the doors against his way.
My way is now to hie home to his house,
And tell his wife that, being lunatic,
He rushed into my house and took perforce
My ring away. This course I fittest choose,
For forty ducats is too much to lose. She goes

Scene 4

Antipholus of Ephesus enters with the officer

E. ANTIPHOLUS. Fear me not, man, I will not break away.
I'll give thee, ere I leave thee, so much money,
To warrant thee, as I am 'rested for.
My wife is in a wayward mood to-day,
And will not lightly trust the messenger.
That I should be attached in Ephesus,
I tell you, 'twill sound harshly in her ears.

Enter Dromio of Ephesus, with a rope's end

Here comes my man, I think he brings the money.
How now, sir! have you that I sent you for?
E. DROMIO. Here's that, I warrant you, will pay them all.
E. ANTIPHOLUS. But where's the money?
E. DROMIO. Why, sir, I gave the money for the rope.
E. ANTIPHOLUS. Five hundred ducats, villain, for a rope?
E. DROMIO. I'll serve you, sir, five hundred at the rate.
rate;
E. ANTIPHOLUS. To what end did I bid thee hie thee home?
E. DROMIO. To a rope's-end, sir, and to that end am I returned.
E. ANTIPHOLUS. And to that end, sir, I will welcome you. He beats him
OFFICER. Good sir, be patient.
E. DROMIO. Nay, 'tis for me to be patient. I am in adversity.
OFFICER. Good now, hold thy tongue.
E. DROMIO. Nay, rather persuade him to hold his hands.
E. ANTIPHOLUS. Thou whoreson, senseless villain!
E. DROMIO. I would I were senseless, sir, that I might not feel your blows.
E. ANTIPHOLUS. Thou art sensible in nothing but blows, and so is an ass.
E. DROMIO. I am an ass, indeed—you may prove it by my long 'ears. I have served him from the hour of my nativity to this instant, and have nothing at his hands for my service but blows. When I am cold, he heats me with beating: when I am warm, he cools me with beating: I am waked with it when I sleep, raised with it when I sit, driven out of doors with it when I go from home, welcomed home with it when I return; nay, I bear it on my shoulders, as a beggar wont her brat: and, I think, when he hath lamed me, I shall beg with it from door to door.

Enter Adriana, Luciana, the Courtesan and a schoolmaster called Pinch

E. ANTIPHOLUS. Come, go along—my wife is coming yonder.
E. DROMIO. Mistress, 'respice finem,' respect your end, or rather, to prophesy like the parrot, 'beware the rope's-end.'
E. ANTIPHOLUS. Wilt thou still talk? He beats him
COURTESAN. How say you now? is not your husband mad?
ADRIANA. His incivility confirms no less.
Good Doctor Pinch, you are a conjurer—
Establish him in his true sense again,
And I will please you what you will demand.
LUCIANA. Alas, how fiery and how sharp he looks!
COURTESAN. Mark how he trembles in his ecstasy!
PINCH. Give me your hand, and let me feel your pulse.
Antipholus strikes him
E. ANTIPHOLUS. There is my hand, and let it feel your ear.
PINCH. I charge thee, Satan, housed within this man,
To yield possession to my holy prayers,
And to thy state of darkness hie thee straight.
I conjure thee by all the saints in heaven.
E. ANTIPHOLUS. Peace, doting wizard, peace; I am not mad.
ADRIANA. O, that thou wert not, poor distresséd soul!
E. ANTIPHOLUS. You minion, you, are these your customers?
Did this companion with the saffron face
Revel and feast it at my house to-day,
Whilst upon me the guilty doors were shut,
And I denied to enter in my house?
ADRIANA. O, husband, God doth know you dined at home,
Where would you had remained until this time,
Free from these slanders and this open shame.
E. ANTIPHOLUS. Dined at home! Thou villain, what sayest thou?
E. DROMIO. Sir, sooth to say, you did not dine at home.
E. ANTIPHOLUS. Were not my doors locked up, and I shut out?
E. DROMIO. Perdie, your doors were locked, and you shut out.
E. ANTIPHOLUS. And did not she herself revile me there?
E. DROMIO. Sans fable, she herself reviled you there.
E. ANTIPHOLUS. Did not her kitchen-maid rail, taunt, and scorn me?
E. DROMIO. Certes, she did—the kitchen-vestal scorned you.
E. ANTIPHOLUS. And did not I in rage depart from thence?

E. DROMIO. In verity, you did—my bones bear witness,
That since have felt the vigour of his rage.
ADRIANA. Is't good to soothe him in these contraries?
PINCH. It is no shame. The fellow finds his vein,
And yielding to him humours well his frenzy.
E. ANTIPHOLUS. Thou hast suborned the goldsmith to arrest me.
ADRIANA. Alas, I sent you money to redeem you,
By Dromio here, who came in haste for it.
E. DROMIO. Money by me? heart and good-will you might,
But, surely, master, not a rag of money.
E. ANTIPHOLUS. Went'st not thou to her for a purse of ducats?
ADRIANA. He came to me, and I delivered it.
LUCIANA. And I am witness with her that she did.
E. DROMIO. God and the rope-maker bear me witness
That I was sent for nothing but a rope.
PINCH. Mistress, both man and master is possessed—
I know it by their pale and deadly looks.
They must be bound, and laid in some dark room.
E. ANTIPHOLUS. Say, wherefore didst thou lock me forth to-day,
And why dost thou deny the bag of gold?
ADRIANA. I did not, gentle husband, lock thee forth.
E. DROMIO. And, gentle master, I received no gold:
But I confess sir, that we were locked out.
ADRIANA. Dissembling villain, thou speak'st false in both.
E. ANTIPHOLUS. Dissembling harlot, thou art false in all,
And art confederate with a damnéd pack,
To make a loathsome abject scorn of me:
But with these nails I'll pluck out these false eyes
That would behold in me this shameful sport.

Enter three or four, and offer to bind him: he strives

ADRIANA. O, bind him, bind him, let him not come near me.
PINCH. More company! The fiend is strong within him!
LUCIANA. Ay me! poor man, how pale and wan he looks.
E. ANTIPHOLUS. What, will you murder me? Thou gaoler, thou,
I am thy prisoner; wilt thou suffer them
To make a rescue?
OFFICER. Masters, let him go:
He is my prisoner, and you shall not have him.
PINCH. Go, bind this man, for he is frantic too.
They bind Dromio of Ephesus
ADRIANA. What wilt thou do, thou peevish officer?
Hast thou delight to see a wretched man
Do outrage and displeasure to himself?
OFFICER. He is my prisoner—if I let him go,
The debt he owes will be required of me.
ADRIANA. I will discharge thee ere I go from thee.
Bear me forthwith unto his creditor,
And, knowing how the debt grows, I will pay it.
Good master doctor, see him safe conveyed
Home to my house. O most unhappy day!
E. ANTIPHOLUS. O most unhappy strumpet!
E. DROMIO. Master, I am here entred in bond for you.
E. ANTIPHOLUS. Out on thee, villain! wherefore dost thou mad me?
E. DROMIO. Will you be bound for nothing? be mad, good master—
Cry, 'The devil!'
LUCIANA. God help, poor souls, how idly do they talk.
ADRIANA. Go bear him hence. Sister, go you with me.

Pinch and his assistants carry off Antipholus of Ephesus and Dromio of Ephesus

Say now, whose suit is he arrested at?
OFFICER. One Angelo a goldsmith, do you know him?
ADRIANA. I know the man: what is the sum he owes?
OFFICER. Two hundred ducats.
ADRIANA. Say, how grows it due?
OFFICER. Due for a chain your husband had of him.
ADRIANA. He did bespeak a chain for me, but had it not.
COURTESAN. When as your husband, all in rage, to-day
Came to my house, and took away my ring—
The ring I saw upon his finger now—
Straight after did I meet him with a chain.
ADRIANA. It may be so, but I did never see it.
Come, gaoler, bring me where the goldsmith is,
I long to know the truth hereof at large.

Enter Antipholus of Syracuse, with his rapier drawn, and Dromio of Syracuse

LUCIANA. God, for thy mercy! they are loose again.
ADRIANA. And come with naked swords—let's call more help
To have them bound again.
OFFICER. Away, they'll kill us.
They run all out, as fast as may be, frighted
S. ANTIPHOLUS. I see these witches are afraid of swords.
S. DROMIO. She that would be your wife now ran from you.
S. ANTIPHOLUS. Come to the Centaur, fetch our stuff from hence:
I long that we were safe and sound aboard.
S. DROMIO. Faith, stay here this night, they will surely do us no harm: you see they speak us fair, give us gold: methinks they are such a gentle nation, that but for the mountain of mad flesh that claims marriage of me, I could find in my heart to stay here still, and turn witch.
S. ANTIPHOLUS. I will not stay to-night for all the town—
Therefore away, to get our stuff aboard. They go

ACT 5

Scene 1: Before a Priory

Angelo and the merchant

ANGELO. I am sorry, sir, that I have hind'red you,
But I protest he had the chain of me.
Though most dishonestly he doth deny it.
MERCHANT. How is the man esteemed here in the city?
ANGELO. Of very reverend reputation, sir,
Of credit infinite, highly beloved,
Second to none that lives here in the city:
His word might bear my wealth at any time.
MERCHANT. Speak softly—yonder, as I think, he walks.

Antipholus and Dromio of Syracuse approach

ANGELO. 'Tis so; and that self chain about his neck,
Which he forswore most monstrously to have.
Good sir, draw near with me, I'll speak to him.
Signior Antipholus, I wonder much
That you would put me to this shame and trouble,
And not without some scandal to yourself,
With circumstance and oaths so to deny
This chain which now you wear so openly.
Beside the charge, the shame, imprisonment,
You have done wrong to this my honest friend,
Who, but for staying on our controversy,
Had hoisted sail and put to sea to-day:
This chain you had of me, can you deny it?
S. ANTIPHOLUS. I think I had. I never did deny it.
MERCHANT. Yes, that you did, sir, and forswore it too.
S. ANTIPHOLUS. Who heard me to deny it or forswear it?
MERCHANT. These ears of mine, thou know'st, did hear thee.
Fie on thee, wretch! 'tis pity that thou liv'st
To walk where any honest men resort.
S. ANTIPHOLUS. Thou art a villain to impeach me thus.
I'll prove mine honour and mine honesty
Against thee presently, if thou dar'st stand.
MERCHANT. I dare, and do defy thee for a villain.
They draw

Adriana, Luciana, the Courtesan, and others enter

ADRIANA. Hold, hurt him not for God's sake! he is mad.
Some get within him, take his sword away:
Bind Dromio too, and bear them to my house.
S. DROMIO. Run, master, run—for God's sake take a house—
This is some priory—in—or we are spoiled.

S. Dromio and S. Antipholus go into the Priory
The Lady Abbess enters

ABBESS. Be quiet, people. Wherefore throng you hither?
ADRIANA. To fetch my poor distracted husband hence.
Let us come in, that we may bind him fast,
And bear him home for his recovery.
ANGELO. I knew he was not in his perfect wits.
MERCHANT. I am sorry now that I did draw on him.
ABBESS. How long hath this possession held the man?
ADRIANA. This week he hath been heavy, sour, sad,
And much much different from the man he was:
But till this afternoon his passion
Ne'er brake into extremity of rage.
ABBESS. Hath he not lost much wealth by wreck of sea?
Buried some dear friend? Hath not else his eye
Strayed his affection in unlawful love?
A sin prevailing much in youthful men,
Who give their eyes the liberty of gazing.
Which of these sorrows is he subject to?
ADRIANA. To none of these, except it be the last,
Namely, some love that drew him oft from home.
ABBESS. You should for that have reprehended him.
ADRIANA. Why, so I did.
ABBESS. Ay, but not rough enough.
ADRIANA. As roughly as my modesty would let me.
ABBESS. Haply, in private.
ADRIANA. And in assemblies too.
ABBESS. Ay, but not enough.
ADRIANA. It was the copy of our conference.
In bed, he slept not for my urging it:
At board, he fed not for my urging it:
Alone, it was the subject of my theme:
In company I often glancéd it:
Still did I tell him it was vile and bad.
ABBESS. And thereof came it that the man was mad.
The venom clamours of a jealous woman
Poison more deadly than a mad dog's tooth.
It seems his sleeps were hind'red by thy railing,
And thereof comes it that his head is light.
Thou say'st his meat was sauced with thy upbraidings,
Unquiet meals make ill digestions,
Thereof the raging fire of fever bred—
And what's a fever but a fit of madness?
Thou say'st his sports were hind'red by thy brawls:
Sweet recreation barred, what doth ensue
But moody and dull melancholy,
Kinsman to grim and comfortless despair,
And at her heels a huge infectious troop
Of pale distemperatures and foes to life?
In food, in sport, and life preserving rest
To be disturbed, would mad or man or beast:
The consequence is, then, thy jealous fits
Hath scared thy husband from the use of wits.
LUCIANA. She never reprehended him but mildly,
When he demeaned himself rough, rude, and wildly.
Why bear you these rebukes and answer not?
ADRIANA. She did betray me to my own reproof.
Good people, enter and lay hold on him.
ABBESS. No, not a creature enters in my house.
ADRIANA. Then, let your servants bring my husband forth.
ABBESS. Neither. He took this place for sanctuary,
And it shall privilege him from your hands
Till I have brought him to his wits again,
Or lose my labour in assaying it.
ADRIANA. I will attend my husband, be his nurse,
Diet his sickness, for it is my office,
And will have no attorney but myself,
And therefore let me have him home with me.
ABBESS. Be patient, for I will not let him stir
Till I have used the approvéd means I have,
With wholesome syrups, drugs, and holy prayers,
To make of him a formal man again:
It is a branch and parcel of mine oath,
A charitable duty of my order,
Therefore depart, and leave him here with me.
ADRIANA. I will not hence, and leave my husband here:
And ill it doth beseem your holiness
To separate the husband and the wife.
ABBESS. Be quiet and depart, thou shalt not have him.
She goes
LUCIANA. Complain unto the duke of this indignity.
ADRIANA. Come, go, I will fall prostrate at his feet,
And never rise until my tears and prayers
Have won his grace to come in person hither,
And take perforce my husband from the abbess.
MERCHANT. By this, I think, the dial points at five:
Anon, I'm sure, the duke himself in person
Comes this way to the melancholy vale;

The place of death and sorry execution,
Behind the ditches of the abbey here.
ANGELO. Upon what cause?
MERCHANT. To see a reverend Syracusian merchant,
Who put unluckily into this Bay
Against the laws and statutes of this town,
Beheaded publicly for his offence.
ANGELO. See, where they come, we will behold his death.
LUCIANA. Kneel to the duke before he pass the abbey.

Enter the Duke of Ephesus, Ægeon the merchant of Syracuse, bareheaded, with the headsman and other officers

DUKE. Yet once again proclaim it publicly,
If any friend will pay the sum for him,
He shall not die—so much we tender him.
ADRIANA. Justice, most sacred duke, against the abbess!
DUKE. She is a virtuous and a reverend lady.
It cannot be that she hath done thee wrong.
ADRIANA. May it please your grace, Antipholus, my husband—
Who I made lord of me and all I had,
At your important letters—this ill day
A most outrageous fit of madness took him:
That desp'rately he hurried through the street—
With him his bondman all as mad as he—
Doing displeasure to the citizens
By rushing in their houses—bearing thence
Rings, jewels, anything his rage did like.
Once did I get him bound, and sent him home,
Whilst to take order for the wrongs I went,
That here and there his fury had committed.
Anon, I wot not by what strong escape,
He broke from those that had the guard of him,
And with his mad attendant and himself,
Each one with ireful passion, with drawn swords,
Met us again and, madly bent on us,
Chased us away: till, raising of more aid,
We came again to bind them. Then they fled
Into this abbey, whither we pursued them;
And here the abbess shuts the gates on us,
And will not suffer us to fetch him out,
Nor send him forth that we may bear him hence.
Therefore, most gracious duke, with thy command,
Let him be brought forth and borne hence for help.
DUKE. Long since thy husband served me in my wars;
And I to thee engaged a prince's word,
When thou didst make him master of thy bed,
To do him all the grace and good I could.
Go, some of you, knock at the abbey-gate,
And bid the lady abbess come to me:
I will determine this before I stir.

A servant enters

SERVANT. O mistress, mistress! shift and save yourself.
My master and his man are both broke loose,
Beaten the maids a-row, and bound the doctor,
Whose beard they have singed off with brands of fire,
And ever as it blazed, they threw on him
Great pails of puddled mire to quench the hair;
My master preaches patience to him, and the while
His man with scissors nicks him like a fool:
And, sure, unless you send some present help,
Between them they will kill the conjurer.
ADRIANA. Peace, fool, thy master and his man are here,
And that is false thou dost report to us.
SERVANT. Mistress, upon my life, I tell you true,
I have not breathed almost since I did see it.
He cries for you and vows, if he can take you,
To scorch your face, and to disfigure you.

Cries heard from the house

Hark, Hark, I hear him, mistress: fly, be gone.
DUKE. Come, stand by me, fear nothing. Guard with halberds!

Antipholus and Dromio of Ephesus enter

ADRIANA. Ay me, it is my husband! Witness you,
That he is borne about invisible!
Even now we housed him in the abbey here;
And now he's there, past thought of human reason.
E. ANTIPHOLUS. Justice, most gracious duke! O, grant me justice,
Even for the service that long since I did thee,
When I bestrid thee in the wars, and took
Deep scars to save thy life; even for the blood
That then I lost for thee, now grant me justice.
ÆGEON. Unless the fear of death doth make me dote,
I see my son Antipholus, and Dromio.
E. ANTIPHOLUS. Justice, sweet prince, against that woman there!
She whom thou gav'st to me to be my wife;
That hath abuséd and dishonoured me,
Even in the strength and height of injury:
Beyond imagination is the wrong
That she this day hath shameless thrown on me.
DUKE. Discover how, and thou shalt find me just.
E. ANTIPHOLUS. This day, great duke, she shut the doors upon me,
While she with harlots feasted in my house.
DUKE. A grievous fault. Say, woman, didst thou so?
ADRIANA. No, my good lord. Myself, he, and my sister
To-day did dine together: so befall my soul
As this is false he burdens me withal.
LUCIANA. Ne'er may I look on day, nor sleep on night,
But she tells to your highness simple truth.
ANGELO. O perjured woman! They are both forsworn.
In this the madman justly chargeth them.
E. ANTIPHOLUS. My liege, I am advised what I say—
Neither disturbed with the effect of wine,
Nor heady-rash, provoked with raging ire,
Albeit my wrongs might make one wiser mad.
This woman locked me out this day from dinner;
That goldsmith there, were he not packed with her,
Could witness it—for he was with me then,
Who parted with me to go fetch a chain,
Promising to bring it to the Porpentine,
Where Balthazar and I did dine together.
Our dinner done, and he not coming thither,
I went to seek him. In the street I met him,
And in his company that gentleman.
There did this perjured goldsmith swear me down
That I this day of him received the chain,
Which, God he knows, I saw not; for the which,
He did arrest me with an officer.
I did obey, and sent my peasant home
For certain ducats: he with none returned.
Then fairly I bespoke the officer
To go in person with me to my house.
By th' way we met
My wife, her sister, and a rabble more

Of vile confederates. Along with them
They brought one Pinch, a hungry lean-faced villain;
A mere anatomy, a mountebank,
A threadbare juggler, and a fortune-teller,
A needy, hollow-eyed, sharp-looking wretch;
A living-dead man. This pernicious slave,
Forsooth, took on him as a conjurer;
And, gazing in mine eyes, feeling my pulse,
And with no face, as 'twere, out-facing me,
Cries out, I was possessed. Then all together
They fell upon me, bound me, bore me thence,
And in a dark and dankish vault at home
There left me and my man, both bound together—
Till gnawing with my teeth my bonds in sunder,
I gained my freedom; and immediately
Ran hither to your grace, whom I beseech
To give me ample satisfaction
For these deep shames and great indignities.
ANGELO. My lord, in truth, thus far I witness with him;
That he dined not at home, but was locked out.
DUKE. But had he such a chain of thee, or no?
ANGELO. He had, my lord, and when he ran in here,
These people saw the chain about his neck.
MERCHANT. Besides, I will be sworn these ears of mine
Heard you confess you had the chain of him,
After you first forswore it on the mart,
And, thereupon, I drew my sword on you:
And then you fled into this abbey here,
From whence, I think, you are come by miracle.
E. ANTIPHOLUS. I never came within these abbey-walls,
Nor ever didst thou draw thy sword on me:
I never saw the chain, so help me Heaven:
And this is false you burden me withal.
DUKE. Why, what an intricate impeach is this!
I think you all have drunk of Circe's cup:
If here you housed him, here he would have been;
If he were mad, he would not plead so coldly:
You say he dined at home, the goldsmith here
Denies that saying. Sirrah, what say you?
E. DROMIO. Sir, he dined with her there at the Porpentine.
COURTESAN. He did, and from my finger snatched that ring.
E. ANTIPHOLUS. 'Tis true, my liege, this ring I had of her.
DUKE. Saw'st thou him enter at the abbey here?
COURTESAN. As sure, my liege, as I do see your grace.
DUKE. Why, this is strange. Go call the abbess hither.
I think you are all mated, or stark mad.

An attendant enters the abbey-gate

ÆGEON. Most mighty duke, vouchsafe me speak a word:
Haply I see a friend will save my life,
And pay the sum that may deliver me.
DUKE. Speak freely, Syracusian, what thou wilt.
ÆGEON. Is not your name, sir, called Antipholus?
And is not that your bondman Dromio?
E. DROMIO. Within this hour I was his bondman, sir,
But he, I thank him, gnawed in two my cords.
Now am I Dromio, and his man, unbound.
ÆGEON. I am sure you both of you remember me.
E. DROMIO. Ourselves we do remember, sir, by you:
For lately we were bound, as you are now.
You are not Pinch's patient, are you, sir?
ÆGEON. Why look you strange on me? you know me well.
E. ANTIPHOLUS. I never saw you in my life till now.
ÆGEON. O, grief hath changed me since you saw me last,
And careful hours with Time's deformèd hand
Have written strange defeatures in my face:
But tell me yet, dost thou not know my voice?
E. ANTIPHOLUS. Neither.
ÆGEON. Dromio, nor thou?
E. DROMIO. No, trust me, sir, nor I.
ÆGEON. I am sure thou dost!
E. DROMIO. Ay, sir, but I am sure I do not—and whatsoever a man denies, you are now bound to believe him.
ÆGEON. Not know my voice! O, time's extremity,
Hast thou so cracked and splitted my poor tongue
In seven short years, that here my only son
Knows not my feeble key of untuned cares?
Though now this grainèd face of mine be hid
In sap-consuming winter's drizzled snow,
And all the conduits of my blood froze up,
Yet hath my night of life some memory:
My wasting lamps some fading glimmer left:
My dull deaf ears a little use to hear:
All these old witnesses—I cannot err—
Tell me thou art my son Antipholus.
E. ANTIPHOLUS. I never saw my father in my life.
ÆGEON. But seven years since, in Syracusa, boy,
Thou know'st we parted. But, perhaps, my son,
Thou sham'st to acknowledge me in misery.
E. ANTIPHOLUS. The duke and all that know me in the city
Can witness with me that it is not so.
I ne'er saw Syracusa in my life.
DUKE. I tell thee, Syracusian, twenty years
Have I been patron to Antipholus,
During which time he ne'er saw Syracusa:
I see thy age and dangers make thee dote.

Enter the Abbess, Antipholus of Syracuse and Dromio of Syracuse

ABBESS. Most mighty duke, behold a man much wronged. All gather to see them
ADRIANA. I see two husbands, or mine eyes deceive me.
DUKE. One of these men is Genius to the other:
And so of these, which is the natural man,
And which the spirit? Who deciphers them?
S. DROMIO. I, sir, am Dromio—command him away.
E. DROMIO. I, sir, am Dromio—pray let me stay.
S. ANTIPHOLUS. Ægeon art thou not? or else his ghost?
S. DROMIO. O, my old master! who hath bound him here?
ABBESS. Whoever bound him, I will loose his bonds,
And gain a husband by his liberty.
Speak, old Ægeon, if thou beest the man
That hadst a wife once called Æmilia,
That bore thee at a burden two fair sons!
O, if thou beest the same Ægeon, speak;
And speak unto the same Æmilia.
DUKE. Why, here begins his morning story right:
These two Antipholuses, these two so like,
And these two Dromios, one in semblance—
Besides her urging of her wreck at sea—
These are the parents to these children,
Which accidentally are met together.

ÆGEON. If I dream not, thou art Æmilia.
If thou art she, tell me where is that son
That floated with thee on the fatal raft?
ABBESS. By men of Epidamnum, he and I
And the twin Dromio, all were taken up;
But by and by rude fishermen of Corinth
By force took Dromio and my son from them,
And me they left with those of Epidamnum.
What then became of them, I cannot tell;
I to this fortune that you see me in.
DUKE [to S. Antipholus]. Antipholus, thou cam'st from Corinth first.
S. ANTIPHOLUS. No, sir, not I. I came from Syracuse.
DUKE. Stay, stand apart—I know not which is which.
E. ANTIPHOLUS. I came from Corinth, my most gracious lord.
E. DROMIO. And I with him.
E. ANTIPHOLUS. Brought to this town by that most famous warrior,
Duke Menaphon, your most renownéd uncle.
ADRIANA. Which of you two did dine with me to-day?
S. ANTIPHOLUS. I, gentle mistress.
ADRIANA. And are not you my husband?
E. ANTIPHOLUS. No, I say nay to that.
S. ANTIPHOLUS. And so do I, yet did she call me so:
And this fair gentlewoman, her sister here,
Did call me brother. What I told you then,
I hope I shall have leisure to make good,
If this be not a dream I see and hear.
ANGELO. That is the chain, sir, which you had of me.
S. ANTIPHOLUS. I think it be, sir. I deny it not.
E. ANTIPHOLUS. And you, sir, for this chain arrested me.
ANGELO. I think I did, sir. I deny it not.
ADRIANA. I sent you money, sir, to be your bail,
By Dromio—but I think he brought it not.
E. DROMIO. No, none by me.
S. ANTIPHOLUS. This purse of ducats I received from you,
And Dromio my man did bring them me:
I see we still did meet each other's man,
And I was ta'en for him, and he for me,
And thereupon these errors are arose.
E. ANTIPHOLUS. These ducats pawn I for my father here.
DUKE. It shall not need, thy father hath his life.
COURTESAN. Sir, I must have that diamond from you.
E. ANTIPHOLUS. There, take it, and much thanks for my good cheer.
ABBESS. Renownéd duke, vouchsafe to take the pains
To go with us into the abbey here,
And hear at large discourséd all our fortunes:
And all that are assembled in this place,
That by this sympathizéd one day's error
Have suffered wrong, go, keep us company,
And we shall make full satisfaction.
Thirty-three years have I but gone in travail
Of you, my sons—and till this present hour
My heavy burden ne'er deliveréd.
The duke, my husband, and my children both,
And you the calendars of their nativity,
Go to a gossips' feast, and joy with me
After so long grief such Nativity!
DUKE. With all my heart I'll gossip at this feast.
All go except the four brothers
S. DROMIO. Master, shall I fetch your stuff from shipboard?
E. ANTIPHOLUS. Dromio, what stuff of mine hast thou embarked?
S. DROMIO. Your goods that lay at host, sir, in the Centaur.
S. ANTIPHOLUS. He speaks to me. I am your master, Dromio.
Come, go with us, we'll look to that anon.
Embrace thy brother there, rejoice with him.
Antipholus of Syracuse and Antipholus of Ephesus go
S. DROMIO. There is a fat friend at your master's house,
That kitchened me for you to-day at dinner:
She now shall be my sister, not my wife.
E. DROMIO. Methinks you are my glass, and not my brother:
I see by you I am a sweet-faced youth.
Will you walk in to see their gossiping?
S. DROMIO. Not I, sir, you are my elder.
E. DROMIO. That's a question—how shall we try it?
S. DROMIO. We'll draw cuts for the senior—till then, lead thou first.
E. DROMIO. Nay, then thus:
We came into the world like brother and brother:
And now let's go hand in hand, not one before another.
They go

ACT 1

Scene 1: Before the house of Leonato

Leonato, governor of Messina, Hero, his daughter, and Beatrice, his niece, with a messenger

LEONATO. I learn in this letter that Don Pedro of Arragon comes this night to Messina.

MESSENGER. He is very near by this. He was not three leagues off when I left him.

LEONATO. How many gentlemen have you lost in this action?

MESSENGER. But few of any sort, and none of name.

LEONATO. A victory is twice itself when the achiever brings home full numbers. I find here that Don Pedro hath bestowed much honour on a young Florentine called Claudio.

MESSENGER. Much deserved on his part, and equally remembered by Don Pedro. He hath borne himself beyond the promise of his age, doing in the figure of a lamb the feats of a lion. He hath indeed better bettered expectation than you must expect of me to tell you how.

LEONATO. He hath an uncle here in Messina will be very much glad of it.

MESSENGER. I have already delivered him letters, and there appears much joy in him—even so much, that joy could not show itself modest enough without a badge of bitterness.

LEONATO. Did he break out into tears?

MESSENGER. In great measure.

LEONATO. A kind overflow of kindness. There are no faces truer than those that are so washed. How much better is it to weep at joy than to joy at weeping!

BEATRICE. I pray you, is Signior Mountanto returned from the wars or no?

MESSENGER. I know none of that name, lady. There was none such in the army of any sort.

LEONATO. What is he that you ask for, niece?

HERO. My cousin means Signior Benedick of Padua.

MESSENGER. O, he's returned, and as pleasant as ever he was.

BEATRICE. He set up his bills here in Messina and challenged Cupid at the flight, and my uncle's fool reading the challenge subscribed for Cupid, and challenged him at the birdbolt. I pray you, how many hath he killed and eaten in these wars? But how many hath he killed? for indeed I promised to eat all of his killing.

LEONATO. Faith, niece, you tax Signior Benedick too much—but he'll be meet with you, I doubt it not.

MESSENGER. He hath done good service, lady, in these wars.

BEATRICE. You had musty victual, and he hath holp to eat it. He is a very valiant trencher-man, he hath an excellent stomach.

MESSENGER. And a good soldier too, lady.

BEATRICE. And a good soldier to a lady, but what is he to a lord?

MESSENGER. A lord to a lord, a man to a man—stuffed with all honourable virtues.

BEATRICE. It is so, indeed. He is no less than a stuffed man, but for the stuffing—well, we are all mortal.

LEONATO. You must not, sir, mistake my niece. There is a kind of merry war betwixt Signior Benedick and her. They never meet but there's a skirmish of wit between them.

BEATRICE. Alas, he gets nothing by that. In our last conflict, four of his five wits went halting off, and now is the whole man governed with one—so that if he have wit enough to keep himself warm, let him bear it for a difference between himself and his horse, for it is all the wealth that he hath left to be known a reasonable creature. Who is his companion now? he hath every month a new sworn brother.

MESSENGER. Is't possible?

BEATRICE. Very easily possible. He wears his faith but as the fashion of his hat, it ever changes with the next block.

MESSENGER. I see, lady, the gentleman is not in your books.

BEATRICE. No, an he were, I would burn my study. But I pray you who is his companion? Is there no young squarer now that will make a voyage with him to the devil?

MESSENGER. He is most in the company of the right noble Claudio.

BEATRICE. O Lord, he will hang upon him like a disease—he is sooner caught than the pestilence, and the taker runs presently mad. God help the noble Claudio. If he have caught the Benedict, it will cost him a thousand pound ere a' be cured.

MESSENGER. I will hold friends with you, lady.

BEATRICE. Do, good friend.

LEONATO. You will never run mad, niece.

BEATRICE. No, not till a hot January.

MESSENGER. Don Pedro is approached.

Enter Don Pedro, Claudio, Benedick, Balthazar and John the Bastard

DON PEDRO. Good Signior Leonato, are you come to meet your trouble? the fashion of the world is to avoid cost, and you encounter it.

LEONATO. Never came trouble to my house in the likeness of your grace. For trouble being gone, comfort should remain: but when you depart from me, sorrow abides and happiness takes his leave.

DON PEDRO. You embrace your charge too willingly. I think this is your daughter.

LEONATO. Her mother hath many times told me so.

BENEDICK. Were you in doubt, sir, that you asked her?

LEONATO. Signior Benedick, no—for then were you a child.

DON PEDRO. You have it full, Benedick—we may guess by this what you are, being a man. Truly the lady fathers herself. Be happy, lady, for you are like an honourable father.

BENEDICK. If Signior Leonato be her father, she would not have his head on her shoulders for all Messina, as like him as she is.

BEATRICE. I wonder that you will still be talking, Signior Benedick—nobody marks you.

BENEDICK. What, my dear Lady Disdain! are you yet living?

BEATRICE. Is it possible Disdain should die, while she hath such meet food to feed it as Signior Benedick? Courtesy itself must convert to disdain, if you come in her presence.

BENEDICK. Then is courtesy a turn-coat. But it is certain I am loved of all ladies, only you excepted: and I would I could find in my heart that I had not a hard heart, for truly I love none.

BEATRICE. A dear happiness to women—they would else have been troubled with a pernicious suitor. I thank God and my cold blood, I am of your humour for that. I had rather hear my dog bark at a crow than a man swear he loves me.

BENEDICK. God keep your ladyship still in that mind, so some gentleman or other shall 'scape a predestinate scratched face.

BEATRICE. Scratching could not make it worse, an 'twere such a face as yours were.

BENEDICK. Well, you are a rare parrot-teacher.

BEATRICE. A bird of my tongue is better than a beast of yours.

BENEDICK. I would my horse had the speed of your tongue, and so good a continuer. But keep your way a God's name—I have done.

BEATRICE. You always end with a jade's trick. I know you of old.

DON PEDRO. That is the sum of all, Leonato. Signior Claudio and Signior Benedick, my dear friend Leonato hath invited you all. I tell him we shall stay here at the least a month, and he heartily prays some occasion may detain us longer. I dare swear he is no hypocrite, but prays from his heart.

LEONATO. If you swear, my lord, you shall not be forsworn. [to Don John] Let me bid you welcome, my lord—being reconciled to the prince your brother. I owe you all duty.

DON JOHN. I thank you. I am not of many words, but I thank you.

LEONATO. Please it your grace lead on?

DON PEDRO. Your hand, Leonato—we will go together. All depart save Benedick and Claudio

CLAUDIO. Benedick, didst thou note the daughter of Signior Leonato?

BENEDICK. I noted her not, but I looked on her.

CLAUDIO. Is she not a modest young lady?

BENEDICK. Do you question me as an honest man should do, for my simple true judgement? or would you have me speak after my custom, as being a professed tyrant to their sex?

CLAUDIO. No, I pray thee speak in sober judgement.

BENEDICK. Why, i'faith, methinks she's too low for a high praise, too brown for a fair praise, and too little for a great praise—only this commendation I can afford her, that were she other than she is, she were unhandsome, and being no other but as she is, I do not like her.

CLAUDIO. Thou thinkest I am in sport. I pray thee tell me truly how thou lik'st her.

BENEDICK. Would you buy her, that you inquire after her?

CLAUDIO. Can the world buy such a jewel?

BENEDICK. Yea, and a case to put it into. But speak you this with a sad brow? or do you play the flouting Jack, to tell us Cupid is a good hare-finder, and Vulcan a rare carpenter? Come, in what key shall a man take you to go in the song?

CLAUDIO. In mine eye, she is the sweetest lady that ever I looked on.

BENEDICK. I can see yet without spectacles, and I see no such matter: there's her cousin, an she were not possessed with a fury, exceeds her as much in beauty as the first of May doth the last of December. But I hope you have no intent to turn husband, have you?

CLAUDIO. I would scarce trust myself, though I had sworn the contrary, if Hero would be my wife.

BENEDICK. Is't come to this? In faith hath not the world one man but he will wear his cap with suspicion? Shall I never see a bachelor of threescore again? Go to i'faith, an thou wilt needs thrust thy neck into a yoke, wear the print of it, and sigh away Sundays.

Don Pedro returns

Look, Don Pedro is returned to seek you.

DON PEDRO. What secret hath held you here, that you followed not to Leonato's?

BENEDICK. I would your grace would constrain me to tell.

DON PEDRO. I charge thee on thy allegiance.

BENEDICK. You hear, Count Claudio. I can be secret as a dumb man, I would have you think so—but on my allegiance, mark you this, on my allegiance! He is in love—with who? now that is your grace's part. Mark, how short his answer is—with Hero, Leonato's short daughter.

CLAUDIO. If this were so, so were it uttered.

BENEDICK. Like the old tale, my lord—'it is not so, nor 'twas not so: but indeed, God forbid it should be so.'

CLAUDIO. If my passion change not shortly, God forbid it should be otherwise.

DON PEDRO. Amen, if you love her—for the lady is very well worthy.

CLAUDIO. You speak this to fetch me in, my lord.

DON PEDRO. By my troth, I speak my thought.

CLAUDIO. And in faith, my lord, I spoke mine.

BENEDICK. And by my two faiths and troths, my lord, I spoke mine.

CLAUDIO. That I love her, I feel.

DON PEDRO. That she is worthy, I know.

BENEDICK. That I neither feel how she should be loved, nor know how she should be worthy, is the opinion that fire cannot melt out of me—I will die in it at the stake.

DON PEDRO. Thou wast ever an obstinate heretic in the despite of beauty.

CLAUDIO. And never could maintain his part but in the force of his will.

BENEDICK. That a woman conceived me, I thank her: that she brought me up, I likewise give her most humble thanks: but that I will have a recheat winded in my forehead, or hang my bugle in an invisible baldric, all women shall pardon me. Because I will not do them the wrong to mistrust any, I will do myself the right to trust none: and the fine is—for the which I may go the finer—I will live a bachelor.

DON PEDRO. I shall see thee, ere I die, look pale with love.

BENEDICK. With anger, with sickness, or with hunger, my lord—not with love: prove that ever I lose more blood with love than I will get again with drinking, pick out mine eyes with a ballad-maker's pen, and hang me up at the door of a brothel-house for the sign of blind Cupid.

DON PEDRO. Well, if ever thou dost fall from this faith, thou wilt prove a notable argument.

BENEDICK. If I do, hang me in a bottle like a cat and shoot at me, and he that hits me, let him be clapped on the shoulder and called Adam.

DON PEDRO. Well, as time shall try:
'In time the savage bull doth bear the yoke.'

BENEDICK. The savage bull may—but if ever the sensible Benedick bear it, pluck off the bull's horns and set them in my forehead. And let me be vilely painted—and in such great letters as they write, 'Here is good horse to hire,' let them signify under my sign, 'Here you may see Benedick the married man.'

CLAUDIO. If this should ever happen, thou wouldst be horn-mad.

DON PEDRO. Nay, if Cupid have not spent all his quiver in Venice, thou wilt quake for this shortly.

BENEDICK. I look for an earthquake too then.

DON PEDRO. Well, you will temporize with the hours. In the meantime, good Signior Benedick, repair to Leonato's, commend me to him, and tell him I will not fail him at supper—for indeed he hath made great preparation.

BENEDICK. I have almost matter enough in me for such an embassage, and so I commit you—

CLAUDIO. To the tuition of God: from my house if I had it—

DON PEDRO. The sixth of July: your loving friend, Benedick.

BENEDICK. Nay, mock not, mock not. The body of your discourse is sometime guarded with fragments, and the guards are but slightly basted on neither. Ere you flout old ends any further, examine your conscience—and so I leave you. He goes

CLAUDIO. My liege, your highness now may do me good.

DON PEDRO. My love is thine to teach. Teach it but how,
And thou shalt see how apt it is to learn
Any hard lesson that may do thee good.

CLAUDIO. Hath Leonato any son, my lord?

DON PEDRO. No child but Hero, she's his only heir:
Dost thou affect her, Claudio?

CLAUDIO. O my lord,
When you went onward on this ended action,
I looked upon her with a soldier's eye,
That liked, but had a rougher task in hand
Than to drive liking to the name of love:
But now I am returned, and that war-thoughts
Have left their places vacant, in their rooms
Come thronging soft and delicate desires,
All prompting me how fair young Hero is,
Saying I liked her ere I went to wars.

DON PEDRO. Thou wilt be like a lover presently,
And tire the hearer with a book of words.
If thou dost love fair Hero, cherish it,
And I will break with her, and with her father,
And thou shalt have her. Was't not to this end
That thou began'st to twist so fine a story?

CLAUDIO. How sweetly you do minister to love,
That know love's grief by his complexion!
But lest my liking might too sudden seem,
I would have salved it with a longer treatise.

DON PEDRO. What need the bridge much broader than the flood?
The fairest grant is the necessity:
Look, what will serve is fit: 'tis once, thou lovest,
And I will fit thee with the remedy.
I know we shall have revelling to-night—
I will assume thy part in some disguise,
And tell fair Hero I am Claudio,
And in her bosom I'll unclasp my heart,
And take her hearing prisoner with the force
And strong encounter of my amorous tale:
Then after to her father will I break—
And the conclusion is, she shall be thine.
In practice let us put it presently. They leave

Scene 2: The hall of Leonato's house

Enter Leonato and Antonio

LEONATO. How now brother, where is my cousin your son? Hath he provided this music?

ANTONIO. He is very busy about it. But brother, I can tell you strange news that you yet dreamt not of.

LEONATO. Are they good?

ANTONIO. As the event stamps them, but they have a good cover: they show well outward. The prince and Count Claudio, walking in a thick-pleached alley in mine orchard, were thus much overheard by a man of mine: the prince discovered to Claudio that he loved my niece your daughter, and meant to acknowledge it this night in a dance—and if he found her accordant, he meant to take the present time by the top and instantly break with you of it.

LEONATO. Hath the fellow any wit that told you this?

ANTONIO. A good sharp fellow. I will send for him, and question him yourself.

LEONATO. No, no, we will hold it as a dream till it appear itself: but I will acquaint my daughter withal, that she may be the better prepared for an answer, if peradventure this be true. Go you and tell her of it. [Antonio goes out at one door; his son enters at another, followed by a musician] Cousin, you know what you have to do—O, I cry you mercy friend, go you with me and I will use your skill. Good cousin have a care this busy time. They go

Scene 3

Enter Don John and Conrade

CONRADE. What the good-year, my lord! why are you thus out of measure sad?

DON JOHN. There is no measure in the occasion that breeds, therefore the sadness is without limit.

CONRADE. You should hear reason.

DON JOHN. And when I have heard it, what blessing brings it?

CONRADE. If not a present remedy, at least a patient sufferance.

DON JOHN. I wonder that thou—being as thou say'st thou art born under Saturn—goest about to apply a moral medicine to a mortifying mischief. I cannot hide what I am: I must be sad when I have cause, and smile at no man's jests; eat when I have stomach, and wait for no man's leisure; sleep when I am drowsy, and tend on no man's business; laugh when I am merry, and claw no man in his humour.

CONRADE. Yea, but you must not make the full show of this till you may do it without controlment. You have of late stood out against your brother, and he hath ta'en you newly into his grace, where it is impossible you should take true root but by the fair weather that you make yourself. It is needful that you frame the season for your own harvest.

DON JOHN. I had rather be a canker in a hedge than a rose in his grace, and it better fits my blood to be disdained of all than to fashion a carriage to rob love from any: in this, though I cannot be said to be a flattering honest man, it must not be denied but I am a plain-dealing villain. I am trusted with a muzzle and enfranchised with a clog—therefore I have decreed not to sing in my cage. If I had my mouth, I would bite: if I had my liberty, I would do my liking: in the meantime, let me be that I am, and seek not to alter me.

CONRADE. Can you make no use of your discontent?

DON JOHN. I make all use of it, for I use it only. Who comes here?

Borachio enters

What news, Borachio?

BORACHIO. I came yonder from a great supper. The prince your brother is royally entertained by Leonato, and I can give you intelligence of an intended marriage.

DON JOHN. Will it serve for any model to build mischief on? What is he for a fool that betroths himself to unquietness?

BORACHIO. Marry, it is your brother's right hand.

DON JOHN. Who, the most exquisite Claudio?

BORACHIO. Even he.

DON JOHN. A proper squire! and who, and who, which way looks he?

BORACHIO. Marry, on Hero the daughter and heir of Leonato.

DON JOHN. A very forward March-chick! How came you to this?

BORACHIO. Being entertained for a perfumer, as I was smoking a musty room, comes me the prince and Claudio, hand in hand in sad conference: I whipt me behind the arras, and there heard it agreed upon that the prince should woo Hero for himself, and having obtained her, give her to Count Claudio.

DON JOHN. Come, come, let us thither—this may prove food to my displeasure. That young start-up hath all the glory of my overthrow: if I can cross him any way, I bless myself every way. You are both sure, and will assist me?

CONRADE. To the death, my lord.

DON JOHN. Let us to the great supper—their cheer is the greater that I am subdued. Would the cook were o' my mind. Shall we go prove what's to be done?

BORACHIO. We'll wait upon your lordship.

They leave

ACT 2
Scene 1

Leonato, Antonio, Hero, Beatrice, Margaret, Ursula, and others of Leonato's household

LEONATO. Was not Count John here at supper?

ANTONIO. I saw him not.

BEATRICE. How tartly that gentleman looks. I never can see him but I am heart-burned an hour after.

HERO. He is of a very melancholy disposition.

BEATRICE. He were an excellent man that were made just in the mid-way between him and Benedick. The one is too like an image and says nothing, and the other too like my lady's eldest son, evermore tattling.

LEONATO. Then half Signior Benedick's tongue in Count John's mouth, and half Count John's melancholy in Signior Benedick's face—

BEATRICE. With a good leg and a good foot, uncle, and money enough in his purse, such a man would win any woman in the world if a' could get her good will.

LEONATO. By my troth, niece, thou wilt never get thee a husband, if thou be so shrewd of thy tongue.

ANTONIO. In faith, she's too curst.

BEATRICE. Too curst is more than curst. I shall lessen God's sending that way, for it is said, 'God sends a curst cow short horns'—but to a cow too curst he sends none.

LEONATO. So, by being too curst, God will send you no horns?

BEATRICE. Just, if he send me no husband—for the which blessing I am at him upon my knees every morning and evening. Lord! I could not endure a husband with a beard on his face—I had rather lie in the woollen!

LEONATO. You may light on a husband that hath no beard.

BEATRICE. What should I do with him? dress him in my apparel and make him my waiting-gentlewoman? He that hath a beard is more than a youth; and he that hath no beard is less than a man: and he that is more than a youth is not for me, and he that is less than a man I am not for him. Therefore I will even take sixpence in earnest of the bear'ard and lead his apes into hell.

LEONATO. Well then, go you into hell?

BEATRICE. No—but to the gate, and there will the devil meet me like an old cuckold with horns on his head, and say, 'Get you to heaven, Beatrice, get you to heaven—here's no place for you maids.' So deliver I up my apes, and away to Saint Peter: for the heavens, he shows me where the bachelors sit, and there live we as merry as the day is long.

ANTONIO [to Hero]. Well niece, I trust you will be ruled by your father.

BEATRICE. Yes faith, it is my cousin's duty to make curtsy, and say, 'Father, as it please you'. But yet for all that, cousin, let him be a handsome fellow, or else make another curtsy, and say, 'Father, as it please me.'

LEONATO. Well, niece, I hope to see you one day fitted with a husband.

BEATRICE. Not till God make men of some other mettle than earth. Would it not grieve a woman to be over-mastered with a piece of valiant dust? to make an account of her life to a clod of wayward marl? No, uncle, I'll none: Adam's sons are my brethren, and truly I hold it a sin to match in my kindred.

LEONATO. Daughter, remember what I told you. If the prince do solicit you in that kind, you know your answer.

BEATRICE. The fault will be in the music, cousin, if you be not wooed in good time: if the prince be too important, tell him there is measure in every thing, and so dance out the answer. For hear me, Hero—wooing, wedding, and repenting, is as a Scotch jig, a measure, and a cinque-pace: the first suit is hot and hasty like a Scotch jig, and full as fantastical; the wedding mannerly-modest, as a measure, full of state and ancientry; and then comes Repentance, and with his bad legs falls into the cinque-pace faster and faster, till he sink into his grave.

LEONATO. Cousin, you apprehend passing shrewdly.

BEATRICE. I have a good eye, uncle—I can see a church by daylight.

LEONATO. The revellers are ent'ring, brother. Make good room. They put on their masks

Enter Don Pedro, Claudio, Benedick, Don John, Borachio and others of Don Pedro's party also masked

DON PEDRO. Lady, will you walk a bout with your friend?

HERO. So you walk softly and look sweetly and say nothing, I am yours for the walk—and especially when I walk away.

DON PEDRO. With me in your company?

HERO. I may say so when I please.

DON PEDRO. And when please you to say so?

HERO. When I like your favour, for God defend the lute should be like the case!

DON PEDRO. My visor is Philemon's roof—within the house is Jove.

HERO. Why, then your visor should be thatched.

DON PEDRO. Speak low if you speak love.

They pass on round the room

BORACHIO. Well, I would you did like me.

MARGARET. So would not I for your own sake, for I have many ill qualities.

BORACHIO. Which is one?

MARGARET. I say my prayers aloud.

BORACHIO. I love you the better, the hearers may cry Amen.

MARGARET. God match me with a good dancer.

BORACHIO. Amen.

MARGARET. And God keep him out of my sight when the dance is done: answer, clerk.

BORACHIO. No more words—the clerk is answered.

They pass on round the room

URSULA. I know you well enough—you are Signior Antonio.

ANTONIO. At a word, I am not.

URSULA. I know you by the waggling of your head.

ANTONIO. To tell you true, I counterfeit him.

URSULA. You could never do him so ill-well, unless you were the very man: here's his dry hand up and down—you are he, you are he.

ANTONIO. At a word, I am not.

URSULA. Come, come, do you think I do not know you by your excellent wit? Can virtue hide itself? Go to, mum, you are he. Graces will appear, and there's an end. They pass on round the room

BEATRICE. Will you not tell me who told you so?

BENEDICK. No, you shall pardon me.

BEATRICE. Nor will you not tell me who you are?

BENEDICK. Not now.

BEATRICE. That I was disdainful, and that I had my good wit out of the 'Hundred Merry Tales'. Well, this was Signior Benedick that said so.

BENEDICK. What's he?

BEATRICE. I am sure you know him well enough.

BENEDICK. Not I, believe me.

BEATRICE. Did he never make you laugh?

BENEDICK. I pray you, what is he?

BEATRICE. Why, he is the prince's jester, a very dull fool—only his gift is in devising impossible slanders. None but libertines delight in him, and the commendation is not in his wit but in his villainy, for he both pleases men and angers them, and then they laugh at him and beat him. I am sure he is in the fleet—I would he had boarded me.

BENEDICK. When I know the gentleman, I'll tell him what you say.

BEATRICE. Do, do. He'll but break a comparison or two on me, which peradventure, not marked or not laughed at, strikes him into melancholy—and then there's a partridge wing saved, for the fool will eat no supper that night. We must follow the leaders.

BENEDICK. In every good thing.

BEATRICE. Nay, if they lead to any ill, I will leave them at the next turning.

The musicians strike up,
and the couples dance;
at the end all go except for
Don John, Borachio and Claudio

DON JOHN. Sure my brother is amorous on Hero, and hath withdrawn her father to break with him about it... The ladies follow her, and but one visor remains.

BORACHIO. And that is Claudio. I know him by his bearing.

DON JOHN. Are not you Signior Benedick?

CLAUDIO. You know me well—I am he.

DON JOHN. Signior, you are very near my brother in his love. He is enamoured on Hero. I pray you, dissuade him from her, she is no equal for his birth. You may do the part of an honest man in it.

CLAUDIO. How know you he loves her?

DON JOHN. I heard him swear his affection.

BORACHIO. So did I too, and he swore he would marry her to-night.

DON JOHN. Come, let us to the banquet.

He and Borachio go

CLAUDIO. Thus answer I in name of Benedick,
But hear these ill news with the ears of Claudio...
'Tis certain so—the prince wooes for himself.
Friendship is constant in all other things
Save in the office and affairs of love:
Therefore all hearts in love use their own tongues....
Let every eye negotiate for itself,
And trust no agent: for beauty is a witch
Against whose charms faith melteth into blood:
This is an accident of hourly proof,
Which I mistrusted not... Farewell, therefore,
Hero.

Benedick returns

BENEDICK. Count Claudio?

CLAUDIO. Yea, the same.

BENEDICK. Come, will you go with me?

CLAUDIO. Whither?

BENEDICK. Even to the next willow, about your own business, county. What fashion will you wear the garland of? about your neck, like an usurer's chain? or under your arm, like a lieutenant's scarf? You must wear it one way, for the prince hath got your Hero.

CLAUDIO. I wish him joy of her.

BENEDICK. Why, that's spoken like an honest drover—so they sell bullocks: but did you think the prince would have served you thus?

CLAUDIO. I pray you, leave me.

BENEDICK. Ho, now you strike like the blind man. 'Twas the boy that stole your meat, and you'll beat the post.

CLAUDIO. If it will not be, I'll leave you. He goes

BENEDICK. Alas, poor hurt fowl—now will he creep into sedges. But, that my Lady Beatrice should know me, and not know me. The prince's fool! ha, it may be I go under that title because I am merry: yea, but so I am apt to do myself wrong: I am not so reputed—it is the base, the bitter disposition of Beatrice that puts the world into her person, and so gives me out. Well, I'll be revenged as I may.

Don Pedro returns with Leonato and Hero; Leonato and Hero talk apart

DON PEDRO. Now, signior, where's the count? Did you see him?

BENEDICK. Troth, my lord, I have played the part of Lady Fame. I found him here as melancholy as a lodge in a warren. I told him, and I think I told him true, that your grace had got the good will of this young lady—and I off'red him my company to a willow tree, either to make him a garland, as being forsaken, or to bind him up a rod, as being worthy to be whipped.

DON PEDRO. To be whipped! What's his fault?

BENEDICK. The flat transgression of a school-boy, who, being overjoyed with finding a bird's-nest, shows it his companion, and he steals it.

DON PEDRO. Wilt thou make a trust a transgression? The transgression is in the stealer.

BENEDICK. Yet it had not been amiss the rod had been made, and the garland too—for the garland he might have worn himself, and the rod he might have bestowed on you, who, as I take it, have stolen his bird's-nest.

DON PEDRO. I will but teach them to sing, and restore them to the owner.

BENEDICK. If their singing answer your saying, by my faith you say honestly.

DON PEDRO. The Lady Beatrice hath a quarrel to you. The gentleman that danced with her told her she is much wronged by you.

BENEDICK. O, she misused me past the endurance of a block: an oak but with one green leaf on it would have answered her: my very visor began to assume life and scold with her. She told me, not thinking I had been myself, that I was the prince's jester, that I was duller than a great thaw—huddling jest upon jest with such impossible conveyance upon me, that I stood like a man at a mark, with a whole army shooting at me. She speaks poniards, and every word stabs: if her breath were as terrible as her terminations, there were no living near her, she would infect to the north star. I would not marry her, though she were endowed with all that Adam had left him before he transgressed. She would have made Hercules have turned spit, yea, and have cleft his club to make the fire too. Come, talk not of her. You shall find her the infernal Ate in good apparel—I would to God some scholar would conjure her, for certainly, while she is here, a man may live as quiet in hell as in a sanctuary—and people sin upon purpose because they would go thither, so indeed all disquiet, horror, and perturbation follow her.

Claudio and Beatrice enter

DON PEDRO. Look, here she comes.

BENEDICK. Will your grace command me any service to the world's end? I will go on the slightest errand now to the Antipodes that you can devise to send me on: I will fetch you a tooth-picker now from the furthest inch of Asia: bring you the length of Prester John's foot: fetch you a hair off the great Cham's beard: do you any embassage to the Pigmies—rather than hold three words' conference with this harpy. You have no employment for me?

DON PEDRO. None, but to desire your good company.

BENEDICK. O God, sir, here's a dish I love not—I cannot endure my Lady Tongue. He goes

DON PEDRO. Come, lady, come, you have lost the heart of Signior Benedick.

BEATRICE. Indeed my lord, he lent it me awhile, and I gave him use for it—a double heart for his single one. Marry, once before he won it of me with false dice, therefore your grace may well say I have lost it.

DON PEDRO. You have put him down, lady, you have put him down.

BEATRICE. So I would not he should do me, my lord, lest I should prove the mother of fools. I have brought Count Claudio, whom you sent me to seek.

DON PEDRO. Why, how now count, wherefore are you sad?

CLAUDIO. Not sad, my lord.

DON PEDRO. How then? Sick?

CLAUDIO. Neither, my lord.

BEATRICE. The count is neither sad, nor sick, nor merry, nor well: but civil count—civil as an orange, and something of that jealous complexion.

DON PEDRO. I'faith lady, I think your blazon to be true, though I'll be sworn, if he be so, his conceit is false . . . Here, Claudio, I have wooed in thy name and fair Hero is won, I have broke with her father and his good will obtained. Name the day of marriage, and God give thee joy.

LEONATO. Count, take of me my daughter, and with her my fortunes: his grace hath made the match, and all grace say Amen to it.

BEATRICE. Speak, count, 'tis your cue.

CLAUDIO. Silence is the perfectest herald of joy—I were but little happy, if I could say how much! Lady, as you are mine, I am yours. I give away myself for you and dote upon the exchange.

BEATRICE. Speak cousin, or, if you cannot, stop his mouth with a kiss, and let not him speak neither.

DON PEDRO. In faith, lady, you have a merry heart.

BEATRICE. Yea, my lord, I thank it—poor fool, it keeps on the windy side of care. My cousin tells him in his ear that he is in her heart.

CLAUDIO. And so she doth, cousin.

BEATRICE. Good Lord, for alliance! Thus goes every one to the world but I, and I am sun-burnt. I may sit in a corner and cry 'heigh-ho for a husband.'

DON PEDRO. Lady Beatrice, I will get you one.

BEATRICE. I would rather have one of your father's getting: hath your grace ne'er a brother like you? Your father got excellent husbands if a maid could come by them.

DON PEDRO. Will you have me, lady?

BEATRICE. No, my lord, unless I might have another for working-days—your grace is too costly to wear every day. But I beseech your grace pardon me, I was born to speak all mirth and no matter.

DON PEDRO. Your silence most offends me, and to be merry best becomes you, for out o' question you were born in a merry hour.

BEATRICE. No, sure, my lord, my mother cried—but then there was a star danced, and under that was I born. Cousins, God give you joy!

LEONATO. Niece, will you look to those things I told you of?

BEATRICE. I cry you mercy, uncle. By your grace's pardon. She goes

DON PEDRO. By my troth, a pleasant-spirited lady.

LEONATO. There's little of the melancholy element in her, my lord. She is never sad but when she sleeps, and not ever sad then: for I have heard my daughter say, she hath often dreamt of unhappiness and waked herself with laughing.

DON PEDRO. She cannot endure to hear tell of a husband.

LEONATO. O, by no means—she mocks all her wooers out of suit.

DON PEDRO. She were an excellent wife for Benedick.

LEONATO. O Lord, my lord, if they were but a week married, they would talk themselves mad.

DON PEDRO. County Claudio, when mean you to go to church?

CLAUDIO. To-morrow, my lord. Time goes on crutches till love have all his rites.

LEONATO. Not till Monday, my dear son, which is hence a just seven-night—and a time too brief too, to have all things answer my mind.

DON PEDRO. Come, you shake the head at so long a breathing—but I warrant thee, Claudio, the time shall not go dully by us. I will in the interim undertake one of Hercules' labours, which is, to bring Signior Benedick and the Lady Beatrice into a mountain of affection th'one with th'other. I would fain have it a match—and I doubt not but to fashion it, if you three will but minister such assistance as I shall give you direction.

LEONATO. My lord, I am for you, though it cost me ten nights' watchings.

CLAUDIO. And I, my lord.

DON PEDRO. And you too, gentle Hero?

HERO. I will do any modest office, my lord, to help my cousin to a good husband.

DON PEDRO. And Benedick is not the unhopefullest husband that I know: thus far can I praise him—he is of a noble strain, of approved valour, and confirmed honesty. I will teach you how to humour your cousin, that she shall fall in love with Benedick. And I, with your two helps, will so practise on Benedick that, in despite of his quick wit and his queasy stomach, he shall fall in love with Beatrice. If we can do this, Cupid is no longer an archer, his glory shall be ours—for we are the only love-gods. Go in with me, and I will tell you my drift. They go

Scene 2

Enter Don John and Borachio

DON JOHN. It is so—the Count Claudio shall marry the daughter of Leonato.

BORACHIO. Yea my lord, but I can cross it.

DON JOHN. And bar, any cross, any impediment will be medicinable to me. I am sick in displeasure to him, and whatsoever comes athwart his affection ranges evenly with mine. How canst thou cross this marriage?

BORACHIO. Not honestly, my lord—but so covertly that no dishonesty shall appear in me.

DON JOHN. Show me briefly how.

BORACHIO. I think I told your lordship, a year since, how much I am in the favour of Margaret, the waiting-gentlewoman to Hero.

DON JOHN. I remember.

BORACHIO. I can, at any unseasonable instant of the night, appoint her to look out at her lady's chamber-window.

DON JOHN. What life is in that to be the death of this marriage?

BORACHIO. The poison of that lies in you to temper. Go you to the prince your brother, spare not to tell him that he hath wronged his honour in marrying the renowned Claudio—whose estimation do you mightily hold up—to a contaminated stale, such a one as Hero.

DON JOHN. What proof shall I make of that?

BORACHIO. Proof enough to misuse the prince, to vex Claudio, to undo Hero, and kill Leonato. Look you for any other issue?

DON JOHN. Only to despite them, I will endeavour any thing.

BORACHIO. Go then, find me a meet hour to draw Don Pedro and the Count Claudio alone, tell them that you know that Hero loves me, intend a kind of zeal both to the prince and Claudio, as in love of your brother's honour, who hath made this match, and his friend's reputation, who is thus like to be cozened with the semblance of a maid. That you have discovered this they will scarcely believe without trial: offer them instances, which shall bear no less likelihood than to see me at her chamber-window, hear me call Margaret Hero, hear Margaret term me Claudio—and bring them to see this the very night before the intended wedding. For in the meantime I will so fashion the matter that Hero shall be absent, and there shall appear such seeming truth of Hero's disloyalty, that jealousy shall be called assurance, and all the preparation overthrown.

DON JOHN. Grow this to what adverse issue it can, I will put it in practice. Be cunning in the working this, and thy fee is a thousand ducats.

BORACHIO. Be you constant in the accusation, and my cunning shall not shame me.

DON JOHN. I will presently go learn their day of marriage. They go

Scene 3: Leonato's orchard

Benedick enters

BENEDICK. Boy! A boy runs up

BOY. Signior.

BENEDICK. In my chamber-window lies a book, bring it hither to me in the orchard.

BOY. I am here already, sir.

BENEDICK. I know that—but I would have thee hence, and here again. [the boy departs] I do much wonder, that one man seeing how much another man is a fool when he dedicates his behaviours to love, will after he hath laughed at such shallow follies in others, become the argument of his own scorn by falling in love. And such a man is Claudio. I have known when there was no music with him but the drum and the fife, and now had he rather hear the tabor and the pipe: I have known when he would have walked ten mile afoot, to see a good armour, and now will he lie ten nights awake carving the fashion of a new doublet: he was wont to speak plain, and to the purpose (like an honest man and a soldier) and now is he turned orthography—his words are a very fantastical banquet, just so many strange dishes. May I be so converted, and see with these eyes? I cannot tell—I think not: I will not be sworn but love may transform me to an oyster, but I'll take my oath on it, till he have made an oyster of me, he shall never make me such a fool. One woman is fair, yet I am well: another is wise, yet I am well: another virtuous, yet I am well: but till all graces be in one woman, one woman shall not come in my grace. Rich she shall be, that's certain: wise, or I'll none: virtuous, or I'll never cheapen her: fair, or I'll never look on her: mild, or come not near me: noble, or not I for an angel: of good discourse, an excellent musician, and her hair shall be of what colour it please God. Ha! the prince and Monsieur Love! I will hide me in the arbour. He does so

Enter Don Pedro, Leonato, Claudio and Balthazar with a lute

DON PEDRO. Come, shall we hear this music?

CLAUDIO. Yea, my good lord. How still the evening is,
As hushed on purpose to grace harmony!

DON PEDRO. See you where Benedick hath hid himself?

CLAUDIO. O very well, my lord: the music ended,
We'll fit the hid-fox with a pennyworth.

DON PEDRO. Come Balthazar, we'll hear that song again.

BALTHAZAR. O good my lord, tax not so bad a voice
To slander music any more than once.

DON PEDRO. It is the witness still of excellency,
To put a strange face on his own perfection.
I pray thee sing, and let me woo no more.

BALTHAZAR. Because you talk of wooing, I will sing,
Since many a wooer doth commence his suit
To her he thinks not worthy, yet he wooes,
Yet will he swear he loves.

DON PEDRO. Nay, pray thee come,
Or if thou wilt hold longer argument,
Do it in notes.

BALTHAZAR. Note this before my notes—
There's not a note of mine that's worth the noting.

DON PEDRO. Why these are very crotchets that he speaks—
Note notes, forsooth, and nothing!
Balthazar begins to play

BENEDICK. Now, divine air! now is his soul ravished. Is it not strange that sheeps' guts should hale souls out of men's bodies? Well, a horn for my money, when all's done.

BALTHAZAR [sings].

Sigh no more, ladies, sigh no more,
Men were deceivers ever,
One foot in sea, and one on shore,
To one thing constant never.
Then sigh not so, but let them go,
And be you blithe and bonny,
Converting all your sounds of woe
Into Hey nonny, nonny.

Sing no more ditties, sing no mo
Of dumps so dull and heavy,
The fraud of men was ever so,
Since summer first was leavy.
Then sigh not so, but let them go,
And be you blithe and bonny,
Converting all your sounds of woe
Into Hey nonny, nonny.

DON PEDRO. By my troth, a good song.

BALTHAZAR. And an ill singer, my lord.

DON PEDRO. Ha, no; no, faith; thou sing'st well enough for a shift.

BENEDICK. An he had been a dog that should have howled thus, they would have hanged him. And I pray God his bad voice bode no mischief—I had as lief have heard the night-raven, come what plague could have come after it.

DON PEDRO. Yea, marry. Dost thou hear, Balthazar? I pray thee get us some excellent music: for tomorrow night we would have it at the Lady Hero's chamber-window.

BALTHAZAR. The best I can, my lord.

DON PEDRO. Do so, farewell. Balthazar goes
Come hither, Leonato. What was it you told me of today? that your niece Beatrice was in love with Signior Benedick?

CLAUDIO. O ay, stalk on, stalk on—the fowl sits. [aloud] I did never think that lady would have loved any man.

LEONATO. No, nor I neither—but most wonderful that she should so dote on Signior Benedick, whom she hath in all outward behaviours seemed ever to abhor.

BENEDICK. Is't possible? Sits the wind in that corner?

LEONATO. By my troth, my lord, I cannot tell what to think of it, but that she loves him with an enraged affection—it is past the infinite of thought.

DON PEDRO. May be she doth but counterfeit.

CLAUDIO. Faith, like enough.

LEONATO. O God! counterfeit? There was never counterfeit of passion came so near the life of passion as she discovers it.

DON PEDRO. Why, what effects of passion shows she?

CLAUDIO. Bait the hook well—this fish will bite.

LEONATO. What effects, my lord! She will sit you—
You heard my daughter tell you how.

CLAUDIO. She did, indeed.

DON PEDRO. How, how, I pray you! You amaze me.

I would have thought her spirit had been invincible against all assaults of affection.

LEONATO. I would have sworn it had, my lord—especially against Benedick.

BENEDICK. I should think this a gull, but that the white-bearded fellow speaks it: knavery cannot, sure, hide himself in such reverence.

CLAUDIO. He hath ta'en th'infection—hold it up.

DON PEDRO. Hath she made her affection known to Benedick?

LEONATO. No, and swears she never will. That's her torment.

CLAUDIO. 'Tis true indeed, so your daughter says: 'Shall I,' says she, 'that have so oft encountered him with scorn, write to him that I love him?'

LEONATO. This says she now when she is beginning to write to him, for she'll be up twenty times a night, and there will she sit in her smock till she have writ a sheet of paper: my daughter tells us all.

CLAUDIO. Now you talk of a sheet of paper, I remember a pretty jest your daughter told us of.

LEONATO. O, when she had writ it, and was reading it over, she found 'Benedick' and 'Beatrice' between the sheet?

CLAUDIO. That.

LEONATO. O, she tore the letter into a thousand halfpence, railed at herself that she should be so immodest to write to one that she knew would flout her. 'I measure him,' says she, 'by my own spirit, for I should flout him if he writ to me—yea, though I love him, I should.'

CLAUDIO. Then down upon her knees she falls, weeps, sobs, beats her heart, tears her hair, prays, curses—'O sweet Benedick! God give me patience!'

LEONATO. She doth indeed—my daughter says so. And the ecstasy hath so much overborne her, that my daughter is sometime afeard she will do a desperate outrage to herself. It is very true.

DON PEDRO. It were good that Benedick knew of it by some other, if she will not discover it.

CLAUDIO. To what end? he would make but a sport of it, and torment the poor lady worse.

DON PEDRO. An he should, it were an alms to hang him. She's an excellent sweet lady, and—out of all suspicion—she is virtuous.

CLAUDIO. And she is exceeding wise.

DON PEDRO. In every thing but in loving Benedick.

LEONATO. O my lord, wisdom and blood combating in so tender a body, we have ten proofs to one that blood hath the victory. I am sorry for her, as I have just cause, being her uncle and her guardian.

DON PEDRO. I would she had bestowed this dotage on me. I would have daffed all other respects, and made her half myself. I pray you tell Benedick of it, and hear what a' will say.

LEONATO. Were it good, think you?

CLAUDIO. Hero thinks surely she will die—for she says she will die if he love her not, and she will die ere he make her love known, and she will die if he woo her rather than she will bate one breath of her accustomed crossness.

DON PEDRO. She doth well. If she should make tender of her love, 'tis very possible he'll scorn it—for the man, as you know all, hath a contemptible spirit.

CLAUDIO. He is a very proper man.

DON PEDRO. He hath indeed a good outward happiness.

CLAUDIO. Before God, and in my mind, very wise.

DON PEDRO. He doth indeed show some sparks that are like wit.

CLAUDIO. And I take him to be valiant.

DON PEDRO. As Hector, I assure you. And in the managing of quarrels you may say he is wise, for either he avoids them with great discretion, or undertakes them with a most Christian-like fear.

LEONATO. If he do fear God, a' must necessarily keep peace. If he break the peace, he ought to enter into a quarrel with fear and trembling.

DON PEDRO. And so will he do—for the man doth fear God, howsoever it seems not in him by some large jests he will make. Well, I am sorry for your niece. Shall we go seek Benedick, and tell him of her love?

CLAUDIO. Never tell him, my lord. Let her wear it out with good counsel.

LEONATO. Nay, that's impossible—she may wear her heart out first.

DON PEDRO. Well, we will hear further of it by your daughter. Let it cool the while. I love Benedick well, and I could wish he would modestly examine himself, to see how much he is unworthy so good a lady.

LEONATO. My lord, will you walk? dinner is ready.

CLAUDIO. If he do not dote on her upon this, I will never trust my expectation.

DON PEDRO. Let there be the same net spread for her—and that must your daughter and her gentle-women carry. The sport will be, when they hold one an opinion of another's dotage, and no such matter. That's the scene that I would see, which will be merely a dumb-show. Let us send her to call him in to dinner. They depart

Benedick returns

BENEDICK. This can be no trick. The conference was sadly borne. They have the truth of this from Hero. They seem to pity the lady. It seems her affections have their full bent. Love me! why, it must be requited. I hear how I am censured—they say I will bear myself proudly, if I perceive the love come from her: they say too that she will rather die than give any sign of affection. I did never think to marry. I must not seem proud. Happy are they that hear their detractions, and can put them to mending. They say the lady is fair—'tis a truth, I can bear them witness: and virtuous—'tis so, I cannot reprove it: and wise, but for loving me—by my troth, it is no addition to her wit, nor no great argument of her folly, for I will be horribly in love with her. I may chance have some odd quirks and remnants of wit broken on me, because I have railed so long against marriage: but doth not the appetite alter? a man loves the meat in his youth that he cannot endure in his age. Shall quips and sentences and these paper bullets of the brain awe a man from the career of his humour? No—the world must be peopled. When I said I would die a bachelor, I did not think I should live till I were married.

Beatrice approaches

Here comes Beatrice. By this day, she's a fair lady. I do spy some marks of love in her.

BEATRICE. Against my will I am sent to bid you come in to dinner.

BENEDICK. Fair Beatrice, I thank you for your pains.

BEATRICE. I took no more pains for those thanks than you take pains to thank me. If it had been painful, I would not have come.

BENEDICK. You take pleasure then in the message.

BEATRICE. Yea, just so much as you may take upon a knife's point, and choke a daw withal. You have no stomach, signior—fare you well. She goes

BENEDICK. Ha! 'Against my will I am sent to bid you come in to dinner': there's a double meaning in that. 'I took no more pains for those thanks than you took pains to thank me'—that's as much as to say, Any pains that I take for you is as easy as thanks. If I do not take pity of her, I am a villain. If I do not love her, I am a Jew. I will go get her picture.
He departs

ACT 3
Scene 1: The orchard

Hero, Margaret, and Ursula

HERO. Good Margaret, run thee to the parlour,
There shalt thou find my cousin Beatrice
Proposing with the prince and Claudio.
Whisper her ear, and tell her I and Ursley
Walk in the orchard, and our whole discourse
Is all of her. Say that thou overheard'st us,
And bid her steal into the pleachéd bower,
Where honeysuckles, ripened by the sun,
Forbid the sun to enter. Like favourites,
Made proud by princes, that advance their pride
Against that power that bred it. There will she hide her,
To listen our propose. This is thy office—
Bear thee well in it and leave us alone.

MARGARET. I'll make her come, I warrant you, presently. She leaves them

HERO. Now, Ursula, when Beatrice doth come,
As we do trace this alley up and down,
Our talk must only be of Benedick.
When I do name him, let it be thy part
To praise him more than ever man did merit.
My talk to thee must be how Benedick
Is sick in love with Beatrice: of this matter
Is little Cupid's crafty arrow made,
That only wounds by hearsay.

Beatrice approaches, and enters the arbour

Now begin,
For look where Beatrice like a lapwing runs
Close by the ground, to hear our conference.

URSULA. The pleasant'st angling is to see the fish
Cut with her golden oars the silver stream,
And greedily devour the treacherous bait:
So angle we for Beatrice, who even now
Is couchéd in the woodbine coverture.
Fear you not my part of the dialogue.

HERO. Then go we near her, that her ear lose nothing
Of the false sweet bait that we lay for it.
They approach the arbour
No, truly, Ursula, she is too disdainful—
I know her spirits are as coy and wild
As haggards of the rock.

URSULA. But are you sure
That Benedick loves Beatrice so entirely?

HERO. So says the prince, and my new-trothéd lord.

URSULA. And did they bid you tell her of it, madam?

HERO. They did entreat me to acquaint her of it.
But I persuaded them, if they loved Benedick,
To wish him wrestle with affection,
And never to let Beatrice know of it.

URSULA. Why did you so? Doth not the gentleman
Deserve at full as fortunate a bed
As ever Beatrice shall couch upon?

HERO. O god of love! I know he doth deserve
As much as may be yielded to a man:
But nature never framed a woman's heart
Of prouder stuff than that of Beatrice:
Disdain and scorn ride sparkling in her eyes,
Misprizing what they look on, and her wit
Values itself so highly, that to her
All matter else seems weak: she cannot love,
Nor take no shape nor project of affection,
She is so self-endeared.

URSULA. Sure, I think so.
And therefore certainly it were not good
She knew his love, lest she'll make sport at it.

HERO. Why, you speak truth. I never yet saw man,
How wise, how noble, young, how rarely featured,
But she would spell him backward: if fair-faced,
She would swear the gentleman should be her sister;
If black, why nature, drawing of an antic,
Made a foul blot: if tall, a lance ill-headed;
If low, an agate very vilely cut:
If speaking, why a vane blown with all winds;
If silent, why a block movéd with none.
So turns she every man the wrong side out,
And never gives to truth and virtue that
Which simpleness and merit purchaseth.

URSULA. Sure, sure, such carping is not commendable.

HERO. No, nor to be so odd and from all fashions,
As Beatrice is, cannot be commendable.
But who dare tell her so? If I should speak,
She would mock me into air—O, she would laugh me
Out of myself, press me to death with wit.
Therefore let Benedick, like covered fire,
Consume away in sighs, waste inwardly:
It were a better death than die with mocks,
Which is as bad as die with tickling.

URSULA. Yet tell her of it, hear what she will say.

HERO. No, rather I will go to Benedick,
And counsel him to fight against his passion.
And, truly, I'll devise some honest slanders
To stain my cousin with. One doth not know,
How much an ill word may empoison liking.

URSULA. O, do not do your cousin such a wrong.
She cannot be so much without true judgement—
Having so swift and excellent a wit,
As she is prized to have—as to refuse
So rare a gentleman as Signior Benedick.

HERO. He is the only man of Italy,
Always excepted my dear Claudio.

URSULA. I pray you be not angry with me, madam,
Speaking my fancy: Signior Benedick,
For shape, for bearing, argument, and valour,
Goes foremost in report through Italy.

HERO. Indeed, he hath an excellent good name.

URSULA. His excellence did earn it, ere he had it.
When are you married, madam?

HERO. Why, every day to-morrow! Come, go in.
I'll show thee some attires, and have thy counsel
Which is the best to furnish me to-morrow.

URSULA. She's limed I warrant you—we have caught her, madam.

HERO. If it prove so, then loving goes by haps,
Some Cupid kills with arrows, some with traps.
They go

Beatrice comes from the arbour

BEATRICE. What fire is in mine ears? Can this be true?
Stand I condemned for pride and scorn so much?
Contempt, farewell! and maiden pride, adieu!
No glory lives behind the back of such.
And, Benedick, love on, I will requite thee,
Taming my wild heart to thy loving hand:
If thou dost love, my kindness shall incite thee
To bind our loves up in a holy band:
For others say thou dost deserve, and I
Believe it better than reportingly. She goes

Scene 2: The parlour in Leonato's house

Enter Don Pedro, Claudio, Benedick and Leonato

DON PEDRO. I do but stay till your marriage be consummate, and then go I toward Arragon.

CLAUDIO. I'll bring you thither, my lord, if you'll vouchsafe me.

DON PEDRO. Nay, that would be as great a soil in the new gloss of your marriage, as to show a child his new coat and forbid him to wear it. I will only be bold with Benedick for his company—for, from the crown of his head to the sole of his foot, he is all mirth. He hath twice or thrice cut Cupid's bow-string, and the little hangman dare not shoot at him. He hath a heart as sound as a bell, and his tongue is the clapper—for what his heart thinks his tongue speaks.

BENEDICK. Gallants, I am not as I have been.

LEONATO. So say I. Methinks you are sadder.

CLAUDIO. I hope he be in love.

DON PEDRO. Hang him, truant! there's no true drop of blood in him to be truly touched with love. If he be sad, he wants money.

BENEDICK. I have the toothache.

DON PEDRO. Draw it.

BENEDICK. Hang it!

CLAUDIO. You must hang it first, and draw it afterwards.

DON PEDRO. What! sigh for the toothache?

LEONATO. Where is but a humour or a worm?

BENEDICK. Well, every one can master a grief but he that has it.

CLAUDIO. Yet say I, he is in love.

DON PEDRO. There is no appearance of fancy in him, unless it be a fancy that he hath to strange disguises—as, to be a Dutchman to-day, a Frenchman to-morrow, or in the shape of two countries at once, as a German from the waist downward, all slops, and a Spaniard from the hip upward, no doublet. Unless he have a fancy to this foolery, as it appears he hath, he is no fool for fancy, as you would have it appear he is.

CLAUDIO. If he be not in love with some woman, there is no believing old signs. A' brushes his hat a mornings—what should that bode?

DON PEDRO. Hath any man seen him at the barber's?

CLAUDIO. No, but the barber's man hath been seen with him, and the old ornament of his cheek hath already stuffed tennis-balls.

LEONATO. Indeed, he looks younger than he did, by the loss of a beard.

DON PEDRO. Nay, a' rubs himself with civet—can you smell him out by that?

CLAUDIO. That's as much as to say the sweet youth's in love.

DON PEDRO. The greatest note of it is his melancholy.

CLAUDIO. And when was he wont to wash his face?

DON PEDRO. Yea, or to paint himself? for the which, I hear what they say of him.

CLAUDIO. Nay, but his jesting spirit, which is new-crept into a lute-string and now governed by stops.

DON PEDRO. Indeed, that tells a heavy tale for him; conclude, conclude, he is in love.

CLAUDIO. Nay, but I know who loves him.

DON PEDRO. That would I know too. I warrant, one that knows him not.

CLAUDIO. Yes, and his ill conditions—and in despite of all, dies for him.

DON PEDRO. She shall be buried with her face upwards.

BENEDICK. Yet is this no charm for the toothache. Old signior, walk aside with me. I have studied eight or nine wise words to speak to you, which these hobby-horses must not hear.
Benedick and Leonato go out

DON PEDRO. For my life, to break with him about Beatrice.

CLAUDIO. 'Tis even so. Hero and Margaret have by this played their parts with Beatrice, and then the two bears will not bite one another when they meet.

Don John enters

DON JOHN. My lord and brother, God save you.

DON PEDRO. Good-den, brother.

DON JOHN. If your leisure served, I would speak with you.

DON PEDRO. In private?

DON JOHN. If it please you—yet Count Claudio may hear, for what I would speak of concerns him.

CLAUDIO. What's the matter?

DON JOHN. Means your lordship to be married to-morrow?

DON PEDRO. You know he does.

DON JOHN. I know not that, when he knows what I know.

CLAUDIO. If there be any impediment, I pray you discover it.

DON JOHN. You may think I love you not—let that appear hereafter, and aim better at me by that I now will manifest. For my brother, I think he holds you well, and in dearness of heart hath holp to effect your ensuing marriage: surely, suit ill spent, and labour ill bestowed.

DON PEDRO. Why, what's the matter?

DON JOHN. I came hither to tell you, and, circumstances shortened—for she has been too long a talking of—the lady is disloyal.

CLAUDIO. Who, Hero?

DON JOHN. Even she—Leonato's Hero, your Hero, every man's Hero.

CLAUDIO. Disloyal?

DON JOHN. The word is too good to paint out her wickedness. I could say she were worse. Think you of a worse title, and I will fit her to it. Wonder not till further warrant: go but with me to-night, you shall see her chamber-window entered, even the night before her wedding-day. If you love her then, to-morrow wed her, but it would better fit your honour to change your mind.

CLAUDIO. May this be so?

DON PEDRO. I will not think it.

DON JOHN. If you dare not trust that you see, confess not that you know: if you will follow me, I will show you enough, and when you have seen more and heard more, proceed accordingly.

CLAUDIO. If I see any thing to-night why I should not marry her to-morrow, in the congregation, where I should wed, there will I shame her.

DON PEDRO. And as I wooed for thee to obtain her, I will join with thee to disgrace her.

DON JOHN. I will disparage her no farther till you are my witnesses. Bear it coldly but till midnight, and let the issue show itself.

DON PEDRO. O day untowardly turned!

CLAUDIO. O mischief strangely thwarting!

DON JOHN. O plague right well prevented!
So will you say, when you have seen the sequel.

They go

Scene 3: A street

Master Constable Dogberry, Verges, and the Watch

DOGBERRY. Are you good men and true?

VERGES. Yea, or else it were pity but they should suffer salvation, body and soul.

DOGBERRY. Nay, that were a punishment too good for them, if they should have any allegiance in them, being chosen for the prince's watch.

VERGES. Well, give them their charge, neighbour Dogberry.

DOGBERRY. First, who think you the most desertless man to be constable?

1 WATCHMAN. Hugh Oatcake, sir, or George Seacoal, for they can write and read.

DOGBERRY. Come hither, neighbour Seacoal. God hath blessed you with a good name: to be a well-favoured man is the gift of fortune, but to write and read comes by nature.

2 WATCHMAN. Both which, Master Constable—

DOGBERRY. You have: I knew it would be your answer. Well, for your favour, sir, why give God thanks, and make no boast of it—and for your writing and reading, let that appear when there is no need of such vanity. You are thought here to be the most senseless and fit man for the constable of the watch: therefore bear you the lantern. This is your charge—you shall comprehend all vagrom men, you are to bid any man stand, in the prince's name.

2 WATCHMAN. How if a' will not stand?

DOGBERRY. Why then take no note of him, but let him go, and presently call the rest of the watch together, and thank God you are rid of a knave.

VERGES. If he will not stand when he is bidden, he is none of the prince's subjects.

DOGBERRY. True, and they are to meddle with none but the prince's subjects. You shall also make no noise in the streets: for, for the watch to babble and to talk, is most tolerable and not to be endured.

2 WATCHMAN. We will rather sleep than talk—we know what belongs to a watch.

DOGBERRY. Why, you speak like an ancient and most quiet watchman, for I cannot see how sleeping should offend: only have a care that your bills be not stolen. Well, you are to call at all the ale-houses, and bid those that are drunk get them to bed.

2 WATCHMAN. How if they will not?

DOGBERRY. Why then, let them alone till they are sober. If they make you not then the better answer, you may say they are not the men you took them for.

2 WATCHMAN. Well, sir.

DOGBERRY. If you meet a thief, you may suspect him, by virtue of your office, to be no true man: and, for such kind of men, the less you meddle or make with them, why the more is for your honesty.

2 WATCHMAN. If we know him to be a thief, shall we not lay hands on him?

DOGBERRY. Truly by your office you may, but I think they that touch pitch will be defiled: the most peaceable way for you, if you do take a thief, is to let him show himself what he is, and steal out of your company.

VERGES. You have been always called a merciful man, partner.

DOGBERRY. Truly, I would not hang a dog by my will, much more a man who hath any honesty in him.

VERGES. If you hear a child cry in the night, you must call to the nurse and bid her still it.

2 WATCHMAN. How if the nurse be asleep and will not hear us?

DOGBERRY. Why then, depart in peace, and let the child wake her with crying—for the ewe that will not hear her lamb when it baes, will never answer a calf when he bleats.

VERGES. 'Tis very true.

DOGBERRY. This is the end of the charge: you, constable, are to present the prince's own person—if you meet the prince in the night, you may stay him.

VERGES. Nay, by'r lady, that I think a' cannot.

DOGBERRY. Five shillings to one on't with any man that knows the statutes, he may stay him—marry, not without the prince be willing, for indeed the watch ought to offend no man, and it is an offence to stay a man against his will.

VERGES. By'r lady, I think it be so.

DOGBERRY. Ha, ah, ha! Well, masters, good night. An there be any matter of weight chances, call up me. Keep your fellows' counsels and your own, and good night. Come, neighbour.

2 WATCHMAN. Well, masters, we hear our charge. Let us go sit here upon the church-bench till two, and then all to bed.

DOGBERRY. One word more, honest neighbours. I pray you, watch about Signior Leonato's door, for the wedding being there to-morrow, there is a great coil to-night. Adieu, be vigitant, I beseech you.

Dogberry and Verges go

Borachio and Conrade enter

BORACHIO. What, Conrade!

2 WATCHMAN [aside]. Peace, stir not.

BORACHIO. Conrade, I say!

CONRADE. Here, man, I am at thy elbow.

BORACHIO. Mass, and my elbow itched—I thought there would a scab follow.

CONRADE. I will owe thee an answer for that, and now forward with thy tale.

BORACHIO. Stand thee close then under this pent-house, for it drizzles rain, and I will, like a true drunkard, utter all to thee.

2 WATCHMAN [aside]. Some treason, masters—yet stand close.

BORACHIO. Therefore know, I have earned of Don John a thousand ducats.

CONRADE. Is it possible that any villainy should be so dear?

BORACHIO. Thou shouldst rather ask if it were possible any villainy should be so rich, for when rich villains have need of poor ones, poor ones may make what price they will.

CONRADE. I wonder at it.

BORACHIO. That shows thou art unconfirmed. Thou knowest that the fashion of a doublet, or a hat, or a cloak, is nothing to a man.

CONRADE. Yes, it is apparel.

BORACHIO. I mean the fashion.

CONRADE. Yes, the fashion is the fashion.

BORACHIO. Tush, I may as well say the fool's the fool. But seest thou not what a deformed thief this fashion is?

2 WATCHMAN [aside]. I know that Deformed, a' has been a vile thief this seven year, a' goes up and down like a gentleman: I remember his name.

BORACHIO. Didst thou not hear somebody?

CONRADE. No, 'twas the vane on the house.

BORACHIO. Seest thou not, I say, what a deformed thief this fashion is? how giddily a' turns about all the hot-bloods between fourteen and five-and-thirty? sometimes fashioning them like Pharaoh's soldiers in the reechy painting, sometime like god Bel's priests in the old church window, sometime like the shaven Hercules in the smirched worm-eaten tapestry, where his cod-piece seems as massy as his club?

CONRADE. All this I see, and I see that the fashion wears out more apparel than the man.... But art not thou thyself giddy with the fashion too, that thou hast shifted out of thy tale into telling me of the fashion?

BORACHIO. Not so neither. But know that I have to-night wooed Margaret, the Lady Hero's gentlewoman, by the name of Hero. She leans me out at her mistress' chamber-window, bids me a thousand times good night. I tell this tale vilely—I should first tell thee how the prince, Claudio, and my master, planted and placed and possessed by my master Don John, saw afar off in the orchard this amiable encounter.

CONRADE. And thought they Margaret was Hero?

BORACHIO. Two of them did, the prince and Claudio. But the devil, my master, knew she was Margaret—and partly by his oaths, which first possessed them, partly by the dark night, which did deceive them, but chiefly by my villainy, which did confirm any slander that Don John had made, away went Claudio enraged, swore he would meet her as he was appointed next morning at the temple, and there, before the whole congregation, shame her with what he saw o'er-night, and send her home again without a husband.

2 WATCHMAN. We charge you in the prince's name, stand.

1 WATCHMAN. Call up the right Master Constable. We have here recovered the most dangerous piece of lechery that ever was known in the commonwealth.

2 WATCHMAN. And one Deformed is one of them—I know him, a' wears a lock.

CONRADE. Masters, masters.

2 WATCHMAN. You'll be made bring Deformed forth, I warrant you.

CONRADE. Masters—

1 WATCHMAN. Never speak, we charge you. Let us obey you to go with us.

BORACHIO. We are like to prove a goodly commodity, being taken up of these men's bills.

CONRADE. A commodity in question, I warrant you. Come, we'll obey you. They go

Scene 4: Hero's apartment

Enter Hero, Margaret, and Ursula

HERO. Good Ursula, wake my cousin Beatrice, and desire her to rise.

URSULA. I will, lady.

HERO. And bid her come hither.

URSULA. Well. She goes out

MARGARET. Troth, I think your other rebato were better.

HERO. No, pray thee good Meg, I'll wear this.

MARGARET. By my troth's not so good, and I warrant your cousin will say so.

HERO. My cousin's a fool, and thou art another. I'll wear none but this.

MARGARET. I like the new tire within excellently, if the hair were a thought browner: and your gown's a most rare fashion i'faith. I saw the Duchess of Milan's gown that they praise so—

HERO. O, that exceeds, they say.

MARGARET. By my troth's but a night-gown in respect of yours—cloth o' gold and cuts, and laced with silver, set with pearls down sleeves, side-sleeves, and skirts, round underborne with a bluish tinsel—but for a fine quaint graceful and excellent fashion, yours is worth ten on't.

HERO. God give me joy to wear it, for my heart is exceeding heavy.

MARGARET. 'Twill be heavier soon by the weight of a man.

HERO. Fie upon thee, art not ashamed?

MARGARET. Of what, lady? of speaking honourably? is not marriage honourable in a beggar? is not your lord honourable without marriage? I think you would have me say, 'saving your reverence, a husband': an bad thinking do not wrest true speaking—I'll offend nobody—is there any harm in 'the heavier for a husband'? none I think, an it be the right husband, and the right wife, otherwise 'tis light and not heavy—ask my Lady Beatrice else, here she comes.

Beatrice enters

HERO. Good morrow, coz.

BEATRICE. Good morrow, sweet Hero.

HERO. Why how now? do you speak in the sick tune?

BEATRICE. I am out of all other tune, methinks.

MARGARET. Clap's into 'Light o' love'—that goes without a burden—do you sing it, and I'll dance it.

BEATRICE. Yea, light o' love with your heels—then if your husband have stables enough you'll see he shall lack no barns.

MARGARET. O illegitimate construction! I scorn that with my heels.

BEATRICE. 'Tis almost five o'clock cousin, 'tis time you were ready. By my troth I am exceeding ill. Heigh-ho!

MARGARET. For a hawk, a horse, or a husband?

BEATRICE. For the letter than begins them all, H.

MARGARET. Well, an you be not turned Turk, there's no more sailing by the star.

BEATRICE. What means the fool, trow?

MARGARET. Nothing I—but God send every one their heart's desire.

HERO. These gloves the count sent me, they are an excellent perfume.

BEATRICE. I am stuffed, cousin, I cannot smell.

MARGARET. A maid and stuffed! there's goodly catching of cold.

BEATRICE. O, God help me, God help me, how long have you professed apprehension?

MARGARET. Ever since you left it. Doth not my wit become me rarely?

BEATRICE. It is not seen enough, you should wear it in your cap. By my troth I am sick.

MARGARET. Get you some of this distilled Carduus Benedictus, and lay it to your heart—it is the only thing for a qualm.

HERO. There thou prick'st her with a thistle.

BEATRICE. Benedictus, why Benedictus? you have some moral in this Benedictus.

MARGARET. Moral? no, by my troth, I have no moral meaning—I meant plain holy-thistle. You may think perchance that I think you are in love—nay by'r lady I am not such a fool to think what I list, nor I list not to think what I can, nor indeed I cannot think, if I would think my heart out of thinking, that you are in love, or that you will be in love, or that you can be in love: yet Benedick was such another and now is he become a man, he swore he would never marry, and yet now in despite of his heart he eats his meat without grudging—and how you may be converted I know not, but methinks you look with your eyes as other women do.

BEATRICE. What pace is this that thy tongue keeps?

MARGARET. Not a false gallop.

Ursula returns

URSULA. Madam, withdraw. The prince, the count, Signior Benedick, Don John, and all the gallants of the town are come to fetch you to church.

HERO. Help to dress me, good coz, good Meg, good Ursula. They go

Scene 5: The hall in Leonato's house

Enter Leonato, Dogberry and Verges

LEONATO. What would you with me, honest neighbour?

DOGBERRY. Marry, sir, I would have some confidence with you, that decerns you nearly.

LEONATO. Brief I pray you, for you see it is a busy time with me.

DOGBERRY. Marry, this it is, sir.

VERGES. Yes, in truth it is, sir.

LEONATO. What is it, my good friends?

DOGBERRY. Goodman Verges, sir, speaks a little off the matter—an old man, sir, and his wits are not so blunt, as God help I would desire they were, but in faith honest, as the skin between his brows.

VERGES. Yes, I thank God, I am as honest as any man living, that is an old man, and no honester than I.

DOGBERRY. Comparisons are odorous—palabras, neighbour Verges.

LEONATO. Neighbours, you are tedious.

DOGBERRY. It pleases your worship to say so, but we are the poor duke's officers. But truly for mine own part if I were as tedious as a king I could find in my heart to bestow it all of your worship.

LEONATO. All thy tediousness on me, ah?

DOGBERRY. Yea, an 'twere a thousand pound more than 'tis, for I hear as good exclamation on your worship as of any man in the city, and though I be but a poor man, I am glad to hear it.

VERGES. And so am I.

LEONATO. I would fain know what you have to say.

VERGES. Marry, sir, our watch to-night, excepting your worship's presence, ha' ta'en a couple of as arrant knaves as any in Messina.

DOGBERRY. A good old man, sir, he will be talking—as they say, 'when the age is in, the wit is out.' God help us, it is a world to see. Well said, i'faith, neighbour Verges. Well, God's a good man—an two men ride of a horse, one must ride behind. An honest soul i'faith, sir, by my troth he is, as ever broke bread, but—God is to be worshipped—all men are not alike, alas, good neighbour.

LEONATO. Indeed, neighbour, he comes too short of you.

DOGBERRY. Gifts that God gives.

LEONATO. I must leave you.

DOGBERRY. One word, sir—our watch, sir, have indeed comprehended two aspicious persons, and we would have them this morning examined before your worship.

LEONATO. Take their examination yourself, and bring it me, I am now in great haste, as it may appear unto you.

DOGBERRY. It shall be suffigance.

LEONATO. Drink some wine ere you go: fare you well.

A messenger enters

MESSENGER. My lord, they stay for you to give your daughter to her husband.

LEONATO. I'll wait upon them—I am ready.

Leonato and the messenger go

DOGBERRY. Go good partner, go get you to Francis Seacoal, bid him bring his pen and inkhorn to the gaol: we are now to examination these men.

VERGES. And we must do it wisely.

DOGBERRY. We will spare for no wit, I warrant you: here's that shall drive some of them to a 'non-come.' Only get the learned writer to set down our excommunication, and meet me at the gaol.

They depart

ACT 4

Scene 1: A church

Don Pedro, Don John, Leonato, Friar Francis, Claudio, Benedick, Hero, Beatrice, etc.

LEONATO. Come Friar Francis, be brief—only to the plain form of marriage, and you shall recount their particular duties afterwards.

FRIAR. You come hither, my lord, to marry this lady?

CLAUDIO. No.

LEONATO. To be married to her: friar, you come to marry her.

FRIAR. Lady, you come hither to be married to this count?

HERO. I do.

FRIAR. If either of you know any inward impediment why you should not be conjoined, I charge you on your souls to utter it.

CLAUDIO. Know you any, Hero?

HERO. None my lord.

FRIAR. Know you any, count?

LEONATO. I dare make his answer, 'none.'

CLAUDIO. O, what men dare do! what men may do! what men daily do, not knowing what they do!

BENEDICK. How now! interjections? Why then, some be of laughing, as 'ah! ha! he!'

CLAUDIO. Stand thee by, friar. Father, by your leave—
Will you with free and unconstrainéd soul
Give me this maid your daughter?

LEONATO. As freely, son, as God did give her me.

CLAUDIO. And what have I to give you back whose worth
May counterpoise this rich and precious gift?

DON PEDRO. Nothing, unless you render her again.

CLAUDIO. Sweet prince, you learn me noble thankfulness.
There Leonato, take her back again,
Give not this rotten orange to your friend,
She's but the sign and semblance of her honour.
Behold how like a maid she blushes here!
O, what authority and show of truth
Can cunning sin cover itself withal!
Comes not that blood, as modest evidence,
To witness simple virtue? would you not swear,
All you that see her, that she were a maid,
By these exterior shows? But she is none:
She knows the heat of a luxurious bed:
Her blush is guiltiness, not modesty.

LEONATO. What do you mean my lord?

CLAUDIO. Not to be married,
Not to knot my soul to an approvéd wanton.

LEONATO. Dear my lord, if you in your own proof,
Have vanquished the resistance of her youth,
And made defeat of her virginity—

CLAUDIO. I know what you would say: if I have known her,
You will say she did embrace me as a husband,
And so extenuate the 'forehand sin.
No Leonato,
I never tempted her with word too large,
But as a brother to his sister showed
Bashful sincerity, and comely love.

HERO. And seemed I ever otherwise to you?

CLAUDIO. Out on the seeming, I will write against it.
You seem to me as Dian in her orb,
As chaste as is the bud ere it be blown:
But you are more intemperate in your blood
Than Venus, or those pamp'red animals
That rage in savage sensuality.

HERO. Is my lord well that he doth speak so wide?

LEONATO. Sweet prince, why speak not you?

DON PEDRO. What should I speak?
I stand dishonoured that have gone about
To link my dear friend to a common stale.

LEONATO. Are these things spoken, or do I but dream?

DON JOHN. Sir, they are spoken, and these things are true.

BENEDICK. This looks not like a nuptial.

HERO. 'True,' O God!

CLAUDIO. Leonato, stand I here?
Is this the prince? is this the prince's brother?
Is this face Hero's? are our eyes our own?

LEONATO. All this is so, but what of this my lord?

CLAUDIO. Let me but move one question to your daughter,
And by that fatherly and kindly power
That you have in her, bid her answer truly.

LEONATO. I charge thee do so, as thou art my child.

HERO. O God defend me how am I beset!
What kind of catechizing call you this?

CLAUDIO. To make you answer truly to your name.

HERO. Is it not Hero? who can blot that name
With any just reproach?

CLAUDIO. Marry, that can Hero—
Hero itself can blot out Hero's virtue.
What man was he talked with you yesternight,
Out at your window betwixt twelve and one?
Now if you are a maid, answer to this.

HERO. I talked with no man at that hour my lord.

DON PEDRO. Why then are you no maiden. Leonato,
I am sorry you must hear: upon mine honour,
Myself, my brother, and this grievéd count,
Did see her, hear her, at that hour last night,
Talk with a ruffian at her chamber-window—
Who hath indeed, most like a liberal villain,
Confessed the vile encounters they have had
A thousand times in secret.

DON PEDRO. Fie, fie! they are not to be named, my lord,
Not to be spoke of.
There is not chastity enough in language,
Without offence, to utter them. Thus, pretty lady,
I am sorry for thy much misgovernment.

CLAUDIO. O Hero! what a Hero hadst thou been,
If half thy outward graces had been placed
About the thoughts and counsels of thy heart!
But, fare thee well, most foul, most fair—farewell,
Thou pure impiety, and impious purity.
For thee I'll lock up all the gates of love,
And on my eyelids shall conjecture hang,
To turn all beauty into thoughts of harm,
And never shall it more be gracious.

LEONATO. Hath no man's dagger here a point for me?

Hero swoons

BEATRICE. Why, how now cousin, wherefore sink you down?

DON JOHN. Come let us go: these things, come thus to light,
Smother her spirits up.

Don Pedro, Don John, and Claudio leave the church

BENEDICK. How doth the lady?

BEATRICE. Dead I think—help uncle—
Hero—why Hero—uncle—Signior Benedick—Friar!
LEONATO. O Fate! take not away thy heavy hand.
Death is the fairest cover for her shame
That may be wished for.
BEATRICE. How now cousin Hero?
FRIAR. Have comfort lady.
LEONATO. Dost thou look up?
FRIAR. Yea, wherefore should she not?
LEONATO. Wherefore? why, doth not every earthly thing
Cry shame upon her? could she here deny
The story that is printed in her blood?
Do not live Hero, do not ope thine eyes:
For did I think thou wouldst not quickly die,
Thought I thy spirits were stronger than thy shames,
Myself would on the rearward of reproaches
Strike at thy life.... Grieved I, I had but one?
Chid I for that frugal nature's frame?
O, one too much by thee. Why had I one?
Why ever wast thou lovely in my eyes?
Why had I not with charitable hand
Took up a beggar's issue at my gates,
Who smirchéd thus, and mired with infamy,
I might have said, 'No part of it is mine,
This shame derives itself from unknown loins'?
But mine, and mine I loved, and mine I praised,
And mine that I was proud on, mine so much
That I myself was to myself not mine,
Valuing of her—why she, O she is fall'n
Into a pit of ink, that the wide sea
Hath drops too few to wash her clean again,
And salt too little which may season give
To her foul tainted flesh.

BENEDICK. Sir, sir, be patient. For my part, I am so attired in wonder, I know not what to say.

BEATRICE. O, on my soul, my cousin is belied!
BENEDICK. Lady, were you her bedfellow last night?
BEATRICE. No, truly, not—although, until last night,
I have this twelvemonth been her bedfellow.
LEONATO. Confirmed, confirmed—O, that is stronger made,
Which was before barred up with ribs of iron.
Would the two princes lie? and Claudio lie,
Who loved her so, that, speaking of her foulness,
Washed it with tears! Hence from her, let her die.
FRIAR. Hear me a little—
[For I have only been silent so long,
And given way unto this course of fortune,]
By noting of the lady, I have marked
A thousand blushing apparitions
To start into her face, a thousand innocent shames
In angel whiteness beat away those blushes,
And in her eye there hath appeared a fire,
To burn the errors that these princes hold
Against her maiden truth. Call me a fool,
Trust not my reading, nor my observations,
Which with experimental seal doth warrant
The tenour of my book: trust not my age,
My reverence, calling, nor divinity,
If this sweet lady lie not guiltless here
Under some biting error.
LEONATO. Friar, it cannot be.
Thou seest that all the grace that she hath left
Is that she will not add to her damnation
A sin of perjury—she not denies it:
Why seek'st thou then to cover with excuse
That which appears in proper nakedness?
FRIAR. Lady, what man is he you are accused of?
HERO. They know that do accuse me, I know none.
If I know more of any man alive
Than that which maiden modesty doth warrant,
Let all my sins lack mercy. O my father,
Prove you that any man with me conversed
At hours unmeet, or that I yesternight
Maintained the change of words with any creature—
Refuse me, hate me, torture me to death.
FRIAR. There is some strange misprision in the princes.
BENEDICK. Two of them have the very bent of honour,
And if their wisdoms be misled in this,
The practice of it lives in John the bastard,
Whose spirits toil in frame of villainies.
LEONATO. I know not. If they speak but truth of her,
These hands shall tear her—if they wrong her honour,
The proudest of them shall well hear of it.
Time hath not yet so dried this blood of mine,
Nor age so eat up my invention,
Nor fortune made such havoc of my means,
Nor my bad life reft me so much of friends,
But they shall find, awaked in such a kind,
Both strength of limb, and policy of mind,
Ability in means, and choice of friends,
To quit me of them throughly.
FRIAR. Pause awhile,
And let my counsel sway you in this case.
Your daughter here the princes left for dead,
Let her awhile be secretly kept in,
And publish it that she is dead indeed,
Maintain a mourning ostentation,
And on your family's old monument
Hang mournful epitaphs, and do all rites
That appertain unto a burial.
LEONATO. What shall become of this? what will this do?
FRIAR. Marry, this well carried, shall on her behalf
Change slander to remorse—that is some good.
But not for that dream I on this strange course,
But on this travail look for greater birth:
She dying, as it must be so maintained,
Upon the instant that she was accused,
Shall be lamented, pitied, and excused
Of every hearer: for it so falls out
That every hearer: for it so falls out
That what we have we prize not to the worth,
Whiles we enjoy it, but being lacked and lost,
Why then we rack the value, then we find
The virtue that possession would not show us
Whiles it was ours—so will it fare with Claudio:
When he shall hear she died upon his words,
Th'idea of her life shall sweetly creep
Into his study of imagination,
And every lovely organ of her life
Shall come apparelled in more precious habit,
More moving-delicate and full of life,
Into the eye and prospect of his soul,
Than when she lived indeed: then shall he mourn—
If ever love had interest in his liver—
And wish he had not so accuséd her:
No, though he thought his accusation true.

Let this be so, and doubt not but success
Will fashion the event in better shape
Than I can lay it down in likelihood.
But if all aim but this be levelled false,
The supposition of the lady's death
Will quench the wonder of her infamy.
And if it sort not well, you may conceal her—
As best befits her wounded reputation—
In some reclusive and religious life,
Out of all eyes, tongues, minds, and injuries.

BENEDICK. Signior Lenato, let the friar advise you,
And though you know my inwardness and love
Is very much unto the prince and Claudio,
Yet, by mine honour, I will deal in this
As secretly and justly as your soul
Should with your body.

LEONATO. Being that I flow in grief,
The smallest twine may lead me.

FRIAR. 'Tis well consented—presently away—
For to strange sores strangely they strain the cure.
Come lady, die to live—this wedding day
Perhaps is but prolonged—have patience and endure. All go except Benedick and Beatrice

BENEDICK. Lady Beatrice, have you wept all this while?

BEATRICE. Yea, and I will weep a while longer.

BENEDICK. I will not desire that.

BEATRICE. You have no reason, I do it freely.

BENEDICK. Surely I do believe your fair cousin is wronged.

BEATRICE. Ah, how much might the man deserve of me that would right her!

BENEDICK. Is there any way to show such friendship?

BEATRICE. A very even way, but no such friend.

BENEDICK. May a man do it?

BEATRICE. It is a man's office, but not yours.

BENEDICK. I do love nothing in the world so well as you—is not that strange?

BEATRICE. As strange as the thing I know not. It were as possible for me to say I loved nothing so well as you—but believe me not—and yet I lie not—I confess nothing, nor I deny nothing—I am sorry for my cousin.

BENEDICK. By my sword Beatrice, thou lovest me.

BEATRICE. Do not swear and eat it.

BENEDICK. I will swear by it that you love me, and I will make him eat it that says I love not you.

BEATRICE. Will you not eat your word?

BENEDICK. With no sauce that can be devised to it—I protest I love thee.

BEATRICE. Why then God forgive me—

BENEDICK. What offence sweet Beatrice?

BEATRICE. You have stayed me in a happy hour, I was about to protest I loved you.

BENEDICK. And do it with all thy heart.

BEATRICE. I love you with so much of my heart, that none is left to protest.

BENEDICK. Come bid me do any thing for thee.

BEATRICE. Kill Claudio.

BENEDICK. Ha! not for the wide world.

BEATRICE. You kill me to deny it—farewell.

BENEDICK. Tarry sweet Beatrice.

BEATRICE. I am gone, though I am here—there is no love in you—nay I pray you let me go.

BENEDICK. Beatrice—

BEATRICE. In faith I will go.

BENEDICK. We'll be friends first.

BEATRICE. You dare easier be friends with me than fight with mine enemy.

BENEDICK. Is Claudio thine enemy?

BEATRICE. Is a' not approved in the height a villain, that hath slandered, scorned, dishonoured my kinswoman? O that I were a man! What, bear her in hand until they come to take hands, and then with public accusation, uncovered slander, unmitigated rancour—O God that I were a man! I would eat his heart in the market-place.

BENEDICK. Hear me Beatrice,—

BEATRICE. Talk with a man out at a window—a proper saying!

BENEDICK. Nay but Beatrice,—

BEATRICE. Sweet Hero, she is wronged, she is slandred, she is undone.

BENEDICK. Beat—

BEATRICE. Princes and counties! Surely a princely testimony, a goodly count, Count Comfect—a sweet gallant surely. O that I were a man for his sake! or that I had any friend that would be a man for my sake! But manhood is melted into curtsies, valour into complément, and men are only turned into tongue, and trim ones too: he is now as valiant as Hercules, that only tells a lie and swears it ... I cannot be a man with wishing, therefore I will die a woman with grieving.

BENEDICK. Tarry good Beatrice—by this hand I love thee.

BEATRICE. Use it for my love some other way than swearing by it.

BENEDICK. Think you in your soul the Count Claudio hath wronged Hero?

BEATRICE. Yea, as sure as I have a thought or a soul.

BENEDICK. Enough, I am engaged, I will challenge him. I will kiss your hand, and so I leave you ... By this hand, Claudio shall render me a dear account ... As you hear of me, so think of me ... Go comfort your cousin. I must say she is dead—and so farewell. They go

Scene 2: A gaol

Enter Dogberry and Verges in their robes of office, the Sexton in his clerk's gown, and the Watch guarding Conrade and Borachio

DOGBERRY. Is our whole dissembly appeared?

VERGES. O, a stool and a cushion for the sexton!

SEXTON. Which be the malefactors?

DOGBERRY. Marry, that am I, and my partner.

VERGES. Nay, that's certain. We have the exhibition to examine.

SEXTON. But which are the offenders that are to be examined? let them come before Master Constable.

DOGBERRY. Yea marry, let them come before me. What is your name, friend?

BORACHIO. Borachio.

DOGBERRY. Pray write down 'Borachio'.... Yours, sirrah?

CONRADE. I am a gentleman, sir, and my name is Conrade.

DOGBERRY. Write down 'Master Gentleman Conrade' ... Masters, do you serve God?

CONRADE, BORACHIO. Yea, sir, we hope.

DOGBERRY. Write down that they hope they serve

God: and write 'God' first, for God defend but God should go before such villains … Masters, it is proved already that you are little better than false knaves, and it will go near to be thought so shortly. How answer you for yourselves?

CONRADE. Marry, sir, we say we are none.

DOGBERRY. A marvellous witty fellow, I assure you—but I will go about with him … Come you hither sirrah—a word in your ear. Sir, I say to you, it is thought you are false knaves.

BORACHIO. Say, I say to you, we are none.

DOGBERRY. Well, stand aside. 'Fore God, they are both in a tale. Have you writ down, that they are none?

SEXTON. Master Constable, you go not the way to examine. You must call forth the watch that are their accusers.

DOGBERRY. Yea marry, that's the eftest way, let the watch come forth. Masters, I charge you in the prince's name accuse these men.

I WATCHMAN. This man said, sir, that Don John the prince's brother was a villain.

DOGBERRY. Write down 'Prince John a villain' … Why this is flat perjury, to call a prince's brother villain.

BORACHIO. Master Constable—

DOGBERRY. Pray thee fellow peace. I do not like thy look, I promise thee.

SEXTON. What heard you him say else?

2 WATCHMAN. Marry, that he had received a thousand ducats of Don John, for accusing the Lady Hero wrongfully.

DOGBERRY. Flat burglary as ever was committed.

VERGES. Yea by mass that it is.

SEXTON. What else fellow?

I WATCHMAN. And that Count Claudio did mean, upon his words, to disgrace Hero before the whole assembly, and not marry her.

DOGBERRY. O villain! thou wilt be condemned into everlasting redemption for this.

SEXTON. What else?

WATCHMEN. This is all.

SEXTON. And this is more, masters, than you can deny. Prince John is this morning secretly stolen away: Hero was in this manner accused, in this very manner refused, and upon the grief of this suddenly died. Master Constable, let these men be bound, and brought to Leonato's. I will go before and show him their examination. He goes

DOGBERRY. Come, let them be opinioned.

VERGES. Let them be—in the hands.

CONRADE. Off, coxcomb!

DOGBERRY. God's my life, where's the sexton? let him write down the prince's officer 'coxcomb' … Come, bind them. Thou naughty varlet!

CONRADE. Away! you are an ass, you are an ass.

DOGBERRY. Dost thou not suspect my place? Dost thou not suspect my years? O that he were here to write me down an ass! but, masters, remember that I am an ass—though it be not written down, yet forget not that I am an ass. No, thou villain, thou art full of piety, as shall be proved upon thee by good witness. I am a wise fellow, and which is more—an officer, and which is more—a householder, and which is more—as pretty a piece of flesh as any is in Messina, and one that knows the law, go to, and a rich fellow enough, go to, and a fellow that hath had losses, and one that hath two gowns and everything handsome about him. Bring him away. O that I had been writ down an ass! They go

ACT 5

Scene 1: Before the house of Leonato

Leonato and Antonio

ANTONIO. If you go on thus, you will kill yourself,
And 'tis not wisdom thus to second grief
Against yourself.
LEONATO. I pray thee cease thy counsel,
Which falls into mine ears as profitless
As water in a sieve: give not me counsel,
Nor let no comforter delight mine ear,
But such a one whose wrongs do suit with mine.
Bring me a father that so loved his child,
Whose joy of her is overwhelmed like mine,
And bid him speak of patience,
Measure his woe the length and breadth of mine,
And let it answer every strain for strain,
As thus for thus, and such a grief for such,
In every lineament, branch, shape, and form:
If such a one will smile and stroke his beard,
And—sorry wag—cry 'hem' when he should groan,
Patch grief with proverbs, make misfortune drunk
With candle-wasters—bring him yet to me,
And I of him will gather patience.
But there is no such man—for, brother, men
Can counsel and speak comfort to that grief
Which they themselves not feel, but tasting it,
Their counsel turns to passion, which before
Would give preceptial medicine to rage,
Fetter strong madness in a silken thread,
Charm ache with air, and agony with words.
No, no—'tis all men's office to speak patience
To those that wring under the load of sorrow,
But no man's virtue nor sufficiency
To be so moral when he shall endure
The like himself. Therefore give me no counsel.
My griefs cry louder than advertisement.
ANTONIO. Therein do men from children nothing differ.
LEONATO. I pray thee peace. I will be flesh and blood—
For there was never yet philosopher
That could endure the toothache patiently,
However they have writ the style of gods,
And made a 'push' at chance and sufferance.
ANTONIO. Yet bend not all the harm upon yourself,
Make those that do offend you suffer too.
LEONATO. There thou speak'st reason, nay I will do so.
My soul doth tell me Hero is belied—
And that shall Claudio know, so shall the prince,
And all of them that thus dishonour her.

Don Pedro and Claudio approach

ANTONIO. Here comes the prince and Claudio hastily.
DON PEDRO. Good-den, good-den.
CLAUDIO. Good day to both of you.
LEONATO. Hear you, my lords,—
DON PEDRO. We have some haste, Leonato.
LEONATO. Some haste, my lord! well, fare you well my lord.

Are you so hasty now? well, all is one.
DON PEDRO Nay, do not quarrel with us, good old man.
ANTONIO. If he could right himself with quarrelling,
Some of us would lie low.
CLAUDIO. Who wrongs him?
LEONATO. Marry, thou dost wrong me, thou dissembler, thou.
Nay, never lay thy hand upon thy sword,
I fear thee not.
CLAUDIO. Marry, beshrew my hand,
If it should give your age such cause of fear.
In faith my hand meant nothing to my sword.
LEONATO. Tush, tush, man, never fleer and jest at me.
I speak not like a dotard nor a fool,
As under privilege of age to brag
What I have done being young, or what would do
Were I not old. Know, Claudio, to thy head,
Thou hast so wronged mine innocent child and me,
That I am forced to lay my reverence by,
And with grey hairs and bruise of many days,
Do challenge thee to trial of a man.
I say thou hast belied mine innocent child,
Thy slander hath gone through and through her heart,
And she lies buried with her ancestors:
O in a tomb where never scandal slept,
Save this of hers, framed by thy villainy.
CLAUDIO. My villainy!
LEONATO. Thine Claudio, thine I say.
DON PEDRO. You say not right, old man.
LEONATO. My lord, my lord,
I'll prove it on his body if he dare—
Despite his nice fence and his active practice,
His May of Youth and bloom of lustihood.
CLAUDIO. Away, I will not have to do with you.
LEONATO. Canst thou so daff me? Thou hast killed my child—
If thou kill'st me, boy, thou shalt kill a man.
ANTONIO. He shall kill two of us, and men indeed—
But that's no matter, let him kill one first . . .
Win me and wear me! Let him answer me.
Come follow me boy, come sir boy, come follow me.
Sir boy, I'll whip you from your foining fence—
Nay, as I am a gentleman, I will.
LEONATO. Brother—
ANTONIO. Content yourself, God knows I loved my niece,
And she is dead, slandered to death by villains,
That dare as well answer a man indeed
As I dare take a serpent by the tongue.
Boys, apes, braggarts, Jacks, milksops!
LEONATO. Brother Antony—
ANTONIO. Hold you content. What, man! I know them, yea,
And what they weigh, even to the utmost scruple—
Scambling, out-facing, fashion-monging boys,
That lie, and cog, and flout, deprave, and slander,
Go anticly, and show outward hideousness,
And speak off half a dozen dang'rous words,
How they might hurt their enemies, if they durst,
And this is all.
LEONATO. But brother Antony—
ANTONIO. Come, 'tis no matter—
Do not you meddle, let me deal in this.
DON PEDRO. Gentlemen both, we will not wake your patience.
My heart is sorry for your daughter's death:
But on my honour she was charged with nothing
But what was true, and very full of proof.
LEONATO. My lord, my lord,—
DON PEDRO. I will not hear you.
LEONATO. No?
Come brother, away. [I will be heard.
ANTONIO. And shall, or some of us will smart for it.]
Leonato and Antonio enter the house

Benedick comes up

DON PEDRO. See, see, here comes the man we went to seek.

CLAUDIO. Now signior, what news?

BENEDICK. Good day, my lord.

DON PEDRO. Welcome, signior, you are almost come to part almost a fray.

CLAUDIO. We had liked to have had our two noses snapped off with two old men without teeth.

DON PEDRO. Leonato and his brother. What think'st thou? Had we fought I doubt we should have been too young for them.

BENEDICK. In a false quarrel there is no true valour. I came to seek you both.

CLAUDIO. We have been up and down to seek thee, for we are high-proof melancholy, and would fain have it beaten away. Wilt thou use thy wit?

BENEDICK. It is in my scabbard—shall I draw it?

DON PEDRO. Dost thou wear thy wit by thy side?

CLAUDIO. Never any did so, though very many have been beside their wit. I will bid thee draw, as we do the minstrels—draw to pleasure us.

DON PEDRO. As I am an honest man he looks pale. Art thou sick, or angry?

CLAUDIO. What, courage, man: what though care killed a cat, thou hast mettle enough in thee to kill care.

BENEDICK. Sir, I shall meet your wit in the career, an you charge it against me. I pray you choose another subject.

CLAUDIO. Nay then, give him another staff—this last was broke cross.

DON PEDRO. By this light, he changes more and more. I think he be angry indeed.

CLAUDIO. If he be, he knows how to turn his girdle.

BENEDICK. Shall I speak a word in your ear?

CLAUDIO. God bless me from a challenge!

BENEDICK. You are a villain—I jest not—I will make it good how you dare, with what you dare, and when you dare: do me right, or I will protest your cowardice: you have killed a sweet lady, and her death shall fall heavy on you. [aloud] Let me hear from you.

CLAUDIO. Well, I will meet you, so I may have good cheer.

DON PEDRO. What, a feast, a feast?

CLAUDIO. I'faith, I thank him, he hath bid me to a calf's-head and a capon, the which if I do not carve most curiously, say my knife's naught. Shall I not find a woodcock too?

BENEDICK. Sir, your wit ambles well—it goes easily.

DON PEDRO. I'll tell thee how Beatrice praised thy wit the other day. I said, thou hadst a fine wit. 'True,' said she, 'a fine little one': 'No,' said I, 'a great wit':

'Right,' says she, 'a great gross one': 'Nay,' said I, 'a good wit': 'Just,' said she, 'it hurts nobody': 'Nay,' said I, 'the gentleman is wise': 'Certain,' said she, 'a wise gentleman': 'Nay,' said I, 'he hath the tongues': 'That I believe,' said she, 'for he swore a thing to me on Monday night, which he forswore on Tuesday morning—there's a double tongue, there's two tongues.' Thus did she an hour together trans-shape thy particular virtues—yet at last she concluded with a sigh, thou wast the proper'st man in Italy.

CLAUDIO. For the which she wept heartily and said she cared not.

DON PEDRO. Yea, that she did—but yet, for all that, an if she did not hate him deadly, she would love him dearly. The old man's daughter told us all.

CLAUDIO. All, all—and moreover, God saw him when he was hid in the garden.

DON PEDRO. But when shall we set the savage bull's horns on the sensible Benedick's head?

CLAUDIO. Yea, and text underneath, 'Here dwells Benedick the married man'?

BENEDICK. Fare you well, boy—you know my mind. I will leave you now to your gossip-like humour. You break jests as braggarts do their blades, which God be thanked hurt not. My lord, for your many courtesies I thank you. I must discontinue your company—your brother the bastard is fled from Messina: you have among you killed a sweet and innocent lady: for my Lord Lack-beard, there, he and I shall meet, and till then peace be with him.

He goes

DON PEDRO. He is in earnest.

CLAUDIO. In most profound earnest, and I'll warrant you, for the love of Beatrice.

DON PEDRO. And hath challenged thee?

CLAUDIO. Most sincerely.

DON PEDRO. What a pretty thing man is, when he goes in his doublet and hose and leaves off his wit!

CLAUDIO. He is then a giant to an ape, but then is an ape a doctor to such a man.

DON PEDRO. But soft you, let me be—pluck up, my heart, and be sad—did he not say my brother was fled?

Enter Dogberry, Verges, and the Watch with Conrade and Borachio

DOGBERRY. Come you sir, if justice cannot tame you, she shall ne'er weigh more reasons in her balance. Nay, an you be a cursing hypocrite once, you must be looked to.

DON PEDRO. How now, two of my brother's men bound? Borachio, one?

CLAUDIO. Hearken after their offence, my lord.

DON PEDRO. Officers, what offence have these men done?

DOGBERRY. Marry sir, they have committed false report—moreover, they have spoken untruths—secondarily, they are slanders—sixth and lastly, they have belied a lady—thirdly, they have verified unjust things—and to conclude, they are lying knaves.

DON PEDRO. First, I ask thee what they have done—thirdly, I ask thee what's their offence—sixth and lastly, why they are committed—and to conclude, what you lay to their charge.

CLAUDIO. Rightly reasoned, and in his own division—and by my troth there's one meaning well suited.

DON PEDRO. Who have you offended, masters, that you are thus bound to your answer? this learned constable is too cunning to be understood. What's your offence?

BORACHIO. Sweet prince, let me go no farther to mine answer: do you hear me, and let this count kill me. I have deceived even your very eyes: what your wisdoms could not discover, these shallow fools have brought to light—who in the night overheard me confessing to this man how Don John your brother incensed me to slander the Lady Hero, how you were brought into the orchard and saw me court Margaret in Hero's garments, how you disgraced her when you should marry her. My villainy they have upon record, which I had rather seal with my death than repeat over to my shame. The lady is dead upon mine and my master's false accusation: and briefly, I desire nothing but the reward of a villain.

DON PEDRO. Runs not this speech like iron through your blood?

CLAUDIO. I have drunk poison whiles he uttered it.

DON PEDRO. But did my brother set thee on to this?

BORACHIO. Yea, and paid me richly for the practice of it.

DON PEDRO. He is composed and framed of treachery,
And fled he is upon this villainy.

CLAUDIO. Sweet Hero, now thy image doth appear
In the rare semblance that I loved it first.

DOGBERRY. Come, bring away the plaintiffs. By this time our sexton hath reformed Signior Leonato of the matter... And masters, do not forget to specify, when time and place shall serve, that I am an ass.

VERGES. Here, here comes Master Signior Leonato, and the sexton too.

Leonato and Antonio come from the house, with the Sexton

LEONATO. Which is the villain? Let me see his eyes,
That when I note another man like him,
I may avoid him: which of these is he?

BORACHIO. If you would know your wronger, look on me.

LEONATO. Art thou the slave that with thy breath hast killed
Mine innocent child?

BORACHIO. Yea, even I alone.

LEONATO. No, not so villain, thou beliest thyself,
Here stand a pair of honourable men,
A third is fled that had a hand in it.
I thank you, princes, for my daughter's death,
Record it with your high and worthy deeds,
'Twas bravely done, if you bethink you of it.

CLAUDIO. I know not how to pray your patience,
Yet I must speak. Chose your revenge yourself,
Impose me to what penance your invention
Can lay upon my sin—yet sinned I not,
But in mistaking.

DON PEDRO. By my soul nor I,
And yet to satisfy this good old man,
I would bend under any heavy weight
That he'll enjoin me to.

LEONATO. I cannot bid you bid my daughter live—
That were impossible—but I pray you both,
Possess the people in Messina here
How innocent she died, and if your love

Can labour aught in sad invention,
Hang her an epitaph upon her tomb,
And sing it to her bones—sing it to-night:
To-morrow morning come you to my house,
And since you could not be my son-in-law,
Be yet my nephew: my brother hath a daughter,
Almost the copy of my child that's dead,
And she alone is heir to both of us—
Give her the right you should have giv'n her cousin,
And so dies my revenge.

CLAUDIO. O noble sir!
Your over-kindness doth wring tears from me.
I do embrace your offer, and dispose
For henceforth of poor Claudio.

LEONATO. To-morrow then I will expect your coming,
To-night I take my leave. This naughty man
Shall face to face be brought to Margaret,
Who I believe was packed in all this wrong,
Hired to it by your brother.

BORACHIO. No, by my soul she was not,
Nor knew not what she did when she spoke to me,
But always hath been just and virtuous
In anything that I do know by her.

DOGBERRY. Moreover, sir—which indeed is not under white and black—this plaintiff here, the offender, did call me ass. I beseech you let it be remembered in his punishment. And also the watch heard them talk of one Deformed—they say he wears a key in his ear and a lock hanging by it, and borrows money in God's name, the which he hath used so long and never paid, that now men grow hard-hearted and will lend nothing for God's sake. Pray you examine him upon that point.

LEONATO. I thank thee for thy care and honest pains.

DOGBERRY. Your worship speaks like a most thankful and reverend youth, and I praise God for you.

LEONATO. There's for thy pains.

DOGBERRY. God save the foundation!

LEONATO. Go, I discharge thee of thy prisoner, and I thank thee.

DOGBERRY. I leave an arrant knave with your worship, which I beseech your worship to correct yourself, for the example of others. God keep your worship, I wish your worship well, God restore you to health, I humbly give you leave to depart—and if a merry meeting may be wished, God prohibit it. Come neighbour. Dogberry and Verges depart

LEONATO. Until to-morrow morning, lords, farewell.

ANTONIO. Farewell my lords, we look for you to-morrow.

DON PEDRO. We will not fail.

CLAUDIO. To-night I'll mourn with Hero.
Don Pedro and Claudio leave

LEONATO. Bring you these fellows on. We'll talk with Margaret,
How her acquaintance grew with this lewd fellow.
Leonato and Antonio go within,
followed by the Sexton,
the Watch and the prisoners

Scene 2

Enter Benedick and Margaret

BENEDICK. Pray thee sweet Mistress Margaret, deserve well at my hands, by helping me to the speech of Beatrice.

MARGARET. Will you then write me a sonnet in praise of my beauty?

BENEDICK. In so high a style, Margaret, that no man living shall come over it, for in most comely truth thou deservest it.

MARGARET. To have no man come over me? why, shall I always keep below stairs?

BENEDICK. Thy wit is as quick as the greyhound's mouth, it catches.

MARGARET. And yours—as blunt as the fencer's foils, which hit, but hurt not.

BENEDICK. A most manly wit Margaret, it will not hurt a woman ... and so I pray thee call Beatrice—I give thee the bucklers.

MARGARET. Give us the swords, we have bucklers of our own.

BENEDICK. If you use them, Margaret, you must put in the pikes with a vice—and they are dangerous weapons for maids.

MARGARET. Well, I will call Beatrice to you, who I think hath legs. Margaret enters the house

BENEDICK. And therefore will come.
[sings] The god of love,
That sits above,
And knows me, and knows me,
How pitiful I deserve.

I mean in singing. But in loving—Leander the good swimmer, Troilus the first employer of pandars, and a whole bookful of these quondam carpet-mongers, whose names yet run smoothly in the even road of a blank verse, why, they were never so truly turned over and over as my poor self, in love. Marry, I cannot show it in rhyme—I have tried. I can find out no rhyme to 'lady' but 'baby,' an innocent rhyme: for 'scorn,' 'horn,' a hard rhyme: for 'school,' 'fool,' a babbling rhyme ... very ominous endings. No, I was not born under a rhyming planet, nor I cannot woo in festival terms ...

Beatrice enters

Sweet Beatrice, wouldst thou come when I called thee?

BEATRICE. Yea signior, and depart when you bid me.

BENEDICK. O stay but till then.

BEATRICE. 'Then' is spoken: fare you well now—and yet, ere I go, let me go with that I came for, which is, with knowing what hath passed between you and Claudio.

BENEDICK. Only foul words—and thereupon I will kiss thee.

BEATRICE. Foul words is but foul wind, and foul wind is but foul breath, and foul breath in noisome—therefore I will depart unkissed.

BENEDICK. Thou hast frighted the word out of his right sense, so forcible is thy wit. But I must tell thee plainly, Claudio undergoes my challenge, and either I must shortly hear from him, or I will subscribe him a coward. And I pray thee now tell me, for which of my bad parts didst thou first fall in love with me?

BEATRICE. For them all together, which maintain so politic a state of evil that they will not admit any good part to intermingle with them. But for which of my good parts did you first suffer love for me?

BENEDICK. 'Suffer love!' a good epithet. I do suffer love indeed, for I love thee against my will.

BEATRICE. In spite of your heart, I think. Alas, poor heart, if you spite it for my sake, I will spite it for yours, for I will never love that which my friend hates.

BENEDICK. Thou and I are too wise to woo peaceably.

BEATRICE. It appears not in this confession—there's not one wise man among twenty that will praise himself.

BENEDICK. An old, an old instance, Beatrice, that lived in the time of good neighbours. If a man do not erect in this age his own tomb ere he dies, he shall live no longer in monument than the bell rings and the widow weeps.

BEATRICE. And how long is that, think you?

BENEDICK. Question! Why, an hour in clamour and a quarter in rheum. Therefore is it most expedient for the wise—if Don Worm, his conscience, find no impediment to the contrary—to be the trumpet of his own virtues, as I am to myself. So much for praising myself, who, I myself will bear witness, is praiseworthy. And now tell me, how doth your cousin?

BEATRICE. Very ill.

BENEDICK. And how do you?

BEATRICE. Very ill too.

BENEDICK. Serve God, love me, and mend. There will I leave you too, for here comes one in haste.

Ursula enters

URSULA. Madam, you must come to your uncle—yonder's old coil at home. It is proved my Lady Hero hath been falsely accused, the prince and Claudio mightily abused, and Don John is the author of all, who is fled and gone. Will you come presently?

BEATRICE. Will you go hear this news, signior?

BENEDICK. I will live in thy heart, die in thy lap, and be buried in thy eyes: and moreover, I will go with thee to thy uncle's. They go within

Scene 3: A church-yard

Don Pedro, Claudio and other lords approach with tapers, followed by Balthazar and musicians

CLAUDIO. Is this the monument of Leonato?

A LORD. It is, my lord.

CLAUDIO. [reads from a scroll].
Done to death by slanderous tongues
Was the Hero that here lies:
Death, in guerdon of her wrongs,
Gives her fame which never dies:
So the life that died with shame,
Lives in death with glorious fame.
Hang thou there upon the tomb, Affixing it
Praising her when I am dumb.
Now, music, sound, and sing your solemn hymn.

BALTHAZAR [sings].
Pardon, goddess of the night,
Those that slew thy virgin knight,
For the which, with songs of woe,
Round about her tomb they go:
Midnight, assist our moan,
Help us to sigh and groan,
Heavily, heavily.
Graves, yawn and yield your dead,
Till death be utteréd,
Heavily, heavily.

CLAUDIO. Now, unto thy bones good night.
Yearly will I do this rite.

DON PEDRO. Good morrow masters, put your torches out.
The wolves have preyed, and look, the gentle day,
Before the wheels of Phœbus, round about
Dapples the drowsy east with spots of grey:
Thanks to you all, and leave us. Fare you well.

CLAUDIO. Good morrow masters—each his several way.

DON PEDRO. Come let us hence, and put on other weeds,
And then to Leonato's we will go.

CLAUDIO. And Hymen now with luckier issue speeds,
Than this for whom we rendred up this woe!
They go

Scene 4: The hall in Leonato's house

Leonato, Antonio, Benedick and Friar Francis enter, followed by Hero, Beatrice, Margaret and Ursula, who talk apart

FRIAR. Did I not tell you she was innocent?

LEONATO. So are the prince and Claudio, who accused her
Upon the error that you heard debated:
But Margaret was in some fault for this,
Although against her will, as it appears
In the true course of all the question.

ANTONIO. Well, I am glad that all things sort so well.

BENEDICK. And so am I, being else by faith enforced
To call young Claudio to a reckoning for it.

LEONATO. Well daughter, and you gentlewomen all,
Withdraw into a chamber by yourselves,
And when I send for you come hither masked.
The ladies go
The prince and Claudio promised by this hour
To visit me. You know your office, brother—
You must be father to your brother's daughter,
And give her to young Claudio.

ANTONIO. Which I will do with confirmed countenance.

BENEDICK. Friar, I must entreat your pains, I think.

FRIAR. To do what, signior?

BENEDICK. To bind me, or undo me—one of them:
Signior Leonato, truth it is, good signior,
Your niece regards me with an eye of favour.

LEONATO. That eye my daughter lent her. 'Tis most true.

BENEDICK. And I do with an eye of love requite her.

LEONATO. The sight whereof I think you had from me,
From Claudio, and the prince. But what's your will?

BENEDICK. Your answer, sir, is enigmatical:
But for my will, my will is your good will
May stand with ours, this day to be conjoined
In the state of honourable marriage—
In which, good friar, I shall desire your help.

LEONATO. My heart is with your liking.

FRIAR. And my help.
Here comes the prince and Claudio.

Don Pedro and Claudio enter with two or three other lords

DON PEDRO. Good morrow to this fair assembly.

LEONATO. Good morrow prince, good morrow Claudio:

We here attend you. Are you yet determined
To-day to marry with my brother's daughter?
CLAUDIO. I'll hold my mind, were she an Ethiope.
LEONATO. Call her forth, brother. Here's the friar ready. Antonio goes
DON PEDRO. Good morrow Benedick. Why, what's the matter,
That you have such a February face,
So full of frost, of storm, and cloudiness?
CLAUDIO. I think he thinks upon the savage bull:
Tush, fear not, man, we'll tip thy horns with gold,
And all Europa shall rejoice at thee,
As once Europa did at lusty Jove,
When he would play the noble beast in love.
BENEDICK. Bull Jove, sir, had an amiable low—
And some such strange bull leaped your father's cow,
And got a calf in that same noble feat,
Much like to you, for you have just his bleat.

Antonio returns, with the ladies masked

CLAUDIO. For this I owe you: here comes other reck'nings.
Which is the lady I must seize upon?
ANTONIO. This same is she, and I do give you her.
CLAUDIO. Why, then she's mine. Sweet, let me see your face.
LEONATO. No, that you shall not, till you take her hand
Before this friar, and swear to marry her.
CLAUDIO. Give me your hand before this holy friar—
I am your husband if you like of me.
HERO. And when I lived I was your other wife— She unmasks
And when you loved, you were my other husband.
CLAUDIO. Another Hero!
HERO. Nothing certainer.
One Hero died defiled, but I do live,
And surely as I live, I am a maid.
DON PEDRO. The former Hero! Hero that is dead!
LEONATO. She died, my lord, but whiles her slander lived.
FRIAR. All this amazement can I qualify.
When after that the holy rites are ended,
I'll tell you largely of fair Hero's death,
Meantime let wonder seem familiar,
And to the chapel let us presently.
BENEDICK. Soft and fair, friar. Which is Beatrice?
BEATRICE. I answer to that name. [unmasks] What is your will?
BENEDICK. Do not you love me?
BEATRICE. Why no, no more than reason.
BENEDICK. Why then your uncle, and the prince, and Claudio,
Have been deceivéd, for they swore you did.
BEATRICE. Do not you love me?
BENEDICK. Troth no, no more than reason.
BEATRICE. Why then my cousin, Margaret, and Ursula.
Are much deceived, for they did swear you did.
BENEDICK. They swore that you were almost sick for me.
BEATRICE. They swore that you were well-nigh dead for me.
BENEDICK. 'Tis no such matter. Then, you do not love me?
BEATRICE. No, truly, but in friendly recompense.
LEONATO. Come cousin, I am sure you love the gentleman.
CLAUDIO. And I'll be sworn upon't, that he loves her,
For here's a paper written in his hand,
A halting sonnet of his own pure brain,
Fashioned to Beatrice.
HERO. And here's another,
Writ in my cousin's hand, stol'n from her pocket,
Containing her affection unto Benedick.

BENEDICK. A miracle! here's our own hands against our hearts. Come, I will have thee—but by this light I take thee for pity.

BEATRICE. I would not deny you—but by this good day I yield upon great persuasion, and partly to save your life, for I was told you were in a consumption.

BENEDICK. Peace, I will stop your mouth. He kisses her

DON PEDRO. How dost thou, Benedick the married man?

BENEDICK. I'll tell thee what, prince: a college of witcrackers cannot flout me out of my humour. Dost thou think I care for a satire or an epigram? no, if a man will be beaten with brains, a' shall wear nothing handsome about him. In brief, since I do purpose to marry, I will think nothing to any purpose that the world can say against it—and therefore never flout at me for what I have said against it: for man is a giddy thing, and this is my conclusion. For thy part, Claudio, I did think to have beaten thee, but in that thou art like to be my kinsman, live unbruised, and love my cousin.

CLAUDIO. I had well hoped thou wouldst have denied Beatrice, that I might have cudgelled thee out of thy single life, to make thee a double-dealer—which out of question thou wilt be, if my cousin do not look exceeding narrowly to thee.

BENEDICK. Come, come, we are friends. Let's have a dance ere we are married, that we may lighten our own hearts, and our wives' heels.

LEONATO. We'll have dancing afterward.

BENEDICK. First, of my word—therefore play music. Prince, thou art sad—get thee a wife, get thee a wife. There is no staff more reverend than one tipped with horn.

A messenger enters

MESSENGER. My lord, your brother John is ta'en in flight,
And brought with armed men back to Messina.

BENEDICK. Think not on him till to-morrow. I'll devise thee brave punishments for him . . . Strike up, pipers!

Love's Labour's Lost

ACT 1

Scene I: The Park of Ferdinand, King of Navarre

The King, Berowne, Longaville, and Dumaine

KING. Let fame, that all hunt after in their lives,
Live regist'red upon our brazen tombs,
And then grace us, in the disgrace of death;
When, spite of cormorant devouring Time,
Th'endeavour of this present breath may buy
That honour which shall bate his scythe's keen edge,
And make us heirs of all eternity.
Therefore, brave conquerors—for so you are
That war against your own affections
And the huge army of the world's desires—
Our late edict shall strongly stand in force:
Navarre shall be the wonder of the world,
Our court shall be a little academe,
Still and contemplative in living art.
You three, Berowne, Dumaine, and Longaville,
Have sworn for three years' term to live with me,
My fellow-scholars, and to keep those statutes
That are recorded in this schedule here.
Your oaths are passed; and now subscribe your names,
That his own hand may strike his honour down
That violates the smallest branch herein.
If you are armed to do, as sworn to do,
Subscribe to your deep oaths, and keep it too.
LONGAVILLE. I am resolved—'tis but a three years' fast:
The mind shall banquet, though the body pine.
Fat paunches have lean pates; and dainty bits
Make rich the ribs, but bankrupt quite the wits.
DUMAINE. My loving lord, Dumaine is mortified.
The grosser manner of these world's delights
He throws upon the gross world's baser slaves.
To love, to wealth, to pomp, I pine and die—
With all these living in philosophy.
BEROWNE. I can but say their protestation over—
So much, dear liege, I have already sworn,
That is, to live and study here three years.
But there are other strict observances:
As not to see a woman in that term,
Which I hope well is not enrollèd there—
And one day in a week to touch no food,
And but one meal on every day beside,
The which I hope is not enrollèd there—
And then to sleep but three hours in the night
And not be seen to wink of all the day,
When I was wont to think no harm all night,
And make a dark night too of half the day,
Which I hope well is not enrollèd there.
O, these are barren tasks, too hard to keep,
Not to see ladies, study, fast, not sleep.
KING. Your oath is passed to pass away from these.
BEROWNE. Let me say no, my liege, an if you please.
I only swore to study with your grace,
And stay here in your court for three years' space.
LONGAVILLE. You swore to that, Berowne, and to the rest.
BEROWNE. By yea and nay, sir, then I swore in jest.
What is the end of study? let me know.
KING. Why, that to know which else we should not know.
BEROWNE. Things hid and barred, you mean, from common sense?
KING. Ay, that is study's god-like recompense.
BEROWNE. Com' on then—I will swear to study so,
To know the thing I am forbid to know:
As thus—to study where I well may dine
When I to feast expressly am forbid,
Or study where to meet some mistress fine
When mistresses from common senses are hid,
Or, having sworn too hard-a-keeping oath,
Study to break it and not break my troth.
If study's gain be thus, and this be so,
Study knows that which yet it doth not know.
Swear me to this, and I will ne'er say no.
KING. These be the stops that hinder study quite,
And train our intellects to vain delight.
BEROWNE. Why, all delights are vain, but that most vain
Which, with pain purchased, doth inherit pain—
As painfully to pore upon a book
To seek the light of truth, while truth the while
Doth falsely blind the eyesight of his look:
Light, seeking light, doth light of light beguile:
So, ere you find where light in darkness lies,
Your light grows dark by losing of your eyes.
Study me how to please the eye indeed,
By fixing it upon a fairer eye,
Who dazzling so, that eye shall be his heed,
And give him light that it was blinded by.
Study is like the heaven's glorious sun,
That will not be deep-searched with saucy looks:
Small have continual plodders ever won,
Save base authority from others' books.
These earthly godfathers of heaven's lights
That give a name to every fixèd star
Have no more profit of their shining nights,
Than those that walk and wot not what they are.
Too much to know is to know nought but fame;
And every godfather can give a name.
KING. How well he's read, to reason against reading.
DUMAINE. Proceeded well, to stop all good proceeding.
LONGAVILLE. He weeds the corn and still lets grow the weeding.
BEROWNE. The spring is near when green geese are a-breeding.
DUMAINE. How follows that?
BEROWNE. Fit in his place and time.
DUMAINE. In reason nothing.
BEROWNE. Something then in rhyme.
KING. Berowne is like an envious sneaping frost
That bites the first-born infants of the spring.
BEROWNE. Well, say I am—why should proud summer boast,
Before the birds have any cause to sing?
Why should I joy in an abortive birth?
At Christmas I no more desire a rose

Than wish a snow in May's new-fangled shows;
But like of each thing that in season grows.
So you to study now it is too late,
Climb o'er the house to unlock the little gate.
KING. Well, sit you out: go home Berowne: adieu!
BEROWNE. No my good lord, I have sworn to stay with you.
And though I have for barbarism spoke more
Than for that angel knowledge you can say,
Yet confident I'll keep what I have swore,
And bide the penance of each three years' day.
Give me the paper, let me read the same,
And to the strictest decrees I'll write my name.
KING. How well this yielding rescues thee from shame.

BEROWNE [reads]. 'Item, That no woman shall come within a mile of my court....' Hath this been proclaimed?

LONGAVILLE. Four days ago.

BEROWNE. Let's see the penalty. [reads] '... on pain of losing her tongue.' Who devised this penalty?

LONGAVILLE. Marry, that did I.

BEROWNE. Sweet lord, and why?

LONGAVILLE. To fright them hence with that dread penalty.
BEROWNE. A dangerous law against gentility....
[reads] 'Item, if any man be seen to talk with a woman within the term of three years, he shall endure such public shame as the rest of the court can possible devise,'
This article, my liege, yourself must break,
For well you know here comes in embassy
The French king's daughter with yourself to speak—
A maid of grace and cómplete majesty—
About surrender up of Aquitaine
To her decrepit, sick, and bedrid father.
Therefore this article is made in vain,
Or vainly comes th'admiréd princess hither.
KING. What say you lords? why, this was quite forgot.
BEROWNE. So study evermore is overshot.
While it doth study to have what it would,
It doth forget to do the thing it should:
And when it hath the thing it hunteth most,
'Tis won, as towns with fire—so won, so lost.
KING. We must of force dispense with this decree.
She must lie here on mere necessity.
BEROWNE. Necessity will make us all forsworn
Three thousand times within this three years' space:
For every man with his affects is born,
Not by might mast'red, but by special grace.
If I break faith, this word shall speak for me,
I am forsworn 'on mere necessity.'
So to the laws at large I write my name,
And he that breaks them in the least degree
Stands in attainder of eternal shame.
Suggestions are to other as to me:
But I believe, although I seem so loath,
I am the last that will last keep his oath....
He subscribes
But is there no quick recreation granted?
KING. Ay that there is, our court you know is haunted
With a refinéd traveller of Spain—
A man in all the world's new fashion planted,
That hath a mint of phrases in his brain:
One who the music of his own vain tongue
Doth ravish like enchanting harmony:
A man of complements, whom right and wrong
Have chose as umpire of their mutiny.
This child of fancy, that Armado hight,
For interim to our studies shall relate
In high-born words the worth of many a knight
From tawny Spain lost in the world's debate.
How you delight, my lords, I know not I,
But I protest I love to hear him lie,
And I will use him for my minstrelsy.
BEROWNE. Armado is a most illustrious wight.
A man of fire-new words, fashion's own knight.
LONGAVILLE. Costard the swain and he shall be our sport,
And so to study three years is but short.

Dull, the constable, and Costard approach

DULL. Which is the duke's own person?

BEROWNE. This, fellow. What wouldst?

DULL. I myself reprehend his own person, for I am his grace's farborough. But I would see his own person in flesh and blood.

BEROWNE. This is he.

DULL. Signior Arm—Arm—commends you.... [he presents a letter] There's villainy abroad. This letter will tell you more.

COSTARD. Sir, the contempts thereof are as touching me.

KING. A letter from the magnificent Armado.

BEROWNE. How low soever the matter, I hope in God for high words.

LONGAVILLE. A high hope for a low heaven. God grant us patience.

BEROWNE. To hear, or forbear hearing?

LONGAVILLE. To hear meekly sir, and to laugh moderately—or to forbear both.

BEROWNE. Well sir, be it as the style shall give us cause to climb in the merriness.

COSTARD. The matter is to me, sir, as concerning Jaquenetta:
The manner of it is, I was taken with the manner.

BEROWNE. In what manner?

COSTARD. In manner and form following, sir—all those three: I was seen with her in the manor-house, sitting with her upon the form, and taken following her into the park: which put together, is in manner and form following. Now sir for the manner—it is the manner of a man to speak to a woman. For the form—in some form.

BEROWNE. For the following, sir?

COSTARD. As it shall follow in my correction—and God defend the right.

KING. Will you hear this letter with attention?

BEROWNE. As we would hear an oracle.

COSTARD. Such is the simplicity of man to hearken after the flesh.

KING [reads]. 'Great Deputy, the welkin's Vicegerent, and sole dominator of Navarre, my soul's earth's God, and body's fost'ring patron:'

COSTARD. Not a word of Costard yet.

KING [reads]. 'So it is,'

COSTARD. It may be so: but if he say it is so, he is, in telling true—but so.

KING. Peace!

COSTARD. —be to me, and every man that dares not fight.

KING. No words.

COSTARD. —of other men's secrets I beseech you.

KING [reads]. 'So it is, besieged with sable-coloured melancholy, I did commend the black-oppressing humour to the most wholesome physic of thy health-giving air: And, as I am a gentleman, betook myself to walk: the time When? about the sixth hour, When Beasts most graze, Birds best peck, and Men sit down to that nourishment which is called Supper: So much for the time When. Now for the ground Which? which I mean I walked upon, it is ycleped Thy Park. Then for the place Where? where I mean I did encounter that obscene and most prepostrous event, that draweth from my snow-white pen the ebon-coloured Ink, which here thou viewest, beholdest, surveyest, or seest. But to the place Where? It standeth North North-east and by East from the West corner of thy curious-knotted garden. There did I see that low-spirited Swain, that base Minion of thy mirth,'

COSTARD. Me?

KING. 'that unlettered small-knowing soul,'

COSTARD. Me?

KING. 'that shallow vassal,'

COSTARD. Still me?

KING. 'which, as I remember, hight Costard,'

COSTARD. O me!

KING. 'sorted and consorted, contrary to thy established proclaimed Edict and continent Canon, with, with, O with, but with this I passion to say wherewith:'

COSTARD. With a wench.

KING. 'with a child of our Grandmother Eve, a female; or for thy more sweet understanding a Woman: him, I (as my ever-esteemed duty pricks me on) have sent to thee, to receive the meed of punishment, by thy sweet Grace's Officer, Antony Dull, a man of good repute, carriage, bearing, and estimation.'

DULL. Me, an't shall please you! I am Antony Dull.

KING. 'For Jaquenetta (so is the weaker vessel called) which I apprehended with the aforesaid Swain, I keep here as a vessel of thy Law's fury, and shall at the least of thy sweet notice, bring her to trial. Thine, in all complements of devoted and heart-burning heat of duty,

DON ADRIANO DE ARMADO.'

BEROWNE. This is not so well as I looked for, but the best that ever I heard.

KING. Ay, the best for the worst.... But sirrah, what say you to this?

COSTARD. Sir I confess the wench.

KING. Did you hear the proclamation?

COSTARD. I do confess much of the hearing of it, but little of the marking of it.

KING. It was proclaimed a year's imprisonment to be taken with a wench.

COSTARD. I was taken with none sir, I was taken with a damsel.

KING. Well, it was proclaimed 'damsel.'

COSTARD. This was no damsel neither sir, she was a virgin.

KING. It is so varied too, for it was proclaimed 'virgin.'

COSTARD. If it were, I deny her virginity: I was taken with a maid.

KING. This 'maid' will not serve your turn, sir.

COSTARD. This maid will serve my turn, sir.

KING. Sir I will pronounce your sentence: you shall fast a week with bran and water.

COSTARD. I had rather pray a month with mutton and porridge.

KING. And Don Armado shall be your keeper.
My Lord Berowne see him delivered o'er—
And go we lords to put in practice that
Which each to other hath so strongly sworn.

The King, Longaville and Dumaine go

BEROWNE. I'll lay my head to any goodman's hat,
These oaths and laws will prove an idle scorn—
Sirrah, come on.

COSTARD. I suffer for the truth, sir: for true it is, I was taken with Jaquenetta, and Jaquenetta is a true girl, and therefore welcome the sour cup of prosperity. Affliction may one day smile again, and till then sit thee down, sorrow. They go

Scene 2

Enter Armado and Moth

ARMADO. Boy, what sign is it when a man of great spirit grows melancholy?

MOTH. A great sign sir that he will look sad.

ARMADO. Why, sadness is one and the self-same thing, dear imp.

MOTH. No no, O Lord sir, no.

ARMADO. How canst thou part sadness and melancholy, my tender juvenal?

MOTH. By a familiar demonstration of the working, my tough signior.

ARMADO. Why tough signior? why tough signior?

MOTH. Why tender juvenal? why tender juvenal?

ARMADO. I spoke it, tender juvenal, as a congruent epitheton, appertaining to thy young days, which we may nominate tender.

MOTH. And I, tough signior, as an appertinent title to your old time, which we may name tough.

ARMADO. Pretty and apt.

MOTH. How mean you sir, I pretty, and my saying apt? or I apt, and my saying pretty?

ARMADO. Thou pretty, because little.

MOTH. Little pretty, because little: wherefore apt?

ARMADO. And therefore apt, because quick.

MOTH. Speak you this in my praise, master?

ARMADO. In thy condign praise.

MOTH. I will praise an eel with the same praise.

ARMADO. What, that an eel is ingenious?

MOTH. That an eel is quick.

ARMADO. I do say thou art quick in answers. Thou heat'st my blood.

MOTH. I am answered, sir.

ARMADO. I love not to be crossed.

MOTH [aside]. He speaks the mere contrary, crosses love not him.

ARMADO. I have promised to study three years with the duke.

MOTH. You may do it in an hour, sir.

ARMADO. Impossible.

MOTH. How many is one thrice told?

ARMADO. I am ill at reck'ning, it fitteth the spirit of a tapster.

MOTH. You are a gentleman and a gamester, sir.

ARMADO. I confess both—they are both the varnish of a complete man.

MOTH. Then I am sure you know how much the gross sum of deuce-ace amounts to.

ARMADO. It doth amount to one more than two.

MOTH. Which the base vulgar do call three.

ARMADO. True.

MOTH. Why sir, is this such a piece of study? Now here is three studied ere ye'll thrice wink: and how easy it is to put 'years' to the word 'three,' and study 'three years' in two words, the dancing horse will tell you.

ARMADO. A most fine figure!

MOTH [aside]. To prove you a cipher.

ARMADO. I will hereupon confess I am in love: and as it is base for a soldier to love, so am I in love with a base wench. If drawing my sword against the humour of affection would deliver me from the reprobate thought of it, I would take Desire prisoner, and ransom him to any French courtier for a new-devised curtsy. I think scorn to sigh—methinks I should outswear Cupid.... Comfort me, boy. What great men have been in love?

MOTH. Hercules, master.

ARMADO. Most sweet Hercules! More authority, dear boy, name more; and, sweet my child, let them be men of good repute and carriage.

MOTH. Samson, master—he was a man of good carriage, great carriage: for he carried the town-gates on his back like a porter: and he was in love.

ARMADO. O well-knit Samson! strong-jointed Samson! I do excel thee in my rapier as much as thou didst me in carrying gates. I am in love too. Who was Samson's, my dear Moth?

MOTH. A woman, master.

ARMADO. Of what complexion?

MOTH. Of all the four, or the three, or the two, or one of the four.

ARMADO. Tell me precisely of what complexion?

MOTH. Of the sea-water green, sir.

ARMADO. Is that one of the four complexions?

MOTH. As I have read sir, and the best of them too.

ARMADO. Green indeed is the colour of lovers: but to have a love of that colour, methinks Samson had small reason for it. He surely affected her for her wit.

MOTH. It was so sir—for she had a green wit.

ARMADO. My love is most immaculate white and red.

MOTH. Most maculate thoughts, master, are masked under such colours.

ARMADO. Define, define, well-educated infant.

MOTH. My father's wit, and my mother's tongue assist me!

ARMADO. Sweet invocation of a child, most pretty and pathetical.

MOTH. If she be made of white and red,
Her faults will ne'er be known;
For blushing cheeks by faults are bred,
And fears by pale white shown:
Then if she fear, or be to blame,
By this you shall not know,
For still her cheeks possess the same,
Which native she doth owe.
A dangerous rhyme, master, against the reason of white and red.

ARMADO. Is there not a ballad, boy, of the King and the Beggar?

MOTH. The world was very guilty of such a ballad some three ages since, but I think now 'tis not to be found: or if it were, it would neither serve for the writing nor the tune.

ARMADO. I will have that subject newly writ o'er, that I may example my digression by some mighty precedent. Boy, I do love—that country girl that I took in the park with the rational hind Costard: she deserves well.

MOTH [aside]. To be whipped: and yet a better love than my master.

ARMADO. Sing, boy. My spirit grows heavy in love.

MOTH. And that's great marvel, loving a light wench.

ARMADO. I say, sing.

MOTH. Forbear till this company be past.

Dull, Costard, and Jaquenetta enter

DULL. Sir, the duke's pleasure is that you keep Costard safe—and you must suffer him to take no delight, nor no penance, but a' must fast three days a week. For this damsel, I must keep her at the park—she is allowed for the dey-woman. Fare you well.

ARMADO. I do betray myself with blushing. Maid!

JAQUENETTA. Man.

ARMADO. I will visit thee at the lodge.

JAQUENETTA. That's hereby.

ARMADO. I know where it is situate.

JAQUENETTA. Lord, how wise you are!

ARMADO. I will tell thee wonders.

JAQUENETTA. With that face?

ARMADO. I love thee.

JAQUENETTA. So I heard you say.

ARMADO. And so farewell.

JAQUENETTA. Fair weather after you!

DULL. Come Jaquenetta, away.

Dull and Jaquenetta go

ARMADO. Villain, thou shalt fast for thy offences ere thou be pardoned.

COSTARD. Well sir, I hope when I do it, I shall do it on a full stomach.

ARMADO. Thou shalt be heavily punished.

COSTARD. I am more bound to you than your fellows, for they are but lightly rewarded.

ARMADO. Take away this villain, shut him up.

MOTH. Come you transgressing slave, away.

COSTARD. Let me not be pent up sir, I will fast being loose.

MOTH. No sir, that were fast and loose: thou shalt to prison.

COSTARD. Well, if ever I do see the merry days of desolation that I have seen, some shall see—

MOTH. What shall some see?

COSTARD. Nay nothing, Master Moth, but what they look upon. It is not for prisoners to be too silent in their words, and therefore I will say nothing: I thank God I have as little patience as another man, and therefore I can be quiet.

Moth and Costard depart

ARMADO. I do affect the very ground (which is base) where her shoe (which is baser) guided by her foot (which is basest) doth tread. I shall be forsworn (which is a great argument of falsehood) if I love. And how can that be true love, which is falsely attempted? Love is a familiar; love is a devil. There is no evil angel but love. Yet was Samson so tempted, and he had an excellent strength: yet was Solomon so seduced, and he had a very good wit. Cupid's butt-shaft is too hard for Hercules' club, and therefore too much odds for a Spaniard's rapier. The first and second cause will not serve my turn: the passado he respects not, the duello he regards not; his disgrace is to be called boy, but his glory is to subdue men. Adieu valour, rust rapier, be still drum! for your manager is in love; yea he loveth. Assist me some extemporal god of rhyme, for I am sure I shall turn sonnet. Devise wit, write pen, for I am for whole volumes in folio. He goes

ACT 2
Scene 1

The Princess of France, Rosaline, Maria, Katharine, Boyet, lords and other attendants

BOYET. Now, madam, summon up your dearest spirits,
Consider who the king your father sends.
To whom he sends, and what's his embassy.
Yourself, held precious in the world's esteem,
To parley with the sole inheritor
Of all perfections that a man may owe,
Matchless Navarre; the plea of no less weight
Than Aquitaine, a dowry for a queen.
Be now as prodigal of all dear grace,
As nature was in making graces dear,
When she did starve the general world beside,
And prodigally gave them all to you.
PRINCESS. Good Lord Boyet, my beauty, though but mean,
Needs not the painted flourish of your praise:
Beauty is bought by judgement of the eye,
Not utt'red by base sale of chapmen's tongues.
I am less proud to hear you tell my worth
Than you much willing to be counted wise
In spending your wit in the praise of mine.
But now to task the tasker—good Boyet,
You are not ignorant all-telling fame
Doth noise abroad Navarre hath made a vow,
Till painful study shall outwear three years,
No woman may approach his silent court:
Therefore to's seemeth it a needful course,
Before we enter his forbidden gates,
To know his pleasure; and in that behalf,
Bold of your worthiness, we single you,
As our best-moving fair solicitor.
Tell him, the daughter of the King of France,
On serious business craving quick dispatch,
Importunes personal conference with his grace.
Haste, signify so much, while we attend,
Like humble-visaged suitors, his high will.
BOYET. Proud of employment, willingly I go.
PRINCESS. All pride is willing pride, and yours is so. He goes
Who are the votaries, my loving lords,
That are vow-fellows with this virtuous duke?
A LORD. Lord Longaville is one.
PRINCESS. Know you the man?
MARIA. I know him, madam: at a marriage-feast,
Between Lord Perigort and the beauteous heir
Of Jaquës Falconbridge, solemnizéd
In Normandy, saw I this Longaville.
A man of sovereign parts he is esteemed;
Well fitted in arts, glorious in arms:
Nothing becomes him ill that he would well.
The only soil of his fair virtue's gloss—
If virtue's gloss will stain with any soil—
Is a sharp wit matched with too blunt a will;
Whose edge hath power to cut, whose will still wills
It should none spare that come within his power.
PRINCESS. Some merry mocking lord belike, is't so?
MARIA. They say so most that most his humours know.
PRINCESS. Such short-lived wits do wither as they grow.
Who are the rest?
KATHARINE. The young Dumaine, a well-accomplished youth,
Of all that virtue love for virtue loved:
Most power to do most harm, least knowing ill;
For he hath wit to make an ill shape good,
And shape to win grace though he had no wit.
I saw him at the Duke Alanson's once,
And much too little of that good I saw
Is my report to his great worthiness.
ROSALINE. Another of these students at that time
Was there with him, if I have heard a truth—
Berowne they call him—but a merrier man,
Within the limit of becoming mirth,
I never spent an hour's talk withal.
His eye begets occasion for his wit,
For every object that the one doth catch
The other turns to a mirth-moving jest,
Which his fair tongue—conceit's expositor—
Delivers in such apt and gracious words,
That aged ears play truant at his tales,
And younger hearings are quite ravishéd,
So sweet and voluble is his discourse.
PRINCESS. God bless my ladies! are they all in love,
That every one her own hath garnishéd
With such bedecking ornaments of praise?

Boyet returns

A LORD. Here comes Boyet.
PRINCESS. Now, what admittance, lord?
BOYET. Navarre had notice of your fair approach,
And he and his competitors in oath
Were all addressed to meet you, gentle lady,
Before I came. Marry, thus much I have learnt:
He rather means to lodge you in the field,
Like one that comes here to besiege his court,
Than seek a dispensation for his oath,
To let you enter his unpeopled house.
Here comes Navarre.

The King, Longaville, Dumaine, Berowne and attendants enter. [The ladies mask]

KING. Fair princess, welcome to the court of Navarre.
PRINCESS. 'Fair' I give you back again, and 'welcome' I have not yet: the roof of this court is too high to be yours, and welcome to the wide fields too base to be mine.
KING. You shall be welcome, madam, to my court.
PRINCESS. I will be welcome then—conduct me thither.

KING. Hear me dear lady, I have sworn an oath.
PRINCESS. Our Lady help my lord! he'll be forsworn.
KING. Not for the world fair madam, by my will.
PRINCESS. Why, will shall break it; will, and nothing else.
KING. Your ladyship is ignorant what it is.
PRINCESS. Were my lord so, his ignorance were wise.
Where now his knowledge must prove ignorance.
I hear your grace hath sworn out house-keeping:
'Tis deadly sin to keep that oath, my lord,
And sin to break it.
But pardon me, I am too sudden-bold—
To teach a teacher ill beseemeth me.
Vouchsafe to read the purpose of my coming,
And suddenly resolve me in my suit.
She gives a paper
KING. Madam I will, if suddenly I may.
PRINCESS. You will the sooner that I were away,
For you'll prove perjured if you make me stay.
⌈BEROWNE. Did not I dance with you in Brabant once?
KATHARINE. Did not I dance with you in Brabant once?
BEROWNE. I know you did.
KATHARINE. How needless was it then
To ask the question!
BEROWNE. You must not be so quick.
KATHARINE. 'Tis 'long of you that spur me with such questions.
BEROWNE. Your wit's too hot, it speeds too fast, 'twill tire.
KATHARINE. Not till it leave the rider in the mire.
BEROWNE. What time o'day?
KATHARINE. The hour that fools should ask.
BEROWNE. Now fair befall your mask!
KATHARINE. Fair fall the face it covers!
BEROWNE. And send you many lovers!
KATHARINE. Amen, so you be none.
BEROWNE. Nay then will I be gone.⌋
KING. Madam, your father here doth intimate
The payment of a hundred thousand crowns,
Being but the one half of an entire sum
Disbursèd by my father in his wars.
But say that he, or we—as neither have—
Received that sum, yet there remains unpaid
A hundred thousand more, in surety of the which
One part of Aquitaine is bound to us,
Although not valued to the money's worth.
If then the king your father will restore
But that one half which is unsatisfied,
We will give up our right in Aquitaine,
And hold fair friendship with his majesty.
But that, it seems, he little purposeth,
For here he doth demand to have repaid
A hundred thousand crowns, and not demands,
On payment of a hundred thousand crowns,
To have his title live in Aquitaine;
Which we much rather had depart withal,
And have the money by our father lent,
Than Aquitaine, so gelded as it is.
Dear princess, were not his requests so far
From reason's yielding, your fair self should make
A yielding 'gainst some reason in my breast,
And go well satisfied to France again.
PRINCESS. You do the king my father too much wrong,
And wrong the reputation of your name,
In so unseeming to confess receipt
Of that which hath so faithfully been paid.
KING. I do protest I never heard of it:
And if you prove it, I'll repay it back
Or yield up Aquitaine.
PRINCESS. We arrest your word.
Boyet, you can produce acquittances
For such a sum from special officers
Of Charles his father.
KING. Satisfy me so.
BOYET. So please your grace, the packet is not come
Where that and other specialties are bound:
To-morrow you shall have a sight of them.
KING. It shall suffice me; at which interview
All liberal reason I will yield unto.
Meantime, receive such welcome at my hand
As honour—without breach of honour—may
Make tender of to thy true worthiness.
You may not come, fair princess, within my gates,
But here without you shall be so received,
As you shall deem yourself lodged in my heart,
Though so denied fair harbour in my house.
Your own good thoughts excuse me, and farewell—
To-morrow shall we visit you again.
PRINCESS. Sweet health and fair desires consort your grace!
KING. Thy own wish wish I thee in every place!
The King and his train go
⌈BEROWNE. Lady, I will commend you to mine own heart.
ROSALINE. Pray you, do my commendations—I would be glad to see it.
BEROWNE. I would you heard it groan.
ROSALINE. Is the fool sick?
BEROWNE. Sick at the heart.
ROSALINE. Alack, let it blood.
BEROWNE. Would that do it good?
ROSALINE. My physic says, 'ay.'
BEROWNE. Will you prick't with your eye?
ROSALINE. No point, with my knife.
BEROWNE. Now God save thy life!
ROSALINE. And yours from long living!
BEROWNE. I cannot stay thanksgiving.⌋

Dumaine returns

DUMAINE. Sir, I pray you a word. What lady is that same?
BOYET. The heir of Alanson, Katharine her name.
DUMAINE. A gallant lady. Monsieur, fare you well.
He goes

Longaville returns

LONGAVILLE. I beseech you a word. What is she in the white?
BOYET. A woman sometimes, an you saw her in the light.
LONGAVILLE. Perchance light in the light. I desire her name.
BOYET. She hath but one for herself—to desire that were a shame.
LONGAVILLE. Pray you sir, whose daughter?
BOYET. Her mother's, I have heard.
LONGAVILLE. God's blessing on your beard!
BOYET. Good sir be not offended.
She is an heir of Falconbridge.

LONGAVILLE. Nay, my choler is ended.
She is a most sweet lady.
BOYET. Not unlike, sir, that may be. Longaville goes

Berowne returns

BEROWNE. What's her name in the cap?
BOYET. Rosaline by good hap.
BEROWNE. Is she wedded or no?
BOYET. To her will sir, or so.
BEROWNE. You are welcome sir, adieu.
BOYET. Farewell to me sir, and welcome to you.
Berowne goes
MARIA. That last is Berowne, the merry mad-cap lord—
Not a word with him but a jest.
BOYET. And every jest but a word.
PRINCESS. It was well done of you to take him at his word.
BOYET. I was as willing to grapple as he was to board.
KATHARINE. Two hot sheeps, marry!
BOYET. And wherefore not ships?
No sheep, sweet lamb, unless we feed on your lips.
KATHARINE. You sheep, and I pasture: shall that finish the jest?
BOYET. So you grant pasture for me.
He offers to kiss her
KATHARINE. Not so, gentle beast—
My lips are no common, though several they be.
BOYET. Belonging to whom?
KATHARINE. To my fortunes and me.
PRINCESS. Good wits will be jangling, but gentles agree.
This civil war of wits were much better used
On Navarre and his book-men, for here 'tis abused.
BOYET. If my observation—which very seldom lies—
By the heart's still rhetoric discloséd with eyes,
Deceive me not now, Navarre is infected.
PRINCESS. With what?
BOYET. With that which we lovers entitle 'affected.'
PRINCESS. Your reason?
BOYET. Why, all his behaviours did make their retire
To the court of his eye, peeping thorough desire.
His heart like an agate with your print impressed,
Proud with his form, in his eye pride expressed.
His tongue all impatient to speak and not see,
Did stumble with haste in his eyesight to be.
All senses to that sense did make their repair,
To feel only looking on fairest of fair:
Methought all his senses were locked in his eye,
As jewels in crystal for some prince to buy,
Who, tend'ring their own worth from where they were glassed,
Did point you to buy them, along as you passed.
His face's own margent did quote such amazes,
That all eyes saw his eyes enchanted with gazes.
I'll give you Aquitaine, and all that is his,
An you give him for my sake but one loving kiss.
PRINCESS. Come, to our pavilion! Boyet is disposed.
BOYET. But to speak that in words which his eye hath disclosed.
I only have made a mouth of his eye,
By adding a tongue which I know will not lie.
ROSALINE. Thou art an old love-monger, and speakest skilfully.
MARIA. He is Cupid's grandfather, and learns news of him.
KATHARINE. Then was Venus like her mother, for her father is but grim.
BOYET. Do you hear, my mad wenches?
MARIA. No.
BOYET. What then, do you see?
ROSALINE. Ay, our way to be gone.
BOYET. You are too hard for me.
They go

ACT 3
Scene 1

Armado and Moth

ARMADO. Warble, child, make passionate my sense of hearing.

MOTH [singing]. Concolinel.

ARMADO. Sweet air! Go, tenderness of years, take this key, give enlargement to the swain, bring him festinately hither. I must employ him in a letter to my love.

MOTH. Master, will you win your love with a French brawl?

ARMADO. How meanest thou? brawling in French?

MOTH. No, my complete master—but to jig off a tune at the tongue's end, canary to it with your feet, humour it with turning up your eyelids, sigh a note and sing a note, sometime through the throat as if you swallowed love with singing love, sometime through the nose as if you snuffed up love by smelling love, with your hat penthouse-like o'er the shop of your eyes, with your arms crossed on your thin-belly doublet like a rabbit on a spit, or your hands in your pocket like a man after the old painting—and keep not too long in one tune, but a snip and away. These are complements, these are humours, these betray nice wenches that would be betrayed without these, and make them men of note—do you note me?—that most are affected to these.

ARMADO. How hast thou purchased this experience?

MOTH. By my penny of observation.

ARMADO. But O—but O—

MOTH. —'the hobby-horse is forgot.'

ARMADO. Call'st thou my love 'hobby-horse'?

MOTH. No master, the hobby-horse is but a colt—[aside] and your love, perhaps, a hackney.... But have you forgot your love?

ARMADO. Almost I had.

MOTH. Negligent student! learn her by heart.

ARMADO. By heart, and in heart, boy.

MOTH. And out of heart, master: all those three I will prove.

ARMADO. What wilt thou prove?

MOTH. A man, if I live—and this 'by, in, and without,' upon the instant. By heart you love her, because your heart cannot come by her: in heart you love her, because your heart is in love with her: and out of heart you love her, being out of heart that you cannot enjoy her.

ARMADO. I am all these three.

MOTH. And three times as much more—[aside] and yet nothing at all.

ARMADO. Fetch hither the swain. He must carry me a letter.

MOTH. A message well sympathized—a horse to be ambassador for an ass!

ARMADO. Ha? ha? what sayest thou?

MOTH. Marry sir, you must send the ass upon the horse, for he is very slow-gaited. But I go.

ARMADO. The way is but short—away.

MOTH. As swift as lead, sir.

ARMADO. The meaning, pretty ingenious?
Is not lead a metal heavy, dull, and slow?

MOTH. Minime, honest master, or rather master, no.

ARMADO. I say lead is slow.

MOTH. You are too swift, sir, to say so.
Is that lead slow which is fired from a gun?

ARMADO. Sweet smoke of rhetoric!
He reputes me a cannon—and the bullet, that's he:
I shoot thee at the swain.

MOTH. Thump then, and I flee. He goes

ARMADO. A most acute juvenal, volable and free of grace!
By thy favour, sweet welkin, I must sigh in thy face:
Most rude melancholy, valour gives thee place.
My herald is returned.

Moth returns with Costard

MOTH. A wonder, master! here's a costard broken in a shin.

ARMADO. Some enigma, some riddle—come, thy l'envoy—begin.

COSTARD. No egma, no riddle, no l'envoy, no salve in the mail, sir. O sir, plantain, a plain plantain! no l'envoy, no l'envoy, no salve sir, but a plantain!

ARMADO. By virtue, thou enforcest laughter—thy silly thought, my spleen. The heaving of my lungs provokes me to ridiculous smiling: O, pardon me my stars! Doth the inconsiderate take 'salve' for 'l'envoy,' and the word l'envoy for a salve?

MOTH. Do the wise think them other? is not l'envoy a salve?

ARMADO. No page, it is an epilogue or discourse to make plain
Some obscure precedence that hath tofore been sain.
I will example it:
The Fox, the Ape, and the Humble-bee,
Were still at odds, being but three.
There's the moral: now the l'envoy.

MOTH. I will add the l'envoy. Say the moral again.

ARMADO. The Fox, the Ape, and the Humble-bee,
Were still at odds, being but three.

MOTH. Until the Goose came out of door,
And stayed the odds by adding four.
Now will I begin your moral, and do you follow with my l'envoy.
The Fox, the Ape, and the Humble-bee,
Were still at odds, being but three.

ARMADO. Until the Goose came out of door,
Staying the odds by adding four.

MOTH. A good l'envoy, ending in the goose: would you desire more?

COSTARD. The boy hath sold him a bargain, a goose, that's flat.
Sir, your pennyworth is good, an your goose be fat.
To sell a bargain well is as cunning as fast and loose:
Let me see, a fat l'envoy—ay, that's a fat goose.

ARMADO. Come hither, come hither. How did this argument begin?

MOTH. By saying that a costard was broken in a shin—
Then called you for the l'envoy.

COSTARD. True, and I for a plantain—thus came your argument in—
Then the boy's fat l'envoy, the goose that you bought—
And he ended the market.

ARMADO. But tell me. How was there a costard broken in a shin?

MOTH. I will tell you sensibly.

COSTARD. Thou hast no feeling of it, Moth—I will speak that l'envoy.
I, Costard, running out, that was safely within,
Fell over the threshold and broke my shin.

ARMADO. We will talk no more of this matter.

COSTARD. Till there be more matter in the shin.

ARMADO. Sirrah Costard, I will enfranchise thee.

COSTARD. O, marry me to one Frances! I smell some l'envoy, some goose, in this.

ARMADO. By my sweet soul, I mean setting thee at liberty, enfreedoming thy person: thou wert immured, restrained, captivated, bound.

COSTARD. True, true—and now you will be my purgation, and let me loose.

ARMADO. I give thee thy liberty, set thee from durance, and in lieu thereof impose on thee nothing but this! [he proffers a letter] Bear this significant to the country maid Jaquenetta . . . There is remuneration—for the best ward of mine honour is rewarding my dependents. Moth, follow. He departs

MOTH. Like the sequel, I. Signior Costard, adieu. He follows Armado

COSTARD. My sweet ounce of man's flesh! my incony Jew!
Now will I look to his remuneration. Remuneration! O, that's the Latin word for three-farthings: three-farthings—remuneration. 'What's the price of this inkle?' 'One penny.' 'No, I'll give you a remuneration': why, it carries it. Remuneration! why, it is a fairer name than French crown. I will never buy and sell out of this word.

Berowne approaches

BEROWNE. My good knave Costard, exceedingly well met.

COSTARD. Pray you sir, how much carnation ribbon may a man buy for a remuneration?

BEROWNE. What is a remuneration?

COSTARD. Marry sir, halfpenny farthing.

BEROWNE. Why then, three-farthing worth of silk.

COSTARD. I thank your worship. God be wi' you.

BEROWNE. Stay slave, I must employ thee.
As thou wilt win my favour, good my knave,
Do one thing for me that I shall entreat.

COSTARD. When would you have it done, sir?

BEROWNE. This afternoon.

COSTARD. Well, I will do it, sir: fare you well.

BEROWNE. Thou knowest not what it is.

COSTARD. I shall know, sir, when I have done it.

BEROWNE. Why, villain, thou must know first.

COSTARD. I will come to your worship to-morrow morning.

BEROWNE. It must be done this afternoon. Hark, slave, it is but this:
The princess comes to hunt here in the park,

And in her train there is a gentle lady:
When tongues spake sweetly, then they name her name,
And Rosaline they call her. Ask for her;
And to her white hand see thou do commend
This sealed-up counsel.
There's thy guerdon: go
He gives him a shilling

COSTARD. Gardon, O sweet gardon! better than remuneration, eleven-pence farthing better: most sweet gardon. I will do it, sir, in print! Gardon—remuneration— He goes

BEROWNE. And I—
Forsooth in love, I that have been love's whip!
A very beadle to a humorous sigh,
A critic, nay, a night-watch constable,
A domineering pedant o'er the boy,
Than whom no mortal so magnificent—
This wimpled, whining, purblind, wayward boy,
This Signior Junior, giant-dwarf, Dan Cupid,
Regent of love-rhymes, lord of folded arms,
Th'anointed sovereign of sighs and groans,
Liege of all loiterers and malcontents,
Dread Prince of Plackets, King of Codpieces,
Sole imperator and great general
Of trotting paritors—O my little heart!
And I to be a corporal of his field,
And wear his colours like a tumbler's hoop!
What I! I love! I sue! I seek a wife!
A woman, that is like a German clock,
Still a-repairing, ever out frame,
And never going aright, being a watch,
But being watched that it may still go right.
Nay, to be perjured, which is worst of all;
And among three to love the worst of all—
A whitely wanton with a velvet brow,
With two pitch-balls stuck in her face for eyes,
Ay and, by heaven, one that will do the deed,
Though Argus were her eunuch and her guard!
And I to sigh for her, to watch for her,
To pray for her, go to: it is a plague
That Cupid will impose for my neglect
Of his almighty dreadful little might.
Well, I will love, write, sigh, pray, sue, and groan—
Some men must love my lady, and some Joan.
He goes

ACT 4
Scene 1

The Princess, Rosaline, Maria, Katharine, Boyet, lords, attendants, and a Forester draw near

PRINCESS. Was that the king that spurred his horse so hard
Against the steep-up rising of the hill?
BOYET. I know not, but I think it was not he.
PRINCESS. Whoe'er a' was, a' showed a mounting mind.
Well lords, to-day we shall have our dispatch,
On Saturday we will return to France.
Then, forester, my friend, where is the bush
That we must stand and play the murderer in?
FORESTER. Hereby upon the edge of yonder coppice—
A stand where you may make the fairest shoot.
PRINCESS. I thank my beauty, I am fair that shoot,
And thereupon thou speak'st the fairest shoot.
FORESTER. Pardon me madam, for I meant not so.
PRINCESS. What, what! first praise me, and again say no?
O short-lived pride. Not fair? alack for woe!
FORESTER. Yes madam, fair.
PRINCESS. Nay, never paint me now.
Where fair is not, praise cannot mend the brow.
Here—good my glass!—take this for telling true:
She gives him money
Fair payment for foul words is more than due.
FORESTER. Nothing but fair is that which you inherit.
PRINCESS. See, see, my beauty will be saved by merit!
O heresy in fair, fit for these days!
A giving hand, though foul, shall have fair praise.
But come, the bow: now mercy goes to kill,
And shooting well is then accounted ill.
Thus will I save my credit in the shoot:
Not wounding, pity would not let me do't;
If wounding, then it was to show my skill,
That more for praise than purpose meant to kill.
And, out of question, so it is sometimes:
Glory grows guilty of detested crimes,
When, for fame's sake, for praise, an outward part,
We bend to that the working of the heart:
As I for praise alone now seek to spill
The poor deer's blood, that my heart means no ill.
BOYET. Do not curst wives hold that self sovereignty
Only for praise sake, when they strive to be
Lords o'er their lords?
PRINCESS. Only for praise—and praise we may afford
To any lady that subdues a lord.

Costard enters

PRINCESS. Here comes a member of the commonwealth.
COSTARD. God dig-you-den all, pray you which is the head lady?
PRINCESS. Thou shalt know her, fellow, by the rest that have no heads.
COSTARD. Which is the greatest lady, the highest?
PRINCESS. The thickest, and the tallest.
COSTARD. The thickest and the tallest! It is so—truth is truth.
An your waist, mistress, were as slender as my wit,
One o' these maids' girdles for your waist should be fit.
Are not you the chief woman? you are the thickest here.
PRINCESS. What's your will, sir? what's your will?
COSTARD. I have a letter from Monsieur Berowne, to one Lady Rosaline.
PRINCESS. O, thy letter, thy letter: he's a good friend of mine.
Stand aside, good bearer. Boyet, you can carve.
Break up this capon.
BOYET. I am bound to serve.
This letter is mistook: it importeth none here.
It is writ to Jaquenetta.
PRINCESS. We will read it, I swear.
Break the neck of the wax, and every one give ear.

Boyet reads

'By heaven, that thou art fair is most infallible; true that thou art beauteous; truth itself that thou art lovely. More fairer than fair, beautiful than beauteous, truer than truth itself, have commiseration on thy heroical vassal. The magnanimous and most illustrate King Cophetua set eye upon the penurious and indubitate beggar Zenelophon: and he it was that might rightly say 'veni, vidi, vici': which to anatomize in the vulgar—O base and obscure vulgar!—videlicet, he came, saw, and overcame: he came, one; saw, two; overcame, three. Who came? the king. Why did he come? to see. Why did he see? to overcome. To whom came he? to the beggar. What saw he? the beggar. Who overcame he? the beggar. The conclusion is victory: on whose side? the king's: the captive is enriched—on whose side? the beggar's. The catastrophe is a nuptial—on whose side? the king's: no, on both in one, or one in both. I am the king, for so stands the comparison—thou the beggar, for so witnesseth thy lowliness. Shall I command thy love? I may. Shall I enforce thy love? I could. Should I entreat thy love? I will. What shalt thou exchange for rags?—robes. For tittles?—titles. For thyself?—me! Thus expecting thy reply, I profane my lips on thy foot, my eyes on thy picture, and my heart on thy every part.

Thine in the dearest design of industry,
DON ADRIANO DE ARMADO.

Thus dost thou hear the Nemean lion roar
'Gainst thee, thou lamb, that standest as his prey:
Submissive fall his princely feet before,
And he from forage will incline to play.
But if thou strive, poor soul, what art thou then?
Food for his rage, repasture for his den.'

PRINCESS. What plume of feathers is he that indited this letter?
What vane? what weathercock? did you ever hear better?
BOYET. I am much deceived but I remember the style.
PRINCESS. Else your memory is bad, going o'er it erewhile.
BOYET. This Armado is a Spaniard that keeps here in court,
A phantasime, a Monarcho, and one that makes sport
To the prince and his book-mates.
PRINCESS [beckons him aside]. Thou, fellow, a word.
Who gave thee this letter?
COSTARD. I told you—my lord.
PRINCESS. To whom shouldst thou give it?
COSTARD. From my lord to my lady.
PRINCESS. From which lord, to which lady?
COSTARD. From my Lord Berowne, a good master of mine,
To a lady of France, that he called Rosaline.
PRINCESS. Thou hast mistaken his letter. Come lords, away. To Rosaline
Here, sweet, put up this—'twill be thine another day.

All depart save Boyet, Rosaline, Maria and Costard

BOYET. Who is the suitor? who is the suitor?
ROSALINE. Shall I teach you to know?
BOYET. Ay, my continent of beauty.
ROSALINE. Why, she that bears the bow.
Finely put off!
BOYET. My lady goes to kill horns—but if thou marry,
Hang me by the neck, if horns that year miscarry.
Finely put on!
ROSALINE. Well then, I am the shooter.
BOYET. And who is your deer?
ROSALINE. If we choose by the horns, yourself come not near.
Finely put on, indeed!
MARIA. You still wrangle with her, Boyet, and she strikes at the brow.
BOYET. But she herself is hit lower: have I hit her now?
ROSALINE. Shall I come upon thee with an old saying, there was a man when King Pepin of France was a little boy, as touching the hit it?
BOYET. So I may answer thee with one as old, that was a woman when Queen Guinever of Britain was a little wench, as touching the hit it.

Rosaline and Boyet dance together and sing

ROSALINE. Thou canst not hit it, hit it, hit it:
Thou canst not hit it, my good man.
BOYET. An I cannot, cannot, cannot:
An I cannot, another can. Rosaline goes
COSTARD. By my troth, most pleasant! how both did fit it!
MARIA. A mark marvellous well shot, for they both did hit it.
BOYET. A mark! O mark but that mark: 'A mark,' says my lady!
Let the mark have a prick in't, to mete at if it may be.
MARIA. Wide o' the bow hand! I'faith, your hand is out.
COSTARD. Indeed a' must shoot nearer, or he'll ne'er hit the clout.
BOYET. An if my hand be out, then belike your hand is in.
COSTARD. Then will she get the upshoot by cleaving the pin.
MARIA. Come come, you talk greasily, your lips grow foul.
COSTARD. She's too hard for you at pricks, sir—challenge her to bowl.
BOYET. I fear too much rubbing. Good night, my good owl. Boyet and Maria go
COSTARD. By my soul, a swain, a most simple clown!
Lord, lord, how the ladies and I have put him down!
O' my troth, most sweet jests, most incony vulgar wit,
When it comes so smoothly off, so obscenely as it were, so fit.
Armado to th'one side, O, a most dainty man.
To see him walk before a lady, and to bear her fan.
To see him kiss his hand, and how most sweetly a' will swear!
And his page o' t'other side, that handful of wit!
Ah, heavens, it is a most pathetical nit!

A shout is heard

Sola, sola! He runs off

Scene 2

Enter Holofernes, Sir Nathaniel, and Dull

SIR NATHANIEL. Very reverend sport truly, and done in the testimony of a good conscience.

HOLOFERNES. The deer was, as you know, in sanguis, blood—ripe as the pomewater who now hangeth like a jewel in the ear of caelum, the sky, the welkin, the heaven, and anon falleth like a crab on the face of terra, the soil, the land, the earth.

SIR NATHANIEL. Truly, Master Holofernes, the epithets are sweetly varied, like a scholar at the least: but sir, I assure ye it was a buck of the first head.

HOLOFERNES. Sir Nathaniel, haud credo.

DULL. 'Twas not a haud credo, 'twas a pricket.

HOLOFERNES. Most barbarous intimation! yet a kind of insinuation, as it were in via, in way, of explication; facere as it were replication, or rather ostentare, to show as it were his inclination—after his undressed, unpolished, uneducated, unpruned, untrained, or rather unlettered, or ratherest, unconfirmed fashion—to insert again my haud credo for a deer.

DULL. I said the deer was not a haud credo, 'twas a pricket.

HOLOFERNES. Twice sod simplicity, bis coctus!
O thou monster Ignorance, how deformed dost thou look!

SIR NATHANIEL. Sir, he hath never fed of the dainties that are bred in a book.
He hath not eat paper, as it were; he hath not drunk ink:
His intellect is not replenished, he is only an animal, only sensible in the duller parts:
And such barren plants are set before us, that we thankful should be,
Which we of taste and feeling are, for those parts that do fructify in us more than he.
For as it would ill become me to be vain, indiscreet, or a fool,
So were there a patch set on learning, to see him in a school:
But omne bene say I, being of an old father's mind,
Many can brook the weather that love not the wind.

DULL. You two are book-men—can you tell me by your wit,
What was a month old at Cain's birth, that's not five weeks old as yet?

HOLOFERNES. Dictynna, goodman Dull—Dictynna, goodman Dull.

DULL. What is Dictynna?

SIR NATHANIEL. A title to Phœbe, to Luna, to the moon.

HOLOFERNES. The moon was a month old when Adam was no more,
And raught not to five weeks when he came to five-score.
Th'allusion holds in the exchange.

DULL. 'Tis true indeed—the collusion holds in the exchange.

HOLOFERNES. God comfort thy capacity! I say, th'allusion holds in the exchange.

DULL. And I say, the pollution holds in the exchange; for the moon is never but a month old. And I say beside that 'twas a pricket that the princess killed.

HOLOFERNES. Sir Nathaniel, will you hear an extemporal epitaph on the death of the deer? and, to humour the ignorant, I call the deer the princess killed, a pricket.

SIR NATHANIEL. Perge, good Master Holofernes, perge, so it shall please you to abrogate scurrility.

HOLOFERNES. I will something affect the letter, for it argues facility.

The preyful princess pierced and pricked
A pretty pleasing pricket—
Some say a sore, but not a sore,
Till now made sore with shooting.
The dogs did yell—put 'ell to sore,
Then sorel jumps from thicket;
Or pricket sore—or else sore'll
The people fall a-hooting.
If sore be sore, then L to sore
Make fifty sores o'sorel:
Of one sore I an hundred make,
By adding but one more L.

SIR NATHANIEL. A rare talent!

DULL. If a talent be a claw, look how he claws him with a talent.

HOLOFERNES. This is a gift that I have, simple, simple; a foolish extravagant spirit, full of forms, figures, shapes, objects, ideas, apprehensions, motions, revolutions. These are begot in the ventricle of memory, nourished in the womb of pia mater, and delivered upon the mellowing of occasion. But the gift is good in those in whom it is acute, and I am thankful for it.

SIR NATHANIEL. Sir, I praise the Lord for you, and so may my parishioners, for their sons are well tutored by you, and their daughters profit very greatly under you: you are a good member of the commonwealth.

HOLOFERNES. Mehercle! if their sons be ingenious, they shall want no instruction: if their daughters be capable, I will put it to them. But, vir sapit qui pauca loquitur—a soul feminine saluteth us.

Jaquenetta and Costard enter

JAQUENETTA. God give you good morrow, Master Person.

HOLOFERNES. Master Person—quasi pierce-one? And if one should be pierced, which is the one?

COSTARD. Marry, master schoolmaster, he that is likeliest to a hogshead.

HOLOFERNES. Piercing a hogshead! a good lustre of conceit in a turf of earth, fire enough for a flint, pearl enough for a swine: 'tis pretty, it is well.

JAQUENETTA. Good Master Person, be so good as read me this letter. It was given me by Costard, and sent me from Don Armado: I beseech you, read it.

HOLOFERNES.
'Fauste precor gelida quando pecus omne sub umbra Ruminat,' and so forth. Ah, good old Mantuan! I may speak of thee as the traveller doth of Venice:

Venetia, Venetia,
Chi non ti vede, non ti pretia.

Old Mantuan! old Mantuan! Who understandeth thee not, loves thee not. Ut, re, sol, la, mi, fa. Under pardon, sir, what are the contents? or, rather, as Horace says in his—What, my soul, verses?

SIR NATHANIEL. Ay sir, and very learned.

HOLOFERNES. Let me hear a staff, a stanze, a verse. Lege, domine.

SIR NATHANIEL [reads]. 'If love make me forsworn, how shall I swear to love?
Ah, never faith could hold, if not to beauty vowed!

Though to myself forsworn, to thee I'll faithful prove.
Those thoughts to me were oaks, to thee like osiers bowed.
Study his bias leaves, and makes his book thine eyes,
Where all those pleasures live that art would comprehend:
If knowledge be the mark, to know thee shall suffice.
Well learnéd is that tongue, that well can thee commend,
All ignorant that soul, that sees thee without wonder—
Which is to me some praise that I thy parts admire.
Thy eye Jove's lightning bears, thy voice his dreadful thunder,
Which, not to anger bent, is music and sweet fire.
Celestial as thou art, O pardon love this wrong,
That singës heaven's praise with such an earthly tongue!'

HOLOFERNES. You find not the apostrophus, and so miss the accent. Let me supervise the canzonet. [he takes the letter] Here are the only numbers ratified, but for the elegancy, facility, and golden cadence of poesy, caret: Ovidius Naso was the man. And why, indeed, 'Naso,' but for smelling out the odoriferous flowers of fancy, the jerks of invention? Imitari is nothing: so doth the hound his master, the ape his keeper, the tired horse his rider . . . But, damosella virgin, was this directed to you?

JAQUENETTA. Ay sir, from one Monsieur Berowne, one of the strange queen's lords.

HOLOFERNES. I will overglance the superscript: 'To the snow-white hand of the most beauteous Lady Rosaline'.

I will look again on the intellect of the letter, for the nomination of the party writing to the person written unto:

'Your Ladyship's in all desired employment,
BEROWNE.'

Sir Nathaniel, this Berowne is one of the votaries with the king, and here he hath framed a letter to a sequent of the stranger queen's: which accidentally, or by the way of progression, hath miscarried. Trip and go, my sweet, deliver this paper into the royal hand of the king—it may concern much: stay not thy complement, I forgive thy duty—adieu.

JAQUENETTA. Good Costard go with me . . . Sir, God save your life!

COSTARD. Have with thee, my girl. They go together

SIR NATHANIEL. Sir, you have done this in the fear of God, very religiously: and, as a certain father saith—

HOLOFERNES. Sir, tell not me of the father, I do fear colourable colours. . . . But to return to the verses—did they please you, Sir Nathaniel?

SIR NATHANIEL. Marvellous well for the pen.

HOLOFERNES. I do dine to-day at the father's of a certain pupil of mine, where if—before repast—it shall please you to gratify the table with a grace, I will, on my privilege I have with the parents of the foresaid child or pupil, undertake your ben venuto; where I will prove those verses to be very unlearned, neither savouring of poetry, wit, nor invention. I beseech your society.

SIR NATHANIEL. And thank you too: for society—saith the text—is the happiness of life.

HOLOFERNES. And, certes, the text most infallibly concludes it. [to Dull] Sir, I do invite you too, you shall not say me nay: pauca verba. Away, the gentles are at their game, and we will to our recreation. They depart

Scene 3

Enter Berowne, with a paper in his hand, alone

BEROWNE [reads]. 'The king he is hunting the deer' . . . I am coursing myself. . . .' They have pitched a toil, I am toiling in a pitch—pitch that defiles; defile! a foul word. Well, set thee down, sorrow; for so they say the fool said, and so say I, and I the fool: well proved, wit! By the Lord, this love is as mad as Ajax, it kills sheep, it kills me, I a sheep—well proved again o' my side! I will not love; if I do, hang me: i'faith I will not. O, but her eye! by this light, but for her eye, I would not love her; yes, for her two eyes. Well, I do nothing in the world but lie, and lie in my throat. By heaven, I do love, and it hath taught me to rhyme, and to be melancholy: and here is part of my rhyme, and here my melancholy. Well, she hath one o' my sonnets already. The clown bore it, the fool sent it, and the lady hath it: sweet clown, sweeter fool, sweetest lady! By the world, I would not care a pin if the other three were in. Here comes one with a paper—God give him grace to groan!
He climbs into a tree

The King approaches with a paper in his hand

KING. Ay me!

BEROWNE [aside]. Shot, by heaven! Proceed, sweet Cupid. Thou hast thumped him with thy birdbolt under the left pap. In faith secrets!

KING [reads]. 'So sweet a kiss the golden sun gives not
To those fresh morning drops upon the rose,
As thy eye-beams, when their fresh rays have smote
The night of dew that on my cheeks down flows:
Nor shines the silver moon one half so bright
Through the transparent bosom of the deep,
As doth thy face through tears of mine give light:
Thou shin'st in every tear that I do weep,
No drop but as a coach doth carry thee:
So ridest thou triumphing in my woe.
Do but behold the tears that swell in me,
And they thy glory through my grief will show:
But do not love thyself—then thou wilt keep
My tears for glasses, and still make me weep.
O queen of queens, how far dost thou excel
No thought can think, nor tongue of mortal tell.'
How shall she know my griefs? I'll drop the paper.
Sweet leaves, shade folly. Who is he comes here?
He hides

Longaville enters, with a paper

What, Longaville! and reading! listen ear.

BEROWNE. Now, in thy likeness, one more fool appear!

LONGAVILLE. Ay me! I am forsworn.

BEROWNE. Why, he comes in like a perjure, wearing papers.

KING. In love I hope—sweet fellowship in shame!

BEROWNE. One drunkard loves another of the name.
LONGAVILLE. Am I the first that have been perjured so?
BEROWNE. I could put thee in comfort—not by two that I know.
Thou makest the triumviry, the corner-cap of society,
The shape of Love's Tyburn, that hangs up Simplicity.
LONGAVILLE. I fear these stubborn lines lack power to move....
[reads] 'O sweet Maria, empress of my love!'
These numbers will I tear, and write in prose.
BEROWNE. O, rhymes are guards on wanton Cupid's hose—
Disfigure not his shop.
LONGAVILLE. This same shall go.

He reads the sonnet

'Did not the heavenly rhetoric of thine eye,
'Gainst whom the world cannot hold argument,
Persuade my heart to this false perjury?
Vows for thee broke deserve not punishment.
A woman I forswore, but I will prove,
Thou being a goddess, I forswore not thee.
My vow was earthly, thou a heavenly love.
Thy grace being gained cures all disgrace in me.
Vows are but breath, and breath a vapour is.
Then thou, fair sun, which on my earth dost shine,
Exhal'st this vapour-vow—in thee it is:
If broken then, it is no fault of mine:
If by me broke, what fool is not so wise
To loose an oath to win a paradise?'
BEROWNE. This is the liver vein, which makes flesh a deity,
A green goose a goddess—pure, pure idolatry.
God amend us, God amend, we are much out o'th'way.
LONGAVILLE. By whom shall I send this?—

Dumaine approaches, with a paper

Company! stay. He steps aside
BEROWNE. All hid, all hid! an old infant play—
Like a demigod here sit I in the sky,
And wretched fools' secrets heedfully o'er-eye.
More sacks to the mill! O heavens, I have my wish—
Dumaine transformed, four woodcocks in a dish!
DUMAINE. O most divine Kate!
BEROWNE. O most profane coxcomb!
DUMAINE. By heaven, the wonder in a mortal eye!
BEROWNE. By earth, she is not, corporal, there you lie.
DUMAINE. Her amber hair for foul hath amber quoted.
BEROWNE. An amber-coloured raven was well noted.
DUMAINE. As upright as the cedar,
BEROWNE. Stoop, I say!
Her shoulder is with child.
DUMAINE. As fair as day!
BEROWNE. Ay, as some days, but then no sun must shine.
DUMAINE. O that I had my wish!
LONGAVILLE. And I had mine!
KING. And I mine too, good Lord!
BEROWNE. Amen, so I had mine. Is not that a good word?
DUMAINE. I would forget her, but a fever she
Reigns in my blood, and will remember'd be.
BEROWNE. A fever in your blood! why then incision,
Would let her out in saucers—sweet misprision!
DUMAINE. Once more I'll read the ode that I have writ.
BEROWNE. Once more I'll mark how love can vary wit.

Dumaine reads his sonnet

DUMAINE. 'On a day, alack the day!
Love, whose month is ever May,
Spied a blossom passing fair
Playing in the wanton air:
Through the velvet leaves the wind,
All unseen, can passage find;
That the lover, sick to death,
Wished himself the heaven's breath.
Air, quoth he, thy cheeks may blow—
Air, would I might triumph so.
But alack, my hand is sworn,
Ne'er to pluck thee from thy thorn:
Vow, alack, for youth unmeet,
Youth so apt to pluck a sweet.
Do not call it sin in me,
That I am forsworn for thee;
Thou for whom e'en Jove would swear
Juno but an Ethiope were,
And deny himself for Jove,
Turning mortal for thy love.'
This will I send, and something else more plain.
That shall express my true-love's fasting pain.
O, would the King, Berowne, and Longaville,
Were lovers too! Ill, to example ill,
Would from my forehead wipe a perjured note;
For none offend, where all alike do dote.
LONGAVILLE [advances]. Dumaine, thy love is far from charity,
That in love's grief desir'st society:
You may look pale, but I should blush, I know,
To be o'erheard and taken napping so.
KING [advances]. Come sir, you blush; as his your case is such;
You chide at him, offending twice as much.
You do not love Maria? Longaville
Did never sonnet for her sake compile,
Nor never lay his wreathéd arms athwart
His loving bosom to keep down his heart.
I have been closely shrouded in this bush,
And marked you both, and for you both did blush.
I heard your guilty rhymes, observed your fashion,
Saw sighs reek from you, noted well your passion.
'Ay me,' says one! 'O Jove,' the other cries!
One, her hairs were gold, crystal the other's eyes.
[to Longaville] You would for paradise break faith and troth—
[to Dumaine] and Jove, for your love, would infringe an oath.
What will Berowne say, when that he shall hear
Faith so infringéd, with such zeal did swear?
How will he scorn! how will he spend his wit!
How will he triumph, leap, and laugh at it!
For all the wealth that ever I did see,
I would not have him know so much by me.
BEROWNE. Now step I forth to whip hypocrisy....
He descends from the tree

Ah, good my liege, I pray thee, pardon me:
Good heart! what grace hast thou, thus to reprove
These worms for loving, that art most in love?
Your eyes do make no coaches; in your tears
There is no certain princess that appears;
You'll not be perjured, 'tis a hateful thing;
Tush, none but minstrels like of sonneting.
But are you not ashamed? nay, are you not,
All three of you, to be thus much o'er-shot?
You found his mote; the king your mote did see;
But I a beam do find in each of three.
O, what a scene of fool'ry have I seen,
Of sighs, of groans, of sorrow, and of teen:
O me, with that strict patience have I sat,
To see a king transformèd to a gnat!
To see great Hercules whipping a gig,
And profound Solomon to tune a jig,
And Nestor play a push-pin with the boys,
And critic Timon laugh at idle toys!
Where lies thy grief, O tell me, good Dumaine?
And, gentle Longaville, where lies thy pain?
And where my liege's? all about the breast.
A caudle, ho!
KING. Too bitter is thy jest.
Are we betrayed thus to thy over-view?
BEROWNE. Not you to me, but I betrayed by you.
I that am honest, I that hold it sin
To break the vow that I am engagèd in,
I am betrayed by keeping company
With moon-like men, men of inconstancy.
When shall you see me write a thing in rhyme?
Or groan for Joan? or spend a minute's time
In pruning me? When shall you hear that I
Will praise a hand, a foot, a face, an eye,
A gait, a state, a brow, a breast, a waist,
A leg, a limb?—
KING. Soft! Whither away so fast?
A true man or a thief that gallops so?
BEROWNE. I post from love, good lover let me go.

Costard and Jaquenetta approach

JAQUENETTA. God bless the king!
KING. What present hast thou there?
COSTARD. Some certain treason.
KING. What makes treason here?
COSTARD. Nay, it makes nothing, sir.
KING. If it mar nothing neither,
The treason and you go in peace away together.
JAQUENETTA. I beseech your grace, let this letter be read.
Our Person misdoubts it; 'twas treason, he said.
KING. Berowne, read it over. He reads the letter
Where hadst thou it?
JAQUENETTA. Of Costard.
KING. Where hadst thou it?
COSTARD. Of Dun Adramadiò, Dun Adramadio.
Berowne tears the letter
KING. How now, what is in you? why dost thou tear it?
BEROWNE. A toy my liege, a toy; your grace needs not fear it.
LONGAVILLE. It did move him to passion, and therefore let's hear it.
DUMAINE [picks up the pieces]. It is Berowne's writing, and here is his name.
BEROWNE [to Costard]. Ah, you whoreson loggerhead, you were born to do me shame!
Guilty, my lord, guilty! I confess, I confess.
KING. What?
BEROWNE. That you three fools lacked me fool to make up the mess.
He, he, and you, and you my liege, and I,
Are pick-purses in love, and we deserve to die.
O, dismiss this audience, and I shall tell you more.
DUMAINE. Now the number is even.
BEROWNE. True, true, we are four.
Will these turtles be gone?
KING. Hence, sirs, away.
COSTARD. Walk aside the true folk, and let the traitors stay.
Costard and Jaquenetta depart
BEROWNE. Sweet lords, sweet lovers, O let us embrace!
As true we are as flesh and blood can be—
The sea will ebb and flow, heaven show his face;
Young blood doth not obey an old decree:
We cannot cross the cause why we were born;
Therefore of all hands must we be forsworn.
KING. What, did these rent lines show some love of thine?
BEROWNE. 'Did they,' quoth you? Who sees the heavenly Rosaline,
That, like a rude and savage man of Inde,
At the first op'ning of the gorgeous east,
Bows not his vassal head, and strucken blind,
Kisses the base ground with obedient breast?
What péremptory eagle-sighted eye
Dares look upon the heaven of her brow,
That is not blinded by her majesty?
KING. What zeal, what fury hath inspired thee now?
My love, her mistress, is a gracious moon,
She, an attending star, scarce seen a light.
BEROWNE. My eyes are then no eyes, nor I Berowne.
O, but for my love, day would turn to night!
Of all complexions the culled sovereignty
Do meet as at a fair in her fair cheek,
Where several worthies make one dignity,
Where nothing wants that want itself doth seek.
Lend me the flourish of all gentle tongues—
Fie, painted rhetoric, O she needs it not,
To things of sale a seller's praise belongs:
She passes praise—then praise too short doth blot.
A withered hermit, five-score winters worn,
Might shake off fifty, looking in her eye:
Beauty doth varnish age, as if new-born,
And gives the crutch the cradle's infancy.
O, 'tis the sun that maketh all things shine!
KING. By heaven, thy love is black as ebony.
BEROWNE. Is ebony like her? O wood divine!
A wife of such wood were felicity.
O, who can give an oath? where is a book?
That I may swear beauty doth beauty lack,
If that she learn not of her eye to look:
No face is fair that is not full so black.
KING. O paradox! Black is the badge of hell,
The hue of dungeons and the School of Night—
A beauty's crest becomes the heavens well!
BEROWNE. Devils soonest tempt, resembling spirits of light.
O, if in black my lady's brows be decked,
It mourns that painting and usurping hair
Should ravish doters with a false aspéct;

And therefore is she born to make black fair.
Her favour turns the fashion of the days,
For native blood is counted painting now;
And therefore red, that would avoid dispraise,
Paints itself black, to imitate her brow.
DUMAINE. To look like her are chimney-sweepers black.
LONGAVILLE. And since her time are colliers counted bright.
KING. And Ethiopes their sweet complexion crack.
DUMAINE. Dark needs no candles now, for dark is light.
BEROWNE. Your mistresses dare never come in rain,
For fear their colours should be washed away.
KING. 'Twere good, yours did; for sir, to tell you plain,
I'll find a fairer face not washed to-day.
BEROWNE. I'll prove her fair, or talk till doomsday here.
KING. No devil will fright thee then so much as she.
DUMAINE. I never knew man hold vile stuff so dear.
LONGAVILLE [thrusts out his boot]. Look, here's thy love—my foot and her face see.
BEROWNE. O, if the streets were pavéd with thine eyes,
Her feet were much too dainty for such tread.
DUMAINE. O vile! then as she goes what upward lies
The street should see as she walked overhead.
KING. But what of this, are we not all in love?
BEROWNE. Nothing so sure, and thereby all forsworn.
KING. Then leave this chat, and good Berowne now prove
Our loving lawful, and our faith not torn.
DUMAINE. Ay marry, there—some flattery for this evil.
LONGAVILLE. O, some authority how to proceed—
Some tricks, some quillets, how to cheat the devil.
DUMAINE. Some salve for perjury.
BEROWNE. 'Tis more than need.
Have at you then affection's men at arms!
Consider what you first did swear unto:
To fast, to study, and to see no woman;
Flat treason 'gainst the kingly state of youth.
Say, can you fast? your stomachs are too young;
And abstinence engenders maladies.
⌈And where that you have vowed to study, lords,
In that each of you have forsworn this book,
Can you still dream and pore and thereon look?
For when would you my lord, or you, or you,
Have found the ground of study's excellence
Without the beauty of a woman's face?
From women's eyes, this doctrine I derive—
They are the ground, the books, the academes,
From whence doth spring the true Promethean fire.
Why, universal plodding prisons up
The nimble spirits in the arteries,
As motion and long-during action tires
The sinewy vigour of the traveller.
Now, for not looking on a woman's face,
You have in that forsworn the use of eyes;
And study too, the causer of your vow.
For where is any author in the world,
Teaches such beauty as a woman's eye?
Learning is but an adjunct to ourself,
And where we are our learning likewise is.
Then, when ourselves we see in ladies' eyes,
..........with ourselves
Do we not likewise see our learning there?⌋
O! we have made a vow to study, lords,
And in that vow we have forsworn our books;
For when would you, my liege, or you, or you,
In leaden contemplation have found out
Such fiery numbers as the prompting eyes
Of beauty's tutors have enriched you with?
Other slow arts entirely keep the brain;
And therefore, finding barren practisers,
Scarce show a harvest of their heavy toil.
But love, first learnéd in a lady's eyes,
Lives not alone immuréd in the brain;
But with the motion of all elements,
Courses as swift as thought in every power,
And gives to every power a double power,
Above their functions and their offices.
It adds a precious seeing to the eye;
A lover's eyes will gaze an eagle blind;
A lover's ear will hear the lowest sound,
When the suspicious heed of theft is stopped;
Love's feeling is more soft and sensible
Than are the tender horns of cockled snails;
Love's tongue proves dainty Bacchus gross in taste.
For valour, is not Love a Hercules,
Still climbing trees in the Hesperides?
Subtle as Sphinx, as sweet and musical
As bright Apollo's lute, strung with his hair;
And, when Love speaks, the voice of all the gods
Make heaven drowsy with the harmony.
Never durst poet touch a pen to write,
Until his ink were temp'red with Love's sighs;
O, then his lines would ravish savage ears,
And plant in tyrants mild humility.
From women's eyes this doctrine I derive:
They sparkle still the right Promethean fire—
They are the books, the arts, the academes,
That show, contain, and nourish all the world;
Else none at all in aught proves excellent.
Then fools you were these women to forswear;
Or, keeping what is sworn, you will prove fools.
For wisdom's sake, a word, that all men love;
Or for love's sake, a word that loves all men;
Or for men's sake, the authors of these women;
Or women's sake, by whom we men are men;
Let us once loose our oaths, to find ourselves,
Or else we lose ourselves to keep our oaths.
It is religion to be thus forsworn:
For charity itself fulfils the law;
And who can sever love from charity?
KING. Saint Cupid then! and soldiers to the field!
BEROWNE. Advance your standards, and upon them, lords!
Pell-mell, down with them! but be first advised,
In conflict that you get the sun of them.
LONGAVILLE. Now to plain-dealing; lay these glozes by.
Shall we resolve to woo these girls of France?
KING. And win them too. Therefore let us devise
Some entertainment for them in their tents.
BEROWNE. First from the park let us conduct them thither,
Then homeward every man attach the hand
Of his fair mistress. In the afternoon
We will with some strange pastimes solace them:
Such as the shortness of the time can shape—
For revels, dances, masks, and merry hours,
Forerun fair Love, strewing her way with flowers.

KING. Away, away! no time shall be omitted,
That will betime, and may by us be fitted.
BEROWNE. Allons! Allons! Sowed cockle reaped no corn,
And justice always whirls in equal measure:
Light wenches may prove plagues to men forsworn—
If so, our copper buys no better treasure.
They go

ACT 5
Scene 1

Holofernes, Sir Nathaniel, and Dull return

HOLOFERNES. Satis quod sufficit.

SIR NATHANIEL. I praise God for you, sir. Your reasons at dinner have been sharp and sententious; pleasant without scurrility, witty without affection, audacious without impudency, learned without opinion, and strange without heresy. I did converse this quondam day with a companion of the king's, who is entitled, nominated, or called, Don Adriano de Armado.

HOLOFERNES. Nove hominem tanquam te. His humour is lofty, his discourse peremptory: his tongue filed, his eye ambitious, his gait majestical, and his general behaviour vain, ridiculous, and thrasonical. He is too picked, too spruce, too affected, too odd as it were, too peregrinate as I may call it.

SIR NATHANIEL. A most singular and choice epithet.
Draws out his table-book

HOLOFERNES. He draweth out the thread of his verbosity finer than the staple of his argument. I abhor such fanatical phantasimes, such insociable and point-devise companions, such rackers of orthography, as to speak 'dout' sine b, when he should say 'doubt'; 'det,' when he should pronounce 'debt'; d, e, b, t, not d, e, t: he clepeth a calf 'cauf'; half, 'hauf'; neighbour vocatur 'nebour'; neigh abbreviated 'ne'. This is abhominable—which he would call abbominable. It insinuateth me of insania: intelligis ne domine? to make frantic, lunatic.

SIR NATHANIEL. Laus Deo, bone, intelligo.

HOLOFERNES. Bone?—'bone' for 'bene'—Priscian a little scratched—'twill serve.

Armado, Moth and Costard come up

SIR NATHANIEL. Videsne quis venit?

HOLOFERNES. Video, et gaudeo.

ARMADO. Chirrah!

HOLOFERNES. Quare 'chirrah' not 'sirrah'?

ARMADO. Men of peace, well encountered.

HOLOFERNES. Most military sir, salutation.

MOTH [aside]. They have been at a great feast of languages, and stolen the scraps.

COSTARD. O, they have lived long on the alms-basket of words! I marvel thy master hath not eaten thee for a word, for thou art not so long by the head as 'honorificabilitudinitatibus': thou art easier swallowed than a flap-dragon.

MOTH. Peace! the peal begins.

ARMADO [to Holofernes]. Monsieur, are you not lettered?

MOTH. Yes yes, he teaches boys the horn-book. What is a, b, spelt backward with the horn on his head?

HOLOFERNES. Ba, pueritia, with a horn added.

MOTH. Ba! most silly sheep with a horn. You hear his learning.

HOLOFERNES. Quis, quis, thou consonant?

MOTH. The last of the five vowels if 'you' repeat them, or the fifth if 'I'.

HOLOFERNES. I will repeat them, a, e, i—

MOTH. The sheep! the other two concludes it—o, u!

ARMADO. Now by the salt wave of the Mediterraneum, a sweet touch, a quick venew of wit—snip, snap, quick and home. It rejoiceth my intellect—true wit.

MOTH. Offered by a child to an old man; which is wit-old.

HOLOFERNES. What is the figure? what is the figure?

MOTH. Horns!

HOLOFERNES. Thou disputes like an infant: go whip thy gig.

MOTH. Lend me your horn to make one, and I will whip about your infamy, manu cita—a gig of a cuckold's horn!

COSTARD. An I had but one penny in the world, thou shouldst have it to buy gingerbread . . . Hold, there is the very remuneration I had of thy master, thou halfpenny purse of wit, thou pigeon-egg of discretion. O, an the heavens were so pleased that thou wert but my bastard, what a joyful father wouldst thou make me! Go to, thou hast it ad dunghill, at the fingers' ends, as they say.

HOLOFERNES. O, I smell false Latin—'dunghill' for 'unguem'.

ARMADO. Arts-man, preambulate. We will be singled from the barbarous. . . . Do you not educate youth at the charge-house on the top of the mountain?

HOLOFERNES. Or mons, the hill.

ARMADO. At your sweet pleasure, for the mountain.

HOLOFERNES. I do, sans question.

ARMADO. Sir, it is the king's most sweet pleasure and affection to congratulate the princess at her pavilion in the posteriors of this day, which the rude multitude call the afternoon.

HOLOFERNES. The posterior of the day, most generous sir, is liable, congruent, and measurable for the afternoon: the word is well culled, choice, sweet, and apt, I do assure you sir, I do assure.

ARMADO. Sir, the king is a noble gentleman, and my familiar, I do assure ye, very good friend. For what is inward between us, let it pass, I do beseech thee remember thy courtesy; I beseech thee apparel thy head—. And among other importunate and most serious designs, and of great import indeed, too. . . . But let that pass—for I must tell thee, it will please his grace (by the world) sometime to lean upon my poor shoulder, and with his royal finger, thus dally with my excrement, with my mustachio: but sweet heart, let that pass. By the world, I recount no fable—some certain special honours it pleaseth his greatness to impart to Armado, a soldier, a man of travel, that hath seen the world: but let that pass. The very all of all is—but, sweet heart, I do implore secrecy—that the king would have me present the princess (sweet chuck!) with some delightful ostentation, or show, or pageant, or antic, or firework.

Now, understanding that the curate and your sweet self are good at such eruptions and sudden breaking out of mirth, as it were, I have acquainted you withal, to the end to crave your assistance.

HOLOFERNES. Sir, you shall present before her the Nine Worthies.... Sir Nathaniel, as concerning some entertainment of time, some show in the posterior of this day, to be rend'red by our assistance, the king's command, and this most gallant, illustrate, and learned gentleman, before the princess. I say none so fit as to present the Nine Worthies.

SIR NATHANIEL. Where will you find men worthy enough to present them?

HOLOFERNES. Joshua yourself, [myself, and] this gallant gentleman, Judas Maccabæus; this swain, because of his great limb or joint, shall pass Pompey the great—the page, Hercules.

ARMADO. Pardon, sir—error: he is not quantity enough for that worthy's thumb. He is not so big as the end of his club.

HOLOFERNES. Shall I have audience? he shall present Hercules in minority: his 'enter' and 'exit' shall be strangling a snake; and I will have an apology for that purpose.

MOTH. An excellent device! So, if any of the audience hiss, you may cry, 'Well done, Hercules, now thou crushest the snake.' That is the way to make an offence gracious, though few have the grace to do it.

ARMADO. For the rest of the worthies?

HOLOFERNES. I will play three myself.

MOTH. Thrice-worthy gentleman!

ARMADO. Shall I tell you a thing?

HOLOFERNES. We attend.

ARMADO. We will have, if this fadge not, an antic. I beseech you, follow.

HOLOFERNES. Via, goodman Dull! thou hast spoken no word all this while.

DULL. Nor understood none neither, sir.

HOLOFERNES. Allons! we will employ thee.

DULL. I'll make one in a dance, or so; or I will play
On the tabor to the worthies, and let them dance the hay.

HOLOFERNES. Most dull, honest Dull! to our sport: away! They all go

Scene 2

Enter the Princess, Katharine, Rosaline, and Maria

PRINCESS. Sweet hearts, we shall be rich ere we depart,
If fairings come thus plentifully in.
A lady walled about with diamonds!
Look you, what I have from the loving king.

ROSALINE. Madam, came nothing else along with that?

PRINCESS. Nothing but this! Yes, as much love in rhyme
As would be crammed up in a sheet of paper
Writ o' both sides the leaf, margent and all—
That he was fain to seal on Cupid's name.

ROSALINE. That was the way to make his godhead wax;
For he hath been five thousand years a boy.

KATHARINE. Ay, and a shrewd unhappy gallows too.

ROSALINE. You'll ne'er be friends with him, a' killed your sister.

KATHARINE. He made her melancholy, sad, and heavy—
And so she died: had she been light, like you,
Of such a merry, nimble, stirring spirit,
She might ha' been a grandam ere she died.
And so may you; for a light heart lives long.

ROSALINE. What's your dark meaning, mouse, of this light word?

KATHARINE. A light condition in a beauty dark.

ROSALINE. We need more light to find your meaning out.

KATHARINE. You'll mar the light by taking it in snuff;
Therefore, I'll darkly end the argument.

ROSALINE. Look, what you do, you do it still i'th' dark.

KATHARINE. So do not you, for you are a light wench.

ROSALINE. Indeed I weigh not you, and therefore light.

KATHARINE. You weigh me not? O, that's you care not for me.

ROSALINE. Great reason; for, 'past cure is still past care.'

PRINCESS. Well bandied both—a set of wit well played.
But Rosaline, you have a favour too!
Who sent it? and what is it?

ROSALINE. I would you knew.
An if my face were but as fair as yours,
My favour were as great—be witness this.
Nay, I have verses too, I thank Berowne—
The numbers true, and were the numb'ring too,
I were the fairest goddess on the ground.
I am compared to twenty thousand fairs.
O, he hath drawn my picture in his letter!

PRINCESS. Anything like?

ROSALINE. Much in the letters, nothing in the praise.

PRINCESS. Beauteous as ink: a good conclusion.

KATHARINE. Fair as a text B in a copy-book.

ROSALINE. 'Ware pencils, ho! Let me not die your debtor,
My red dominical, my golden letter.
O, that your face were not so full of O's!

KATHARINE. A pox of that jest! and I beshrow all shrows!

PRINCESS. But what was sent to you from fair Dumaine?

KATHARINE. Madam, this glove.

PRINCESS. Did he not sent you twain?

KATHARINE. Yes madam; and, moreover,
Some thousand verses of a faithful lover—
A huge translation of hypocrisy,
Vilely compiled, profound simplicity.

MARIA. This, and these pearls, to me sent Longaville;
The letter is too long by half a mile.

PRINCESS. I think no less. Dost thou not wish in heart
The chain were longer and the letter short?

MARIA. Ay, or I would these hands might never part.

PRINCESS. We are wise girls to mock our lovers so.

ROSALINE. They are worse fools to purchase mocking so.
That same Berowne I'll torture ere I go.
O, that I knew he were but in by th' week,
How I would make him fawn, and beg, and seek,
And wait the season, and observe the times,
And spend his prodigal wits in bootless rhymes,
And shape his service wholly to my hests,
And make him proud to make me proud, that jests!
So planet-like would I o'ersway his state

That he should be my fool, and I his fate.
PRINCESS. None are so surely caught, when they are catched,
As wit turned fool. Folly, in wisdom hatched,
Hath wisdom's warrant, and the help of school,
And wit's own grace to grace a learnéd fool.
ROSALINE. The blood of youth burns not with such excess,
As gravity's revolt to wantonness.
MARIA. Folly in fools bears not so strong a note
As fool'ry in the wise, when wit doth dote:
Since all the power thereof it doth apply,
To prove, by wit, worth in simplicity.

Boyet approaches

PRINCESS. Here comes Boyet, and mirth is in his face.
BOYET. O, I am stabbed with laughter! Where's her grace?
PRINCESS. Thy news, Boyet?
BOYET. Prepare, madam, prepare!
Arm, wenches, arm! encounters mounted are Against your peace. Love doth approach disguised,
Armèd in arguments. You'll be surprised.
Muster your wits, stand in your own defence,
Or hide your heads like cowards and fly hence.
PRINCESS. Saint Denis to Saint Cupid! What are they,
That charge their breath against us? say, scout, say.
BOYETT. Under the cool shade of a sycamore,
I thought to close mine eyes some half an hour:
When lo, to interrupt my purposed rest,
Towards that shade I might behold addrest
The king and his companions: warily
I stole into a neighbour thicket by,
And overheard what you shall overhear—
That, by and by, disguised they will be here.
Their herald is a pretty knavish page,
That well by heart hath conned his embassage.
Action and accent did they teach him there—
'Thus must thou speak', and 'thus thy body bear';
And ever and anon they made a doubt
Presence majestical would put him out:
'For,' quoth the king, 'an angel shalt thou see;
Yet fear not thou, but speak audaciously.'
The boy replied, 'An angel is not evil;
I should have feared her had she been a devil.'
With that all laughed, and clapped him on the shoulder,
Making the bold wag by their praises bolder.
One rubbed his elbow thus, and fleered, and swore
A better speech was never spoke before.
Another with his finger and his thumb
Cried 'Via! we will do't, come what will come.'
The third he capered and cried, 'All goes well.'
The fourth turned on the toe, and down he fell.
With that they all did tumble on the ground,
With such a zealous laughter so profound,
That in this spleen ridiculous appears,
To check their folly, passion's solemn tears.
PRINCESS. But what, but what? come they to visit us?
BOYET. They do, they do; and are apparelled thus,
Like Muscovites or Russians, as I guess.
Their purpose is to parley, court, and dance—
And every one his love-suit will advance
Unto his several mistress; which they'll know
By favours several which they did bestow.
PRINCESS. And will they so? the gallants shall be tasked:
For, ladies, we will every one be masked,
And not a man of them shall have the grace,
Despite of suit, to see a lady's face.
Hold Rosaline, this favour thou shalt wear,
And then the king will court thee for his dear;
Hold, take thou this my sweet, and give me thine,
So shall Berowne take me for Rosaline.
And change you favours too, so shall your loves
Woo contrary, deceived by these removes.
ROSALINE. Come on then, wear the favours most in sight.
KATHARINE. But in this changing what is your intent?
PRINCESS. The effect of my intent is to cross theirs:
They do it but in mockery-merriment,
And mock for mock is only my intent.
Their several counsels they unbosom shall
To loves mistook, and so be mocked withal
Upon the next occasion that we meet,
With visages displayed, to talk and greet.
ROSALINE. But shall we dance, if they desire us to't?
PRINCESS. No, to the death, we will not move a foot—
Nor to their penned speech render we no grace;
But while 'tis spoke each turn away her face.
BOYET. Why, that contempt will kill the speaker's heart,
And quite divorce his memory from his part.
PRINCESS. Therefore I do it, and I make no doubt
The rest will e'er come in, if he be out.
There's no such sport as sport by sport o'erthrown,
To make theirs ours and ours none but our own:
So shall we stay, mocking intended game,
And they, well mocked, depart away with shame.
A trumpet
BOYET. The trumpet sounds! be masked, the maskers come.
The ladies mask

Enter Blackamoors with music, the Boy (Moth) with a speech, and the rest of the Lords disguised and masked as Russians

MOTH. 'All hail, the richest beauties on the earth'—
BOYET. Beauties no richer than rich tafetta.
MOTH. 'A holy parcel of the fairest dames,

The ladies turn their backs to him

That ever turned their backs to mortal views!'
BEROWNE. 'Their eyes,' villain, 'their eyes.'
MOTH. 'That ever turned their eyes to mortal views. Out—'
BOYET. True, 'out' indeed.
MOTH. 'Out of your favours, heavenly spirits, vouchsafe
Not to behold—'
BEROWNE. 'Once to behold,' rogue.
MOTH. 'Once to behold with your sun-beamèd eyes,
—with your sun-beamèd eyes—'
BOYET. They will not answer to that epithet—
You were best call it 'daughter-beamèd eyes.'
MOTH. They do not mark me, and that brings me out.
BEROWNE. Is this your perfectness? be gone you rogue.
Moth goes
ROSALINE. What would these strangers? Know their minds, Boyet.
If they do speak our language, 'tis our will.
That some plain man recount their purposes.

Know what they would.
BOYET. What would you with the princess?
BEROWNE. Nothing but peace and gentle visitation.
ROSALINE. What would they, say they?
BOYET. Nothing but peace and gentle visitation.
ROSALINE. Why, that they have—and bid them so be gone.
BOYET. She says you have it, and you may be gone.
KING. Say to her we have measured many miles
To tread a measure with her on this grass.
BOYET. They say that they have measured many a mile,
To tread a measure with you on this grass.
ROSALINE. It is not so! Ask them how many inches
Is in one mile. If they have measured many,
The measure then of one is eas'ly told.
BOYET. If to come hither you have measured miles,
And many miles, the princess bids you tell
How many inches doth fill up one mile.
BEROWNE. Tell her we measure them by weary steps.
BOYET. She hears herself.
ROSALINE. How many weary steps,
Of many weary miles you have o'ergone,
Are numb'red in the travel of one mile?
BEROWNE. We number nothing that we spend for you—
Our duty is so rich, so infinite,
That we may do it still without account.
Vouchsafe to show the sunshine of your face,
That we—like savages—may worship it.
ROSALINE. My face is but a moon, and clouded too.
KING. Blessèd are clouds, to do as such clouds do.
Vouchsafe bright moon, and these thy stars to shine—
These clouds removed—upon our watery eyne.
ROSALINE. O vain petitioner, beg a greater matter—
Thou now requests but moonshine in the water.
KING. Then, in our measure, do but vouchsafe one change.
Thou bid'st me beg—this begging is not strange.
ROSALINE. Play music then! nay, you must do it soon!
Not yet?—no dance! Thus change I like the moon.
KING. Will you not dance? How come you thus estranged?
ROSALINE. You took the moon at full, but now she's changed! The musicians strike up
KING. Yet still she is the Moon, and I the Man.
The music plays—vouchsafe some motion to it.
ROSALINE. Our ears vouchsafe it.
KING. But your legs should do it.
ROSALINE. Since you are strangers, and come here by chance,
We'll not be nice—take hands—We will not dance.
KING. Why take we hands then?
ROSALINE. Only to part friends.
Curtsy sweethearts, and so the measure ends.
KING. More measure of this measure—be not nice.
ROSALINE. We can afford no more at such a price.
KING. Price you yourselves. What buys your company?
ROSALINE. Your absence only.
KING. That can never be.
ROSALINE. Then cannot we be bought: and so adieu—
Twice to your visor, and half once to you!
KING. If you deny to dance, let's hold more chat.
ROSALINE. In private then.
KING. I am best pleased with that.
They talk apart
BEROWNE. White-handed mistress, one sweet word with thee.
PRINCESS. Honey, and milk, and sugar; there is three.
BEROWNE. Nay then, two treys—an if you grow so nice—
Metheglin, wort, and malmsey; well run, dice!
There's half-a-dozen sweets.
PRINCESS. Seventh sweet, adieu?
Since you can cog, I'll play no more with you.
BEROWNE. One word in secret.
PRINCESS. Let it not be sweet.
BEROWNE. Thou grievest my gall.
PRINCESS. Gall? bitter.
BEROWNE. Therefore meet.
They talk apart
DUMAINE. Will you vouchsafe with me to change a word?
MARIA. Name it.
DUMAINE. Fair lady,—
MARIA. Say you so? Fair lord,—
Take that for your fair lady.
DUMAINE. Please it you,
As much in private, and I'll bid adieu.
They talk apart
KATHARINE. What, was your vizard made without a tongue?
LONGAVILLE. I know the reason, lady, why you ask.
KATHARINE. O, for your reason! quickly, sir—I long.
LONGAVILLE. You have a double tongue within your mask,
And would afford my speechless vizard half.
KATHARINE. 'Veal' quoth the Dutchman. Is not 'veal' a calf?
LONGAVILLE. A calf, fair lady?
KATHARINE. No, a fair lord calf.
LONGAVILLE. Let's part the word.
KATHARINE. No, I'll not be your half:
Take all and wean it—it may prove an ox.
LONGAVILLE. Look how you butt yourself in these sharp mocks.
Will you give horns, chaste lady? do not so.
KATHARINE. Then die a calf, before your horns do grow.
LONGAVILLE. One word in private with you ere I die.
KATHARINE. Bleat softly then, the butcher hears you cry. They talk apart
BOYET. The tongues of mocking wenches are as keen
As is the razor's edge invisible,
Cutting a smaller hair than may be seen:
Above the sense of sense: so sensible
Seemeth their conference, their conceits have wings,
Fleeter than arrows, bullets, wind, thought, swifter things.
ROSALINE. Not one word more my maids, break off, break off.
BEROWNE. By heaven, all dry-beaten with pure scoff!
KING. Farewell mad wenches, you have simple wits.
PRINCESS. Twenty adieus, my frozen Muscovits.

The King departs with his train

Are these the breed of wits so wondered at?
BOYET. Tapers they are with your sweet breaths puffed out.

ROSALINE. Well-liking wits they have—gross gross, fat fat
PRINCESS. O poverty in wit, kingly-poor flout!
Will they not, think you, hang themselves to-night?
Or ever but in vizards show their faces?
This pert Berowne was out of count'nance quite.
ROSALINE. O, they were all in lamentable cases!
The king was weeping-ripe for a good word.
PRINCESS. Berowne did swear himself out of all suit.
MARIA. Dumaine was at my service, and his sword.
'No point,' quoth I—my servant straight was mute.
KATHARINE. Lord Longaville said I came o'er his heart:
And trow you what he called me?
PRINCESS. Qualm, perhaps.
KATHARINE. Yes, in good faith.
PRINCESS. Go, sickness as thou art.
ROSALINE. Well, better wits have worn plain statute-caps.
But will you hear? the king is my love sworn.
PRINCESS. And quick Berowne hath plighted faith to me.
KATHARINE. And Longaville was for my service born.
MARIA. Dumaine is mine as sure as bark on tree.
BOYET. Madam, and pretty mistresses, give ear.
Immediately they will again be here
In their own shapes; for it can never be
They will digest this harsh indignity.
PRINCESS. Will they return?
BOYET. They will, they will, God knows;
And leap for joy, though they are lame with blows:
Therefore change favours, and when they repair,
Blow like sweet roses in this summer air.
PRINCESS. How blow? how blow? speak to be understood.
BOYET. Fair ladies, masked, are roses in their bud:
Dismasked, their damask sweet commixture shown,
Are angels vailing clouds, or roses blown.
PRINCESS. Avaunt, perplexity! What shall we do
If they return in their own shapes to woo?
ROSALINE. Good madam, if by me you'll be advised,
Let's mock them still as well known as disguised:
Let us complain to them what fools were here,
Disguised like Muscovites, in shapeless gear;
And wonder what they were, and to what end
Their shallow shows and prologue vilely penned,
And their rough carriage so ridiculous,
Should be presented at our tent to us.
BOYET. Ladies, withdraw; the gallants are at hand.
PRINCESS. Whip to our tents as roes run o'er the land.
The ladies go

The King, Berowne, Longaville, and Dumaine return in their proper habits

KING. Fair sir, God save you! where's the princess?
BOYET. Gone to her tent. Please it your majesty,
Command me any service to her thither?
KING. That she vouchsafe me audience for one word.
BOYET. I will, and so will she, I know, my lord.
He goes
BEROWNE. This fellow pecks up wit, as pigeons pease,
And utters it again when God doth please.
He is Wit's pedler, and retails his wares
At wakes and wassails, meetings, markets, fairs:
And we that sell by gross, the Lord doth know,
Have not the grace to grace it with such show.
This gallant pins the wenches on his sleeve.
Had he been Adam, he had tempted Eve.
A' can carve too, and lisp: why, this is he
That kissed his hand away in courtesy.
This is the ape of form, monsieur the nice,
That when he plays at tables chides the dice
In honourable terms; nay, he can sing
A mean most meanly, and, in ushering,
Mend him who can. The ladies call him sweet.
The stairs as he treads on them kiss his feet.
This is the flower that smiles on every one,
To show his teeth as white as whalës-bone.
And consciences that will not die in debt
Pay him the due of honey-tongued Boyet.
BOYET. A blister on his sweet tongue, with my heart,
That pur Armado's page out of his part.

The ladies return, Boyet ushering the Princess

BEROWNE. See where it comes! Behaviour, what wert thou
Till this man showed thee? and what art thou now?
KING. All hail sweet madam, and fair time of day!
PRINCESS. 'Fair' in 'all hail' is foul, as I conceive.
KING. Construe my speeches better, if you may.
PRINCESS. Then wish me better, I will give you leave.
KING. We came to visit you, and purpose now
To lead you to our court—vouchsafe it then.
PRINCESS. This field shall hold me, and so hold your vow:
Nor God nor I delights in perjured men.
KING. Rebuke me not for that which you provoke:
The virtue of your eye must break my oath.
PRINCESS. You nickname virtue—'vice' you should have spoke;
For virtue's office never breaks men's troth.
Now by my maiden honour, yet as pure
As the unsullied lily, I protest,
A world of torments though I should endure,
I would not yield to be your house's guest:
So much I hate a breaking cause to be
Of heavenly oaths vowed with integrity.
KING. O, you have lived in desolation here,
Unseen, unvisited, much to our shame.
PRINCESS. Not so my lord, it is not so, I swear.
We have had pastimes here and pleasant game.
A mess of Russians left us but of late.
KING. How madam? Russians?
PRINCESS. Ay, in truth my lord;
Trim gallants, full of courtship and of state.
ROSALINE. Madam speak true. It is not so my lord.
My lady, to the manner of the days,
In courtesy gives undeserving praise.
We four indeed confronted were with four
In Russian habit: here they stayed an hour,
And talked apace; and in that hour, my lord,
They did not bless us with one happy word.
I dare not call them fools; but this I think,
When they are thirsty, fools would fain have drink.
BEROWNE. This jest is dry to me. My gentle sweet,
Your wit makes wise things foolish: when we greet,
With eyes best seeing, heaven's fiery eye,
By light we lose light; your capacity
Is of that nature that to your huge store
Wise things seem foolish and rich things but poor.
ROSALINE. This proves you wise and rich; for in my eye—

BEROWNE. I am a fool, and full of poverty.
ROSALINE. But that you take what doth to you belong,
It were a fault to snatch words from my tongue.
BEROWNE. O, I am yours, and all that I possess.
ROSALINE. All the fool mine?
BEROWNE. I cannot give you less.
ROSALINE. Which of the vizards was it that you wore?
BEROWNE. Where, when, what vizard? why demand you this?
ROSALINE. There, then, that vizard—that superfluous case
That hid the worse and showed the better face.
KING. We were descried, they'll mock us now downright.
DUMAINE. Let us confess, and turn it to a jest.
PRINCESS. Amazed, my lord? Why looks your highness sad?
ROSALINE. Help, hold his brows! he'll swoon! Why look you pale?
Sea-sick, I think, coming from Muscovy.
BEROWNE. Thus pour the stars down plagues for perjury.
Can any face of brass hold longer out?
Here stand I, lady—dart thy skill at me,
Bruise me with scorn, confound me with a flout,
Thrust thy sharp wit quite through my ignorance,
Cut me to pieces with thy keen conceit,
And I will wish thee never more to dance,
Nor never more in Russian habit wait.
O, never will I trust to speeches penned,
Nor to the motion of a schoolboy's tongue,
Nor never come in vizard to my friend,
Nor woo in rhyme, like a blind harper's song.
Taffeta phrases, silken terms precise,
Three-piled hyperboles, spruce affectation,
Figures pedantical—these summer-flies
Have blown me full of maggot ostentation.
I do forswear them, and I here protest,
By this white glove (how white the hand, God knows!)
Henceforth my wooing mind shall be expressed
In russet yeas and honest kersey noes.
And, to begin, wench—so God help me, la!—
My love to thee is sound, sans crack or flaw.
ROSALINE. Sans 'sans,' I pray you.
BEROWNE. Yet I have a trick
Of the old rage; bear with me, I am sick—
I'll leave it by degrees. Soft, let us see;
Write 'Lord have mercy on us' on those three.
They are infected, in their hearts it lies;
They have the plague, and caught it of your eyes.
These lords are visited; you are not free,
For the Lord's tokens on you do I see.
PRINCESS. No, they are free that gave these tokens to us.
BEROWNE. Our states are forfeit, seek not to undo us.
ROSALINE. It is not so. For how can this be true,
That you stand forfeit, being those that sue?
BEROWNE. Peace! for I will not have to do with you.
ROSALINE. Nor shall not, if I do as I intend.
BEROWNE. Speak for yourselves, my wit is at an end.
KING. Teach us, sweet madam, for our rude transgression
Some fair excuse.
PRINCESS. The fairest is confession.
Were you not here but even now, disguised?
KING. Madam, I was.
PRINCESS. And were you well advised?
KING. I was, fair madam.
PRINCESS. When you then were here,
What did you whisper in your lady's ear?
KING. That more than all the world I did respect her.
PRINCESS. When she shall challenge this, you will reject her.
KING. Upon mine honour, no.
PRINCESS. Peace, peace, forbear;
Your oath once broke, you force not to forswear.
KING. Despise me when I break this oath of mine.
PRINCESS. I will, and therefore keep it.... Rosaline,
What did the Russian whisper in your ear?
ROSALINE. Madam, he swore that he did hold me dear
As precious eyesight, and did value me
Above this world: adding thereto, moreover,
That he would wed me, or else die my lover.
PRINCESS. God give thee joy of him! the noble lord
Most honourably doth uphold his word.
KING. What mean you, madam? by my life, my troth,
I never swore this lady such an oath.
ROSALINE. By heaven you did; and to confirm it plain,
You gave me this.... but take it, sir, again.
KING. My faith and this the princess I did give,
I knew her by this jewel on her sleeve.
PRINCESS. Pardon me sir, this jewel did she wear,
And Lord Berowne (I thank him!) is my dear.
What, will you have me, or your pearl again?
BEROWNE. Neither of either: I remit both twain.
I see the trick on't: here was a consent—
Knowing aforehand of our merriment—
To dash it like a Christmas comedy:
Some carry-tale, some please-man, some slight zany,
Some mumble-news, some trencher-knight, some Dick,
That smiles his cheek in years, and knows the trick
To make my lady laugh, when she's disposed,
Told our intents before; which once disclosed,
The ladies did change favours; and then we,
Following the signs, wooed but the sign of she.
Now to our perjury to add more terror,
We are again forsworn, in will and error.
Much upon this 'tis! [to Boyet] And might not you
Forestall our sport, to make us thus untrue?
Do not you know my lady's foot by th' square,
And laugh upon the apple of her eye?
And stand between her back, sir, and the fire,
Holding a trencher, jesting merrily?
You put our page out: go, you are allowed!
Die when you will, a smock shall be your shroud.
You leer upon me, do you? there's an eye
Wounds like a leaden sword.
BOYET. Full merrily
Hath this brave manage, this career, been run.
BEROWNE. Lo, he is tilting straight. Peace, I have done.

Costard enters

Welcome, pure wit! thou partest a fair fray.
COSTARD. O Lord, sir, they would know
Whether the three Worthies shall come in or no.
BEROWNE. What, are there but three?
COSTARD. No sir, but it is vara fine,
For every one pursents three.

BEROWNE. And three times thrice is nine.

COSTARD. Not so, sir—under correction, sir—I hope it is not so.
You cannot beg us, sir, I can assure you, sir; we know what we know:
I hope, sir, three times thrice, sir—

BEROWNE. Is not nine.

COSTARD. Under correction, sir, we know whereuntil it doth amount.

BEROWNE. By Jove, I always took three threes for nine.

COSTARD. O Lord, sir, it were a pity you should get your living by reck'ning, sir.

BEROWNE. How much is it?

COSTARD. O Lord, sir, the parties themselves, the actors, sir, will show whereuntil it doth amount: for mine own part, I am, as they say, but to parfect one man in one poor man—Pompion the Great, sir.

BEROWNE. Art thou one of the Worthies?

COSTARD. It pleased them to think me worthy of Pompey the Great: for mine own part I know not the degree of the Worthy, but I am to stand for him.

BEROWNE. God bid them prepare.

COSTARD. We will turn it finely off sir, we will take some care. He goes

KING. Berowne, they will shame us: let them not approach.

BEROWNE. We are shame-proof, my lord: and 'tis some policy
To have one show worse than the King's and his company.

KING. I say they shall not come.

PRINCESS. Nay, my good lord, let me o'errule you now,
That sport best pleases that doth lease know how:
Where zeal strives to content, and the contents
Dies in the zeal of that which it presents:
There form confounded makes most form in mirth,
When great things labouring perish in their birth.

BEROWNE. A right description of our sport, my lord.

Armado appears

ARMADO. Anointed, I implore so much expense of thy royal sweet breath as will utter a brace of words.
He talks apart with the King, and delivers him a paper

PRINCESS. Doth this man serve God?

BEROWNE. Why ask you?

PRINCESS. A' speaks not like a man of God his making.

ARMADO. That is all one, my fair, sweet honey monarch: for, I protest, the schoolmaster is exceeding fantastical—too-too vain, too-too vain: but we will put it, as they say, to fortuna de la guerra. I wish you the peace of mind, most royal couplement! He departs

KING. Here is like to be a good presence of Worthies. He presents Hector of Troy, the swain Pompey the Great, the parish curate Alexander, Armado's page Hercules, the pedant Judas Maccabæus. He reads
'And if these four worthies in their first show thrive,
These four will change habits, and present the other five.'

BEROWNE. There is five in the first show.

KING. You are deceived, 'tis not so.

BEROWNE. The pedant, the braggart, the hedge-priest, the fool, and the boy—
Abate throw at novum, and the whole world again
Cannot pick out five such, take each one in his vein.

KING. The ship is under sail, and here she comes amain.

Enter Costard, for Pompey

COSTARD. 'I Pompey am'—

BEROWNE. You lie, you are not he.

COSTARD. 'I Pompey am'—

BOYET. With libbard's head on knee.

BEROWNE. Well said old mocker, I must needs be friends with thee.

COSTARD. 'I Pompey am, Pompey surnamed the Big'—

DUMAINE. The Great.

COSTARD. It is 'great,' sir.—'Pompey surnamed the Great,
That oft in field with targe and shield did make my foe to sweat,
And travelling along this coast I here am come by chance,
And lay my arms before the legs of this sweet lass of France.'
If your ladyship would say, 'Thanks Pompey,' I had done.

PRINCESS. Great thanks, Great Pompey.

COSTARD. 'Tis not so much worth; but I hope I was perfect. I made a little fault in 'Great.'

BEROWNE. My hat to a halfpenny, Pompey proves the best Worthy.

Enter Sir Nathaniel armed, for Alexander

SIR NATHANIEL. 'When in the world I lived, I was the world's commander:
By east, west, north, and south, I spread my conquering might:
My scutcheon plain declares that I am Alisander.'

BOYET. Your nose says, no, you are not; for it stands too right.

BEROWNE. Your nose smells 'no' in this, most tender-smelling knight.

PRINCESS. The conqueror is dismayed. Proceed, good Alexander.

SIR NATHANIEL. 'When in the world I lived, I was the world's commander,'—

BOYET. Most true, 'tis right; you were so, Alisander.

BEROWNE. Pompey the Great,—

COSTARD. Your servant, and Costard.

BEROWNE. Take away the conqueror, take away Alisander.

COSTARD [to Sir Nathaniel]. O, sir, you have overthrown Alisander the conqueror! You will be scraped out of the painted cloth for this. Your lion, that holds his poll-axe sitting on a close-stool, will be given to Ajax—he will be the ninth Worthy. A conqueror, and afeard to speak! run away for shame, Alisander. [Sir Nathaniel departs] There, an't shall please you, a foolish mild man—an honest man, look you, and soon dashed. He is a marvellous good neighbour, faith, and a very good bowler: but for Alisander, alas you see how 'tis—a little o'erparted. But there are Worthies a-coming will speak their mind in some other sort.

PRINCESS. Stand aside, good Pompey.
Costard departs

Enter Holofernes, for Judas, and Moth, for Hercules

HOLOFERNES. 'Great Hercules is presented by this imp,
Whose club killed Cerberus, that three-headed Canis,
And when he was a babe, a child, a shrimp,
Thus did he strangle serpents in his manus.
Quoniam he seemeth in minority,
Ergo I come with this apology'.
Keep some state in thy exit, and vanish.
Moth departs
'Judas I am,'—
DUMAINE. A Judas!
HOLOFERNES. Not Iscariot, sir.
'Judas I am, yclipéd Maccabæus.'
DUMAINE. Judas Maccabæus clipt in plain Judas.
BEROWNE. A kissing traitor. How, art thou proved Judas?
HOLOFERNES. 'Judas I am,'—
DUMAINE. The more shame for you, Judas.
HOLOFERNES. What mean you, sir?
BOYET. To make Judas hang himself.
HOLOFERNES. Begin sir, you are my elder.
BEROWNE. Well followed. Judas was hanged on an elder.
HOLOFERNES. I will not be put out of countenance.
BEROWNE. Because thou hast no face.
HOLOFERNES. What is this?
BOYET. A cittern-head.
DUMAINE. The head of a bodkin.
BEROWNE. A death's face in a ring.
LONGAVILLE. The face of an old Roman coin, scarce seen.
BOYET. The pummel of Cæsar's falchion.
DUMAINE. The carved-bone face on flask.
BEROWNE. St George's half-cheek in a brooch.
DUMAINE. Ay, and in a brooch of lead.
BEROWNE. Ay, and worn in the cap of a tooth-drawer. And now forward, for we have put thee in countenance.
HOLOFERNES. You have put me out of countenance.
BEROWNE. False—we have given thee faces.
HOLOFERNES. But you have out-faced them all.
BEROWNE. As thou wert a lion, we would do so.
BOYET. Therefore, as he is an ass, let him go.
And so adieu, sweet Jude! Nay, why dost thou stay?
DUMAINE. For the latter end of his name.
BEROWNE. For the ass to the Jude: give it him—Jud-as, away.
HOLOFERNES. This is not generous, not gentle, not humble.
BOYET. A light for Monsieur Judas! it grows dark, he may stumble. Holofernes retires
PRINCESS. Alas, poor Maccabæus, how hath he been baited!

Enter Armado armed, for Hector

BEROWNE. Hide thy head, Achilles—here comes Hector in arms.
DUMAINE. Though my mocks come home by me, I will now be merry.
KING. Hector was but a Troyan in respect of this.
BOYET. But is this Hector?
KING. I think Hector was not so clean-timbered.
LONGAVILLE. His leg is too big for Hector's.
DUMAINE. More calf, certain.
BOYET. No, he is best indued in the small.
BEROWNE. This cannot be Hector.
DUMAINE. He's a god or a painter; for he makes faces.
ARMADO. 'The armipotent Mars, of lances the almighty,
Gave Hector a gift,'—
DUMAINE. A gilt nutmeg.
BEROWNE. A lemon.
LONGAVILLE. Stuck with cloves.
DUMAINE. No, cloven.
ARMADO. Peace!
'The armipotent Mars, of lances the almighty,
Gave Hector a gift, the heir of Ilion,
A man so breathed, that certain he would fight ye,
From morn till night, out of his pavilion.
I am that flower,'—
DUMAINE. That mint.
LONGAVILLE. That columbine.
ARMADO. Sweet Lord Longaville, rein thy tongue.
LONGAVILLE. I must rather give it the rein; for it runs against Hector.
DUMAINE. Ay, and Hector's a greyhound.
ARMADO. The sweet war-man is dead and rotten—sweet chucks, beat not the bones of the buried: when he breathed, he was a man. But I will forward with my device. [to the Princess] Sweet royalty, bestow on me the sense of hearing. Berowne steps forth
PRINCESS. Speak brave Hector, we are much delighted.
ARMADO. I do adore thy sweet grace's slipper.
BOYET. Loves her by the foot.
DUMAINE. He may not by the yard.
ARMADO. 'This Hector far surmounted Hannibal.
The party is gone' . . .

Costard returns, with Berowne following

COSTARD. Fellow Hector, she is gone; she is two months on her way.
ARMADO. What meanest thou?
COSTARD. Faith, unless you play the honest Troyan, the poor wench is cast away: she's quick—the child brags in her belly already: 'tis yours.
ARMADO. Dost thou infamonize me among potentates? thou shalt die.
COSTARD. Then shall Hector be whipped for Jaquenetta that is quick by him, and hanged for Pompey that is dead by him.
DUMAINE. Most rare Pompey!
BOYET. Renowned Pompey!
BEROWNE. Greater than great, great, great, great Pompey! Pompey the Huge!
DUMAINE. Hector trembles.
BEROWNE. Pompey is moved. More Ates, more Ates! stir them on! stir them on!
DUMAINE. Hector will challenge him.
BEROWNE. Ay, if a' have no more man's blood in's belly than will sup a flea.
ARMADO. By the north pole, I do challenge thee.
COSTARD. I will not fight with a pole like a northern man; I'll slash, I'll do it by the sword. I bepray you let me borrow my arms again.
DUMAINE. Room for the incensed Worthies.
COSTARD. I'll do it in my shirt.
DUMAINE. Most resolute Pompey!
MOTH. Master, let me take you a button-hole lower. Do you not see Pompey is uncasing for the combat?

What mean you? you will lose your reputation.

ARMADO. Gentlemen, and soldiers, pardon me, I will not combat in my shirt.

DUMAINE. You may not deny it, Pompey hath made the challenge.

ARMADO. Sweet bloods, I both may and will.

BEROWNE. What reason have you for't?

ARMADO. The naked truth of it is, I have no shirt. I go woolward for penance.

MOTH. True, and it was enjoined him in Rome for want of linen: since when, I'll be sworn, he wore none but a dish-clout of Jaquenetta's, and that a' wears next his heart for a favour.

Monsieur Mercadé, a messenger, enters

MERCADÉ. God save you, madam!
PRINCESS. Welcome, Mercadé,
But that thou interrupt'st our merriment.
MERCADÉ. I am sorry, madam—for the news I bring,
Is heavy in my tongue. The king your father—
PRINCESS. Dead, for my life!
MERCADÉ. Even so; my tale is told.
BEROWNE. Worthies, away! the scene begins to cloud.

ARMADO. For mine own part, I breathe free breath: I have seen the day of wrong through the little hole of discretion, and I will right myself like a soldier.

The Worthies depart

KING. How fares your majesty?
PRINCESS. Boyet, prepare—I will away to-night.
KING. Madam, not so—I do beseech you stay.
PRINCESS. Prepare, I say. I thank you, gracious lords,
For all your fair endeavours, and entreat,
Out of a new-sad soul, that you vouchsafe
Is your rich wisdom to excuse, or hide,
The liberal opposition of our spirits,
If over-boldly we have borne ourselves
In the converse of breath—your gentleness
Was guilty of it. Farewell, worthy lord:
A heavy heart bears not a nimble tongue.
Excuse me so, coming too short of thanks
For my great suit so easily obtained.
KING. The extreme parts of time extremely forms
All causes to the purpose of his speed;
And often, at his very loose, decides
That which long process could not arbitrate.
And though the mourning brow of progeny
Forbid the smiling courtesy of love
The holy suit which fain it would convince,
Yet since love's argument was first on foot,
Let not the cloud of sorrow justle it
From what it purposed—since to wail friends lost
Is not by much so wholesome-profitable
As to rejoice at friends but newly found.
PRINCESS. I understand you not—my griefs are double.
BEROWNE. Honest plain words best pierce the ear of grief—
And by these bodges understand the king.
For your fair sakes have we neglected time,
Played foul-play with our oaths. Your beauty, ladies,
Hath much deformed us, fashioning our humours
Even to the opposéd end of our intents:
And what in us hath seemed ridiculous—
As love is full of unbefitting strains,
All wanton as a child, skipping and vain,
Formed by the eye, and therefore, like the eye
Full of straying shapes, of habits and of forms,
Varying in subjects as the eye doth roll
To every varied object in his glance:
Which parti-coated presence of loose love
Put on by us, if, in your heavenly eyes,
Have misbecomed our oaths and gravities,
Those heavenly eyes, that look into these faults,
Suggested us to make. Therefore, ladies,
Our love being yours, the error that love makes
Is likewise yours: we to ourselves prove false,
By being once false for ever to be true
To those that make us both—fair ladies, you.
And even that falsehood, in itself a sin,
Thus purifies itself and turns to grace.
PRINCESS. We have received your letters, full of love;
Your favours, the ambassadors of love;
And in our maiden council rated them
At courtship, pleasant jest, and courtesy,
As bombast and as lining to the time:
But more devout than this in our respects
Have we not been, and therefore met your loves
In their own fashion, like a merriment.
DUMAINE. Our letters, madam, showed much more than jest.
LONGAVILLE. So did our looks.
ROSALINE. We did not quote them so.
KING. Now, at the latest minute of the hour,
Grant us your loves.
PRINCESS. A time methinks too short
To make a world-without-end bargain in:
No no, my lord, your grace is perjured much,
Full of dear guiltiness; and therefore this—
If for my love (as there is no such cause)
You will do aught, this shall you do for me:
Your oath I will not trust, but go with speed
To some forlorn and naked hermitage,
Remote from all the pleasures of the world;
There stay until the twelve celestial signs
Have brought about the annual reckoning.
If this austere insociable life
Change not your offer made in heat of blood,
If frosts and fasts, hard lodging and thin weeds,
Nip not the gaudy blossoms of your love,
But that it bear this trial and last love:
Then, at the expiration of the year,
Come challenge me, challenge by these deserts,
And by this virgin palm now kissing thine,
I will be thine; and till that instant shut
My woeful self up in a mourning house,
Raining the tears of lamentation
For the remembrance of my father's death.
If this thou do deny, let our hands part,
Neither entitled in the other's heart.
KING. If this, or more than this, I would deny,
To flatter up these powers of mine with rest,
The sudden hand of death close up mine eye!
Hence hermit, then—my heart is in thy breast.

They talk apart

⌈BEROWNE. And what to me, my love? and what to me?
ROSALINE. You must be purgéd too; your sins are rank.
You are attaint with faults and perjury;
Therefore if you my favour mean to get,
A twelvemonth shall you spend, and never rest,

But seek the weary beds of people sick.⌋

DUMAINE. But what to me, my love? but what to me?
A wife?

KATHARINE. A beard, fair health, and honesty—
With three-fold love I wish you all these three.

DUMAINE. O, shall I say, I thank you gentle wife?

KATHARINE. Not so my lord, a twelvemonth and a day
I'll mark no words that smooth-faced wooers say.
Come when the king doth to my lady come;
Then if I have much love, I'll give you some.

DUMAINE. I'll serve thee true and faithfully till then.

KATHARINE. Yet swear not, lest ye be forsworn again.

They talk apart

LONGAVILLE. What says Maria?

MARIA. At the twelvemonth's end,
I'll change my black gown for a faithful friend.

LONGAVILLE. I'll stay with patience; but the time is long.

MARIA. The liker you—few taller are so young.

They talk apart

BEROWNE. Studies my lady? mistress look on me,
Behold the window of my heart, mine eye,
What humble suit attends thy answer there:
Impose some service on me for thy love.

ROSALINE. Oft have I heard of you, my Lord Berowne,
Before I saw you: and the world's large tongue
Proclaims you for a man replete with mocks,
Full of comparisons and wounding flouts,
Which you on all estates will execute
That lie within the mercy of your wit.
To weed this wormwood from your fructful brain,
And therewithal to win me, if you please—
Without the which I am not to be won—
Yet shall this twelvemonth term from day to day
Visit the speechless sick, and still converse
With groaning wretches; and your task shall be,
With all the fierce endeavour of your wit,
To enforce the painéd impotent to smile.

BEROWNE. To move wild laughter in the throat of death?
It cannot be, it is impossible.
Mirth cannot move a soul in agony.

ROSALINE. Why, that's the way to choke a gibing spirit,
Whose influence is begot of that loose grace,
Which shallow laughing hearers give to fools.
A jest's prosperity lies in the ear
Of him that hears it, never in the tongue
Of him that makes it: then if sickly ears,
Deafed with the clamours of their own dear groans,
Will hear your idle scorns, continue then,
And I will have you, and that fault withal.
But if they will not, throw away that spirit,
And I shall find you empty of that fault,
Right joyful of your reformation.

BEROWNE. A twelvemonth? well; befall what will befall,
I'll jest a twelvemonth in an hospital.

The King and the Princess come forward

PRINCESS. Ay, sweet my lord—and so I take my leave.

KING. No madam, we will bring you on your way.

BEROWNE. Our wooing doth not end like an old play:
Jack hath not Jill: these ladies' courtesy
Might well have made our sport a comedy.

KING. Come, sir, it wants a twelvemonth an' a day,
And then 'twill end.

BEROWNE. That's too long for a play.

Armado returns

ARMADO. Sweet majesty, vouchsafe me,—

PRINCESS. Was not that Hector?

DUMAINE. The worthy knight of Troy.

ARMADO. I will kiss thy royal finger, and take leave.
I am a votary; I have vowed to Jaquenetta
To hold the plough for her sweet love three year.
But, most esteemed greatness, will you hear the dialogue that the two learned men have compiled, in praise of the owl and the cuckoo? it should have followed in the end of our show.

KING. Call them forth quickly, we will do so.

ARMADO. Holla! approach.

Enter all

This side is Hiems, winter; this Ver, the spring—the one maintained by the Owl, th'other by the Cuckoo. Ver begin.

The Cuckoo sings

When daisies pied and violets blue
And lady-smocks all silver-white
And cuckoo-buds of yellow hue
Do paint the meadows with delight,
The cuckoo then on every tree,
Mocks married men; for thus sings he,
Cuckoo....
Cuckoo, cuckoo: O word of fear,
Unpleasing to a married ear!

When shepherds pipe on oaten straws,
And merry larks are ploughmen's clocks,
When turtles tread, and rooks, and daws,
And maidens bleach their summer smocks,
The cuckoo then, on every tree,
Mocks married men; for thus sings he,
Cuckoo....
Cuckoo, cuckoo: O word of fear,
Unpleasing to a married ear!

The Owl sings

When icicles hang by the wall,
And Dick the shepherd blows his nail,
And Tom bears logs into the hall,
And milk comes frozen home in pail,
When blood is nipped, and ways be foul,
Then nightly sings the staring owl,
'Tu-who....
Tu-whit to-who'—a merry note,
While greasy Joan doth keel the pot.

When all aloud the wind doth blow,
And coughing drowns the parson's saw,
And birds sit brooding in the snow,
And Marian's nose looks red and raw,
When roasted crabs hiss in the bowl,
Then nightly sings the staring owl,
'Tu-who....
Tu-whit to-who'—a merry note,
While greasy Joan doth keel the pot.

The words of Mercury are harsh after the songs of Apollo.

A Midsummer-Night's Dream

ACT 1

Scene I: The palace of Duke Theseus

Theseus and Hippolyta enter and take their seats, followed by Philostrate and attendants

THESEUS. Now, fair Hippolyta, our nuptial hour
Draws on apace: four happy days bring in
Another moon: but O, methinks how slow
This old moon wanes! she lingers my desires,
Like to a step-dame, or a dowager,
Long withering out a young man's revenue.
HIPPOLYTA. Four days will quickly steep themselves in night:
Four nights will quickly dream away the time:
And then the moon, like to a silver bow
New-bent in heaven, shall behold the night
Of our solemnities.
THESEUS. Go, Philostrate,
Stir up the Athenian youth to merriments,
Awake the pert and nimble spirit of mirth,
Turn melancholy forth to funerals:
The pale companion is not for our pomp.
Philostrate departs
Hippolyta, I wooed thee with my sword,
And won thy love doing thee injuries:
But I will wed thee in another key,
With pomp, with triumph, and with revelling.

Egeus enters, with his daughter Hermia, followed by Lysander and Demetrius

EGEUS. Happy be Theseus, our renownéd duke.
THESEUS. Thanks, good Egeus. What's the news with thee?
EGEUS. Full of vexation come I, with complaint
Against my child, my daughter Hermia.
Stand forth, Demetrius. My noble lord,
This man hath my consent to marry her.
Stand forth, Lysander. And, my gracious duke,
This man hath witched the bosom of my child.
Thou, thou, Lysander, thou hast given her rhymes,
And interchanged love-tokens with my child:
Thou hast by moonlight at her window sung,
With feigning voice, verses of feigning love:
And stol'n the impression of her fantasy
With bracelets of thy hair, rings, gauds, conceits,
Knacks, trifles, nosegays, sweetmeats—messengers
Of strong prevailment in unhardened youth.
With cunning hast thou filched my daughter's heart,
Turned her obedience, which is due to me,
To stubborn harshness. And, my gracious duke,
Be it so she will not here before your grace
Consent to marry with Demetrius,
I beg the ancient privilege of Athens:
As she is mine, I may dispose of her:
Which shall be either to this gentleman,
Or to her death; according to our law
Immediately provided in that case.
THESEUS. What say you, Hermia? be advised, fair maid.
To you your father should be as a god;
One that composed your beauties; yea and one
To whom you are but as a form in wax
By him imprinted, and within his power
To leave the figure or disfigure it.
Demetrius is a worthy gentleman.
HERMIA. So is Lysander.
THESEUS. In himself he is:
But in this kind, wanting your father's voice,
The other must be held the worthier.
HERMIA. I would my father looked but with my eyes.
THESEUS. Rather your eyes must with his judgement look.
HERMIA. I do entreat your grace to pardon me.
I know not by what power I am made bold;
Nor how it may concern my modesty
In such a presence here to plead my thoughts:
But I beseech your grace that I may know
The worst that may befall me in this case
If I refuse to wed Demetrius.
THESEUS. Either to die the death, or to abjure
For ever the society of men.
Therefore, fair Hermia, question your desires,
Know of your youth, examine well your blood,
Whether, if you yield not to your father's choice,
You can endure the livery of a nun,
For aye to be in shady cloister mewed,
To live a barren sister all your life,
Chanting faint hymns to the cold fruitless moon.
Thrice blesséd they that master so their blood,
To undergo such maiden pilgrimage:
But earthlier happy is the rose distilled,
Than that which withering on the virgin thorn
Grows, lives and dies in single blessedness.
HERMIA. So will I grow, so live, so die, my lord,
Ere I will yield my virgin patent up
Unto his lordship, whose unwishéd yoke
My soul consents not to give sovereignty.
THESEUS. Take time to pause, and by the next new moon—
The sealing-day betwixt my love and me
For everlasting bond of fellowship—
Upon that day either prepare to die
For disobedience to your father's will,
Or else to wed Demetrius as he would,
Or on Diana's altar to protest
For aye austerity and single life.
DEMETRIUS. Relent, sweet Hermia—and, Lysander, yield
Thy crazéd title to my certain right.
LYSANDER. You have her father's love, Demetrius;
Let me have Hermia's: do you marry him.
EGEUS. Scornful Lysander! true, he hath my love;
And what is mine my love shall render him.
And she is mine, and all my right of her
I do estate unto Demetrius.
LYSANDER. I am, my lord, as well derived as he,
As well possessed: my love is more than his:
My fortunes every way as fairly ranked—
If not with vantage—as Demetrius':
And, which is more than all these boasts can be,

I am beloved of beauteous Hermia.
Why should not I then prosecute my right?
Demetrius, I'll avouch it to his head,
Made love to Nedar's daughter, Helena,
And won her soul; and she, sweet lady, dotes,
Devoutly dotes, dotes in idolatry,
Upon this spotted and inconstant man.
THESEUS. I must confess that I have heard so much:
And with Demetrius thought to have spoke thereof;
But, being over-full of self-affairs,
My mind did lose it. But Demetrius come,
And come Egeus, you shall go with me:
I have some private schooling for you both.
For you, fair Hermia, look you arm yourself
To fit your fancies to your father's will;
Or else the law of Athens yields you up
(Which by no means we may extenuate)
To death, or to a vow of single life.
Come, my Hippolyta: what cheer, my love?
Demetrius and Egeus, go along:
I must employ you in some business
Against our nuptial, and confer with you
Of something nearly that concerns yourselves.
EGEUS. With duty and desire we follow you.
All depart save Hermia and Lysander
LYSANDER. How now, my love? Why is your cheek so pale?
How chance the roses there do fade so fast?
HERMIA. Belike for want of rain, which I could well
Beteem them from the tempest of my eyes.
LYSANDER. Ay me! for aught that I could ever read,
Could ever hear by tale or history
The course of true love never did run smooth;
But, either it was different in blood—
HERMIA. O cross! too high to be enthralled to low.
LYSANDER. Or else misgraffèd in respect of years—
HERMIA. O spite! too old to be engaged to young.
LYSANDER. Or else it stood upon the choice of friends—
HERMIA. O hell! to choose love by another's eyes!
LYSANDER. Or, if there were a sympathy in choice,
War, death, or sickness did lay siege to it—
Making it momentary as a sound,
Swift as a shadow, short as any dream,
Brief as the lightning in the collied night
That, in a spleen, unfolds both heaven and earth;
And ere a man hath power to say 'Behold!'
The jaws of darkness do devour it up:
So quick bright things come to confusion.
HERMIA. If then true lovers have been ever crossed,
It stands as an edict in destiny:
Then let us teach our trial patience,
Because it is a customary cross,
As due to love as thoughts and dreams and sighs,
Wishes and tears; poor Fancy's followers.
LYSANDER. A good persuasion: therefore hear me, Hermia:
I have a widow aunt, a dowager
Of great revénue, and she hath no child:
From Athens is her house remote seven leagues:
And she respects me as her only son . . .
There, gentle Hermia, may I marry thee:
And to that place the sharp Athenian law
Cannot pursue us. If thou lovest me then,
Steal forth thy father's house to-morrow night;
And in the wood, a league without the town,
Where I did meet thee once with Helena,
To do observance to a morn of May,
There will I stay for thee.
HERMIA. My good Lysander,
I swear to thee by Cupid's strongest bow,
By his best arrow with the golden head,
By the simplicity of Venus' doves,
By that which knitteth souls and prospers loves,
And by that fire which burned the Carthage queen,
When the false Troyan under sail was seen,
By all the vows that ever men have broke—
In number more than ever women spoke—
In that same place thou hast appointed me,
To-morrow truly will I meet with thee.
LYSANDER. Keep promise, love . . . Look, here comes Helena.

Helena enters

HERMIA. God speed, fair Helena: whither away?
HELENA. Call you me fair? that 'fair' again unsay.
Demetrius loves your fair: O happy fair!
Your eyes are lode-stars, and your tongue's sweet air
More tuneable than lark to shepherd's ear,
When wheat is green, when hawthorn buds appear.
Sickness is catching: O, were favour so,
Yours would I catch, fair Hermia, ere I go!
My ear should catch your voice, my eye your eye,
My tongue should catch your tongue's sweet melody.
Were the world mine, Demetrius being bated,
The rest I'ld give to be to you translated.
O, teach me how you look, and with what art
You sway the motion of Demetrius' heart.
HERMIA. I frown upon him; yet he loves me still.
HELENA. O that your frowns would teach my smiles such skill.
HERMIA. I give him curses; yet he gives me love.
HELENA. O that my prayers could such affection move.
HERMIA. The more I hate, the more he follows me.
HELENA. The more I love, the more he hateth me.
HERMIA. His folly, Helena, is no fault of mine.
HELENA. None, but your beauty; would that fault were mine.
HERMIA. Take comfort: he no more shall see my face:
Lysander and myself will fly this place.
Before the time I did Lysander see,
Seemed Athens as a paradise to me:
O then, what graces in my love do dwell,
That he hath turned a heaven unto a hell!
LYSANDER. Helen, to you our minds we will unfold:
To-morrow night, when Phœbe doth behold
Her silver visage in the wat'ry glass,
Decking with liquid pearl the bladed grass—
A time that lovers' flights doth still conceal—
Through Athens' gates have we devised to steal.
HERMIA. And in the wood, where often you and I
Upon faint primrose beds were wont to lie,
Emptying our bosoms of their counsel sweet,
There my Lysander and myself shall meet,
And thence from Athens turn away our eyes,
To seek new friends and stranger companies.
Farewell, sweet playfellow: pray thou for us:
And good luck grant thee thy Demetrius!
Keep word, Lysander: we must starve our sight
From lovers' food till morrow deep midnight.
She goes

LYSANDER. I will, my Hermia. Helena, adieu:
As you on him, Demetrius dote on you!

He goes

HELENA. How happy some o'er other some can be!
Through Athens I am thought as fair as she,
But what of that? Demetrius thinks not so:
He will not know what all but he do know.
And as he errs, doting on Hermia's eyes,
So I, admiring of his qualities.
Things base and vile, holding no quantity,
Love can transpose to form and dignity.
Love looks not with the eyes, but with the mind:
And therefore is winged Cupid painted blind.
Nor hath Love's mind of any judgement taste:
Wings and no eyes figure unheedy haste.
And therefore is Love said to be a child:
Because in choice he is so oft beguiled.
As waggish boys in game themselves forswear:
So the boy Love is perjured every where.
For ere Demetrius looked on Hermia's eyne,
He hailed down oaths that he was only mine.
And when this hail some heat from Hermia felt,
So he dissolved, and show'rs of oaths did melt.
I will go tell him of fair Hermia's flight:
Then to the wood will he to-morrow night
Pursue her: and for this intelligence
If I have thanks, it is a dear expense:
But herein mean I to enrich my pain,
To have his sight thither and back again.

She goes

Scene 2: The cottage of Peter Quince

Enter Quince, Bottom, Snug, Flute, Snout, and Starveling

QUINCE. Is all our company here?

BOTTOM. You were best to call them generally, man by man, according to the scrip.

QUINCE. Here is the scroll of every man's name, which is thought fit, through all Athens, to play in our interlude before the duke and the duchess, on his wedding-day at night.

BOTTOM. First, good Peter Quince, say what the play treats on: then read the names of the actors: and so grow to a point.

QUINCE. Marry, our play is 'The most lamentable comedy, and most cruel death of Pyramus and Thisby.'

BOTTOM. A very good piece of work, I assure you, and a merry. Now, good Peter Quince, call forth your actors by the scroll. Masters, spread yourselves.

QUINCE. Answer, as I call you. Nick Bottom, the weaver.

BOTTOM. Ready: name what part I am for, and proceed.

QUINCE. You, Nick Bottom, are set down for Pyramus.

BOTTOM. What is Pyramus? a lover, or a tyrant?

QUINCE. A lover that kills himself, most gallant for love.

BOTTOM. That will ask some tears in the true performing of it. If I do it, let the audience look to their eyes: I will move storms: I will condole in some measure. To the rest—yet my chief humour is for a tyrant. I could play Ercles rarely, or a part to tear a cat in, to make all split.

'The raging rocks
And shivering shocks
Shall break the locks
Of prison-gates,
And Phibbus' car
Shall shine from far
And make and mar
The foolish Fates.'

This was lofty. Now name the rest of the players. This is Ercles' vein, a tyrant's vein: a lover is more condoling.

QUINCE. Francis Flute, the bellows-mender.

FLUTE. Here, Peter Quince.

QUINCE. Flute, you must take Thisby on you.

FLUTE. What is Thisby? a wand'ring knight?

QUINCE. It is the lady that Pyramus must love.

FLUTE. Nay, faith: let not me play a woman: I have a beard coming.

QUINCE. That's all one: you shall play it in a mask: and you may speak as small as you will.

BOTTOM. An I may hide my face, let me play Thisby too: I'll speak in a monstrous little voice. 'Thisne, Thisne'—'Ah, Pyramus, my lover dear, thy Thisby dear, and lady dear.'

QUINCE. No, no, you must play Pyramus: and Flute, you Thisby.

BOTTOM. Well, proceed.

QUINCE. Robin Starveling, the tailor.

STARVELING. Here, Peter Quince.

QUINCE. Robin Starveling, you must play Thisby's mother. Tom Snout, the tinker.

SNOUT. Here, Peter Quince.

QUINCE. You, Pyramus' father, myself, Thisby's father; Snug, the joiner, you the lion's part: and I hope here is a play fitted.

SNUG. Have you the lion's part written? pray you, if it be, give it me: for I am slow of study.

QUINCE. You may do it extempore: for it is nothing but roaring.

BOTTOM. Let me play the lion too. I will roar that I will do any man's heart good to hear me. I will roar that I will make the duke say, 'Let him roar again: let him roar again.'

QUINCE. An you should do it too terribly, you would fright the duchess and the ladies, that they would shriek: and that were enough to hang us all.

ALL. That would hang us, every mother's son.

BOTTOM. I grant you, friends if you should fright the ladies out of their wits, they would have no more discretion but to hang us: but I will aggravate my voice so, that I will roar you as gently as any sucking dove: I will roar you an 'twere any nightingale

QUINCE. You can play no part but Pyramus: for Pyramus is a sweet-faced man; a proper man as one shall see in a summer's day; a most lovely, gentleman-like man: therefore you must needs play Pyramus.

BOTTOM. Well, I will undertake it. What beard were I best to play it in?

QUINCE. Why, what you will.

BOTTOM. I will discharge it in either your straw-colour beard, your orange-tawny beard, your purple-in-grain beard, or your French-crown-colour beard, your perfect yellow.

QUINCE. Some of your French crowns have no hair at all; and then you will play barefaced.... But, masters, here are your parts, and I am to entreat you, request you, and desire you, to con them by to-morrow night: and meet me in the palace wood, a mile without the town, by moonlight; there will we rehearse: for if we meet in the city, we shall be dogged with company, and our devices known. In the meantime, I will draw a bill of properties, such as our play wants. I pray you, fail me not.

BOTTOM. We will meet, and there we may rehearse most obscenely and courageously. Take pains, be perfect: adieu.

QUINCE. At the duke's oak we meet.

BOTTOM. Enough: hold, or cut bow-strings.

They go

ACT 2

Scene I: The palace wood, Athens

Puck and a Fairy, meeting

PUCK. How now, spirit! whither wander you?
FAIRY. Over hill, over dale,
Thorough bush, thorough briar,
Over park, over pale,
Thorough flood, thorough fire,
I do wander every where,
Swifter than the moonës sphere:
And I serve the Fairy Queen,
To dew her orbs upon the green.
The cowslips tall her pensioners be,
In their gold coats spots you see:
Those be rubies, fairy favours:
In those freckles live their savours.
I must go seek some dewdrops here,
And hang a pearl in every cowslip's ear.
Farewell, thou lob of spirits: I'll be gone—
Our queen and all her elves come here anon.
PUCK. The king doth keep his revels here to-night.
Take heed the queen come not within his sight.
For Oberon is passing fell and wrath,
Because that she as her attendant hath
A lovely boy, stol'n from an Indian king:
She never had so sweet a changeling.
And jealous Oberon would have the child
Knight of his train, to trace the forests wild.
But she, perforce, withholds the lovéd boy,
Crowns him with flowers, and makes him all her joy.
And now they never meet in grove, or green,
By fountain clear, or spangled starlight sheen,
But they do square—that all their elves, for fear,
Creep into acorn cups and hide them there.
FAIRY. Either I mistake your shape and making quite
Or else you are that shrewd and knavish sprite
Called Robin Goodfellow. Are not you he
That frights the maidens of the villagery,
Skim milk, and sometimes labour in the quern,
And bootless make the breathless housewife churn,
And sometime make the drink to bear no barm,
Mislead night-wanderers, laughing at their harm?
Those that Hobgoblin call you and sweet Puck,
You do their work, and they shall have good luck.
Are not you he?
PUCK. Thou speak'st aright;
I am that merry wanderer of the night.
I jest to Oberon, and make him smile
When I a fat and bean-fed horse beguile,
Neighing in likeness of a filly foal;
And sometime lurk I in a gossip's bowl,
In very likeness of a roasted crab,
And, when she drinks, against her lips I bob,
And on her withered dewlap pour the ale.
The wisest aunt, telling the saddest tale,
Sometime for three-foot stool mistaketh me:
Then slip I from her bum, down topples she,
And 'tailor' cries, and falls into a cough:
And then the whole choir hold their hips and laugh,
And waxen in their mirth, and neeze, and swear
A merrier hour was never wasted there.
But room, faëry: here comes Oberon.
FAIRY. And here my mistress. Would that he were gone.

Enter fairies: Oberon and Titania confront each other

OBERON. Ill met by moonlight, proud Titania.
TITANIA. What, jealous Oberon! Fairies, skip hence—
I have forsworn his bed and company.
OBERON. Tarry, rash wanton. Am not I thy lord?
TITANIA. Then I must be thy lady: but I know
When thou hast stol'n away from fairy land,
And in the shape of Corin sat all day,
Playing on pipes of corn, and versing love,
To amorous Phillida. Why art thou here,
Come from the farthest steep of India?
But that, forsooth, the bouncing Amazon,
Your buskined mistress and your warrior love,
To Theseus must be wedded; and you come
To give their bed joy and prosperity.
OBERON. How canst thou thus for shame, Titania,
Glance at my credit with Hippolyta,
Knowing I know thy love to Theseus?
Didst thou not lead him through the glimmering night
From Perigouna, whom he ravishéd?
And make him with fair Ægles break his faith,
With Ariadne, and Antiopa?
TITANIA. These are the forgeries of jealousy:
And never, since the middle summer's spring,
Met we on hill, in dale, forest, or mead,
By pavéd fountain, or by rushy brook,
Or in the beachéd margent of the sea,
To dance our ringlets to the whistling wind,
But with thy brawls thou hast disturbed our sport.
Therefore the winds, piping to us in vain,
As in revenge, have sucked up from the sea
Contagious fogs: which falling in the land,
Hath every pelting river made so proud
That they have overborne their continents.
The ox hath therefore stretched his yoke in vain,
The ploughman lost his sweat, and the green corn
Hath rotted ere his youth attained a beard;
The fold stands empty in the drownéd field,
And crows are fatted with the murrion flock;
The nine men's morris is filled up with mud,
And the quaint mazes in the wanton green
For lack of tread are indistinguishable.
The human mortals want their winter cheer;
No night is now with hymn or carol blest;
Therefore the moon, the governess of floods,
Pale in her anger, washes all the air,

That rheumatic diseases do abound.
And thorough this distemperature we see
The seasons alter: hoary-headed frosts
Fall in the fresh lap of the crimson rose,
And on old Hiems' thin and icy crown
An odorous chaplet of sweet summer buds
Is, as in mockery, set. The spring, the summer,
The childing autumn, angry winter, change
Their wonted liveries; and the mazéd world,
By their increase, now knows not which is which.
And this same progeny of evils comes
From our debate, from our dissension:
We are their parents and original.
OBERON. Do you amend it then: it lies in you.
Why should Titania cross her Oberon?
I do but beg a little changeling boy,
To be my henchman.
TITANIA. Set your heart at rest,
The fairy land buys not the child of me.
His mother was a vot'ress of my order;
And in the spicéd Indian air, by night,
Full often hath she gossiped by my side;
And sat with me on Neptune's yellow sands,
Marking th'embarkéd traders on the flood;
When we have laughed to see the sails conceive
And grow big-bellied with the wanton wind;
Which she, with pretty and with swimming gait
Following—her womb then rich with my young squire—
Would imitate, and sail upon the land,
To fetch me trifles, and return again,
As from a voyage, rich with merchandise.
But she, being mortal, of that boy did die;
And for her sake do I rear up her boy;
And for her sake I will not part with him.
OBERON. How long within this wood intend you stay?
TITANIA. Perchance till after Theseus' wedding-day.
If you will patiently dance in our round,
And see our moonlight revels, go with us:
If not, shun me, and I will spare your haunts.
OBERON. Give me that boy, and I will go with thee.
TITANIA. Not for thy fairy kingdom.... Fairies, away!
We shall chide downright, if I longer stay.
Titania departs with her train
OBERON. Well: go thy way. Thou shalt not from this grove,
Till I torment thee for this injury.
My gentle Puck, come hither. Thou remember'st
Since once I sat upon a promontory,
And heard a mermaid, on a dolphin's back,
Uttering such dulcet and harmonious breath
That the rude sea grew civil at her song,
And certain stars shot madly from their spheres
To hear the sea-maid's music.
PUCK. I remember.
OBERON. That very time I saw—but thou couldst not—
Flying between the cold moon and the earth,
Cupid all armed: a certain aim he took
At a fair Vestal, thronéd by the west,
And loosed his love-shaft smartly from his bow,
As it should pierce a hundred thousand hearts:
But I might see young Cupid's fiery shaft
Quenched in the chaste beams of the wat'ry moon:
And the imperial Vot'ress passéd on,
In maiden meditation, fancy-free.
Yet marked I where the bolt of Cupid fell.
It fell upon a little western flower;
Before, milk-white; now purple with love's wound—
And maidens call it Love-in-idleness.
Fetch me that flower, the herb I showed thee once.
The juice of it, on sleeping eyelids laid,
Will make or man or woman madly dote
Upon the next live creature that it sees.
Fetch me this herb, and be thou here again
Ere the leviathan can swim a league.
PUCK. I'll put a girdle round about the earth
In forty minutes. He goes
OBERON. Having once this juice,
I'll watch Titania when she is asleep,
And drop the liquor of it in her eyes:
The next thing then she waking looks upon—
Be it on lion, bear, or wolf, or bull,
On meddling monkey, or on busy ape—
She shall pursue it with the soul of love.
And ere I take this charm from off her sight—
As I can take it with another herb—
I'll make her render up her page to me.
But who comes here? I am invisible,
And I will overhear their conference.

Demetrius enters, Helena following him

DEMETRIUS. I love thee not ... therefore pursue me not.
Where is Lysander and fair Hermia?
The one I'll slay ... the other slayeth me.
Thou told'st me they were stol'n unto this wood:
And here am I, and wood within this wood,
Because I cannot meet my Hermia:
Hence, get thee gone, and follow me no more.
HELENA. You draw me, you hard-hearted adamant;
But yet you draw not iron, for my heart
Is true as steel. Leave you your power to draw,
And I shall have no power to follow you.
DEMETRIUS. Do I entice you? Do I speak you fair
Or rather do I not in plainest truth
Tell you I do not nor I cannot love you?
HELENA. And even for that do I love you the more:
I am your spaniel; and, Demetrius,
The more you beat me, I will fawn on you.
Use me but as your spaniel: spurn me, strike me,
Neglect me, lose me: only give me leave,
Unworthy as I am, to follow you.
What worser place can I beg in your love—
And yet a place of high respect with me—
Than to be uséd as you use your dog?
DEMETRIUS. Tempt not too much the hatred of my spirit,
For I am sick when I do look on thee.
HELENA. And I am sick when I look not on you.
DEMETRIUS. You do impeach your modesty too much
To leave the city and commit yourself
Into the hands of one that loves you not,
To trust the opportunity of night
And the ill counsel of a desert place
With the rich worth of your virginity.
HELENA. Your virtue is my privilege for that:
It is not night when I do see your face,
Therefore I think I am not in the night—
Nor doth this wood lack worlds of company,
For you in my respect are all the world.

Then how can it be said I am alone
When all the world is here to look on me?
DEMETRIUS. I'll run from thee and hide me in the brakes,
And leave thee to the mercy of wild beasts.
HELENA. The wildest hath not such a heart as you.
Run when you will; the story shall be changed:
Apollo flies, and Daphne holds the chase;
The dove pursues the griffin; the mild hind
Makes speed to catch the tiger . . . . bootless speed,
When cowardice pursues and valour flies.
DEMETRIUS. I will not stay thy questions—let me go:
Or, if thou follow me, do not believe
But I shall do thee mischief in the wood.
HELENA. Ay, in the temple, in the town, the field,
You do me mischief. Fie, Demetrius!
Your wrongs do set a scandal on my sex:
We cannot fight for love, as men may do;
We should be wooed and were not made to woo.
He goes
I'll follow thee and make a heaven of hell,
To die upon the hand I love so well.
She follows after
OBERON. Fare thee well, nymph. Ere he do leave this grove,
Thou shalt fly him, and he shall seek thy love.

Puck reappears

Welcome, wanderer. Hast thou the flower there?
PUCK. Ay, there it is.
OBERON. I pray thee, give it me.
I know a bank where the wild thyme blows,
Where oxlips and the nodding violet grows,
Quite over-canopied with luscious woodbine,
With sweet musk-roses, and with eglantine:
There sleeps Titania sometime of the night,
Lulled in these flowers with dances and delight;
And there the snake throws her enamelled skin,
Weed wide enough to wrap a fairy in.
And with the juice of this I'll streak her eyes,
And make her full of hateful fantasies.
Take thou some of it, and seek through this grove:
A sweet Athenian lady is in love
With a disdainful youth; anoint his eyes—
But do it when the next thing he espies
May be the lady. Thou shalt know the man
By the Athenian garments he hath on.
Effect it with some care, that he may prove
More fond on her than she upon her love.
And look thou meet me ere the first cock crow.
PUCK. Fear not, my lord: your servant shall do so.
They depart

Scene 2: Another part of the wood

Enter Titania; her fairies attending her

TITANIA. Come now, a roundel and a fairy song:
Then, for the third part of a minute, hence—
Some to kill cankers in the musk-rose buds,
Some war with rere-mice for their leathern wings,
To make my small elves coats, and some keep back
The clamorous owl that nightly hoots and wonders
At out quaint spirits. Sing me now asleep;
Then to your offices, and let me rest.

Fairies sing

You spotted snakes, with double tongue,
Thorny hedgehogs, be not seen;
Newts and blind-worms do no wrong,
Come not near our Fairy Queen.
Philomele, with melody,
Sing in our sweet lullaby,
Lulla, lulla, lullaby,
Lulla, lulla, lullaby,
Never harm,
Nor spell, nor charm,
Come our lovely lady nigh.
So good night, with lullaby.
1 FAIRY. Weaving spiders come not here:
Hence you long-legged spinners, hence:
Beetles black approach not near:
Worm nor snail do no offence.
Philomele, with melody,
Sing in our sweet lullaby,
Lulla, lulla, lullaby,
Lulla, lulla, lullaby,
Never harm,
Nor spell, nor charm,
Come our lovely lady nigh.
So good night, with lullaby.
Titania sleeps
2 FAIRY. Hence, away: now all is well:
One aloof stand sentinel.
The fairies steal away

Oberon appears and anoints the eyes of Titania with the juice of the flower

OBERON. What thou see'st when thou dost wake,
Do it for thy true-love take;
Love and languish for his sake.
Be it ounce, or cat, or bear,
Pard, or boar with bristled hair,
In thy eye that shall appear
When thou wak'st, it is thy dear:
Wake when some vile thing is near.
He goes

Lysander and Hermia enter

LYSANDER. Fair love, you faint with wandr'ing in the wood;
And to speak troth I have forgot our way.
We'll rest us, Hermia, if you think it good,
And tarry for the comfort of the day.
HERMIA. Be't so, Lysander: find you out a bed:
For I upon this bank will rest my head.
LYSANDER. One turf shall serve as pillow for us both,
One heart, one bed, two bosoms, and one troth.
HERMIA. Nay, good Lysander: for my sake, my dear,
Lie further off yet; do not lie so near.
LYSANDER. O take the sense, sweet, of my innocence!
Love takes the meaning in love's conference.
I mean that my heart unto yours is knit,
So that but one heart we can make of it:
Two bosoms interchainéd with an oath,
So then two bosoms and a single troth.
Then by your side no bed-room me deny,
For lying so, Hermia, I do not lie.
HERMIA. Lysander riddles very prettily.
Now much beshrew my manners and my pride,
If Hermia meant to say Lysander lied.
But, gentle friend, for love and courtesy
Lie further off—in human modesty:

Such separation as may well be said
Becomes a virtuous bachelor and a maid,
So far be distant—and good night, sweet friend:
Thy love ne'er alter till thy sweet life end!
LYSANDER. Amen, amen, to that fair prayer, say I—
And then end life when I end loyalty!
Here is my bed: sleep give thee all his rest.
HERMIA. With half that wish the wisher's eyes be pressed. They sleep

Puck appears

PUCK. Through the forest have I gone,
But Athenian found I none
On whose eyes I might approve
This flower's force in stirring love.
Night and silence—who is here?
Weeds of Athens he doth wear:
This is he, my master said,
Despiséd the Athenian maid:
And here the maiden, sleeping sound,
On the dank and dirty ground.
Pretty soul, she durst not lie
Near this lack-love, this kill-courtesy.
Churl, upon thy eyes I throw
All the power this charm doth owe:
When thou wak'st, let love forbid
Sleep his seat on thy eyelid.
So awake when I am gone;
For I must now to Oberon. He goes

Enter Demetrius and Helena, running

HELENA. Stay; though thou kill me, sweet Demetrius.
DEMETRIUS. I charge thee, hence, and do not haunt me thus.
HELENA. O, wilt thou darkling leave me? do not so.
DEMETRIUS. Stay, on thy peril; I alone will go. He goes
HELENA. O, I am out of breath in this fond chase!
The more my prayer, the lesser is my grace.
Happy is Hermia, wheresoe'er she lies;
For she hath blesséd and attractive eyes.
How came her eyes so bright? Not with salt tears—
If so, my eyes are oft'ner washed than hers.
No, no: I am as ugly as a bear,
For beasts that meet me run away for fear.
Therefore no marvel though Demetrius
Do, as a monster, fly my presence thus.
What wicked and dissembling glass of mine
Made me compare with Hermia's sphery eyne?
But who is here? Lysander! on the ground!
Dead? or asleep? I see no blood, no wound.
Lysander, if you live, good sir, awake.
LYSANDER [leaps up]. And run through fire I will, for thy sweet sake.
Transparent Helena! Nature shows her art,
That through thy bosom makes me see thy heart.
Where is Demetrius? O, how fit a word
Is that vile name to perish on my sword!
HELENA. Do not say so, Lysander, say not so.
What though he love your Hermia? Lord! what though?
Yet Hermia still loves you: then be content.
LYSANDER. Content with Hermia? No: I do repent
The tedious minutes I with her have spent.
Not Hermia, but Helena I love—
Who will not change a raven for a dove?
The will of man is by his reason swayed;
And reason says you are the worthier maid.
Things growing are not ripe until their season:
So I, being young, till now ripe not to reason—
And touching now the point of human skill,
Reason becomes the marshal to my will,
And leads me to your eyes; where I o'erlook
Love's stories, written in Love's richest book.
HELENA. Wherefore was I to this keen mockery born?
When at your hands did I deserve this scorn?
Is't not enough, is't not enough, young man,
That I did never, no, nor never can,
Deserve a sweet look from Demetrius' eye,
But you must flout my insufficiency?
Good troth, you do me wrong, good sooth, you do,
In such disdainful manner me to woo.
But fare you well: perforce I must confess
I thought you lord of more true gentleness.
O, that a lady, of one man refused,
Should of another therefore be abused! She goes
LYSANDER. She sees not Hermia. Hermia, sleep thou there,
And never mayst thou come Lysander near.
For, as a surfeit of the sweetest things
The deepest loathing to the stomach brings,
Or as the heresies that men do leave
Are hated most of those they did deceive,
So thou, my surfeit and my heresy,
Of all be hated, but the most of me!
And all my powers, address your love and might
To honour Helen, and to be her knight. He follows Helena
HERMIA [awaking]. Help me, Lysander, help me; do thy best
To pluck this crawling serpent from my breast.
Ay me, for pity! what a dream was here?
Lysander, look how I do quake with fear.
Methought a serpent eat my heart away,
And you sat smiling at his cruel prey....
Lysander! what, removed?—Lysander! lord!
What, out of hearing gone? no sound, no word?
Alack, where are you? speak, an if you hear;
Speak, of all loves! I swoon almost with fear.
No? then I will perceive you are not nigh.
Either death or you I'll find immediately. She goes

ACT 3
Scene 1

Enter Quince, Snug, Bottom, Flute, Snout, and Starveling

BOTTOM. Are we all met?

QUINCE. Pat, pat: and here's a marvellous convenient place for our rehearsal. This green plot shall be our stage, this hawthorn-brake our tiring-house—and we will do it in action as we will do it before the duke.

BOTTOM. Peter Quince!

QUINCE. What say'st thou, bully Bottom?

BOTTOM. There are things in this comedy of Pyramus and Thisby that will never please. First, Pyramus must draw a sword to kill himself; which the ladies cannot abide. How answer you that?

SNOUT. By'r lakin, a parlous fear.

STARVELING. I believe we must leave the killing out, when all is done.

BOTTOM. Not a whit: I have a device to make all well. Write me a prologue, and let the prologue seem to say we will do no harm with our swords, and that Pyramus is not killed indeed: and, for the more better assurance, tell them that I, Pyramus, am not Pyramus but Bottom the weaver: this will put them out of fear.

QUINCE. Well, we will have such a prologue, and it shall be written in eight and six.

BOTTOM. No, make it two more: let it be written in eight and eight.

SNOUT. Will not the ladies be afeard of the lion?

STARVELING. I fear it, I promise you.

BOTTOM. Masters, you ought to consider with yourselves—to bring in (God shield us!) a lion among ladies is a most dreadful thing. For there is not a more fearful wild-fowl than your lion living; and we ought to look to't.

SNOUT. Therefore, another prologue must tell he is not a lion.

BOTTOM. Nay, you must name his name, and half his face must be seen through the lion's neck, and he himself must speak through, saying thus, or to the same defect: 'Ladies,' or 'Fair ladies—I would wish you,' or 'I would request you,' or 'I would entreat you, not to fear, not to tremble: my life for yours. If you think I come hither as a lion, it were pity of my life. No: I am no such thing: I am a man as other men are'. And there indeed let him name his name, and tell them plainly he is Snug the joiner.

QUINCE. Well, it shall be so. But there is two hard things: that is, to bring the moonlight into a chamber: for you know, Pyramus and Thisby meet by moonlight.

SNOUT. Doth the moon shine that night we play our play?

BOTTOM. A calendar, a calendar! Look in the almanac; find out moonshine, find out moonshine.

QUINCE. Yes, it doth shine that night.

BOTTOM. Why, then may you leave a casement of the great chamber window, where we play, open; and the moon may shine in at the casement.

QUINCE. Ay, or else one must come in with a bush of thorns and a lantern, and say he comes to disfigure or to present the person of Moonshine. Then, there is another thing: we must have a wall in the great chamber; for Pyramus and Thisby, says the story, did talk through the chink of a wall.

SNOUT. You can never bring in a wall. What say you, Bottom?

BOTTOM. Some man or other must present wall; and let him have some plaster, or some loam, or some rough-cast about him, to signify wall; and let him hold his fingers thus . . . and through that cranny shall Pyramus and Thisby whisper.

QUINCE. If that may be, then all is well. . . Come, sit down, every mother's son, and rehearse your parts. Pyramus, you begin: when you have spoken your speech, enter into that brake—and so every one according to his cue.

Puck appears, behind

PUCK. What hempen home-spuns have we swagg'ring here,
So near the cradle of the Fairy Queen?
What, a play toward? I'll be an auditor,
An actor too perhaps, if I see cause.

QUINCE. Speak, Pyramus, Thisby, stand forth.

BOTTOM. 'Thisby, the flowers ha' odious savours sweet,'—

QUINCE. 'Odious'?—odorous!

BOTTOM. —'odours savours sweet,
So hath thy breath, my dearest Thisby dear.
But hark, a voice! stay thou but here awhile,
And by and by I will to thee appear.'
He goes

PUCK. A stranger Pyramus than e'er played here!
He follows Bottom

FLUTE. Must I speak now?

QUINCE. Ay, marry, must you. For you must understand he goes but to see a noise that he heard, and is to come again.

FLUTE. 'Most radiant Pyramus, most lily-white of hue,
Of colour like the red rose on triumphant briar,
Most brisky juvenal, and eke most lovely Jew,
As true as truest horse that yet would never tire,
I'll meet thee, Pyramus, at Ninny's tomb.'

QUINCE. 'Ninus' tomb,' man! Why, you must not speak that yet! That you answer to Pyramus. You speak all your part at once, cues and all. Pyramus enter; your cue is past; it is, 'never tire.'

FLUTE. O,—'As true as truest horse that yet would never tire.'

Enter Bottom with an ass's head; Puck following

BOTTOM. 'If I were fair, Thisby, I were only thine.'

QUINCE. O monstrous! O strange! We are haunted. Pray, masters! fly, masters! help!
They all go

PUCK. I'll follow you: I'll lead you about a round,
Through bog, through bush, through brake, through briar;
Sometime a horse I'll be, sometime a hound,
A hog, a headless bear, sometime a fire,
And neigh, and bark, and grunt, and roar, and burn,
Like horse, hound, hog, bear, fire, at every turn.
He pursues them

BOTTOM. Why do they run away? This is a knavery of them to make me afeard.

Snout returns

SNOUT. O Bottom, thou art changed! What do I see on thee?

BOTTOM. What do you see? you see an ass-head of your own, do you? Snout goes

Quince returns

QUINCE. Bless thee Bottom, bless thee! thou art translated. He goes

BOTTOM. I see their knavery. This is to make an ass of me, to fright me if they could: but I will not stir from this place, do what they can. I will walk up and down here, and will sing that they shall hear I am not afraid. . . . He sings

The ousel cock, so black of hue,
With orange-tawny bill,
The throstle with his note so true,
The wren with little quill. . . .

TITANIA [comes from the bower]. What angel wakes me from my flow'ry bed?

BOTTOM. The finch, the sparrow, and the lark,
The plain-song cuckoo gray:

Whose note full many a man doth mark,
And dares not answer, nay....
for indeed, who would set his wit to so foolish a bird? who would give a bird the lie, though he cry 'cuckoo' never so?

TITANIA. I pray thee, gentle mortal, sing again!
Mine ear is much enamoured of thy note;
So is mine eye enthrallèd to thy shape,
And thy fair virtue's force—perforce—doth move me,
On the first view, to say, to swear, I love thee.

BOTTOM. Methinks, mistress, you should have little reason for that. And yet, to say the truth, reason and love keep little company together now-a-days. The more the pity, that some honest neighbours will not make them friends. Nay, I can gleek upon occasion.

TITANIA. Thou art as wise as thou art beautiful.

BOTTOM. Not so, neither: but if I had wit enough to get out of this wood, I have enough to serve mine own turn.

TITANIA. Out of this wood do not desire to go:
Thou shalt remain here, whether thou wilt or no.
I am a spirit of no common rate:
The summer still doth tend upon my state,
And I do love thee: therefore go with me.
I'll give thee fairies to attend on thee:
And they shall fetch thee jewels from the deep,
And sing, while thou on presséd flowers dost sleep:
And I will purge thy mortal grossness so,
That thou shalt like an airy spirit go.
Peaseblossom, Cobweb, Moth, and Mustardseed!

PEASEBLOSSOM. Ready!
COBWEB. And I—
MOTH. And I—
MUSTARDSEED. And I—
ALL [bowing]. Where shall we go?

TITANIA. Be kind and courteous to this gentleman;
Hop in his walks and gambol in his eyes;
Feed him with apricocks and dewberries,
With purple grapes, green figs, and mulberries;
The honey-bags steal from the humble-bees,
And for night-tapers crop their waxen thighs,
And light them at the fiery glow-worm's eyes,
To have my love to bed and to arise;
And pluck the wings from painted butterflies,
To fan the moonbeams from his sleeping eyes.
Nod to him, elves, and do him courtesies.

PEASEBLOSSOM. Hail, mortal!

COBWEB. Hail!

MOTH. Hail!

MUSTARDSEED. Hail!

BOTTOM. I cry your worships mercy, heartily. I beseech your worship's name.

COBWEB. Cobweb.

BOTTOM. I shall desire you of more acquaintance, good Master Cobweb: if I cut my finger, I shall make bold with you. Your name, honest gentleman?

PEASEBLOSSOM. Peaseblossom.

BOTTOM. I pray you, commend me to Mistress Squash, your mother, and to Master Peascod, your father. Good Master Peaseblossom, I shall desire you of more acquaintance too. Your name, I beseech you sir?

MUSTARDSEED. Mustardseed.

BOTTOM. Good Master Mustardseed, I know your patience well. That same cowardly, giant-like, Ox-beef hath devoured many a gentleman of your house. I promise you your kindred hath made my eyes water ere now. I desire you of more acquaintance, good Master Mustardseed.

TITANIA. Come, wait upon him; lead him to my bower.
The moon, methinks, looks with a wat'ry eye:
And when she weeps, weeps every little flower,
Lamenting some enforcéd chastity.
Tie up my love's tongue, bring him silently.
They go

Scene 2: A clearing in the wood

Oberon appears

OBERON. I wonder if Titania be awaked;
Then, what it was that next came in her eye,
Which she must dote on in extremity.

Puck enters

Here comes my messenger. How now, mad spirit?
What night-rule now about this haunted grove?

PUCK. My mistress with a monster is in love.
Near to her close and consecrated bower,
While she was in her dull and sleeping hour,
A crew of patches, rude mechanicals
That work for bread upon Athenian stalls,
Were met together to rehearse a play
Intended for great Theseus' nuptial-day.
The shallowest thick-skin of that barren sort,
Who Pyramus presented, in their sport
Forsook his scene and ent'red in a brake;
When I did him at this advantage take,
An ass's noll I fixéd on his head.
Anon his Thisbe must be answeréd,
And forth my mimic comes. When they him spy,
As wild geese that the creeping fowler eye,
Or russet-pated choughs, many in sort,
Rising and cawing at the gun's report,
Sever themselves and madly sweep the sky,
So, at his sight, away his fellows fly;
And at a stump here o'er and o'er one falls—
He 'murder' cries, and help from Athens calls.
Their sense thus weak, lost with their fears thus strong,
Made senseless things begin to do them wrong.
For briars and thorns at their apparel snatch:
Some sleeves, some hats; from yielders all things catch.
I led them on in this distracted fear,
And left sweet Pyramus translated there:
When in that moment (so it came to pass)
Titania waked and straightaway loved an ass.

OBERON. This falls out better than I could devise.
But hast thou yet latched the Athenian's eyes
With the love-juice, as I did bid thee do?

PUCK. I took him sleeping—that is finished too—
And the Athenian woman by his side;
That, when he waked, of force she must be eyed.

Demetrius and Hermia approach

OBERON. Stand close; this is the same Athenian.

PUCK. This is the woman: but not this the man.

DEMETRIUS. O, why rebuke you him that loves you so?
Lay breath so bitter on your bitter foe.

HERMIA. Now I but chide: but I should use thee worse,

For thou, I fear, hast given me cause to curse . . .
If thou hast slain Lysander in his sleep,
Being o'er-shoes in blood, plunge in the deep,
And kill me too.
The sun was not so true unto the day
As he to me. Would he have stolen away
From sleeping Hermia? I'll believe as soon
This whole earth may be bored, and that the moon
May through the centre creep and so displease
Her brother's noontide with th'Antipodes.
It cannot be but thou hast murd'red him—
So should a murderer look; so dead, so grim.
DEMETRIUS. So should the murdered look, and so should I,
Pierced through the heart with your stern cruelty.
Yet you, the murderer, look as bright, as clear,
As yonder Venus in her glimmering sphere.
HERMIA. What's this to my Lysander? Where is he?
Ah, good Demetrius, wilt thou give him me?
DEMETRIUS. I had rather give his carcase to my hounds.
HERMIA. Out, dog! out, cur! thou driv'st me past the bounds
Of maiden's patience. Hast thou slain him then?
Henceforth be never numb'red among men!
O, once tell true: tell true, even for my sake:
Durst thou have looked upon him being awake?
And hast thou killed him, sleeping? O brave touch!
Could not a worm, an adder, do so much?
An adder did it; for with doubler tongue
Than thine, thou serpent, never adder stung.
DEMETRIUS. You spend your passion on a misprized mood:
I am not guilty of Lysander's blood;
Nor is he dead, for aught that I can tell.
HERMIA. I pray thee, tell me then that he is well.
DEMETRIUS. An if I could, what should I get therefore?
HERMIA. A privilege never to see me more,
And from thy hated presence part I so:
See me no more, whether he be dead or no.
She goes
DEMETRIUS. There is no following her in this fierce vein.
Here therefore for a while I will remain.
So sorrow's heaviness doth heavier grow
For debt that bankrupt sleep doth sorrow owe;
Which now in some slight measure it will pay,
If for his tender here I make some stay.
He lies down
OBERON. What hast thou done? thou hast mistaken quite,
And laid the love-juice on some true-love's sight.
Of thy misprision must perforce ensue
Some true love turned, and not a false turned true.
PUCK. Then fate o'er-rules, that, one man holding troth,
A million fail, confounding oath on oath.
OBERON. About the wood go swifter than the wind,
And Helena of Athens look thou find.
All fancy-sick she is, and pale of cheer
With sighs of love that costs the fresh blood dear.
By some illusion see thou bring her here:
I'll charm his eyes against she do appear.
PUCK. I go, I go—look how I go—
Swifter than arrow from the Tartar's bow.
He goes
OBERON. Flower of this purple dye,
Hit with Cupid's archery,
Sink in apple of his eye.
When his love he doth espy,
Let her shine as gloriously
As the Venus of the sky.
When thou wak'st, if she be by,
Beg of her for remedy.

Puck reappears

PUCK. Captain of our fairy band,
Helena is here at hand,
And the youth, mistook by me,
Pleading for a lover's fee.
Shall we their fond pageant see?
Lord, what fools these mortals be!
OBERON. Stand aside. The noise they make
Will cause Demetrius to awake.
PUCK. Then will two at once woo one;
That must needs be sport alone.
And those things do best please me
That befall prepost'rously.
They stand aside

Helena comes up, followed by Lysander

LYSANDER. Why should you think that I should woo in scorn?
Scorn and derision never come in tears.
Look when I vow, I weep; and vows so born
In their nativity all truth appears.
How can these things in me seem scorn to you,
Bearing the badge of faith to prove them true?
HELENA. You do advance your cunning more and more.
When truth kills truth, O devilish-holy fray!
These vows are Hermia's—will you give her o'er?
Weigh oath with oath, and you will nothing weigh:
Your vows, to her and me, put in two scales,
Will even weigh; and both as light as tales.
LYSANDER. I had no judgement when to her I swore.
HELENA. Nor none, in my mind, now you give her o'er.
LYSANDER. Demetrius loves her: and he loves not you.
DEMETRIUS [awaking]. O Helen, goddess, nymph, perfect, divine!
To what, my love, shall I compare thine eyne?
Crystal is muddy. O, how ripe in show
Thy lips, those kissing cherries, tempting grow!
That pure congealéd white, high Taurus' snow,
Fanned with the eastern wind, turns to a crow,
When thou hold'st up thy hand. O let me kiss
This princess of pure white, this seal of bliss!
HELENA. O spite! O hell! I see you all are bent
To set against me for your merriment.
If you were civil and knew courtesy,
You would not do me thus much injury.
Can you not hate me, as I know you do,
But you must join in souls to mock me too?
If you were men, as men you are in show,
You would not use a gentle lady so:
To vow, and swear, and superpraise my parts,
When I am sure you hate me with your hearts.
You both are rivals, and love Hermia;
And now both rivals, to mock Helena.
A trim exploit, a manly enterprise,
To conjure tears up in a poor maid's eyes

With your derision! none of noble sort
Would so offend a virgin, and extort
A poor soul's patience, all to make you sport.
LYSANDER. You are unkind, Demetrius; be not so—
For you love Hermia; this you know I know;
And here, with all good will, with all my heart,
In Hermia's love I yield you up my part:
And yours of Helena to me bequeath,
Whom I do love, and will do till my death.
HELENA. Never did mockers waste more idle breath.
DEMETRIUS. Lysander, keep thy Hermia: I will none.
If e'er I loved her, all that love is gone.
My heart to her but as guest-wise sojourned,
And now to Helen is it home returned,
There to remain.
LYSANDER. Helen, it is not so.
DEMETRIUS. Disparage not the faith thou dost not know,
Lest to thy peril thou aby it dear....
Look where thy love comes: yonder is thy dear.

Hermia enters

HERMIA. Dark night, that from the eye his function takes,
The ear more quick of apprehension makes.
Wherein it doth impair the seeing sense,
It pays the hearing double recompense.
Thou art not by mine eye, Lysander, found;
Mine ear, I thank it, brought me to thy sound.
But why unkindly didst thou leave me so?
LYSANDER. Why should he stay whom love doth press to go?
HERMIA. What love could press Lysander from my side?
LYSANDER. Lysander's love, that would not let him bide—
Fair Helena! who more engilds the night
Than all yon fiery oes and eyes of light.
Why seek'st thou me? could not this make thee know
The hate I bear thee made me leave thee so?
HERMIA. You speak not as you think: it cannot be.
HELENA. Lo! she is one of this confederacy.
Now I perceive they have conjoined all three
To fashion this false sport in spite of me.
Injurious Hermia, most ungrateful maid,
Have you conspired, have you with these contrived,
To bait me with this foul derision?
Is all the counsel that we two have shared,
The sisters' vows, the hours that we have spent,
When we have chid the hasty-footed time
For parting us—O! is all forgot?
All school-days' friendship, childhood innocence?
We, Hermia, like two artificial gods,
Have with our needles created both one flower,
Both on one sampler, sitting on one cushion,
Both warbling of one song, both in one key;
As if our hands, our sides, voices, and minds,
Had been incorporate. So we grew together,
Like to a double cherry, seeming parted,
But yet an union in partition,
Two lovely berries moulded on one stem:
So, with two seeming bodies, but one heart,
Two of the first, like coats in heraldry,
Due but to one, and crownéd with one crest.
And will you rend our ancient love asunder,
To join with men in scorning your poor friend?
It is not friendly, 'tis not maidenly—
Our sex, as well as I, may chide you for it;
Though I alone do feel the injury.
HERMIA. Helen, I am amazéd at your words.
I scorn you not—it seems that you scorn me.
HELENA. Have you not set Lysander, as in scorn,
To follow me and praise my eyes and face?
And made your other love, Demetrius
(Who even but now did spurn me with his foot!)
To call me goddess, nymph, divine and rare,
Precious, celestial? Wherefore speaks he this
To her he hates? and wherefore doth Lysander
Deny your love (so rich within his soul)
And tender me (forsooth!) affection,
But by your setting on, by your consent?
What though I be not so in grace as you,
So hung upon with love, so fortunate,
But miserable most, to love unloved?
This you should pity rather than despise.
HERMIA. I understand not what you mean by this.
HELENA. Ay, do! perséver, counterfeit sad looks,
Make mouths upon me when I turn my back,
Wink at each other, hold the sweet jest up.
This sport, well carried, shall be chronicled.
If you have any pity, grace, or manners,
You would not make me such an argument.
But, fare ye well: 'tis partly my own fault:
Which death or absence soon shall remedy.
LYSANDER. Stay, gentle Helena; hear my excuse,
My love, my life, my soul, fair Helena!
HELENA. O excellent!
HERMIA. Sweet, do not scorn her so.
DEMETRIUS. If she cannot entreat, I can compel.
LYSANDER. Thou canst compel no more than she entreat.
Thy threats have no more strength than her weak prayers.
Helen, I love thee—by my life I do;
I swear by that which I will lose for thee,
To prove him false that says I love thee not.
DEMETRIUS. I say I love thee more than he can do.
LYSANDER. If thou say so, withdraw, and prove it too.
DEMETRIUS. Quick, come,—
HERMIA. Lysander, whereto tends all this?
LYSANDER. Away, you Ethiop!
HERMIA. No, no!
DEMETRIUS. Ye'll
Seem to break loose! take on as you would follow!
But yet come not. You are a tame man, go!
LYSANDER. Hang off, thou cat, thou burr! vile thing, let loose;
Or I will shake thee from me like a serpent.
HERMIA. Why are you grown so rude? what change is this,
Sweet love?
LYSANDER. Thy love! out, tawny Tartar, out!
Out, loathéd med'cine! O, hated potion, hence!
HERMIA. Do you not jest?
HELENA. Yes, sooth: and so do you.
LYSANDER. Demetrius, I will keep my word with thee.
DEMETRIUS. I would I had your bond, for I perceive
A weak bond holds you. I'll not trust you word.
LYSANDER. What? should I hurt her, strike her, kill her dead?
Although I hate her, I'll not harm her so.

HERMIA. What? can you do me greater harm than hate?
Hate me! wherefore? O me, what news, my love!
Am not I Hermia? are not you Lysander?
I am as fair now as I was erewhile.
Since night you loved me; yet since night you left me.
Why then, you left me—O, the gods forbid!—
In earnest, shall I say?
LYSANDER. Ay, by my life!
And never did desire to see thee more.
Therefore be out of hope, of question or doubt:
Be certain: nothing truer: 'tis no jest
That I do hate thee and love Helena.
HERMIA [to Helena]. O me, you juggler, you canker-blossom.
You thief of love! What! have you come by night
And stol'n my love's heart from him?
HELENA. Fine, i'faith!
Have you no modesty, no maiden shame,
No touch of bashfulness? What! will you tear
Impatient answers from my gentle tongue?
Fie, fie, you counterfeit, you puppet you!
HERMIA. 'Puppet?' Why, so,—ay, that way goes the game!
Now I perceive that she hath made compare
Between our statures; she hath urged her height;
And with her personage, her tall personage,
Her height, forsooth, she hath prevailed with him.
And are you grown so high in his esteem
Because I am so dwarfish and so low?
How low am I, thou painted maypole? speak;
How low am I? I am not yet so low,
But that my nails can reach unto thine eyes.
HELENA. I pray you, though you mock me, gentlemen,
Let her not hurt me. I was never curst:
I have no gift at all in shrewishness:
I am a right maid for my cowardice:
Let her not strike me. You perhaps may think,
Because she is something lower than myself,
That I can match her.
HERMIA. Lower! hark, again.
HELENA. Good Hermia, do not be so bitter with me.
I evermore did love you, Hermia,
Did ever keep your counsels, never wronged you;
Save that, in love unto Demetrius,
I told him of your stealth unto this wood.
He followed you; for love I followed him.
But he hath chid me hence, and threat'ned me
To strike me, spurn me; nay, to kill me too.
And now, so you will let me quiet go,
To Athens will I bear my folly back,
And follow you no further. Let me go.
You see how simple and how fond I am.
HERMIA. Why, get you gone. Who is't that hinders you?
HELENA. A foolish heart that I leave here behind.
HERMIA. What! with Lysander?
HELENA. With Demetrius.
LYSANDER. Be not afraid: she shall not harm thee, Helena.
DEMETRIUS. No, sir; she shall not, though you take her part.
HELENA. When she is angry, she is keen and shrewd.
She was a vixen when she went to school;
And though she be but little, she is fierce.
HERMIA. 'Little' again? nothing but 'low' and 'little'!
Why will you suffer her to flout me thus?
Let me come to her.
LYSANDER. Get you gone, you dwarf;
You minimus, of hind'ring knot-grass made;
You bead, you acorn.
DEMETRIUS. You are too officious
In her behalf that scorns your services.
Let her alone; speak not of Helena;
Take not her part; for if thou dost intend
Never so little show of love to her,
Thou shalt aby it.
LYSANDER. Now she holds me not;
Now follow, if thou dar'st, to try whose right,
Of thine or mine, is most in Helena.
He goes
DEMETRIUS. Follow! nay, I'll go with thee, cheek by jowl. He follows after HERMIA. You, mistress, all this coil is 'long of you:
Nay: go not back.
HELENA. I will not trust you, I,
Nor longer stay in your curst company.
Your hands than mine are quicker for a fray;
My legs are longer though to run away.
She goes
HERMIA. I am amazed, and know not what to say.
She follows
OBERON. This is thy negligence. Still thou mistak'st,
Or else committ'st thy knaveries wilfully.
PUCK. Believe me, king of shadows, I mistook.
Did not you tell me I should know the man
By the Athenian garments he had on?
And so far blameless proves my enterprise
That I have 'nointed an Athenian's eyes:
And so far am I glad it so did sort,
As this their jangling I esteem a sport.
OBERON. Thou see'st these lovers seek a place to fight:
Hie therefore, Robin, overcast the night,
The starry welkin cover thou anon
With drooping fog as black as Acheron,
And lead these testy rivals so astray,
As one come not within another's way.
Like to Lysander sometime frame thy tongue;
Then stir Demetrius up with bitter wrong;
And sometime rail thou like Demetrius;
And from each other look thou lead them thus;
Till o'er their brows death-counterfeiting sleep
With leaden legs and batty wings doth creep:
Then crush this herb into Lysander's eye;
Whose liquor hath this virtuous property,
To take from thence all error with his might,
And make his eyeballs roll with wonted sight.
When they next wake, all this derision
Shall seem a dream and fruitless vision,
And back to Athens shall the lovers wend
With league whose date till death shall never end.
Whiles I in this affair do thee employ,
I'll to my queen and beg her Indian boy;
And then I will her charméd eye release
From monster's view, and all things shall be peace.
PUCK. My fairy lord, this must be done with haste,
For night's swift dragons cut the clouds full fast;
And yonder shines Aurora's harbinger,
At whose approach ghosts wand'ring here and there,
Troop home to churchyards. Damnéd spirits all,

That in crossways and floods have burial,
Already to their wormy beds are gone;
For fear lest day should look their shames upon,
They wilfully themselves exile from light,
And must for aye consort with black-browed night.

OBERON. But we are spirits of another sort.
I with the morning's love have oft made sport,
And like a forester the groves may tread,
Even till the eastern gate, all fiery-red,
Opening on Neptune with fair blessèd beams,
Turns into yellow gold his salt green streams.
But, notwithstanding, haste—make no delay:
We may effect this business yet ere day.
He goes

PUCK. Up and down, up and down,
I will lead them up and down.
I am feared in field and town.
Goblin, lead them up and down....
He vanishes
Here comes one.

Lysander returns

LYSANDER. Where art thou, proud Demetrius? speak thou now.

PUCK AS DEMETRIUS. Here, villain! drawn and ready. Where art thou?

LYSANDER. I will be with thee straight.

PUCK AS DEMETRIUS. Follow me then
To plainer ground. Lysander follows the voice

Demetrius approaches

DEMETRIUS. Lysander! speak again.
Thou runaway, thou coward, art thou fled?
Speak! In some bush? Where dost thou hide thy head?

PUCK AS LYSANDER. Thou coward, art thou bragging to the stars,
Telling the bushes that thou look'st for wars,
And wilt not come? Come recreant, come thou child,
I'll whip thee with a rod. He is defiled
That draws a sword on thee.

DEMETRIUS. Yea, art thou there?

THE VOICE RECEDING. Follow my voice: we'll try no manhood here. Demetrius follows the voice

Lysander returns

LYSANDER. He goes before me and still dares me on:
When I come where he calls, then he is gone.
The villain is much lighter-heeled than I:
I followed fast; but faster he did fly;
That fallen am I in dark uneven way,
And here will rest me.... He lies down
Come, thou gentle day,
For if but once thou show me thy grey light,
I'll find Demetrius and revenge this spite.
He sleeps

Demetrius returns

PUCK AS LYSANDER. Ho, ho, ho! Coward, why com'st thou not?

DEMETRIUS. Abide me if thou dar'st, for well I wot
Thou runn'st before me, shifting every place,
And dar'st not stand, nor look me in the face.
Where art thou now?

PUCK AS LYSANDER. Come hither; I am here.

DEMETRIUS. Nay, then thou mock'st me. Thou shalt buy this dear,
If ever I thy face by daylight see.
Now, go thy way. Faintness constraineth me
To measure out my length on this cold bed.
By day's approach look to be visited.
He lies down and sleeps

Helena enters

HELENA. O weary night, O long and tedious night,
Abate thy hours! Shine comforts from the east,
That I may back to Athens by daylight,
From these that my poor company detest.
And sleep, that sometimes shuts up sorrow's eye,
Steal me awhile from mine own company.
She lies down and falls asleep

Puck reappears

PUCK. Yet but three? Come one more.
Two of both kinds makes up four.
Here she comes, curst and sad.
Cupid is a knavish lad,
Thus to make poor females mad.

Hermia returns

HERMIA. Never so weary, never so in woe;
Bedabbled with the dew and torn with briars;
I can no further crawl, no further go;
My legs can keep no pace with my desires.
Here will I rest me till the break of day.
Heavens shield Lysander, if they mean a fray!
She lies down and falls asleep

PUCK. On the ground
Sleep sound:
I'll apply
To your eye,
Gentle lover, remedy.
He anoints Lysander's eyes with the love-juice
When thou wak'st,
Thou tak'st
True delight
In the sight
Of thy former lady's eye:
And the country proverb known,
That every man should take his own,
In your waking shall be shown.
Jack shall have Jill;
Nought shall go ill;
The man shall have his mare again, and all shall be well.
He goes

ACT 4
Scene 1

Titania approaches with Bottom, his ass's head garlanded with flowers; fairies follow in their train, Oberon behind all, unseen

TITANIA. Come, sit thee down upon this flow'ry bed;
While I thy amiable cheeks do coy,
And stick musk-roses in thy sleek smooth head,
And kiss thy fair large ears, my gentle joy.

BOTTOM. Where's Peaseblossom?

PEASEBLOSSOM. Ready.

BOTTOM. Scratch my head, Peaseblossom. Where's Monsieur Cobweb?

COBWEB. Ready.

BOTTOM. Monsieur Cobweb, good monsieur, get you your weapons in your hand and kill me a red-hipped humble-bee on the top of a thistle; and, good monsieur, bring me the honey-bag. Do not fret yourself too much in the action, monsieur; and, good monsieur, have a care the honey-bag break not—I would be loath to have you overflown with a honey-bag, signior. Where's Monsieur Mustardseed?

MUSTARDSEED. Ready.

BOTTOM. Give me your neaf, Monsieur Mustardseed. Pray you, leave your curtsy, good monsieur.

MUSTARDSEED. What's your will?

BOTTOM. Nothing, good monsieur, but to help Cavalery Cobweb to scratch. I must to the barber's, monsieur; for methinks I am marvellous hairy about the face—and I am such a tender ass, if my hair do but tickle me I must scratch.

TITANIA. What, wilt thou hear some music, my sweet love?

BOTTOM. I have a reasonable good ear in music. Let's have the tongs and the bones.

TITANIA. Or say, sweet love, what thou desir'st to eat.

BOTTOM. Truly, a peck of provender. I could munch your good dry oats. Methinks I have a great desire to a bottle of hay. Good hay, sweet hay, hath no fellow.

TITANIA. I have a venturous fairy, that shall seek
The squirrel's hoard, and fetch thee thence new nuts.

BOTTOM. I had rather have a handful or two of dried peas. But, I pray you, let none of your people stir me; I have an exposition of sleep come upon me.

TITANIA. Sleep thou, and I will wind thee in my arms.
Fairies, be gone, and be all ways away.
The fairies go
So doth the woodbine the sweet honeysuckle
Gently entwist: the female ivy so
Enrings the barky fingers of the elm.
O, how I love thee! how I dote on thee!
They sleep

Oberon advances and Puck appears

OBERON. Welcome, good Robin. See'st thou this sweet sight?
Her dotage now I do begin to pity.
For meeting her of late behind the wood,
Seeking sweet favours for this hateful fool,
I did upbraid her and fall out with her.
For she his hairy temples then had rounded
With coronet of fresh and fragrant flowers;
And that same dew which sometime on the buds
Was wont to swell like round and orient pearls
Stood now within the pretty flowerets' eyes
Like tears that did their own disgrace bewail.
When I had at my pleasure taunted her,
And she in mild terms begged my patience,
I then did ask of her her changeling child;
Which straight she gave me, and her fairy sent
To bear him to my bower in Fairyland.
And now I have the boy, I will undo
This hateful imperfection of her eyes.
And, gentle Puck, take this transformèd scalp
From off the head of this Athenian swain;
That he, awaking when the other do,
May all to Athens back again repair,
And think no more of this night's accidents
But as the fierce vexation of a dream.
But first I will release the Fairy Queen....
He anoints her eyes
Be as thou wast wont to be:
See, as thou wast wont to see.
Dian's bud o'er Cupid's flower
Hath such force and blessèd power.
Now, my Titania! wake you, my sweet queen.

TITANIA. My Oberon! what visions have I seen!
Methought I was enamoured of an ass.

OBERON. There lies your love.

TITANIA. How came these things to pass?
O, how mine eyes do loathe his visage now!

OBERON. Silence, awhile. Robin, take off this head.
Titania, music call; and strike more dead
Than common sleep of all these five the sense.

TITANIA. Music, ho! music! such as charmeth sleep.
Soft music

PUCK. Now, when thou wak'st, with thine own fool's eyes peep.

OBERON. Sound, music. [louder music] Come, my queen, take hands with me,
And rock the ground whereon these sleepers be.
Now thou and I are new in amity.
And will to-morrow midnight solemnly
Dance in Duke Theseus' house triumphantly,
And bless it to all fair prosperity.
There shall the pairs of faithful lovers be
Wedded, with Theseus, all in jollity.

PUCK. Fairy King, attend, and mark:
I do hear the morning lark.

OBERON. Then, my queen, in silence sad,
Trip we after the night's shade:
We the globe can compass soon,
Swifter than the wand'ring moon.

TITANIA. Come my lord, and in our flight,
Tell me how it came this night
That I sleeping here was found
With these mortals on the ground.
They go

There is a sound of horns; Theseus, Hippolyta, Egeus and others approach

THESEUS. Go, one of you, find out the forester;
For now our observation is performed,
And since we have the vaward of the day,
My love shall hear the music of my hounds.
Uncouple in the western valley, let them go:
Dispatch, I say, and find the forester.
A servant departs
We will, fair queen, up to the mountain's top,
And mark the musical confusion
Of hounds and echo in conjunction.

HIPPOLYTA. I was with Hercules and Cadmus once,
When in a wood of Crete they bayed the bear
With hounds of Sparta: never did I hear
Such gallant chiding; for, besides the groves,
The skies, the fountains, every region near Seemed all one mutual cry. I never heard
So musical a discord, such sweet thunder.

THESEUS. My hounds are bred out of the Spartan kind:
So flewed, so sanded; and their heads are hung
With ears that sweep away the morning dew—

Crook-kneed, and dewlapped like Thessalian bulls;
Slow in pursuit; but matched in mouth like bells,
Each under each. A cry more tuneable
Was never hollaed to, nor cheered with horn,
In Crete, in Sparta, nor in Thessaly.
Judge when you hear. But, soft, what nymphs are these?

EGEUS. My lord, this is my daughter here asleep—
And this Lysander—this Demetrius is—
This Helena, old Nedar's Helena.
I wonder of their being here together.

THESEUS. No doubt they rose up early to observe
The rite of May; and, hearing our intent,
Came here in grace of our solemnity....
But, speak, Egeus; is not this the day
That Hermia should give answer of her choice?

EGEUS. It is, my lord.

THESEUS. Go, bid the huntsmen wake them with their horns.

Horns, and a shout; the lovers awake and start up

Good morrow, friends. Saint Valentine is past;
Begin these wood-birds but to couple now?

LYSANDER. Pardon, my lord. They kneel to Theseus

THESEUS. I pray you all, stand up.
I know you two are rival enemies:
How comes this gentle concord in the world,
That hatred is so far from jealousy
To sleep by hate, and fear no enmity?

LYSANDER. My lord, I shall reply amazedly,
Half sleep, half waking.... but as yet, I swear,
I cannot truly say how I came here....
But, as I think—for truly would I speak,
And now I do bethink me, so it is—
I came with Hermia hither. Our intent
Was to be gone from Athens ... where we might,
Without the peril of the Athenian law—

EGEUS. Enough, enough, my lord; you have enough.
I beg the law, the law, upon his head.
They would have stol'n away, they would, Demetrius,
Thereby to have defeated you and me:
You of your wife, and me of my consent—
Of my consent that she should be your wife.

DEMETRIUS. My lord, fair Helen told me of their stealth
Of this their purpose hither to this wood,
And I in fury hither followed them;
Fair Helena in fancy following me.
But, my good lord, I wot not by what power—
But by some power it is—my love to Hermia,
Melted as melts the snow, seems to me now
As the remembrance of an idle gaud
Which in my childhood I did dote upon:
And all the faith, the virtue of my heart,
The object and the pleasure of mine eye,
Is only Helena. To her, my lord,
Was I betrothed ere I saw Hermia:
But, like in sickness, did I loathe this food,
So, as in health, come to my natural taste,
Now I do wish it, love it, long for it,
And will for evermore be true to it.

THESEUS. Fair lovers, you are fortunately met.
Of this discourse we more will hear anon.
Egeus, I will overbear your will;
For in the temple, by and by, with us,
These couples shall eternally be knit.
And, for the morning now is something worn,
Our purposed hunting shall be set aside.
Away with us, to Athens! Three and three,
We'll hold a feast in great solemnity.
Come, Hippolyta.

Theseus, Hippolyta, Egeus and their train depart

DEMETRIUS. These things seem small and undistinguishable,
Like far-off mountains turnéd into clouds.

HERMIA. Methinks I see these things with parted eye,
When everything seems double.

HELENA. So methinks:
And I have found Demetrius like a jewel,
Mine own, and not mine own.

DEMETRIUS. Are you sure
That we are well awake? It seems to me,
That yet we sleep, we dream. Do not you think
The duke was here, and bid us follow him?

HERMIA. Yea, and my father.

HELENA. And Hippolyta.

LYSANDER. And he did bid us follow to the temple.

DEMETRIUS. Why then, we are awake; let's follow him;
And by the way let us recount our dreams.

They follow Theseus

BOTTOM [awaking]. When my cue comes, call me, and I will answer. My next is, 'Most fair Pyramus.' Heigh-ho! Peter Quince! Flute, the bellows-mender! Snout, the tinker! Starveling! God's my life! stol'n hence, and left me asleep! I have had a most rare vision. I have had a dream—past the wit of man to say what dream it was. Man is but an ass, if he go about to expound this dream. Methought I was—there is no man can tell what.... Methought I was, and methought I had .... but man is but a patched fool, if he will offer to say what methought I had. The eye of man hath not heard, the ear of man hath not seen, man's hand is not able to taste, his tongue to conceive, nor his heart to report, what my dream was. I will get Peter Quince to write a ballad of this dream: it shall be called Bottom's Dream; because it hath no bottom: and I will sing it in the latter end of our play, before the duke. Peradventure, to make it the more gracious, I shall sing it at her death. He goes

Scene 2: Peter Quince's cottage

Enter Quince, Flute, Snout, and Starveling

QUINCE. Have you sent to Bottom's house? is he come home yet?

STARVELING. He cannot be heard of. Out of doubt he is transported.

FLUTE. If he come not, then the play is marred. It goes not forward, doth it?

QUINCE. It is not possible. You have not a man in all Athens able to discharge Pyramus but he.

FLUTE. No, he hath simply the best wit of any handicraft man in Athens.

QUINCE. Yea, and the best person too—and he is a very paramour for a sweet voice.

FLUTE. You must say 'paragon'. A paramour is, God bless us! a thing of naught.

Snug enters

SNUG. Masters, the duke is coming from the temple, and there is two or three lords and ladies more married—if our sport had gone forward, we had all been made men.

FLUTE. O sweet bully Bottom! Thus hath he lost sixpence a day during his life; he could not have 'scaped sixpence a day. An the duke had not given him sixpence a day for playing Pyramus, I'll be hanged. He would have deserved it: sixpence a day in Pyramus, or nothing.

Bottom enters

BOTTOM. Where are these lads? where are these hearts?

QUINCE. Bottom! O most courageous day! O most happy hour!

BOTTOM. Masters, I am to discourse wonders: but ask me not what; for if I tell you, I am not true Athenian. I will tell you every thing, right as it fell out.

QUINCE. Let us hear, sweet Bottom.

BOTTOM. Not a word of me. All that I will tell you is, that the duke hath dined. Get your apparel together—good strings to your beards, new ribbons to your pumps—meet presently at the palace, every man look o'er his part; for the short and the long is, our play is preferred. In any case, let Thisby have clean linen; and let not him that plays the lion pare his nails; for they shall hang out for the lion's claws.... And, most dear actors, eat no onions nor garlic; for we are to utter sweet breath; and I do not doubt but to hear them say, it is a sweet comedy. No more words .... away, go away!

They go

ACT 5

Scene 1: The palace of Duke Theseus

Theseus and Hippolyta enter, followed by Philostrate, lords and attendants

HIPPOLYTA. 'Tis strange, my Theseus, that these lovers speak of.

THESEUS. More strange than true. I never may believe
These antic fables, nor these fairy toys.
Lovers and madmen have such seething brains,
Such shaping fantasies, that apprehend
More than cool reason ever comprehends.
The lunatic, the lover, and the poet,
Are of imagination all compact.
One sees more devils than vast hell can hold;
That is, the madman. The lover, all as frantic,
Sees Helen's beauty in a brow of Egypt.
The poet's eye, in a fine frenzy rolling,
Doth glance from heaven to earth, from earth to heaven;
And as imagination bodies forth
The forms of things unknown, the poet's pen
Turns them to shapes, and gives to airy nothing
A local habitation and a name.
Such tricks hath strong imagination
That, if it would but apprehend some joy,
It comprehends some bringer of that joy;
Or in the night, imagining some fear,
How easy is a bush supposed a bear!

HIPPOLYTA. But all the story of the night told over,
And all their minds transfigured so together,
More witnesseth than fancy's images,
And grows to something of great constancy—
But howsoever strange and admirable.

THESEUS. Here come the lovers, full of joy and mirth.

Lysander and Hermia, Demetrius and Helena enter

Joy, gentle friends! joy and fresh days of love
Accompany your hearts!

LYSANDER. More than to us
Wait in your royal walks, your board, your bed!

THESEUS. Come now; what masques, what dances shall we have,
To wear away this long age of three hours
Between our after-supper and bed-time?
Where is our usual manager of mirth?
What revels are in hand? Is there no play
To ease the anguish of a torturing hour?
Call Philostrate.

PHILOSTRATE. Here, mighty Theseus.

THESEUS. Say, what abridgment have you for this evening?
What masque? what music? How shall we beguile
The lazy time, if not with some delight?

PHILOSTRATE. There is a brief how many sports are ripe;
Make choice of which your highness will see first.

He presents a paper

THESEUS. 'The battle with the Centaurs, to be sung,
By an Athenian eunuch to the harp.'
We'll none of that: that have I told my love,
In glory of my kinsman Hercules.
'The riot of the tipsy Bacchanals,
Tearing the Thracian singer in their rage'
That is an old device; and it was played
When I from Thebes came last a conqueror.
'The thrice three Muses mourning for the death
Of Learning, late deceased in beggary.'
That is some satire, keen and critical,
Not sorting with a nuptial ceremony.
'A tedious brief scene of young Pyramus
And his love Thisby; very tragical mirth.'
Merry and tragical! tedious and brief!
That is hot ice and wondrous strange snow.
How shall we find the concord of this discord?

PHILOSTRATE. A play there is, my lord, some ten words long;
Which is as brief as I have known a play;
But by ten words, my lord, it is too long;
Which makes it tedious: for in all the play
There is not one word apt, one player fitted.
And tragical, my noble lord, it is;
For Pyramus therein doth kill himself.
Which when I saw rehearsed, I must confess,
Made mine eyes water; but more merry tears
The passion of loud laughter never shed.

THESEUS. What are they that do play it?

PHILOSTRATE. Hard-handed men that work in Athens here,
Which never laboured in their minds till now;
And now have toiled their unbreathed memories
With this same play against your nuptial.

THESEUS. And we will hear it.

PHILOSTRATE. No, my noble lord,
It is not for you: I have heard it over,
And it is nothing, nothing in the world;
Unless you can find sport in their intents,
Extremely stretched and conned with cruel pain,
To do you service.

THESEUS. I will hear that play:

For never anything can be amiss,
When simpleness and duty tender it.
Go bring them in; and take your places, ladies.
Philostrate departs

HIPPOLYTA. I love not to see wretchedness o'ercharged,
And duty in his service perishing.

THESEUS. Why, gentle sweet, you shall see no such thing.

HIPPOLYTA. He says they can do nothing in this kind.

THESEUS. The kinder we, to give them thanks for nothing.
Our sport shall be to take what they mistake:
And what poor duty cannot do, noble respect
Takes it in might not merit.
Where I have come, great clerks have purposéd
To greet me with premeditated welcomes;
Where I have seen them shiver and look pale,
Make periods in the midst of sentences,
Throttle their practised accent in their fears,
And in conclusion dumbly have broke off,
Not paying me a welcome. Trust me, sweet,
Out of this silence yet I picked a welcome;
And in the modesty of fearful duty
I read as much as from the rattling tongue
Of saucy and audacious eloquence.
Love, therefore, and tongue-tied simplicity
In least speak most, to my capacity.

Philostrate returns

PHILOSTRATE. So please your grace, the Prologue is addressed.

THESEUS. Let him approach.

Enter Quince for the Prologue

QUINCE. 'If we offend, it is with our good will.
That you should think, we come not to offend,
But with good will. To show our simple skill,
That is the true beginning of our end.
Consider then, we come but in despite.
We do not come, as minding to content you,
Our true intent is. All for your delight
We are not here. That you should here repent you,
The actors are at hand: and, by their show,
You shall know all, that you are like to know,'

THESEUS. This fellow doth not stand upon points.

LYSANDER. He hath rid his prologue like a rough colt: he knows not the stop. A good moral, my lord—it is not enough to speak; but to speak true.

HIPPOLYTA. Indeed he hath played on his prologue like a child on a recorder—a sound, but not in government.

THESEUS. His speech was like a tangled chain; nothing impaired, but all disordered. Who is next?

Enter Pyramus and Thisby, Wall, Moonshine, and Lion, as in dumb-show, with Quince for the Presenter

QUINCE. 'Gentles, perchance you wonder at this show,
But wonder on, till truth make all things plain.
This man is Pyramus, if you would know:
This beauteous lady Thisby is certain.
This man, with lime and rough-cast, doth present
Wall, that vile Wall which did these lovers sunder:
And through Wall's chink, poor souls, they are content
To whisper. At the which let no man wonder.
This man, with lantern, dog, and bush of thorn,
Presenteth Moonshine. For, if you will know,
By moonshine did these lovers think no scorn
To meet at Ninus' tomb, there, there to woo:
This grisly beast (which Lion hight by name)
The trusty Thisby, coming first by night,
Did scare away, or rather did affright:
And, as she fled, her mantle she did fall:
Which Lion vile with bloody mouth did stain.
Anon comes Pyramus, sweet youth, and tall,
And finds his trusty Thisby's mantle slain:
Whereat, with blade, with bloody blameful blade,
He bravely broached his boiling bloody breast.
And Thisby, tarrying in mulberry shade,
His dagger drew, and died. For all the rest,
Let Lion, Moonshine, Wall, and lovers twain,
At large discourse, while here they do remain.'

THESEUS. I wonder if the lion be to speak.

DEMETRIUS. No wonder, my lord: one lion may, when many asses do. Exeunt all save Wall and Pyramus

Wall steps forward

WALL. 'In this same interlude it doth befall
That I, one Snout by name, present a wall:
And such a wall, as I would have you think,
That had in it a crannied hole or chink:
Through which the lovers, Pyramus and Thisby,
Did whisper often very secretly....
This loam, this rough-cast, and this stone, doth show
That I am that same wall; the truth is so.
And this the cranny is, right and sinister,
Through which the fearful lovers are to whisper.'

THESEUS. Would you desire lime and hair to speak better?

DEMETRIUS. It is the wittiest partition that ever I heard discourse, my lord.

Pyramus steps forward

THESEUS. Pyramus draws near the wall: silence!

PYRAMUS. 'O grim-looked night! O night with hue so black!
O night, which ever art when day is not:
O night, O night, alack, alack, alack,
I fear my Thisby's promise is forgot!
And thou, O wall! O sweet, O lovely wall!
That stand'st between her father's ground and mine,
Thou wall, O wall! O sweet and lovely wall!
Show me thy chink to blink through with mine eyne. Wall obeys
Thanks, courteous wall. Jove shield thee well for this!
But what see I? No Thisby do I see.
O wicked wall, through whom I see no bliss,
Cursed be thy stones for thus deceiving me!'

THESEUS. The wall, methinks, being sensible, should curse again.

PYRAMUS. No, in truth, sir, he should not. 'Deceiving me' is Thisby's cue: she is to enter now, and I am to spy her through the wall. You shall see, it will fall pat as I told you. Yonder she comes.

Enter Thisby

THISBY. 'O wall! full often hast thou heard my moans,
For parting my fair Pyramus and me.
My cherry lips have often kissed thy stones;
Thy stones with lime and hair knit up in thee.'

PYRAMUS. 'I see a voice: now will I to the chink,
To spy an I can hear my Thisby's face.
Thisby!'
THISBY. 'My love thou art my love, I think.'
PYRAMUS. 'Think what thou wilt, I am thy lover's grace;
And, like Limander, am I trusty still.'
THISBY. 'And I like Helen, till the Fates me kill.'
PYRAMUS. 'Not Shafalus to Procrus was so true.'
THISBY. 'As Shafalus to Procrus, I to you.'
PYRAMUS. 'O! kiss me through the hole of this vile wall.'
THISBY. 'I kiss the wall's hole, not your lips at all.'
PYRAMUS. 'Wilt thou at Ninny's tomb meet me straightway?'
THISBY. ''Tide life, 'tide death, I come without delay.'

Exeunt Pyramus and Thisby

WALL. 'Thus have I, Wall, my part dischargéd so;
And being done, thus Wall away doth go.'

Exit Wall

THESEUS. Now is the moon used between the two neighbours.

DEMETRIUS. No remedy, my lord, when walls are so wilful to hear without warning.

HIPPOLYTA. This is the silliest stuff that ever I heard.

THESEUS. The best in this kind are but shadows: and the worst are no worse, if imagination amend them.

HIPPOLYTA. It must be your imagination then; and not theirs.

THESEUS. If we imagine no worse of them than they of themselves, they may pass for excellent men. Here come two noble beasts, in a moon and a lion.

Enter Lion and Moonshine

LION. 'You ladies, you, whose gentle hearts do fear
The smallest monstrous mouse that creeps on floor,
May now perchance both quake and tremble here,
When lion rough in wildest rage doth roar.
Then know that I, as Snug the joiner am
A lion fell, nor else no lion's dam.
For if I should as lion come in strife
Into this place, 'twere pity on my life.'

THESEUS. A very gentle beast, and of a good conscience.

DEMETRIUS. The very best at a beast, my lord, that e'er I saw.

LYSANDER. This lion is a very fox for his valour.

THESEUS. True: and a goose for his discretion.

DEMETRIUS. Not so, my lord, for his valour cannot carry his discretion; and the fox carries the goose.

THESEUS. His discretion, I am sure, cannot carry his valour, for the goose carries not the fox. It is well: leave it to his discretion, and let us listen to the moon.

MOONSHINE. 'This lanthorn doth the hornéd moon present'—

DEMETRIUS. He should have worn the horns on his head.

THESEUS. He is no crescent, and his horns are invisible within the circumference.

MOONSHINE. 'This lanthorn doth the hornéd moon present,
Myself the man i'th' moon do seem to be.'

THESEUS. This is the greatest error of all the rest: the man should be put into the lantern. How is it else the man i'th' moon?

DEMETRIUS. He dares not come there for the candle—for, you see, it is already in snuff.

HIPPOLYTA. I am aweary of this moon. Would he would change!

THESEUS. It appears, by his small light of discretion, that he is in the wane: but yet, in courtesy, in all reason, we must stay the time.

LYSANDER. Proceed, Moon.

MOONSHINE. All that I have to say, is to tell you that the lanthorn is the moon, I the man i'th' moon, this thorn-bush my thorn-bush, and this dog my dog.

DEMETRIUS. Why, all these should be in the lantern; for all these are in the moon. But, silence; here comes Thisby.

Enter Thisby

THISBY. 'This is old Ninny's tomb. Where is my love?'
LION [roars]. 'Oh'— Thisby runs away

DEMETRIUS. Well roared, Lion.

THESEUS. Well run, Thisby.

HIPPOLYTA. Well shone, Moon. Truly, the moon shines with a good grace.

Lion paws Thisby's mantle

THESEUS. Well moused, Lion.

DEMETRIUS. And then came Pyramus.

Enter Pyramus; exit Lion

LYSANDER. And so the lion vanished.

PYRAMUS. 'Sweet moon, I thank thee for thy sunny beams.
I thank thee, moon, for shining now so bright.
For, by thy gracious, golden, glittering gleams,
I trust to take of truest Thisby sight.
But stay . . . O spite!
But mark, poor knight,
What dreadful dole is here!
Eyes, do you see?
How can it be?
O dainty duck, O dear!
Thy mantle good,
What, stained with blood?
Approach, ye Furies fell!
O Fates, come, come,
Cut thread and thrum,
Quail, crush, conclude, and quell!'

THESEUS. This passion—and the death of a dear friend—would go near to make a man look sad.

HIPPOLYTA. Beshrew my heart, but I pity the man.

PYRAMUS. 'O wherefore, Nature, didst thou lions frame?
Since lion vile hath here deflowered my dear.
Which is—no, no—which was the fairest dame
That lived, that loved, that liked, that looked with cheer.
Come, tears, confound;
Out, sword, and wound
The pap of Pyramus:
Ay, that left pap,
Where heart doth hop. . . .

He stabs himself

Thus die I, thus, thus, thus. . . .
Now am I dead,
Now am I fled,
My soul is in the sky.

Tongue, lose thy light!
Moon, take thy flight!
Exit Moonshine
Now die, die, die, die, die.' He dies

DEMETRIUS. No die, but an ace, for him—for he is but one.

LYSANDER. Less than an ace, man—for he is dead, he is nothing.

THESEUS. With the help of a surgeon, he might yet recover, and prove an ass.

HIPPOLYTA. How chance Moonshine is gone before Thisby comes back and finds her lover?

THESEUS. She will find him by starlight. Here she comes, and her passion ends the play.

Enter Thisby

HIPPOLYTA. Methinks she should not use a long one for such a Pyramus: I hope she will be brief.

DEMETRIUS. A mote will turn the balance, which Pyramus, which Thisby, is the better: he for a man, God warr'nt us; she for a woman, God bless us.

LYSANDER. She hath spied him already with those sweet eyes.

DEMETRIUS. And thus she means, videlicet:—

THISBY. 'Asleep, my love?
What, dead, my dove?
O Pyramus, arise,
Speak, speak. Quite dumb?
Dead, dead? A tomb
Must cover thy sweet eyes.
These lily lips,
This cherry nose,
These yellow cowslip cheeks,
Are gone, are gone:
Lovers, make moan:
His eyes were green as leeks.
O Sisters Three,
Come, come, to me,
With hands as pale as milk;
Lay them in gore,
Since you have shore
With shears his thread of silk.
Tongue, not a word:
Come, trusty sword,
Come, blade, my breast imbrue . . .
She stabs herself
And farewell, friends:
Thus Thisby ends:
Adieu, adieu, adieu.'
She dies

THESEUS. Moonshine and Lion are left to bury the dead.

DEMETRIUS. Ay, and Wall too.

LION. No, I assure you, the wall is down that parted their fathers. Will it please you to see the Epilogue, or to hear a Bergomask dance between two of our company?

THESEUS. No Epilogue, I pray you—for your play needs no excuse. Never excuse; for when the players are all dead, there need none to be blamed. Marry, if he that writ it had played Pyramus and hanged himself in Thisby's garter, it would have been a fine tragedy: and so it is truly, and very notably discharged.... But come, your Bergomask: let your Epilogue alone.

Moonshine and Wall dance the Bergomask and go out; Theseus rises

The iron tongue of midnight hath told twelve!
Lovers, to bed—'tis almost fairy time.
I fear we shall out-sleep the coming morn,
As much as we this night have overwatched.
This palpable-gross play hath well beguiled
The heavy gait of night. Sweet friends, to bed.
A fortnight hold we this solemnity,
In nightly revels, and new jollity.
The Duke leads Hippolyta out, followed by the lovers, and the rest of the court

Puck appears

PUCK. Now the hungry lion roars,
And the wolf behowls the moon;
Whilst the heavy ploughman snores,
All with weary task fordone.
Now the wasted brands do glow,
Whilst the screech-owl, screeching loud,
Puts the wretch that lies in woe
In remembrance of a shroud.
Now it is the time of night,
That the graves, all gaping wide,
Every one lets forth his sprite,
In the church-way paths to glide.
And we fairies, that do run
By the triple Hecate's team
From the presence of the sun,
Following darkness like a dream,
Now are frolic. Not a mouse
Shall disturb this hallowed house....
I am sent with broom before,
To sweep the dust behind the door.

Oberon, Titania and the fairy-host enter

OBERON. Through the house give glimmering light,
By the dead and drowsy fire;
Every elf and fairy sprite
Hop as light as bird from briar;
And this ditty after me
Sing, and dance it trippingly.

TITANIA. First rehearse your song by rote,
To each word a warbling note;
Hand in hand, with fairy grace,
Will we sing and bless this place.

All the Fairies sing and dance

The Song

Now, until the break of day,
Through this house each fairy stray.
To the best bride-bed will we:
Which by us shall blessèd be:
And the issue, there create
Ever shall be fortunate:
So shall all the couples three
Ever true in loving be:
And the blots of Nature's hand
Shall not in their issue stand.
Never mole, hare-lip, nor scar,
Nor mark prodigious, such as are
Despisèd in nativity,
Shall upon their children be.
With this field-dew consecrate,

Every fairy take his gait,
And each several chamber bless,
Through this palace, with sweet peace;
And the owner of it blest
Ever shall in safety rest.
Trip away:
Make no stay:
Meet me all by break of day.

They go

EPILOGUE

Spoken by Puck

If we shadows have offended,
Think but this, and all is mended,
That you have but slumb'red here
While these visions did appear.
And this weak and idle theme,
No more yielding but a dream,
Gentles, do not reprehend.
If you pardon, we will mend.
And, as I am an honest Puck,
If we have unearnéd luck
Now to 'scape the serpent's tongue,
We will make amends ere long:
Else the Puck a liar call.
So, good night unto you all.
Give me your hands, if we be friends:
And Robin shall restore amends.

The Merchant of Venice

ACT 1

Scene I: A quay in Venice

Antonio, Salerio, and Solanio approach

ANTONIO. In sooth I know not why I am so sad,
It wearies me, you say it wearies you;
But how I caught it, found it, or came by it,
What stuff'tis made of, whereof it is born,
I am to learn:
And such a want-wit sadness makes of me,
That I have much ado to know myself.
SALERIO. Your mind is tossing on the ocean,
There, where your argosies with portly sail—
Like signiors and rich burghers on the flood,
Or as it were the pageants of the sea—
Do overpeer the petty traffickers,
That curtsy to them, do them reverence,
As they fly by them with their woven wings.
SOLANIO. Believe me, sir, had I such venture forth,
The better part of my affections would
Be with my hopes abroad. I should be still
Plucking the grass to know where sits the wind,
Piring in maps for ports and piers and roads:
And every object that might make me fear
Misfortune to my ventures, out of doubt,
Would make me sad.
SALERIO. My wind, cooling my broth.
Would blow me to an ague when I thought
What harm a wind too great might do at sea.
I should not see the sandy hour-glass run
But I should think of shallows and of flats,
And see my wealthy Andrew docked in sand,
Vailing her high-top lower than her ribs
To kiss her burial ... Should I go to church
And see the holy edifice of stone,
And not bethink me straight of dangerous rocks,
Which touching but my gentle vessel's side
Would scatter all her spices on the stream,
Enrobe the roaring waters with my silks,
And, in a word, but even now worth this,
And now worth nothing? Shall I have the thought
To think on this, and shall I lack the thought
That such a thing bechanced would make me sad?
But tell not me—I know Antonio
Is sad to think upon his merchandise.
ANTONIO. Believe me, no—I thank my fortune for it—
My ventures are not in one bottom trusted,
Nor to one place; nor is my whole estate
Upon the fortune of this present year:
Therefore my merchandise makes me not sad.
SOLANIO. Why then you are in love.
ANTONIO. Fie, fie!
SOLANIO. Not in love neither? then let us say you are sad
Because you are not merry; and 'twere as easy
For you to laugh and leap, and say you are merry,
Because you are not sad. Now, by two-headed Janus,
Nature hath framed strange fellows in her time:
Some that will evermore peep through their eyes,
And laugh like parrots at a bag-piper;
And other of such vinegar aspect,
That they'll not show their teeth in way of smile,
Though Nestor swear the jest be laughable ...

Bassanio, Lorenzo, and Gratiano approach

Here comes Bassanio, your most noble kinsman,
Gratiano, and Lorenzo ... Fare ye well,
We leave you now with better company.
SALERIO. I would have stayed till I had made you merry,
If worthier friends had not prevented me.
ANTONIO. Your worth is very dear in my regard.
I take it your own business calls on you,
And you embrace th'occasion to depart.
SALERIO. Good morrow, my good lords.
BASSANIO. Good signiors both, when shall we laugh? say when?
You grow exceeding strange: must it be so?
SALERIO. We'll make our leisures to attend on yours.
Salerio and Solanio depart
LORENZO. My Lord Bassanio, since you have found Antonio,
We two will leave you, but at dinner-time
I pray you have in mind where we must meet.
BASSANIO. I will not fail you.
GRATIANO. You look not well, Signior Antonio,
You have too much respect upon the world:
They lose it that do buy it with much care,
Believe me you are marvellously changed.
ANTONIO. I hold the world but as the world, Gratiano—
A stage, where every man must play a part,
And mine a sad one.
GRATIANO. Let me play the fool,
With mirth and laughter let old wrinkles come,
And let my liver rather heat with wine,
Than my heart cool with mortifying groans.
Why should a man, whose blood is warm within,
Sit like his grandsire cut in alabaster?
Sleep when he wakes? and creep into the jaundice
By being peevish? I tell thee what, Antonio—
I love thee, and it is my love that speaks—
There are a sort of men whose visages
Do cream and mantle like a standing pond,
And do a wilful stillness entertain,
With purpose to be dressed in an opinion
Of wisdom, gravity, profound conceit,
As who should say, 'I am Sir Oracle,
And when I ope my lips let no dog bark'....
O, my Antonio, I do know of these
That therefore only are reputed wise
For saying nothing ... when, I am very sure,
If they should speak, would almost damn those ears
Which, hearing them, would call their brothers fools.
I'll tell thee more of this another time.
But fish not with this melancholy bait
For this fool gudgeon, this opinion ...

Come, good Lorenzo. Fare ye well awhile,
I'll end my exhortation after dinner.
LORENZO. Well, we will leave you then till dinner-time.
I must be one of these same dumb wise men,
For Gratiano never lets me speak.
GRATIANO. Well, keep me company but two years mo,
Thou shalt not know the sound of thine own tongue.
ANTONIO. Fare you well. I'll grow a talker for this gear.
GRATIANO. Thanks, i'faith—for silence is only commendable
In a neat's tongue dried, and a maid not vendible.
Gratiano and Lorenzo go
ANTONIO. Is that any thing now?

BASSANIO. Gratiano speaks an infinite deal of nothing, more than any man in all Venice. His reasons are as two grains of wheat hid in two bushels of chaff: you shall seek all day ere you find them, and when you have them they are not worth the search.

ANTONIO. Well, tell me now what lady is the same
To whom you swore a secret pilgrimage,
That you to-day promised to tell me of?
BASSANIO. 'Tis not unknown to you, Antonio,
How much I have disabled mine estate,
By something showing a more swelling port
Than my faint means would grant continuance:
Nor do I now make moan to be abridged
From such a noble rate, but my chief care
Is to come fairly off from the great debts
Wherein my time, something too prodigal,
Hath left me gaged. To you, Antonio,
I owe the most in money and in love,
And from your love I have a warranty
To unburthen all my plots and purposes
How to get clear of all the debts I owe.
ANTONIO. I pray you, good Bassanio, let me know it,
And if it stand, as you yourself still do,
Within the eye of honour, be assured,
My purse, my person, my extremest means,
Lie all unlocked to your occasions.
BASSANIO. In my school-days, when I had lost one shaft,
I shot his fellow of the self-same flight
The self-same way, with more advisèd watch,
To find the other forth, and by adventuring both,
I oft found both: I urge this childhood proof,
Because what follows is pure innocence....
I owe you much, and, like a wilful youth,
That which I owe is lost—but if you please
To shoot another arrow that self way
Which you did shoot the first, I do not doubt,
As I will watch the aim, or to find both,
Or bring your latter hazard back again,
And thankfully rest debtor for the first.
ANTONIO. You know me well, and herein spend but time
To wind about my love with circumstance,
And out of doubt you do me now more wrong
In making question of my uttermost
Than if you had made waste of all I have:
Then do but say to me what I should do
That in your knowledge may by me be done,
And I am prest unto it: therefore, speak.
BASSANIO. In Belmont is a lady richly left,
And she is fair, and, fairer than that word,
Of wondrous virtues—sometimes from her eyes
I did receive fair speechless messages.
Her name is Portia, nothing undervalued
To Cato's daughter, Brutus' Portia;
Nor is the wide world ignorant of her worth,
For the four winds blow in from every coast
Renownéd suitors, and her sunny locks
Hang on her temples like a golden fleece,
Which makes her seat of Belmont Colchos' strand,
And many Jasons come in quest of her.
O my Antonio, had I but the means
To hold a rival place with one of them,
I have a mind presages me such thrift,
That I should questionless be fortunate.
ANTONIO. Thou know'st that all my fortunes are at sea,
Neither have I money nor commodity
To raise a present sum, therefore go forth,
Try what my credit can in Venice do—
That shall be racked, even to the uttermost,
To furnish thee to Belmont, to fair Portia.
Go, presently inquire, and so will I,
Where money is, and I no question make
To have it of my trust or for my sake. They go

Scene 2: The hall of Portia's house at Belmont

Enter Portia and her waiting-woman Nerissa

PORTIA. By my troth, Nerissa, my little body is aweary of this great world.

NERISSA. You would be, sweet madam, if your miseries were in the same abundance as your good fortunes are: and yet for aught I see, they are as sick that surfeit with too much as they that starve with nothing; it is no mean happiness therefore to be seated in the mean—superfluity comes sooner by white hairs, but competency lives longer.

PORTIA. Good sentences, and well pronounced.

NERISSA. They would be better if well followed.

PORTIA. If to do were as easy as to know what were good to do, chapels had been churches, and poor men's cottages princes' palaces. It is a good divine that follows his own instructions. I can easier teach twenty what were good to be done, than be one of the twenty to follow mine own teaching ... The brain may devise laws for the blood, but a hot temper leaps o'er a cold decree—such a hare is madness the youth, to skip o'er the meshes of good counsel the cripple ... But this reasoning is not in the fashion to choose me a husband. O me, the word 'choose'! I may neither choose whom I would nor refuse whom I dislike—so is the will of a living daughter curbed by the will of a dead father ... Is it not hard, Nerissa, that I cannot choose one, nor refuse none?

NERISSA. Your father was ever virtuous, and holy men at their death have good inspirations, therefore the lottery that he hath devised in these three chests of gold, silver and lead, whereof who chooses his meaning chooses you, will no doubt never be chosen by any rightly, but one whom you shall rightly love. But what warmth is there in your affection towards any of these princely suitors that are already come?

PORTIA. I pray thee over-name them, and as thou namest them, I will describe them, and according to my description level at my affection.

NERISSA. First there is the Neapolitan prince.

PORTIA. Ay, that's a colt indeed, for he doth nothing but talk of his horse, and he makes it a great appropriation to his own good parts that he can shoe him himself: I am much afeard my lady his mother played false with a smith.

NERISSA. Then is there the County Palatine.

PORTIA. He doth nothing but frown, as who should say, 'An you will not have me, choose!' He hears merry tales, and smiles not. I fear he will prove the weeping philosopher when he grows old, being so full of unmannerly sadness in his youth. I had rather be married to a death's-head with a bone in his mouth than to either of these: God defend me from these two!

NERISSA. How say you by the French lord, Monsieur Le Bon?

PORTIA. God made him, and therefore let him pass for a man—In truth, I know it is a sin to be a mocker, but he! why, he hath a horse better than the Neapolitan's, a better bad habit of frowning than the Count Palatine—he is every man in no man—if a throstle sing, he falls straight a cap'ring—he will fence with his own shadow. If I should marry him, I should marry twenty husbands. If he would despise me I would forgive him, for if he love me to madness, I shall never requite him.

NERISSA. What say you then to Falconbridge, the young baron of England?

PORTIA. You know I say nothing to him, for he understands not me, nor I him: he hath neither Latin, French, nor Italian, and you will come into the court and swear that I have a poor pennyworth in the English. He is a proper man's picture, but, alas! who can converse with a dumb-show? How oddly he is suited! I think he bought his doublet in Italy, his round hose in France, his bonnet in Germany, and his behaviour every where.

NERISSA. What think you of the Scottish lord, his neighbour?

PORTIA. That he hath a neighbourly charity in him, for he borrowed a box of the ear of the Englishman, and swore he would pay him again when he was able: I think the Frenchman became his surety, and sealed under for another.

NERISSA. How like you the young German, the Duke of Saxony's nephew?

PORTIA. Very vilely in the morning when he is sober, and most vilely in the afternoon when he is drunk: when he is best, he is a little worse than a man, and when he is worst, he is little better than a beast. An the worst fall that ever fell, I hope I shall make shift to go without him.

NERISSA. If he should offer to choose, and choose the right casket, you should refuse to perform your father's will, if you should refuse to accept him.

PORTIA. Therefore, for fear of the worst, I pray thee set a deep glass of rhenish wine on the contrary casket, for if the devil be within, and that temptation without, I know he will choose it. I will do any thing, Nerissa, ere I will be married to a sponge.

NERISSA. You need not fear, lady, the having any of these lords—they have acquainted me with their determinations, which is indeed to return to their home, and to trouble you with no more suit, unless you may be won by some other sort than your father's imposition depending on the caskets.

PORTIA. If I live to be as old as Sibylla, I will die as chaste as Diana, unless I be obtained by the manner of my father's will. I am glad this parcel of wooers are so reasonable, for there is not one among them but I dote on his very absence: and I pray God grant them a fair departure.

NERISSA. Do you not remember, lady, in your father's time, a Venetian, a scholar and a soldier, that came hither in company of the Marquis of Montferrat?

PORTIA. Yes, yes, it was Bassanio, as I think so was he called.

NERISSA. True, madam, he, of all the men that ever my foolish eyes looked upon, was the best deserving a fair lady.

PORTIA. I remember him well, and I remember him worthy of thy praise.

A servant enters

How now! what news?

SERVANT. The four strangers seek for you, madam, to take their leave: and there is a forerunner come from a fifth, the Prince of Morocco, who brings word the prince his master will be here to-night.

PORTIA. If I could bid the fifth welcome with so good heart as I can bid the other four farewell, I should be glad of his approach: if he have the condition of a saint, and the complexion of a devil, I had rather he should shrive me than wive me.
Come, Nerissa. Sirrah, go before:
Whiles we shut the gate upon one wooer, another knocks at the door. They go

Scene 3: A street in Venice

Bassanio and Shylock

SHYLOCK. Three thousand ducats—well.

BASSANIO. Ay, sir, for three months.

SHYLOCK. For three months—well.

BASSANIO. For the which, as I told you, Antonio shall be bound.

SHYLOCK. Antonio shall become bound—well.

BASSANIO. May you stead me? Will you pleasure me? Shall I know your answer?

SHYLOCK. Three thousand ducats for three months—and Antonio bound.

BASSANIO. Your answer to that.

SHYLOCK. Antonio is a good man.

BASSANIO. Have you heard any imputation to the contrary?

SHYLOCK. Ho no, no, no, no . . . my meaning in saying he is a good man, is to have you understand me that he is sufficient. Yet his means are in supposition: he hath an argosy bound to Tripolis, another to the Indies; I understand moreover upon the Rialto, he hath a third at Mexico, a fourth for England, and other ventures he hath squandered abroad. But ships are but boards, sailors but men—there be land-rats and water-rats, land-thieves and water-thieves—I mean pirates—and then there is the peril of waters, winds, and rocks. The man is, notwithstanding, sufficient. Three thousand ducats—I think I may take his bond.

BASSANIO. Be assured you may.

SHYLOCK. I will be assured I may: and, that I may be assured, I will bethink me—may I speak with Antonio?

BASSANIO. If it please you to dine with us.

SHYLOCK. Yes, to smell pork, to eat of the habitation which your prophet the Nazarite conjured the devil into! I will buy with you, sell with you, talk with you, walk with you, and so following: but I will not eat with you, drink with you, nor pray with you... What news on the Rialto? Who is he comes here?

Antonio approaches

BASSANIO. This is Signior Antonio.
He draws Antonio aside
SHYLOCK [aside]. How like a fawning publican he looks!
I hate him for he is a Christian:
But more for that in low simplicity
He lends out money gratis, and brings down
The rate of usance here with us in Venice.
If I can catch him once upon the hip,
I will feed fat the ancient grudge I bear him.
He hates our sacred nation, and he rails,
Even there where merchants most do congregate,
On me, my bargains, and my well-won thrift,
Which he calls interest. Cursèd be my tribe,
If I forgive him!
BASSANIO. Shylock, do you hear?
SHYLOCK. I am debating of my present store,
And by the near guess of my memory
I cannot instantly raise up the gross
Of full three thousand ducats: what of that?
Tubal a wealthy Hebrew of my tribe
Will furnish me; but soft—how many months
Do you desire? [to Antonio] Rest you fair, good signior,
Your worship was the last man in our mouths.
ANTONIO. Shylock, albeit I neither lend nor borrow
By taking nor giving of excess,
Yet to supply the ripe wants of my friend
I'll break a custom... [to Bassanio] Is he yet possessed
How much ye would?
SHYLOCK. Ay, ay, three thousand ducats.
ANTONIO. And for three months.
SHYLOCK. I had forgot—three months—you told me so.
Well then, your bond: and let me see—but hear you,
Methoughts you said you neither lend nor borrow
Upon advantage.
ANTONIO. I do never use it.
SHYLOCK. When Jacob grazed his uncle Laban's sheep,
This Jacob from our holy Abram was
(As his wise mother wrought in his behalf)
The third possessor; ay, he was the third—
ANTONIO. And what of him? did he take interest?
SHYLOCK. No, not take interest—not as you would say
Directly interest. Mark what Jacob did.
When Laban and himself were compromised
That all the eanlings which were streaked and pied
Should fall as Jacob's hire, the ewes, being rank
In end of autumn, turnèd to the rams,
And when the work of generation was
Between these woolly breeders in the act,
The skilful shepherd pilled me certain wands,
And, in the doing of the deed of kind,
He stuck them up before the fulsome ewes,
Who, then conceiving, did in eaning time
Fall parti-coloured lambs, and those were Jacob's.
This was a way to thrive, and he was blest:
And thrift is blessing if men steal it not.
ANTONIO. This was a venture, sir, that Jacob served for—
A thing not in his power to bring to pass,
But swayed and fashioned by the hand of heaven.
Was this inserted to make interest good?
Or is your gold and silver ewes and rams?
SHYLOCK. I cannot tell, I make it breed as fast!
But note me, signior.
ANTONIO. Mark you this, Bassanio,
The devil can cite Scripture for his purpose.
An evil soul, producing holy witness,
Is like a villain with a smiling cheek,
A goodly apple rotten at the heart.
O, what a goodly outside falsehood hath!
SHYLOCK. Three thousand ducats—'tis a good round sum.
Three months from twelve, then let me see the rate.
ANTONIO. Well, Shylock, shall we be beholding to you?
SHYLOCK. Signior Antonio, many a time and oft
In the Rialto you have rated me
About my moneys and my usances:
Still have I borne it with a patient shrug,
For suff'rance is the badge of all our tribe.
You call me misbeliever, cut-throat dog,
And spit upon my Jewish gaberdine,
And all for use of that which is mine own.
Well then, it now appears you need my help:
Go to then, you come to me, and you say,
'Shylock, we would have moneys'—you say so!
You that did void your rheum upon my beard,
And foot me as you spurn a stranger cur
Over your threshold. Moneys is your suit.
What should I say to you? Should I not say
'Hath a dog money? is it possible
A cur can lend three thousand ducats?' or Shall I bend low, and in a bondman's key,
With bated breath, and whisp'ring humbleness,
Say this:
'Fair sir, you spit on me on Wednesday last—
You spurned me such a day—another time
You called me dog: and for these courtesies
I'll lend you thus much moneys'?
ANTONIO. I am as like to call thee so again,
To spit on thee again, to spurn thee too.
If thou wilt lend this money, lend it not
As to thy friends—for when did friendship take
A breed for barren metal of his friend?—
But lend it rather to thine enemy,
Who if he break, thou mayst with better face
Exact the penalty.
SHYLOCK. Why, look you, how you storm!
I would be friends with you, and have your love,
Forget the shames that you have stained me with,
Supply your present wants, and take no doit
Of usance for my moneys, and you'll not hear me:
This is kind I offer.
ANTONIO. This were kindness!
SHYLOCK. This kindness will I show.
Go with me to a notary, seal me there
Your single bond, and, in a merry sport,

If you repay me not on such a day,
In such a place, such sum or sums as are
Expressed in the condition, let the forfeit
Be nominated for an equal pound
Of your fair flesh, to be cut off and taken
In what part of your body pleaseth me.
ANTONIO. Content, in faith—I'll seal to such a bond,
And say there is much kindness in the Jew.
BASSANIO. You shall not seal to such a bond for me,
I'll rather dwell in my necessity.
ANTONIO. Why, fear not man, I will not forfeit it.
Within these two months, that's a month before
This bond expires, I do expect return
Of thrice three times the value of this bond.
SHYLOCK. O father Abram! what these Christians are,
Whose own hard dealing teaches them suspect
The thoughts of others. Pray you, tell me this—
If he should break his day, what should I gain
By the exaction of the forfeiture?
A pound of man's flesh, taken from a man,
Is not so estimable, profitable neither,
As flesh of muttons, beefs, or goats. I say,
To buy his favour, I extend this friendship.
If he will take it, so—if not, adieu,
And, for my love, I pray you wrong me not.
ANTONIO. Yes, Shylock, I will seal unto this bond.
SHYLOCK. Then meet me forthwith at the notary's,
Give him direction for this merry bond,
And I will go and purse the ducats straight,
See to my house left in the fearful guard
Of an unthrifty knave; and presently
I will be with you.
ANTONIO. Hie thee, gentle Jew....
Shylock goes
The Hebrew will turn Christian—he grows kind.
BASSANIO. I like not fair terms and a villain's mind.
ANTONIO. Come on—in this there can be no dismay,
My ships come home a month before the day.
They go

ACT 2

Scene 1: Portia's house at Belmont

Enter the Prince of Morocco, a tawny Moor all in white, and three or four followers accordingly, with Portia, Nerissa, and their train

MOROCCO. Mislike me not for my complexion,
The shadowed livery of the burnished sun,
To whom I am a neighbour and near bred.
Bring me the fairest creature northward born,
Where Phœbus' fire scarce thaws the icicles,
And let us make incision for your love,
To prove whose blood is reddest, his or mine.
I tell thee, lady, this aspect of mine
Hath feared the valiant. By my love, I swear
The best-regarded virgins of our clime
Have loved it too. I would not change this hue,
Except to steal your thoughts, my gentle queen.
PORTIA. In terms of choice I am not solely led
By nice direction of a maiden's eyes:
Besides, the lott'ry of my destiny
Bars me the right of voluntary choosing:
But if my father had not scanted me
And hedged me by his wit, to yield myself
His wife who wins me by that means I told you,
Yourself, renownéd prince, then stood as fair
As any comer I have looked on yet
For my affection.
MOROCCO. Even for that I thank you.
Therefore, I pray you, lead me to the caskets
To try my fortune. By this scimitar—
That slew the Sophy and a Persian prince
That won three fields of Sultan Solyman—
I would o'erstare the sternest eyes that look:
Outbrave the heart most daring on the earth:
Pluck the young sucking cubs from the she-bear,
Yea, mock the lion when a' roars for prey,
To win thee, lady. But alas the while!
If Hercules and Lichas play at dice
Which is the better man, the greater throw
May turn by fortune from the weaker hand:
So is Alcides, beaten by his page,
And so may I, blind fortune leading me,
Miss that which one unworthier may attain,
And die with grieving.
PORTIA. You must take your chance—
And either not attempt to choose at all,
Or swear, before you choose, if you choose wrong,
Never to speak to lady afterward
In way of marriage. Therefore be advised.
MOROCCO. Nor will not. Come, bring me unto my chance.
PORTIA. First, forward to the temple. After dinner
Your hazard shall be made.
MOROCCO. Good fortune then!
To make me blest or cursed'st among men.
They go

Scene 2: A street in Venice

Enter Lancelot Gobbo

LANCELOT. Certainly my conscience will serve me to run from this Jew my master. The fiend is at mine elbow, and tempts me, saying to me, 'Gobbo, Lancelot Gobbo, good Lancelot,' or 'good Gobbo,' or 'good Lancelot Gobbo, use your legs, take the start, run away.' My conscience says, 'No; take heed honest Lancelot, take heed honest Gobbo,' or as aforesaid, 'honest Lancelot Gobbo, do not run, scorn running with thy heels'. Well, the most courageous fiend bids me pack. 'Fia!' says the fiend, 'away!' says the fiend, 'for the heavens, rouse up a brave mind,' says the fiend, 'and run'. Well, my conscience, hanging about the neck of my heart, says very wisely to me: 'My honest friend, Lancelot, being an honest man's son,'—or rather an honest woman's son—for indeed my father did something smack, something grow to; he had a kind of taste; well, my conscience says, 'Lancelot, budge not.' 'Budge,' says the fiend. 'Budge not,' says my conscience. 'Conscience,' say I, 'you counsel well.' 'Fiend,' say I, 'you counsel well.' To be ruled by my conscience, I should stay with the Jew my master, who (God bless the mark!) is a kind of devil; and to run away from the Jew, I should be ruled by the fiend, who, saving your reverence, is the devil himself. Certainly, the Jew is the very devil incarnation—and, in my conscience, my conscience is but a kind of hard conscience, to offer to counsel me to stay with the Jew. The fiend gives the more friendly counsel. I will run, fiend. My heels are at your commandment, I will run.

Old Gobbo enters with a basket

OLD GOBBO. Master young-man, you I pray you, which is the way to Master Jew's?

LANCELOT. [aside]. O heavens, this is my true-begotten father, who being more than sand-blind, high gravel-blind, knows me not. I will try confusions with him.

OLD GOBBO. Master, young gentleman, I pray you which is the way to Master Jew's?

LANCELOT. Turn up on your right hand at the next turning, but at the next turning of all on your left; marry at the very next turning turn of no hand, but turn down indirectly to the Jew's house.

OLD GOBBO. Be God's sonties, 'twill be a hard way to hit. Can you tell me whether one Lancelot that dwells with him, dwell with him or no?

LANCELOT. Talk you of young Master Lancelot?— [aside] Mark me now, now will I raise the waters! Talk you of young Master Lancelot?

OLD GOBBO. No 'master,' sir, but a poor man's son. His father, though I say't, is an honest exceeding poor man, and God be thanked well to live.

LANCELOT. Well, let his father be what a' will, we talk of young Master Lancelot.

OLD GOBBO. Your worship's friend and Lancelot, sir.

LANCELOT. But I pray you ergo old man, ergo I beseech you, talk you of young Master Lancelot.

OLD GOBBO. Of Lancelot, an't please your mastership.

LANCELOT. Ergo—Master Lancelot! Talk not of Master Lancelot, father, for the young gentleman—according to fates and destinies, and such odd sayings, the sisters three, and such branches of learning—is indeed deceased, or as you would say in plain terms, gone to heaven.

OLD GOBBO. Marry, God forbid! the boy was the very staff of my age, my very prop.

LANCELOT. Do I look like a cudgel or a hovel-post, a staff or a prop?
Do you know me, father?

OLD GOBBO. Alack the day, I know you not, young gentleman, but I pray you tell me, is my boy—God rest his soul!—alive or dead?

LANCELOT. Do you not know me, father?

OLD GOBBO. Alack, sir, I am sand-blind, I know you not.

LANCELOT. Nay, indeed, if you had your eyes, you might fail of the knowing me: it is a wise father that knows his own child. Well, old man, I will tell you news of your son. Give me your blessing. Truth will come to light, murder cannot be hid long, a man's son may, but in the end truth will out.

OLD GOBBO. Pray you, sir, stand up. I am sure you are not Lancelot, my boy.

LANCELOT. Pray you let's have no more fooling about it, but give me your blessing: I am Lancelot, your boy that was, your son that is, your child that shall be.

OLD GOBBO. I cannot think you are my son.

LANCELOT. I know not what I shall think of that: but I am Lancelot, the Jew's man, and I am sure Margery, your wife, is my mother.

OLD GOBBO. Her name is Margery, indeed. I'll be sworn, if thou be Lancelot, thou art mine own flesh and blood . . . Lord worshipped might he be! what a beard hast thou got! thou hast got more hair on thy chin than Dobbin my fill-horse has on his tail.

LANCELOT. It should seem then that Dobbin's tail grows backward. I am sure he had more hair of his tail than I have of my face, when I last saw him.

OLD GOBBO. Lord, how art thou changed! How dost thou and thy master agree? I have brought him a present. How 'gree you now?

LANCELOT. Well, well—but, for mine own part, as I have set up my rest to run away, so I will not rest till I have run some ground. My master's a very Jew—give him a present! give him a halter—I am famished in his service: you may tell every finger I have with my ribs. Father, I am glad you are come. Give me your present to one Master Bassanio, who indeed gives rare new liveries. If I serve not him, I will run as far as God has any ground. O rare fortune! here comes the man—to him, father, for I am a Jew if I serve the Jew any longer.

Bassanio approaches with Leonardo and other followers

BASSANIO [to a servant]. You may do so, but let it be so hasted that supper be ready at the farthest by five of the clock. See these letters delivered, put the liveries to making, and desire Gratiano to come anon to my lodging. The servant goes

LANCELOT. To him, father.

OLD GOBBO. God bless your worship!

BASSANIO. Gramercy, wouldst thou aught with me?

OLD GOBBO. Here's my son, sir, a poor boy—

LANCELOT. Not a poor boy, sir, but the rich Jew's man that would, sir, as my father shall specify—

OLD GOBBO. He hath a great infection, sir, as one would say to serve—

LANCELOT. Indeed the short and the long is, I serve the Jew, and have a desire as my father shall specify—

OLD GOBBO. His master and he (saving your worship's reverence) are scarce cater-cousins—

LANCELOT. To be brief, the very truth is, that the Jew having done me wrong, doth cause me as my father being I hope an old man shall frutify unto you—

OLD GOBBO. I have here a dish of doves that I would bestow upon your worship, and my suit is—

LANCELOT. In very brief, the suit is impertinent to myself, as your worship shall know by this honest old man, and though I say it, though old man, yet poor man, my father.

BASSANIO. One speak for both. What would you?

LANCELOT. Serve you, sir.

OLD GOBBO. That is the very defect of the matter, sir.

BASSANIO. I know thee well, thou hast obtained thy suit.
Shylock, thy master, spoke with me this day,
And hath preferred thee, if it be preferment
To leave a rich Jew's service, to become
The follower of so poor a gentleman.

LANCELOT. The old proverb is very well parted between my master Shylock and you, sir—you have 'the grace of God,' sir, and he hath 'enough.'

BASSANIO. Thou speak'st it well; go, father, with thy son.
Take leave of thy old master, and inquire
My lodging out. Give him a livery
More guarded than his fellows': see it done.

LANCELOT. Father, in. I cannot get a service, no! I have ne'er a tongue in my head! Well . . . [looking on his palm] if any man in Italy have a fairer table which doth offer to swear upon a book I shall have good fortune. Go to, here's a simple line of life, here's a small trifle of wives—alas, fifteen wives is nothing, eleven widows, and nine maids, is a simple coming-in for one man—and then to scape drowning thrice, and to be in peril of my life with the edge of a feather-bed. Here are simple scapes. Well, if Fortune be a woman, she's a good wench for this gear. Father, come. I'll take my leave of the Jew in the twinkling. Lancelot and Old Gobbo go

BASSANIO. I pray thee, good Leonardo, think on this.
These things being bought and orderly bestowed,
Return in haste, for I do feast to-night
My best-esteemed acquaintance. Hie thee, go.

LEONARDO. My best endeavours shall be done herein.

Gratiano enters

GRATIANO. Where's your master?
LEONARDO. Yonder, sir, he walks.
Leonardo departs
GRATIANO. Signior Bassanio!
BASSANIO. Gratiano!
GRATIANO. I have a suit to you.
BASSANIO. You have obtained it.
GRATIANO. You must not deny me—I must go with you to Belmont.
BASSANIO. Why, then you must. But hear thee Gratiano,
Thou art too wild, too rude, and bold of voice—
Parts that become thee happily enough,
And in such eyes as ours appear not faults;
But where thou art not known, why, there they show
Something too liberal. Pray thee, take pain
To allay with some cold drops of modesty
Thy skipping spirit, lest through thy wild behaviour
I be miscónstrued in the place I go to,
And lose my hopes.
GRATIANO. Signior Bassanio, hear me—
If I do not put on a sober habit,
Talk with respect, and swear but now and then,
Wear prayer-books in my pocket, look demurely,
Nay more, while grace is saying, hood mine eyes
Thus with my hat, and sigh, and say 'amen';
Use all the observance of civility,
Like one well studied in a sad ostent
To please his grandam, never trust me more.
BASSANIO. Well, we shall see your bearing.
GRATIANO. Nay, but I bar to-night, you shall not gauge me
By what we do to-night.
BASSANIO. No, that were pity,
I would entreat you rather to put on
Your boldest suit of mirth, for we have friends
That purpose merriment. But fare you well,
I have some business.
GRATIANO. And I must to Lorenzo, and the rest.
But we will visit you at supper-time. They go

Scene 3: Shylock's house

Enter Jessica and Lancelot

JESSICA. I am sorry thou wilt leave my father so—
Our house is hell, and thou, a merry devil,
Didst rob it of some taste of tediousness.
But fare thee well, there is a ducat for thee.
And, Lancelot, soon at supper shalt thou see
Lorenzo, who is thy new master's guest,
Give him this letter, do it secretly,
And so farewell: I would not have my father
See me in talk with thee.

LANCELOT. Adieu! tears exhibit my tongue. Most beautiful pagan, most sweet Jew! if a Christian do not play the knave and get thee, I am much deceived. But adieu, these foolish drops do something drown my manly spirit; adieu!
He goes

JESSICA. Farewell, good Lancelot.
Alack, what heinous sin is it in me
To be ashamed to be my father's child!
But though I am a daughter to his blood,
I am not to his manners. O Lorenzo,
If thou keep promise, I shall end this strife,
Become a Christian, and thy loving wife.
She goes

Scene 4: A street in Venice

Enter Gratiano, Lorenzo, Salerio and Solanio

LORENZO. Nay, we will slink away in supper-time,
Disguise us at my lodging, and return
All in an hour.
GRATIANO. We have not made good preparation.
SALERIO. We have not spoke as yet of torch-bearers.
SOLANIO. 'Tis vile, unless it may be quaintly ordered,
And better in my mind not undertook.
LORENZO. 'Tis now but four o'clock—we have two hours
To furnish us.

Lancelot comes up with a letter

Friend Lancelot, what's the news?
LANCELOT. An it shall please you to break up this, it shall seem to signify.
LORENZO. I know the hand. In faith 'tis a fair hand,
And whiter than the paper it writ on,
Is the fair hand that writ.
GRATIANO. Love-news, in faith.
LANCELOT. By your leave, sir.
LORENZO. Whither goest thou?
LANCELOT. Marry, sir, to bid my old master the Jew to sup to-night with my new master the Christian.
LORENZO. Hold here, take this. Tell gentle Jessica
I will not fail her—speak it privately.
Lancelot goes
Go, gentlemen,
Will you prepare you for this masque to-night?
I am provided of a torch-bearer.
SALERIO. Ay, marry, I'll be gone about it straight.
SOLANIO. And so will I.
LORENZO. Meet me and Gratiano
At Gratiano's lodging some hour hence.
SALERIO. 'Tis good we do so.
Salerio and Solanio leave
GRATIANO. Was not that letter from fair Jessica?
LORENZO. I must needs tell thee all. She hath directed
How I shall take her from her father's house,
What gold and jewels she is furnished with,
What page's suit she hath in readiness.
If e'er the Jew her father come to heaven
It will be for his gentle daughter's sake,

And never dare misfortune cross her foot
Unless she do it under this excuse—
That she is issue to a faithless Jew.
Come, go with me. Peruse this, as thou goest.
Fair Jessica shall be my torch-bearer. They go

Scene 5: The street before Shylock's house

Enter Shylock and Lancelot

SHYLOCK. Well, thou shalt see, thy eyes shall be thy judge,
The difference of old Shylock and Bassanio—
What, Jessica!—Thou shalt not gormandise,
As thou hast done with me—What, Jessica!—
And sleep and snore, and rend apparel out—
Why, Jessica, I say!
LANCELOT. Why, Jessica!
SHYLOCK. Who bids thee call? I do not bid thee call.
LANCELOT. Your worship was wont to tell me I could do nothing without bidding.

Jessica appears at the door

JESSICA. Call you? What is your will?
SHYLOCK. I am bid forth to supper, Jessica.
There are my keys ... But wherefore should I go?
I am not bid for love—they flatter me.
But yet I'll go in hate, to feed upon
The prodigal Christian. Jessica, my girl,
Look to my house. I am right loath to go:
There is some ill a-brewing towards my rest,
For I did dream of money-bags to-night.
LANCELOT. I beseech you, sir, go. My young master doth expect your reproach.
SHYLOCK. So do I his.
LANCELOT. And they have conspired together—I will not say you shall see a masque, but if you do, then it was not for nothing that my nose fell a-bleeding on Black-Monday last, at six o'clock i'th' morning, falling out that year on Ash-Wednesday was four year, in th'afternoon.
SHYLOCK. What, are there masques? Hear you me, Jessica—
Lock up my doors, and when you hear the drum
And the vile squealing of the wry-necked fife,
Clamber not you up to the casements then,
Nor thrust your head into the public street
To gaze on Christian fools with varnished faces:
But stop my house's ears, I mean my casements,
Let not the sound of shallow fopp'ry enter
My sober house. By Jacob's staff I swear
I have no mind of feasting forth to-night:
But I will go. Go you before me, sirrah—
Say I will come.
LANCELOT. I will go before sir....
Mistress, look out at window, for all this—
There will come a Christian by,
Will be worth a Jewess' eye. He goes
SHYLOCK. What says that fool of Hagar's offspring, ha?
JESSICA. His words were, 'Farewell, mistress'—nothing else.
SHYLOCK. The patch is kind enough, but a huge feeder,
Snail-slow in profit, and he sleeps by day
More than the wild-cat: drones hive not with me.
Therefore I part with him, and part with him
To one that I would have him help to waste
His borrowed purse. Well, Jessica, go in.
Perhaps I will return immediately.
Do as I bid you, shut doors after you.
Fast bind, fast find,
A proverb never stale in thrifty mind. He goes
JESSICA. Farewell—and if my fortune be not crost,
I have a father, you a daughter, lost.
She goes within

Scene 6

Enter Gratiano and Salerio, in masquing attire

GRATIANO. This is the pent-house, under which Lorenzo
Desired us to make stand.
SALERIO. His hour is almost past.
GRATIANO. And it is marvel he out-dwells his hour,
For lovers ever run before the clock.
SALERIO. O, ten times faster Venus' pigeons fly
To seal love's bonds new-made, than they are wont
To keep obligéd faith unforfeited!
GRATIANO. That ever holds: who riseth from a feast
With that keen appetite that he sits down?
Where is the horse that doth untread again
His tedious measures with the unbated fire
That he did pace them first? All things that are,
Are with more spirit chaséd than enjoyed.
How like a younger or a prodigal
The scarféd bark puts from her native bay,
Hugged and embracéd by the strumpet wind!
How like the prodigal doth she return,
With over-weathered ribs and ragged sails,
Lean, rent and beggared by the strumpet wind!

Lorenzo approaches

SALERIO. Here comes Lorenzo—more of this hereafter.
LORENZO. Sweet friends, your patience for my long abode.
Not I, but my affairs, have made you wait:
When you shall please to play the thieves for wives
I'll watch as long for you then. Approach.
Here dwells my father Jew. Ho! who's within?

A window opens above and Jessica leans out, clad as a boy

JESSICA. Who are you? Tell me, for more certainty,
Albeit I'll swear that I do know your tongue.
LORENZO. Lorenzo, and thy love.
JESSICA. Lorenzo, certain, and my love indeed,
For who love I so much? And now who knows
But you, Lorenzo, whether I am yours?
LORENZO. Heaven and thy thoughts are witness that thou art.
JESSICA. Here, catch this casket, it is worth the pains.
I am glad 'tis night, you do not look on me,
For I am much ashamed of my exchange:
But love is blind, and lovers cannot see
The pretty follies that themselves commit,
For if they could, Cupid himself would blush
To see me thus transforméd to a boy.
LORENZO. Descend, for you must be my torch-bearer.
JESSICA. What, must I hold a candle to my shames?
They in themselves, good sooth, are too too light.
Why, 'tis an office of discovery, love,
And I should be obscured.
LORENZO. So are you, sweet,
Even in the lovely garnish of a boy.
But come at once,

For the close night doth play the runaway,
And we are stayed for at Bassanio's feast.
JESSICA. I will make fast the doors, and gild myself
With some moe ducats, and be with you straight.
She closes the window
GRATIANO. Now, by my hood, a gentle and no Jew.
LORENZO. Beshrew me but I love her heartily,
For she is wise, if I can judge of her,
And fair she is, if that mine eyes be true,
And true she is, as she hath proved herself:
And therefore, like herself, wise, fair, and true,
Shall she be placéd in my constant soul.

Jessica comes from the house

What, art thou come? On, gentlemen, away—
Our masquing mates by this time for us stay.
He departs with Jessica and Salerio

Enter Antonio

ANTONIO. Who's there?
GRATIANO. Signior Antonio?
ANTONIO. Fie, fie, Gratiano! where are all the rest?
'Tis nine o'clock—our friends all stay for you.
No masque to-night, the wind is come about,
Bassanio presently will go aboard.
I have sent twenty out to seek for you.
GRATIANO. I am glad on't. I desire no more delight
Than to be under sail and gone to-night. They go

Scene 7: Portia's house at Belmont

Portia enters, with the Prince of Morocco, and their trains

PORTIA. Go, draw aside the curtains, and discover
The several caskets to this noble prince.
Now make your choice.
MOROCCO. The first, of gold, who this inscription bears:
'Who chooseth me shall gain what many men desire'.
The second, silver, which this promise carries:
'Who chooseth me shall get as much as he deserves'.
This third, dull lead, with warning all as blunt:
'Who chooseth me must give and hazard all he hath'.
How shall I know if I do choose the right?
PORTIA. The one of them contains my picture, prince.
If you choose that, then I am yours withal.
MOROCCO. Some god direct my judgement! Let me see,
I will survey th'inscriptions back again.
What says this leaden casket?
'Who chooseth me must give and hazard all he hath.'
Must give—for what? for lead? hazard for lead?
This casket threatens. Men that hazard all
Do it in hope of fair advantages:
A golden mind stoops not to shows of dross.
I'll then nor give nor hazard aught for lead.
What says the silver with her virgin hue?
'Who chooseth me shall get as much as he deserves.'
As much as he deserves! Pause there, Morocco,
And weigh thy value with an even hand.
If thou be'st rated by thy estimation,
Thou dost deserve enough—and yet enough
May not extend so far as to the lady:
And yet to be afeard of my deserving
Were but a weak disabling of myself.
As much as I deserve! Why, that's the lady.
I do in birth deserve her, and in fortunes,
In graces, and in qualities of breeding:
But more than these, in love I do deserve.
What if I strayed no further, but chose here?
Let's see once more this saying graved in gold:
'Who chooseth me shall gain what many men desire'.
Why, that's the lady—all the world desires her.
From the four corners of the earth they come,
To kiss this shrine, this mortal-breathing saint.
The Hyrcanian deserts and the vasty wilds
Of wide Arabia are as throughfares now
For princes to come view fair Portia.
The watery kingdom, whose ambitious head
Spets in the face of heaven, is no bar
To stop the foreign spirits, but they come,
As o'er a brook, to see fair Portia.
One of these three contains her heavenly picture.
Is't like that lead contains her? 'Twere damnation
To think so base a thought—it were too gross
To rib her cerecloth in the obscure grave.
Or shall I think in silver she's immured,
Being ten times undervalued to tried gold?
O sinful thought! Never so rich a gem
Was set in worse than gold. They have in England
A coin that bears the figure of an angel
Stampéd in gold, but that's insculped upon;
But here an angel in a golden bed
Lies all within.... Deliver me the key:
Here do I choose, and thrive I as I may!
PORTIA. There, take it, prince, and if my form lie there,
Then I am yours. He unlocks the golden casket
MOROCCO. O hell! what have we here?
A carrion Death, within whose empty eye
There is a written scroll! I'll read the writing.
'All that glisters is not gold,
Often have you heard that told.
Many a man his life hath sold,
But my outside to behold.
Gilded tombs do worms infold.
Had you been as wise as bold,
Young in limbs, in judgement old,
Your answer had not been inscrolled—
Fare you well, your suit is cold.'
Cold, indeed, and labour lost.
Then, farewell heat, and welcome frost.
Portia, adieu! I have too grieved a heart
To take a tedious leave: thus losers part.
He departs with his retinue
PORTIA. A gentle riddance. Draw the curtains, go.
Let all of his complexion choose me so. They go

Scene 8: A street in Venice

Enter Salerio and Solanio

SALERIO. Why man, I saw Bassanio under sail,
With him is Gratiano gone along;
And in their ship I am sure Lorenzo is not.
SOLANIO. The villain Jew with outcries raised the duke,
Who went with him to search Bassanio's ship.
SALERIO. He came too late, the ship was under sail,
But there the duke was given to understand

That in a gondola were seen together
Lorenzo and his amorous Jessica.
Besides, Antonio certified the duke
They were not with Bassanio in his ship.

SOLANIO. I never heard a passion so confused,
So strange, outrageous, and so variable,
As the dog Jew did utter in the streets.
'My daughter! O my ducats! O my daughter!
Fled with a Christian! O my Christian ducats!
Justice! the law! my ducats, and my daughter!
A sealéd bag, two sealéd bags of ducats,
Of double ducats, stol'n from me by my daughter!
And jewels—two stones, two rich and precious stones,
Stol'n by my daughter! Justice! find the girl!
She hath the stones upon her, and the ducats!'

SALERIO. Why, all the boys in Venice follow him,
Crying, his stones, his daughter, and his ducats.

SOLANIO. Let good Antonio look he keep his day,
Or he shall pay for this.

SALERIO. Marry, well remembred:
I reasoned with a Frenchman yesterday,
Who told me, in the narrow seas that part
The French and English, there miscarriéd
A vessel of our country richly fraught:
I thought upon Antonio when he told me,
And wished in silence that it were not his.

SOLANIO. You were best to tell Antonio what you hear—
Yet do not suddenly, for it may grieve him.

SALERIO. A kinder gentleman treads not the earth.
I saw Bassanio and Antonio part.
Bassanio told him he would make some speed
Of his return: he answered, 'Do not so.
Slubber not business for my sake, Bassanio,
But stay the very riping of the time.
And for the Jew's bond which he hath of me,
Let it not enter in your mind of love:
Be merry, and employ your chiefest thoughts
To courtship, and such fair ostents of love
As shall conveniently become you there.'
And even there, his eye being big with tears,
Turning his face, he put his hand behind him,
And with affection wondrous sensible
He wrung Bassanio's hand, and so they parted.

SOLANIO. I think he only loves the world for him.
I pray thee, let us go and find him out,
And quicken his embracéd heaviness
With some delight or other.

SALERIO. Do we so. They go

Scene 9: Portia's house at Belmont

Enter Nerissa and a servitor

NERISSA. Quick, quick, I pray thee—draw the curtain straight.
The Prince of Arragon hath ta'en his oath,
And comes to his election presently.

Portia enters with the Prince of Arragon, and their trains

PORTIA. Behold, there stand the caskets, noble prince.
If you choose that wherein I am contained,
Straight shall our nuptial rites be solemnized:
But if you fail, without more speech, my lord,
You must be gone from hence immediately.

ARRAGON. I am enjoined by oath to observe three things—
First, never to unfold to any one
Which casket 'twas I chose; next, if I fail
Of the right casket, never in my life
To woo a maid in way of marriage;
Lastly,
If I do fail in fortune of my choice,
Immediately to leave you and be gone.

PORTIA. To these injunctions every one doth swear,
That comes to hazard for my worthless self.

ARRAGON. And so have I addressed me. Fortune now
To my heart's hope! Gold, silver, and base lead.
'Who chooseth me must give and hazard all he hath'
You shall look fairer, ere I give or hazard.
What says the golden chest? ha! let me see:
'Who chooseth me shall gain what many men desire.'
What many men desire! that 'many' may be meant
By the fool multitude, that choose by show,
Not learning more than the fond eye doth teach;
Which pries not to th'interior, but like the martlet,
Builds in the weather on the outward wall,
Even in the force and road of casualty.
I will not choose what many men desire,
Because I will not jump with common spirits,
And rank me with the barbarous multitudes.
Why, then to thee, thou silver treasure-house!
Tell me once more what title thou dost bear:
'Who chooseth me shall get as much as he deserves.'
And well said too; for who shall go about
To cozen fortune and be honourable
Without the stamp of merit. Let none presume
To wear an undeservéd dignity.
O, that estates, degrees and offices,
Were not derived corruptly, and that clear honour
Were purchased by the merit of the wearer—
How many then should cover that stand bare!
How many be commanded that command!
How much low peasantry would then be gleaned
From the true seed of honour! and how much honour
Picked from the chaff and ruin of the times,
To be new varnished! Well, but to my choice.
'Who chooseth me shall get as much as he deserves.'
I will assume desert. Give me a key for this—
And instantly unlock my fortunes here.
He opens the silver casket

PORTIA. Too long a pause for that which you find there.

ARRAGON. What's here? the portrait of a blinking idiot,
Presenting me a schedule! I will read it.
How much unlike art thou to Portia!
How much unlike my hopes and my deservings!
'Who chooseth me shall have as much as he deserves.'
Did I deserve no more than a fool's head?
Is that my prize? are my deserts no better?

PORTIA. To offend and judge are distinct offices,
And of opposéd natures.

ARRAGON [unfolds the paper]. What is here?
'The fire seven times tried this—
Seven times tried that judgement is,
That did never choose amiss

Some there be that shadows kiss,
Such have but a shadow's bliss:
There be fools alive, I wis,
Silvered o'er—and so was this.
Take what wife you will to bed,
I will ever be your head:
So be gone, you are sped.'

Still more fool I shall appear
By the time I linger here.
With one fool's head I came to woo,
But I go away with two.
Sweet, adieu! I'll keep my oath,
Patiently to bear my roth.

He departs with his train

PORTIA. Thus hath the candle singed the moth:
O, these deliberate fools! when they do choose,
They have the wisdom by their wit to lose.

NERISSA. The ancient saying is no heresy,
Hanging and wiving goes by destiny.

PORTIA. Come, draw the curtain, Nerissa.

A servant enters

SERVANT. Where is my lady?

PORTIA. Here—what would my lord?

SERVANT. Madam, there is alighted at your gate
A young Venetian, one that comes before
To signify th'approaching of his lord,
From whom he bringeth sensible regreets:
To wit, besides commends and courteous breath,
Gifts of rich value . . . Yet I have not seen
So likely an ambassador of love.
A day in April never came so sweet,
To show how costly summer was at hand,
As this fore-spurrer comes before his lord.

PORTIA. No more, I pray thee. I am half afeard,
Thou wilt say anon he is some kin to thee,
Thou spend'st such high-day wit in praising him.
Come, come, Nerissa, for I long to see
Quick Cupid's post that comes so mannerly.

NERISSA. Bassanio—Lord Love, if thy will it be!

They go

ACT 3

Scene 1: The street before Shylock's house

Solanio and Solerio

SOLANIO. Now, what news on the Rialto?

SALERIO. Why, yet it lives there unchecked that Antonio hath a ship of rich lading wracked on the narrow seas; the Goodwins, I think they call the place—a very dangerous flat and fatal, where the carcases of many a tall ship lie buried, as they say, if my gossip Report be an honest woman of her word.

SOLANIO. I would she were as lying a gossip in that, as ever knapped ginger, or made her neighbours believe she wept for the death of a third husband. But it is true, without any slips of prolixity or crossing the plain highway of talk, that the good Antonio, the honest Antonio—O, that I had a title good enough to keep his name company—

SALERIO. Come, the full stop.

SOLANIO. Ha! what sayest thou? Why, the end is, he hath lost a ship.

SALERIO. I would it might prove the end of his losses.

SOLANIO. Let me say 'amen' betimes, lest the devil cross my prayer, for here he comes in the likeness of a Jew. . . .

Shylock comes from his house

How now, Shylock! what news among the merchants?

SHYLOCK. You knew, none so well, none so well as you, of my daughter's flight.

SALERIO. That's certain! I, for my part, knew the tailor that made the wings she flew withal.

SOLANIO. And Shylock, for his own part, knew the bird was fledge, and then it is the complexion of them all to leave the dam.

SHYLOCK. She is damned for it.

SALERIO. That's certain, if the devil may be her judge.

SHYLOCK. My own flesh and blood to rebel!

SOLANIO. Out upon it, old carrion, rebels it at these years?

SHYLOCK. I say, my daughter is my flesh and blood.

SALERIO. There is more difference between thy flesh and hers than between jet and ivory, more between your bloods than there is between red wine and rhenish. But tell us, do you hear whether Antonio have had any loss at sea or no?

SHYLOCK. There I have another bad match—a bankrupt, a prodigal, who dare scarce show his head on the Rialto, a beggar that was used to come so smug upon the mart. Let him look to his bond! he was wont to call me usurer, let him look to his bond! he was wont to lend money for a Christian curtsy, let him look to his bond!

SALERIO. Why, I am sure, if he forfeit, thou wilt not take his flesh—what's that good for?

SHYLOCK. To bait fish withal! if it will feed nothing else, it will feed my revenge. He hath disgraced me and hindred me half a million, laughed at my losses, mocked at my gains, scorned my nation, thwarted my bargains, cooled my friends, heated mine enemies—and what's his reason? I am a Jew. Hath not a Jew eyes? hath not a Jew hands, organs, dimensions, senses, affections, passions? fed with the same food, hurt with the same weapons, subject to the same diseases, healed by the same means, warmed and cooled by the same winter and summer, as a Christian is? If you prick us, do we not bleed? if you tickle us, do we not laugh? if you poison us, do we not die? and if you wrong us, shall we not revenge? if we are like you in the rest, we will resemble you in that. If a Jew wrong a Christian, what is his humility? Revenge. If a Christian wrong a Jew, what should his sufferance be by Christian example? Why, revenge. The villainy you teach me I will execute, and it shall go hard but I will better the instruction.

A servant accosts Solanio and Salerio

SERVANT. Gentlemen, my master Antonio is at his house, and desires to speak with you both.

SALERIO. We have been up and down to seek him.

Tubal appears

SOLANIO. Here comes another of the tribe—a third cannot be matched, unless the devil himself turn Jew.

Solanio and Salerio depart,
followed by the servant

SHYLOCK. How now, Tubal! what news from Genoa? hast thou found my daughter?

TUBAL. I often came where I did hear of her, but cannot find her.

SHYLOCK. Why there, there, there, there—a diamond gone, cost me two thousand ducats in Frankfort—the curse never fell upon our nation till now, I never felt it till now—two thousand ducats in that, and other precious, precious jewels. I would my daughter were dead at my foot, and the jewels in her ear! would she were hearsed at my foot, and the ducats in her coffin! No news of them? Why, so—and I know not what's spent in the search: why, thou loss upon loss! the thief gone with so much and so much to find the thief, and no satisfaction, no revenge, nor no ill luck stirring but what lights o' my shoulders, no sighs but o' my breathing, no tears but o' my shedding. He weeps

TUBAL. Yes, other men have ill luck too. Antonio, as I heard in Genoa—

SHYLOCK. What, what, what? ill luck, ill luck?

TUBAL. —hath an argosy cast away, coming from Tripolis.

SHYLOCK. I thank God, I thank God! Is it true? is it true?

TUBAL. I spoke with some of the sailors that escaped the wrack.

SHYLOCK. I thank thee good Tubal, good news, good news: ha, ha! Heard in Genoa?

TUBAL. Your daughter spent in Genoa, as I heard, one night, fourscore ducats.

SHYLOCK. Thou stick'st a dagger in me. I shall never see my gold again—fourscore ducats at a sitting! fourscore ducats!

TUBAL. There came divers of Antonio's creditors in my company to Venice, that swear he cannot choose but break.

SHYLOCK. I am very glad of it, I'll plague him, I'll torture him, I am glad of it.

TUBAL. One of them showed me a ring that he had of your daughter for a monkey.

SHYLOCK. Out upon her! thou torturest me, Tubal—it was my turquoise—I had it of Leah when I was a bachelor: I would not have given it for a wilderness of monkeys.

TUBAL. But Antonio is certainly undone.

SHYLOCK. Nay, that's true, that's very true, go Tubal, fee me an officer, bespeak him a fortnight before. I will have the heart of him if he forfeit, for were he out of Venice I can make what merchandise I will. Go, Tubal, and meet me at our synagogue—go, good Tubal—at our synagogue, Tubal.

Tubal departs and Shylock goes within

Scene 2: Portia's house at Belmont.

Enter Bassanio with Portia, Gratiano with Nerissa; the servitor and other attendants

PORTIA. I pray you tarry, pause a day or two
Before you hazard, for in choosing wrong
I lose your company; therefore, forbear awhile.
There's something tells me (but it is not love)
I would not lose you, and you know yourself,
Hate counsels not in such a quality;
But lest you should not understand me well—
And yet a maiden hath no tongue but thought—
I would detain you here some month or two
Before you venture for me. I could teach you
How to choose right, but then I am forsworn,
So will I never be, so may you miss me;
But if you do, you'll make me wish a sin,
That I had been forsworn. Beshrew your eyes,
They have o'er-looked me and divided me,
One half of me is yours, the other half yours—
Mine own I would say: but if mine then yours,
And so all yours. O, these naughty times
Put bars between the owners and their rights,
And so though yours, not yours. Prove it so—
Let Fortune go to hell for it, not I.
I speak too long, but 'tis to peise the time,
To eche it and to draw it out in length,
To stay you from election.

BASSANIO. Let me choose,
For as I am, I live upon the rack.

PORTIA. Upon the rack, Bassanio? then confess
What treason there is mingled with your love.

BASSANIO. None but that ugly treason of mistrust,
Which makes me fear th'enjoying of my love.
There may as well be amity and life
'Tween snow and fire, as treason and my love.

PORTIA. Ay, but I fear you speak upon the rack,
Where men enforcéd do speak any thing.

BASSANIO. Promise me life, and I'll confess the truth.

PORTIA. Well then, confess and live.

BASSANIO. 'Confess' and 'love'
Had been the very sum of my confession:
O happy torment, when my torturer
Doth teach me answers for deliverance.
But let me to my fortune and the caskets.

PORTIA. Away then! I am locked in one of them—
If you do love me, you will find me out.
Nerissa and the rest, stand all aloof.
Let music sound while he doth make his choice—
Then if he lose, he makes a swan-like end,
Fading in music. That the comparison
May stand more proper, my eye shall be the stream,
And wat'ry death-bed for him. He may win,
And what is music then? then music is
Even as the flourish when true subjects bow
To a new-crownéd monarch: such it is,
As are those dulcet sounds in break of day
That creep into the dreaming bridegroom's ear,
And summon him to marriage. Now he goes,
With no less presence, but with much more love,
Than young Alcides, when he did redeem
The virgin tribute paid by howling Troy
To the sea-monster. I stand for sacrifice:
The rest aloof are the Dardanian wives,
With bleared visages, come forth to view
The issue of th'exploit. Go, Hercules!
Live thou, I live. With much much more dismay
I view the fight than thou that mak'st the fray.

A song, the whilst Bassanio comments on the caskets to himself

Tell me where is Fancy bred,
Or in the heart, or in the head?
How begot, how nourishéd?
ALL. Reply, reply.
It is engendred in the eyes,
With gazing fed, and Fancy dies
In the cradle where it lies.

Let us all ring Fancy's knell:
I'll begin it—Ding, dong, bell.
ALL. Ding, dong, bell.
BASSANIO. So may the outward shows be least themselves—
The world is still deceived with ornament.
In law, what plea so tainted and corrupt,
But, being seasoned with a gracious voice,
Obscures the show of evil? In religion,
What damnéd error, but some sober brow
Will bless it, and approve it with a text,
Hiding the grossness with fair ornament?
There is no vice so simple, but assumes
Some mark of virtue on his outward parts.
How many cowards, whose hearts are all as false
As stairs of sand, wear yet upon their chins
The beards of Hercules and frowning Mars;
Who, inward searched, have livers white as milk?
And these assume but valour's excrement
To render them redoubted. Look on beauty,
And you shall see 'tis purchased by the weight,
Which therein works a miracle in nature,
Making them lightest that wear most of it:
So are those crispéd snaky golden locks
Which make such wanton gambols with the wind,
Upon supposéd fairness, often known
To be the dowry of a second head,
The skull that bred them in the sepulchre.
Thus ornament is but the guiléd shore
To a most dangerous sea; the beauteous scarf
Veiling an Indian beauty; in a word,
The seeming truth which cunning times put on
To entrap the wisest. Therefore, thou gaudy gold,
Hard food for Midas, I will none of thee—
Nor none of thee, thou pale and common drudge
'Tween man and man: but thou, thou meagre lead,
Which rather threaten'st than dost promise aught,
Thy plainness moves me more than eloquence,
And here choose I—joy be the consequence!
PORTIA [aside]. How all the other passions fleet to air,
As doubtful thoughts, and rash-embraced despair,
And shudd'ring fear and green-eyed jealousy!
O love, be moderate, allay thy ecstasy,
In measure rain thy joy, scant this excess—
I feel too much thy blessing, make it less,
For fear I surfeit!
BASSANIO. [opens the leaden casket]. What find I here?
Fair Portia's counterfeit! What demi-god
Hath come so near creation? Move these eyes?
Or whether, riding on the balls of mine,
Seem they in motion? Here are severed lips,
Parted with sugar breath—so sweet a bar
Should sunder such sweet friends. Here in her hairs
The painter plays the spider, and hath woven
A golden mesh t'entrap the hearts of men,
Faster than gnats in cobwebs—But her eyes!
How could he see to do them? having made one,
Methinks it should have power to steal both his,
And leave itself unfurnished: yet look, how far
The substance of my praise doth wrong this shadow
In underprizing it, so far this shadow
Doth limp behind the substance. Here's the scroll,
The continent and summary of my fortune.
'You that choose not by the view
Chance as fair and choose as true:
Since this fortune falls to you,
Be content, and seek no new.
If you be well pleased with this,
And hold your fortune for your bliss,
Turn you where your lady is,
And claim her with a loving kiss.'
A gentle scroll . . . Fair lady, by your leave,
I come by note, to give and to receive.
Like one of two contending in a prize,
That thinks he hath done well in people's eyes,
Hearing applause and universal shout,
Giddy in spirit, still gazing in a doubt
Whether those peals of praise be his or no,
So thrice-fair lady stand I, even so,
As doubtful whether what I see be true,
Until confirmed, signed, ratified by you.
PORTIA. You see me, Lord Bassanio, where I stand,
Such as I am. Though for myself alone
I would not be ambitious in my wish
To wish myself much better, yet for you
I would be trebled twenty times myself—
A thousand times more fair, ten thousand times
More rich.
That only to stand high in your account,
I might in virtues, beauties, livings, friends,
Exceed account. But the full sum of me
Is some of something which, to term in gross,
Is an unlessoned girl, unschooled, unpractised,
Happy in this, she is not yet so old
But she may learn; happier than this,
She is not bred so dull but she can learn;
Happiest of all is that her gentle spirit
Commits itself to yours to be directed,
As from her lord, her governor, her king. . . .
Myself and what is mine to you and yours
Is now converted. But now I was the lord
Of this fair mansion, master of my servants,
Queen o'er myself; and even now, but now,
This house, these servants, and this same myself,
Are yours—my lord's!—I give them with this ring,
Which when you part from, lose, or give away,
Let it presage the ruin of your love,
And be my vantage to exclaim on you.
BASSANIO. Madam, you have bereft me of all words,
Only my blood speaks to you in my veins,
And there is such confusion in my powers,
As, after some oration fairly spoke
By a belovéd prince there doth appear
Among the buzzing pleaséd multitude,
Where every something, being blent together,
Turns to a wild of nothing, save of joy,
Expressed and not expressed. But when this ring
Parts from this finger, then parts life from hence!
O, then be bold to say Bassanio's dead.
NERISSA. My lord and lady, it is now our time,
That have stood by and seen our wishes prosper,
To cry 'good joy.' Good joy, my lord, and lady!
GRATIANO. My Lord Bassanio, and my gentle lady,
I wish you all the joy that you can wish;
For I am sure you can wish none from me:
And, when your honours mean to solemnize
The bargain of your faith, I do beseech you,
Even at that time I may be married too.
BASSANIO. With all my heart, so thou canst get a wife.
GRATIANO. I thank your lordship, you have got me one.

My eyes, my lord, can look as swift as yours:
You saw the mistress, I beheld the maid;
You loved, I loved—for intermission
No more pertains to me, my lord, than you;
Your fortune stood upon the caskets there,
And so did mine too, as the matter falls:
For wooing here until I sweat again,
And swearing till my very roof was dry
With oaths of love, at last—if promise last—
I got a promise of this fair one here,
To have her love, provided that your fortune
Achieved her mistress.
PORTIA. Is this true, Nerissa?
NERISSA. Madam, it is, so you stand pleased withal.
BASSANIO. And do you, Gratiano, mean good faith?
GRATIANO. Yes, faith, my lord.
BASSANIO. Our feast shall be much honoured in your marriage.
GRATIANO. We'll play with them the first boy for a thousand ducats.
NERISSA. What! and stake down?
GRATIANO. No, we shall ne'er win at that sport, and stake down.

Lorenzo, Jessica, and Salerio enter

But who comes here? Lorenzo and his infidel?
What, and my old Venetian friend, Salerio?
BASSANIO. Lorenzo and Salerio, welcome hither,
If that the youth of my new interest here
Have power to bid you welcome . . . By your leave,
I bid my very friends and countrymen,
Sweet Portia, welcome.
PORTIA. So do I, my lord.
They are entirely welcome.
LORENZO. I thank your honour. For my part, my lord,
My purpose was not to have seen you here,
But meeting with Salerio by the way,
He did entreat me, past all saying nay,
To come with him along.
SALERIO. I did, my lord,
And I have reason for it. Signior Antonio
Commends him to you. He gives Bassanio a letter
BASSANIO. Ere I ope his letter,
I pray you, tell me how my good friend doth.
SALERIO. Not sick, my lord, unless it be in mind—
Nor well, unless in mind: his letter there
Will show you his estate. Bassanio opens the letter
GRATIANO. Nerissa, cheer yon stranger, bid her welcome. . . .
Your hand, Salerio. What's the news from Venice?
How doth that royal merchant, good Antonio?
I know he will be glad of our success,
We are the Jasons, we have won the fleece!
SALERIO. I would you had won the fleece that he hath lost. They talk apart
PORTIA. There are some shrewd contents in yon same paper,
That steals the colour from Bassanio's cheek—
Some dear friend dead, else nothing in the world
Could turn so much the constitution
Of any constant man. What, worse and worse!
With leave, Bassanio—I am half yourself,
And I must freely have the half of anything
That this same paper brings you.
BASSANIO. O sweet Portia,
Here are a few of the unpleasant'st words,
That ever blotted paper. Gentle lady,
When I did first impart my love to you,
I freely told you all the wealth I had
Ran in my veins—I was a gentleman—
And then I told you true: and yet, dear lady,
Rating myself at nothing, you shall see
How much I was a braggart. When I told you
My state was nothing, I should then have told you
That I was worse than nothing; for, indeed,
I have engaged myself to a dear friend,
Engaged my friend to his mere enemy,
To feed my means. . . . Here is a letter, lady,
The paper as the body of my friend,
And every word in it a gaping wound,
Issuing life-blood. But is it true, Salerio?
Here all his ventures failed? What, not one hit?
From Tripolis, from Mexico, and England,
From Lisbon, Barbary, and India?
And not one vessel scape the dreadful touch
Of merchant-marring rocks?
SALERIO. Not one, my lord.
Besides, it should appear, that if he had
The present money to discharge the Jew,
He would not take it: never did I know
A creature that did bear the shape of man
So keen and greedy to confound a man.
He plies the duke at morning and at night,
And doth impeach the freedom of the state,
If they deny him justice. Twenty merchants,
The duke himself, and the magnificoes
Of greatest port, have all persuaded with him,
But none can drive him from the envious plea
Of forfeiture, of justice, and his bond.
JESSICA. When I was with him, I have heard him swear
To Tubal and to Chus, his countrymen,
That he would rather have Antonio's flesh
Than twenty times the value of the sum
That he did owe him: and I know, my lord,
If law, authority, and power deny not,
It will go hard with poor Antonio.
PORTIA. Is it your dear friend that is thus in trouble?
BASSANIO. The dearest friend to me, the kindest man,
The best-conditioned and unwearied spirit
In doing courtesies: and one in whom
The ancient Roman honour more appears
Than any that draws breath in Italy.
PORTIA. What sum owes he the Jew?
BASSANIO. For me, three thousand ducats.
PORTIA. What, no more?
Pay him six thousand, and deface the bond;
Double six thousand, and then treble that,
Before a friend of this description
Shall lose a hair through Bassanio's fault.
First, go with me to church, and call me wife,
And then away to Venice to your friend;
For never shall you lie by Portia's side
With an unquiet soul! You shall have gold
To pay the petty debt twenty times over.
When it is paid, bring your true friend along.
My maid Nerissa and myself meantime
Will live as maids and widows . . . Come, away!
For you shall hence upon your wedding-day:
Bid your friends welcome, show a merry cheer,
Since you are dear bought, I will love you dear.
But let me hear the letter of your friend.

BASSANIO [reads]. 'Sweet Bassanio, my ships have all miscarried, my creditors grow cruel, my estate is very low, my bond to the Jew is forfeit, and since, in paying it, it is impossible I should live, all debts are cleared between you and I, if I might but see you at my death: notwithstanding, use your pleasure—if your love do not persuade you to come, let not my letter.'

PORTIA. O love, dispatch all business and be gone!

BASSANIO. Since I have your good leave to go away,
I will make haste; but, till I come again,
No bed shall e'er be guilty of my stay,
No rest be interposer 'twixt us twain. They go

Scene 3: The street before Shylock's house

Enter Shylock, Solanio, Antonio, and a Gaoler

SHYLOCK. Gaoler, look to him—tell not me of mercy—
This is the fool that lent out money gratis.
Gaoler, look to him.

ANTONIO. Hear me yet, good Shylock.

SHYLOCK. I'll have my bond, speak not against my bond,
I have sworn an oath that I will have my bond:
Thou call'dst me dog before thou hadst a cause,
But since I am a dog beware my fangs.
The duke shall grant me justice. I do wonder,
Thou naughty gaoler, that thou art so fond
To come abroad with him at his request.

ANTONIO. I pray thee, hear me speak.

SHYLOCK. I'll have my bond—I will not hear thee speak.
I'll have my bond, and therefore speak no more.
I'll not be made a soft and dull-eyed fool,
To shake the head, relent, and sigh, and yield
To Christian intercessors. Follow not—
I'll have no speaking, I will have my bond.
He goes within, slamming the door behind him

SOLANIO. It is the most impenetrable cur,
That ever kept with men.

ANTONIO. Let him alone,
I'll follow him no more with bootless prayers.
He seeks my life—his reason well I know;
I oft delivered from his forfeitures
Many that have at times made moan to me.
Therefore he hates me.

SOLANIO. I am sure, the duke
Will never grant this forfeiture to hold.

ANTONIO. The duke cannot deny the course of law:
For the commodity that strangers have
With us in Venice, if it be denied,
Will much impeach the justice of the state,
Since that the trade and profit of the city
Consisteth of all nations. Therefore, go.
These griefs and losses have so bated me,
That I shall hardly spare a pound of flesh
To-morrow to my bloody creditor.
Well, gaoler, on. Pray God, Bassanio come
To see me pay his debt, and then I care not!
They go

Scene 4: Portia's house at Belmont

Enter Portia, Nerissa, Lorenzo, Jessica, and a man of Portia's, called Balthazar

LORENZO. Madam, although I speak it in your presence,
You have a noble and a true conceit
Of god-like amity, which appears most strongly
In bearing thus the absence of your lord.
But if you knew to whom you show this honour,
How true a gentleman you send relief,
How dear a lover of my lord your husband,
I know you would be prouder of the work,
Than customary bounty can enforce you.

PORTIA. I never did repent for doing good,
Nor shall not now: for in companions
That do converse and waste the time together,
Whose souls do bear an egall yoke of love,
There must be needs a like proportion
Of lineaments, of manners, and of spirit;
Which makes me think that this Antonio,
Being the bosom lover of my lord,
Must needs be like my lord. If it be so,
How little is the cost I have bestowed
In purchasing the semblance of my soul
From out the state of hellish cruelty?
This comes too near the praising of myself,
Therefore no more of it: hear other things.
Lorenzo, I commit into your hands
The husbandry and manage of my house,
Until my lord's return: for mine own part,
I have toward heaven breathed a secret vow
To live in prayer and contemplation,
Only attended by Nerissa here,
Until her husband and my lord's return.
There is a monastery two miles off,
And there we will abide. I do desire you
Not to deny this imposition,
The which my love and some necessity
Now lays upon you.

LORENZO. Madam, with all my heart
I shall obey you in all fair commands.

PORTIA. My people do already know my mind,
And will acknowledge you and Jessica
In place of Lord Bassanio and myself.
So fare you well till we shall meet again.

LORENZO. Fair thoughts and happy hours attend on you!

JESSICA. I wish your ladyship all heart's content.

PORTIA. I thank you for your wish, and am well pleased
To wish it back on you: fare you well, Jessica....
Jessica and Lorenzo go
Now, Balthazar,
As I have ever found thee honest-true,
So let me find thee still. Take this same letter,
And use thou all th'endeavour of a man
In speed to Padua; see thou render this
Into my cousin's hand, Doctor Bellario,
And look what notes and garments he doth give thee,
Bring them, I pray thee, with imagined speed
Unto the tranect, to the common ferry
Which trades to Venice. Waste no time in words,
But get thee gone. I shall be there before thee.

BALTHAZAR. Madam, I go with all convenient speed.
He departs

PORTIA. Come on, Nerissa—I have work in hand
That you yet know not of; we'll see our husbands
Before they think of us!

NERISSA. Shall they see us?
PORTIA. They shall, Nerissa; but in such a habit,
That they shall think we are accomplishéd
With that we lack. I'll hold thee any wager,
When we are both accoutred like young men,
I'll prove the prettier fellow of the two,
And wear my dagger with the braver grace,
And speak between the change of man and boy
With a reed-voice, and turn two mincing steps
Into a manly stride; and speak of frays
Like a fine bragging youth; and tell quaint lies,
How honourable ladies sought my love,
Which I denying, they fell sick and died—
I could not do withal! Then I'll repent,
And wish, for all that, that I had not killed them.
And twenty of these puny lies I'll tell,
That men shall swear I have discontinued school
Above a twelvemonth. I have within my mind
A thousand raw tricks of these bragging Jacks,
Which I will practise.
NERISSA. Why, shall we turn to men?
PORTIA. Fie, what a question's that,
If thou wert near a lewd interpreter!
But come, I'll tell thee all my whole device,
When I am in my coach, which stays for us
At the park-gate; and therefore haste away,
For we must measure twenty miles to-day.
They go

Scene 5: Portia's garden

Enter Lancelot and Jessica

LANCELOT. Yes truly, for look you, the sins of the father are to be laid upon the children—therefore, I promise you, I fear you. I was always plain with you, and so now I speak my agitation of the matter: therefore, be o' good cheer, for truly I think you are damned. There is but one hope in it that can do you any good, and that is but a kind of bastard hope neither.

JESSICA. And what hope is that, I pray thee?

LANCELOT. Marry, you may partly hope that your father got you not, that you are not the Jew's daughter.

JESSICA. That were a kind of bastard hope, indeed! So the sins of my mother should be visited upon me.

LANCELOT. Truly then I fear you are damned both by father and mother: thus when I shun Scylla, your father, I fall into Charybdis, your mother: well, you are gone both ways.

JESSICA. I shall be saved by my husband—he hath made me a Christian.

LANCELOT. Truly, the more to blame he. We were Christians enow before, e'en as many as could well live, one by another. This making of Christians will raise the price of hogs—if we grow all to be pork-eaters, we shall not shortly have a rasher on the coals for money.

Lorenzo enters

JESSICA. I'll tell my husband, Lancelot, what you say—here he comes.

LORENZO. I shall grow jealous of you shortly, Lancelot, if you thus get my wife into corners.

JESSICA. Nay, you need not fear us, Lorenzo. Lancelot and I are out. He tells me flatly there's no mercy for me in heaven, because I am a Jew's daughter: and he says you are no good member of the commonwealth, for, in converting Jews to Christians, you raise the price of pork.

LORENZO. I shall answer that better to the commonwealth than you can the getting up of the negro's belly: the Moor is with child by you, Lancelot.

LANCELOT. It is much that the Moor should be more than reason: but if she be less than an honest woman, she is indeed more than I took her for.

LORENZO. How every fool can play upon the word! I think the best grace of wit will shortly turn into silence, and discourse grow commendable in none only but parrots. Go in, sirrah—bid them prepare for dinner.

LANCELOT. That is done, sir—they have all stomachs.

LORENZO. Goodly Lord, what a wit-snapper are you! then bid them prepare dinner.

LANCELOT. That is done too, sir—only 'cover' is the word.

LORENZO. Will you cover then, sir?

LANCELOT. Not so, sir, neither—I know my duty.

LORENZO. Yet more quarrelling with occasion! Wilt thou show the whole wealth of thy wit in an instant? I pray thee, understand a plain man in his plain meaning: go to thy fellows, bid them cover the table, serve in the meat, and we will come in to dinner.

LANCELOT. For the table, sir, it shall be served in—for the meat, sir, it shall be covered—for your coming in to dinner, sir, why, let it be as humours and conceits shall govern. He goes

LORENZO. O dear discretion, how his words are suited!
The fool hath planted in his memory
An army of good words, and I do know
A many fools that stand in better place
Garnished like him, that for a tricksy word
Defy the matter. How cheer'st thou, Jessica?
And now, good sweet, say thy opinion,
How dost thou like the Lord Bassanio's wife?
JESSICA. Past all expressing. It is very meet,
The Lord Bassanio live an upright life,
For having such a blessing in his lady
He finds the joys of heaven here on earth,
And if on earth he do not merit it,
In reason he should never come to heaven!
Why, if two gods should play some heavenly match,
And on the wager lay two earthly women,
And Portia one, there must be something else
Pawned with the other, for the poor rude world
Hath not her fellow.
LORENZO. Even such a husband
Hast thou of me, as she is for a wife.
JESSICA. Nay, but ask my opinion too of that.
LORENZO. I will anon—first, let us go to dinner.
JESSICA. Nay, let me praise you while I have a stomach.
LORENZO. No, pray thee, let it serve for table-talk—
Then, howsome'er thou speak'st, 'mong other things
I shall digest it.
JESSICA. Well, I'll set you forth. They go

ACT 4

Scene 1: A Court of Justice

Enter Antonio, Bassanio, Gratiano, Solanio, the Duke, the Magnificoes, officers, clerks, attendants, and others

DUKE. What, is Antonio here?

ANTONIO. Ready, so please your grace.
DUKE. I am sorry for thee—thou art come to answer
A stony adversary, an inhuman wretch
Uncapable of pity, void and empty
From any dram of mercy.
ANTONIO. I have heard,
Your grace hath ta'en great pains to qualify
His rigorous course; but since he stands obdúrate,
And that no lawful means can carry me
Out of his envy's reach, I do oppose
My patience to his fury, and am armed
To suffer with a quietness of spirit
The very tyranny and rage of his.
DUKE. Go one, and call the Jew into the court.
SOLANIO. He is ready at the door, he comes, my lord.
DUKE. Make room, and let him stand before our face.

Shylock enters

Shylock, the world thinks, and I think so too,
That thou but leadest this fashion of thy malice
To the last hour of act, and then 'tis thought
Thou'lt show thy mercy and remorse more strange
Than is thy strange apparent cruelty;
And where thou now exacts the penalty,
Which is a pound of this poor merchant's flesh,
Thou wilt not only loose the forfeiture,
But touched with human gentleness and love,
Forgive a moiety of the principal;
Glancing an eye of pity on his losses,
That have of late so huddled on his back;
Enow to press a royal merchant down,
And pluck commiseration of his state
From brassy bosoms and rough hearts of flint,
From stubborn Turks and Tartars, never trained
To offices of tender courtesy.
We all expect a gentle answer, Jew.
SHYLOCK. I have possessed your grace of what I purpose,
And by our holy Sabbath have I sworn
To have the due and forfeit of my bond.
If you deny it, let the danger light
Upon your charter and your city's freedom!
You'll ask me why I rather choose to have
A weight of carrion flesh than to receive
Three thousand ducats: I'll not answer that!
But say it is my humour, is it answered?
What if my house be troubled with a rat,
And I be pleased to give ten thousand ducats
To have it baned? what, are you answered yet?
Some men there are love not a gaping pig,
Some that are mad if they behold a cat,
And others when the bag-pipe sings i'th' nose
Cannot contain their urine: for affection,
Mistress of passion, sways it to the mood
Of what it likes or loathes. Now, for your answer:
As there is no firm reason to be rendered,
Why he cannot abide a gaping pig;
Why he, a harmless necessary cat;
Why he, a woollen bag-pipe; but of force
Must yield to such inevitable shame,
As to offend, himself being offended;
So can I give no reason, nor I will not,
More than a lodged hate and a certain loathing
I bear Antonio, that I follow thus
A losing suit against him! Are you answered?
BASSANIO. This is no answer, thou unfeeling man,
To excuse the current of thy cruelty!
SHYLOCK. I am not bound to please thee with my answers!
BASSANIO. Do all men kill the things they do not love?
SHYLOCK. Hates any man the thing he would not kill?
BASSANIO. Every offence is not a hate at first!
SHYLOCK. What, wouldst thou have a serpent sting thee twice?
ANTONIO. I pray you, think you question with the Jew
You may as well go stand upon the beach
And bid the main flood bate his usual height;
You may as well use question with the wolf
Why he hath made the ewe bleat for the lamb;
You may as well forbid the mountain pines
To wag their high tops and to make no noise
When they are fretten with the gusts of heaven;
You may as well do any thing most hard,
As seek to soften that—than which what's harder?—
His Jewish heart. Therefore, I do beseech you,
Make no moe offers, use no farther means,
But with all brief and plain conveniency
Let me have judgement and the Jew his will!
BASSANIO. For thy three thousand ducats here is six.
SHYLOCK. If every ducat in six thousand ducats
Were in six parts and every part a ducat,
I would not draw them, I would have my bond!
DUKE. How shalt thou hope for mercy, rendring none?
SHYLOCK. What judgement shall I dread, doing no wrong?
You have among you many a purchased slave,
Which, like your asses and your dogs and mules,
You use in abject and in slavish parts,
Because you bought them—shall I say to you,
'Let them be free, marry them to your heirs?
Why sweat they under burthens? let their beds
Be made as soft as yours, and let their palates
Be seasoned with such viands?' You will answer,
'The slaves are ours.' So do I answer you:
The pound of flesh, which I demand of him
Is dearly bought, 'tis mine, and I will have it:
If you deny me, fie upon your law!
There is no force in the decrees of Venice!
I stand for judgement. Answer—shall I have it?
DUKE. Upon my power, I may dismiss this court,
Unless Bellario, a learned doctor,
Whom I have sent for to determine this,
Come here to-day.
SOLANIO. My lord, here stays without
A messenger with letters from the doctor,
New come from Padua.
DUKE. Bring us the letters; call the messenger.
BASSANIO. Good cheer, Antonio! what man, courage yet:
The Jew shall have my flesh, blood, bones, and all,
Ere thou shalt lose for me one drop of blood.
ANTONIO. I am a tainted wether of the flock,
Meetest for death. The weakest kind of fruit
Drops earliest to the ground, and so let me;
You cannot better be employed, Bassanio,
Than to live still, and write mine epitaph.

Nerissa enters, dressed as a lawyer's clerk

DUKE. Came you from Padua, from Bellario?
NERISSA. From both, my lord. Bellario greets your grace. She presents a letter

BASSANIO. Why dost thou whet thy knife so earnestly?
SHYLOCK. To cut the forfeiture from that bankrupt there.
GRATIANO. Not on thy sole, but on thy soul, harsh Jew,
Thou mak'st thy knife keen: but no metal can,
No, not the hangman's axe, bear half the keenness
Of thy sharp envy: can no prayers pierce thee?
SHYLOCK. No, none that thou hast wit enough to make.
GRATIANO. O, be thou damned, inexorable dog,
And for thy life let justice be accused!
Thou almost mak'st me waver in my faith,
To hold opinion with Pythagoras
That souls of animals infuse themselves
Into the trunks of men: thy currish spirit
Governed a Wolf, who hanged for human slaughter,
Even from the gallows did his fell soul fleet,
And whilst thou layest in thy unhallowed dam,
Infused itself in thee; for thy desires
Are wolvish, bloody, starved, and ravenous.
SHYLOCK. Till thou canst rail the seal from off my bond,
Thou but offend'st thy lungs to speak so loud:
Repair thy wit, good youth, or it will fall
To cureless ruin. I stand here for law.
DUKE. This letter from Bellario doth commend
A young and learned doctor to our court:
Where is he?
NERISSA. He attendeth here hard by
To know your answer, whether you'll admit him.
DUKE. With all my heart: some three or four of you,
Go give him courteous conduct to this place.
Meanwhile, the court shall hear Bellario's letter....

He reads out the letter

'Your grace shall understand that at the receipt of your letter I am very sick, but in the instant that your messenger came, in loving visitation was with me a young doctor of Rome, his name is Balthazar. I acquainted him with the cause in controversy between the Jew and Antonio the merchant; we turned oe'r many books together; he is furnished with my opinion, which bettered with his own learning, the greatness whereof I cannot enough commend, comes with him at my importunity to fill up your grace's request in my stead. I beseech you, let his lack of years be no impediment to let him lack a reverend estimation, for I never knew so young a body with so old a head. I leave him to your gracious acceptance, whose trial shall better publish his commendation.'

You hear the learned Bellario, what he writes.

Portia enters, dressed as a doctor of civil law

And here, I take it, is the doctor come.
Give me your hand. Come you from old Bellario?
PORTIA. I did, my lord.
DUKE. You are welcome. Take your place...
Are you acquainted with the difference
That holds this present question in the court?
PORTIA. I am informéd throughly of the cause.
Which is the merchant here, and which the Jew?
DUKE. Antonio and old Shylock, both stand forth.
PORTIA. Is your name Shylock?
SHYLOCK. Shylock is my name.
PORTIA. Of a strange nature is the suit you follow,
Yet in such rule that the Venetian law
Cannot impugn you as you do proceed.
You stand within his danger, do you not?
ANTONIO. Ay, so he says.
PORTIA. Do you confess the bond?
ANTONIO. I do.
PORTIA. Then must the Jew be merciful.
SHYLOCK. On what compulsion must I? tell me that.
PORTIA. The quality of mercy is not strained,
It droppeth as the gentle rain from heaven
Upon the place beneath. It is twice blessed:
It blesseth him that gives, and him that takes,
'Tis mightiest in the mightiest, it becomes
The throned monarch better than his crown:
His sceptre shows the force of temporal power,
The attribute to awe and majesty,
Wherein doth sit the dread and fear of kings:
But mercy is above this sceptred sway,
It is enthronéd in the hearts of kings,
It is an attribute to God himself;
And earthly power doth then show likest God's,
When mercy seasons justice. Therefore, Jew,
Though justice be thy plea, consider this,
That in the course of justice none of us
Should see salvation: we do pray for mercy,
And that same prayer doth teach us all to render
The deeds of mercy. I have spoke thus much,
To mitigate the justice of thy plea,
Which if thou follow, this strict court of Venice
Must needs give sentence 'gainst the merchant there.
SHYLOCK. My deeds upon my head! I crave the law,
The penalty and forfeit of my bond.
PORTIA. Is he not able to discharge the money?
BASSANIO. Yes, here I tender it for him in the court,
Yea, twice the sum. If that will not suffice,
I will be bound to pay it ten times o'er,
On forfeit of my hands, my head, my heart.
If this will not suffice, it must appear
That malice bears down truth. And I beseech you,
Wrest once the law to your authority—
To do a great right, do a little wrong,
And curb this cruel devil of his will.
PORTIA. It must not be, there is no power in Venice
Can alter a decree establishéd:
'Twill be recorded for a precedent,
And many an error by the same example
Will rush into the state. It cannot be.
SHYLOCK. A Daniel come to judgement: yea, a Daniel!
O wise young judge, how I do honour thee!
PORTIA. I pray you, let me look upon the bond.
SHYLOCK. Here 'tis, most reverend doctor, here it is.
PORTIA. Shylock, there's thrice thy money offered thee.
SHYLOCK. An oath, an oath, I have an oath in heaven.
Shall I lay perjury upon my soul?
No, not for Venice.
PORTIA. Why, this bond is forfeit,
And lawfully by this the Jew may claim
A pound of flesh, to be by him cut off
Nearest the merchant's heart. Be merciful,
Take thrice thy money, bid me tear the bond.
SHYLOCK. When it is paid according to the tenour.
It doth appear you are a worthy judge,
You know the law, your exposition
Hath been most sound: I charge you by the law,

Whereof you are a well-deserving pillar,
Proceed to judgement: by my soul I swear,
There is no power in the tongue of man
To alter me. I stay here on my bond.
ANTONIO. Most heartily I do beseech the court
To give the judgement.
PORTIA. Why then, thus it is.
You must prepare your bosom for his knife.
SHYLOCK. O noble judge! O excellent young man!
PORTIA. For the intent and purpose of the law
Hath full relation to the penalty,
Which here appeareth due upon the bond.
SHYLOCK. 'Tis very true: O wise and upright judge!
How much more elder art thou than thy looks!
PORTIA. Therefore, lay bare your bosom.
SHYLOCK. Ay, his breast,
So says the bond, doth it not, noble judge?
'Nearest his heart,' those are the very words.
PORTIA. It is so. Are there balance here, to weigh
The flesh?
SHYLOCK. I have them ready.
PORTIA. Have by some surgeon, Shylock, on your charge,
To stop his wounds, lest he do bleed to death.
SHYLOCK. Is it so nominated in the bond?
PORTIA. It is not so expressed, but what of that?
'Twere good you do so much for charity.
SHYLOCK. I cannot find it, 'tis not in the bond.
PORTIA. You merchant, have you any thing to say?
ANTONIO. But little; I am armed and well prepared.
Give me your hand, Bassanio, fare you well!
Grieve not that I am fall'n to this for you;
For herein Fortune shows herself more kind
Than is her custom: it is still her use,
To let the wretched man outlive his wealth,
To view with hollow eye and wrinkled brow
An age of poverty; from which ling'ring penance
Of such misery doth she cut me off.
Commend me to your honourable wife,
Tell her the process of Antonio's end,
Say how I loved you, speak me fair in death;
And when the tale is told, bid her be judge
Whether Bassanio had not once a love.
Repent but you that you shall lose your friend,
And he repents not, that he pays your debt.
For if the Jew do cut but deep enough,
I'll pay it instantly with all my heart.
BASSANIO. Antonio, I am married to a wife
Which is as dear to me as life itself,
But life itself, my wife, and all the world,
Are not with me esteemed above thy life.
I would lose all, ay, sacrifice them all
Here to this devil, to deliver you.
PORTIA. Your wife would give you little thanks for that,
If she were by, to hear you make the offer.
GRATIANO. I have a wife, whom, I protest, I love—
I would she were in heaven, so she could
Entreat some power to change this currish Jew.
NERISSA. 'Tis well you offer it behind her back,
The wish would make else an unquiet house.
SHYLOCK. [aside]. These be the Christian husbands! I have a daughter—
Would any of the stock of Bárrabas
Had been her husband, rather than a Christian....
[aloud] We trifle time, I pray thee pursue sentence.
PORTIA. A pound of that same merchant's flesh is thine,
The court awards it, and the law doth give it.
SHYLOCK. Most rightful judge!
PORTIA. And you must cut this flesh from off his breast,
The law allows it, and the court awards it.
SHYLOCK. Most learnéd judge—a sentence—come, prepare.
PORTIA. Tarry a little, there is something else.
This bond doth give thee here no jot of blood—
The words expressly are 'a pound of flesh':
Take then thy bond, take thou thy pound of flesh,
But, in the cutting it, if thou dost shed
One drop of Christian blood, thy lands and goods
Are by the laws of Venice confiscate
Unto the state of Venice.
GRATIANO. O upright judge!—mark, Jew—O learnéd judge!
SHYLOCK. Is that the law?
PORTIA. Thyself shalt see the act:
For, as thou urgest justice, be assured
Thou shalt have justice more than thou desir'st.
GRATIANO. O learnéd judge!—mark, Jew—a learnéd judge!
SHYLOCK. I take this offer then—pay the bond thrice,
And let the Christian go.
BASSANIO. Here is the money.
PORTIA. Soft!
The Jew shall have all justice—soft, no haste—
He shall have nothing but the penalty.
GRATIANO. O Jew! an upright judge, a learnéd judge!
PORTIA. Therefore, prepare thee to cut off the flesh.
Shed thou no blood, nor cut thou less nor more
But just a pound of flesh: if thou tak'st more
Or less than a just pound, be it but so much
As makes it light or heavy in the substance,
Or the division of the twentieth part
Of one poor scruple, nay, if the scale do turn
But in the estimation of a hair,
Thou diest and all thy goods are confiscate.
GRATIANO. A second Daniel, a Daniel, Jew!
Now, infidel, I have you on the hip.
PORTIA. Why doth the Jew pause? take thy forfeiture.
SHYLOCK. Give me my principal, and let me go.
BASSANIO. I have it ready for thee, here it is.
PORTIA. He hath refused it in the open court,
He shall have merely justice and his bond.
GRATIANO. A Daniel, still say I, a second Daniel!
I thank thee, Jew, for teaching me that word.
SHYLOCK. Shall I not have barely my principal?
PORTIA. Thou shalt have nothing but the forfeiture
To be so taken at thy peril, Jew.
SHYLOCK. Why then the devil give him good of it!
I'll stay no longer question.
PORTIA. Tarry, Jew.
The law hath yet another hold on you....
It is enacted in the laws of Venice,
If it be proved against an alien,
That by direct or indirect attempts
He seek the life of any citizen,
The party 'gainst the which he doth contrive
Shall seize one half his goods, the other half
Comes to the privy coffer of the state,
And the offender's life lies in the mercy
Of the duke only, 'gainst all other voice.
In which predicament, I say, thou stand'st:

For it appears by manifest proceeding,
That indirectly and directly too
Thou hast contrived against the very life
Of the defendant; and thou hast incurred
The danger formerly by me rehearsed.
Down, therefore, and beg mercy of the duke.
GRATIANO. Beg that thou mayst have leave to hang thyself,
And yet thy wealth being forfeit to the state,
Thou hast not left the value of a cord,
Therefore thou must be hanged at the state's charge.
DUKE. That thou shalt see the difference of our spirit,
I pardon thee thy life before thou ask it:
For half thy wealth, it is Antonio's—
The other half comes to the general state,
Which humbleness may drive unto a fine.
PORTIA. Ay, for the state, not for Antonio.
SHYLOCK. Nay, take my life and all, pardon not that.
You take my house, when you do take the prop
That doth sustain my house; you take my life,
When you do take the means whereby I live.
PORTIA. What mercy can you render him, Antonio?
GRATIANO. A halter gratis—nothing else, for God's sake.
ANTONIO. So please my lord the duke and all the court
To quit the fine for one half of his goods,
I am content; so he will let me have
The other half in use, to render it
Upon his death unto the gentleman
That lately stole his daughter;
Two things provided more, that, for this favour,
He presently become a Christian;
The other, that he do record a gift,
Here in the court, of all he dies possessed,
Unto his son Lorenzo and his daughter.
DUKE. He shall do this, or else I do recant
The pardon that I late pronouncéd here.
PORTIA. Art thou contented, Jew? what dost thou say?
SHYLOCK. I am content.
PORTIA. Clerk, draw a deed of gift.
SHYLOCK. I pray you give me leave to go from hence,
I am not well, send the deed after me,
And I will sign it.
DUKE. Get thee gone, but do it.
GRATIANO. In christ'ning thou shalt have two godfathers—
Had I been judge, thou shouldst have had ten more,
To bring thee to the gallows, not the font.
Shylock goes
DUKE. Sir, I entreat you home with me to dinner.
PORTIA. I humbly do desire your grace of pardon,
I must away this night toward Padua,
And it is meet I presently set forth.
DUKE. I am sorry that your leisure serves you not.
Antonio, gratify this gentleman,
For in my mind you are much bound to him.
The Duke, the Magnificoes and their train depart; the crowd disperses
BASSANIO. Most worthy gentleman, I and my friend
Have by your wisdom been this day acquitted
Of grievous penalties, in lieu whereof,
Three thousand ducats, due unto the Jew,
We freely cope your courteous pains withal.
ANTONIO. And stand indebted, over and above,
In love and service to you evermore.
PORTIA. He is well paid that is well satisfied,
And I, delivering you, am satisfied,
And therein do account myself well paid.
My mind was never yet more mercenary.
I pray you, know me when we meet again.
I wish you well, and so I take my leave.
BASSANIO. Dear sir, of force I must attempt you further.
Take some remembrance of us, as a tribute,
Not as a fee: grant me two things, I pray you,
Not to deny me, and to pardon me.
PORTIA. You press me far, and therefore I will yield.
Give me your gloves, I'll wear them for your sake.
And, for your love, I'll take this ring from you—
Do not draw back your hand—I'll take no more,
And you in love shall not deny me this?
BASSANIO. This ring, good sir—alas, it is a trifle—
I will not shame myself to give you this.
PORTIA. I will have nothing else but only this;
And now, methinks, I have a mind to it.
BASSANIO. There's more depends on this than on the value.
The dearest ring in Venice will I give you,
And find it out by proclamation,
Only for this, I pray you, pardon me.
PORTIA. I see, sir, you are liberal in offers.
You taught me first to beg, and now, methinks,
You teach me how a beggar should be answered.
BASSANIO. Good sir, this ring was given me by my wife,
And when she put it on, she made me vow
That I should neither sell nor give nor lose it.
PORTIA. That 'scuse serves many men to save their gifts.
And if your wife be not a mad-woman,
And know how well I have deserved this ring,
She would not hold out enemy for ever,
For giving it to me ... Well, peace be with you!
She goes, Nerissa following
ANTONIO. My Lord Bassanio, let him have the ring.
Let his deservings and my love withal
Be valued 'gainst your wife's commandment.
BASSANIO. Go, Gratiano, run and overtake him,
Give him the ring, and bring him if thou canst
Unto Antonio's house—away, make haste.
Gratiano goes
Come, you and I will thither presently,
And in the morning early will we both
Fly toward Belmont. Come, Antonio. They go

Scene 2: A street in Venice

Enter Portia and Nerissa

PORTIA. Inquire the Jew's house out, give him this deed,
And let him sign it. We'll away to-night,
And be a day before our husbands home:
This deed will be well welcome to Lorenzo.

Gratiano enters

GRATIANO. Fair sir, you are well o'erta'en.
My Lord Bassanio, upon more advice,
Hath sent you here this ring, and doth entreat
Your company at dinner.
PORTIA. That cannot be:
His ring I do accept most thankfully,

And so I pray you tell him: furthermore,
I pray you, show my youth old Shylock's house.
GRATIANO. That will I do.
NERISSA. Sir, I would speak with you . . .
Takes Portia aside
I'll see if I can get my husband's ring,
Which I did make him swear to keep for ever.
PORTIA. Thou mayst, I warrant. We shall have old swearing
That they did give the rings away to men;
But we'll outface them, and outswear them too.
Away, make haste, thou know'st where I will tarry.
NERISSA. Come, good sir, will you show me to this house? They go

ACT 5

Scene I: The avenue before Portia's house at Belmont

Lorenzo and Jessica

LORENZO. The moon shines bright. In such a night as this,
When the sweet wind did gently kiss the trees,
And they did make no noise, in such a night
Troilus methinks mounted the Troyan walls,
And sighed his soul toward the Grecian tents,
Where Cressid lay that night.
JESSICA. In such a night
Did Thisbe fearfully o'ertrip the dew,
And saw the lion's shadow ere himself,
And ran dismayed away.
LORENZO. In such a night
Stood Dido with a willow in her hand
Upon the wild sea banks, and waft her love
To come again to Carthage.
JESSICA. In such a night
Medea gathered the enchanted herbs
That did renew old Æson.
LORENZO. In such a night
Did Jessica steal from the wealthy Jew,
And with an unthrift love did run from Venice
As far as Belmont.
JESSICA. In such a night
Did young Lorenzo swear he loved her well,
Stealing her soul with many vows of faith,
And ne'er a true one.
LORENZO. In such a night
Did pretty Jessica (like a little shrew!)
Slander her love, and he forgave it her.
JESSICA. I would out-night you, did no body come:
But, hark, I hear the footing of a man.

Stephano approaches

LORENZO. Who comes so fast in silence of the night?
STEPHANO. A friend.
LORENZO. A friend! what friend? your name, I pray you, friend?
STEPHANO. Stephano is my name, and I bring word
My mistress will before the break of day
Be here at Belmont—she doth stray about
By holy crosses, where she kneels and prays
For happy wedlock hours.
LORENZO. Who comes with her?
STEPHANO. None, but a holy hermit and her maid.
I pray you, is my master yet returned?
LORENZO. He is not, nor we have not heard from him.
But go we in, I pray thee, Jessica,
And ceremoniously let us prepare
Some welcome for the mistress of the house.

Lancelot enters

LANCELOT. Sola, sola! wo, ha, ho, sola, sola!
LORENZO. Who calls?
LANCELOT. Sola! did you see Master Lorenzo? Master Lorenzo? sola, sola!
LORENZO. Leave hollaing, man—here!
LANCELOT. Sola! where? where?
LORENZO. Here!
LANCELOT. Tell him, there's a post come from my master, with his horn full of good news. My master will be here ere morning. He goes
LORENZO. Sweet soul, let's in, and there expect their coming.
And yet no matter: why should we go in?
My friend Stephano, signify, I pray you,
Within the house, your mistress is at hand,
And bring your music forth into the air.
Stephano goes
How sweet the moonlight sleeps upon this bank!
Here will we sit and let the sounds of music
Creep in our ears—soft stillness and the night
Become the touches of sweet harmony.
Sit, Jessica. Look how the floor of heaven
Is thick inlaid with patens of bright gold.
There's not the smallest orb which thou behold'st
But in his motion like an angel sings,
Still choiring to the young-eyed cherubins;
Such harmony is in immortal souls!
But whilst this muddy vesture of decay
Doth grossly close it in, we cannot hear it.

Enter musicians

Come, ho, and wake Diana with a hymn!
With sweetest touches pierce your mistress' ear,
And draw her home with music. Music
JESSICA. I am never merry when I hear sweet music.
LORENZO. The reason is, your spirits are attentive:
For do but note a wild and wanton herd,
Or race of youthful and unhandled colts,
Fetching mad bounds, bellowing and neighing loud—
Which is the hot condition of their blood—
If they but hear perchance a trumpet sound,
Or any air of music touch their ears,
You shall perceive them make a mutual stand,
Their savage eyes turned to a modest gaze
By the sweet power of music: therefore, the poet
Did feign that Orpheus drew trees, stones, and floods,
Since nought so stockish, hard, and full of rage,
But music for the time doth change his nature.
The man that hath no music in himself,
Nor is not moved with concord of sweet sounds,
Is fit for treasons, stratagems, and spoils,
The motions of his spirit are dull as night,
And his affections dark as Erebus:
Let no such man be trusted. Mark the music.

Portia and Nerissa enter

PORTIA. That light we see is burning in my hall.
How far that little candle throws his beams!
So shines a good deed in a naughty world.

NERISSA. When the moon shone, we did not see the candle.
PORTIA. So doth the greater glory dim the less—
A substitute shines brightly as a king,
Until a king be by, and then his state
Empties itself, as doth an inland brook
Into the main of waters. Music! hark!
NERISSA. It is your music, madam, of the house.
PORTIA. Nothing is good, I see, without respect—
Methinks it sounds much sweeter than by day.
NERISSA. Silence bestows that virtue on it, madam.
PORTIA. The crow doth sing as sweetly as the lark
When neither is attended: and I think
The nightingale, if she should sing by day
When every goose is cackling, would be thought
No better a musician than the wren.
How many things by season seasoned are
To their right praise and true perfection.
Peace, ho! the moon sleeps with Endymion,
And would not be awaked. The music ceases
LORENZO. That is the voice,
Or I am much deceived, of Portia.
PORTIA. He knows me, as the blind man knows the cuckoo,
By the bad voice.
LORENZO. Dear lady, welcome home.
PORTIA. We have been praying for our husbands' welfare,
Which speed we hope the better for our words.
Are they returned?
LORENZO. Madam, they are not yet;
But there is come a messenger before,
To signify their coming.
PORTIA. Go in, Nerissa,
Give order to my servants that they take
No note at all of our being absent hence—
Nor you, Lorenzo—Jessica, nor you.
A tucket sounds
LORENZO. Your husband is at hand, I hear his trumpet.
We are no tell-tales, madam—fear you not.
PORTIA. This night methinks is but the daylight sick,
It looks a little paler—'tis a day,
Such as the day is when the sun is hid.

Bassanio, Antonio, Gratiano, and their followers come up

BASSANIO. We should hold day with the Antipodes,
If you would walk in absence of the sun.
PORTIA. Let me give light, but let me not be light,
For a light wife doth make a heavy husband,
And never be Bassanio so for me.
But God sort all. You are welcome home, my lord.
Gratiano and Nerissa talk apart
BASSANIO. I thank you, madam. Give welcome to my friend—
This is the man, this is Antonio,
To whom I am so infinitely bound.
PORTIA. You should in all sense be much bound to him,
For, as I hear, he was much bound for you.
ANTONIO. No more than I am well acquitted of.
PORTIA. Sir, you are very welcome to our house:
It must appear in other ways than words,
Therefore I scant this breathing courtesy.
GRATIANO. By yonder moon I swear you do me wrong,
In faith I gave it to the judge's clerk.
Would he were gelt that had it for my part,
Since you do take it, love, so much at heart.
PORTIA. A quarrel, ho, already! what's the matter?
GRATIANO. About a hoop of gold, a paltry ring
That she did give to me, whose posy was
For all the world like cutler's poetry
Upon a knife, 'Love me, and leave me not.'
NERISSA. What talk you of the posy or the value?
You swore to me when I did give it you
That you would wear it till your hour of death,
And that it should lie with you in your grave.
Though not for me, yet for your vehement oaths,
You should have been respective and have kept it.
Gave it a judge's clerk! no, God's my judge,
The clerk will ne'er wear hair on's face that had it.
GRATIANO. He will, an if he live to be a man.
NERISSA. Ay, if a woman live to be a man.
GRATIANO. Now, by this hand, I gave it to a youth,
A kind of boy, a little scrubbéd boy,
No higher than thyself, the judge's clerk,
A prating boy, that begged it as a fee—
I could not for my heart deny it him.
PORTIA. You were to blame, I must be plain with you,
To part so slightly with your wife's first gift,
A thing stuck on with oaths upon your finger,
And riveted with faith unto your flesh.
I gave my love a ring, and made him swear
Never to part with it, and here he stands;
I dare be sworn for him he would not leave it,
Nor pluck it from his finger, for the wealth
That the world masters. Now, in faith, Gratiano,
You give your wife too unkind cause of grief.
An 'twere to me, I should be mad at it.
BASSANIO. Why, I were best to cut my left hand off,
And swear I lost the ring defending it.
GRATIANO. My Lord Bassanio gave his ring away
Unto the judge that begged it, and indeed
Deserved it too; and then the boy, his clerk,
That took some pains in writing, he begged mine,
And neither man nor master would take aught
But the two rings.
PORTIA. What ring gave you, my lord?
Not that, I hope, which you received of me.
BASSANIO. If I could add a lie unto a fault,
I would deny it; but you see my finger
Hath not the ring upon it, it is gone.
PORTIA. Even so void is your false heart of truth!
By heaven, I will ne'er come in your bed
Until I see the ring.
NERISSA. Nor I in yours,
Till I again see mine.
BASSANIO. Sweet Portia,
If you did know to whom I gave the ring,
If you did know for whom I gave the ring,
And would conceive for what I gave the ring,
And how unwillingly I left the ring,
When naught would be accepted but the ring,
You would abate the strength of your displeasure.
PORTIA. If you had known the virtue of the ring,
Or half her worthiness that gave the ring,
Or your own honour to contain the ring,
You would not then have parted with the ring . . .
What man is there so much unreasonable,
If you had pleased to have defended it
With any terms of zeal, wanted the modesty

To urge the thing held as a ceremony?
Nerissa teaches me what to believe—
I'll die for't but some woman had the ring.
BASSANIO. No, by my honour, madam, by my soul,
No woman had it, but a civil doctor,
Which had refuse three thousand ducats of me,
And begged the ring, the which I did deny him,
And suffered him to go displeased away,
Even he that had held up the very life
Of my dear friend.... What should I say, sweet lady?
I was enforced to send it after him,
I was beset with shame and courtesy,
My honour would not let ingratitude
So much besmear it ... Pardon me, good lady,
For by these blessèd candles of the night,
Had you been there, I think you would have begged
The ring of me to give the worthy doctor.
PORTIA. Let not that doctor e'er come near my house.
Since he hath got the jewel that I loved,
And that which you did swear to keep for me,
I will become as liberal as you,
I'll not deny him any thing I have,
No, not my body, nor my husband's bed:
Know him I shall, I am well sure of it.
Lie not a night from home. Watch me, like Argus.
If you do not, if I be left alone,
Now, by mine honour, which is yet mine own,
I'll have that doctor for my bedfellow.
NERISSA. And I his clerk; therefore be well advised
How you do leave me to mine own protection.
GRATIANO. Well, do you so: let not me take him then,
For if I do, I'll mar the young clerk's pen.
ANTONIO. I am th'unhappy subject of these quarrels.
PORTIA. Sir, grieve not you—you are welcome notwithstanding.
BASSANIO. Portia, forgive me this enforcèd wrong,
And in the hearing of these many friends
I swear to thee, even by thine own fair eyes
Wherein I see myself—
PORTIA. Mark you but that!
In both my eyes he doubly sees himself:
In each eye, one. Swear by your double self,
And there's an oath of credit.
BASSANIO. Nay, but hear me....
Pardon this fault, and by my soul I swear,
I never more will break an oath with thee.
ANTONIO. I once did lend my body for his wealth,
Which but for him that had your husband's ring
Had quite miscarried. I dare be bound again,
My soul upon the forfeit, that your lord
Will never more break faith advisedly.
PORTIA. Then you shall be his surety.... Give him this,
And bid him keep it better than the other.
ANTONIO. Here, Lord Bassanio, swear to keep this ring.
BASSANIO. By heaven, it is the same I gave the doctor!
PORTIA. I had it of him: pardon me, Bassanio,
For by this ring the doctor lay with me.
NERISSA. And pardon me, my gentle Gratiano,
For that same scrubbèd boy, the doctor's clerk,
In lieu of this last night did lie with me.
GRATIANO. Why, this is like the mending of highways
In summer, where the ways are fair enough.
What! are we cuckolds ere we have deserved it?
PORTIA. Speak not so grossly. You are all amazed:
Here is a letter, read it at your leisure—
It comes from Padua, from Bellario.
There you shall find that Portia was the doctor,
Nerissa there, her clerk. Lorenzo here
Shall witness I set forth as soon as you,
And even but now returned; I have not yet
Entered my house. Antonio, you are welcome,
And I have better news in store for you
Than you expect: unseal this letter soon,
There you shall find three of your argosies
Are richly come to harbour suddenly.
You shall not know by what strange accident
I chancèd on this letter.
ANTONIO. I am dumb!
BASSANIO. Were you the doctor, and I knew you not?
GRATIANO. Were you the clerk that is to make me cuckold?
NERISSA. Ay, but the clerk that never means to do it,
Unless he live until he be a man.
BASSANIO. Sweet doctor, you shall be my bedfellow—
When I am absent, then lie with my wife.
ANTONIO. Sweet lady, you have given me life and living;
For here I read for certain that my ships
Are safely come to road.
PORTIA. How now, Lorenzo?
My clerk hath some good comforts too for you.
NERISSA. Ay, and I'll give them him without a fee.
There do I give to you and Jessica,
From the rich Jew, a special deed of gift,
After his death, of all he dies possessed of.
LORENZO. Fair ladies, you drop manna in the way
Of starvèd people.
PORTIA. It is almost morning,
And yet I am sure you are not satisfied
Of these events at full. Let us go in,
And charge us there upon inter'gatories,
And we will answer all things faithfully.
GRATIANO. Let it be so. The first inter'gatory
That my Nerissa shall be sworn on is,
Whether till the next night she had rather stay,
Or go to bed now, being two hours to-day:
But were the day come, I should wish it dark,
Till I were couching with the doctor's clerk.
Well, while I live I'll fear no other thing
So sore as keeping safe Nerissa's ring. They all go

As You Like It

ACT 1

Scene I: An orchard, near Oliver's house

Orlando and Adam

ORLANDO. As I remember, Adam, it was upon this fashion: a' bequeathed me by will but poor thousand crowns and, as thou say'st, charged my brother on his blessing to breed me well: and there begins my sadness . . . My brother Jaques he keeps at school, and report speaks goldenly of his profit: for my part, he keeps me rustically at home, or, to speak more properly, stays me here at home unkept: for call you that 'keeping' for a gentleman of my birth, that differs not from the stalling of an ox? His horses are bred better—for, besides that they are fair with their feeding, they are taught their manage, and to that end riders dearly hired: but I, his brother, gain nothing under him but growth, for the which his animals on his dunghills are as much bound to him as I. . . . Besides this nothing that he so plentifully gives me, the something that nature gave me his countenance seems to take from me: he lets me feed with his hinds, bars me the place of a brother, and, as much as in him lies, mines my gentility with my education. . . . This is it, Adam, that grieves me—and the spirit of my father, which I think is within me, begins to mutiny against this servitude. . . . I will no longer endure it, though yet I know no wise remedy how to avoid it.

Oliver enters

ADAM. Yonder comes my master, your brother.

ORLANDO. Go apart, Adam, and thou shalt hear how he will shake me up.

OLIVER. Now, sir! what make you here?

ORLANDO. Nothing: I am not taught to make any thing.

OLIVER. What mar you then, sir?

ORLANDO. Marry, sir, I am helping you to mar that which God made, a poor unworthy brother of yours, with idleness.

OLIVER. Marry, sir, be better employed, and be naught awhile.

ORLANDO. Shall I keep your hogs and eat husks with them? What prodigal portion have I spent, that I should come to such penury?

OLIVER. Know you where you are, sir?

ORLANDO. O, sir, very well: here in your orchard.

OLIVER. Know you before whom, sir?

ORLANDO. Ay, better than him I am before knows me . . . I know you are my eldest brother, and in the gentle condition of blood you should so know me . . . The courtesy of nations allows you my better, in that you are the first-born, but the same tradition takes not away my blood, were there twenty brothers betwixt us: I have as much of my father in me as you, albeit I confess your coming before me is nearer to his reverence.

OLIVER. What, boy! He strikes him

ORLANDO. Come, come, elder brother, you are too young in this. He takes him by the throat

OLIVER. Wilt thou lay hands on me, villain?

ORLANDO. I am no villain: I am the youngest son of Sir Rowland de Boys, he was my father, and he is thrice a villain that says such a father begot villains . . . Wert thou not my brother, I would not take this hand from thy throat, till this other had pulled out thy tongue for saying so—thou hast railed on thyself.

ADAM. Sweet masters, be patient. For your father's remembrance, be at accord.

OLIVER. Let me go, I say.

ORLANDO. I will not till I please: you shall hear me . . . My father charged you in his will to give me good education: you have trained me like a peasant, obscuring and hiding from me all gentleman-like qualities . . . The spirit of my father grows strong in me, and I will no longer endure it: therefore allow me such exercises as may become a gentleman, or give me the poor allottery my father left me by testament—with that I will go buy my fortunes.

OLIVER. And what wilt thou do? beg when that is spent? Well, sir, get you in: I will not long be troubled with you: you shall have some part of your 'will.' I pray you, leave me.

ORLANDO. I will no further offend you than becomes me for my good. He turns to go

OLIVER. Get you with him, you old dog.

ADAM. Is 'old dog' my reward? Most true, I have lost my teeth in your service . . . God be with my old master! he would not have spoke such a word.

Orlando and Adam depart

OLIVER. Is it even so? begin you to grow upon me? I will physic your rankness, and yet give no thousand crowns neither . . . Holla, Dennis!

Dennis enters

DENNIS. Calls your worship?

OLIVER. Was not Charles, the duke's wrestler, here to speak with me?

DENNIS. So please you, he is here at the door, and importunes access to you.

OLIVER. Call him in . . . [Dennis goes] 'Twill be a good way . . . and to-morrow the wrestling is.

Charles enters

CHARLES. Good morrow to your worship.

OLIVER. Good Monsieur Charles . . . What's the new news at the new court?

CHARLES. There's no news at the court, sir, but the old news: that is, the old duke is banished by his younger brother the new duke, and three or four loving lords have put themselves into voluntary exile with him, whose lands and revenues enrich the new duke, therefore he gives them good leave to wander.

OLIVER. Can you tell if Rosalind, the duke's daughter, be banished with her father?

CHARLES. O, no; for the duke's daughter, her cousin, so loves her—being ever from their cradles bred together—that she would have followed her exile, or have died to stay behind her . . . She is at the court, and no less beloved of her uncle than his own daughter—and never two ladies loved as they do.

OLIVER. Where will the old duke live?

CHARLES. They say he is already in the forest of Arden, and a many merry men with him; and there they live like the old Robin Hood of England: they say many young gentlemen flock to him every day, and fleet the time carelessly as they did in the golden world.

OLIVER. What, you wrestle to-morrow before the new duke?

CHARLES. Marry, do I, sir: and I came to acquaint you with a matter . . . I am given, sir, secretly to understand that your younger brother, Orlando, hath a disposition to come in disguised against me to try a fall: to-morrow, sir, I wrestle for my credit, and he that escapes me without some broken limb shall acquit him well: your brother is but young and tender, and for your love I would be loath to foil him, as I must for my own honour if he come in: therefore, out of my love to you, I came hither to acquaint you withal, that either you might stay him from his intendment, or brook such disgrace well as he shall run into, in that it is a thing of his own search, and altogether against my will.

OLIVER. Charles, I thank thee for thy love to me, which thou shalt find I will most kindly requite . . . I had myself notice of my brother's purpose herein, and have by underhand means laboured to dissuade him from it; but he is resolute. . . . I'll tell thee, Charles—it is the stubbornest young fellow of France, full of ambition, an envious emulator of every man's good parts, a secret and villanous contriver against me his natural brother: therefore use thy discretion, I had as lief thou didst break his neck as his finger. . . . And thou wert best look to't; for if thou dost him any slight disgrace, or if he do not mightily grace himself on thee, he will practise against thee by poison, entrap thee by some treacherous device, and never leave thee till he hath ta'en thy life by some indirect means or other: for, I assure thee (and almost with tears I speak it), there is not one so young, and so villanous this day living. . . . I speak but brotherly of him, but should I anatomize him to thee as he is, I must blush and weep, and thou must look pale and wonder.

CHARLES. I am heartily glad I came hither to you . . . If he come to-morrow, I'll give him his payment: if ever he go alone again, I'll never wrestle for prize more: and so, God keep your worship!

OLIVER. Farewell, good Charles. . . . [Charles goes] Now will I stir this gamester: I hope I shall see an end of him; for my soul (yet I know not why) hates nothing more than he . . . Yet he's gentle, never schooled and yet learned, full of noble device, of all sorts enchantingly beloved, and indeed so much in the heart of the world, and especially of my own people, who best know him, that I am altogether misprized: but it shall not be so long— this wrestler shall clear all . . . Nothing remains but that I kindle the boy thither, which now I'll go about.

He goes

Scene 2: A lawn near the palace of Duke Frederick

Enter Rosalind and Celia

CELIA. I pray thee, Rosalind, sweet my coz, be merry.

ROSALIND. Dear Celia, I show more mirth than I am mistress of, and would you yet I were merrier? Unless you could teach me to forget a banished father, you must not learn me how to remember any extraordinary pleasure.

CELIA. Herein, I see, thou lov'st me not with the full weight that I love thee; if my uncle, thy banished father, had banished thy uncle, the duke my father, so thou hadst been still with me, I could have taught my love to take thy father for mine; so wouldst thou, if the truth of thy love to me were so righteously tempered as mine is to thee.

ROSALIND. Well, I will forget the condition of my estate, to rejoice in yours.

CELIA. You know my father hath no child but I, nor none is like to have; and truly when he dies, thou shalt be his heir: for what he hath taken away from thy father perforce, I will render thee again in affection . . . by mine honour I will, and when I break that oath, let me turn monster: therefore, my sweet Rose, my dear Rose, be merry.

ROSALIND. From henceforth I will, coz, and devise sports . . . Let me see—what think you of falling in love?

CELIA. Marry, I prithee, do, to make sport withal: but love no man in good earnest, nor no further in sport neither, than with safety of a pure blush thou mayst in honour come off again.

ROSALIND. What shall be our sport then?

CELIA. Let us sit and mock the good housewife Fortune from her wheel, that her gifts may henceforth be bestowed equally.

ROSALIND. I would we could do so; for her benefits are mightily misplaced, and the bountiful blind woman doth most mistake in her gifts to women.

CELIA. 'Tis true, for those that she makes fair she scarce makes honest, and those that she makes honest she makes very ill-favouredly.

ROSALIND. Nay, now thou goest from Fortune's office to Nature's: Fortune reigns in gifts of the world, not in the lineaments of Nature.

Touchstone approaches

CELIA. No? When Nature hath made a fair creature, may she not by Fortune fall into the fire? Though Nature hath given us wit to flout at Fortune, hath not Fortune sent in this fool to cut off the argument?

ROSALIND. Indeed, there is Fortune too hard for Nature, when Fortune makes Nature's natural the cutter-off of Nature's wit.

CELIA. Peradventure this is not Fortune's work neither, but Nature's, who perceiveth our natural wits too dull to reason of such goddesses and hath sent this natural for our whetstone: for always the dulness of the fool is the whetstone of the wits. . . . How now, wit! whither wander you?

TOUCHSTONE. Mistress, you must come away to your father.

CELIA. Were you made the messenger?

TOUCHSTONE. No, by mine honour, but I was bid to come for you.

ROSALIND. Where learned you that oath, fool?

TOUCHSTONE. Of a certain knight, that swore by his honour they were good pancakes, and swore by his honour the mustard was naught: now I'll stand to it, the pancakes were naught and the mustard was good, and yet was not the knight forsworn.

CELIA. How prove you that, in the great heap of your knowledge?

ROSALIND. Ay, marry, now unmuzzle your wisdom.

TOUCHSTONE. Stand you both forth now: stroke your chins, and swear by your beards that I am a knave.

CELIA. By our beards (if we had them) thou art.

TOUCHSTONE. By my knavery (if I had it) then I were: but if you swear by that that is not, you are not forsworn: no more was this knight, swearing by his honour, for he never had any; or if he had, he had sworn it away, before ever he saw those pancakes or that mustard.

CELIA. Prithee, who is't that thou mean'st?

TOUCHSTONE [to Rosalind]. One that old Frederick, your father, loves.

ROSALIND. My father's love is enough to honour him. Enough! speak no more of him—you'll be whipped for taxation one of these days.

TOUCHSTONE. The more pity, that fools may not speak wisely what wise men do foolishly.

CELIA. By my troth, thou sayest true: for since the little wit that fools have was silenced, the little foolery that wise men have makes a great show . . . Here comes Monsieur Le Beau.

Le Beau enters

ROSALIND. With his mouth full of news.

CELIA. Which he will put on us, as pigeons feed their young.

ROSALIND. Then shall we be news-crammed.

CELIA. All the better: we shall be the more marketable. Bon jour, Monsieur Le Beau! what's the news?

LE BEAU. Fair princess, you have lost much good sport.

CELIA. Sport? Of what colour?

LE BEAU. What colour, madam? How shall I answer you?

ROSALIND. As wit and fortune will.

TOUCHSTONE. Or as the Destinies decree.

CELIA. Well said, that was laid on with a trowel.

TOUCHSTONE. Nay, if I keep not my rank—

ROSALIND. Thou losest thy old smell.

LE BEAU. You amaze me, ladies: I would have told you of good wrestling, which you have lost the sight of.

ROSALIND. Yet tell us the manner of the wrestling.

LE BEAU. I will tell you the beginning, and, if it please your ladyships, you may see the end—for the best is yet to do, and here, where you are, they are coming to perform it.

CELIA. Well, the beginning, that is dead and buried?

LE BEAU. There comes an old man and his three sons—

CELIA. I could match this beginning with an old tale.

LE BEAU. Three proper young men, of excellent growth and presence.

ROSALIND. With bills on their necks: 'Be it known unto all men by these presents.'

LE BEAU. The eldest of the three wrestled with Charles, the duke's wrestler, which Charles in a moment threw him and broke three of his ribs, that there is little hope of life in him: so he served the second, and so the third . . . Yonder they lie, the poor old man their father making such pitiful dole over them that all the beholders take his part with weeping.

ROSALIND. Alas!

TOUCHSTONE. But what is the sport, monsieur, that the ladies have lost?

LE BEAU. Why, this that I speak of.

TOUCHSTONE. Thus men may grow wiser every day. It is the first time that ever I heard breaking of ribs was sport for ladies.

CELIA. Or I, I promise thee.

ROSALIND. But is there any else longs to see this broken music in his sides? is there yet another dotes upon rib-breaking? Shall we see this wrestling, cousin?

LE BEAU. You must if you stay here, for here is the place appointed for the wrestling, and they are ready to perform it.

CELIA. Yonder, sure, they are coming. . . . Let us now stay and see it.

A flourish of trumpets. Enter Duke Frederick with his lords, Orlando, Charles, and attendants

DUKE FREDERICK. Come on. Since the youth will not be entreated, his own peril on his forwardness.

ROSALIND. Is yonder the man?

LE BEAU. Even he, madam.

CELIA. Alas, he is too young: yet he looks successfully.

DUKE FREDERICK. How now, daughter and cousin! are you crept hither to see the wrestling?

ROSALIND. Ay, my liege, so please you give us leave.

DUKE FREDERICK. You will take little delight in it, I can tell you, there is such odds in the man . . . In pity of the challenger's youth I would fain dissuade him, but he will not be entreated. . . . Speak to him, ladies—see if you can move him.

CELIA. Call him hither, good Monsieur Le Beau.

DUKE FREDERICK. Do so: I'll not be by.

LE BEAU. Monsieur the challenger, the princess calls for you.

ORLANDO. I attend them with all respect and duty.

ROSALIND. Young man, have you challenged Charles the wrestler?

ORLANDO. No, fair princess: he is the general challenger. I come but in, as others do, to try with him the strength of my youth.

CELIA. Young gentleman, your spirits are too bold for your years . . . You have seen cruel proof of this man's strength. If you saw yourself with your eyes, or knew yourself with your judgement, the fear of your adventure would counsel you to a more equal enterprise. . . . We pray you, for your own sake, to embrace your own safety, and give over this attempt.

ROSALIND. Do, young sir, your reputation shall not therefore be misprized: we will make it our suit to the duke that the wrestling might not go forward.

ORLANDO. I beseech you, punish me not with your hard thoughts, wherein I confess me much guilty to deny so fair and excellent ladies any thing. But let your fair eyes and gentle wishes go with me to my trial: wherein if I be foiled, there is but one shamed that was never gracious; if killed, but one dead that is willing to be so: I shall do my friends no wrong, for I have none to lament me; the world no injury, for in it I have nothing: only in the world I fill up a place, which may be better supplied when I have made it empty.

ROSALIND. The little strength that I have, I would it were with you.

CELIA. And mine, to eke out hers.

ROSALIND. Fare you well … Pray heaven, I be deceived in you!
CELIA. Your heart's desires be with you!
CHARLES. Come, where is this young gallant that is so desirous to lie with his mother earth?
ORLANDO. Ready, sir, but his will hath in it a more modest working.
DUKE FREDERICK. You shall try but one fall.
CHARLES. No, I warrant your grace, you shall not entreat him to a second, that have so mightily persuaded him from a first.
ORLANDO. An you mean to mock me after, you should not have mocked me before: but come your ways.
ROSALIND. Now, Hercules be thy speed, young man!
CELIA. I would I were invisible, to catch the strong fellow by the leg. The wrestling begins
ROSALIND. O excellent young man!
CELIA. If I had a thunderbolt in mine eye, I can tell who should down.
Charles is thrown; a great shout
DUKE FREDERICK. No more, no more.
ORLANDO. Yes, I beseech your grace—I am not yet well breathed.
DUKE FREDERICK. How dost thou, Charles?
LE BEAU. He cannot speak, my lord.
DUKE FREDERICK. Bear him away …
They take up Charles and carry him out
What is thy name, young man?
ORLANDO. Orlando, my liege; the youngest son of Sir Rowland de Boys.
DUKE FREDERICK. I would thou hadst been son to some man else.
The world esteemed thy father honourable,
But I did find him still mine enemy:
Thou shouldst have better pleased me with this deed,
Hadst thou descended from another house:
But fare thee well, thou art a gallant youth.
I would thou hadst told me of another father.
Duke Frederick, Le Beau and the other lords depart
CELIA. Were I my father, coz, would I do this?
ORLANDO. I am more proud to be Sir Rowland's son,
His youngest son, and would not change that calling,
To be adopted heir to Frederick.
ROSALIND. My father loved Sir Rowland as his soul,
And all the world was of my father's mind.
Had I before known this young man his son,
I should have given him tears unto entreaties,
Ere he should thus have ventured.
CELIA. Gentle cousin,
Let us go thank him, and encourage him:
My father's rough and envious disposition
Sticks me at heart … Sir, you have well deserved.
If you do keep your promises in love
But justly as you have exceeded promise,
Your mistress shall be happy.
ROSALIND [takes a chain from her neck]. Gentleman,
Wear this for me … one out of suits with fortune,
That could give more, but that her hand lacks means. …
Shall we go, coz?
CELIA. Ay: fare you well, fair gentleman.
ORLANDO. Can I not say, 'I thank you'? My better parts
Are all thrown down, and that which here stands up
Is but a quintain, a mere lifeless block.
ROSALIND. He calls us back: my pride fell with my fortunes—
I'll ask him what he would … Did you call, sir?
Sir, you have wrestled well and overthrown
More than your enemies.
CELIA. Will you go, coz?
ROSALIND. Have with you … Fare you well.
She goes, Celia following
ORLANDO. What passion hangs these weights upon my tongue?
I cannot speak to her, yet she urged conference.

Le Beau returns

O poor Orlando, thou art overthrown!
Or Charles, or something weaker, masters thee.
LE BEAU. Good sir, I do in friendship counsel you
To leave this place … Albeit you have deserved
High commendation, true applause, and love,
Yet such is now the duke's condition,
That he misconstrues all that you have done …
The duke is humorous—what he is, indeed,
More suits you to conceive than I to speak of.
ORLANDO. I thank you, sir: and, pray you, tell me this,
Which of the two was daughter of the duke,
That here was at the wrestling?
LE BEAU. Neither his daughter, if we judge by manners,
But yet, indeed, the smaller is his daughter.
The other is daughter to the banished duke,
And here detained by her usurping uncle,
To keep his daughter company—whose loves
Are dearer than the natural bond of sisters …
But I can tell you that of late this duke
Hath ta'en displeasure 'gainst his gentle niece,
Grounded upon no other argument
But that the people praise her for her virtues,
And pity her for her good father's sake;
And, on my life, his malice 'gainst the lady
Will suddenly break forth … Sir, fare you well.
Hereafter, in a better world than this,
I shall desire more love and knowledge of you.
ORLANDO. I rest much bounden to you: fare you well. … Le Beau goes
Thus must I from the smoke into the smother,
From tyrant duke unto a tyrant brother. …
But heavenly Rosalind! He departs

Scene 3: A room in the palace of Duke Frederick

Enter Rosalind and Celia

CELIA. Why cousin, why Rosalind … Cupid have mercy! Not a word?
ROSALIND. Not one to throw at a dog.
CELIA. No, thy words are too precious to be cast away upon curs, throw some of them at me; come, lame me with reasons.
ROSALIND. Then there were two cousins laid up, when the one should be lamed with reasons, and the other mad without any.
CELIA. But is all this for your father?
ROSALIND. No, some of it is for my child's father …
O, how full of briars is this working-day world!
CELIA. They are but burs, cousin, thrown upon thee

in holiday foolery. If we walk not in the trodden paths, our very petticoats will catch them.
ROSALIND. I could shake them off my coat—these burs are in my heart.
CELIA. Hem them away.
ROSALIND. I would try, if I could cry 'hem' and have him.
CELIA. Come, come, wrestle with thy affections.
ROSALIND. O, they take the part of a better wrestler than myself.
CELIA. O, a good wish upon you! you will try in time, in despite of a fall.... But turning these jests out of service, let us talk in good earnest: is it possible, on such a sudden, you should fall into so strong a liking with old Sir Rowland's youngest son?
ROSALIND. The duke my father loved his father dearly.
CELIA. Doth it therefore ensue that you should love his son dearly? By this kind of chase, I should hate him, for my father hated his father dearly; yet I hate not Orlando.
ROSALIND. No, faith, hate him not, for my sake.
CELIA. Why should I not? doth he not deserve well?
ROSALIND. Let me love him for that, and do you love him because I do.... [Duke Frederick enters, preceded by attendants and the lords of his council] Look, here comes the duke.
CELIA. With his eyes full of anger.
DUKE FREDERICK. Mistress, dispatch you with your safest haste
And get you from our court.
ROSALIND. Me, uncle?
DUKE FREDERICK. You, cousin.
Within these ten days if that thou be'st found
So near our public court as twenty miles,
Thou diest for it.
ROSALIND. I do beseech your grace,
Let me the knowledge of my fault bear with me:
If with myself I hold intelligence
Or have acquaintance with mine own desires,
If that I do not dream or be not frantic—
As I do trust I am not—then, dear uncle,
Never so much as in a thought unborn
Did I offend your highness.
DUKE FREDERICK. Thus do all traitors!
If their purgation did consist in words,
They are as innocent as grace itself:
Let it suffice thee that I trust thee not.
ROSALIND. Yet your mistrust cannot make me a traitor:
Tell me whereon the likelihood depends.
DUKE FREDERICK. Thou art thy father's daughter, there's enough.
ROSALIND. So was I when your highness took his dukedom,
So was I when your highness banished him;
Treason is not inherited, my lord,
Or, if we did derive it from our friends,
What's that to me? my father was no traitor,
Then, good my liege, mistake me not so much
To think my poverty is treacherous.
CELIA. Dear sovereign, hear me speak.
DUKE FREDERICK. Ay, Celia, we stayed her for your sake,
Else had she with her father ranged along.
CELIA. I did not then entreat to have her stay,
It was your pleasure and your own remorse.
I was too young that time to value her,
But now I know her: if she be a traitor,
Why so am I: we still have slept together,
Rose at an instant, learned, played, eat together,
And wheresoe'er we went, like Juno's swans,
Still we went coupled and inseparable.
DUKE FREDERICK. She is too subtle for thee, and her smoothness,
Her very silence and her patience
Speak to the people, and they pity her ...
Thou art a fool—she robs thee of thy name,
And thou wilt show more bright and seem more virtuous
When she is gone: then open not thy lips.
Firm and irrevocable is my doom
Which I have passed upon her—she is banished.
CELIA. Pronounce that sentence then on me, my liege,
I cannot live out of her company.
DUKE FREDERICK. You are a fool ... You, niece, provide yourself.
If you outstay the time, upon mine honour,
And in the greatness of my word, you die.
He leaves, his lords following him
CELIA. O my poor Rosalind, whither wilt thou go?
Wilt thou change fathers? I will give thee mine ...
I charge thee, be not thou more grieved than I am.
ROSALIND. I have more cause.
CELIA. Thou hast not, cousin.
Prithee, be cheerful; know'st thou not, the duke
Hath banished me his daughter?
ROSALIND. That he hath not.
CELIA. No, hath not? Rosalind lacks then the love
Which teacheth thee that thou and I am one.
Shall we be sundred? shall we part, sweet girl?
No, let my father seek another heir ...
Therefore devise with me how we may fly,
Whither to go and what to bear with us,
And do not seek to take your change upon you,
To bear your griefs yourself and leave me out;
For, by this heaven, now at our sorrows pale,
Say what thou canst, I'll go along with thee.
ROSALIND. Why, whither shall we go?
CELIA. To seek my uncle in the forest of Arden.
ROSALIND. Alas, what danger will it be to us,
Maids as we are, to travel forth so far!
Beauty provoketh thieves sooner than gold.
CELIA. I'll put myself in poor and mean attire,
And with a kind of umber smirch my face,
The like do you, so shall we pass along
And never stir assailants.
ROSALIND. Were it not better,
Because that I am more than common tall,
That I did suit me all points like a man?
A gallant curtle-axe upon my thigh,
A boar-spear in my hand, and in my heart
Lie there what hidden woman's fear there will,
We'll have a swashing and a martial outside,
As many other mannish cowards have
That do outface it with their semblances.
CELIA. What shall I call thee when thou art a man?
ROSALIND. I'll have no worse a name than Jove's own page,
And therefore look you call me Ganymede.
But what will you be called?
CELIA. Something that hath a reference to my state;
No longer Celia, but Aliena.

ROSALIND. But, cousin, what if we assayed to steal
The clownish fool out of your father's court?
Would he not be a comfort to our travel?
CELIA. He'll go along o'er the wide world with me,
Leave me alone to woo him ... Let's away,
And get our jewels and our wealth together,
Devise the fittest time and safest way
To hide us from pursuit that will be made
After my flight ... Now go we in content
To liberty, and not to banishment. They go

ACT 2

Scene 1: The forest of Arden

Enter the exiled Duke, Amiens, and two or three Lords like foresters

DUKE. Now, my co-mates and brothers in exile,
Hath not old custom made this life more sweet
Than that of painted pomp? Are not these woods
More free from peril than the envious court?
Here feel we not the penalty of Adam,
The seasons' difference?—as the icy fang
And churlish chiding of the winter's wind,
Which, when it bites and blows upon my body,
Even till I shrink with cold, I smile and say
'This is no flattery: these are counsellors
That feelingly persuade me what I am' ...
Sweet are the uses of adversity,
Which like the toad, ugly and venomous,
Wears yet a precious jewel in his head:
And this our life, exempt from public haunt,
Finds tongues in trees, books in the running brooks,
Sermons in stones, and good in every thing.
I would not change it.
AMIENS. Happy is your grace,
That can translate the stubbornness of fortune
Into so quiet and so sweet a style.
DUKE. Come, shall we go and kill us venison?
And yet it irks me the poor dappled fools,
Being native burghers of this desert city,
Should in their own confines with forkéd heads
Have their round haunches gored.
FIRST LORD. Indeed, my lord,
The melancholy Jaques grieves at that,
And, in that kind, swears you do more usurp
Than doth your brother that hath banished you:
To-day my Lord of Amiens and myself
Did steal behind him as he lay along
Under an oak, whose antique root peeps out
Upon the brook that brawls along this wood,
To the which place a poor sequestred stag,
That from the hunter's aim had ta'en a hurt,
Did come to languish; and, indeed, my lord,
The wretched animal heaved forth such groans,
That their discharge did stretch his leathern coat
Almost to bursting, and the big round tears
Coursed one another down his innocent nose
In piteous chase: and thus the hairy fool,
Much markéd of the melancholy Jaques,
Stood on th'extremest verge of the swift brook,
Augmenting it with tears.
DUKE. But what said Jaques?
Did he not moralize this spectacle?
FIRST LORD. O, yes, into a thousand similes.
First, for his weeping in the needless stream;
'Poor deer,' quoth he, 'thou mak'st a testament
As worldlings do, giving thy sum of more
To that which had too much': then, being there alone,
Left and abandoned of his velvet friends;
''Tis right,' quoth he, 'thus misery doth part
The flux of company': anon a careless herd,
Full of the pasture, jumps along by him
And never stays to greet him; 'Ay,' quoth Jaques,
'Sweep on, you fat and greasy citizens!
'Tis just the fashion; wherefore do you look
Upon that poor and broken bankrupt there?'
Thus most invectively he pierceth through
The body of the country, city, court,
Yea, and of this our life, swearing that we
Are mere usurpers, tyrants and what's worse,
To fright the animals and to kill them up
In their assigned and native dwelling-place.
DUKE. And did you leave him in this contemplation?
SECOND LORD. We did, my lord, weeping and commenting
Upon the sobbing deer.
DUKE. Show me the place,
I love to cope him in these sullen fits,
For then he's full of matter.
FIRST LORD. I'll bring you to him straight.
They go

Scene 2: A room in the palace of Duke Frederick

Enter Duke Frederick, lords, and attendants

DUKE FREDERICK. Can it be possible that no man saw them?
It cannot be. Some villains of my court
Are of consent and sufferance in this.
FIRST LORD. I cannot hear of any that did see her.
The ladies, her attendants of her chamber,
Saw her abed, and in the morning early
They found the bed untreasured of their mistress.
SECOND LORD. My lord, the roynish clown, at whom so oft
Your grace was wont to laugh, is also missing.
Hisperia, the princess' gentlewoman,
Confesses that she secretly o'erheard
Your daughter and her cousin much commend
The parts and graces of the wrestler
That did but lately foil the sinewy Charles,
And she believes wherever they are gone
That youth is surely in their company.
DUKE FREDERICK. Send to his brother, fetch that gallant hither.
If he be absent, bring his brother to me—
I'll make him find him: do this suddenly;
And let not search and inquisition quail
To bring again these foolish runaways.
They go

Scene 3: The orchard near Oliver's house

Enter Orlando and Adam, meeting

ORLANDO. Who's there?
ADAM. What! my young master? O my gentle master,
O my sweet master, O you memory
Of old Sir Rowland ... why, what make you here?
Why are you virtuous? Why do people love you?
And wherefore are you gentle, strong, and valiant?

Why would you be so fond to overcome
The bonny prizer of the humorous duke?
Your praise is come too swiftly home before you.
Know you not, master, to some kind of men
Their graces serve them but as enemies?
No more do yours; your virtues, gentle master,
And sanctified and holy traitors to you . . .
O, what a world is this, when what is comely
Envenoms him that bears it!
ORLANDO. Why, what's the matter?
ADAM. O unhappy youth,
Come not within these doors; within this roof
The enemy of all your graces lives . . .
Your brother—no, no brother—yet the son
(Yet not the son, I will not call him son)
Of him I was about to call his father—
Hath heard your praises, and this night he means
To burn the lodging where you use to lie,
And you within it: if he fail of that,
He will have other means to cut you off:
I overheard him . . . and his practices . . .
This is no place, this house is but a butchery;
Abhor it, fear it, do not enter it.
ORLANDO. Why, whither, Adam, wouldst thou have me go?
ADAM. No matter whither, so you come not here.
ORLANDO. What, wouldst thou have me go and beg my food?
Or with a base and boisterous sword enforce
A thievish living on the common road?
This I must do, or know not what to do:
Yet this I will not do, do how I can—
I rather will subject me to the malice
Of a diverted blood and bloody brother.
ADAM. But do not so: I have five hundred crowns,
The thrifty hire I saved under your father,
Which I did store to be my foster-nurse
When service should in my old limbs lie lame,
And unregarded age in corners thrown.
Take that, and He that doth the ravens feed,
Yea providently caters for the sparrow,
Be comfort to my age . . . Here is the gold;
All this I give you. Let me be your servant.
Though I look old, yet I am strong and lusty;
For in my youth I never did apply
Hot and rebellious liquors in my blood,
Nor did not with unbashful forehead woo
The means of weakness and debility.
Therefore my age is as a lusty winter,
Frosty, but kindly: let me go with you,
I'll do the service of a younger man
In all your business and necessities.
ORLANDO. O good old man, how well in thee appears
The constant service of the antique world,
When service sweat for duty, not for meed!
Thou art not for the fashion of these times,
Where none will sweat but for promotion,
And having that do choke their service up
Even with the having—it is not so with thee . . .
But, poor old man, thou prun'st a rotten tree,
That cannot so much as a blossom yield,
In lieu of all thy pains and husbandry.
But come thy ways, we'll go along together,
And ere we have thy youthful wages spent,
We'll light upon some settled low content.
ADAM. Master, go on, and I will follow thee
To the last gasp with truth and loyalty.
From seventeen years till now almost fourscore
Here lived I, but now live here no more.
At seventeen years many their fortunes seek,
But at fourscore it is too late a week.
Yet fortune cannot recompense me better
Than to die well, and not my master's debtor.
They leave

Scene 4: The forest

Enter Rosalind (as Ganymede) in forester's dress, and Celia (as Aliena) clad as a shepherdess, with Touchstone

ROSALIND. O Jupiter! how weary are my spirits!

TOUCHSTONE. I care not for my spirits, if my legs were not weary.

ROSALIND. I could find in my heart to disgrace my man's apparel, and to cry like a woman: but I must comfort the weaker vessel, as doublet-and-hose ought to show itself courageous to petticoat: therefore courage, good Aliena!

CELIA. I pray you, bear with me, I cannot go no further.

TOUCHSTONE. For my part, I had rather bear with you than bear you: yet I should bear no cross if I did bear you, for I think you have no money in your purse.

ROSALIND. Well, this is the forest of Arden!

TOUCHSTONE. Ay, now am I in Arden, the more fool I. When I was at home I was in a better place, but travellers must be content.

ROSALIND. Ay,
Be so, good Touchstone . . .

Corin and Silvius enter

Look you, who comes here—
A young man and an old in solemn talk.
CORIN. That is the way to make her scorn you still.
SILVIUS. O Corin, that thou knew'st how I do love her!
CORIN. I partly guess: for I have loved ere now.
SILVIUS. No, Corin, being old, thou canst not guess,
Though in thy youth thou wast as true a lover
As ever sighed upon a midnight pillow:
But if thy love were ever like to mine—
As sure I think did never man love so—
How many actions most ridiculous
Hast thou been drawn to by thy fantasy?
CORIN. Into a thousand that I have forgotten.
SILVIUS. O, thou didst then ne'er love so heartily.
If thou remembrest not the slightest folly
That ever love did make thee run into,
Thou hast not loved. . . .
Or if thou hast not sat as I do now,
Wearing thy hearer in thy mistress' praise,
Thou hast not loved. . . .
Or if thou hast not broke from company
Abruptly, as my passion now makes me,
Thou hast not loved. . . .
O Phebe, Phebe, Phebe! He goes

ROSALIND. Alas, poor shepherd! searching of thy wound, I have by hard adventure found mine own.

TOUCHSTONE. And I mine: I remember, when I was in love I broke my sword upon a stone, and bid him take that for coming a-night to Jane Smile, and I remember the kissing of her batler and the cow's dugs that her pretty chopt hands had milked; and I remember the wooing of a peascod instead of her, from whom I took two cods, and giving her them again, said with weeping tears, 'Wear these for my sake' . . . We that are true lovers run into strange capers; but as all is mortal in nature, so is all nature in love mortal in folly.

ROSALIND. Thou speak'st wiser than thou art ware of.

TOUCHSTONE. Nay, I shall ne'er be ware of mine own wit till I break my shins against it.

ROSALIND. Jove, Jove! this shepherd's passion
Is much upon my fashion.

TOUCHSTONE. And mine—but it grows something stale with me.

CELIA. I pray you, one of you question yond man
If he for gold will give us any food,
I faint almost to death.

TOUCHSTONE. Holla; you, clown!

ROSALIND. Peace, fool, he's not thy kinsman.

CORIN. Who calls?

TOUCHSTONE. Your betters, sir.

CORIN. Else are they very wretched.

ROSALIND. Peace, I say . . . Good even to you, friend.

CORIN. And to you, gentle sir, and to you all.

ROSALIND. I prithee, shepherd, if that love or gold
Can in this desert place buy entertainment,
Bring us where we may rest ourselves and feed:
Here's a young maid with travel much oppressed,
And faints for succour.

CORIN. Fair sir, I pity her,
And wish, for her sake more than for mine own,
My fortunes were more able to relieve her:
But I am shepherd to another man,
And do not shear the fleeces that I graze:
My master is of churlish disposition,
And little recks to find the way to heaven
By doing deeds of hospitality:
Besides, his cote, his flocks and bounds of feed
Are now on sale, and at our sheepcote now
By reason of his absence there is nothing
That you will feed on; but what is, come see,
And in my voice most welcome shall you be.

ROSALIND. What is he that shall buy his flock and pasture?

CORIN. That young swain that you saw here but erewhile,
That little cares for buying any thing.

ROSALIND. I pray thee, if it stand with honesty,
Buy thou the cottage, pasture, and the flock,
And thou shalt have to pay for it of us.

CELIA. And we will mend thy wages: I like this place,
And willingly could waste my time in it.

CORIN. Assuredly, the thing is to be sold . . .
Go with me. If you like upon report
The soil, the profit, and this kind of life,
I will your very faithful feeder be,
And buy it with your gold right suddenly.
He goes; they follow him

Scene 5: The forest

Enter Amiens, Jaques, and others

AMIENS [sings].
Under the greenwood tree,
Who loves to lie with me,
And turn his merry note
Unto the sweet bird's throat . . .
Come hither, come hither, come hither:
Here shall he see
No enemy,
But winter and rough weather.

JAQUES. More, more, I prithee, more.

AMIENS. It will make you melancholy, Monsieur Jaques.

JAQUES. I thank it . . . More, I prithee, more. I can suck melancholy out of a song, as a weasel sucks eggs . . . More, I prithee, more.

AMIENS. My voice is ragged, I know I cannot please you.

JAQUES. I do not desire you to please me, I do desire you to sing . . . Come, more, another stanzo: call you 'em stanzos?

AMIENS. What you will, Monsieur Jaques.

JAQUES. Nay, I care not for their names, they owe me nothing . . . Will you sing?

AMIENS. More at your request than to please myself.

JAQUES. Well then, if ever I thank any man, I'll thank you: but that they call compliment is like th'encounter of two dog-apes; and when a man thanks me heartily, methinks I have given him a penny and he renders me the beggarly thanks. . . . Come, sing; and you that will not, hold your tongues.

AMIENS. Well, I'll end the song. . . . Sirs, cover the while—the duke will drink under this tree . . . He hath been all this day to look you.

JAQUES. And I have been all this day to avoid him . . . He is too disputable for my company . . . I think of as many matters as he, but I give heaven thanks, and make no boast of them. . . . Come, warble, come.

They sing altogether here

Who doth ambition shun,
And loves to live i'th' sun . . .
Seeking the food he eats,
And pleased with what he gets . . .
Come hither, come hither, come hither:
Here shall he see
No enemy,
But winter and rough weather.

JAQUES. I'll give you a verse to this note, that I made yesterday in despite of my invention.

AMIENS. And I'll sing it.

JAQUES. Thus it goes: Gives a paper to Amiens

AMIENS. If it do come to pass,
That any man turn ass . . .
Leaving his wealth and ease,
A stubborn will to please,
Ducdame, ducdame, ducdame:
Here shall he see,
Gross fools as he,
An if he will come to me.
What's that 'ducdame'?

JAQUES. 'Tis a Greek invocation, to call fools into a circle. . . . I'll go sleep, if I can: if I cannot, I'll rail against all the first-born of Egypt.

AMIENS. And I'll go seek the duke; his banquet is prepared. They depart in different directions

Scene 6: The forest

Orlando and Adam approach

ADAM. Dear master, I can go no further: O, I die for food.... Here lie I down, and measure out my grave.... Farewell, kind master.

ORLANDO. Why, how now, Adam! no greater heart in thee? Live a little, comfort a little, cheer thyself a little. If this uncouth forest yield any thing savage, I will either be food for it or bring it for food to thee ... Thy conceit is nearer death than thy powers.... For my sake be comfortable—hold death awhile at the arm's end: I will here be with thee presently, and if I bring thee not something to eat, I will give thee leave to die: but if thou diest before I come, thou art a mocker of my labour.... Well said! thou look'st cheerly, and I'll be with thee quickly ... Yet thou liest in the bleak air.... Come, I will bear thee to some shelter—and thou shalt not die for lack of a dinner, if there live any thing in this desert.... Cheerly, good Adam! He carries him away

Scene 7: The forest

Enter the Duke and some of his lords

DUKE. I think he be transformed into a beast,
For I can no where find him like a man.
FIRST LORD. My lord, he is but even now gone hence,
Here was he merry, hearing of a song.
DUKE. If he, compact of jars, grow musical,
We shall have shortly discord in the spheres:
Go, seek him, tell him I would speak with him.

Jaques enters, and shortly behind him Amiens

FIRST LORD. He saves my labour by his own approach.
DUKE. Why, how now, monsieur! what a life is this,
That your poor friends must woo your company?
What, you look merrily!
JAQUES. A fool, a fool! I met a fool i'th' forest,
A motley fool—a miserable world!—
As I do live by food, I met a fool,
Who laid him down and basked him in the sun,
And railed on Lady Fortune in good terms,
In good set terms, and yet a motley fool....
'Good morrow, fool,' quoth I: 'No, sir,' quoth he,
'Call me not fool till heaven hath sent me fortune.'
And then he drew a dial from his poke,
And looking on it with lack-lustre eye,
Says very wisely, 'It is ten o'clock:
Thus we may see,' quoth he, 'how the world wags:
'Tis but an hour ago since it was nine,
And after one hour more 'twill be eleven,
And so from hour to hour, we ripe, and ripe,
And then from hour to hour, we rot, and rot—
And thereby hangs a tale.' ... When I did hear
The motley fool thus moral on the time,
My lungs began to crow like chanticleer,
That fools should be so deep-contemplative;
And I did laugh, sans intermission,
An hour by his dial.... O noble fool!
O worthy fool! Motley's the only wear.
DUKE. What fool is this?
JAQUES. A worthy fool ... one that hath been a courtier,
And says, if ladies be but young and fair,
They have the gift to know it: and in his brain,
Which is as dry as the remainder biscuit
After a voyage, he hath strange places crammed
With observation, the which he vents
In mangled forms.... O, that I were a fool!
I am ambitious for a motley coat.
DUKE. Thou shalt have one.
JAQUES. It is my only suit—
Provided that you weed your better judgements
Of all opinion that grows rank in them
That I am wise.... I must have liberty
Withal, as large a charter as the wind,
To blow on whom I please, for so fools have:
And they that are most galléd with my folly,
They most must laugh: and why, sir, must they so?
The 'why' is plain as way to parish church:
He that a fool doth very wisely hit
Doth very foolishly, although he smart,
Not to seem senseless of the bob: if not,
The wise man's folly is anatomized
Even by the squand'ring glances of the fool....
Invest me in my motley; give me leave
To speak my mind, and I will through and through
Cleanse the foul body of th'infected world,
If they will patiently receive my medicine.
DUKE. Fie on thee! I can tell what thou wouldst do.
JAQUES. What, for a counter, would I do but good?
DUKE. Most mischievous foul sin, in chiding sin:
For thou thyself hast been a libertine,
As sensual as the brutish sting itself,
And all th'embosséd sores and headed evils,
That thou with licence of free foot hast caught,
Wouldst thou disgorge into the general world.
JAQUES. Why, who cries out on pride,
That can therein tax any private party?
Doth it not flow as hugely as the sea,
Till that the weary very means do ebb?
What woman in the city do I name,
When that I say the city-woman bears
The cost of princes on unworthy shoulders?
Who can come in and say that I mean her,
When such a one as she such is her neighbour?
Or what is he of basest function,
That says his bravery is not on my cost,
Thinking that I mean him, but therein suits
His folly to the mettle of my speech?
There then!—how then? what then? Let me see wherein
My tongue hath wronged him: if it do him right,
Then he hath wronged himself; if he be free,
Why then my taxing like a wild-goose flies,
Unclaimed of any man.... But who comes here?

Orlando appears before them, with his sword drawn

ORLANDO. Forbear, and eat no more.
JAQUES. Why, I have eat none yet.
ORLANDO. Nor shalt not, till necessity be served.
JAQUES. Of what kind should this cock come of?
DUKE. Art thou thus boldened, man, by thy distress?
Or else a rude despiser of good manners,
That in civility thou seem'st so empty?
ORLANDO. You touched my vein at first. The thorny point
Of bare distress hath ta'en from me the show
Of smooth civility: yet am I inland bred,
And know some nurture ... But forbear, I say,
He dies that touches any of this fruit
Till I and my affairs are answeréd.
JAQUES. An you will, not be answered with reason, I must die.

DUKE. What would you have? Your gentleness shall force,
More than your force move us to gentleness.
ORLANDO. I almost die for food, and let me have it.
DUKE. Sit down and feed, and welcome to our table.
ORLANDO. Speak you so gently? Pardon me, I pray you—
I though that all things had been savage here,
And therefore put I on the countenance
Of stern commandment. But whate'er you are
That in this desert inaccessible,
Under the shade of melancholy boughs,
Lose and neglect the creeping hours of time;
If ever you have looked on better days;
If ever been where bells have knolled to church;
If ever sat at any good man's feast;
If ever from your eyelids wiped a tear,
And know what 'tis to pity and be pitied,
Let gentleness my strong enforcement be:
In the which hope I blush, and hide my sword.
DUKE. True is it that we have seen better days,
And have with holy bell been knolled to church,
And sat at good men's feasts, and wiped our eyes
Of drops that sacred pity hath engendred:
And therefore sit you down in gentleness,
And take upon command what help we have
That to your wanting may be ministred.
ORLANDO. Then but forbear your food a little while,
Whiles, like a doe, I go to find my fawn,
And give it food.... There is an old poor man,
Who after me hath many a weary step
Limped in pure love: till he be first sufficed,
Oppressed with two weak evils, age and hunger,
I will not touch a bit.
DUKE. Go find him out,
And we will nothing waste till you return.
ORLANDO. I thank ye, and be blessed for your good comfort! He goes
DUKE. Thou seest we are not all alone unhappy:
This wide and universal theatre
Presents more woeful pageants than the scene
Wherein we play in.
JAQUES. All the world's a stage,
And all the men and women merely players;
They have their exits and their entrances,
And one man in his time plays many parts,
His acts being seven ages.... At first the infant,
Mewling and puking in the nurse's arms:
Then the whining school-boy, with his satchel
And shining morning face, creeping like snail
Unwillingly to school: and then the lover,
Sighing like furnace, with a woeful ballad
Made to his mistress' eyebrow: then a soldier,
Full of strange oaths and bearded like the pard,
Jealous in honour, sudden and quick in quarrel,
Seeking the bubble reputation
Even in the cannon's mouth: and then the justice,
In fair round belly with good capon lined,
With eyes severe and beard of formal cut,
Full of wise saws and modern instances,
And so he plays his part.... The sixth age shifts
Into the lean and slippered pantaloon,
With spectacles on nose and pouch on side,
His youthful hose, well saved, a world too wide
For his shrunk shank, and his big manly voice,
Turning again toward childish treble, pipes
And whistles in his sound.... Last scene of all,
That ends this strange eventful history,
Is second childishness, and mere oblivion,
Sans teeth, sans eyes, sans taste, sans every thing.

Orlando returns with Adam

DUKE. Welcome... Set down your venerable burden,
And let him feed.
ORLANDO. I thank you most for him.
ADAM. So had you need,
I scarce can speak to thank you for myself.
DUKE. Welcome, fall to: I will not trouble you
As yet to question you about your fortunes:
Give us some music, and good cousin, sing.
AMIENS [sings].
Blow, blow, thou winter wind,
Thou art not so unkind
As man's ingratitude:
Thy tooth is not so keen,
Because thou art not seen,
Although thy breath be rude....
Hey-ho, sing hey-ho, unto the green holly,
Most friendship is feigning; most loving mere folly:
Then hey-ho, the holly,
This life is most jolly.

Freeze, freeze, thou bitter sky,
That dost not bite so nigh
As benefits forgot:
Though thou the waters warp,
Thy sting is not so sharp
As friend remembred not....
Hey-ho, sing hey-ho, unto the green holly,
Most friendship is feigning; most loving mere folly:
Then hey-ho, the holly,
This life is most jolly.
DUKE. If that you were the good Sir Rowland's son,
As you have whispered faithfully you were,
And as mine eye doth his effigies witness
Most truly limned and living in your face,
Be truly welcome hither: I am the duke
That loved your father. The residue of your fortune,
Go to my cave and tell me.... Good old man,
Thou art right welcome as thy master is:
Support him by the arm.... Give me your hand,
And let me all your fortunes understand.
They go

ACT 3

Scene 1: A room in the palace of Duke Frederick

Enter Duke Frederick, lords, and Oliver

DUKE FREDERICK. Not see him since? Sir, sir, that cannot be:
But were I not the better part made mercy,
I should not seek an absent argument
Of my revenge, thou present: but look to it,
Find out thy brother wheresoe'er he is—
Seek him with candle; bring him dead or living
Within this twelvemonth, or turn thou no more
To seek a living in our territory....
Thy lands and all things that thou dost call thine
Worth seizure do we seize into our hands,
Till thou canst quit thee by thy brother's mouth
Of what we think against thee.

OLIVER. O, that your highness knew my heart in this!
I never loved my brother in my life.
DUKE FREDERICK. More villain thou.... Well, push him out of doors,
And let my officers of such a nature
Make an extent upon his house and lands:
Do this expediently and turn him going.
They go

Scene 2: The forest, near the sheepcote

Orlando with a paper

ORLANDO. Hang there, my verse, in witness of my love,
And thou, thrice-crownéd queen of night, survey
With thy chaste eye, from thy pale sphere above,
Thy huntress' name that my full life doth sway....
O Rosalind! these trees shall be my books,
And in their barks my thoughts I'll character,
That every eye which in this forest looks
Shall see thy virtue witnessed every where....
Run, run, Orlando, carve on every tree
The fair, the chaste and unexpressive she.
He goes

Corin and Touchstone come up

CORIN. And how like you this shepherd's life, Master Touchstone?

TOUCHSTONE. Truly, shepherd, in respect of itself, it is a good life; but in respect that it is a shepherd's life, it is naught. In respect that it is solitary, I like it very well; but in respect that it is private, it is a very vile life. Now in respect it is in the fields, it pleaseth me well; but in respect it is not in the court, it is tedious. As it is a spare life, look you, it fits my humour well; but as there is no more plenty in it, it goes much against my stomach. Hast any philosophy in thee, shepherd?

CORIN. No more, but that I know the more one sickens, the worse at ease he is; and that he that wants money, means and content is without three good friends; that the property of rain is to wet and fire to burn; that good pasture makes fat sheep; and that a great cause of the night, is lack of the sun; that he that hath learned no wit by nature nor art may complain of good breeding or comes of a very dull kindred.

TOUCHSTONE. Such a one is a natural philosopher ... Wast ever in court, shepherd?

CORIN. No, truly.

TOUCHSTONE. Then thou art damned.

CORIN. Nay, I hope.

TOUCHSTONE. Truly thou art damned, like an ill-roasted egg all on one side.

CORIN. For not being at court? Your reason.

TOUCHSTONE. Why, if thou never wast at court, thou never saw'st good manners; if thou never saw'st good manners, then thy manners must be wicked, and wickedness is sin, and sin is damnation ... Thou art in a parlous state, shepherd.

CORIN. Not a whit, Touchstone. Those that are good manners at the court are as ridiculous in the country, as the behaviour of the country is most mockable at the court. You told me you salute not at the court, but you kiss your hands; that courtesy would be uncleanly, if courtiers were shepherds.

TOUCHSTONE. Instance, briefly; come, instance.

CORIN. Why, we are still handling our ewes, and their fells you know are greasy.

TOUCHSTONE. Why, do not your courtier's hands sweat? and is not the grease of a mutton as wholesome as the sweat of a man? Shallow, shallow: a better instance, I say: come.

CORIN. Besides, our hands are hard.

TOUCHSTONE. Your lips will feel them the sooner. Shallow, again: a more sounder instance, come.

CORIN. And they are often tarred over with the surgery of our sheep; and would you have us kiss tar? The courtier's hands are perfumed with civet.

TOUCHSTONE. Most shallow man! thou worms-meat, in respect of a good piece of flesh indeed! Learn of the wise, and perpend: civet is of a baser birth than tar, the very uncleanly flux of a cat. Mend the instance, shepherd.

CORIN. You have too courtly a wit for me, I'll rest.

TOUCHSTONE. Wilt thou rest damned? God help thee, shallow man! God make incision in thee! thou art raw.

CORIN. Sir, I am a true labourer. I earn that I eat, get that I wear, owe no man hate, envy no man's happiness, glad of other men's good, content with my harm; and the greatest of my pride is to see my ewes graze and my lambs suck.

TOUCHSTONE. That is another simple sin in you, to bring the ewes and the rams together, and to offer to get your living by the copulation of cattle—to be bawd to a bell-wether, and to betray a she-lamb of a twelvemonth to a crooked-pated, old, cuckoldy ram, out of all reasonable match. If thou beest not damned for this, the devil himself will have no shepherds—I cannot see else how thou shouldst 'scape.

CORIN. Here comes young Master Ganymede, my new mistress's brother.

Enter Rosalind, reading

ROSALIND. 'From the east to western Ind,
No jewel is like Rosalind.
Her worth, being mounted on the wind,
Through all the world bears Rosalind.
All the pictures fairest lined
Are but black to Rosalind....
Let no face be kept in mind
But the fair of Rosalind.'

TOUCHSTONE. I'll rhyme you so eight years together, dinners, and suppers, and sleeping-hours excepted: it is the right butter-women's rank to market.

ROSALIND. Out, fool!

TOUCHSTONE. For a taste....
If a hart do lack a hind,
Let him seek out Rosalind:
If the cat will after kind,
So be sure will Rosalind:
Wintered garments must be lined,
So must slender Rosalind.
They that reap must sheaf and bind,
Then to cart with Rosalind.
Sweetest nut hath sourest rind,
Such a nut is Rosalind.
He that sweetest rose will find,
Must find love's prick and Rosalind.
This is the very false gallop of verses. Why do you infect yourself with them?

ROSALIND. Peace, you dull fool! I found them on a tree.

TOUCHSTONE. Truly, the tree yields bad fruit.

ROSALIND. I'll graff it with you, and then I shall graff it with a medlar: then it will be the earliest fruit i'th' country: for you'll be rotten ere you be half ripe, and that's the right virtue of the medlar.

TOUCHSTONE. You have said: but whether wisely or no, let the forest judge.

Celia enter, reading a paper

ROSALIND. Peace!
Here comes my sister, reading. Stand aside.

CELIA. 'Why should this a desert be?
For it is unpeopled? No;
Tongues I'll hang on every tree,
That shall civil sayings show.
Some, how brief the life of man
Runs his erring pilgrimage,
That the stretching of a span
Buckles in his sum of age;
Some, of violated vows
'Twixt the souls of friend and friend:
But upon the fairest boughs,
Or at every sentence end,
Will I Rosalinda write,
Teaching all that read to know
The quintessence of every sprite
Heaven would in little show.
Therefore Heaven Nature charged,
That one body should be filled
With all graces wide-enlarged:
Nature presently distilled
Helen's cheek, but not her heart,
Cleopatra's majesty,
Atalanta's better part,
Sad Lucretia's modesty....
Thus Rosalind of many parts
By heavenly synod was devised,
Of many faces, eyes, and hearts,
To have the touches dearest prized....
Heaven would that she these gifts should have,
And I to live and die her slave.'

ROSALIND. O most gentle pulpiter, what tedious homily of love have you wearied your parishioners withal, and never cried, 'Have patience, good people!'

CELIA. How now, back-friends! Shepherd, go off a little.... Go with him, sirrah.

TOUCHSTONE. Come, shepherd, let us make an honourable retreat—though not with bag and baggage, yet with scrip and scrippage.

Touchstone departs with Corin

CELIA. Didst thou hear these verses?

ROSALIND. O, yes, I heard them all, and more too, for some of them had in them more feet than the verses would bear.

CELIA. That's no matter: the feet might bear the verses.

ROSALIND. Ay, but the feet were lame, and could not bear themselves without the verse, and therefore stood lamely in the verse.

CELIA. But didst thou hear without wondering how thy name should be hanged and carved upon these trees?

ROSALIND. I was seven of the nine days out of the wonder before you came; for look here what I found on a palm-tree ... I was never so be-rhymed since Pythagoras' time, that I was an Irish rat, which I can hardly remember.

CELIA. Trow you who hath done this?

ROSALIND. Is it a man?

CELIA. And a chain that you once wore about his neck! Change you colour?

ROSALIND. I prithee, who?

CELIA. O Lord, Lord! it is a hard matter for friends to meet; but mountains may be removed with earthquakes and so encounter.

ROSALIND. Nay, but who is it?

CELIA. Is it possible?

ROSALIND. Nay, I prithee now with most petitionary vehemence, tell me who it is.

CELIA. O wonderful, wonderful, and most wonderful wonderful! and yet again wonderful, and after that out of all whooping!

ROSALIND. Good my complexion! dost thou think, though I am caparisoned like a man, I have a doublet-and-hose in my disposition? One inch of delay more is a South-sea of discovery.... I prithee, tell me who is it quickly, and speak apace: I would thou couldst stammer, that thou mightst pour this concealed man out of thy mouth, as wine comes out of a narrow-mouthed bottle; either too much at once, or none at all. I prithee take the cork out of thy mouth that I may drink thy tidings.

CELIA. So you may put a man in your belly.

ROSALIND. Is he of God's making? What manner of man? Is his head worth a hat? or his chin worth a beard?

CELIA. Nay, he hath but a little beard.

ROSALIND. Why, God will send more, if the man will be thankful: let me stay the growth of his beard, if thou delay me not the knowledge of his chin.

CELIA. It is young Orlando, that tripped up the wrestler's heels, and your heart, both in an instant.

ROSALIND. Nay, but the devil take mocking; speak sad brow and true maid.

CELIA. I'faith, coz, 'tis he.

ROSALIND. Orlando?

CELIA. Orlando.

ROSALIND. Alas the day, what shall I do with my doublet and hose? What did he when thou saw'st him? What said he? How looked he? Wherein went he? What makes he here? Did he ask for me? Where remains he? How parted he with thee? and when shalt thou see him again? Answer me in one word.

CELIA. You must borrow me Gargantua's mouth first: 'tis a word too great for any mouth of this age's size. To say ay and no to these particulars is more than to answer in a catechism.

ROSALIND. But doth he know that I am in this forest and in man's apparel? Looks he as freshly as he did the day he wrestled?

CELIA. It is as easy to count atomies as to resolve the propositions of a lover: but take a taste of my finding him, and relish it with a good observance. I found him under a tree, like a dropped acorn.

ROSALIND. It may well be called Jove's tree, when it drops forth such fruit.

CELIA. Give me audience, good madam.

ROSALIND. Proceed.

CELIA. There lay he, stretched along, like a wounded knight.

ROSALIND. Though it be pity to see such a sight, it well becomes the ground.

CELIA. Cry 'holla' to thy tongue, I prithee; it curvets unseasonably.... He was furnished like a hunter.

ROSALIND. O ominous! he comes to kill my heart.

CELIA. I would sing my song without a burden—thou bring'st me out of tune.

ROSALIND. Do you not know I am a woman? when I think, I must speak ... Sweet, say on.

Orlando and Jaques enter

CELIA. You bring me out.... Soft! comes he not here?

ROSALIND. 'Tis he—slink by, and note him.

JAQUES. I thank you for your company—but, good faith,
I had as lief have been myself alone.

ORLANDO. And so had I: but yet, for fashion sake,
I thank you too for your society.

JAQUES. God buy you, let's meet as little as we can.

ORLANDO. I do desire we may be better strangers.

JAQUES. I pray you, mar no more trees with writing love-songs in their barks.

ORLANDO. I pray you, mar no moe of my verses with reading them ill-favouredly.

JAQUES. Rosalind is your love's name?

ORLANDO. Yes, just.

JAQUES. I do not like her name.

ORLANDO. There was no thought of pleasing you when she was christened.

JAQUES. What stature is she of?

ORLANDO. Just as high as my heart.

JAQUES. You are full of pretty answers: have you not been acquainted with goldsmiths' wives, and conned them out of rings?

ORLANDO. Not so; but I answer you right painted cloth, from whence you have studied your questions.

JAQUES. You have a nimble wit; I think 'twas made of Atalanta's heels.... Will you sit down with me? and we two will rail against our mistress the world, and all our misery.

ORLANDO. I will chide no breather in the world but myself, against whom I know most faults.

JAQUES. The worst fault you have is to be in love.

ORLANDO. 'Tis a fault I will not change for your best virtue ... I am weary of you.

JAQUES. By my troth, I was seeking for a fool when I found you.

ORLANDO. He is drowned in the brook—look but in, and you shall see him.

JAQUES. There I shall see mine own figure.

ORLANDO. Which I take to be either a fool or a cipher

JAQUES. I'll tarry no longer with you. Farewell, good Signior Love.

ORLANDO. I am glad of your departure: adieu, good Monsieur Melancholy. Jaques departs

ROSALIND [aside to Celia]. I will speak to him like a saucy lackey, and under that habit play the knave with him.
[calls] Do you hear forester?

ORLANDO [turns]. Very well. What would you?

ROSALIND. I pray you, what is't o'clock?

ORLANDO. You should ask me what time o'day: there's no clock in the forest.

ROSALIND. Then there is no true lover in the forest, else sighing every minute and groaning every hour would detect the lazy foot of Time as well as a clock.

ORLANDO. And why not the swift foot of Time? had not that been as proper?

ROSALIND. By no means, sir: Time travels in divers paces with divers persons ... I'll tell you who Time ambles withal, who Time trots withal, who Time gallops withal, and who he stands still withal.

ORLANDO. I prithee, who doth he trot withal?

ROSALIND. Marry, he trots hard with a young maid between the contract of her marriage and the day it is solemnized: if the interim be but a se'nnight, Time's pace is so hard that it seems the length of seven year.

ORLANDO. Who ambles Time withal?

ROSALIND. With a priest that lacks Latin, and a rich man that hath not the gout: for the one sleeps easily because he cannot study, and the other lives merrily because he feels no pain: the one lacking the burden of lean and wasteful learning; the other knowing no burden of heavy tedious penury.... These Time ambles withal.

ORLANDO. Who doth he gallop withal?

ROSALIND. With a thief to the gallows: for though he go as softly as foot can fall, he thinks himself too soon there.

ORLANDO. Who stays it still withal?

ROSALIND. With lawyers in the vacation: for they sleep between term and term, and then they perceive not how Time moves.

ORLANDO. Where dwell you, pretty youth?

ROSALIND. With this shepherdess, my sister; here in the skirts of the forest, like fringe upon a petticoat.

ORLANDO. Are you native of this place?

ROSALIND. As the cony that you see dwell where she is kindled.

ORLANDO. Your accent is something finer than you could purchase in so removed a dwelling.

ROSALIND. I have been told so of many: but indeed an old religious uncle of mine taught me to speak, who was in his youth an inland man—one that knew courtship too well, for there he fell in love.... I have heard him read many lectures against it, and I thank God I am not a woman, to be touched with so many giddy offences as he hath generally taxed their whole sex withal.

ORLANDO. Can you remember any of the principal evils that he laid to the charge of women?

ROSALIND. There were none principal, they were all like one another as half-pence are, every one fault seeming monstrous till his fellow-fault came to match it.

ORLANDO. I prithee, recount some of them.

ROSALIND. No: I will not cast away my physic but on those that are sick.... There is a man haunts the forest, that abuses our young plants with carving 'Rosalind' on their barks; hangs odes upon hawthorns and elegies on brambles; all, forsooth, deifying the name of Rosalind: if I could meet that fancy-monger, I would give him some good counsel, for he seems to have the quotidian of love upon him.

ORLANDO. I am he that is so love-shaked. I pray you, tell me your remedy.

ROSALIND. There is none of my uncle's marks upon you: he taught me how to know a man in love;

in which cage of rushes I am sure you are not prisoner.

ORLANDO. What were his marks?

ROSALIND. A lean cheek, which you have not: a blue eye and sunken, which you have not: an unquestionable spirit, which you have not: a beard neglected, which you have not . . . but I pardon you for that, for simply your having in beard is a younger brother's revenue. Then your hose should be ungartered, your bonnet unbanded, your sleeve unbuttoned, your shoe untied, and every thing about you demonstrating a careless desolation: but you are no such man; you are rather point-device in your accoutrements, as loving yourself than seeming the lover of any other.

ORLANDO. Fair youth, I would I could make thee believe I love.

ROSALIND. Me believe it! you may as soon make her that you love believe it, which I warrant she is apter to do than to confess she does: that is one of the points in the which women still give the lie to their consciences. . . . But, in good sooth, are you he that hangs the verses on the trees, wherein Rosalind is so admired?

ORLANDO. I swear to thee, youth, by the white hand of Rosalind, I am that he, that unfortunate he.

ROSALIND. But are you so much in love as your rhymes speak?

ORLANDO. Neither rhyme nor reason can express how much.

ROSALIND. Love is merely a madness, and I tell you deserves as well a dark house and a whip as madmen do: and the reason why they are not so punished and cured is, that the lunacy is so ordinary that the whippers are in love too . . . Yet I profess curing it by counsel.

ORLANDO. Did you ever cure any so?

ROSALIND. Yes, one, and in this manner. He was to imagine me his love, his mistress; and I set him every day to woo me: at which time would I, being but a moonish youth, grieve, be effeminate, changeable, longing and liking, proud, fantastical, apish, shallow, inconstant, full of tears, full of smiles; for every passion something, and for no passion truly any thing, as boys and women are for the most part cattle of this colour: would now like him, now loath him; then entertain him, then forswear him; now weep for him, then spit at him; that I drave my suitor from his mad humour of love to a living humour of madness—which was, to forswear the full stream of the world and to live in a nook merely monastic . . . And thus I cured him, and this way will I take upon me to wash your liver as clean as a sound sheep's heart, that there shall not be one spot of love in't.

ORLANDO. I would not be cured, youth.

ROSALIND. I would cure you, if you would but call me Rosalind, and come every day to my cote, and woo me.

ORLANDO. Now, by the faith of my love, I will . . . Tell me where it is.

ROSALIND. Go with me to it, and I'll show it you: and by the way you shall tell me where in the forest you live . . . Will you go?

ORLANDO. With all my heart, good youth.

ROSALIND. Nay, you must call me Rosalind . . . Come, sister, will you go? They go

Scene 3: The clearing near the sheepcote (as before)

Enter Touchstone and Audrey; Jaques following at a little distance

TOUCHSTONE. Come apace, good Audrey. I will fetch up your goats, Audrey . . . And how, Audrey? am I the man yet? Doth my simple feature content you?

AUDREY. Your features, Lord warrant us! what features?

TOUCHSTONE. I am here with thee and thy goats, as the most capricious poet, honest Ovid, was among the Goths.

JAQUES. O knowledge ill-inhabited! worse than Jove in a thatched house!

TOUCHSTONE. When a man's verses cannot be understood, nor a man's good wit seconded with the forward child, understanding, it strikes a man more dead than a great reckoning in a little room. . . . Truly, I would the gods had made thee poetical.

AUDREY. I do not know what 'poetical' is: is it honest in deed and word? is it a true thing?

TOUCHSTONE. No, truly; for the truest poetry is the most feigning; and lovers are given to poetry; and what they swear in poetry it may be said as lovers they do feign.

AUDREY. Do you wish then that the gods had made me poetical?

TOUCHSTONE. I do, truly: for thou swear'st to me thou art honest; now, if thou wert a poet, I might have some hope thou didst feign.

AUDREY. Would you not have me honest?

TOUCHSTONE. No, truly, unless thou wert hard-favoured: for honesty coupled to beauty is to have honey a sauce to sugar.

JAQUES. A material fool!

AUDREY. Well, I am not fair, and therefore I pray the gods make me honest.

TOUCHSTONE. Truly, and to cast away honesty upon a foul slut were to put good meat into an unclean dish.

AUDREY. I am not a slut, though I thank the gods I am foul.

TOUCHSTONE. Well, praised be the gods for thy foulness! sluttishness may come hereafter. . . . But be it as it may be, I will marry thee: and to that end, I have been with Sir Oliver Martext the vicar of the next village, who hath promised to meet me in this place of the forest and to couple us.

JAQUES. I would fain see this meeting.

AUDREY. Well, the gods give us joy!

TOUCHSTONE. Amen. . . . A man may, if he were of a fearful heart, stagger in this attempt; for here we have no temple but the wood, no assembly but horn-beasts. But what though? Courage! As horns are odious, they are necessary. It is said, 'many a man knows no end of his goods': right; many a man has good horns, and knows no end of them. Well, that is the dowry of his wife; 'tis none of his own getting . . . Horns? Even so. Poor men alone? No, no, the noblest deer hath them as huge as the rascal . . . Is the single man therefore blessed? No, as a walled town is more worthier than a village, so is the forehead of a married man more honourable than the bare brow of a bachelor: and by how much defence is better than no skill, by so much is a horn more precious than to want. . . .

Sir Oliver Martext enters

Here comes Sir Oliver . . . Sir Oliver Martext, you are well met. Will you dispatch us here under this tree, or shall we go with you to your chapel?

SIR OLIVER MARTEXT. Is there none here to give the woman?

TOUCHSTONE. I will not take her on gift of any man.

SIR OLIVER MARTEXT. Truly, she must be given, or the marriage is not lawful.

JAQUES [comes forward]. Proceed, proceed; I'll give her.

TOUCHSTONE. Good even, good Master What-ye-call't: how do you, sir? You are very well met: God'ild you for your last company—I am very glad to see you—even a toy in hand here, sir . . . Nay, pray be covered.

JAQUES. Will you be married, motley?

TOUCHSTONE. As the ox hath his bow, sir, the horse his curb, and the falcon her bells, so man hath his desires; and as pigeons bill, so wedlock would be nibbling.

JAQUES. And will you, being a man of your breeding, be married under a bush like a beggar? Get you to church, and have a good priest that can tell you what marriage is—this fellow will but join you together as they join wainscot, then one of you will prove a shrunk panel, and like green timber warp, warp.

TOUCHSTONE. I am not in the mind but I were better to be married of him than of another, for he is not like to marry me well . . . and not being well married, it will be a good excuse for me hereafter to leave my wife.

JAQUES. Go thou with me, and let me counsel thee.

TOUCHSTONE. Come, sweet Audrey,
We must be married, or we must live in bawdry . . .
Farewell, good Master Oliver: not—
Sings and dances

O sweet Oliver,
O brave Oliver,
Leave me not behind thee:
but—
Wind away,
Begone, I say,
I will not to wedding with thee.

He goes, Jaques and Audrey following

SIR OLIVER MARTEXT. 'Tis no matter; ne'er a fantastical knave of them all shall flout me out of my calling.
He goes

Scene 4: The forest

Enter Rosalind and Celia

ROSALIND. Never talk to me, I will weep.

CELIA. Do, I prithee—but yet have the grace to consider that tears do not become a man.

ROSALIND. But have I not cause to weep?

CELIA. As good cause as one would desire, therefore weep.

ROSALIND. His very hair is of the dissembling colour.

CELIA. Something browner than Judas's: marry, his kisses are Judas's own children.

ROSALIND. I'faith, his hair is of a good colour.

CELIA. An excellent colour: your chestnut was ever the only colour.

ROSALIND. And his kissing is as full of sanctity as the touch of holy bread.

CELIA. He hath bought a pair of cast lips of Diana: a nun of winter's sisterhood kisses not more religiously, the very ice of chastity is in them.

ROSALIND. But why did he swear he would come this morning, and comes not?

CELIA. Nay, certainly, there is no truth in him.

ROSALIND. Do you think so?

CELIA. Yes, I think he is not a pick-purse nor a horse-stealer, but for his verity in love I do think him as concave as a covered goblet or a worm-eaten nut.

ROSALIND. Not true in love?

CELIA. Yes, when he is in—but I think he is not in.

ROSALIND. You have heard him swear downright he was.

CELIA. 'Was' is not 'is': besides, the oath of a lover is no stronger than the word of a tapster, they are both the confirmer of false reckonings. He attends here in the forest on the duke your father.

ROSALIND. I met the duke yesterday and had much question with him: he asked me of what parentage I was; I told him, of as good as he—so he laughed and let me go. . . . But what talk we of fathers, when there is such a man as Orlando?

CELIA. O, that's a brave man! he writes brave verses, speaks brave words, swears brave oaths and breaks them bravely, quite traverse, athwart the heart of his lover—as a puny tilter, that spurs his horse but on one side, breaks his staff like a noble goose; but all's brave that youth mounts and folly guides. . . . Who comes here?

Corin enters

CORIN. Mistress and master, you have oft inquired
After the shepherd that complained of love,
Who you saw sitting by me on the turf,
Praising the proud disdainful shepherdess
That was his mistress.

CELIA. Well: and what of him?

CORIN. If you will see a pageant truly played,
Between the pale complexion of true love
And the red glow of scorn and proud disdain,
Go hence a little and I shall conduct you,
If you will mark it.

ROSALIND. O, come, let us remove.
The sight of lovers feedeth those in love:
Bring us to this sight, and you shall say
I'll prove a busy actor in their play. They go

Scene 5: Another part of the forest

Enter Phebe, followed by Silvius

SILVIUS. Sweet Phebe, do not scorn me, do not, Phebe:
Say that you love me not, but say not so
In bitterness . . . The common executioner,
Whose heart th'accustomed sight of death makes hard,
Falls not the axe upon the humbled neck
But first begs pardon: will you sterner be
Than he that dies and lives by bloody drops?

Rosalind, Celia, and Corin come up behind, unseen

PHEBE. I would not be thy executioner.
I fly thee, for I would not injure thee . . .
Thou tell'st me there is murder in mine eye—
'Tis pretty, sure, and very probable,

That eyes, that are the frail'st and softest things,
Who shut their coward gates on atomies,
Should be called tyrants, butchers, murderers!
Now I do frown on thee with all my heart,
And if mine eyes can wound, now let them kill thee;
Now counterfeit to swoon, why now fall down,
Or if thou canst not, O for shame, for shame,
Lie not, to say mine eyes are murderers!
Now show the wound mine eye hath made in thee.
Scratch thee but with a pin, and there remains
Some scar of it: lean upon a rush,
The cicatrice and capable impressure
Thy palm some moment keeps: but now mine eyes,
Which I have darted at thee, hurt thee not,
Nor, I am sure, there is no force in eyes
That can do hurt.

SILVIUS. O dear Phebe,
If ever—as that ever may be near—
You meet in some fresh cheek the power of fancy,
Than shall you know the wounds invisible
That love's keen arrows make.

PHEBE. But till that time
Come not thou near me: and when that time comes,
Afflict me with thy mocks, pity me not,
As till that time I shall not pity thee.

ROSALIND [advancing]. And why, I pray you? Who might be your mother,
That you insult, exult, and all at once,
Over the wretched? What though you have no beauty—
As, by my faith, I see no more in you
Than without candle may go dark to bed—
Must you be therefore proud and pitiless?
Why, what means this? Why do you look on me?
I see no more in you than in the ordinary
Of nature's sale-work! 'Od's my little life,
I think she means to tangle my eyes too:
No, faith, proud mistress, hope not after it.
'Tis not your inky brows, your black silk hair,
Your bugle eyeballs, nor your cheek of cream,
That can entame my spirits to your worship . . .
You foolish shepherd, wherefore do you follow her,
Like foggy south, puffing with wind and rain?
You are a thousand times a properer man
Than she a woman: 'tis such fools as you
That makes the world full of ill-favoured children:
'Tis not her glass, but you, that flatters her,
And out of you she sees herself more proper
Than any of her lineaments can show her . . .
But, mistress, know yourself—down on your knees,
And thank heaven, fasting, for a good man's love;
For I must tell you friendly in your ear,
Sell when you can—you are not for all markets:
Cry the man mercy, love him, take his offer.
Foul is most foul, being foul to be a scoffer. . . .
So take her to thee, shepherd—fare you well.

PHEBE. Sweet youth, I pray you chide a year together.
I had rather hear you chide than this man woo.

ROSALIND. He's fallen in love with your foulness, and she'll fall in love with my anger. If it be so, as fast as she answers thee with frowning looks, I'll sauce her with bitter words . . . Why look you so upon me?

PHEBE. For no ill will I bear you.

ROSALIND. I pray you, do not fall in love with me,
For I am falser than vows made in wine:
Besides, I like you not . . . If you will know my house,
'Tis at the tuft of olives here hard by . . .
Will you go, sister? Shepherd, ply her hard . . .
Come, sister . . . Shepherdess, look on him better,
And be not proud—though all the world could see,
None could be so abused in sight as he. . . .
Come, to our flock.

She goes, followed by Celia and Corin

PHEBE. Dead Shepherd, now I find thy saw of might,
'Who ever loved that loved not at first sight?'

SILVIUS. Sweet Phebe—

PHEBE. Ha! what say'st thou, Silvius?

SILVIUS. Sweet Phebe, pity me.

PHEBE. Why, I am sorry for thee, gentle Silvius.

SILVIUS. Wherever sorrow is, relief would be:
If you do sorrow at my grief in love,
By giving love your sorrow and my grief
Were both extermined.

PHEBE. Thou hast my love—is not that neighbourly?

SILVIUS. I would have you.

PHEBE. Why, that were covetousness . . .
Silvius, the time was that I hated thee,
And yet it is not that I bear thee love;
But since that thou canst talk of love so well,
Thy company, which erst was irksome to me,
I will endure; and I'll employ thee too:
But do not look for further recompense
Than thine own gladness that thou art employed.

SILVIUS. So holy and so perfect is my love,
And I in such a poverty of grace,
That I shall think it a most plenteous crop
To glean the broken ears after the man
That the main harvest reaps: loose now and then
A scattered smile, and that I'll live upon.

PHEBE. Know'st thou the youth that spoke to me erewhile?

SILVIUS. Not very well, but I have met him oft,
And he hath bought the cottage and the bounds
That the old carlot once was master of.

PHEBE. Think not I love him, though I ask for him.
'Tis but a peevish boy—yet he talks well—
But what care I for words?—yet words do well,
When he, that speaks them pleases those that hear:
It is a pretty youth—not very pretty—
But, sure, he's proud—and yet his pride becomes him:
He'll make a proper man: the best thing in him
Is his complexion; and faster than his tongue
Did make offence, his eye did heal it up:
He is not very tall—yet for his years he's tall:
His leg is but so so—and yet 'tis well:
There was a pretty redness in his lip,
A little riper and more lusty red
Than that mixed in his cheek; 'twas just the difference
Betwixt the constant red and mingled damask. . . .
There be some women, Silvius, had they marked him
In parcels as I did, would have gone near
To fall in love with him: but, for my part,
I love him not, nor hate him not; and yet
I have more cause to hate him than to love him,
For what had he to do to chide at me?
He said mine eyes were black and my hair black,
And, now I am remembered, scorn'd at me:

I marvel why I answered not again:
But that's all one; omittance is no quittance:
I'll write to him a very taunting letter,
And thou shalt bear it—wilt thou, Silvius?

SILVIUS. Phebe, with all my heart.

PHEBE. I'll write it straight;
The matter's in my head and in my heart.
I will be bitter with him and passing short:
Go with me, Silvius. They go

ACT 4

Scene 1: The clearing near the sheepcote

Enter Rosalind, Celia, and Jaques

JAQUES. I prithee, pretty youth, let me be better acquainted with thee.

ROSALIND. They say you are a melancholy fellow.

JAQUES. I am so: I do love it better than laughing.

ROSALIND. Those that are in extremity of either are abominable fellows, and betray themselves to every modern censure worse than drunkards.

JAQUES. Why, 'tis good to be sad and say nothing.

ROSALIND. Why then, 'tis good to be a post.

JAQUES. I have neither the scholar's melancholy, which is emulation; nor the musician's, which is fantastical; nor the courtier's, which is proud; nor the soldier's, which is ambitious; nor the lawyer's, which is politic; nor the lady's, which is nice; nor the lover's, which is all these: but it is a melancholy of mine own, compounded of many simples, extracted from many objects, and indeed the sundry contemplation of my travels, in which my often rumination wraps me in a most humorous sadness.

ROSALIND. A traveller! By my faith, you have great reason to be sad: I fear you have sold your own lands to see other men's; then, to have seen much, and to have nothing, is to have rich eyes and poor hands.

JAQUES. Yes, I have gained my experience.

Orlando enters

ROSALIND. And your experience makes you sad: I had rather have a fool to make me merry than experience to make me sad—and to travel for it too!

ORLANDO. Good day, and happiness, dear Rosalind!

JAQUES. Nay then, God buy you, an you talk in blank verse.

ROSALIND. Farewell, Monsieur Traveller: look you lisp and wear strange suits; disable all the benefits of your own country; be out of love with your nativity, and almost chide God for making you that countenance you are; or I will scarce think you have swam in a gondola.... [Jaques goes] Why, how now, Orlando! where have you been all this while? You a lover! An you serve me such another trick, never come in my sight more.

ORLANDO. My fair Rosalind, I come within an hour of my promise.

ROSALIND. Break an hour's promise in love? He that will divide a minute into a thousand parts, and break but a part of the thousandth part of a minute in the affairs of love, it may be said of him that Cupid hath clapped him o'th' shoulder, but I'll warrant him heartwhole.

ORLANDO. Pardon me, dear Rosalind.

ROSALIND. Nay, an you be so tardy come no more in my sight, I had as lief be wooed of a snail.

ORLANDO. Of a snail?

ROSALIND. Ay, of a snail; for though he comes slowly, he carries his house on his head; a better jointure, I think, than you make a woman: besides, he brings his destiny with him.

ORLANDO. What's that?

ROSALIND. Why, horns; which such as you are fain to be beholding to your wives for: but he comes armed in his fortune, and prevents the slander of his wife.

ORLANDO. Virtue is no horn-maker ... and my Rosalind is virtuous.

ROSALIND. And I am your Rosalind.

CELIA. It pleases him to call you so; but he hath a Rosalind of a better leer than you.

ROSALIND. Come, woo me, woo me; for now I am in a holiday humour, and like enough to consent ... What would you say to me now, an I were your very very Rosalind?

ORLANDO. I would kiss before I spoke.

ROSALIND. Nay, you were better speak first, and when you were gravelled for lack of matter, you might take occasion to kiss: very good orators, when they are out, they will spit, and for lovers, lacking (God warr'nt us!) matter, the cleanliest shift is to kiss.

ORLANDO. How if the kiss be denied?

ROSALIND. Then she puts you to entreaty and there begins new matter.

ORLANDO. Who could be out, being before his beloved mistress?

ROSALIND. Marry, that should you if I were your mistress, or I should think my honesty ranker than my wit.

ORLANDO. What, of my suit?

ROSALIND. Not out of your apparel, and yet out of your suit ... Am not I your Rosalind?

ORLANDO. I take some joy to say you are, because I would be talking of her.

ROSALIND. Well, in her person, I say I will not have you.

ORLANDO. Then in mine own person, I die.

ROSALIND. No, faith, die by attorney: the poor world is almost six thousand years old, and in all this time there was not any man died in his own person, videlicet, in a love-cause: Troilus had his brains dashed out with a Grecian club, yet he did what he could to die before, and he is one of the patterns of love: Leander, he would have lived many a fair year, though Hero had turned nun, if it had not been for a hot midsummer night; for, good youth, he went but forth to wash him in the Hellespont and being taken with the cramp was drowned, and the foolish chroniclers of that age found it was 'Hero of Sestos.' ... But these are all lies. Men have died from time to time, and worms have eaten them, but not for love.

ORLANDO. I would not have my right Rosalind of this mind, for I protest her frown might kill me.

ROSALIND. By this hand, it will not kill a fly ... But come, now I will be your Rosalind in a more coming-on disposition; and ask me what you will, I will grant it.

ORLANDO. Then love me, Rosalind.

ROSALIND. Yes, faith will I, Fridays and Saturdays and all.

ORLANDO. And wilt thou have me?

ROSALIND. Ay, and twenty such.

ORLANDO. What sayest thou?

ROSALIND. Are you not good?

ORLANDO. I hope so.

ROSALIND. Why then, can one desire too much of a good thing? Come, sister, you shall be the priest and marry us.... Give me your hand, Orlando ... What do you say, sister?

ORLANDO. Pray thee, marry us.

CELIA. I cannot say the words.

ROSALIND. You must begin, 'Will you, Orlando'—

CELIA. Go to ... Will you, Orlando, have to wife this Rosalind?

ORLANDO. I will.

ROSALIND. Ay, but when?

ORLANDO. Why now, as fast as she can marry us.

ROSALIND. Then you must say, 'I take thee, Rosalind, for wife.'

ORLANDO. I take thee, Rosalind, for wife.

ROSALIND. I might ask you for your commission, but I do take thee, Orlando, for my husband ... There's a girl goes before the priest, and certainly a woman's thought runs before her actions.

ORLANDO. So do all thoughts, they are winged.

ROSALIND. Now tell me how long you would have her after you have possessed her.

ORLANDO. For ever and a day.

ROSALIND. Say 'a day' without the 'ever' ... No, no, Orlando, men are April when they woo, December when they wed; maids are May when they are maids, but the sky changes when they are wives ... I will be more jealous of thee than a Barbary cock-pigeon over his hen, more clamorous than a parrot against rain, more new-fangled than an ape, more giddy in my desires than a monkey: I will weep for nothing, like Diana in the fountain, and I will do that when you are disposed to be merry; I will laugh like a hyen, and that when thou art inclined to sleep.

ORLANDO. But will my Rosalind do so?

ROSALIND. By my life, she will do as I do.

ORLANDO. O, but she is wise.

ROSALIND. Or else she could not have the wit to do this: the wiser, the waywarder: make the doors upon a woman's wit, and it will out at the casement; shut that, and 'twill out at the key-hole; stop that, 'twill fly with the smoke out at the chimney.

ORLANDO. A man that had a wife with such a wit, he might say 'Wit, whither wilt?'

ROSALIND. Nay, you might keep that check for it, till you met your wife's wit going to your neighbour's bed.

ORLANDO. And what wit could wit have to excuse that?

ROSALIND. Marry, to say she came to seek you there ... You shall never take her without her answer, unless you take her without her tongue: O, that woman that cannot make her fault her husband's occasion, let her never nurse her child herself, for she will breed it like a fool.

ORLANDO. For these two hours, Rosalind, I will leave thee.

ROSALIND. Alas, dear love, I cannot lack thee two hours!

ORLANDO. I must attend the duke at dinner. By two o'clock I will be with thee again.

ROSALIND. Ay, go your ways, go your ways; I knew what you would prove, my friends told me as much, and I thought no less: that flattering tongue of yours won me: 'tis but one cast away, and so, come death.... Two o'clock is your hour?

ORLANDO. Ay, sweet Rosalind.

ROSALIND. By my troth, and in good earnest, and so God mend me, and by all pretty oaths that are not dangerous, if you break one jot of your promise, or come one minute behind your hour, I will think you the most pathetical break-promise, and the most hollow lover, and the most unworthy of her you call Rosalind, that may be chosen out of the gross band of the unfaithful: therefore beware my censure, and keep your promise.

ORLANDO. With no less religion than if thou wert indeed my Rosalind: so adieu.

ROSALIND. Well, Time is the old justice that examines all such offenders, and let Time try: adieu!

He goes

CELIA. You have simply misused our sex in your love-prate: we must have your doublet and hose plucked over your head, and show the world what the bird hath done to her own nest.

ROSALIND. O coz, coz, coz ... my pretty little coz, that thou didst know how many fathom deep I am in love! But it cannot be sounded; my affection hath an unknown bottom, like the bay of Portugal.

CELIA. Or rather, bottomless—that as fast as you pour affection in, it runs out.

ROSALIND. No, that same wicked bastard of Venus, that was begot of thought, conceived of spleen, and born of madness—that blind rascally boy that abuses every one's eyes because his own are out—let him be judge how deep I am in love ... I'll tell thee, Aliena, I cannot be out of the sight of Orlando: I'll go find a shadow and sigh till he come.

CELIA. And I'll sleep. They go

Scene 2: The forest

Enter Amiens and other lords, dressed as foresters, with Jaques

JAQUES. Which is he that killed the deer?

A LORD. Sir, it was I.

JAQUES. Let's present him to the duke, like a Roman conqueror. And it would do well to set the deer's horns upon his head, for a branch of victory .. Have you no song, forester, for this purpose?

AMIENS. Yes, sir.

JAQUES. Sing it: 'tis no matter how it be in tune, so it make noise enough.

The company sing, Amiens leading and the rest joining in chorus

THE SONG

What shall he have that killed the deer?
His leather skin and horns to wear:
Then sing him home—the rest shall bear
    This burden ...
    Take thou no scorn to wear the horn,
    It was a crest ere thou wast born,
    Thy father's father wore it,
    And thy father bore it,
The horn, the horn, the lusty horn,
Is not a thing to laugh to scorn.

They go

Scene 3: The clearing near the sheepcote

Enter Rosalind and Celia

ROSALIND. How say you now? Is it not past two o'clock? and here much Orlando!

CELIA. I warrant you, with pure love and troubled brain, he hath ta'en his bow and arrows, and is gone forth to sleep ... Look, who comes here.

Silvius approaches

SILVIUS. My errand is to you, fair youth—
My gentle Phebe bid me give you this:
He gives Rosalind a letter
I know not the contents, but as I guess
By the stern brow and waspish action
Which she did use as she was writing of it,
It bears an angry tenour: pardon me,
I am but as a guiltless messenger.

ROSALIND. Patience herself would startle at this letter,
And play the swaggerer—bear this, bear all:
She says I am not fair, that I lack manners,
She calls me proud, and that she could not love me
Were man as rare as phœnix: 'od's my will!
Her love is not the hare that I do hunt.
Why writes she so to me? Well, shepherd, well,
This is a letter of your own device.

SILVIUS. No, I protest, I know not the contents—
Phebe did write it.

ROSALIND. Come, come, you are a fool,
And turned into the extremity of love.
I saw her hand—she has a leathern hand,
A freestone-coloured hand: I verily did think
That her old gloves were on, but 'twas her hands:
She has a huswife's hand—but that's no matter:
I say she never did invent this letter,
This is a man's invention, and his hand.

SILVIUS. Sure, it is hers.

ROSALIND. Why, 'tis a boisterous and a cruel style,
A style for challengers; why, she defies me,
Like Turk to Christian: women's gentle brain
Could not drop forth such giant-rude invention,
Such Ethiop words, blacker in their effect
Than in their countenance ... Will you hear the letter?

SILVIUS. So please you, for I never heard it yet;
Yet heard too much of Phebe's cruelty.

ROSALIND. She Phebes me: mark how the tyrant writes.
[reads] 'Art thou god to shepherd turned,
That a maiden's heart hath burned?'
Can a woman rail thus?

SILVIUS. Call you this railing?

ROSALIND.
'Why, thy godhead laid apart,
Warr'st thou with a woman's heart?'
Did you ever hear such railing?
'Whiles the eye of man did woo me,
That could do no vengeance to me.'
Meaning me a beast.
'If the scorn of your bright eyne
Have power to raise such love in mine,
Alack, in me what strange effect
Would they work in mild aspéct?
Whiles you chid me I did love,
How then might your prayers move?
He that brings this love to thee
Little knows this love in me:
And by him seal up thy mind,
Whether that thy youth and kind
Will the faithful offer take
Of me and all that I can make,
Or else by him my love deny,
And then I'll study how to die.'

SILVIUS. Call you this chiding?

CELIA. Alas, poor shepherd!

ROSALIND. Do you pity him? no, he deserves no pity ... Wilt thou love such a woman? What, to make thee an instrument and play false strains upon thee! not to be endured! Well, go your way to her (for I see love hath made thee a tame snake) and say this to her: that if she love me, I charge her to love thee: if she will not, I will never have her, unless thou entreat for her.... If you be a true lover, hence, and not a word; for here comes more company.
He goes

Oliver enters

OLIVER. Good morrow, fair ones: pray you, if you know,
Where in the purlieus of this forest stands
A sheepcote fenced about with olive-trees?

CELIA. West of this place, down in the neighbour bottom—
The rank of osiers by the murmuring stream
Left on your right hand brings you to the place
But at this hour the house doth keep itself,
There's none within.

OLIVER. If that an eye may profit by a tongue,
Then should I know you by description—
Such garments and such years: 'The boy is fair,
Of female favour, and bestows himself
Like a ripe forester: the woman low,
And browner than her brother.' ... Are not you
The owner of the house I did inquire for?

CELIA. It is no boast, being asked, to say we are.

OLIVER. Orlando doth commend him to you both,
And to that youth he calls his Rosalind
He sends this bloody napkin; are you he?

ROSALIND. I am: what must we understand by this?

OLIVER. Some of my shame, if you will know of me
What man I am, and how, and why, and where
This handkercher was stained.

CELIA. I pray you, tell it.

OLIVER. When last the young Orlando parted from you
He left a promise to return again
Within an hour, and pacing through the forest,
Chewing the food of sweet and bitter fancy,
Lo, what befel! he threw his eye aside,
And mark what object did present itself!
Under an oak, whose boughs were mossed with age
And high top bald with dry antiquity,
A wretched ragged man, o'ergrown with hair,
Lay sleeping on his back: about his neck
A green and gilded snake had wreathed itself,
Who with her head nimble in threats approached
The opening of his mouth; but suddenly
Seeing Orlando, it unlinked itself,
And with indented glides did slip away
Into a bush: under which bush's shade
A lioness, with udders all drawn dry,
Lay couching, head on ground, with catlike watch,
When that the sleeping man should stir; for 'tis

The royal disposition of that beast
To prey on nothing that doth seem as dead:
This seen, Orlando did approach the man,
And found it was his brother, his elder brother.
CELIA. O, I have heard him speak of that same brother,
And he did render him the most unnatural
That lived 'mongst men.
OLIVER. And well he might so do,
For well I know he was unnatural.
ROSALIND. But, to Orlando: did he leave him there,
Food to the sucked and hungry lioness?
OLIVER. Twice did he turn his back and purposed so:
but kindness, nobler ever than revenge,
And nature, stronger than his just occasion,
Made him give battle to the lioness,
Who quickly fell before him: in which hurtling
From miserable slumber I awaked.
CELIA. Are you his brother?
ROSALIND. Was't you he rescued?
CELIA. Was't you that did so oft contrive to kill him?
OLIVER. 'Twas I; but 'tis not I: I do not shame
To tell you what I was, since my conversion
So sweetly tastes, being the thing I am.
ROSALIND. But, for the bloody napkin?—
OLIVER. By and by . . .
When from the first to last betwixt us two
Tears our recountments had most kindly bathed,
As how I came into that desert place. . . .
In brief, he led me to the gentle duke,
Who gave me fresh array and entertainment,
Committing me unto my brother's love,
Who led me instantly unto his cave,
There stripped himself, and here upon his arm
The lioness had torn some flesh away,
Which all this while had bled; and now he fainted,
And cried, in fainting, upon Rosalind. . . .
Brief, I recovered him, bound up his wound,
And after some small space being strong at heart,
He sent me hither, stranger as I am,
To tell this story, that you might excuse
His broken promise, and to give this napkin,
Dyed in his blood, unto the shepherd youth
That he in sport doth call his Rosalind.
Rosalind faints
CELIA. Why, how now, Ganymede! sweet Ganymede!
OLIVER. Many will swoon when they do look on blood.
CELIA. There is more in it . . . Cousin, Ganymede!
OLIVER. Look, he recovers.
ROSALIND. I would I were at home.
CELIA. We'll lead you thither . . .
I pray you, will you take him by the arm?
OLIVER. Be of good cheer, youth: you a man!
You lack a man's heart.
ROSALIND. I do so, I confess it . . .
Ah, sirrah, a body would think this was well counterfeited. I pray you, tell your brother how well I counterfeited. . . . Heigh-ho!
OLIVER. This was not counterfeit, there is too great testimony in your complexion that it was a passion of earnest.
ROSALIND. Counterfeit, I assure you.
OLIVER. Well then, take a good heart, and counterfeit to be a man.
ROSALIND. So I do: but, i'faith, I should have been a woman by right.
CELIA. Come, you look paler and paler; pray you, draw homewards . . . Good sir, go with us.
OLIVER. That will I: for I must bear answer back, How you excuse my brother, Rosalind.
ROSALIND. I shall devise something: but, I pray you commend my counterfeiting to him . . . Will you go? They go

ACT 5
Scene 1

Enter Touchstone and Audrey

TOUCHSTONE. We shall find a time, Audrey—patience, gentle Audrey.
AUDREY. Faith, the priest was good enough, for all the old gentleman's saying.
TOUCHSTONE. A most wicked Sir Oliver, Audrey, a most vile Martext. . . . But, Audrey, there is a youth here in the forest lays claim to you.
AUDREY. Ay, I know who 'tis; he hath no interest in me in the world: here comes the man you mean.

William enters

TOUCHSTONE. It is meat and drink to me to see a clown. By my troth, we that have good wits have much to answer for; we shall be flouting; we cannot hold.
WILLIAM. Good ev'n, Audrey.
AUDREY. God ye good ev'n, William.
WILLIAM. And good ev'n to you, sir.
TOUCHSTONE. Good ev'n, gentle friend. Cover thy head, cover thy head; nay, prithee, be covered. . . . How old are you, friend?
WILLIAM. Five-and-twenty, sir.
TOUCHSTONE. A ripe age . . . Is thy name, William?
WILLIAM. William, sir.
TOUCHSTONE. A fair name . . . Wast born i'th' forest here?
WILLIAM. Ay sir, I thank God.
TOUCHSTONE. 'Thank God'; a good answer . . . Art rich?
WILLIAM. Faith sir, so so.
TOUCHSTONE. 'So so' is good, very good, very excellent good: and yet it is not, it is but so so . . . Art thou wise?
WILLIAM. Ay sir, I have a pretty wit.
TOUCHSTONE. Why, thou say'st well. . . . I do now remember a saying: 'The fool doth think he is wise, but the wise man knows himself to be a fool' . . . The heathen philosopher, when he had a desire to eat a grape, would open his lips when he put it into his mouth, meaning thereby that grapes were made to eat and lips to open. . . . You do love this maid?
WILLIAM. I do, sir.
TOUCHSTONE. Give me your hand . . . Art thou learned?
WILLIAM. No, sir.
TOUCHSTONE. Then learn this of me—to have, is to have; for it is a figure in rhetoric that drink, being poured out of a cup into a glass, by filling the one doth empty the other; for all your writers do consent that ipse is he: now, you are not ipse, for I am he.
WILLIAM. Which he, sir?
TOUCHSTONE. He, sir, that must marry this woman . . . Therefore, you clown, abandon (which is in the vulgar 'leave') the society (which in the boorish is 'company') of this female (which in the common is 'woman'); which together is, 'abandon the society of this female,' or, clown, thou perishest; or, to thy better understanding, diest? or, to wit, I kill thee, make thee away, translate thy life into death, thy liberty into bondage: I will deal in poison with thee, or in bastinado, or in steel; I will bandy with thee in faction; I will o'er-run thee with policy; I will kill thee a hundred and fifty ways—therefore tremble and depart.

AUDREY. Do, good William.

WILLIAM. God rest you merry, sir. He goes

Corin enters

CORIN. Our master and mistress seek you: come, away, away.

TOUCHSTONE. Trip, Audrey, trip, Audrey—I attend, I attend. They go

Scene 2

Enter Oliver and Orlando

ORLANDO. Is't possible that on so little acquaintance you should like her? that but seeing you should love her? and loving woo? and, wooing, she should grant? and will you persever to enjoy her?

OLIVER. Neither call the giddiness of it in question, the poverty of her, the small acquaintance, my sudden wooing, nor her sudden consenting; but say with me, I love Aliena; say with her that she loves me; consent with both that we may enjoy each other: it shall be to your good; for my father's house and all the revenue that was old Sir Rowland's will I estate upon you, and here live and die a shepherd.

Rosalind enters

ORLANDO. You have my consent.... Let your wedding be to-morrow: thither will I invite the duke and all's contented followers... Go you and prepare Aliena; for look you, here comes my Rosalind.

ROSALIND. God save you, brother.

OLIVER. And you, fair sister. He goes

ROSALIND. O, my dear Orlando, how it grieves me to see thee wear thy heart in a scarf.

ORLANDO. It is my arm.

ROSALIND. I thought thy heart had been wounded with the claws of a lion.

ORLANDO. Wounded it is, but with the eyes of a lady.

ROSALIND. Did your brother tell you how I counterfeited to swoon, when he showed me your handkercher?

ORLANDO. Ay, and greater wonders than that.

ROSALIND. O, I know where you are: nay, 'tis true: there was never any thing so sudden but the fight of two rams, and Cæsar's thrasonical brag of 'I came, saw, and overcame': for your brother and my sister no sooner met but they looked; no sooner looked but they loved; no sooner loved but they sighed; no sooner sighed but they asked one another the reason; no sooner knew the reason but they sought the remedy: and in these degrees have they made a pair of stairs to marriage, which they will climb incontinent, or else be incontinent before marriage: they are in the very wrath of love, and they will together; clubs cannot part them.

ORLANDO. They shall be married to-morrow; and I will bid the duke to the nuptial.... But, O, how bitter a thing it is to look into happiness through another man's eyes! By so much the more shall I to-morrow be at the height of heart-heaviness, by how much I shall think my brother happy in having what he wishes for.

ROSALIND. Why then, to-morrow I cannot serve your turn for Rosalind?

ORLANDO. I can live no longer by thinking.

ROSALIND. I will weary you then no longer with idle talking.... Know of me then, for now I speak to some purpose, that I know you are a gentleman of good conceit: I speak not this that you should bear a good opinion of my knowledge, insomuch I say I know you are; neither do I labour for a greater esteem than may in some little measure draw a belief from you, to do yourself good and not to grace me.... Believe then, if you please, that I can do strange things: I have, since I was three year old, conversed with a magician, most profound in his art, and yet not damnable.... If you do love Rosalind so near the heart as your gesture cries it out, when your brother marries Aliena, shall you marry her. I know into what straits of fortune she is driven, and it is not impossible to me, if it appear not inconvenient to you, to set her before your eyes to-morrow, human as she is, and without any danger.

ORLANDO. Speak'st thou in sober meanings?

ROSALIND. By my life I do, which I tender dearly, though I say I am a magician ... Therefore, put you in your best array, bid your friends; for if you will be married to-morrow, you shall; and to Rosalind, if you will.

Silvius and Phebe enter

Look, here comes a lover of mine and a lover of hers.

PHEBE. Youth, you have done me much ungentleness,
To show the letter that I writ to you.

ROSALIND. I care not if I have: it is my study
To seem despiteful and ungentle to you:
You are there followed by a faithful shepherd—
Look upon him, love him; he worships you.

PHEBE. Good shepherd, tell this youth what 'tis to love.

SILVIUS. It is to be all made of sighs and tears,
And so am I for Phebe.

PHEBE. And I for Ganymede.

ORLANDO. And I for Rosalind.

ROSALIND. And I for no woman.

SILVIUS. It is to be all made of faith and service,
And so am I for Phebe.

PHEBE. And I for Ganymede.

ORLANDO. And I for Rosalind.

ROSALIND. And I for no woman.

SILVIUS. It is to be all made of fantasy,
All made of passion, and all made of wishes,
All adoration, duty and observance,
All humbleness, all patience, and impatience,
All purity, all trial, all obedience;
And so am I for Phebe.

PHEBE. And so am I for Ganymede.

ORLANDO. And so am I for Rosalind.

ROSALIND. And so am I for no woman.

PHEBE [to Rosalind]. If this be so, why blame you me to love you?

SILVIUS [to Phebe]. If this be so, why blame you me to love you?

ORLANDO. If this be so, why blame you me to love you?

ROSALIND. Who do you speak to, 'Why blame you me to love you?'

ORLANDO. To her that is not here, nor doth not hear.

ROSALIND. Pray you no more of this, 'tis like the howling of Irish wolves against the Moon ... [to Silvius] I will help you, if I can ... [to Phebe] I would love you, if I could ... To-morrow meet me all together ... [to Phebe] I will marry you, if ever I marry woman, and I'll be married to-morrow ... [to Orlando] I will satisfy you, if ever I satisfied man, and you shall be married to-morrow ... [to Silvius] I will content you, if what pleases you contents you, and you shall be married to-morrow ... [to Orlando] As you love Rosalind, meet. [to Silvius] As you love Phebe, meet. And as I love no woman, I'll meet.... So, fare you well; I have left you commands.

SILVIUS. I'll not fail, if I live.

PHEBE. Nor I.

ORLANDO. Nor I. They go

Scene 3

Touchstone and Audrey enter

TOUCHSTONE. To-morrow is the joyful day, Audrey. To-morrow will we be married.

AUDREY. I do desire it with all my heart: and I hope it is no dishonest desire to desire to be a woman of the world. Here come two of the banished duke's pages.

Two pages enter

FIRST PAGE. Well met, honest gentleman.

TOUCHSTONE. By my troth, well met ... Come, sit, sit, and a song.

SECOND PAGE. We are for you: sit i'th' middle.

FIRST PAGE. Shall we clap into't roundly, without hawking or spitting or saying we are hoarse, which are the only prologues to a bad voice?

SECOND PAGE. I'faith i'faith; and both in a tune, like two gipsies on a horse.

SONG

It was a lover and his lass,
With a hey, and a ho, and a hey nonino:
That o'er the green corn-field did pass,
In spring time, the only pretty ring time,
When birds do sing, hey ding a ding, ding,
Sweet lovers love the spring.

Between the acres of the rye,
With a hey, and a ho, and a hey nonino:
These pretty country folks would lie,
In spring time, the only pretty ring time,
When birds do sing, hey ding a ding, ding,
Sweet lovers love the spring.

This carol they began that hour,
With a hey, and a ho, and a hey nonino:
How that life was but a flower,
In spring time, the only pretty ring time,
When birds do sing, hey ding a ding, ding,
Sweet lovers love the spring.

And therefore take the present time,
With a hey, and a ho, and a hey nonino:
For love is crownéd with the prime,
In spring time, the only pretty ring time,
When birds do sing, hey ding a ding, ding,
Sweet lovers love the spring.

TOUCHSTONE. Truly, young gentlemen, though there was no great matter in the ditty, yet the note was very untuneable.

FIRST PAGE. You are deceived, sir—we kept time, we lost not our time.

TOUCHSTONE. By my troth, yes; I count it but time lost to hear such a foolish song.... God buy you, and God mend your voices! Come, Audrey. They go

Scene 4: The clearing near the sheepcote (as before)

Enter the exiled Duke, Amiens, Jaques, Orlando, Oliver, and Celia

DUKE. Dost thou believe, Orlando, that the boy
Can do all this that he hath promiséd?

ORLANDO. I sometimes do believe, and sometimes do not,
As those that fear they hope, and know they fear.

Rosalind, Silvius, and Phebe enter

ROSALIND. Patience once more, whiles our compáct is urged:
You say, if I bring in your Rosalind,
You will bestow her on Orlando here?

DUKE. That would I, had I kingdoms to give with her.

ROSALIND. And you say you will have her, when I bring her?

ORLANDO. That would I, were I of all kingdoms king.

ROSALIND. You say you'll marry me, if I be willing?

PHEBE. That will I, should I die the hour after.

ROSALIND. But if you do refuse to marry me,
You'll give yourself to this most faithful shepherd?

PHEBE. So is the bargain.

ROSALIND. You say that you'll have Phebe, if she will?

SILVIUS. Though to have her and death were both one thing.

ROSALIND. I have promised to make all this matter even ...
Keep you your word, O duke, to give your daughter—
You yours, Orlando, to receive his daughter:
Keep your word, Phebe, that you'll marry me,
Or else refusing me, to wed this shepherd:
Keep your word, Silvius, that you'll marry her,
If she refuse me—and from hence I go,
To make these doubts all even.
Rosalind and Celia depart

DUKE. I do remember in this shepherd-boy
Some lively touches of my daughter's favour.

ORLANDO. My lord, the first time that I ever saw him,
Methought he was a brother to your daughter:
But, my good lord, this boy is forest-born,
And hath been tutored in the rudiments
Of many desperate studies by his uncle,
Whom he reports to be a great magician,
Obscuréd in the circle of this forest.

Touchstone and Audrey enter

JAQUES. There is, sure, another flood toward, and these couples are coming to the ark. Here comes a pair of very strange beasts, which in all tongues are called fools.

TOUCHSTONE. Salutation and greeting to you all!

JAQUES. Good my lord, bid him welcome: this is the motley-minded gentleman that I have so often met in the forest: he hath been a courtier, he swears.

TOUCHSTONE. If any man doubt that, let him put me to my purgation. I have trod a measure—I have flattered a lady—I have been politic with my friend, smooth with mine enemy—I have undone three tailors—I have had four quarrels, and like to have fought one.

JAQUES. And how was that ta'en up?

TOUCHSTONE. Faith, we met, and found the quarrel was upon the seventh cause.

JAQUES. How seventh cause? Good my lord, like this fellow.

DUKE. I like him very well.

TOUCHSTONE. God'ild you, sir, I desire you of the like ... I press in here, sir, amongst the rest of the country copulatives, to swear and to forswear, according as marriage binds and blood breaks ... A poor virgin, sir, an ill-favoured thing, sir, but mine own—a poor humour of mine, sir, to take that that no man else will: rich honesty dwells like a miser, sir, in a poor house, as your pearl in your foul oyster.

DUKE. By my faith, he is very swift and sententious.

TOUCHSTONE. According to the fool's bolt, sir, and such dulcet diseases.

JAQUES. But, for the seventh cause. How did you find the quarrel on the seventh cause?

TOUCHSTONE. Upon a lie seven times removed ... bear your body more seeming, Audrey ... as thus, sir: I did dislike the cut of a certain courtier's beard: he sent me word, if I said his beard was not cut well, he was in the mind it was: this is called the Retort Courteous. If I sent him word again 'it was not well cut,' he would send me word, he cut it to please himself: this is called the Quip Modest. If again 'it was not well cut,' he disabled my judgement: this is called the Reply Churlish. If again 'it was not well cut,' he would answer, I spake not true: this is called the Reproof Valiant. If again 'it was not well cut,' he would say, I lie: this is called the Countercheck Quarrelsome: and so to the Lie Circumstantial and the Lie Direct.

JAQUES. And how oft did you say his beard was not well cut?

TOUCHSTONE. I durst go no further than the Lie Circumstantial: nor he durst not give me the Lie Direct: and so we measured swords and parted.

JAQUES. Can you nominate in order now the degrees of the lie?

TOUCHSTONE. O sir, we quarrel in print—by the book: as you have books for good manners ... I will name you the degrees. The first, the Retort Courteous; the second, the Quip Modest; the third, the Reply Churlish; the fourth, the Reproof Valiant; the fifth, the Countercheck Quarrelsome; the sixth, the Lie with Circumstance; the seventh, the Lie Direct ... All these you may avoid, but the Lie Direct; and you may avoid that too, with an If. I knew when seven justices could not take up a quarrel, but when the parties were met themselves, one of them thought but of an If; as, 'If you said so, then I said so': and they shook hands and swore brothers. Your If is the only peace-maker; much virtue in If.

JAQUES. Is not this a rare fellow, my lord? he's as good at any thing, and yet a fool!

DUKE. He uses his folly like a stalking-horse, and under the presentation of that he shoots his wit.

Enter, as in a masque, persons representing Hymen and his train, together with Rosalind and Celia in their proper habits. Still music

HYMEN [sings].
Then is there mirth in heaven,
When earthly things made even
Atone together.
Good duke, receive thy daughter,
Hymen from heaven brought her,
Yea, brought her hither,
That thou mightst join her hand with his
Whose heart within her bosom is.

ROSALIND [to the Duke]. To you I give myself, for I am yours.
[to Orlando] To you I give myself, for I am yours.

DUKE. If there be truth in sight, you are my daughter.

ORLANDO. If there be truth in sight, you are my Rosalind.

PHEBE. If sight and shape be true,
Why then, my love adieu!

ROSALIND. I'll have no father, if you be not he:
I'll have no husband, if you be not he:
Nor ne'er wed woman, if you be not she.

HYMEN. Peace, ho! I bar confusion.
'Tis I must make conclusion
Of these most strange events:
Here's eight that must take hands,
To join in Hymen's bands,
If truth holds true contents.
You and you no cross shall part:
You and you are heart in heart:
You to his love must accord,
Or have a woman to your lord.
You and you are sure together,
As the winter to foul weather.
Whiles a wedlock-hymn we sing,
Feed yourselves with questioning;
That reason wonder may diminish,
How thus we met, and these things finish.

CHORIC SONG

Wedding is great Juno's crown,
O blessèd bond of board and bed:
'Tis Hymen peoples every town,
High wedlock then be honourèd:
Honour, high honour and renown,
To Hymen, god of every town!

DUKE. O my dear niece, welcome thou art to me,
Even daughter, welcome, in no less degree.

PHEBE. I will not eat my word, now thou art mine,
Thy faith my fancy to thee doth combine.

Enter Jaques de Boys

JAQUES DE BOYS. Let me have audience for a word or two:
I am the second son of old Sir Rowland,

That bring these tidings to this fair assembly.
Duke Frederick, hearing how that every day
Men of great worth resorted to this forest,
Addressed a mighty power, which were on foot,
In his own conduct, purposely to take
His brother here and put him to the sword:
And to the skirts of this wild wood he came;
Where, meeting with an old religious man,
After some question with him, was converted
Both from his enterprise and from the world:
His crown bequeathing to his banished brother,
And all their lands restored to them again
That were with him exiled ... This to be true,
I do engage my life.
DUKE. Welcome, young man;
Thou offer'st fairly to thy brothers' wedding:
To one his lands withheld, and to the other
A land itself at large, a potent dukedom.
First, in this forest, let us do those ends
That here were well begun and well begot:
And after, every of this happy number,
That have endured shrewd days and nights with us,
Shall share the good of our returnéd fortune,
According to the measure of their states.
Meantime, forget this new-fall'n dignity,
And fall into our rustic revelry ...
Play, music! and you brides and bridegrooms all,
With measure heaped in joy, to th' measures fall.
JAQUES. Sir, by your patience ...
If I heard you rightly,
The duke hath put on a religious life,
And thrown into neglect the pompous court?
JAQUES DE BOYS. He hath.
JAQUES. To him will I: out of these convertites
There is much matter to be heard and learned....
[to the Duke] You to your former honour I bequeath,
Your patience and your virtue well deserves it:
[to Orlando] You to a love, that your true faith doth merit:
[to Oliver] You to your land, and love, and great allies:
[to Silvius] You to a long and well-deservéd bed:
[to Touchstone] And you to wrangling, for thy loving voyage
Is but for two months victualled ... So to your pleasures,
I am for other than for dancing measures.
DUKE. Stay, Jaques, stay.
JAQUES. To see no pastime, I: what you would have
I'll stay to know at your abandoned cave.
He goes
DUKE. Proceed, proceed: we will begin these rites,
As we do trust they'll end in true delights.

Music and dance

EPILOGUE

Spoken by Rosalind

It is not the fashion to see the lady the epilogue: but it is no more unhandsome than to see the lord the prologue. If it be true that good wine needs no bush, 'tis true that a good play needs no epilogue: yet to good wine they do use good bushes; and good plays prove the better by the help of good epilogues ... What a case am I in then, that am neither a good epilogue nor cannot insinuate with you in the behalf of a good play! I am not furnished like a beggar, therefore to beg will not become me: my way is to conjure you, and I'll begin with the women. I charge you, O women, for the love you bear to men, to like as much of this play as please you: and I charge you, O men, for the love you bear to women—as I perceive by your simpering, none of you hates them—that between you and the women the play may please. If I were a woman, I would kiss as many of you as had beards that pleased me, complexions that liked me, and breaths that I defied not: and, I am sure, as many as have good beards, or good faces, or sweet breaths, will, for my kind offer, when I make curtsy, bid me farewell.

THE INDUCTION

Scene I: Before an alehouse on a heath

Sly and the Hostess

SLY. I'll feeze you, in faith.

HOSTESS. A pair of stocks, you rogue!

SLY. Y'are a baggage, the Slys are no rogues.... Look in the chronicles, we came in with Richard Conqueror ... Therefore paucas pallabris, let the world slide: sessa!

HOSTESS. You will not pay for the glasses you have burst?

SLY. No, not a denier ... Go by, S. Jeronimy—go to thy cold bed, and warm thee.

HOSTESS. I know my remedy, I must go fetch the third-borough. She goes

SLY. Third, or fourth, or fifth borough, I'll answer him by law. I'll not budge an inch, boy: let him come, and kindly. Falls asleep

There is a sound of horns. A lord and his train enter as from hunting

LORD. Huntsman, I charge thee, tender well my hounds.
Broach Merriman—the poor cur is embossed,
And couple Clowder with the deep-mouthed brach.
Saw'st thou not, boy, how Silver made it good
At the hedge corner, in the coldest fault?
I would not lose the dog for twenty pound.

I HUNTSMAN. Why, Belman is as good as he, my lord—
He cried upon it at the merest loss,
And twice to-day picked out the dullest scent.
Trust me, I take him for the better dog.

LORD. Thou art a fool. If Echo were as fleet,
I would esteem him worth a dozen such.
But sup them well, and look unto them all.
To-morrow I intend to hunt again.

I HUNTSMAN. I will, my lord.

LORD. What's here? one dead, or drunk? See, doth he breathe?

2 HUNTSMAN. He breathes, my lord, Were he not warmed with ale,
This were a bed but cold to sleep so soundly.

LORD. O monstrous beast! how like a swine he lies!
Grim death, how foul and loathsome is thine image.
Sirs, I will practise on this drunken man.
What think you, if he were conveyed to bed,
Wrapped in sweet clothes, rings put upon his fingers,
A most delicious banquet by his bed,
And brave attendants near him when he wakes,
Would not the beggar then forget himself?

I HUNTSMAN. Believe me, lord, I think he cannot choose.

2 HUNTSMAN. It would seem strange unto him when he waked.

LORD. Even as a flatt'ring dream or worthless fancy.
Then take him up, and manage well the jest:
Carry him gently to my fairest chamber,
And hang it round with all my wanton pictures:
Balm his foul head with warm distillèd waters,
And burn sweet wood to make the lodging sweet:
Procure me music ready when he wakes,
To make a dulcet and a heavenly sound;
And if he chance to speak, be ready straight
And with a low submissive reverence
Say 'What is it your honour will command?'
Let one attend him with a silver basin
Full of rose-water and bestrewed with flowers,
Another bear the ewer, the third a diaper,
And say 'Will't please your lordship cool your hands?'
Some one be ready with a costly suit,
And ask him what apparel he will wear;
Another tell him of his hounds and horse,
And that his lady mourns at his disease:
Persuade him that he hath been lunatic;
And when he says he is Sly, say that he dreams,
For he is nothing but a mighty lord.
This do, and do it kindly, gentle sirs—
It will be pastime passing excellent,
If it be husbanded with modesty.

I HUNTSMAN. My lord, I warrant you we will play our part,
As he shall think by our true diligence
He is no less than what we say he is.

LORD. Take him up gently and to bed with him,
And each one to his office when he wakes....
They bear Sly away. A trumpet sounds
Sirrah, go see what trumpet 'tis that sounds—
A serving-man goes
Belike some noble gentleman that means,
Travelling some journey, to repose him here.

The serving-man returns

How now? who is it?

SERVING-MAN. An't please your honour, players
That offer service to your lordship.

LORD. Bid them come near.

The players approach

Now, fellows, you are welcome.

PLAYERS. We thank your honour.

LORD. Do you intend to stay with me to-night?

A PLAYER. So please your lordship to accept our duty.

LORD. With all my heart. This fellow I remember,
Since once he played a farmer's eldest son—
'Twas where you wooed the gentlewoman so well:
I have forgot your name; but, sure, that part
Was aptly fitted and naturally performed.

A PLAYER. I think 'twas Soto that your honour means.

LORD. 'Tis very true—thou didst it excellent.
Well, you are come to me in happy time,
The rather for I have some sport in hand,
Wherein your cunning can assist me much.
There is a lord will hear you play to-night;
But I am doubtful of your modesties,
Lest over-eyeing of his odd behaviour—
For yet his honour never heard a play—

You break into some merry passion,
And so offend him: for I tell you, sirs,
If you should smile, he grows impatient.
A PLAYER. Fear not, my lord, we can contain ourselves,
Were he the veriest antic in the world.
LORD. Go, sirrah, take them to the buttery,
And give them friendly welcome every one—
Let them want nothing that my house affords.
A servant leads the players away
Sirrah, go you to Barthol'mew my page,
And see him dressed in all suits like a lady:
That done, conduct him to the drunkard's chamber,
And call him 'madam,' do him obeisance:
Tell him from me, as he will win my love,
He bear himself with honourable action,
Such as he hath observed in noble ladies
Unto their lords, by them accomplishéd:
Such duty to the drunkard let him do,
With soft low tongue and lowly courtesy,
And say :'What is't your honour will command,
Wherein your lady and your humble wife
May show her duty and make known her love?'
And then with kind embracements, tempting kisses,
And with declining head into his bosom,
Bid him shed tears, as being overjoyed
To see her noble lord restored to health,
Who for this seven years hath esteemed him
No better than a poor and loathsome beggar:
And if the boy have not a woman's gift
To rain a shower of commanded tears,
An onion will do well for such a shift,
Which in a napkin being close conveyed,
Shall in despite enforce a watery eye.
See this dispatched with all the haste thou canst—
Anon I'll give thee more instructions.
A servant departs
I know the boy will well usurp the grace,
Voice, gait, and action of a gentlewoman:
I long to hear him call the drunkard husband,
And how my men will stay themselves from laughter
When they do homage to this simple peasant.
I'll in to counsel them: haply my presence
May well abate the over-merry spleen,
Which otherwise would grow into extremes.
He goes, the huntsmen following

Scene 2: A bedroom in the Lord's house

Enter Sly with attendants at hand; some with apparel, others with basin and ewer and other appurtenances, and Lord

SLY. For God's sake, a pot of small ale.
1 SERVANT. Will't please your lordship drink a cup of sack?
2 SERVANT. Will't please your honour taste of these conserves?
3 SERVANT. What raiment will your honour wear to-day?
SLY. I am Christophero Sly, call not me 'honour' nor 'lordship': I ne'er drank sack in my life: and if you give me any conserves, give me conserves of beef: ne'er ask me what raiment I'll wear, for I have no more doublets than backs, no more stockings than legs, nor no more shoes than feet, nay, sometime more feet than shoes, or such shoes as my toes look through the over-leather.
LORD. Heaven cease this idle humour in your honour!
O, that a mighty man, of such descent,
Of such possessions and so high esteem,
Should be infuséd with so foul a spirit!
SLY. What, would you make me mad? Am not I Christopher Sly, old Sly's son of Burton-heath, by birth a pedlar, by education a card-maker, by transmutation a bear-herd, and now by present profession a tinker? Ask Marian Hacket, the fat ale-wife of Wincot, if she know me not: if she say I am not xiiii. d. on the score for sheer ale, score me up for the lyingest knave in Christendom. What! I am not bestraught: here's—
3 SERVANT. O, this it is that makes your lady mourn.
2 SERVANT. O, this it is that makes your servants droop.
LORD. Hence comes it that your kindred shuns your house,
As beaten hence by your strange lunacy.
O, noble lord, bethink thee of thy birth,
Call home thy ancient thoughts from banishment,
And banish thence these abject lowly dreams:
Look, how thy servants do attend on thee.
Each in his office ready at thy beck.
Wilt thou have music? Hark! Apollo plays, Music
And twenty cagéd nightingales do sing.
Or wilt thou sleep? we'll have thee to a couch,
Softer and sweeter than the lustful bed
On purpose trimmed up for Semiramis.
Say thou wilt walk; we will bestrow the ground:
Or wilt thou ride? thy horses shall be trapped,
Their harness studded all with gold and pearl.
Does thou love hawking? thou hast hawks will soar
Above the morning lark. Or wilt thou hunt?
Thy hounds shall make the welkin answer them,
And fetch shrill echoes from the hollow earth.
1 SERVANT. Say thou wilt course—thy greyhounds are as swift
As breathéd stags: ay, fleeter than the roe.
2 SERVANT. Dost thou love pictures? we will fetch thee straight
Adonis painted by a running brook,
And Cytherea all in sedges hid,
Which seem to move and wanton with her breath,
Even as the waving sedges play with wind.
LORD. We'll show thee Io as she was a maid,
And how she was beguiléd and surprised,
As lively painted as the deed was done.
3 SERVANT. Or Daphne roaming through a thorny wood,
Scratching her legs that one shall swear she bleeds,
And at that sight shall sad Apollo weep,
So workmanly the blood and tears are drawn.
LORD. Thou art a lord, and nothing but a lord:
Thou hast a lady far more beautiful
Than any woman in this waning age.
1 SERVANT. And till the tears that she hath shed for thee
Like envious floods o'er-run her lovely face,
She was the fairest creature in the world—
And yet she is inferior to none.
SLY. Am I a lord? and have I such a lady?
Or do I dream? or have I dreamed till now?
I do not sleep: I see, I hear, I speak;
I smell sweet savours and I feel soft things:

Upon my life, I am a lord indeed,
And not a tinker nor Christophero Sly.
Well, bring our lady hither to our sight—
And once again a pot o'th' smallest ale.
2 SERVANT. Will't please your mightiness to wash your hands?
O, how we joy to see your wit restored!
O, that once more you knew but what you are!
These fifteen years you have been in a dream,
Or when you waked, so waked as if you slept.
SLY. These fifteen years! by my fay, a goodly nap.
But did I never speak of all that time?
1 SERVANT. O, yes, my lord, but very idle words,
For though you lay here in this goodly chamber,
Yet would you say ye were beaten out of door,
And rail upon the hostess of the house,
And say you would present her at the leet,
Because she brought stone jugs and no sealed quarts:
Sometimes, you would call out for Cicely Hacket.
SLY. Ay, the woman's maid of the house.
3 SERVANT. Why, sir, you know no house, nor no such maid,
Nor no such men as you have reckoned up,
As Stephen Sly, and old John Naps of Greece,
And Peter Turph, and Henry Pimpernell;
And twenty more such names and men as these,
Which never were nor no man ever saw.
SLY. Now, Lord be thankéd for my good amends!
ALL. Amen.
SLY. I thank thee, thou shalt not lose by it.

The page enters as a lady with attendants

PAGE. How fares my noble lord?
SLY. Marry, I fare well—for here is cheer enough.
Where is my wife?
PAGE. Here, noble lord, what is thy will with her?
SLY. Are you my wife and will not call me husband?
My men should call me 'lord,' I am your goodman.
PAGE. My husband and my lord, my lord and husband,
I am your wife in all obedience.
SLY. I know it well. What must I call her?
LORD. Madam.
SLY. Al'ce madam, or Joan madam?
LORD. 'Madam' and nothing else, so lords call ladies.
SLY. Madam wife, they say that I have dreamed
And slept above some fifteen year or more.
PAGE. Ay, and the time seems thirty unto me,
Being all this time abandoned from your bed.
SLY. 'Tis much! Servants, leave me and her alone.
The servants withdraw
Madam, undress you and come now to bed.
PAGE. Thrice-noble lord, let me entreat of you
To pardon me yet for a night or two;
Or, if not so, until the sun be set:
For your physicians have expressly charged,
In peril to incur your former malady,
That I should yet absent me from your bed:
I hope this reason stands for my excuse.
SLY. Ay, it stands so that I may hardly tarry so long. But I would be loath to fall into my dreams again: I will therefore tarry in despite of the flesh and the blood.

1 Servant re-enters

1 SERVANT. Your honour's players, hearing your amendment,
Are come to play a pleasant comedy,
For so your doctors hold it very meet,
Seeing too much sadness hath congealed your blood,
And melancholy is the nurse of frenzy.
Therefore they thought it good you hear a play
And frame your mind to mirth and merriment,
Which bars a thousand harms and lengthens life.
SLY. Marry, I will; let them play it. Is not a commodity a Christmas gambold or a tumbling-trick?
PAGE. No, my good lord, it is more pleasing stuff.
SLY. What, household stuff?
PAGE. It is a kind of history.
SLY. Well, we'll see't. Come, madam wife, sit by my side and let the world slip, we shall ne'er be younger. The page sits beside him

A flourish of trumpets

ACT 1

Scene 1: Padua. The houses of Baptista, Hortensio and others opening upon a public square

Lucentio and his man Tranio enter the square

LUCENTIO. Tranio, since for the great desire I had
To see fair Padua, nursery of arts,
I am arrived for fruitful Lombardy,
The pleasant garden of great Italy,
And by my father's love and leave am armed
With his good will and thy good company,
My trusty servant, well approved in all,
Here let us breathe and haply institute
A course of learning and ingenious studies.
Pisa renownéd for grave citizens
Gave me my being and my father first,
A merchant of great traffic through the world,
Vincentio, come of the Bentivolii:
Vincentio's son, brought up in Florence,
It shall become to serve all hopes conceived.
To deck his fortune with his virtuous deeds:
And therefore, Tranio, for the time I study
Virtue, and that part of philosophy
Will I apply that treats of happiness
By virtue specially to be achieved.
Tell me thy mind, for I have Pisa left
And am to Padua come, as he that leaves
A shallow plash to plunge him in the deep,
And with satiety seeks to quench his thirst.
TRANIO. Mi perdonato, gentle master mine:
I am in all affected as yourself,
Glad that you thus continue your resolve,
To suck the sweets of sweet philosophy.
Only, good master, while we do admire
This virtue and this moral discipline,
Let's be no stoics nor no stocks I pray,
Or so devote to Aristotle's checks,
As Ovid be an outcast quite abjured:
Balk logic with acquaintance that you have,
And practise rhetoric in your common talk,
Music and poesy use to quicken you,
The mathematics and the metaphysics
Fall to them as you find your stomach serves you:
No profit grows where is no pleasure ta'en . . .

In brief, sir, study what you most affect.
LUCENTIO. Gramercies, Tranio, well dost thou advise.
If, Biondello, thou wert come ashore,
We could at once put us in readiness,
And take a lodging fit to entertain
Such friends as time in Padua shall beget.
But stay awhile, what company is this?
TRANIO. Master, some show to welcome us to town.

Enter Baptista, with his two daughters Katharina and Bianca, followed by Gremio, a pantaloon, and Hortensio, suitor to Bianca. Lucentio and Tranio stand by

BAPTISTA. Gentlemen, importune me no farther,
For how I firmly am resolved you know;
That is, not to bestow my youngest daughter,
Before I have a husband for the elder:
If either of you both love Katharina,
Because I know you well, and love you well,
Leave shall you have to court her at your pleasure.
GREMIO. To cart her rather: she's too rough for me.
There, there, Hortensio, will you any wife?
KATHARINA. I pray you, sir, is it your will
To make a stale of me amongst these mates?
HORTENSIO. Mates, maid! how mean you that? no mates for you,
Unless you were of gentler, milder mould.
KATHARINA. I'faith, sir, you shall never need to fear.
Iwis it is not half way to her heart:
But if it were, doubt not her care should be
To comb your noddle with a three-legged stool,
And paint your face, and use you like a fool.
HORTENSIO. From all such devils, good Lord deliver us!
GREMIO. And me too, good Lord!
TRANIO. Husht, master! here's some good pastime toward;
That wench is stark mad or wonderful froward.
LUCENTIO. But in the other's silence do I see
Maid's mild behaviour and sobriety.
Peace, Tranio.
TRANIO. Well said, master—mum! and gaze your fill.
BAPTISTA. Gentlemen, that I may soon make good
What I have said, Bianca, get you in.
And let it not displease thee, good Bianca,
For I will love thee ne'er the less, my girl.
KATHARINA. A pretty peat! it is best
Put finger in the eye, an she knew why.
BIANCA. Sister, content you in my discontent.
Sir, to your pleasure humbly I subscribe:
My books and instruments shall be my company,
On them to look and practise by myself.
LUCENTIO. Hark, Tranio! thou mayst hear Minerva speak.
HORTENSIO. Signior Baptista, will you be so strange?
Sorry am I that our good will effects
Bianca's grief.
GREMIO. Why will you mew her up,
Signior Baptista, for this fiend of hell,
And make her bear the penance of her tongue?
BAPTISTA. Gentlemen, content ye; I am resolved:
Go in, Bianca.... Bianca goes
And for I know she taketh most delight
In music, instruments and poetry,
Schoolmasters will I keep within my house,
Fit to instruct her youth. If you, Hortensio,
Or Signior Gremio, you, know any such,
Prefer them hither; for to cunning men
I will be very kind, and liberal
To mine own children in good bringing-up.
And so farewell ... Katharina you may stay,
For I have more to commune with Bianca. He goes
KATHARINA. Why, and I trust I may go too, may I not?
What, shall I be appointed hours, as though, belike,
I knew not what to take, and what to leave? Ha!
GREMIO. You may go to the devil's dam: your gifts are so good, here's none will hold you. [she goes] There! love is not so great, Hortensio, but we may blow our nails together, and fast it fairly out: our cake's dough on both sides. Farewell: yet, for the love I bear my sweet Bianca, if I can by any means light on a fit man to teach her that wherein she delights, I will wish him to her father.
HORTENSIO. So will I, Signior Gremio: but a word, I pray. Though the nature of our quarrel yet never brooked parle, know now, upon advice, it toucheth us both—that we may yet again have access to our fair mistress and be happy rivals in Bianca's love—to labour and effect one thing specially.
GREMIO. What's that, I pray?
HORTENSIO. Marry, sir, to get a husband for her sister.
GREMIO. A husband! a devil.
HORTENSIO. I say, a husband.
GREMIO. I say, a devil. Think'st thou, Hortensio, though her father be very rich, any man is so very a fool to be married to hell?
HORTENSIO. Tush, Gremio: though it pass your patience and mine to endure her loud alarums, why, man, there be good fellows in the world, an a man could light on them, would take her with all faults, and money enough.
GREMIO. I cannot tell: but I had as lief take her dowry with this condition—to be whipped at the high-cross every morning.
HORTENSIO. Faith, as you say, there's small choice in rotten apples. But come, since this bar in law makes us friends, it shall be so far forth friendly maintained till by helping Baptista's eldest daughter to a husband we set his youngest free for a husband, and then have to't afresh. Sweet Bianca! Happy man be his dole! He that runs fastest gets the ring. How say you, Signior Gremio?
GREMIO. I am agreed, and would I had given him the best horse in Padua to begin his wooing that would thoroughly woo her, wed her and bed her and rid the house of her! Come on. They go together
TRANIO. I pray, sir, tell me, is it possible
That love should of a sudden take such hold?
LUCENTIO. O Tranio, till I found it to be true,
I never thought it possible or likely;
But see, while idly I stood looking on,
I found the effect of love in idleness,
And now in plainness do confess to thee—
That art to me as secret and as dear
As Anna to the Queen of Carthage was—
Tranio, I burn, I pine, I perish, Tranio,
If I achieve not this young modest girl.
Counsel me, Tranio, for I know thou canst:
Assist me, Tranio, for I know thou wilt.
TRANIO. Master, it is no time to chide you now;
Affection is not rated from the heart:

If love have touched you, nought remains but so—
'Redime te captum quam queas minimo.'
LUCENTIO. Gramercies, lad. Go forward, this contents.
The rest will comfort, for thy counsel's sound.
TRANIO. Master, you looked so longly on the maid,
Perhaps you marked not what's the pith of all.
LUCENTIO. O yes, I saw sweet beauty in her face,
Such as the daughter of Agenor had,
That made great Jove to humble him to her hand,
When with his knees he kissed the Cretan strand.
TRANIO. Saw you no more? marked you not how her sister
Began to scold and raise up such a storm
That mortal ears might hardly endure the din?
LUCENTIO. Tranio, I saw her coral lips to move,
And with her breath she did perfume the air.
Sacred and sweet was all I saw in her.
TRANIO. Nay, then 'tis time to stir him from his trance.
I pray, awake, sir: if you love the maid,
Bend thoughts and wits to achieve her. Thus it stands:
Her elder sister is so curst and shrewd
That till the father rid his hands of her,
Master, your love must live a maid at home,
And therefore has he closely mewed her up,
Because he will not be annoyed with suitors.
LUCENTIO. Ah, Tranio, what a cruel father's he!
But art thou not advised, he took some care
To get her cunning schoolmasters to instruct her?
TRANIO. Ay, marry, am I, sir—and now 'tis plotted.
LUCENTIO. I have it, Tranio.
TRANIO. Master, for my hand,
Both our inventions meet and jump in one!
LUCENTIO. Tell me thine first.
TRANIO. You will be schoolmaster,
And undertake the teaching of the maid:
That's your device.
LUCENTIO. It is: may it be done?
TRANIO. Not possible; for who shall bear your part,
And be in Padua here Vincentio's son,
Keep house and ply his book, welcome his friends,
Visit his countrymen and banquet them?
LUCENTIO. Basta, content thee; for I have it full.
We have not yet been seen in any house,
Nor can we be distinguished by our faces
For man or master: then it follows thus;
Thou shalt be master, Tranio, in my stead,
Keep house and port and servants, as I should:
I will some other be—some Florentine,
Some Neapolitan, or mean man of Pisa.
'Tis hatched, and shall be so: Tranio, at once
Uncase thee; take my coloured hat and cloak:
When Biondello comes, he waits on thee,
But I will charm him first to keep his tongue.
TRANIO. So had you need.
In brief, sir, sith it your pleasure is,
And I am tied to be obedient—
For so your father charged me at our parting;
'Be serviceable to my son,' quoth he,
Although I think 'twas in another sense—
I am content to be Lucentio,
Because so well I love Lucentio.
LUCENTIO. Tranio, be so, because Lucentio loves,
And let me be a slave, t'achieve that maid
Whose sudden sight hath thralled my wounded eye.
Biondello approaches
Here comes the rogue. Sirrah, where have you been?
BIONDELLO. Where have I been! Nay, how now! where are you?
Master, has my fellow Tranio stol'n your clothes?
Or you stol'n his? or both? pray, what's the news?
LUCENTIO. Sirrah, come hither. 'Tis no time to jest,
And therefore frame your manners to the time.
Your fellow Tranio here, to save my life,
Puts my apparel and my count'nance on,
And I for my escape have put on his;
For in a quarrel since I came ashore
I killed a man and fear I was descried:
Wait you on him, I charge you, as becomes,
While I make way from hence to save my life:
You understand me?
BIONDELLO. Ay, sir, ne'er a whit.
LUCENTIO. And not a jot of Tranio in your mouth.
Tranio is changed into Lucentio.
BIONDELLO. The better for him, would I were so too!
TRANIO. So could I, faith, boy, to have the next wish after,
That Lucentio indeed had Baptista's youngest daughter.
But, sirrah, not for my sake, but your master's, I advise
You use your manners discreetly in all kind of companies:
When I am alone, why, then I am Tranio;
But in all places else, your master Lucentio.
LUCENTIO. Tranio, let's go:
One thing more rests, that thyself execute,
To make one among these wooers: if thou ask me why,
Sufficeth my reasons are both good and weighty.
They go

The presenters above speak

I SERVANT. My lord, you nod, you do not mind the play.
SLY [awakes]. Yes, by Saint Anne, do I. A good matter, surely: comes there any more of it?
PAGE. My lord, 'tis but begun.
SLY. 'Tis a very excellent piece of work, madam lady: would 'twere done! They sit and mark

Scene 2: Padua; the square, as before

Enter Petruchio and his man Grumio

PETRUCHIO. Verona, for a while I take my leave,
To see my friends in Padua, but of all
My best belovéd and approvéd friend,
Hortensio; and I trow this is his house . . .
Here, sirrah Grumio, knock, I say.
GRUMIO. Knock, sir! whom should I knock? is there any man has rebused your worship?
PETRUCHIO. Villain, I say, knock me here soundly.
GRUMIO. Knock you here, sir? why, sir, what am I, sir, that I should knock you here, sir?
PETRUCHIO. Villain, I say, knock me at this gate,
And rap me well, or I'll knock your knave's pate.
GRUMIO. My master is grown quarrelsome: I should knock you first,
And then I know after who comes by the worst.
PETRUCHIO. Will it not be?
Faith, sirrah, an you'll not knock, I'll ring it!
I'll try how you can 'sol, fa,' and sing it.

He wrings him by the ears

GRUMIO. Help, masters, help! my master is mad.
PETRUCHIO. Now, knock when I bid you: sirrah! villain!

Hortensio opens

HORTENSIO. How now! what's the matter? My old friend Grumio! and my good friend Petruchio! How do you all at Verona?
PETRUCHIO. Signior Hortensio, come you to part the fray?
'Con tutto il cuore, ben trovato,' may I say.
HORTENSIO. 'Alla nostra casa ben venuto, molto honorato signor mio Petruchio.'
Rise, Grumio, rise, we will compound this quarrel.
GRUMIO. Nay, 'tis no matter, sir, what he 'leges in Latin. If this be not a lawful cause for me to leave his service, look you, sir. He bid me knock him and rap him soundly, sir: well, was it fit for a servant to use his master so, being perhaps (for aught I see) two and thirty, a pip out?
Whom would to God I had well knocked at first,
Then had not Grumio come by the worst.
PETRUCHIO. A senseless villain! Good Hortensio,
I bade the rascal knock upon your gate,
And could not get him for my heart to do it.
GRUMIO. Knock at the gate! O heavens! Spake you not these words plain, 'Sirrah, knock me here: rap me here: knock me well, and knock me soundly'? And come you now with 'knocking at the gate'?
PETRUCHIO. Sirrah, be gone, or talk not, I advise you.
HORTENSIO. Petruchio, patience, I am Grumio's pledge:
Why, this' a heavy chance 'twixt him and you,
Your ancient, trusty, pleasant servant Grumio.
And tell me now, sweet friend, what happy gale
Blows you to Padua here from old Verona?
PETRUCHIO. Such wind as scatters young men through the world,
To seek their fortunes farther than at home,
Where small experience grows but in a few.
Signior Hortensio, thus it stands with me—
Antonio, my father, is deceased,
And I have thrust myself into this maze,
Haply to wive and thrive as best I may:
Crowns in my purse I have, and goods at home,
And so am come abroad to see the world.
HORTENSIO. Petruchio, shall I then come roundly to thee,
And wish thee to a shrewd ill-favoured wife?
Thou'dst thank me but a little for my counsel:
And yet I'll promise thee she shall be rich,
And very rich: but th'art too much my friend,
And I'll not wish thee to her.
PETRUCHIO. Signior Hortensio, 'twixt such friends as we,
Few words suffice: and therefore, if thou know
One rich enough to be Petruchio's wife—
As wealth is burden of my wooing dance—
Be she as foul as was Florentius' love,
As old as Sibyl, and as curst and shrewd
As Socrates' Xanthippe, or a worse,
She moves me not, or not removes, at least,
Affection's edge in me, were she as rough
As are the swelling Adriatic seas.
I come to wive it wealthily in Padua;
If wealthily, then happily in Padua.
GRUMIO. Nay, look you, sir, he tells you flatly what his mind is: why, give him gold enough, and marry him to a puppet or an aglet-baby; or an old trot with ne'er a tooth in her head, though she have as many diseases as two and fifty horses: why, nothing comes amiss, so money comes withal.
HORTENSIO. Petruchio, since we are stepped thus far in,
I will continue that I broached in jest.
I can, Petruchio, help thee to a wife
With wealth enough, and young and beauteous,
Brought up as best becomes a gentlewoman.
Her only fault, and that is faults enough,
Is that she is intolerable curst
And shrewd and froward, so beyond all measure,
That, were my state far worser than it is,
I would not wed her for a mine of gold.
PETRUCHIO. Hortensio, peace; thou know'st not gold's effect.
Tell me her father's name and 'tis enough;
For I will board her, though she chide as loud
As thunder when the clouds in autumn crack.
HORTENSIO. Her father is Baptista Minola,
An affable and courteous gentleman,
Her name is Katharina Minola,
Renowned in Padua for her scolding tongue.
PETRUCHIO. I know her father, though I know not her,
And he knew my deceasèd father well:
I will not sleep, Hortensio, till I see her,
And therefore let me be thus bold with you,
To give you over at this first encounter,
Unless you will accompany me thither.
GRUMIO. I pray you, sir, let him go while the humour lasts. O' my word, an she knew him as well as I do, she would think scolding would do little good upon him. She may perhaps call him half a score knaves or so: why, that's nothing; an he begin once, he'll rail in his rope-tricks. I'll tell you what, sir, an she stand him but a little, he will throw a figure in her face, and so disfigure her with it, that she shall have no more eyes to see withal than a cat. You know him not, sir.
HORTENSIO. Tarry, Petruchio, I must go with thee,
For in Baptista's keep my treasure is:
He hath the jewel of my life in hold,
His youngest daughter, beautiful Bianca,
And her withholds from me and other more,
Suitors to her and rivals in my love;
Supposing it a thing impossible,
For those defects I have before rehearsed,
That ever Katharina will be wooed:
Therefore this order hath Baptista ta'en,
That none shall have access unto Bianca,
Till Katharine the curst have got a husband.
GRUMIO. Katharine the curst!
A title for a maid of all titles the worst.
HORTENSIO. Now shall my friend Petruchio do me grace,
And offer me disguised in sober robes
To old Baptista as a schoolmaster
Well seen in music, to instruct Bianca,
That so I may by this device at least
Have leave and leisure to make love to her,
And unsuspected court her by herself.

GRUMIO. Here's no knavery! See, to beguile the old folks, how the young folks lay their heads together!

Gremio enters the square, with Lucentio disguised as Cambio, a schoolmaster

Master, master, look about you: who goes there? ha!
HORTENSIO. Peace, Grumio! it is the rival of my love.
Petruchio, stand by a while.
GRUMIO. A proper stripling and an amorous!
They stand by
GREMIO. O, very well—I have perused the note.
Hark you, sir, I'll have them very fairly bound—
All books of love, see that at any hand—
And see you read no other lectures to her:
You understand me. Over and beside
Signior Baptista's liberality,
I'll mend it with a largess. Take your paper too.
And let me have them very well perfumed;
For she is sweeter than perfume itself,
To whom they go. What will you read to her?
LUCENTIO. Whate'er I read to her, I'll plead for you
As for my patron, stand you so assured,
As firmly as yourself were still in place,
Yea, and perhaps with more successful words
Than you, unless you were a scholar, sir.
GREMIO. O this learning, what a thing it is!
GRUMIO. O this woodcock, what an ass it is!
PETRUCHIO. Peace, sirrah.
HORTENSIO. Grumio, mum!
[comes forward] God save you, Signior Gremio!
GREMIO. And you are well met, Signior Hortensio.
Trow you whither I am going? To Baptista Minola.
I promised to inquire carefully
About a schoolmaster for the fair Bianca,
And by good fortune I have lighted well
On this young man; for learning and behaviour
Fit for her turn, well read in poetry
And other books—good ones, I warrant ye.
HORTENSIO. 'Tis well: and I have met a gentleman
Hath promised me to help to another,
A fine musician to instruct our mistress,
So shall I no whit be behind in duty
To fair Bianca, so beloved of me.
GREMIO. Beloved of me, and that my deeds shall prove.
GRUMIO. And that his bags shall prove.
HORTENSIO. Gremio, 'tis now no time to vent our love.
Listen to me, and if you speak me fair,
I'll tell you news indifferent good for either.
Here is a gentleman whom by chance I met,
Upon agreement from us to his liking,
Will undertake to woo curst Katharine,
Yea, and to marry her, if her dowry please.
GREMIO. So said, so done, is well.
Hortensio, have you told him all her faults?
PETRUCHIO. I know she is an irksome brawling scold:
If that be all, masters, I hear no harm.
GREMIO. No, say'st me so, friend? What countryman?
PETRUCHIO. Born in Verona, old Antonio's son:
My father dead, my fortune lives for me,
And I do hope good days and long to see.
GREMIO. Sir, such a life, with such a wife, were strange!
But, if you have a stomach, to't a God's name—
You shall have me assisting you in all.
But will you woo this wild-cat?
PETRUCHIO. Will I live?
GRUMIO. Will he woo her? ay, or I'll hang her.
PETRUCHIO. Why came I hither but to that intent?
Think you a little din can daunt mine ears?
Have I not in my time heard lions roar?
Have I not heard the sea puffed up with winds
Rage like an angry boar chaféd with sweat?
Have I not heard great ordnance in the field,
And heaven's artillery thunder in the skies?
Have I not in a pitchéd battle heard
Loud 'larums, neighing steeds, and trumpets' clang?
And do you tell me of a woman's tongue,
That gives not half so great a blow to hear,
As will a chestnut in a farmer's fire?
Tush! tush! fear boys with bugs.
GRUMIO. For he fears none.
GREMIO. Hortensio, hark:
This gentleman is happily arrived,
My mind presumes, for his own good and ours.
HORTENSIO. I promised we would be contributors
And bear his charge of wooing, whatsoe'er.
GREMIO. And so we will, provided that he win her.
GRUMIO. I would I were as sure of a good dinner.

Tranio, bravely apparelled as Lucentio, enters with Biondello

TRANIO. Gentlemen, God save you! If I may be bold,
Tell me, I beseech you, which is the readiest way
To the house of Signior Baptista Minola?
BIONDELLO. He that has the two fair daughters: is't he you mean?
TRANIO. Even he, Biondello.
GREMIO. Hark you, sir! You mean not her too?
TRANIO. Perhaps, him and her, sir. What have you to do?
PETRUCHIO. Not her that chides, sir, at any hand, I pray.
TRANIO. I love no chiders, sir: Biondello, let's away.
LUCENTIO. Well begun, Tranio.
HORTENSIO. Sir, a word ere you go:
Are you a suitor to the maid you talk of, yea or no?
TRANIO. And if I be, sir, is it any offence?
GREMIO. No; if without more words you will get you hence.
TRANIO. Why, sir, I pray, are not the streets as free
For me as for you?
GREMIO. But so is not she.
TRANIO. For what reason, I beseech you?
GREMIO. For this reason, if you'll know,
That she's the choice love of Signior Gremio.
HORTENSIO. That she's the chosen of Signior Hortensio.
TRANIO. Softly, my masters! if you be gentlemen,
Do me this right; hear me with patience.
Baptista is a noble gentleman,
To whom my father is not all unknown,
And were his daughter fairer than she is,
She may more suitors have and me for one.
Fair Leda's daughter had a thousand wooers,
Then well one more may fair Bianca have:
And so she shall; Lucentio shall make one,
Though Paris came in hope to speed alone.
GREMIO. What, this gentleman will out-talk us all!
LUCENTIO. Sir, give him head, I know he'll prove a jade.

PETRUCHIO. Hortensio, to what end are all these words?
HORTENSIO. Sir, let me be so bold as ask you,
Did you yet ever see Baptista's daughter?
TRANIO. No, sir, but hear I do that he hath two:
The one as famous for a scolding tongue,
As is the other for beauteous modesty.
PETRUCHIO. Sir, sir, the first's for me, let her go by.
GREMIO. Yea, leave that labour to great Hercules,
And let it be more than Alcides' twelve.
PETRUCHIO. Sir, understand you this of me in sooth,
The youngest daughter whom you hearken for
Her father keeps from all access of suitors,
And will not promise her to any man,
Until the elder sister first be wed.
The younger then is free, and not before.
TRANIO. If it be so, sir, that you are the man
Must stead us all and me amongst the rest;
And if you break the ice and do this feat,
Achieve the elder, set the younger free
For our access—whose hap shall be to have her
Will not so graceless be to be ingrate.
HORTENSIO. Sir, you say well, and well you do conceive,
And since you do profess to be a suitor,
You must, as we do, gratify this gentleman,
To whom we all rest generally beholding.
TRANIO. Sir, I shall not be slack, in sign whereof,
Please ye we may contrive this afternoon,
And quaff carouses to our mistress' health,
And do as adversaries do in law,
Strive mightily, but eat and drink as friends.
GRUMIO, BIONDELLO. O excellent motion! Fellows, let's be gone.
HORTENSIO. The motion's good indeed, and be it so,
Petruchio, I shall be your ben venuto. They go

ACT 2

Scene 1: The house of Baptista

Katharina and Bianca

BIANCA. Good sister, wrong me not, nor wrong yourself,
To make a bondmaid and a slave of me.
That I disdain: but for these other gauds,
Unbind my hands, I'll pull them off myself,
Yea, all my raiment, to my petticoat,
Or what you will command me will I do,
So well I know my duty to my elders.
KATHARINA. Of all thy suitors, here I charge thee, tell
Whom thou lov'st best: see thou dissemble not.
BIANCA. Believe me, sister, of all the men alive
I never yet beheld that special face
Which I could fancy more than any other.
KATHARINA. Minion, thou liest: is't not Hortensio?
BIANCA. If you affect him, sister, here I swear
I'll plead for you myself, but you shall have him.
KATHARINA. O then, belike, you fancy riches more—
You will have Gremio to keep you fair.
BIANCA. Is it for him you do envy me so?
Nay then you jest, and now I well perceive
You have but jested with me all this while:
I prithee, sister Kate, untie my hands.
KATHARINA [strikes her]. If that be jest, then all the rest was so.

Baptista enters

BAPTISTA. Why, how now, dame! whence grows this insolence?
Bianca, stand aside. Poor girl! she weeps.
Go ply thy needle, meddle not with her.
For shame, thou hilding of a devilish spirit,
Why dost thou wrong her that did ne'er wrong thee?
When did she cross thee with a bitter word?
KATHARINA. Her silence flouts me, and I'll be revenged. Flies after Bianca
BAPTISTA. What, in my sight? Bianca, get thee in.
Bianca departs
KATHARINA. What, will you not suffer me? Nay, now I see
She is your treasure, she must have a husband,
I must dance bare-foot on her wedding-day
And for your love to her lead apes in hell.
Talk not to me, I will go sit and weep
Till I can find occasion of revenge. She goes
BAPTISTA. Was ever gentleman thus grieved as I?
But who comes here?

Gremio enters, with Lucentio as Cambio the schoolmaster, Petruchio, with Hortensio as Licio the musician, and Tranio as Lucentio, with his boy bearing a lute and books

GREMIO. Good morrow, neighbour Baptista.
BAPTISTA. Good morrow, neighbour Gremio. God save you, gentlemen!
PETRUCHIO. And you, good sir: pray, have you not a daughter
Called Katharina, fair and virtuous?
BAPTISTA. I have a daughter, sir, called Katharina.
GREMIO. You are too blunt, go to it orderly.
PETRUCHIO. You wrong me, Signior Gremio, give me leave.
I am a gentleman of Verona, sir.
That, hearing of her beauty and her wit,
Her affability and bashful modesty,
Her wondrous qualities, and mild behaviour,
Am bold to show myself a forward guest
Within your house, to make mine eye the witness
Of that report which I so oft have heard.
And, for an entrance to my entertainment,
I do present you with a man of mine,
Presenting Hortensio
Cunning in music and the mathematics,
To instruct her fully in those sciences,
Whereof I know she is not ignorant.
Accept of him, or else you do me wrong.
His name is Licio, born in Mantua.
BAPTISTA. You're welcome, sir, and he for your good sake.
But for my daughter Katharine, this I know,
She is not for your turn, the more my grief.
PETRUCHIO. I see you do not mean to part with her,
Or else you like not of my company.
BAPTISTA. Mistake me not, I speak but as I find.
Whence are you, sir? what may I call your name?
PETRUCHIO. Petruchio is my name, Antonio's son,
A man well known throughout all Italy.
BAPTISTA. I know him well: you are welcome for his sake.
GREMIO. Saving your tale, Petruchio, I pray,
Let us, that are poor petitioners, speak too!
Backare! you are marvellous forward.

PETRUCHIO. O, pardon me, Signior Gremio, I would fain be doing.

GREMIO. I doubt it not, sir; but you will curse your wooing.
[to Baptista] Neighbour, this is a gift very grateful, I am sure of it. To express the like kindness, myself, that have been more kindly beholding to you than any, freely give unto you this young scholar, [presenting Lucentio] that hath been long studying at Rheims, as cunning in Greek, Latin, and other languages, as the other in music and mathematics. His name is Cambio; pray accept his service.

BAPTISTA. A thousand thanks, Signior Gremio: welcome, good Cambio. [to Tranio] But, gentle sir, methinks you walk like a stranger. May I be so bold to know the cause of your coming?

TRANIO. Pardon me, sir, the boldness is mine own,
That, being a stranger in this city here,
Do make myself a suitor to your daughter,
Unto Bianca, fair, and virtuous:
Nor is your firm resolve unknown to me,
In the preferment of the eldest sister.
This liberty is all that I request,
That, upon knowledge of my parentage,
I may have welcome 'mongst the rest that woo,
And free access and favour as the rest.
And toward the education of your daughters
I here bestow a simple instrument,
And this small packet of Greek and Latin books.
If you accept them, then their worth is great.

BAPTISTA. Lucentio is your name—of whence, I pray?

TRANIO. Of Pisa, sir, son to Vincentio.

BAPTISTA. A mighty man of Pisa—by report
I know him well: you are very welcome, sir.
Take you the lute, and you the set of books,
You shall go see your pupils presently.
Holla, within!

A servant enters

Sirrah, lead these gentlemen
To my daughters, and tell them both,
These are their tutors, bid them use them well.
Hortensio and Lucentio depart
We will go walk a little in the orchard,
And then to dinner. You are passing welcome,
And so I pray you all to think yourselves.

PETRUCHIO. Signior Baptista, my business asketh haste,
And every day I cannot come to woo.
You knew my father well, and in him me,
Left solely heir to all his lands and goods,
Which I have bettered rather than decreased,
Then tell me—if I get your daughter's love,
What dowry shall I have with her to wife?

BAPTISTA. After my death, the one half of my lands,
And in possession twenty thousand crowns.

PETRUCHIO. And, for that dowry, I'll assure her of
Her widowhood—be it that she survive me—
In all my lands and leases whatsoever.
Let specialties be therefore drawn between us,
That covenants may be kept on either hand.

BAPTISTA. Ay, when the special thing is well obtained,
This is, her love; for that is all in all.

PETRUCHIO. Why, that is nothing; for I tell you, father,
I am as peremptory as the proud-minded;
And where two raging fires meet together,
They do consume the thing that feeds their fury.
Though little fire grows great with little wind,
Yet extreme gusts will blow out fire and all:
So I to her, and so she yields to me.
For I am rough and woo not like a babe.

BAPTISTA. Well mayst thou woo, and happy be thy speed!
But be thou armed for some unhappy words.

PETRUCHIO. Ay, to the proof—as mountains are for winds,
That shake not, though they blow perpetually.

Enters Hortensio with his head broke

BAPTISTA. How now, my friend! why dost thou look so pale?

HORTENSIO. For fear, I promise you, if I look pale.

BAPTISTA. What, will my daughter prove a good musician?

HORTENSIO. I think she'll sooner prove a soldier—
Iron may hold with her, but never lutes.

BAPTISTA. Why, then thou canst not break her to the lute?

HORTENSIO. Why no, for she hath broke the lute to me.
I did but tell her she mistook her frets,
And bowed her hand to teach her fingering,
When, with a most impatient devilish spirit,
'Frets, call you these?' quoth she, 'I'll fume with them':
And, with that word, she struck me on the head,
And through the instrument my pate made way,
And there I stood amazéd for a while,
As on a pillory, looking through the lute.
While she did call me rascal fiddler,
And twangling Jack, with twenty such vile terms,
As had she studied to misuse me so.

PETRUCHIO. Now, by the world, it is a lusty wench.
I love her ten times more than e'er I did,
O, how I long to have some chat with her!

BAPTISTA. Well, go with me, and be not so discomfited
Proceed in practice with my younger daughter,
She's apt to learn and thankful for good turns.
Signior Petruchio, will you go with us,
Or shall I send my daughter Kate to you?

PETRUCHIO. I pray you do. I will attend her here,
All depart save Petruchio
And woo her with some spirit when she comes.
Say that she rail, why then I'll tell her plain
She sings as sweetly as a nightingale:
Say that she frown, I'll say she looks as clear
As morning roses newly washed with dew:
Say she be mute and will not speak a word,
Then I'll commend her volubility,
And say she uttereth piercing eloquence:
If she do bid me pack, I'll give her thanks,
As though she bid me stay by her a week:
If she deny to wed, I'll crave the day
When I shall ask the banns, and when be married.
But here she comes, and now, Petruchio, speak.

Katharina enters

Good morrow, Kate—for that's your name, I hear.

KATHARINA. Well have you heard, but something hard of hearing;

They call me Katharine that do talk of me.
PETRUCHIO. You lie, in faith, for you are called plain Kate,
And bonny Kate, and sometimes Kate the curst:
But Kate, the prettiest Kate in Christendom,
Kate of Kate Hall, my super-dainty Kate,
For dainties are all cates, and therefore, Kate,
Take this of me, Kate of my consolation—
Hearing thy mildness praised in every town,
Thy virtues spoke of, and thy beauty sounded,
Yet not so deeply as to thee belongs,
Myself am moved to woo thee for my wife.
KATHARINA. Moved! in good time! let him that moved you hither,
Remove you hence: I knew you at the first
You were a moveable.
PETRUCHIO. Why, what's a moveable?
KATHARINA. A joint-stool.
PETRUCHIO. Thou hast hit it: come, sit on me.
KATHARINA. Asses are made to bear, and so are you.
PETRUCHIO. Women are made to bear, and so are you.
KATHARINA. No such a jade as you, if me you mean.
PETRUCHIO. Alas, good Kate! I will not burden thee,
For knowing thee to be but young and light,—
KATHARINA. Too light for such a swain as you to catch,
And yet as heavy as my weight should be.
PETRUCHIO. Should be! should—buzz!
KATHARINA. Well ta'en, and like a buzzard.
PETRUCHIO. O, slow-winged turtle! shall a buzzard take thee?
KATHARINA. Ay, for a turtle, as he takes a buzzard.
PETRUCHIO. Come, come, you wasp, i'faith, you are too angry.
KATHARINA. If I be waspish, best beware my sting.
PETRUCHIO. My remedy is then, to pluck it out.
KATHARINA. Ay, if the fool could find it where it lies.
PETRUCHIO. Who knows not where a wasp doth wear his sting?
In his tail.
KATHARINA. In his tongue.
PETRUCHIO. Whose tongue?
KATHARINA. Yours, if you talk of tales, and so farewell.
PETRUCHIO. What, with my tongue in your tail? nay, come again.
Good Kate, I am a gentleman—
KATHARINA. That I'll try.
She strikes him
PETRUCHIO. I swear I'll cuff you, if you strike again.
KATHARINA. So may you loose your arms!
If you strike me, you are no gentleman,
And if no gentleman, why then no arms.
PETRUCHIO. A herald, Kate? O, put me in thy books!
KATHARINA. What is your crest? a coxcomb?
PETRUCHIO. A combless cock, so Kate will be my hen.
KATHARINA. No cock of mine, you crow too like a craven.
PETRUCHIO. Nay, come, Kate, come; you must not look so sour.
KATHARINA. It is my fashion, when I see a crab.
PETRUCHIO. Why, here's no crab, and therefore look not sour.
KATHARINA. There is, there is.
PETRUCHIO. Then show it me.
KATHARINA. Had I a glass, I would.
PETRUCHIO. What, you mean my face?
KATHARINA. Well aimed of such a young one.
PETRUCHIO. Now, by S. George, I am too young for you.
KATHARINA. Yet you are withered.
PETRUCHIO. 'Tis with cares.
KATHARINA. I care not!
PETRUCHIO. Nay, hear you, Kate. In sooth, you scape not so.
KATHARINA. I chafe you, if I tarry. Let me go!
PETRUCHIO. No, not a whit—I find you passing gentle:
'Twas told me you were rough and coy and sullen,
And now I find report a very liar;
For thou art pleasant, gamesome, passing courteous,
But slow in speech; yet sweet as spring-time flowers.
Thou canst not frown, thou canst not look askance,
Nor bite the lip, as angry wenches will,
Nor hast thou pleasure to be cross in talk;
But thou with mildness entertain'st thy wooers,
With gentle conference, soft and affable....
Why does the world report that Kate doth limp?
O sland'rous world! Kate like the hazel-twig
Is straight and slender, and as brown in hue
As hazel-nuts and sweeter than the kernels ...
O, let me see thee walk: thou dost not halt.
KATHARINA. Go, fool, and whom thou keep'st command.
PETRUCHIO. Did ever Dian so become a grove
As Kate this chamber with her princely gait?
O, be thou Dian and let her be Kate,
And then let Kate be chaste and Dian sportful!
KATHARINA. Where did you study all this goodly speech?
PETRUCHIO. It is extempore, from my mother-wit.
KATHARINA. A witty mother! witless else her son.
PETRUCHIO. Am I not wise?
KATHARINA. Yes, keep you warm.
PETRUCHIO. Marry, so I mean, sweet Katharine, in thy bed:
And therefore, setting all this chat aside,
Thus in plain terms: your father hath consented
That you shall be my wife; your dowry 'greed on;
And, will you, nill you, I will marry you.
Now, Kate, I am a husband for your turn,
For by this light whereby I see thy beauty,
Thy beauty that doth make me like thee well,
Thou must be married to no man but me.
For I am he am born to tame you, Kate,
And bring you from a wild Kate to a Kate
Conformable as other household Kates.

Baptista, Gremio, and Tranio re-enter

Here comes your father—never make denial—
I must and will have Katharine to my wife.
BAPTISTA. Now, Signior Petruchio, how speed you with my daughter?
PETRUCHIO. How but well, sir? how but well?
It were impossible I should speed amiss.
BAPTISTA. Why, how now, daughter Katharine! in your dumps?
KATHARINA. Call you me daughter? now, I promise you
You have showed a tender fatherly regard,
To wish me wed to one half lunatic,
A mad-cap ruffian and a swearing Jack,
That thinks with oaths to face the matter out.
PETRUCHIO. Father, 'tis thus—yourself and all the world,

That talked of her, have talked amiss of her:
If she be curst, it is for policy:
For she's not froward, but modest as the dove;
She is not hot, but temperate as the morn;
For patience she will prove a second Grissel,
A Roman Lucrece for her chastity.
And to conclude, we have 'greed so well together,
That upon Sunday is the wedding-day.
KATHARINA. I'll see thee hanged on Sunday first.
GREMIO. Hark, Petruchio, she says she'll see thee hanged first.
TRANIO. Is this your speeding? nay, then, good night our part!
PETRUCHIO. Be patient, gentlemen, I choose her for myself—
If she and I be pleased, what's that to you?
'Tis bargained 'twixt us twain, being alone,
That she shall still be curst in company.
I tell you, 'tis incredible to believe
How much she loves me: O, the kindest Kate!
She hung about my neck, and kiss on kiss
She vied so fast, protesting oath on oath,
That in a twink she won me to her love.
O, you are novices! 'tis a world to see,
How tame, when men and women are alone,
A meacock wretch can make the curstest shrew.
Give me thy hand, Kate, I will unto Venice,
To buy apparel 'gainst the wedding-day . . .
Provide the feast, father, and bid the guests,
I will be sure my Katharine shall be fine.
BAPTISTA. I know not what to say—but give me your hands.
God send you joy, Petruchio! 'tis a match.
GREMIO, TRANIO. Amen, say we. We will be witnesses.
PETRUCHIO. Father, and wife, and gentlemen, adieu,
I will to Venice—Sunday comes apace—
We will have rings, and things, and fine array,
And kiss me, Kate, we will be married o' Sunday.
She leaves; he departs by another door
GREMIO. Was ever match clapped up so suddenly?
BAPTISTA. Faith, gentlemen, now I play a merchant's part,
And venture madly on a desperate mart.
TRANIO. 'Twas a commodity lay fretting by you,
'Twill bring you gain, or perish on the seas.
BAPTISTA. The gain I seek is quiet in the match.
GREMIO. No doubt but he hath got a quiet catch.
But now, Baptista, to your younger daughter—
Now is the day we long have lookéd for.
I am your neighbour, and was suitor first.
TRANIO. And I am one, that love Bianca more
Than words can witness, or your thoughts can guess.
GREMIO. Youngling! thou canst not love so dear as I.
TRANIO. Greybeard! thy love doth freeze.
GREMIO. But thine doth fry,
Skipper, stand back—'tis age that nourisheth.
TRANIO. But youth in ladies' eyes that flourisheth.
BAPTISTA. Content you, gentlemen, I will compound this strife.
'Tis deeds must win the prize, and he, of both,
That can assure my daughter greatest dower,
Shall have Bianca's love.
Say, Signior Gremio, what can you assure her?
GREMIO. First, as you know, my house within the city
Is richly furnishéd with plate and gold,
Basins and ewers to lave her dainty hands;
My hangings all of Tyrian tapestry;
In ivory coffers I have stuffed my crowns;
In cypress chests my arras counterpoints,
Costly apparel, tents, and canopies,
Fine linen, Turkey cushions bossed with pearl,
Valance of Venice gold in needlework,
Pewter and brass, and all things that belong
To house or housekeeping. Then, at my farm
I have a hundred milch-kine to the pail,
Sixscore fat oxen standing in my stalls,
And all things answerable to this portion.
Myself am struck in years, I must confess,
And if I die to-morrow this is hers,
If whilst I live she will be only mine.
TRANIO. That 'only' came well in. Sir, list to me,
I am my father's heir and only son.
If I may have your daughter to my wife,
I'll leave her houses three or four as good,
Within rich Pisa walls, as any one
Old Signior Gremio has in Padua,
Besides two thousand ducats by the year
Of fruitful land, all which shall be her jointure.
What, have I pinched you, Signior Gremio?
GREMIO. Two thousand ducats by the year, of land!
[aside] My land amounts not to so much in all.
That she shall have—besides an argosy
That now is lying in Marseilles' road.
What, have I choked you with an argosy?
TRANIO. Gremio, 'tis known my father hath no less
Than three great argosies, besides two galliasses,
And twelve tight galleys. These I will assure her,
And twice as much, whate'er thou offer'st next.
GREMIO. Nay, I have offered all, I have no more,
And she can have no more than all I have.
If you like me, she shall have me and mine.
TRANIO. Why, then the maid is mine from all the world,
By your firm promise—Gremio is out-vied.
BAPTISTA. I must confess your offer is the best,
And, let your father make her the assurance,
She is your own—else, you must pardon me,
If you should die before him, where's her dower?
TRANIO. That's but a cavil; he is old, I young.
GREMIO. And may not young men die, as well as old?
BAPTISTA. Well, gentlemen,
I am thus resolved—On Sunday next you know
My daughter Katharine is to be married:
Now, on the Sunday following, shall Bianca
Be bride to you, if you make this assurance;
If not, to Signior Gremio:
And so I take my leave, and thank you both.
He departs
GREMIO. Adieu, good neighbour. Now I fear thee not;
Sirrah, young gamester, your father were a fool
To give thee all, and in his waning age
Set foot under thy table: tut, a toy!
An old Italian fox is not so kind, my boy. He goes
TRANIO. A vengeance on your crafty withered hide!
Yet I have faced it with a card of ten.
'Tis in my head to do my master good:
I see no reason but supposed Lucentio
Must get a father, called—supposed Vincentio.
And that's a wonder: fathers commonly
Do get their children; but, in this case of wooing,
A child shall get a sire, if I fail not of my cunning.
He goes

ACT 3

Scene 1: The house of Baptista

Bianca, Hortensio, disguised as Licio, and Lucentio, disguised as Cambio

LUCENTIO. Fiddler, forbear, you grow too forward, sir!
Have you so soon forgot the entertainment
Her sister Katharine welcomed you withal?
HORTENSIO. But, wrangling pedant, this is
The patroness of heavenly harmony:
Then give me leave to have prerogative,
And when in music we have spent an hour,
Your lecture shall have leisure for as much.
LUCENTIO. Preposterous ass, that never read so far
To know the cause why music was ordained!
Was it not to refresh the mind of man
After his studies or his usual pain?
Then give me leave to read philosophy,
And while I pause, serve in your harmony.
HORTENSIO. Sirrah, I will not bear these braves of thine.
BIANCA. Why, gentlemen, you do me double wrong,
To strive for that which resteth in my choice:
I am no breeching scholar in the schools,
I'll not be tied to hours nor 'pointed times,
But learn my lessons as I please myself.
And, to cut off all strife, here sit we down:
Take you your instrument, play you the whiles—
His lecture will be done ere you have tuned.
HORTENSIO. You'll leave his lecture when I am in tune?
LUCENTIO. That will be never! Tune your instrument.
BIANCA. Where left we last?
LUCENTIO. Here, madam:
'Hic ibat Simois, hic est Sigeia tellus,
Hic steterat Priami regia celsa senis.'
BIANCA. Construe them.
LUCENTIO. 'Hic ibat,' as I told you before—'Simois,' I am Lucentio—'hic est,' son unto Vincentio of Pisa—'Sigeia tellus,' disguised thus to get your love—'Hic steterat,' and that Lucentio that comes a-wooing—'Priami,' is my man Tranio—'regia,' bearing my port—'celsa senis,' that we might beguile the old pantaloon.
HORTENSIO. Madam, my instrument's in tune.
BIANCA. Let's hear—O fie! the treble jars.
LUCENTIO. Spit in the hole, man, and tune again.
BIANCA. Now let me see if I can construe it. 'Hic ibat Simois,' I know you not—'hic est Sigeia tellus,' I trust you not—'Hic steterat Priami,' take heed he hear us not—'regia,' presume not—'celsa senis,' despair not.
HORTENSIO. Madam, 'tis now in tune.
LUCENTIO. All but the base.
HORTENSIO. The base is right, 'tis the base knave, that jars.
[aside] How fiery and forward our pedant is!
Now, for my life, the knave doth court my love.
Pedascule, I'll watch you better yet.
BIANCA. In time I may believe, yet I mistrust.
LUCENTIO. Mistrust it not—for, sure, Æacides
Was Ajax, called so from his grandfather.
BIANCA. I must believe my master, else, I promise you,
I should be arguing still upon that doubt—
But let it rest. Now, Licio, to you.
Good master, take it not unkindly, pray,
That I have been thus pleasant with you both.
HORTENSIO. You may go walk, and give me leave awhile—
My lessons make no music in three parts.
LUCENTIO. Are you so formal, sir? well, I must wait—
[aside] And watch withal, for, but I be deceived,
Our fine musician groweth amorous.
HORTENSIO. Madam, before you touch the instrument,
To learn the order of my fingering,
I must begin with rudiments of art,
To teach you gamut in a briefer sort,
More pleasant, pithy, and effectual,
Than hath been taught by any of my trade:
And there it is in writing, fairly drawn.
BIANCA. Why, I am past my gamut long ago.
HORTENSIO. Yet read the gamut of Hortensio.
BIANCA [reads]. '"Gamut" I am, the ground of all accord;
"A re," to plead Hortensio's passion;
"B mi," Bianca, take him for thy lord,
"Ca fa ut," that loves with all affection:
"D sol re," one clef, two notes have I,
"E la mi," show pity, or I die.'
Call you this gamut? tut! I like it not.
Old fashions please me best—I am not so nice
To change true rules for odd inventions.

A servant enters

SERVANT. Mistress, your father prays you leave your books,
And help to dress your sister's chamber up.
You know to-morrow is the wedding-day.
BIANCA. Farewell sweet masters both, I must be gone.
She departs
LUCENTIO. Faith, mistress, then I have no cause to stay.
He goes
HORTENSIO. But I have cause to pry into this pedant,
Methinks he looks as though he were in love:
Yet if thy thoughts, Bianca, be so humble,
To cast thy wandring eyes on every stale,
Seize thee that list—if once I find thee ranging,
Hortensio will be quit with thee by changing.
He goes

Scene 2: The public square

Enter Baptista, Gremio, Tranio (as Lucentio), Lucentio (as Cambio), Katharina (in bridal array), Bianca, attendants and a concourse of people

BAPTISTA [to Tranio]. Signior Lucentio, this is the 'pointed day,
That Katharine and Petruchio should be married,
And yet we hear not of our son-in-law:
What will be said? what mockery will it be,
To want the bridegroom when the priest attends
To speak the ceremonial rites of marriage?
What says Lucentio to this shame of ours?
KATHARINA. No shame but mine. I must forsooth be forced
To give my hand opposed against my heart
Unto a mad-brain rudesby, full of spleen,
Who wooed in haste, and means to wed at leisure . . .
I told you, I, he was a frantic fool,
Hiding his bitter jests in blunt behaviour:
And to be noted for a merry man,

He'll woo a thousand, 'point the day of marriage,
Make feasts, invite friends, and proclaim the banns,
Yet never means to wed where he hath wooed.
Now must the world point at poor Katharine,
And say, 'Lo, there is mad Petruchio's wife,
If it would please him come and marry her.'

TRANIO. Patience, good Katharine, and Baptista too.
Upon my life, Petruchio means but well,
Whatever fortune stays him from his word.
Though he be blunt, I know him passing wise,
Though he be merry, yet withal he's honest.

KATHARINA. Would Katharine had never seen him though!

She goes weeping, followed by Bianca and the rest of the bridal train

BAPTISTA. Go, girl, I cannot blame thee now to weep,
For such an injury would vex a saint,
Much more a shrew of thy impatient humour.

Biondello enters

BIONDELLO. Master, master! news, and such old news as you never heard of!

BAPTISTA. Is it new and old too? how may that be?

BIONDELLO. Why, is it not news, to hear of Petruchio's coming?

BAPTISTA. Is he come?

BIONDELLO. Why, no, sir.

BAPTISTA. What then?

BIONDELLO. He is coming.

BAPTISTA. When will he be here?

BIONDELLO. When he stands where I am and sees you there.

TRANIO. But say, what to thine old news?

BIONDELLO. Why, Petruchio is coming, in a new hat and an old jerkin; a pair of old breeches thrice turned; a pair of boots that have been candle-cases, one buckled, another laced; an old rusty sword ta'en out of the town-armoury, with a broken hilt, and chapeless; with two broken points: with an old mothy saddle and stirrups of no kindred: his horse hipped besides, possessed with the glanders and like to mose in the chine, troubled with the lampass, infected with the fashions, full of windgalls, sped with spavins, rayed with the yellows, past cure of the fives, stark spoiled with the staggers, begnawn with the bots, swayed in the back, and shouldershotten, near-legged before, and with a half-checked bit, and a head-stall of sheep's leather, which, being restrained to keep him from stumbling, hath been often burst and new-repaired with knots: one girth six times pieced, and a woman's crupper of velure, which hath two letters for her name, fairly set down in studs, and here and there pieced with pack-thread.

BAPTISTA. Who comes with him?

BIONDELLO. O, sir, his lackey, for all the world caparisoned like the horse: with a linen stock on one leg, and a kersey boot-hose on the other, gartered with a red and blue list; an old hat, and the humour of forty fancies pricked in't for a feather; a monster, a very monster in apparel, and not like a Christian footboy or a gentleman's lackey.

TRANIO. 'Tis some odd humour pricks him to this fashion.
Yet oftentimes he goes but mean-apparelled.

BAPTISTA. I am glad he's come, howsoe'er he comes.

BIONDELLO. Why, sir, he comes not.

BAPTISTA. Didst thou not say he comes?

BIONDELLO. Who? that Petruchio came?

BAPTISTA. Ay, that Petruchio came.

BIONDELLO. No, sir, I say his horse comes, with him on his back.

BAPTISTA. Why, that's all one.

BIONDELLO. Nay, by S. Jamy,
I hold you a penny,
A horse and a man
Is more than one,
And yet not many.

Petruchio and Grumio enter

PETRUCHIO. Come, where be these gallants? who's at home?

BAPTISTA. You are welcome, sir.

PETRUCHIO. And yet I come not well?

BAPTISTA. And yet you halt not.

TRANIO. Not so well apparelled
As I wish you were.

PETRUCHIO. Were it not better I should rush in thus?
But where is Kate? where is my lovely bride?
How does my father? Gentles, methinks you frown
And wherefore gaze this goodly company,
As if they saw some wondrous monument,
Some comet, or unusual prodigy?

BAPTISTA. Why, sir, you know, this is your wedding-day:
First were we sad, fearing you would not come,
Now sadder, that you come so unprovided.
Fie! doff this habit, shame to your estate,
An eyesore to our solemn festival.

TRANIO. And tell us what occasion of import
Hath all so long detained you from your wife,
And sent you hither so unlike yourself?

PETRUCHIO. Tedious it were to tell, and harsh to hear—
Sufficeth I am come to keep my word,
Though in some part enforcéd to digress,
Which at more leisure I will so excuse
As you shall well be satisfied withal.
But where is Kate? I stay too long from her,
The morning wears, 'tis time we were at church.

TRANIO. See not your bride in these unreverent robes,
Go to my chamber, put on clothes of mine.

PETRUCHIO. Not I, believe me—thus I'll visit her.

BAPTISTA. But thus, I trust, you will not marry her.

PETRUCHIO. Good sooth, even thus: therefore ha' done with words,
To me she's married, not unto my clothes:
Could I repair what she will wear in me,
As I can change these poor accoutrements,
'Twere well for Kate, and better for myself.
But what a fool am I to chat with you,
When I should bid good morrow to my bride,
And seal the title with a lovely kiss.

He goes with Grumio behind him

TRANIO. He hath some meaning in his mad attire.
We will persuade him, be it possible,
To put on better ere he go to church.

BAPTISTA. I'll after him, and see the event of this.

He follows Petruchio; Gremio and others also depart

TRANIO. But to her love concerneth us to add
Her father's liking, which to bring to pass,
As I before imparted to your worship,
I am to get a man—whate'er he be,

It skills not much, we'll fit him to our turn—
And he shall be Vincentio of Pisa,
And made assurance here in Padua
Of greater sums than I have promiséd.
So shall you quietly enjoy your hope,
And marry sweet Bianca with consent.
LUCENTIO. Were it not that my fellow-schoolmaster
Doth watch Bianca's steps so narrowly,
'Twere good methinks to steal our marriage,
Which once performed, let all the world say no,
I'll keep mine own despite of all the world.
TRANIO. That by degrees we mean to look into,
And watch our vantage in this business.
We'll over-reach the greybeard, Gremio,
The narrow-prying father, Minola,
The quaint musician, amorous Licio—
All for my master's sake, Lucentio.

Gremio returns

Signior Gremio, came you from the church?
GREMIO. As willingly as e'er I came from school.
TRANIO. And is the bride and bridegroom coming home?
GREMIO. A bridegroom, say you? 'tis a groom, indeed,
A grumbling groom, and that the girl shall find.
TRANIO. Curster than she? why, 'tis impossible.
GREMIO. Why, he's a devil, a devil, a very fiend.
TRANIO. Why, she's a devil, a devil, the devil's dam.
GREMIO. Tut! she's a lamb, a dove, a fool to him . . .
I'll tell you, Sir Lucentio: when the priest
Should ask if Katharine should be his wife,
'Ay, by gogs-wouns,' quoth he, and swore so loud,
That all-amazed the priest let fall the book,
And as he stooped again to take it up,
This mad-brained bridegroom took him such a cuff,
That down fell priest and book, and book and priest.
'Now take them up,' quoth he, 'if any list.'
TRANIO. What said the wench, when he arose again?
GREMIO. Trembled and shook; for why, he stamped and swore,
As if the vicar meant to cozen him.
But after many ceremonies done,
He calls for wine—'A health,' quoth he, as if
He had been aboard, carousing to his mates
After a storm—quaffed off the muscadel,
And threw the sops all in the sexton's face;
Having no other reason
But that his beard grew thin and hungerly,
And seemed to ask him sops as he was drinking.
This done, he took the bride about the neck,
And kissed her lips with such a clamorous smack,
That at the parting all the church did echo:
And I seeing this came thence for very shame,
And after me, I know, the rout is coming.
Such a mad marriage never was before:
Hark, hark! I hear the minstrels play.

The minstrels with the marriage procession enter the square, Petruchio and Katharina leading, followed by Bianca, Baptista, Hortensio, Grumio, and the rest of their train

PETRUCHIO. Gentlemen and friends, I thank you for your pains,
I know you think to dine with me to-day,
And have prepared great store of wedding cheer,
But so it is, my haste doth call me hence,
And therefore here I mean to take my leave.
BAPTISTA. Is't possible you will away to-night?
PETRUCHIO. I must away to-day before night come.
Make it no wonder; if you knew my business,
You would entreat me rather go than stay.
And, honest company, I thank you all,
That have beheld me give away myself
To this most patient, sweet, and virtuous wife.
Dine with my father, drink a health to me,
For I must hence, and farewell to you all.
TRANIO. Let us entreat you stay till after dinner.
PETRUCHIO. It may not be.
GREMIO. Let me entreat you.
PETRUCHIO. It cannot be.
KATHARINA. Let me entreat you.
PETRUCHIO. I am content.
KATHARINA. Are you content to stay?
PETRUCHIO. I am content you shall entreat me stay—
But yet not stay, entreat me how you can.
KATHARINA. Now, if you love me, stay.
PETRUCHIO. Grumio, my horse.
GRUMIO. Ay, sir, they be ready—the oats have eaten the horses.
KATHARINA. Nay, then,
Do what thou canst, I will not go to-day,
No, nor to-morrow, till I please myself.
The door is open, sir, there lies your way,
You may be jogging whiles your boots are green;
For me, I'll not be gone, till I please myself.
'Tis like you'll prove a jolly, surly groom,
That take it on you at the first so roundly.
PETRUCHIO. O, Kate, content thee, prithee, be not angry.
KATHARINA. I will be angry—what hast thou to do?
Father, be quiet—he shall stay my leisure.
GREMIO. Ay, marry, sir, now it begins to work.
KATHARINA. Gentlemen, forward to the bridal dinner.
I see a woman may be made a fool,
If she had not a spirit to resist.
PETRUCHIO. They shall go forward, Kate, at thy command.
Obey the bride, you that attend on her!
Go to the feast, revel and domineer,
Carouse full measure to her maidenhead,
Be mad and merry, or go hang yourselves;
But for my bonny Kate, she must with me.
Nay, look not big, nor stamp, nor stare, nor fret,
I will be master of what is mine own.
She is my goods, my chattels; she is my house,
My household stuff, my field, my barn,
My horse, my ox, my ass, my any thing—
And here she stands, touch her whoever dare!
I'll bring mine action on the proudest he
That stops my way in Padua. Grumio,
Draw forth thy weapon, we are beset with thieves,
Rescue thy mistress, if thou be a man.
Fear not, sweet wench, they shall not touch thee,
Kate!
I'll buckler thee against a million.
He carries her from the square, Grumio follows
BAPTISTA. Nay, let them go, a couple of quiet ones.
GREMIO. Went they not quickly, I should die with laughing.
TRANIO. Of all mad matches never was the like!
LUCENTIO. Mistress, what's your opinion of your sister?
BIANCA. That, being mad herself, she's madly mated.

GREMIO. I warrant him, Petruchio is Kated.
BAPTISTA. Neighbours and friends, though bride and bridegroom wants
For to supply the places at the table,
You know, there wants no junkets at the feast.
Lucentio, you shall supply the bridegroom's place,
And let Bianca take her sister's room.
TRANIO. Shall sweet Bianca practise how to bride it?
BAPTISTA. She shall, Lucentio. Come, gentlemen, let's go. They go

ACT 4

Scene 1: Petruchio's house in the country

Grumio enters

GRUMIO. Fie, fie, on all tired jades, on all mad masters, and all foul ways! Was ever man so beaten? was ever man so rayed? was ever man so weary? I am sent before to make a fire, and they are coming after to warm them. Now, were not I a little pot, and soon hot, my very lips might freeze to my teeth, my tongue to the roof of my mouth, my heart in my belly, ere I should come by a fire to thaw me. But I, with blowing the fire, shall warm myself; for, considering the weather, a taller man than I will take cold. Holla, ho! Curtis!

Curtis enters

CURTIS. Who is that calls so coldly?

GRUMIO. A piece of ice: if thou doubt it, thou mayst slide from my shoulder to my heel with no greater a run but my head and my neck. A fire, good Curtis.

CURTIS. Is my master and his wife coming, Grumio?

GRUMIO. O, ay, Curtis, ay—and therefore fire, fire; cast on no water.

CURTIS. Is she so hot a shrew as she's reported?

GRUMIO. She was, good Curtis, before this frost: but thou know'st winter tames man, woman, and beast; for it hath tamed my old master, and my new mistress, and myself, fellow Curtis.

CURTIS. Away, you three-inch fool! I am no beast.

GRUMIO. Am I but three inches? why, thy horn is a foot, and so long am I at the least. But wilt thou make a fire, or shall I complain on thee to our mistress, whose hand (she being now at hand) thou shalt soon feel, to thy cold comfort, for being slow in thy hot office?

CURTIS. I prithee, good Grumio, tell me, how goes the world?

GRUMIO. A cold world, Curtis, in every office but thine—and therefore fire. Do thy duty, and have thy duty, for my master and mistress are almost frozen to death.

CURTIS. There's fire ready, and therefore, good Grumio, the news?

GRUMIO. Why, 'Jack boy! ho boy!' and as much news as thou wilt.

CURTIS. Come, you are so full of cony-catching.

GRUMIO. Why therefore fire, for I have caught extreme cold. Where's the cook? is supper ready, the house trimmed, rushes strewed, cobwebs swept, the serving-men in their new fustian, their white stockings, and every officer his wedding-garment on? Be the jacks fair within, the jills fair without, the carpets laid, and every thing in order?

CURTIS. All ready: and therefore, I pray thee, news.

GRUMIO. First, know, my horse is tired, my master and mistress fallen out—

CURTIS. How?

GRUMMIO. Out of their saddles into the dirt, and thereby hangs a tale.

CURTIS. Let's ha't, good Grumio.

GRUMIO. Lend thine ear.

CURTIS. Here.

GRUMIO. There. He strikes him

CURTIS. This is to feel a tale, not to hear a tale.

GRUMIO. And therefore 'tis called, a sensible tale: and this cuff was but to knock at your ear and beseech listening: now I begin—Imprimis, we came down a foul hill, my master riding behind my mistress—

CURTIS. Both of one horse?

GRUMIO. What's that to thee?

CURTIS. Why, a horse.

GRUMIO. Tell thou the tale: but hadst thou not crossed me, thou shouldst have heard how her horse fell, and she under her horse; thou shouldst have heard in how miry a place, how she was bemoiled, how he left her with the horse upon her, how he beat me because her horse stumbled, how she waded through the dirt to pluck him off me; how he swore, how she prayed that never prayed before; how I cried, how the horses ran away, how her bridle was burst; how I lost my crupper—with many things of worthy memory, which now shall die in oblivion, and thou return unexperienced to thy grave.

CURTIS. By this reck'ning he is more shrew than she.

GRUMIO. Ay, and that thou and the proudest of you all shall find when he comes home. But what talk I of this? Call forth Nathaniel, Joseph, Nicholas, Philip, Walter Sugarsop, and the rest; let their heads be sleekly combed, their blue coats brushed, and their garters of an indifferent knit; let them curtsy with their left legs, and not presume to touch a hair of my master's horse-tail, till they kiss their hands. Are they all ready?

CURTIS. They are.

GRUMIO. Call them forth.

CURTIS [calls]. Do you hear, ho? you must meet my master to countenance my mistress.

GRUMIO. Why, she hath a face of her own.

CURTIS. Who knows not that?

GRUMIO. Thou, it seems, that calls for company to countenance her.

CURTIS. I call them forth to credit her.

GRUMIO. Why, she comes to borrow nothing of them.

Enter four of five serving-men

NATHANIEL. Welcome home, Grumio.

PHILIP. How now, Grumio!

JOSEPH. What, Grumio!

NICHOLAS. Fellow Grumio!

NATHANIEL. How now, old lad?

GRUMIO. Welcome, you!—how now, you!—what, you!—fellow, you!—and thus much for greeting. Now, my spruce companions, is all ready, and all things neat?

NATHANIEL. All things is ready. How near is our master?

GRUMIO. E'en at hand, alighted by this; and therefore be not—Cock's passion, silence! I hear my master.

Petruchio enters with Katharina

PETRUCHIO. Where be these knaves? What, no man at the door,
To hold my stirrup, nor to take my horse!
Where is Nathaniel, Gregory, Philip?—
SERVANTS. Here, here, sir—here, sir.
PETRUCHIO. Here, sir! here, sir! here, sir! here, sir!—
You logger-headed and unpolished grooms!
What, no attendance? no regard? no duty?—
Where is the foolish knave I sent before?
GRUMIO. Here, sir, as foolish as I was before.
PETRUCHIO. You peasant swain! you whoreson malt-horse drudge!
Did I not bid thee meet me in the park,
And bring along these rascal knaves with thee?
GRUMIO. Nathaniel's coat, sir, was not fully made,
And Gabriel's pumps were all unpinked i'th' heel;
There was no link to colour Peter's hat,
And Walter's dagger was not come from sheathing:
There were none fine but Adam, Rafe, and Gregory—
The rest were ragged, old, and beggarly.
Yet, as they are, here are they come to meet you.
PETRUCHIO. Go, rascals, go, and fetch my supper in.
They go
[he sings] 'Where is the life that late I led'—
Where are those—
Sit down, Kate, and welcome. Food, food, food, food!

Enter servants with supper

Why, when, I say? Nay, good sweet Kate, be merry.
Off with my boots, you rogues! you villains, when?
[he sings] 'It was the friar of orders grey,
As he forth walkéd on his way'—
Out, you rogue! you pluck my foot awry.
He strikes him
Take that, and mend the plucking off the other.
Be merry, Kate. Some water, here: what, ho!

Enter one with water

Where's my spaniel Troilus? Sirrah, get you hence,
And bid my cousin Ferdinand come hither.
One, Kate, that you must kiss, and be acquainted with.
Where are my slippers? Shall I have some water?
Come, Kate, and wash, and welcome heartily.
You whoreson villain! will you let it fall?
He strikes him
KATHARINA. Patience, I pray you, 'twas a fault unwilling.
PETRUCHIO. A whoreson, beetle-headed, flap-eared knave!
Come, Kate, sit down, I know you have a stomach.
Will you give thanks, sweet Kate, or else shall I?—
What's this? mutton?
I SERVANT. Ay.
PETRUCHIO. Who brought it?
PETER. I.
PETRUCHIO. 'Tis burnt, and so is all the meat:
What dogs are these! Where is the rascal cook?
How durst you, villains, bring it from the dresser,
And serve it thus to me that love it not?
There, take it to you, trenchers, cups and all:
He throws the meal at the servants' heads
You heedless joltheads, and unmannered slaves!
What, do you grumble? I'll be with you straight.
They all go
KATHARINA. I pray you, husband, be not so disquiet,
The meat was well, if you were so contented.
PETRUCHIO. I tell thee, Kate, 'twas burnt and dried away,
And I expressly am forbid to touch it:
For it engenders choler, planteth anger,
And better 'twere that both of us did fast—
Since, of ourselves, ourselves are choleric—
Than feed it with such over-roasted flesh.
Be patient, to-morrow't shall be mended,
And, for this night, we'll fast for company.
Come, I will bring thee to thy bridal chamber.
They go; the servants return severally
NATHANIEL. Peter, didst ever see the like?
PETER. He kills her in her own humour.

Curtis enters

GRUMIO. Where is he?
CURTIS. In her chamber, making a sermon of continency to her,
And rails and swears and rates, that she, poor soul,
Knows not which way to stand, to look, to speak,
And sits as one new-risen from a dream.
Away, away! for he is coming hither.
They go

Petruchio enters

PETRUCHIO. Thus have I politicly begun my reign,
And 'tis my hope to end successfully:
My falcon now is sharp and passing empty,
And till she stoop, she must not be full-gorged,
For then she never looks upon her lure.
Another way I have to man my haggard,
To make her come and know her keeper's call:
That is, to watch her, as we watch these kites
That bate and beat and will not be obedient.
She eat no meat to-day, nor none shall eat;
Last night she slept not, nor to-night she shall not;
As with the meat, some undeservéd fault
I'll find about the making of the bed,
And here I'll fling the pillow, there the bolster,
This way the coverlet, another way the sheets:
Ay, and amid this hurly I intend
That all is done in reverend care of her.
And, in conclusion, she shall watch all night,
And, if she chance to nod, I'll rail and brawl,
And with the clamour keep her still awake.
This is a way to kill a wife with kindness;
And thus I'll curb her mad and headstrong humour.
He that knows better how to tame a shrew,
Now let him speak—'tis charity to show.
He goes

Scene 2: The public square in Padua

Lucentio (as Cambio), Bianca, Tranio (as Lucentio) and Hortensio

TRANIO. Is't possible, friend Licio, that Mistress Bianca
Doth fancy any other but Lucentio?
I tell you, sir, she bears me fair in hand.
HORTENSIO. Sir, to satisfy you in what I have said,
Stand by, and mark the manner of his teaching.
They stand aside

LUCENTIO. Now, mistress, profit you in what you read?
BIANCA. What, master, read you? first resolve me that.
LUCENTIO. I read that I profess, the Art to Love.
BIANCA. And may you prove, sir, master of your art!
LUCENTIO. While you, sweet dear, prove mistress of my heart.
HORTENSIO. Quick proceeders, marry! Now, tell me, I pray,
You that durst swear that your mistress Bianca
Loved none in the world so well as Lucentio.
TRANIO. O despiteful love! unconstant womankind!
I tell thee, Licio, this is wonderful.
HORTENSIO. Mistake no more, I am not Licio,
Nor a musician, as I seem to be,
But one that scorn to live in this disguise,
For such a one as leaves a gentleman,
And makes a god of such a cullion:
Know, sir, that I am called Hortensio.
TRANIO. Signior Hortensio, I have often heard
Of your entire affection to Bianca,
And since mine eyes are witness of her lightness,
I will with you, if you be so contented,
Forswear Bianca and her love for ever.
HORTENSIO. See, how they kiss and court! Signior Lucentio,
Here is my hand, and here I firmly vow
Never to woo her more, but do forswear her,
As one unworthy all the former favours
That I have fondly flattered her withal.
TRANIO. And here I take the like unfeignéd oath,
Never to marry with her, though she would entreat.
Fie on her! see, how beastly she doth court him.
HORTENSIO. Would all the world but he had quite forsworn!
For me, that I may surely keep mine oath,
I will be married to a wealthy widow,
Ere three days pass, which hath as long loved me
As I have loved this proud disdainful haggard.
And so farewell, Signior Lucentio.
Kindness in women, not their beauteous looks,
Shall win my love—and so I take my leave,
In resolution as I swore before.
He goes
TRANIO. Mistress Bianca, bless you with such grace
As 'longeth to a lover's blesséd case!
Nay, I have ta'en you napping, gentle love,
And have forsworn you, with Hortensio.
BIANCA. Tranio, you jest—but have you both forsworn me?
TRANIO. Mistress, we have.
LUCENTIO. Then we are rid of Licio.
TRANIO. I'faith, he'll have a lusty widow now,
That shall be wooed and wedded in a day.
BIANCA. God give him joy!
TRANIO. Ay, and he'll tame her.
BIANCA. He says so, Tranio.
TRANIO. Faith, he is gone unto the taming-school.
BIANCA. The taming-school! what, is there such a place?
TRANIO. Ay, mistress, and Petruchio is the master,
That teacheth tricks eleven and twenty long,
To tame a shrew and charm her chattering tongue.

Biondello enters

BIONDELLO. O master, master, I have watched so long
That I am dog-weary, but at last I spied
An ancient angel coming down the hill,
Will serve the turn.
TRANIO. What is he, Biondello?
BIONDELLO. Master, a mercatantè, or a pedant,
I know not what—but formal in apparel,
In gait and countenance surely like a father.
LUCENTIO. And what of him, Tranio?
TRANIO. If he be credulous, and trust my tale,
I'll make him glad to seem Vincentio,
And give assurance to Baptista Minola,
As if he were the right Vincentio.
Take in your love, and then let me alone.
Lucentio and Bianca go

The Pedant enters

PEDANT. God save you, sir!
TRANIO. And you, sir! you are welcome.
Travel you far on, or are you at the farthest?
PEDANT. Sir, at the farthest for a week or two,
But then up farther, and as far as Rome,
And so to Tripoli, if God lend me life.
TRANIO. What countryman, I pray?
PEDANT. Of Mantua.
TRANIO. Of Mantua, sir? marry, God forbid!
And come to Padua, careless of your life?
PEDANT. My life, sir! how, I pray? for that goes hard.
TRANIO. 'Tis death for any one in Mantua
To come to Padua. Know you not the cause?
Your ships are stayed at Venice, and the duke—
For private quarrel 'twixt your duke and him—
Hath published and proclaimed it openly:
'Tis marvel, but that you are newly come,
You might have heard it else proclaimed about.
PEDANT. Alas, sir, it is worse for me than so!
For I have bills for money by exchange
From Florence, and must here deliver them.
TRANIO. Well, sir, to do you courtesy,
This will I do, and this I will advise you—
First, tell me, have you ever been at Pisa?
PEDANT. Ay, sir, in Pisa have I often been,
Pisa renownéd for grave citizens.
TRANIO. Among them know you one Vincentio?
PEDANT. I know him not, but I have heard of him;
A merchant of incomparable wealth.
TRANIO. He is my father, sir, and sooth to say,
In count'nance somewhat doth resemble you.
BIONDELLO [aside]. As much as an apple doth an oyster, and all one.
TRANIO. To save your life in this extremity,
This favour will I do you for his sake—
And think it not the worst of all your fortunes
That you are like to Sir Vincentio—
His name and credit shall you undertake,
And in my house you shall be friendly lodged.
Look that you take upon you as you should,
You understand me, sir: so shall you stay
Till you have done your business in the city:
If this be court'sy, sir, accept of it.
PEDANT. O, sir, I do, and will repute you ever
The patron of my life and liberty.
TRANIO. Then go with me to make the matter good.
This, by the way, I let you understand—
My father is here looked for every day,
To pass assurance of a dower in marriage
'Twixt me and one Baptista's daughter here:

In all these circumstances I'll instruct you.
Go with me, sir, to clothe you as becomes you.
They go

Scene 3: Petruchio's house in the country

Enter Katharina and Grumio

GRUMIO. No, no, forsooth, I dare not for my life.
KATHARINA. The more my wrong, the more his spite appears.
What, did he marry me to famish me?
Beggars that come unto my father's door,
Upon entreaty have a present alms,
If not, elsewhere they meet with charity:
But I, who never knew how to entreat,
Nor never needed that I should entreat,
Am starved for meat, giddy for lack of sleep,
With oaths kept waking, and with brawling fed:
And that which spites me more than all these wants,
He does it under name of perfect love;
As who should say—if I should sleep or eat,
'Twere deadly sickness or else present death.
I prithee go, and get me some repast,
I care not what, so it be wholesome food.
GRUMIO. What say you to a neat's foot?
KATHARINA. 'Tis passing good, I prithee let me have it.
GRUMIO. I fear it is too choleric a meat.
How say you to a fat tripe finely broiled?
KATHARINA. I like it well. Good Grumio, fetch it me.
GRUMIO. I cannot tell, I fear 'tis choleric.
What say you to a piece of beef and mustard?
KATHARINA. A dish that I do love to feed upon.
GRUMIO. Ay, but the mustard is too hot a little.
KATHARINA. Why then, the beef, and let the mustard rest.
GRUMIO. Nay then, I will not, you shall have the mustard,
Or else you get no beef of Grumio.
KATHARINA. Then both or one, or any thing thou wilt.
GRUMIO. Why then, the mustard without the beef.
KATHARINA. Go, get thee gone, thou false deluding slave, She beats him
That feed'st me with the very name of meat.
Sorrow on thee and all the pack of you
That triumph thus upon my misery:
Go, get thee gone, I say.

Enter Petruchio and Hortensio with meat

PETRUCHIO. How fares my Kate? What, sweeting, all-amort?
HORTENSIO. Mistress, what cheer?
KATHARINA. Faith, as cold as can be.
PETRUCHIO. Pluck up thy spirits, look cheerfully upon me.
Here, love, thou seest how diligent I am,
To dress thy meat myself, and bring it thee.
I am sure, sweet Kate, this kindness merits thanks.
What, not a word? Nay then, thou lov'st it not;
And all my pains is sorted to no proof.
Here, take away this dish.
KATHARINA. I pray you, let it stand.
PETRUCHIO. The poorest service is repaid with thanks,
And so shall mine before you touch the meat.
KATHARINA. I thank you, sir.
HORTENSIO. Signior Petruchio, fie! you are to blame:
Come, Mistress Kate, I'll bear you company.
PETRUCHIO [aside]. Eat it up all, Hortensio, if thou lovest me:
Much good do it unto thy gentle heart.
[aloud] Kate, eat apace; and now, my honey love,
Will we return unto thy father's house,
And revel it as bravely as the best,
With silken coats and caps and golden rings,
With ruffs and cuffs and fardingales, and things;
With scarfs and fans and double change of brav'ry,
With amber bracelets, beads, and all this knav'ry.
What, hast thou dined? The tailor stays thy leisure,
To deck thy body with his ruffling treasure.

A tailor enters

Come, tailor, let us see these ornaments.
Lay forth the gown.

A haberdasher enters

What news with you, sir?
HABERDASHER. Here is the cap your worship did bespeak.
PETRUCHIO. Why, this was moulded on a porringer—
A velvet dish: fie, fie! 'tis lewd and filthy:
Why, 'tis a cockle or a walnut-shell,
A knack, a toy, a trick, a baby's cap:
Away with it! come, let me have a bigger.
KATHARINA. I'll have no bigger, this doth fit the time,
And gentlewomen wear such caps as these.
PETRUCHIO. When you are gentle, you shall have one too,
And not till then.
HORTENSIO [aside]. That will not be in haste.
KATHARINA. Why, sir, I trust, I may have leave to speak,
And speak I will! I am no child, no babe—
Your betters have endured me say my mind,
And if you cannot, best you stop your ears.
My tongue will tell the anger of my heart,
Or else my heart concealing it will break,
And rather than it shall, I will be free,
Even to the uttermost, as I please, in words.
PETRUCHIO. Why, thou say'st true—it is a paltry cap,
A custard-coffin, a bauble, a silken pie!
I love thee well, in that thou lik'st it not.
KATHARINA. Love me or love me not, I like the cap,
And it I will have, or I will have none.
PETRUCHIO. Thy gown? why, ay: come, tailor, let us see't.
The haberdasher goes
O mercy, God! what masquing-stuff is here?
What's this? a sleeve? 'tis like a demi-cannon.
What! up and down carved like an apple-tart?
Here's snip and nip and cut and slish and slash,
Like to a censer in a barber's shop:
Why, what a devil's name, tailor, call'st thou this?
HORTENSIO [aside]. I see she's like to have neither cap nor gown.
TAILOR. You bid me make it orderly and well,
According to the fashion and the time.
PETRUCHIO. Marry, and did; but if you be remembred,
I did not bid you mar it to the time.
Go, hop me over every kennel home,
For you shall hop without my custom, sir:
I'll none of it; hence, make your best of it.
KATHARINA. I never saw a better-fashioned gown,

More quaint, more pleasing, nor more commendable:
Belike you mean to make a puppet of me.

PETRUCHIO. Why, true, he means to make a puppet of thee.

TAILOR. She says your worship means to make a puppet of her.

PETRUCHIO. O monstrous arrogance! Thou liest, thou thread, thou thimble,
Thou yard, three-quarters, half-yard, quarter, nail!
Thou flea, thou nit, thou winter-cricket thou!
Braved in mine own house with a skein of thread?
Away, thou rag, thou quantity, thou remnant,
Or I shall so be-mete thee with thy yard,
As thou shalt think on prating whilst thou livest!
I tell thee, I, that thou hast marred her gown.

TAILOR. Your worship is deceived—the gown is made
Just as my master had direction:
Grumio gave order how it should be done.

GRUMIO. I gave him no order, I gave him the stuff.

TAILOR. But how did you desire it should be made?

GRUMIO. Marry, sir, with needle and thread.

TAILOR. But did you not request to have it cut?

GRUMIO. Thou hast faced many things.

TAILOR. I have.

GRUMIO. Face not me: thou hast braved many men, brave not me; I will neither be faced nor braved. I say unto thee, I bid thy master cut out the gown, but I did not bid him cut it to pieces: ergo, thou liest.

TAILOR. Why, here is the note of the fashion to testify.

PETRUCHIO. Read it.

GRUMIO. The note lies in's throat, if he say I said so.

TAILOR [reads]. 'Imprimis, a loose-bodied gown.'

GRUMIO. Master, if ever I said loose-bodied gown, sew me in the skirts of it, and beat me to death with a bottom of brown thread: I said a gown.

PETRUCHIO. Proceed.

TAILOR. 'With a small compassed cape.'

GRUMIO. I confess the cape.

TAILOR. 'With a trunk sleeve.'

GRUMIO. I confess two sleeves.

TAILOR. 'The sleeves curiously cut.'

PETRUCHIO. Ay, there's the villainy.

GRUMIO. Error i'th' bill, sir, error i'th' bill! I commanded the sleeves should be cut out, and sewed up again, and that I'll prove upon thee, though thy little finger be armed in a thimble.

TAILOR. This is true that I say, an I had thee in place where, thou shouldst know it.

GRUMIO. I am for thee straight: take thou the bill, give me thy mete-yard, and spare not me.

HORTENSIO. God-a-mercy, Grumio! then he shall have no odds.

PETRUCHIO. Well, sir, in brief, the gown is not for me.

GRUMIO. You are i'th' right, sir, 'tis for my mistress.

PETRUCHIO. Go, take it up unto thy master's use.

GRUMIO. Villain, not for thy life: take up my mistress' gown for thy master's use!

PETRUCHIO. Why, sir, what's your conceit in that?

GRUMIO. O, sir, the conceit is deeper than you think for:
Take up my mistress' gown to his master's use!
O, fie, fie, fie!

PETRUCHIO [aside]. Hortensio, say thou wilt see the tailor paid.
[aloud] Go take it hence, be gone, and say no more.

HORTENSIO. Tailor, I'll pay thee for thy gown to-morrow.
Take no unkindness of his hasty words:
Away, I say. Commend me to thy master.
The tailor goes

PETRUCHIO. Well, come my Kate, we will unto your father's,
Even in these honest mean habiliments:
Our purses shall be proud, our garments poor:
For 'tis the mind that makes the body rich,
And as the sun breaks through the darkest clouds,
So honour peereth in the meanest habit.
What, is the jay more precious than the lark,
Because his feathers are more beautiful?
Or is the adder better than the eel,
Because his painted skin contents the eye?
O, no, good Kate; neither art thou the worse
For this poor furniture, and mean array.
If thou account'st it shame, lay it on me.
And therefore frolic, we will hence forthwith,
To feast and sport us at thy father's house.
Go, call my men, and let us straight to him,
And bring our horses unto Long-lane end,
There will we mount, and thither walk on foot.
Let's see, I think 'tis now some seven o'clock,
And well we may come there by dinner-time.

KATHARINA. I dare assure you, sir, 'tis almost two,
And 'twill be supper-time ere you come there.

PETRUCHIO. It shall be seven ere I go to horse:
Look, what I speak, or do, or think to do,
You are still crossing it. Sirs, let't alone,
I will not go to-day, and ere I do,
It shall be what o'clock I say it is.

HORTENSIO. Why, so this gallant will command the sun. They go

Scene 4: The square in Padua

Enter Tranio (as Lucentio) with the Pedant, dressed like Vincentio, and booted

TRANIO. Sir, this is the house—please it you that I call?

PEDANT. Ay, what else? and but I be deceived
Signior Baptista may remember me,
Near twenty years ago, in Genoa,
Where we were lodgers at the Pegasus.

TRANIO. 'Tis well, and hold your own, in any case
With such austerity as 'longeth to a father.

PEDANT. I warrant you.

Biondello approaches

But, sir, here comes your boy.
'Twere good he were schooled.

TRANIO. Fear you not him. Sirrah Biondello,
Now do your duty throughly, I advise you;
Imagine 'twere the right Vincentio.

BIONDELLO. Tut, fear not me.

TRANIO. But hast thou done thy errand to Baptista?

BIONDELLO. I told him, that your father was at Venice,
And that you looked for him this day in Padua.

TRANIO. Th'art a tall fellow; hold thee that to drink.

Baptista enters followed by Lucentio, as Cambio

Here comes Baptista: set your countenance, sir.
Signior Baptista, you are happily met:

[to the Pedant] Sir, this is the gentleman I told you of.
I pray you, stand good father to me now,
Give me Bianca for my patrimony.

PEDANT. Soft, son!
Sir, by your leave, having come to Padua
To gather in some debts, my son Lucentio
Made me acquainted with a weighty cause
Of love between your daughter and himself:
And for the good report I hear of you,
And for the love he beareth to your daughter,
And she to him, to stay him not too long,
I am content, in a good father's care,
To have him matched: and, if you please to like
No worse than I, upon some agreement
Me shall you find ready and willing
With one consent to have her so bestowed:
For curious I cannot be with you,
Signior Baptista of whom I hear so well.

BAPTISTA. Sir, pardon me in what I have to say—
Your plainness and your shortness please me well:
Right true it is, your son Lucentio here
Doth love my daughter, and she loveth him,
Or both dissemble deeply their affections:
And therefore, if you say no more than this,
That like a father you will deal with him,
And pass my daughter a sufficient dower,
The match is made, and all is done—
Your son shall have my daughter with consent.

TRANIO. I thank you, sir. Where then do you know best
We be affied and such assurance ta'en
As shall with either part's agreement stand?

BAPTISTA. Not in my house, Lucentio, for you know
Pitchers have ears and I have many servants,
Besides, old Gremio is heark'ning still,
And happily we might be interrupted.

TRANIO. Then at my lodging, an it like you.
There doth my father lie; and there this night
We'll pass the business privately and well:
Send for your daughter by your servant here,
My boy shall fetch the scrivener presently.
The worst is this, that, at so slender warning,
You are like to have a thin and slender pittance.

BAPTISTA. It likes me well: Cambio, hie you home,
And bid Bianca make her ready straight:
And, if you will, tell what hath happenéd—
Lucentio's father is arrived in Padua,
And how she's like to be Lucentio's wife.
Lucentio goes

BIONDELLO. I pray the gods she may, with all my heart!

TRANIO. Dally not with the gods, but get thee gone.
Biondello goes
Signior Baptista, shall I lead the way?
Welcome! one mess is like to be your cheer.
Come sir, we will better it in Pisa.

BAPTISTA. I follow you.
Tranio, Baptista and the Pedant go,

Lucentio and Biondello enter

BIONDELLO. Cambio.

LUCENTIO. Why say'st thou, Biondello?

BIONDELLO. You saw my master wink and laugh upon you?

LUCENTIO. Biondello, what of that?

BIONDELLO. Faith nothing; but has left me here behind, to expound the meaning or moral of his signs and tokens.

LUCENTIO. I pray thee, moralize them.

BIONDELLO. Then thus . . . Baptista is safe, talking with the deceiving father of a deceitful son.

LUCENTIO. And what of him?

BIONDELLO. His daughter is to be brought by you to the supper.

LUCENTIO. And then?

BIONDELLO. The old priest at Saint Luke's church is at your command at all hours.

LUCENTIO. And what of all this?

BIONDELLO. I cannot tell—except they are busied about a counterfeit assurance: take you assurance of her, 'cum privilegio ad imprimendum solum.' To th' church! take the priest, clerk, and some sufficient honest witnesses.
If this be not that you look for, I have no more to say,
But bid Bianca farewell for ever and a day.

LUCENTIO. Hear'st thou, Biondello?

BIONDELLO. I cannot tarry: I knew a wench married in an afternoon as she went to the garden for parsley to stuff a rabbit—and so may you, sir; and so adieu, sir. My master hath appointed me to go to Saint Luke's, to bid the priest be ready to come against you come with your appendix. He goes

LUCENTIO. I may and will, if she be so contented:
She will be pleased, then wherefore should I doubt?
Hap what hap may, I'll roundly go about her;
It shall go hard, if Cambio go without her.
He goes

Scene 5: The highway leading to Padua

Enter Petruchio, Katharina, Hortensio and servants

PETRUCHIO. Come on, a God's name! once more toward our father's.
Good Lord, how bright and goodly shines the moon!

KATHARINA. The moon! the sun: it is not moonlight now.

PETRUCHIO. I say it is the moon that shines so bright.

KATHARINA. I know it is the sun that shines so bright.

PETRUCHIO. Now by my mother's son, and that's myself,
It shall be moon, or star, or what I list,
Or ere I journey to your father's house . . .
Go on, and fetch our horses back again—
Evermore crossed and crossed, nothing but crossed!

HORTENSIO. Say as he says, or we shall never go.

KATHARINA. Forward, I pray, since we have come so far,
And be it moon, or sun, or what you please:
And if you please to call it a rush-candle,
Henceforth I vow it shall be so for me.

PETRUCHIO. I say it is the moon.

KATHARINA. I know it is the moon.

PETRUCHIO. Nay, then you lie: it is the blesséd sun.

KATHARINA. Then, God be blessed, it is the blesséd sun—
But sun it is not, when you say it is not,
And the moon changes even as your mind:
What you will have it named, even that it is,
And so it shall be still, for Katharine.

HORTENSIO. Petruchio, go thy ways, the field is won.

PETRUCHIO. Well, forward, forward! thus the bowl should run,
And not unluckily against the bias.
But soft, what company is coming here?

Vincentio enters

[to Vincentio] Good morrow, gentle mistress, where away?
Tell me, sweet Kate, and tell me truly too,
Hast thou beheld a fresher gentlewoman?
Such war of white and red within her cheeks!
What stars do spangle heaven with such beauty,
As those two eyes become that heavenly face?
Fair lovely maid, once more good day to thee:
Sweet Kate, embrace her for her beauty's sake.

HORTENSIO. A' will make the man mad, to make a woman of him.

KATHARINA. Young budding virgin, fair and fresh and sweet,
Whither away, or where is thy abode?
Happy the parents of so fair a child;
Happier the man, whom favourable stars
Allot thee for his lovely bed-fellow!

PETRUCHIO. Why, how now, Kate! I hope thou art not mad.
This is a man, old, wrinkled, faded, withered,
And not a maiden, as thou say'st he is.

KATHARINA. Pardon, old father, my mistaking eyes,
That have been so bedazzled with the sun,
That every thing I look on seemeth green:
Now I perceive thou art a reverend father;
Pardon, I pray thee, for my mad mistaking.

PETRUCHIO. Do, good old grandsire, and withal make known
Which way thou travellest—if along with us,
We shall be joyful of thy company.

VINCENTIO. Fair sir, and you my merry mistress,
That with your strange encounter much amazed me,
My name is called Vincentio, my dwelling Pisa,
And bound I am to Padua, there to visit
A son of mine, which long I have not seen.

PETRUCHIO. What is his name?

VINCENTIO. Lucentio, gentle sir.

PETRUCHIO. Happily met—the happier for thy son.
And now by law, as well as reverend age,
I may entitle thee my loving father.
The sister to my wife, this gentlewoman,
Thy son by this hath married. Wonder not,
Nor be not grieved—she is of good esteem,
Her dowry wealthy, and of worthy birth;
Beside, so qualified as may beseem
The spouse of any noble gentleman.
Let me embrace with old Vincentio,
And wander we to see thy honest son,
Who will of thy arrival be full joyous.

VINCENTIO. But is this true? or is it else your pleasure,
Like pleasant travellers, to break a jest
Upon the company you overtake?

HORTENSIO. I do assure thee, father, so it is.

PETRUCHIO. Come, go along, and see the truth hereof,
For our first merriment hath made thee jealous.

All depart save Hortensio

HORTENSIO. Well, Petruchio, this hath put me in heart.
Have to my widow! and if she be froward,
Then hast thou taught Hortensio to be untoward.

He follows

ACT 5

Scene 1: The square in Padua

Gremio seated; Biondello, Lucentio (in his proper habit) and Bianca (muffled) enter

BIONDELLO. Softly and swiftly, sir, for the priest is ready.

LUCENTIO. I fly, Biondello: but they may chance to need thee at home; therefore leave us.

He and Bianca go

BIONDELLO [follows]. Nay, faith, I'll see the church o'your back, and then come back to my master's as soon as I can.

GREMIO. I marvel Cambio comes not all this while.

Petruchio, Katharina, Vincentio, and Grumio with attendants enter

PETRUCHIO. Sir, here's the door, this is Lucentio's house.
My father's bears more toward the market-place,
Thither must I, and here I leave you, sir.

VINCENTIO. You shall not choose but drink before you go;
I think I shall command your welcome here,
And by all likelihood some cheer is toward.

He knocks

GREMIO. They're busy within, you were best knock louder.

The Pedant looks out of the window

PEDANT. What's he that knocks as he would beat down the gate?

VINCENTIO. Is Signior Lucentio within, sir?

PEDANT. He's within, sir, but not to be spoken withal.

VINCENTIO. What if a man bring him a hundred pound or two, to make merry withal?

PEDANT. Keep your hundred pounds to yourself, he shall need none, so long as I live.

PETRUCHIO. Nay, I told you your son was well beloved in Padua ... Do you hear, sir?—to leave frivolous circumstances, I pray you tell Signior Lucentio that his father is come from Pisa, and is here at the door to speak with him.

PEDANT. Thou liest, his father is come from Mantua, and is here looking out at the window.

VINCENTIO. Art thou his father?

PEDANT. Ay, sir, so his mother says, if I may believe her.

PETRUCHIO [to Vincentio]. Why, how now, gentleman! why, this is flat knavery, to take upon you another man's name.

PEDANT. Lay hands on the villain! I believe, a' means to cozen somebody in this city under my countenance.

Biondello returns

BIONDELLO. I have seen them in the church together, God send 'em good shipping. But who is here? mine old master Vincentio! now we are undone, and brought to nothing.

VINCENTIO [sees Biondello]. Come hither, crack-hemp.

BIONDELLO. I hope I may choose, sir.

VINCENTIO. Come hither, you rogue.
What, have you forgot me?

BIONDELLO. Forgot you? no, sir: I could not forget you, for I never saw you before in all my life.

VINCENTIO. What, you notorious villain, didst thou never see thy master's father, Vincentio?

BIONDELLO. What, my old, worshipful old master? yes, marry, sir—see where he looks out of the window.

VINCENTIO. Is't so, indeed? He beats Biondello

BIONDELLO. Help, help, help! here's a madman will murder me. He goes

PEDANT. Help, son! help, Signior Baptista! He shuts the window

PETRUCHIO. Prithee, Kate, let's stand aside, and see the end of this controversy. They retire

The Pedant with servants, Baptista and Tranio come from the house

TRANIO. Sir, what are you, that offer to beat my servant?

VINCENTIO. What am I, sir! nay, what are you, sir? O immortal gods! O fine villain! A silken doublet, a velvet hose, a scarlet cloak, and a copatain hat! O, I am undone, I am undone! while I play the good husband at home, my son and my servant spend all at the university.

TRANIO. How now! what's the matter?

BAPTISTA. What, is the man lunatic?

TRANIO. Sir, you seem a sober ancient gentleman by your habit: but your words show you a madman. Why, sir, what 'cerns it you, if I wear pearl and gold? I thank my good father, I am able to maintain it.

VINCENTIO. Thy father! O, villain, he is a sail-maker in Bergamo.

BAPTISTA. You mistake, sir—you mistake, sir—pray, what do you think is his name?

VINCENTIO. His name! as if I knew not his name: I have brought him up ever since he was three years old, and his name is Tranio.

PEDANT. Away, away, mad ass! his name is Lucentio, and he is mine only son, and heir to the lands of me, Signior Vincentio.

VINCENTIO. Lucentio! O, he hath murdered his master! Lay hold on him, I charge you, in the duke's name. O, my son, my son . . . Tell me, thou villain, where is my son Lucentio?

TRANIO. Call forth an officer.

An officer comes up

Carry this mad knave to the gaol. Father Baptista, I charge you see that he be forthcoming.

VINCENTIO. Carry me to the gaol!

GREMIO. Stay, officer. He shall not go to prison.

BAPTISTA. Talk not, Signior Gremio; I say he shall go to prison.

GREMIO. Take heed, Signior Baptista, lest you be cony-catched in this business; I dare swear this is the right Vincentio.

PEDANT. Swear, if thou darest.

GREMIO. Nay, I dare not swear it.

TRANIO. Then thou wert best say that I am not Lucentio.

GREMIO. Yes, I know thee to be Signior Lucentio.

BAPTISTA. Away with the dotard, to the gaol with him!

VINCENTIO. Thus strangers may be haléd and abused.
O monstrous villain!

Biondello returns with Lucentio and Bianca

BIONDELLO. O, we are spoiled, and—yonder he is!
Deny him, forswear him, or else we are all undone.

LUCENTIO [kneels]. Pardon, sweet father.

VINCENTIO. Lives my sweet son?

Biondello, Tranio, and Pedant run as fast as may be

BIANCA [kneels]. Pardon, dear father.

BAPTISTA. How hast thou offended?
Where is Lucentio?

LUCENTIO. Here's Lucentio,
Right son to the right Vincentio,
That have by marriage made thy daughter mine,
While counterfeit supposes bleared thine eyne.

GREMIO. Here's packing, with a witness, to deceive us all!

VINCENTIO. Where is that damnéd villain, Tranio,
That faced and braved me in this matter so?

BAPTISTA. Why, tell me, is not this my Cambio?

BIANCA. Cambio is changed into Lucentio.

LUCENTIO. Love wrought these miracles. Bianca's love
Made me exchange my state with Tranio,
While he did bear my countenance in the town,
And happily I have arrived at last
Unto the wishéd haven of my bliss.
What Tranio did, myself enforced him to;
Then pardon him, sweet father, for my sake.

VINCENTIO. I'll slit the villain's nose, that would have sent me to the gaol.

BAPTISTA. But do you hear, sir? have you married my daughter without asking my good will?

VINCENTIO. Fear not, Baptista—we will content you, go to: but I will in, to be revenged for this villainy. He goes

BAPTISTA. And I, to sound the depth of this knavery. He goes

LUCENTIO. Look not pale, Bianca; thy father will not frown. They follow Baptista

GREMIO. My cake is dough, but I'll in among the rest,
Out of hope of all but my share of the feast. He follows likewise

KATHARINA. Husband, let's follow, to see the end of this ado.

PETRUCHIO. First kiss me, Kate, and we will.

KATHARINA. What, in the midst of the street?

PETRUCHIO. What, art thou ashamed of me?

KATHARINA. No, sir, God forbid—but ashamed to kiss.

PETRUCHIO. Why, then let's home again. Come, sirrah, let's away.

KATHARINA. Nay, I will give thee a kiss. Now pray thee, love, stay.

PETRUCHIO. Is not this well? Come, my sweet Kate.
Better once than never, for never too late. They go

Scene 2: Lucentio's house

Enter Baptista and Vincentio, Gremio and the Pedant, Lucentio and Bianca, Petruchio and Katharina, Hortensio and the Widow; the serving-men with Tranio bringing in a banquet.

LUCENTIO. At last, though long, our jarring notes agree,
And time it is, when raging war is done,
To smile at scapes and perils overblown.
My fair Bianca, bid my father welcome,
Which I with self-same kindness welcome thine:
Brother Petruchio, sister Katharina,
And thou, Hortensio, with thy loving widow,
Feast with the best, and welcome to my house.
My banquet is to close our stomachs up,
After our great good cheer. Pray you, sit down,
For now we sit to chat, as well as eat.
PETRUCHIO. Nothing but sit and sit, and eat and eat!
BAPTISTA. Padua affords this kindness, son Petruchio.
PETRUCHIO. Padua affords nothing but what is kind.
HORTENSIO. For both our sakes, I would that word were true.
PETRUCHIO. Now, for my life, Hortensio fears his widow.
WIDOW. Then never trust me if I be afeard.
PETRUCHIO. You are very sensible, and yet you miss my sense:
I mean, Hortensio is afeard of you.
WIDOW. He that is giddy thinks the world turns round.
PETRUCHIO. Roundly replied.
KATHARINA. Mistress, how mean you that?
WIDOW. Thus I conceive by him.
PETRUCHIO. Conceives by me! How likes Hortensio that?
HORTENSIO. My widow says, thus she conceives her tale.
PETRUCHIO. Very well mended: kiss him for that, good widow.
KATHARINA. 'He that is giddy thinks the world turns round'—
I pray you, tell me what you meant by that.
WIDOW. Your husband, being troubled with a shrew,
Measures my husband's sorrow by his woe:
And now you know my meaning.
KATHARINA. A very mean meaning.
WIDOW. Right, I mean you.
KATHARINA. And I am mean, indeed, respecting you.
PETRUCHIO. To her, Kate!
HORTENSIO. To her, widow.
PETRUCHIO. A hundred marks, my Kate does put her down.
HORTENSIO. That's my office.
PETRUCHIO. Spoke like an officer: ha' to thee, lad!
He drinks to Hortensio
BAPTISTA. How likes Gremio these quick-witted folks?
GREMIO. Believe me, they butt heads together well.
BIANCA. Head and butt! an hasty-witted body
Would say your head and butt were head and horn.
VINCENTIO. Ay, mistress bride, hath that awakened you?
BIANCA. Ay, but not frighted me, therefore I'll sleep again.
PETRUCHIO. Nay, that you shall not: since you have begun,
Have at you for a bitter jest or two.
BIANCA. Am I your bird? I mean to shift my bush,
And then pursue me as you draw your bow.
You are welcome all.
She leaves, followed by Katharina and the Widow
PETRUCHIO. She hath prevented me. Here, Signior Tranio,
This bird you aimed at, though you hit her not—
Therefore, a health to all shot and missed.
TRANIO. O, sir, Lucentio slipped me like his greyhound,
Which runs himself, and catches for his master.
PETRUCHIO. A good swift simile, but something currish.
TRANIO. 'Tis well, sir, that you hunted for yourself:
'Tis thought, your deer does hold you at a bay.
BAPTISTA. O ho, Petruchio! Tranio hits you now.
LUCENTIO. I thank thee for that gird, good Tranio.
HORTENSIO. Confess, confess, hath he not hit you here?
PETRUCHIO. A' has a little galled me, I confess;
And as the jest did glance away from me,
'Tis ten to one it maimed you two outright.
BAPTISTA. Now, in good sadness, son Petruchio,
I think thou hast the veriest shrew of all.
PETRUCHIO. Well, I say no: and therefore for assurance
Let's each one send unto his wife,
And he whose wife is most obedient,
To come at first when he doth send for her,
Shall win the wager which we will propose.
HORTENSIO. Content. What is the wager?
LUCENTIO. Twenty crowns.
PETRUCHIO. Twenty crowns!
I'll venture so much of my hawk or hound,
But twenty times so much upon my wife.
LUCENTIO. A hundred then.
HORTENSIO. Content.
PETRUCHIO. A match! 'tis done.
HORTENSIO. Who shall begin?
LUCENTIO. That will I.
Go, Biondello, bid your mistress come to me.
BIONDELLO. I go. He goes
BAPTISTA. Son, I will be your half, Bianca comes.
LUCENTIO. I'll have no halves; I'll bear it all myself.

Biondello returns

How now! what news?
BIONDELLO. Sir, my mistress sends you word
That she is busy, and she cannot come.
PETRUCHIO. How! she is busy, and she cannot come!
Is that an answer!
GREMIO. Ay, and a kind one too:
Pray God, sir, your wife send you not a worse.
PETRUCHIO. I hope better.
HORTENSIO. Sirrah Biondello, go and entreat my wife
To come to me forthwith. Exit Biondello
PETRUCHIO. O, ho! entreat her!
Nay, then she must needs come.
HORTENSIO. I am afraid, sir,
Do what you can, yours will not be entreated . . .

Biondello returns

Now, where's my wife?
BIONDELLO. She says you have some goodly jest in hand.
She will not come; she bids you come to her.
PETRUCHIO. Worse and worse, she will not come! O vile,
Intolerable, not to be endured!
Sirrah, Grumio, go to your mistress;

Say, I command her come to me. Grumio goes
HORTENSIO. I know her answer.
PETRUCHIO. What?
HORTENSIO. She will not.
PETRUCHIO. The fouler fortune mine, and there an end.

Katharina enters

BAPTISTA. Now, by my holidame, here comes Katharina!
KATHARINA. What is your will, sir, that you send for me?
PETRUCHIO. Where is your sister, and Hortensio's wife?
KATHARINA. They sit conferring by the parlour fire.
PETRUCHIO. Go, fetch them hither. If they deny to come,
Swinge me them soundly forth unto their husbands.
Away, I say, and bring them hither straight.
She goes
LUCENTIO. Here is a wonder, if you talk of wonders.
HORTENSIO. And so it is; I wonder what it bodes.
PETRUCHIO. Marry, peace it bodes, and love, and quiet life,
An awful rule, and right supremacy;
And, to be short, what not, that's sweet and happy?
BAPTISTA. Now fair befal thee, good Petruchio!
The wager thou hast won, and I will add
Unto their losses twenty thousand crowns—
Another dowry to another daughter,
For she is changed, as she had never been.
PETRUCHIO. Nay, I will win my wager better yet,
And show more sign of her obedience,
Her new-built virtue and obedience.

Katharina returns with Bianca and the Widow

See, where she comes, and brings your froward wives
As prisoners to her womanly persuasion.
Katharine, that cap of yours becomes you not,
Off with that bauble, throw it under-foot.
She obeys
WIDOW. Lord, let me never have a cause to sigh,
Till I be brought to such a silly pass!
BIANCA. Fie! what a foolish duty call you this?
LUCENTIO. I would your duty were as foolish too:
The wisdom of your duty, fair Bianca,
Hath cost one hundred crowns since supper-time.
BIANCA. The more fool you, for laying on my duty.
PETRUCHIO. Katharine, I charge thee, tell these headstrong women
What duty they do owe their lords and husbands.
WIDOW. Come, come, you're mocking; we will have no telling.
PETRUCHIO. Come on, I say, and first begin with her.
WIDOW. She shall not.
PETRUCHIO. I say, she shall—and first begin with her.
KATHARINA. Fie, fie! unknit that threatening unkind brow,
And dart not scornful glances from those eyes,
To wound thy lord, thy king, thy governor:
It blots thy beauty as frosts do bite the meads,
Confounds thy fame as whirlwinds shake fair buds,
And in no sense is meet or amiable.
A women moved is like a fountain troubled,
Muddy, ill-seeming, thick, bereft of beauty,
And while it is so, none so dry or thirsty
Will deign to sip or touch one drop of it.
Thy husband is thy lord, thy life, thy keeper,
Thy head, thy sovereign; one that cares for thee,
And for thy maintenance commits his body
To painful labour, both by sea and land;
To watch the night in storms, the day in cold,
Whilst thou liest warm at home, secure and safe,
And craves no other tribute at thy hands,
But love, fair looks, and true obedience;
Too little payment for so great a debt.
Such duty as the subject owes the prince,
Even such a woman oweth to her husband:
And when she is froward, peevish, sullen, sour,
And not obedient to his honest will,
What is she but a foul contending rebel,
And graceless traitor to her loving lord?
I am ashamed that women are so simple
To offer war where they should kneel for peace;
Or seek for rule, supremacy, and sway,
When they are bound to serve, love, and obey.
Why are our bodies soft, and weak, and smooth,
Unapt to toil and trouble in the world,
But that our soft conditions and our hearts
Should well agree with our external parts?
Come, come, you froward and unable worms!
My mind hath been as big as one of yours,
My heart as great, my reason haply more,
To bandy word for word, and frown for frown;
But now I see our lances are but straws,
Our strength as weak, our weakness past compare,
That seeming to be most which we indeed least are.
Then vail your stomachs, for it is no boot,
And place your hands below your husband's foot:
In token of which duty, if he please,
My hand is ready, may it do him ease.
PETRUCHIO. Why, there's a wench! Come on, and kiss me, Kate.
LUCENTIO. Well, go thy ways, old lad, for thou shalt ha't.
VINCENTIO. 'Tis a good hearing, when children are toward.
LUCENTIO. But a harsh hearing when women are froward.
PETRUCHIO. Come Kate, we'll to bed.
We three are married, but you two are sped.
'Twas I won the wager, though you hit the white,
To Lucentio
And, being a winner, God give you good night!
Petruchio and Katharina depart
HORTENSIO. Now go thy ways, thou hast tamed a curst shrow.
LUCENTIO. 'Tis a wonder, by your leave, she will be tamèd so. They all go

All's Well that Ends Well

ACT 1

Scene I: The palace of Rousillon

Enter Bertram the young Count of Rousillon, his mother the Countess, Helena, and Lord Lafeu, all in black

COUNTESS. In delivering my son from me I bury a second husband.

BERTRAM. And I in going, madam, weep o'er my father's death anew: but I must attend his majesty's command, to whom I am now in ward, evermore in subjection.

LAFEU. You shall find of the king a husband, madam—you, sir, a father. He that so generally is at all times good, must of necessity hold his virtue to you, whose worthiness would stir it up where it wanted rather than lack it where there is such abundance.

COUNTESS. What hope is there of his majesty's amendment?

LAFEU. He hath abandoned his physicians, madam, under whose practices he hath persecuted time with hope, and finds no other advantage in the process but only the losing of hope by time.

COUNTESS. This young gentlewoman had a father—O, that 'had,' how sad a passage 'tis—whose skill was almost as great as his honesty; had it stretched so far, would have made nature immortal, and death should have play for lack of work. Would, for the king's sake, he were living. I think it would be the death of the king's disease.

LAFEU. How called you the man you speak of, madam?

COUNTESS. He was famous, sir, in his profession, and it was his great right to be so: Gerard de Narbon.

LAFEU. He was excellent, indeed, madam. The king very lately spoke of him admiringly and mourningly: he was skilful enough to have lived still, if knowledge could be set up against mortality.

BERTRAM. What is it, my good lord, the king languishes of?

LAFEU. A fistula, my lord.

BERTRAM. I heard not of it before.

LAFEU. I would it were not notorious.... Was this gentlewoman the daughter of Gerard de Narbon?

COUNTESS. His sole child, my lord, and bequeathed to my overlooking. I have those hopes of her good that her education promises: her dispositions she inherits, which make fair gifts fairer; for where an unclean mind carries virtuous qualities, there commendations go with pity, they are virtues and traitors too; in her they are the better for their simpleness; she derives her honesty and achieves her goodness.

LAFEU. Your commendations, madam, get from her tears.

COUNTESS. 'Tis the best brine a maiden can season her praise in. The remembrance of her father never approaches her heart but the tyranny of her sorrows takes all livelihood from her cheek.... No more of this, Helena, go to, no more, lest it be rather thought you affect a sorrow than to have—

HELENA. I do affect a sorrow indeed, but I have it too.

LAFEU. How understand we that? Moderate lamentation is the right of the dead, excessive grief the enemy to the living.

COUNTESS. If the living be enemy to the grief, the excess makes it soon mortal.

BERTRAM. Madam, I desire your holy wishes.

COUNTESS. Be thou blest, Bertram, and succeed thy father
In manners as in shape: thy blood and virtue
Contend for empire in thee, and thy goodness
Share with thy birthright. Love all, trust a few,
Do wrong to none: be able for thine enemy
Rather in power than use; and keep thy friend
Under thy own life's key: be checked for silence,
But never taxed for speech.... What heaven more will,
That thee may furnish, and my prayers pluck down,
Fall on thy head.... Farewell, my lord.
'Tis an unseasoned courtier. Good my lord,
Advise him.

LAFEU. He cannot want the best
That shall attend his lord.

COUNTESS. Heaven bless him! Farewell, Bertram.
She departs

BERTRAM. The best wishes that can be forged in your thoughts be servants to you! [to Helena] Be comfortable to my mother, your mistress, and make much of her.

LAFEU. Farewell, pretty lady, you must hold the credit of your father. Bertram and Lafeu go

HELENA. O, were that all! I think not on my father,
And these great tears grace his remembrance more
Than those I shed for him. What was he like?
I have forgot him: my imagination
Carries no favour in't but Bertram's....
I am undone, there is no living, none,
If Bertram be away.... 'Twere all one
That I should love a bright particular star,
And think to wed it, he is so above me:
In his bright radiance and collateral light
Must I be comforted, not in his sphere....
Th'ambition in my love thus plagues itself:
The hind that would be mated by the lion
Must die for love. 'Twas pretty, though a plague,
To see him every hour, to sit and draw
His archéd brows, his hawking eye, his curls,
In our heart's table; heart too capable
Of every line and trick of his sweet favour....
But now he's gone, and my idolatrous fancy
Must sanctify his relics. Who comes here?

Parolles enters

One that goes with him: I love him for his sake,
And yet I know him a notorious liar,
Think him a great way fool, solely a coward.
Yet these fixed evils sit so fit in him,
That they take place, when virtue's steely bones
Look bleak i'th' cold wind: withal, full oft we see
Cold wisdom waiting on superfluous folly.

PAROLLES. Save you, fair queen.

HELENA. And you, monarch.

PAROLLES. No.

HELENA. And no.

PAROLLES. Are you meditating on virginity?

HELENA. Ay... You have some stain of soldier in you; let me ask you a question. Man is enemy to virginity, how may we barricado it against him?

PAROLLES. Keep him out.

HELENA. But he assails, and our virginity, though valiant in the defence, yet is weak: unfold to us some warlike resistance.

PAROLLES. There is none: man, setting down before you, will undermine you and blow you up.

HELENA. Bless our poor virginity from underminers and blowers up! Is there no military policy, how virgins might blow up men?

PAROLLES. Virginity being blown down, man will quicklier be blown up: marry, in blowing him down again, with the breach yourselves made, you lose your city. It is not politic in the commonwealth of nature to preserve virginity. Loss of virginity is rational increase, and there was never virgin got till virginity was first lost. That you were made of is mettle to make virgins. Virginity by being once lost may be ten times found: by being ever kept, it is ever lost: 'tis too cold a companion: away with't!

HELENA. I will stand for't a little, though therefore I die a virgin.

PAROLLES. There's little can be said in't—'tis against the rule of nature. To speak on the part of virginity, is to accuse your mothers; which is most infallible disobedience. He that hangs himself is a virgin: virginity murders itself, and should be buried in highways out of all sanctified limit, as a desperate offendress against nature. Virginity breeds mites—much like a cheese—consumes itself to the very paring, and so dies with feeding his own stomach. Besides, virginity is peevish, proud, idle, made of self-love, which is the most inhibited sin in the canon. Keep it not—you cannot choose but lose by't. Out with't: within ten year it will make itself ten, which is a goodly increase—and the principal itself not much the worse. Away with't.

HELENA. How might one do, sir, to lose it to her own liking?

PAROLLES. Let me see. Marry, ill, to like him that ne'er it likes. 'Tis a commodity will lose the gloss with lying; the longer kept, the less worth: off with't while 'tis vendible; answer the time of request. Virginity, like an old courtier, wears her cap out of fashion, richly suited, but unsuitable, just like the brooch and the toothpick, which wear not now... Your date is better in your pie and your porridge than in your cheek: and your virginity, your old virginity, is like one of our French withered pears, it looks ill, it eats drily, marry 'tis a withered pear; it was formerly better, marry yet 'tis a withered pear: will you any thing with it?

HELENA. Not my virginity yet...
There shall your master have a thousand loves,
A mother, and a mistress, and a friend,
A phœnix, captain, and an enemy,
A guide, a goddess, and a sovereign,
A counsellor, a traitress, and a dear;
His humble ambition, proud humility:
His jarring concord, and his discord dulcet:
His faith, his sweet disaster; with a world
Of pretty, fond, adoptious christendoms,
That blinking Cupid gossips. Now shall he...
I know not what he shall. God send him well!
The court's a learning place, and he is one—

PAROLLES. What one, i' faith?

HELENA. That I wish well. 'Tis pity—

PAROLLES. What's pity?

HELENA. That wishing well had not a body in't,
Which might be felt, that we the poorer born,
Whose baser stars do shut us up in wishes,
Might with effects of them follow our friends,
And show what we alone must think, which never
Returns us thanks.

A page enters

PAGE. Monsieur Parolles, my lord calls for you. He goes

PAROLLES. Little Helen, farewell. If I can remember thee, I will think of thee at court.

HELENA. Monsieur Parolles, you were born under a charitable star.

PAROLLES. Under Mars, I.

HELENA. I especially think, under Mars.

PAROLLES. Why under Mars?

HELENA. The wars have so kept you under, that you must needs be born under Mars.

PAROLLES. When he was predominant.

HELENA. When he was retrograde, I think, rather.

PAROLLES. Why think you so?

HELENA. You go so much backward when you fight.

PAROLLES. That's for advantage.

HELENA. So is running away, when fear proposes the safety: but the composition that your valour and fear makes in you is a virtue of a good wing, and I like the wear well.

PAROLLES. I am so full of businesses, I cannot answer thee acutely: I will return perfect courtier, in the which my instruction shall serve to naturalize thee, so thou wilt be capable of a courtier's counsel, and understand what advice shall thrust upon thee—else thou diest in thine unthankfulness, and thine ignorance makes thee away. Farewell: when thou hast leisure, say thy prayers; when thou hast money, remember thy friends: get thee a good husband, and use him as he uses thee: so farewell. He goes

HELENA. Our remedies oft in ourselves do lie,
Which we ascribe to heaven: the fated sky
Gives us free scope; only doth backward pull
Our slow designs when we ourselves are dull.
What power is it which mounts my love so high?
That makes me see, and cannot feed mine eye?
The mightiest space in fortune nature brings
To join like likes, and kiss like native things.
Impossible be strange attempts to those
That weigh their pains in sense, and do suppose
What hath been cannot be: who ever strove
To show her merit that did miss her love?
The king's disease—my project may deceive me,
But my intents are fixed, and will not leave me.
She goes

Scene 2: The King's palace at Paris

A flourish of cornets: the King of France enters with attendants, lords, and councillors; letters are placed before him

KING. The Florentines and Senoys are by th'ears,
Have fought with equal fortune, and continue
A braving war.
1 LORD. So 'tis reported, sir.
KING. Nay, 'tis most credible. We here receive it
A certainty, vouched from our cousin Austria,
With caution, that the Florentine will move us
For speedy aid; wherein our dearest friend
Prejudicates the business, and would seem
To have us make denial.
1 LORD. His love and wisdom,
Approved so to your majesty, may plead
For amplest credence.
KING. He hath armed our answer,
And Florence is denied before he comes:
Yet, for our gentlemen that mean to see
The Tuscan service, freely have they leave
To stand on either part.
2 LORD. It well may serve
A nursery to our gentry, who are sick
For breathing and exploit.

Bertram, Lafeu, and Parolles enter

KING. What's he comes here?
1 LORD. It is the Count Rousillon, my good lord,
Young Bertram.
KING. Youth, thou bear'st thy father's face.
Frank nature, rather curious than in haste,
Hath well composed thee: thy father's moral parts
Mayst thou inherit too! Welcome to Paris.
BERTRAM. My thanks and duty are your majesty's.
KING. I would I had that corporal soundness now,
As when thy father and myself in friendship
First tried our soldiership! He did look far
Into the service of the time, and was
Discipled of the bravest: he lasted long,
But on us both did haggish age steal on,
And wore us out of act ... It much repairs me
To talk of your good father ... In his youth
He had the wit, which I can well observe
To-day in our young lords; but they may jest
Till their own scorn return to them unnoted
Ere they can hide their levity in honour:
So like a courtier, contempt nor bitterness
Were in his pride or sharpness; if they were,
His equal had awaked them, and his honour,
Clock to itself, knew the true minute when
Exception bid him speak, and at this time
His tongue obeyed his hand. Who were below him
He used as creatures of another place,
And bowed his eminent top to their low ranks,
Making them proud of his humility,
In their poor praise he humble ... Such a man
Might be a copy to these younger times;
Which, followed well, would demonstrate them now
But goers backward.
BERTRAM. His good remembrance, sir,
Lies richer in your thoughts than on his tomb;
So in approof lives not his epitaph
As in your royal speech.
KING. Would I were with him! He would always say—
Methinks I hear him now; his plausive words
He scattered not in ears, but grafted them,
To grow there, and to bear—'Let me not live,'—
Thus his good melancholy oft began,
On the catastrophe and heel of pastime,
When it was out—'Let me not live,' quoth he,
'After my flame lacks oil, to be the snuff
Of younger spirits, whose apprehensive senses
All but new things disdain; whose judgements are Mere fathers of their garments; whose constancies
Expire before their fashions' ... This he wished:
I after him do after him wish too,
Since I nor wax nor honey can bring home,
I quickly were dissolvéd from my hive,
To give some labourers room.
2 LORD. You are loved, sir,
They that least lend it you shall lack you first.
KING. I fill a place, I know't.... How long is't, count,
Since the physician at your father's died?
He was much famed.
BERTRAM. Some six months since, my lord.
KING. If he were living, I would try him yet.
Lend me an arm ... the rest have worn me out
With several applications: nature and sickness
Debate it at their leisure. Welcome, count,
My son's no dearer.
BERTRAM. Thank your majesty.
The King departs with a flourish of trumpets; the court follows

Scene 3: The palace of Rousillon

The Countess enters with Rinaldo her Steward; Lavache the Clown follows behind

COUNTESS. I will now hear. What say you of this gentlewoman?

STEWARD. Madam, the care I have had to even your content, I wish might be found in the calendar of my past endeavours, for then we wound our modesty, and make foul the clearness of our deservings, when of ourselves we publish them.

COUNTESS. What does this knave here? Get you gone, sirrah: the complaints I have heard of you if I do not all believe, 'tis my slowness that I do not: for I know you lack not folly to commit them, and have ability enough to make such knaveries yours.

CLOWN. 'Tis not unknown to you, madam, I am a poor fellow.

COUNTESS. Well, sir.

CLOWN. No, madam, 'tis not so well that I am poor, though many of the rich are damned, but, if I may have your ladyship's good will to go to the world, Isbel the woman and I will do as we may.

COUNTESS. Wilt thou needs be a beggar?

CLOWN. I do beg your good will in this case.

COUNTESS. In what case?

CLOWN. In Isbel's case and mine own ... Service is no heritage, and I think I shall never have the blessing of God till I have issue o' my body: for they say barnes are blessings.

COUNTESS. Tell me thy reason why thou wilt marry.

CLOWN. My poor body, madam, requires it. I am driven on by the flesh, and he must needs go that the devil drives.

COUNTESS. Is this all your worship's reason?

CLOWN. Faith, madam, I have other holy reasons, such as they are.

COUNTESS. May the world know them?

CLOWN. I have been, madam, a wicked creature, as you and all flesh and blood are, and indeed I do marry that I may repent.

COUNTESS. Thy marriage, sooner than thy wickedness.

CLOWN. I am out o' friends, madam, and I hope to have friends for my wife's sake.

COUNTESS. Such friends are thine enemies, knave.

CLOWN. Y'are shallow, madam, in great friends, for the knaves come to do that for me, which I am aweary of... He that ears my land spares my team, and gives me leave to inn the crop: if I be his cuckold, he's my drudge; he that comforts my wife is the cherisher of my flesh and blood; he that cherishes my flesh and blood loves my flesh and blood; he that loves my flesh and blood is my friend: ergo, he that kisses my wife is my friend... If men could be contented to be what they are, there were no fear in marriage; for young Chairbonne the puritan and old Poisson the papist, howsome'er their hearts are severed in religion, their heads are both one—they may jowl horns together like any deer i'th' herd.

COUNTESS. Wilt thou ever be a foul-mouthed and calumnious knave?

CLOWN. A prophet I, madam, and I speak the truth the next way—

For I the ballad will repeat,
Which men full true shall find,
Your marriage comes by destiny,
Your cuckoo sings by kind.

COUNTESS. Get you gone, sir. I'll talk with you more anon.

STEWARD. May it please you, madam, that he bid Helen come to you. Of her I am to speak.

COUNTESS. Sirrah, tell my gentlewoman I would speak with her—Helen I mean.

CLOWN [sings].

Was this fair face the cause, quoth she,
Why the Grecians sackéd Troy?
Fond done, done fond,
Was this King Priam's joy?
With that she sighéd as she stood,
With that she sighéd as she stood,
And gave this sentence then—
Among nine bad if one be good,
Among nine bad if one be good,
There's yet one good in ten.

COUNTESS. What, one good in ten? you corrupt the song, sirrah.

CLOWN. One good woman in ten, madam, which is a purifying o'th' song: would God would serve the world so all the year! we'd find no fault with the tithe-woman, if I were the parson. One in ten, quoth a'! an we might have a good woman born but or every blazing star, or at an earthquake, 'twould mend the lottery well—a man may draw his heart out, ere a' pluck one.

COUNTESS. You'll be gone, sir knave, and do as I command you!

CLOWN. That man should be at woman's command, and yet no hurt done! Though honesty be no puritan, yet it will do no hurt; it will wear the surplice of humility over the black gown of a big heart.... [the Countess stamps her foot] I am going, forsooth. The business is for Helen to come hither. He goes

COUNTESS. Well, now.

STEWARD. I know, madam, you love your gentlewoman entirely.

COUNTESS. Faith, I do: her father bequeathed her to me, and she herself, without other advantage, may lawfully make title to as much love as she finds. There is more owing her than is paid, and more shall be paid her than she'll demand.

STEWARD. Madam, I was very late more near her than I think she wished me. Alone she was, and did communicate to herself her own words to her own ears. She thought, I dare vow for her, they touched not any stranger sense. Her matter was, she loved your son: Fortune, she said, was no goddess, that had put such difference betwixt their two estates; Love no god, that would not extend his might, only where qualities were level; Diana no queen of virgins, that would suffer her poor knight surprised, without rescue in the first assault, or ransom afterward... This she delivered in the most bitter touch of sorrow that e'er I heard virgin exclaim in, which I held my duty speedily to acquaint you withal, sithence in the loss that may happen it concerns you something to know it.

COUNTESS. You have discharged this honestly, keep it to yourself. Many likelihoods informed me of this before, which hung so tott'ring in the balance, that I could neither believe nor misdoubt... Pray you, leave me. Stall this in your bosom, and I thank you for your honest care: I will speak with you further anon. He goes

[aside] Even so it was with me, when I was young...
If ever we are nature's, these are ours. This thorn
Doth to our rose of youth rightly belong.
Our blood to us, this to our blood is born.
It is the show and seal of nature's truth,
Where love's strong passion is impressed in youth.
By our remembrances of days foregone,
Such were our faults, or then we thought them none.
Her eye is sick on't—I observe her now.

HELENA. What is your pleasure, madam?

COUNTESS. You know, Helen,
I am a mother to you.

HELENA. Mine honourable mistress.

COUNTESS. Nay, a mother.
Why not a mother? When I said 'a mother'
Methought you saw a serpent. What's in 'mother,'
That you start at it? I say, I am your mother,
And put you in the catalogue of those
That were enwombéd mine. 'Tis often seen
Adoption strives with nature, and choice breeds
A native slip to us from foreign seeds:
You ne'er oppressed me with a mother's groan,
Yet I express to you a mother's care—
God's mercy, maiden! does it curd thy blood
To say I am thy mother? What's the matter,
That this distempered messenger of wet,
The many-coloured Iris, rounds thine eye?
Why? that you are my daughter?

HELENA. That I am not.
COUNTESS. I say, I am your mother.
HELENA. Pardon, madam;
The Count Rousillon cannot be my brother:
I am from humble, he from honoured name;
No note upon my parents, his all noble.
My master, my dear lord he is, and I
His servant live, and will his vassal die:
He must not be my brother.
COUNTESS. Nor I your mother?
HELENA. You are my mother, madam. Would you were—
So that my lord, your son, were not my brother—
Indeed my mother! or were you both our mothers.
I care no more for than I do for heaven,
So I were not his sister. Can't no other,
But I your daughter, he must be my brother?
COUNTESS. Yes, Helen, you might be my daughter-in-law—
God shield you mean it not, 'daughter' and 'mother'
So strive upon your pulse! What, pale again?
My fear hath catched your fondness! Now I see
The mystery of your loneliness, and find
Your salt tears' head. Now to all sense 'tis gross . . .
You love my son! invention is ashamed,
Against the proclamation of thy passion,
To say thou dost not: therefore tell me true—
But tell me then, 'tis so—for look, thy cheeks
Confess it, th'one to th'other, and thine eyes
See it so grossly shown in thy behaviours,
That in their kind they speak it—only sin
And hellish obstinacy tie thy tongue,
That truth should be suspected. Speak, is't so?
If it be so, you have wound a goodly clew;
If it be not, forswear't: howe'er, I charge thee,
As heaven shall work in me for thine avail,
To tell me truly.
HELENA. Good madam, pardon me!
COUNTESS. Do you love my son?
HELENA. Your pardon, noble mistress!
COUNTESS. Love you my son?
HELENA. Do not you love him, madam?
COUNTESS. Go not about; my love hath in't a bond
Whereof the world takes note: come, come, disclose
The state of your affection, for your passions
Have to the full appeached.
HELENA. Then, I confess,
Here on my knee, before high heaven and you,
That before you, and next unto high heaven,
I love your son . . .
My friends were poor but honest, so's my love:
Be not offended, for it hurts not him
That he is loved of me: I follow him not
By any token of presumptuous suit,
Nor would I have him till I do deserve him,
Yet never know how that desert should be . . .
I know I love in vain, strive against hope;
Yet, in this captious and inteemable sieve,
I still pour in the waters of my love,
And lack not to lose still: thus, Indian-like,
Religious in mine error, I adore
The sun, that looks upon his worshipper,
But knows of him no more. . . . My dearest madam,
Let not your hate encounter with my love
For loving where you do: but if yourself,
Whose agéd honour cites a virtuous youth,
Did ever in so true a flame of liking
Love chastely, and wish dearly that your Dian
Was both herself and Love, O, then give pity
To her, whose state is such, that cannot choose
But lend and give where she is sure to lose;
That seeks not to find that her search implies,
But, riddle-like, lives sweetly where she dies.
COUNTESS. Had you not lately an intent, speak truly,
To go to Paris?
HELENA. Madam, I had.
COUNTESS. Wherefore? tell true.
HELENA. I will tell truth, by grace itself, I swear . . .
You know my father left me some prescriptions
Of rare and proved effects, such as his reading
And manifest experience had collected
For general sovereignty; and that he willed me
In heedfull'st reservation to bestow them,
As notes, whose faculties inclusive were,
More than they were in note: amongst the rest,
There is a remedy, approved, set down,
To cure the desperate languishings whereof
The king is rendered lost.
COUNTESS. This was your motive
For Paris, was it? speak.
HELENA. My lord your son made me to think of this;
Else Paris, and the medicine, and the king,
Had from the conversation of my thoughts
Haply been absent then.
COUNTESS. But think you, Helen,
If you should tender your supposéd aid,
He would receive it? He and his physicians
Are of a mind—he, that they cannot help him;
They, that they cannot help. How shall they credit
A poor unlearnéd virgin, when the schools,
Embowelled of their doctrine, have left off
The danger to itself?
HELENA. There's something hints,
More than my father's skill, which was the great'st
Of his profession, that his good receipt
Shall for my legacy be sanctified
By th' luckiest stars in heaven, and would your honour
But give me leave to try success, I'd venture
The well-lost life of mine on his grace's cure
By such a day and hour.
COUNTESS. Dost thou believe't?
HELENA. Ay, madam, knowingly.
COUNTESS. Why, Helen, thou shalt have my leave and love,
Means and attendants, and my loving greetings
To those of mine in court. I'll stay at home
And pray God's blessing into thy attempt:
Be gone to-morrow, and be sure of this,
What I can help thee to, thou shalt not miss.
They go

ACT 2

Scene 1: The King's palace at Paris

A flourish of cornets. Enter the King with attendants and with divers young lords taking leave for the Florentine war; among them Bertram and Parolles

KING. Farewell, young lords! these warlike principles
Do not throw from you—and you, my lords farewell!

Share the advice betwixt you. If both gain all,
The gift doth stretch itself as 'tis received,
And is enough for both.
1 LORD. 'Tis our hope, sir,
After, well-entered soldiers to return
And find your grace in health.
KING. No, no, it cannot be; and yet my heart
Will not confess he owes the malady
That doth my life besiege . . . Farewell, young lords!
Whether I live or die, be you the sons
Of worthy Frenchmen: let higher Italy
(Those bated that inherit but the fall
Of the last monarchy) see that you come
Not to woo honour, but to wed it. When
The bravest questant shrinks, find what you seek,
That fame may cry you loud . . . I say, farewell.
2 LORD. Health, at your bidding, serve your majesty!
KING. Those girls of Italy, take heed of them.
They say, our French lack language to deny,
If they demand: beware of being captives,
Before you serve.
BOTH. Our hearts receive your warnings.
KING. Farewell. Come hither to me.
He retires, attended
1 LORD. O my sweet lord, that you will stay behind us!
PAROLLES. 'Tis not his fault, the spark.
2 LORD. O, 'tis brave wars!
PAROLLES. Most admirable! I have seen those wars.
BERTRAM. I am commanded here, and kept a coil with 'Too young,' and 'the next year,' and ''tis too early.'
PAROLLES. An thy mind stand to't, boy, steal away bravely.
BERTRAM. I shall stay here the forehorse to a smock,
Creaking my shoes on the plain masonry,
Till honour be bought up, and no sword worn
But one to dance with! By heaven, I'll steal away.
1 LORD. There's honour in the theft.
PAROLLES. Commit it, count.
2 LORD. I am your accessary, and so farewell.
BERTRAM. I grow to you, and our parting is a tortured body.
1 LORD. Farewell, captain.
2 LORD. Sweet Monsieur Parolles!
PAROLLES. Noble heroes, my sword and yours are kin. Good sparks and lustrous, a word, good metals: you shall find in the regiment of the Spinii one Captain Spurio, with an emblem of war, his cicatrice, here on his sinister cheek; it was this very sword entrenched it: say to him, I live, and observe his reports for me.
1 LORD. We shall, noble captain.
PAROLLES. Mars dote on you for his novices! [the lords go] What will ye do?

The King comes forward

BERTRAM. Stay: the king!
PAROLLES. Use a more spacious ceremony to the noble lords, you have restrained yourself within the list of too cold an adieu: be more expressive to them; for they wear themselves in the cap of the time, there do muster true gait, eat, speak, and move under the influence of the most received star, and though the devil lead the measure, such are to be followed; after them, and take a more dilated farewell.
BERTRAM. And I will do so.
PAROLLES. Worthy fellows; and like to prove most sinewy sword-men. Bertram and Parolles go

Lafeu enters

LAFEU [kneels]. Pardon, my lord, for me and for my tidings.
KING. I'll fee thee to stand up.
LAFEU [rises]. Then here's a man stands that has brought his pardon.
I would you had kneeled, my lord, to ask me mercy,
And that at my bidding you could so stand up.
KING. I would I had, so I had broke thy pate
And asked thee mercy for't.
LAFEU. Good faith, across!
But, my good lord, 'tis thus—will you be cured
Of your infirmity?
KING. No.
LAFEU. O, will you eat
No grapes, my royal fox? yes, but you will
My noble grapes, an if my royal fox
Could reach them: I have seen a medicine
That's able to breathe life into a stone,
Quicken a rock, and make you dance canary
With spritely fire and motion, whose simple touch
Is powerful to araise King Pepin, nay,
To give great Charlemain a pen in's hand,
And write to her a love-line.
KING. What 'her' is this?
LAFEU. Why, Doctor She: my lord, there's one arrived,
If you will see her: now, by my faith and honour,
If seriously I may convey my thoughts
In this my light deliverance, I have spoke
With one that, in her sex, her years, profession,
Wisdom and constancy, hath amazed me more
Than I dare blame my weakness: will you see her,
For that is her demand, and know her business?
That done, laugh well at me.
KING. Now, good Lafeu,
Bring in the admiration, that we with thee
May spend our wonder too, or take off thine
By wond'ring how thou took'st it.
LAFEU. Nay, I'll fit you,
And not be all day neither. Lafeu goes
KING. Thus he his special nothing ever prologues.

Lafeu returns, holding open the door

LAFEU. Nay, come your ways.

Helena enters

KING. This haste hath wings indeed.
LAFEU. Nay, come your ways!
This is his majesty, say your mind to him.
A traitor you do look like, but such traitors
His majesty seldom fears. I am Cressid's uncle,
That dare leave two together. Fare you well.
He goes
KING. Now, fair one, does your business follow us?
HELENA. Ay, my good lord.
Gerard de Narbon was my father;
In what he did profess, well-found.
KING. I knew him.
HELENA. The rather will I spare my praises towards him—
Knowing him is enough . . . On's bed of death

Many receipts he gave me, chiefly one,
Which as the dearest issue of his practice
And of his old experience th'only darling,
He bad me store up, as a triple eye,
Safer than mine own two, more dear; I have so:
And, hearing your high majesty is touched
With that malignant cause wherein the honour
Of my dear father's gift stands chief in power,
I come to tender it, and my appliance,
With all bound humbleness.
KING. We thank you, maiden,
But may not be so credulous of cure,
When our most learnéd doctors leave us, and
The congregated College have concluded
That labouring art can never ransom nature
From her inaidible estate: I say we must not
So stain our judgement, or corrupt our hope,
To prostitute our past-cure malady
To empirics, or to dissever so
Our great self and our credit, to esteem
A senseless help, when help past sense we deem.
HELENA. My duty then shall pay me for my pains:
I will no more enforce mine office on you;
Humbly entreating from your royal thoughts
A modest one, to bear me back again.
KING. I cannot give thee less, to be called grateful...
Thou thought'st to help me, and such thanks I give
As one near death to those that wish him live:
But what at full I know, thou know'st no part,
I knowing all my peril, thou no art.
HELENA. What I can do can do no hurt to try,
Since you set up your rest 'gainst remedy:
He that of greatest works is finisher,
Oft does them by the weakest minister:
So holy writ in babes hath judgement shown,
When judges have been babes; great floods have flown
From simple sources; and great seas have dried
When miracles have by the greatest been denied.
Oft expectation fails, and most oft there
Where most it promises; and oft it hits,
Where hope is coldest, and despair most fits.
KING. I must not hear thee, fare thee well, kind maid.
Thy pains not used must by thyself be paid.
Proffers not took reap thanks for their reward.
HELENA. Inspiréd merit so by breath is barred.
It is not so with Him that all things knows,
As 'tis with us that square our guess by shows:
But most it is presumption in us, when
The help of heaven we count the act of men.
Dear sir, to my endeavours give consent,
Of heaven, not me, make an experiment.
I am not an impostor, that proclaim
Myself against the level of mine aim,
But know I think, and think I know most sure,
My art is not past power, nor you past cure.
KING. Art thou so confident? Within what space
Hop'st thou my cure?
HELENA. The great'st grace lending grace,
Ere twice the horses of the sun shall bring
Their fiery torcher his diurnal ring,
Ere twice in murk and occidental damp
Moist Hesperus hath quenched her sleepy lamp;
Or four and twenty times the pilot's glass
Hath told the thievish minutes how they pass;
What is infirm from your sound parts shall fly,
Health shall live free, and sickness freely die.
KING. Upon thy certainty and confidence,
What dar'st thou venture?
HELENA. Tax of impudence,
A strumpet's boldness, a divulgéd shame,
Traduced by odious ballads; my maiden's name
Seared; otherwise—ne worse of worst—extended
With vilest torture let my life be ended.
KING. Methinks in thee some blesséd spirit doth speak
His powerful sound within an organ weak:
And what impossibility would slay
In common sense, sense saves another way...
Thy live is dear, for all that life can rate
Worth name of life in thee hath estimate;
Youth, beauty, wisdom, courage, all
That happiness and prime can happy call:
Thou this to hazard needs must intimate
Skill infinite or monstrous desperate.
Sweet practiser, thy physic I will try,
That ministers thine own death if I die.
HELENA. If I break time, or flinch in property
Of what I spoke, unpitied let me die,
And well deserved: not helping, death's my fee,
But if I help what do you promise me?
KING. Make thy demand.
HELENA. But will you make it even?
KING. Ay, by my sceptre and my hopes of heaven.
HELENA. Then shalt thou give me with thy kingly hand
What husband in thy power I will command:
Exempted be from me the arrogance
To choose from forth the royal blood of France,
My low and humble name to propagate
With any branch or image of thy state:
But such a one, thy vassal, whom I know
Is free for me to ask, thee to bestow.
KING. Here is my hand—the premises observed,
Thy will by my performance shall be served:
So make the choice of thy own time, for I,
Thy resolved patient, on thee still rely...
More should I question thee, and more I must,
Though more to know could not be more to trust;
From whence thou cam'st, how tended on—but rest
Unquestioned welcome, and undoubted blest.
Give me some help here, ho! If thou proceed
As high as word, my deed shall match thy deed.
A flourish of trumpets; they all depart

Scene 2: The palace of Rousillon

Enter Countess and Clown

COUNTESS. Come on, sir. I shall now put you to the height of your breeding.

CLOWN. I will show myself highly fed and lowly taught. I know my business is but to the court.

COUNTESS. To the court! why, what place make you special, when you put off that with such contempt? 'But to the court!'

CLOWN. Truly, madam, if God have lent a man any manners, he may easily put it off at court: he that cannot make a leg, put off's cap, kiss his hand, and say nothing, has neither leg, hands, lip, nor cap; and, indeed, such a fellow, to say precisely, were not for the court. But for me, I have an answer will serve all men.

COUNTESS. Marry, that's a bountiful answer that fits all questions.

CLOWN. It is like a barber's chair that fits all buttocks—the pin-buttock, the quatch-buttock, the brawn-buttock, or any buttock.

COUNTESS. Will your answer serve fit to all questions?

CLOWN. As fit as ten groats is for the hand of an attorney, as your French crown for your taffety punk, as Tib's rush for Tom's forefinger, as a pancake for Shrove Tuesday, a morris for May-day, as the nail to his hole, the cuckold to his horn, as a scolding quean to a wrangling knave, as the nun's lip to the friar's mouth, nay, as the pudding to his skin.

COUNTESS. Have you, I say, an answer of such fitness for all questions?

CLOWN. From below your duke to beneath your constable, it will fit any question.

COUNTESS. It must be an answer of most monstrous size that must fit all demands.

CLOWN. But a trifle neither, in good faith, if the learned should speak truth of it: here it is, and all that belongs to't. Ask me if I am a courtier, it shall do you no harm to learn.

COUNTESS. To be young again, if we could . . . I will be a fool in question, hoping to be the wiser by your answer. I pray you, sir, are you a courtier?

CLOWN. O Lord, sir!—There's a simple putting off: more, more, a hundred of them.

COUNTESS. Sir, I am a poor friend of yours, that loves you.

CLOWN. O Lord, sir!—Thick! thick! spare not me.

COUNTESS. I think, sir, you can eat none of this homely meat.

CLOWN. O Lord, sir!—Nay, put me to't, I warrant you.

COUNTESS. You were lately whipped, sir, as I think.

CLOWN. O Lord, sir!—Spare not me.

COUNTESS. Do you cry, 'O Lord, sir!' at your whipping, and 'spare not me'? Indeed, your 'O Lord, sir!' is very sequent to your whipping; you would answer very well to a whipping, if you were but bound to't.

CLOWN. I ne'er had worse luck in my life in my 'O Lord, sir!' I see things may serve long, but not serve ever.

COUNTESS. I play the noble housewife with the time,
To entertain it so merrily with a fool.

CLOWN. O Lord, sir!—Why, there't serves well again.

COUNTESS. An end, sir, to your business: give Helen this,
And urge her to a present answer back.
Commend me to my kinsmen and my son.
This is not much.

CLOWN. Not much commendation to them?

COUNTESS. Not much employment for you. You understand me?

CLOWN. Most fruitfully. I am there before my legs.

COUNTESS. Haste you again. They go

Scene 3: The King's palace at Paris

Enter Bertram, Lafeu, and Parolles

LAFEU. They say miracles are past, and we have our philosophical persons, to make modern and familiar, things supernatural and causeless. Hence is it that we make trifles of terrors, ensconcing ourselves into seeming knowledge, when we should submit ourselves to an unknown fear.

PAROLLES. Why, 'tis the rarest argument of wonder that hath shot out in our latter times.

BERTRAM. And so 'tis.

LAFEU. To be relinquished of the artists—

PAROLLES. So I say.

LAFEU. Both of Galen and Paracelsus.

PAROLLES. So I say.

LAFEU. Of all the learned and authentic fellows—

PAROLLES. Right, so I say.

LAFEU. That gave him out incurable—

PAROLLES. Why, there 'tis, so say I too.

LAFEU. Not to be helped—

PAROLLES. Right, as 'twere a man assured of a—

LAFEU. Uncertain life, and sure death.

PAROLLES. Just, you say well: so would I have said.

LAFEU. I may truly say, it is a novelty to the world.

PAROLLES. It is, indeed: if you will have it in showing, you shall read it in what-do-ye-call't there?

LAFEU [takes a ballad from his belt]. 'A showing of a heavenly effect in an earthly actor.'

PAROLLES. That's it, I would have said the very same.

LAFEU. Why, your dolphin is not lustier: 'fore me I speak in respect—

PAROLLES. Nay, 'tis strange, 'tis very strange, that is the brief and the tedious of it, and he's of a most facinorous spirit that will not acknowledge it to be the—

LAFEU. Very hand of heaven.

PAROLLES. Ay, so I say.

LAFEU. In a most weak—

PAROLLES. And debile minister, great power, great transcendence, which should, indeed, give us a further use to be made than alone the recovery of the king, as to be—

LAFEU. Generally thankful.

The King enters with Helena and attendants

PAROLLES. I would have said it. You say well . . . Here comes the king.

LAFEU. Lustick! as the Dutchman says: I'll like a maid the better, whilst I have a tooth in my head: why, he's able to lead her a coranto.

PAROLLES. Mort du vinaigre! Is not this Helen?

LAFEU. 'Fore God, I think so.

KING. Go, call before me all the lords in court.
Sit, my preserver, by thy patient's side,
And with this healthful hand, whose banished sense
Thou hast repealed, a second time receive
The confirmation of my promised gift,
Which but attends thy naming. . . . They sit

Enter three or four lords

Fair maid, send forth thine eye—this youthful parcel
Of noble bachelors stand at my bestowing,
O'er whom both sovereign power and father's voice
I have to use: thy frank election make,
Thou hast power to choose, and they none to forsake.

HELENA. To each of you one fair and virtuous mistress
Fall, when Love please! marry, to each but one!

LAFEU. I'd give bay Curtal and his furniture,
My mouth no more were broken than these boys',
And writ as little beard.

KING. Peruse them well:

Not one of those but had a noble father.
HELENA [rises]. Gentlemen,
Heaven hath, through me, restored the king to health.
ALL. We understand it, and thank heaven for you.
HELENA. I am a simple maid, and therein wealthiest
That I protest I simply am a maid ...
Please it your majesty, I have done already:
The blushes in my cheeks thus whisper me,
'We blush that thou shouldst choose; but, be refused ...
Let the white death sit on thy cheek for ever,
We'll ne'er come there again.'
KING. Make choice and see,
Who shuns thy love shuns all his love in me.
HELENA. Now, Dian, from thy altar do I fly,
And to imperial Love, that god most high,
Do my sighs stream ... [she addresses her to a lord] Sir, will you hear my suit?
1 LORD. And grant it.
HELENA. Thanks, sir—all the rest is mute.
LAFEU. I had rather be in this choice, than throw ames-ace for my life.
HELENA [to another lord]. The honour, sir, that flames in your fair eyes,
Before I speak, too threat'ningly replies:
Love make your fortunes twenty times above
Her that so wishes and her humble love!
2 LORD. No better, if you please.
HELENA. My wish receive,
Which great Love grant! and so, I take my leave.
LAFEU. Do all they deny her? An they were sons of mine, I'd have them whipped, or I would send them to th' Turk to make eunuchs of.
HELENA [to the third lord]. Be not afraid that I your hand should take,
I'll never do you wrong for your own sake:
Blessing upon your vows! and in your bed
Find fairer fortune, if you ever wed!
LAFEU. These boys are boys of ice, they'll none have her: sure, they are bastards to the English, the French ne'er got 'em.
HELENA [to the fourth lord]. You are too young, too happy, and too good,
To make yourself a son out of my blood.
4 LORD. Fair one, I think not so.
LAFEU. There's one grape yet—I am sure thy father drunk wine—but if thou be'st not an ass, I am a youth of fourteen; I have known thee already.
HELENA [to Bertram]. I dare not say I take you, but I give Me and my service, ever whilst I live,
Into your guiding power ... This is the man.
KING. Why then, young Bertram, take her, she's thy wife.
BERTRAM. My wife, my liege? I shall beseech your highness,
In such a business give me leave to use
The help of mine own eyes.
KING. Know'st thou not, Bertram,
What she has done for me?
BERTRAM. Yes, my good lord;
But never hope to know why I should marry her.
KING. Thou know'st she has raised me from my sickly bed.
BERTRAM. But follows it, my lord, to bring me down
Must answer for your raising? I know her well;
She had her breeding at my father's charge:
A poor physician's daughter my wife! Disdain
Rather corrupt me ever!
KING. 'Tis only title thou disdain'st in her, the which
I can build up ... Strange is it, that our bloods,
Of colour, weight, and heat, poured all together,
Would quite confound distinction, yet stand off
In differences so mighty.... If she be
All that is virtuous (save what thou dislik'st,
A poor physician's daughter) thou dislik'st
Of virtue for a name; but do not so:
From lowest place when virtuous things proceed,
The place is dignified by th'doer's deed:
Where great additions swell's, and virtue none,
It is a dropsied honour: good alone
Is good, without a name; vileness is so:
The property by what it is should go,
Not by the title.... She is young, wise, fair;
In these to nature she's immediate heir;
And these breed honour: that is honour's scorn,
Which challenges itself as honour's born,
And is not like the sire: honours thrive,
When rather from our acts we them derive
Than our foregoers: the mere word's a slave,
Deboshed on every tomb, on every grave
A lying trophy, and as oft is dumb
Where dust and damned oblivion is the tomb
Of honoured bones indeed. What should be said?
If thou canst like this creature as a maid,
I can create the rest: virtue and she
Is her own dower; honour and wealth, from me.
BERTRAM. I cannot love her, nor will strive to do't.
KING. Thou wrong'st thyself, if thou shouldst strive to choose.
HELENA. That you are well restored, my lord, I'm glad;
Let the rest go.
KING. My honour's at the stake, which to defeat,
I must produce my power. Here, take her hand,
Proud scornful boy, unworthy this good gift,
That dost in vile misprision shackle up
My love and her desert; that canst not dream,
We, poising us in her defective scale,
Shall weigh thee to the beam: that wilt not know,
It is in us to plant thine honour where
We please to have it grow. Check thy contempt:
Obey our will, which travails in thy good:
Believe not thy disdain, but presently
Do thine own fortunes that obedient right
Which both thy duty owes and our power claims,
Or I will throw thee from my care for ever
Into the staggers and the careless lapse
Of youth and ignorance; both my revenge and hate,
Loosing upon thee in the name of justice,
Without all terms of pity. Speak, thine answer!
BERTRAM. Pardon, my gracious lord; for I submit
My fancy to your eyes. When I consider
What great creation and what dole of honour
Flies where you bid it, I find that she which late
Was in my nobler thoughts most base, is now
The praisèd of the king—who, so ennobled,
Is as 'twere born so.
KING. Take her by the hand,
And tell her she is thine: to whom I promise
A counterpoise; if not to thy estate,
A balance more replete.

BERTRAM. I take her hand.

KING. Good fortune and the favour of the king
Smile upon this contract; whose ceremony
Shall seem expedient on the now-born brief,
And be performed to-night: the solemn feast
Shall more attend upon the coming space,
Expecting absent friends. As thou lov'st her,
Thy love's to me religious; else, does err.

All depart save Lafeu and Parolles who stay behind, commenting of this wedding

LAFEU. Do you hear, monsieur? a word with you.

PAROLLES. Your pleasure, sir?

LAFEU. Your lord and master did well to make his recantation.

PAROLLES. Recantation! My lord! my master!

LAFEU. Ay; is it not a language I speak?

PAROLLES. A most harsh one, and not to be understood without bloody succeeding. My master!

LAFEU. Are you companion to the Count Rousillon?

PAROLLES. To any count, to all counts: to what is man!

LAFEU. To what is count's man: count's master is of another style.

PAROLLES. You are too old, sir; let it satisfy you, you are too old.

LAFEU. I must tell thee, sirrah, I write man; to which title age cannot bring thee.

PAROLLES. What I dare too well do, I dare not do.

LAFEU. I did think thee, for two ordinaries, to be a pretty wise fellow; thou didst make tolerable vent of thy travel—it might pass: yet the scarfs and the bannerets about thee did manifoldly dissuade me from believing thee a vessel of too great a burden. I have now found thee—when I lose thee again, I care not: yet art thou good for nothing but taking up, and that thou'rt scarce worth.

PAROLLES. Hadst thou not the privilege of antiquity upon thee,—

LAFEU. Do not plunge thyself too far in anger, lest thou hasten thy trial; which if—Lord have mercy on thee for a hen! So, my good window of lattice, fare thee well, thy casement I need not open, for I look through thee.... Give me thy hand.

PAROLLES. My lord, you give me most egregious indignity.

LAFEU. Ay, with all my heart, and thou art worthy of it.

PAROLLES. I have not, my lord, deserved it.

LAFEU. Yes, good faith, every dram of it, and I will not bate thee a scruple.

PAROLLES. Well, I shall be wiser.

LAFEU. E'en as soon as thou canst, for thou hast to pull at a smack o'th' contrary. If ever thou be'st bound in thy scarf and beaten, thou shalt find what it is to be proud of thy bondage. I have a desire to hold my acquaintance with thee, or rather my knowledge, that I may say, in the default, he is a man I know.

PAROLLES. My lord, you do me most insupportable vexation.

LAFEU. I would it were hell-pains for thy sake, and my poor doing eternal: for doing I am past, as I will by thee, in what motion age will give me leave.

He goes

PAROLLES. Well, thou hast a son shall take this disgrace off me; scurvy, old, filthy, scurvy lord! Well, I must be patient, there is no fettering of authority. I'll beat him, by my life, if I can meet him with any convenience, an he were double and double a lord. I'll have no more pity of his age than I would have of —I'll beat him, an if I could but meet him again.

Lafeu returns

LAFEU. Sirrah, your lord and master's married, there's news for you; you have a new mistress.

PAROLLES. I most unfeignedly beseech your lordship to make some reservation of your wrongs. He is my good lord—whom I serve above, is my master.

LAFEU. Who? God?

PAROLLES. Ay, sir.

LAFEU. The devil it is that's thy master. Why dost thou garter up thy arms o' this fashion? dost make hose of thy sleeves? do other servants so? Thou wert best set thy lower part where thy nose stands. By mine honour, if I were but two hours younger, I'd beat thee: methink'st thou art a general offence, and every man should beat thee: I think thou wast created for men to breathe themselves upon thee.

PAROLLES. This is hard and undeserved measure, my lord.

LAFEU. Go to, sir, you were beaten in Italy for picking a kernel out of a pomegranate, you are a vagabond and no true traveller; you are more saucy with lords and honourable personages than the commission of your birth and virtue gives you heraldry. You are not worth another word else I'd call you knave. I leave you. He goes

PAROLLES. Good, very good, it is so then: good, very good, let it be concealed awhile.

Bertram enters

BERTRAM. Undone, and forfeited to cares for ever!

PAROLLES. What's the matter, sweet-heart?

BERTRAM. Although before the solemn priest I have sworn,
I will not bed her.

PAROLLES. What, what, sweet-heart?

BERTRAM. O my Parolles, they have married me:
I'll to the Tuscan wars, and never bed her.

PAROLLES. France is a dog-hole, and it no more merits
The tread of a man's foot: to th' wars!

BERTRAM. There's letters from my mother: what th'import is,
I know not yet.

PAROLLES. Ay, that would be known ... To th' wars, my boy, to th' wars!
He wears his honour in a box unseen,
That hugs his kicky-wicky here at home,
Spending his manly marrow in her arms,
Which should sustain the bound and high curvet
Of Mars's fiery steed ... To other regions!
France is a stable, we that dwell in't jades,
Therefore to th' war!

BERTRAM. It shall be so. I'll send her to my house,
Acquaint my mother with my hate to her,
And wherefore I am fled; write to the king
That which I durst not speak: his present gift
Shall furnish me to those Italian fields,
Where noble fellows strike: war is no strife
To the dark house and the detested wife.

PAROLLES. Will this capriccio hold in thee, art sure?

BERTRAM. Go with me to my chamber, and advise me.
I'll send her straight away: to-morrow
I'll to the wars, she to her single sorrow.

PAROLLES. Why, these balls bound, there's noise in it. 'Tis hard;
A young man married is a man that's marred:
Therefore away, and leave her bravely; go.
The king has done you wrong; but, hush, 'tis so.
They go

Scene 4: The King's palace

Enter Helena and Clown

HELENA. My mother greets me kindly. Is she well?

CLOWN. She is not well, but yet she has her health, she's very merry, but yet she is not well: but thanks be given, she's very well and wants nothing i'th' world; but yet she is not well.

HELENA. If she be very well, what does she ail, that she's not very well?

CLOWN. Truly, she's very well indeed, but for two things.

HELENA. What two things?

CLOWN. One, that she's not in heaven, whither God send her quickly: the other, that she's in earth, from whence God send her quickly.

Parolles comes in

PAROLLES. Bless you, my fortunate lady!

HELENA. I hope, sir, I have your good will to have mine own good fortunes.

PAROLLES. You had my prayers to lead them on, and to keep them on have them still. O, my knave, how does my old lady?

CLOWN. So that you had her wrinkles, and I her money, I would she did as you say.

PAROLLES. Why, I say nothing.

CLOWN. Marry, you are the wiser man; for many a man's tongue shakes out his master's undoing: to say nothing, to do nothing, to know nothing, and to have nothing, is to be a great part of your title—which is within a very little of nothing.

PAROLLES. Away, th'art a knave.

CLOWN. You should have said, sir, 'before a knave th'art a knave,' that's, before me th'art a knave: this had been truth, sir.

PAROLLES. Go to, thou art a witty fool, I have found thee.

CLOWN. Did you find me in yourself, sir? or were you taught to find me?

PAROLLES. In myself.

CLOWN. The search, sir, was profitable; and much fool may you find in you, even to the world's pleasure and the increase of laughter.

PAROLLES. A good knave, i' faith, and well fed.
Madam, my lord will go away to-night,
A very serious business calls on him:
The great prerogative and rite of love,
Which as your due time claims, he does acknowledge,
But puts it off to a compelled restraint;
Whose want, and whose delay, is strewed with sweets,
Which they distil now in the curbéd time,
To make the coming hour o'erflow with joy,
And pleasure drown the brim.

HELENA. What's his will else?

PAROLLES. That you will take your instant leave o'th' king,
And make this haste as your own good proceeding,
Strengthened with what apology you think
May make it probable need.

HELENA. What more commands he?

PAROLLES. That, having this obtained, you presently
Attend his further pleasure.

HELENA. In every thing I wait upon his will.

PAROLLES. I shall report it so. Goes

HELENA. I pray you.—Come, sirrah.
They go

Scene 5: Another room in the same

Enter Lafeu and Bertram

LAFEU. But I hope your lordship thinks not him a soldier.

BERTRAM. Yes, my lord, and of very valiant approof.

LAFEU. You have it from his own deliverance.

BERTRAM. And by other warranted testimony.

LAFEU. Then my dial goes not true, I took this lark for a bunting.

BERTRAM. I do assure you, my lord, he is very great in knowledge, and accordingly valiant.

LAFEU. I have then sinned against his experience and transgressed against his valour, and my state that way is dangerous, since I cannot yet find in my heart to repent . . .

Enter Parolles

Here he comes, I pray you make us friends, I will pursue the amity.

PAROLLES [to Bertram]. These things shall be done, sir.

LAFEU. Pray you, sir, who's his tailor?

PAROLLES. Sir?

LAFEU. O, I know him well. Ay sir, he, sir, 's a good workman, a very good tailor.

BERTRAM. Is she gone to the king?

PAROLLES. She is.

BERTRAM. Will she away to-night?

PAROLLES. As you'll have her.

BERTRAM. I have writ my letters, casketed my treasure,
Given order for our horses—and to-night,
When I should take possession of the bride,
End ere I do begin.

LAFEU. A good traveller is something at the latter end of a dinner, but one that lies three thirds and uses a known truth to pass a thousand nothings with, should be once heard and thrice beaten. . . . God save you, captain.

BERTRAM. Is there any unkindness between my lord and you, monsieur?

PAROLLES. I know not how I have deserved to run into my lord's displeasure.

LAFEU. You have made shift to run into't, boots and spurs and all, like him that leaped into the custard; and of it you'll run again, rather than suffer question for your residence.

BERTRAM. It may be you have mistaken him, my lord.

LAFEU. And shall do so ever, though I took him at's prayers. Fare you well, my lord, and believe this of me, there can be no kernel in this light nut; the soul of this man is his clothes: trust him not in matter of heavy consequence; I have kept of them tame and know their natures. . . . Farewell, monsieur, I have spoken better of you than you have or will to deserve at my hand, but we must do good against evil. He goes

PAROLLES. An idle lord, I swear.
BERTRAM. I think so.
PAROLLES. Why, do you not know him?
BERTRAM. Yes, I do know him well, and common speech
Gives him a worthy pass....

Helena enters

Here comes my clog.
HELENA. I have, sir, as I was commanded from you,
Spoke with the king, and have procured his leave
For present parting—only he desires
Some private speech with you.
BERTRAM. I shall obey his will.
You must not marvel, Helen, at my course,
Which holds not colour with the time, nor does
The ministration and requiréd office
On my particular. Prepared I was not
For such a business, therefore am I found
So much unsettled ... This drives me to entreat you
That presently you take your way for home,
And rather muse than ask why I entreat you,
For my respects are better than they seem,
And my appointments have in them a need
Greater than shows itself at the first view
To you that know them not.... [gives a letter] This to my mother.
'Twill be two days ere I shall see you, so
I leave you to your wisdom.
HELENA. Sir, I can nothing say,
But that I am your most obedient servant.
BERTRAM. Come, come, no more of that.
HELENA. And ever shall
With true observance seek to eke out that
Wherein toward me my homely stars have failed
To equal my great fortune.
BERTRAM. Let that go:
My haste is very great. Farewell; hie home.
HELENA. Pray, sir, your pardon.
BERTRAM. Well, what would you say?
HELENA. I am not worthy of the wealth I owe,
Nor dare I say 'tis mine ... and yet it is—
But like a timorous thief most fain would steal
What law does vouch mine own.
BERTRAM. What would you have?
HELENA. Something, and scarce so much: nothing, indeed.
I would not tell you what I would, my lord ...
Faith, yes—
Strangers and foes do sunder, and not kiss.
BERTRAM. I pray you stay not, but in haste to horse.
HELENA. I shall not break your bidding, good my lord ...
BERTRAM. Where are my other men, monsieur?—Farewell. Helena departs
Go thou toward home, where I will never come,
Whilst I can shake my sword, or hear the drum ...
Away, and for our flight.
PAROLLES. Bravely, coragio!
They go

ACT 3

Scene 1: Florence. Before the Duke's palace

Flourish. Enter the Duke of Florence, the two Frenchmen with a troop of soldiers

DUKE. So that from point to point now have you heard
The fundamental reasons of this war;
Whose great decision hath much blood let forth,
And more thirsts after.
1 LORD. Holy seems the quarrel
Upon your grace's part; black and fearful
On the opposer.
DUKE. Therefore we marvel much our cousin France
Would in so just a business shut his bosom
Against our borrowing prayers.
2 LORD. Good my lord,
The reasons of our state I cannot yield,
But like a common and an outward man,
That the great figure of a council frames
By self-unable motion—therefore dare not
Say what I think of it, since I have found
Myself in my incertain grounds to fail
As often as I guessed.
DUKE. Be it his pleasure.
1 LORD. But I am sure the younger of our nature,
That surfeit on their ease, will day by day
Come here for physic.
DUKE. Welcome shall they be:
And all the honours that can fly from us
Shall on them settle ... You know your places well;
When better fall, for your avails they fell:
To-morrow to th' field! A flourish; they go

Scene 2: The palace of Rousillon

Enter the Countess and the Clown

COUNTESS. It hath happened all as I would have had it, save that he comes not along with her.

CLOWN. By my troth, I take my young lord to be a very melancholy man.

COUNTESS. By what observance, I pray you?

CLOWN. Why, he will look upon his boot and sing, mend the ruff and sing, ask questions and sing, pick his teeth and sing: I know a man that had this trick of melancholy sold a goodly manor for a song.

COUNTESS. Let me see what he writes, and when he means to come. She opens a letter

CLOWN. I have no mind to Isbel, since I was at court. Our old ling and our Isbels o'the country are nothing like your old ling and your Isbels o'the court: the brains of my Cupid's knocked out, and I begin to love, as an old man loves money, with no stomach.

COUNTESS. What have we here?

CLOWN. E'en that you have there. He goes

COUNTESS [reads]. 'I have sent you a daughter-in-law. She hath recovered the king, and undone me: I have wedded her, not bedded her, and sworn to make the 'not' eternal. You shall hear I am run away, know it before the report come. If there be breadth enough in the world, I will hold a long distance. My duty to you.

Your unfortunate son,
BERTRAM.'

This is not well, rash and unbridled boy,

To fly the favours of so good a king,
To pluck his indignation on thy head,
By the misprising of a maid too virtuous
For the contempt of empire.

The Clown returns

CLOWN. O madam, yonder is heavy news within between two soldiers and my young lady.
COUNTESS. What is the matter?
CLOWN. Nay, there is some comfort in the news, some comfort—your son will not be killed so soon as I thought he would.
COUNTESS. Why should he be killed?
CLOWN. So say I, madam, if he run away, as I hear he does. The danger is in standing to't, that's the loss of men, though it be the getting of children. Here they come will tell you more. For my part, I only hear your son was run away.

Helena enters with two gentlemen

1 GENTLEMAN. Save you, good madam.
HELENA. Madam, my lord is gone, for ever gone.
2 GENTLEMAN. Do not say so.
COUNTESS [takes her in her arms]. Think upon patience.
Pray you, gentlemen,
I have felt so many quirks of joy and grief,
That the first face of neither, on the start,
Can woman me unto't... Where is my son, I pray you?
2 GENTLEMAN. Madam, he's gone to serve the Duke of Florence.
We met him thitherward, for thence we came:
And after some dispatch in hand at court
Thither we bend again.
HELENA. Look on his letter, madam, here's my passport.
[reads] 'When thou canst get the ring upon my finger, which never shall come off, and show me a child begotten of thy body that I am father to, then call me husband: but in such a 'then' I write a 'never'.'
This is a dreadful sentence.
COUNTESS. Brought you this letter, gentlemen?
1 GENTLEMAN. Ay, madam,
And for the contents' sake are sorry for our pains.
COUNTESS. I prithee lady have a better cheer,
If thou engrossest all the griefs are thine,
Thou robb'st me of a moiety... He was my son,
But I do wash his name out of my blood,
And thou art all my child.... Towards Florence is he?
2 GENTLEMAN. Ay, madam.
COUNTESS. And to be a soldier?
2 GENTLEMAN. Such is his noble purpose, and, believe't,
The duke will lay upon him all the honour
That good convenience claims.
COUNTESS. Return you thither?
1 GENTLEMAN. Ay, madam, with the swiftest wing of speed.
HELENA [reads]. 'Till I have no wife, I have nothing in France.'
'Tis bitter.
COUNTESS. Find you that there?
HELENA. Ay, madam.
1 GENTLEMAN. 'Tis but the boldness of his hand, haply, which his heart was not consenting to.
COUNTESS. Nothing in France, until he have no wife!
There's nothing here that is too good for him
But only she, and she deserves a lord
That twenty such rude boys might tend upon
And call her hourly mistress. Who was with him?
1 GENTLEMAN. A servant only, and a gentleman
Which I have sometime known.
COUNTESS. Parolles, was it not?
1 GENTLEMAN. Ay, my good lady, he.
COUNTESS. A very tainted fellow, and full of wickedness.
My son corrupts a well-derivéd nature
With his inducement.
1 GENTLEMAN. Indeed, good lady,
The fellow has a deal of that too much,
Which holds him much to have.
COUNTESS. Y'are welcome, gentlemen.
I will entreat you, when you see my son,
To tell him that his sword can never win
The honour that he loses: more I'll entreat you
Written to bear along.
2 GENTLEMAN. We serve you, madam,
In that and all your worthiest affairs.
COUNTESS. Not so, but as we change our courtesies.
Will you draw near?
The Countess goes out with the gentlemen; the Clown follows
HELENA. 'Till I have no wife, I have nothing in France.'
Nothing in France, until he has no wife!
Thou shalt have none, Rousillon, none in France,
Then hast thou all again.... Poor lord! is't I
That chase thee from thy country and expose
Those tender limbs of thine to the event
Of the none-sparing war? and is it I
That drive thee from the sportive court, where thou
Wast shot at with fair eyes, to be the mark
Of smoky muskets? O you leaden messengers,
That ride upon the violent speed of fire,
Fly with false aim, move the still-piecing air
That sings with piercing, do not touch my lord!
Whoever shoots at him, I set him there.
Whoever charges on his forward breast,
I am the caitiff that do hold him to't.
And, though I kill him not, I am the cause
His death was so effected: better 'twere
I met the ravin lion when he roared
With sharp constraint of hunger: better 'twere
That all the miseries which nature owes
Were mine at once. No, come thou home, Rousillon,
Whence honour but of danger wins a scar,
As oft it loses all.... I will be gone:
My being here it is that holds thee hence—
Shall I stay here to do't? no, no, although
The air of paradise did fan the house,
And angels officed all: I will be gone,
That pitiful rumour may report my flight,
To consolate thine ear. Come night! end day!
For with the dark, poor thief, I'll steal away.
She goes

Scene 3: Florence. Before the Duke's palace

Flourish. Enter the Duke of Florence, Bertram, Parolles, officers, soldiers, drum and trumpets

DUKE. The general of our horse thou art, and we,
Great in our hope, lay our best love and credence
Upon thy promising fortune.
BERTRAM. Sir, it is
A charge too heavy for my strength, but yet
We'll strive to bear it for your worthy sake
To th'extreme edge of hazard.
DUKE. Then go thou forth,
And fortune play upon thy prosperous helm,
As thy auspicious mistress!
BERTRAM. This very day,
Great Mars, I put myself into thy file!
Make me but like my thoughts, and I shall prove
A lover of thy drum, hater of love. They go

Scene 4: The palace of Rousillon

Enter Countess and Steward

COUNTESS. Alas! and would you take the letter of her?
Might you not know she would do as she has done,
By sending me a letter? Read it again.
STEWARD [reads]. 'I am S. Jaques' pilgrim, thither gone:
Ambitious love hath so in me offended,
That barefoot plod I the cold ground upon,
With sainted vow my faults to have amended.
Write, write, that from the bloody course of war
My dearest master, your dear son, may hie:
Bless him at home in peace, whilst I from far
His name with zealous fervour sanctify:
His taken labours bid him me forgive;
I, his despiteful Juno, sent him forth
From courtly friends with camping foes to live,
Where death and danger dogs the heels of worth.
He is too good and fair for death and me,
Whom I myself embrace to set him free.'
COUNTESS. Ah, what sharp stings are in her mildest words!
Rinaldo, you did never lack advice so much,
As letting her pass so: had I spoke with her,
I could have well diverted her intents,
Which thus she hath prevented.
STEWARD. Pardon me, madam.
If I had given you this at over-night,
She might have been o'erta'en: and yet she writes,
Pursuit would be but vain.
COUNTESS. What angel shall
Bless this unworthy husband? he cannot thrive,
Unless her prayers, whom heaven delights to hear
And loves to grant, reprieve him from the wrath
Of greatest justice.... Write, write, Rinaldo,
To this unworthy husband of his wife,
Let every word weigh heavy of her worth
That he does weigh too light: my greatest grief,
Though little he do feel it, set down sharply.
Dispatch the most convenient messenger.
When haply he shall hear that she is gone,
He will return, and hope I may that she,
Hearing so much, will speed her foot again,
Led hither by pure love: which of them both
Is dearest to me, I have no skill in sense
To make distinction ... Provide this messenger ...
My heart is heavy and mine age is weak,
Grief would have tears, and sorrow bids me speak.

Scene 5: Without the walls of Florence

Enter an old Widow of Florence, her daughter Diana, and Mariana, with other citizens; a tucket afar off

WIDOW. Nay come, for if they do approach the city, we shall lose all the sight.

DIANA. They say the French count has done most honourable service.

WIDOW. It is reported that he has taken their great'st commander, and that with his own hand he slew the duke's brother ... [tucket] We have lost our labour, they are gone a contrary way—hark! you may know by their trumpets.

MARIANA. Come, let's return again, and suffice ourselves with the report of it.... Well, Diana, take heed of this French earl. The honour of a maid is her name, and no legacy is so rich as honesty.

WIDOW. I have told my neighbour how you have been solicited by a gentleman his companion.

MARIANA. I know that knave, hang him! one Parolles, a filthy officer he is in those suggestions for the young earl. Beware of them, Diana: their promises, enticements, oaths, tokens, and all these engines of lust, are not the things they go under: many a maid hath been seduced by them. And the misery is, example, that so terrible shows in the wrack of maidenhood, cannot for all that dissuade succession, but that they are limed with the twigs that threaten them. I hope I need not to advise you further, but I hope your own grace will keep you where you are, though there were no further danger known but the modesty which is so lost.

DIANA. You shall not need to fear me.

Helena approaches disguised as a pilgrim

WIDOW. I hope so ... Look, here comes a pilgrim, I know she will lie at my house, thither they send one another. I'll question her.
God save you, pilgrim! whither are you bound?
HELENA. To S. Jaques le Grand.
Where do the palmers lodge, I do beseech you?
WIDOW. At the S. Francis here, beside the port.
HELENA. Is this the way?
WIDOW. Ay, marry, is't.... [a march afar] Hark you! they come this way.
If you will tarry, holy pilgrim,
But till the troops come by,
I will conduct you where you shall be lodged,
The rather for I think I know your hostess?
As ample as myself.
HELENA. Is it yourself?
WIDOW. If you shall please so, pilgrim.
HELENA. I thank you, and will stay upon your leisure.
WIDOW. You came, I think, from France?
HELENA. I did so.
WIDOW. Here you shall see a countryman of yours,
That has done worthy service.
HELENA. His name, I pray you.
DIANA. The Count Rousillon: know you such a one?
HELENA. But by the ear, that hears most nobly of him:
His face I know not.
DIANA. Whatsome'er he is,
He's bravely taken here. He stole from France,
As 'tis reported, for the king had married him
Against his liking. Think you it is so?
HELENA. Ay, surely, the mere truth. I know his lady.

DIANA. There is a gentleman that serves the count
Reports but coarsely of her.
HELENA. What's his name?
DIANA. Monsieur Parolles.
HELENA. O, I believe with him,
In argument of praise, or to the worth
Of the great count himself, she is too mean
To have her name repeated—all her deserving
Is a reservéd honesty, and that
I have not heard examined.
DIANA. Alas, poor lady!
'Tis a hard bondage to become the wife
Of a detesting lord.
WIDOW. I warrant, good creature, wheresoe'er she is,
Her heart weighs sadly: this young maid might do her
A shrewd turn, if she pleased.
HELENA. How do you mean?
May be the amorous count solicits her
In the unlawful purpose.
WIDOW. He does indeed,
And brokes with all that can in such a suit
Corrupt the tender honour of a maid:
But she is armed for him, and keeps her guard
In honestest defence.
MARIANA. The gods forbid else!
WIDOW. So, now they come...

The Florentine army draws near with colours flying and drums beating; Bertram and Parolles in the foremost ranks

That is Antonio, the duke's eldest son,
That, Escalus.
HELENA. Which is the Frenchman?
DIANA. He—
That with the plume—'tis a most gallant fellow.
I would he loved his wife: if he were honester
He were much goodlier. Is't not a handsome gentleman?
HELENA. I like him well.
DIANA. 'Tis pity he is not honest: yond's that same knave
That leads him to these places: were I his lady,
I would poison that vile rascal.
HELENA. Which is he?
DIANA. That jack-an-apes with scarfs. Why is he melancholy?
HELENA. Perchance he's hurt i'th' battle.
PAROLLES. Lose our drum! well.
MARIANA. He's shrewdly vexed at something. Look, he has spied us.
WIDOW. Marry, hang you!
MARIANA. And your curtsy, for a ring-carrier!
The soldiers go
WIDOW. The troop is past... Come, pilgrim, I will bring you
Where you shall host: of enjoined penitents
There's four or five, to great S. Jaques bound,
Already at my house.
HELENA. I humbly thank you:
Please it this matron and this gentle maid
To eat with us to-night, the charge and thanking
Shall be for me; and, to requite you further,
I will bestow some precepts of this virgin
Worthy the note.
BOTH. We'll take your offer kindly.
They go

Scene 6: The camp before Florence

Bertram and the two French Lords approach

2 LORD. Nay, good my lord, put him to't; let him have his way.

1 LORD. If your lordship find him not a hilding, hold me no more in your respect.

2 LORD. On my life, my lord, a bubble.

BERTRAM. Do you think I am so far deceived in him?

2 LORD. Believe it, my lord, in mine own direct knowledge, without any malice, but to speak of him as my kinsman, he's a most notable coward, an infinite and endless liar, an hourly promise-breaker, the owner of no one good quality worthy your lordship's entertainment.

1 LORD. It were fit you knew him, lest reposing too far in his virtue which he hath not, he might at some great and trusty business in a main danger fail you.

BERTRAM. I would I knew in what particular action to try him.

1 LORD. None better than to let him fetch off his drum, which you hear him so confidently undertake to do.

2 LORD. I, with a troop of Florentines, will suddenly surprise him; such I will have, whom I am sure he knows not from the enemy: we will bind and hoodwink him so, that he shall suppose no other but that he is carried into the leaguer of the adversaries, when we bring him to our own tents... Be but your lordship present at his examination—if he do not, for the promise of his life and in the highest compulsion of base fear, offer to betray you and deliver all the intelligence in his power against you, and that with the divine forfeit of his soul upon oath, never trust my judgement in any thing.

1 LORD. O, for the love of laughter, let him fetch his drum. He says he has a stratagem for't: when your lordship sees the bottom of his success in't, and to what metal this counterfeit lump of ore will be melted, if you give him not John Drum's entertainment, your inclining cannot be removed. Here he comes.

Parolles enters

2 LORD. O, for the love of laughter, hinder not the honour of his design, let him fetch off his drum in any hand.

BERTRAM. How now, monsieur! this drum sticks sorely in your disposition.

1 LORD. A pox on't, let it go, 'tis but a drum.

PAROLLES. 'But a drum!' is't 'but a drum'? A drum so lost! There was excellent command—to charge in with our horse upon our own wings, and to rend our own soldiers!

1 LORD. That was not to be blamed in the command of the service: it was a disaster of war that Cæsar himself could not have prevented, if he had been there to command.

BERTRAM. Well, we cannot greatly condemn our success: some dishonour we had in the loss of that drum: but it is not to be recovered.

PAROLLES. It might have been recovered.

BERTRAM. It might, but it is not now.

PAROLLES. It is to be recovered. But that the merit of service is seldom attributed to the true and exact performer, I would have that drum or another, or 'hic jacet.'

BERTRAM. Why, if you have a stomach, to't monsieur: if you think your mystery in stratagem can bring this instrument of honour again into his native quarter, be magnanimous in the enterprise, and go on—I will grace the attempt for a worthy exploit: if you speed well in it, the duke shall both speak of it, and extend to you what further becomes his greatness, even to the utmost syllable of your worthiness.

PAROLLES. By the hand of a soldier, I will undertake it.

BERTRAM. But you must not now slumber in it.

PAROLLES. I'll about it this evening, and I will presently pen down my dilemmas, encourage myself in my certainty, put myself into my mortal preparation; and by midnight look to hear further from me.

BERTRAM. May I be bold to acquaint his grace you are gone about it?

PAROLLES. I know not what the success will be, my lord, but the attempt I vow.

BERTRAM. I know, th'art valiant—and, to the possibility of thy soldiership, will subscribe for thee ... Farewell.

PAROLLES. I love not many words. He goes

2 LORD. No more than a fish loves water.... Is not this a strange fellow, my lord, that so confidently seems to undertake this business—which he knows is not to be done—damns himself to do, and dares better be damned than to do't.

1 LORD. You do not know him, my lord, as we do. Certain it is, that he will steal himself into a man's favour and for a week escape a great deal of discoveries, but when you find him out you have him ever after.

BERTRAM. Why, do you think he will make no deed at all of this that so seriously he does address himself unto?

2 LORD. None in the world, but return with an invention, and clap upon you two or three probable lies: but we have almost embossed him, you shall see his fall to-night; for indeed he is not for your lordship's respect.

1 LORD. We'll make you some sport with the fox ere we case him. He was first smoked by the old lord Lafeu. When his disguise and he is parted, tell me what a sprat you shall find him, which you shall see this very night.

2 LORD. I must go look my twigs, he shall be caught.

BERTRAM. Your brother, he shall go along with me.

2 LORD. As't please your lordship: I'll leave you. He goes

BERTRAM. Now will I lead you to the house, and show you
The lass I spoke of.

1 LORD. But you say she's honest.

BERTRAM. That's all the fault: I spoke with her but once,
And found her wondrous cold, but I sent to her,
By this same coxcomb that we have i'th' wind,
Tokens and letters which she did re-send,
And this is all I have done ... She's a fair creature,
Will you go see her?

1 LORD. With all my heart, my lord.
They go

Scene 7: The Widow's house at Florence

Enter Helena and Widow

HELENA. If you misdoubt me that I am not she,
I know not how I shall assure you further,
But I shall lose the grounds I work upon.

WIDOW. Though my estate be fall'n, I was well born,
Nothing acquainted with these businesses,
And would not put my reputation now
In any staining act.

HELENA. Nor would I wish you.
First give me trust the count he is my husband,
And what to your sworn counsel I have spoken
Is so from word to word; and then you cannot,
By the good aid that I of you shall borrow,
Err in bestowing it.

WIDOW. I should believe you,
For you have showed me that which well approves
Y'are great in fortune.

HELENA. Take this purse of gold,
And let me buy your friendly help thus far,
Which I will over-pay and pay again
When I have found it.... The count he wooes your daughter,
Lays down his wanton siege before her beauty,
Resolved to carry her: let her in fine consent,
As we'll direct her how 'tis best to bear it:
Now his important blood will nought deny
That she'll demand: a ring the county wears,
That downward hath succeeded in his house
From son to son, some four or five descents
Since the first father wore it: this ring he holds
In most rich choice; yet in his idle fire,
To buy his will, it would not seem too dear,
Howe'er repented after.

WIDOW. Now I see
The bottom of your purpose.

HELENA. You see it lawful then. It is no more
But that your daughter, ere she seems as won,
Desires this ring; appoints him an encounter;
In fine, delivers me to fill the time,
Herself most chastely absent: after this,
To marry her, I'll add three thousand crowns
To what is past already.

WIDOW. I have yielded:
Instruct my daughter how she shall persever,
That time and place with this deceit so lawful
May prove coherent. Every night he comes
With musics of all sorts and songs composed
To her unworthiness: it nothing steads us
To chide him from our eaves, for he persists
As if his life lay on't.

HELENA. Why then to-night
Let us assay our plot, which if it speed,
Is wicked meaning in a lawful deed,
And lawful meaning in a lawful act,
Where both not sin, and yet a sinful fact:
But let's about it. They go

ACT 4

Scene 1: A field near the Florentine camp

The second French Lord, with five or six other soldiers in ambush

2 LORD. He can come no other way but by this hedge-corner ... When you sally upon him, speak what terrible language you will: though you understand it not yourselves, no matter: for we must not seem to understand him, unless some one among us whom we must produce for an interpreter.

1 SOLDIER. Good captain, let me be th'interpreter.

2 LORD. Art not acquainted with him? knows he not thy voice?

1 SOLDIER. No, sir, I warrant you.

2 LORD. But what linsey-woolsey hast thou to speak to us again?

1 SOLDIER. E'en such as you speak to me.

2 LORD. He must think us some band of strangers i'the adversary's entertainment. Now he hath a smack of all neighbouring languages; therefore we must every one be a man of his own fancy; not to know what we speak one to another, so we seem to know, is to know straight our purpose: choughs' language, gabble enough, and good enough. As for you, interpreter, you must seem very politic. But couch, ho! here he comes—to beguile two hours in a sleep, and then to return and swear the lies he forges.

Parolles enters

PAROLLES. Ten o'clock: within these three hours 'twill be time enough to go home. What shall I say I have done? It must be a very plausive invention that carries it. They begin to smoke me, and disgraces have of late knocked too often at my door... I find my tongue is too foolhardy, but my heart hath the fear of Mars before it and of his creatures, not daring the reports of my tongue.

2 LORD [aside]. This is the first truth that e'er thine own tongue was guilty of.

PAROLLES. What the devil should move me to undertake the recovery of this drum, being not ignorant of the impossibility, and knowing I had no such purpose? I must give myself some hurts, and say I got them in exploit... Yet slight ones will not carry it. They will say, 'Came you off with so little?' And great ones I dare not give. Wherefore, what's the instance? Tongue, I must put you into a butter-woman's mouth, and buy myself another of Bajazet's mate, if you prattle me into these perils.

2 LORD [aside]. Is it possible he should know what he is, and be that he is?

PAROLLES. I would the cutting of my garments would serve the turn, or the breaking of my Spanish sword.

2 LORD [aside]. We cannot afford you so.

PAROLLES. Or the baring of my beard, and to say it was in stratagem.

2 LORD [aside]. 'Twould not do.

PAROLLES. Or to drown my clothes, and say I was stripped.

2 LORD [aside]. Hardly serve.

PAROLLES. Though I swore I leaped from the window of the citadel—

2 LORD [aside]. How deep?

PAROLLES. Thirty fathom.

2 LORD [aside]. Three great oaths would scarce make that be believed.

PAROLLES. I would I had any drum of the enemy's, I would swear I recovered it.

2 LORD [aside]. You shall hear one anon.

PAROLLES. A drum now of the enemy's—

2 LORD. Throca movousus, cargo, cargo, cargo.

ALL. Cargo, cargo, cargo, villianda par corbo, cargo.

PAROLLES. O! ransom, ransom! Do not hide mine eyes.
They bind him and blindfold his eyes in his scarf

1 SOLDIER. Boskos thromuldo boskos.

PAROLLES. I know you are the Muskos' regiment.
And I shall lose my life for want of language.
If there be here German, or Dane, low Dutch,
Italian, or French, let him speak to me,
I will discover that which shall undo
The Florentine.

1 SOLDIER. Boskos vauvado—
I understand thee, and can speak thy tongue:
Kerelybonto, sir,
Betake thee to thy faith, for seventeen poniards
Are at thy bosom.

PAROLLES. O!

1 SOLDIER. O, pray, pray, pray!
Manka revania dulche.

2 LORD. Oscorbidulchos volivorco.

1 SOLDIER. The general is content to spare thee yet,
And, hoodwinked as thou art, will lead thee on
To gather from thee. Haply thou mayst inform
Something to save thy life.

PAROLLES. O, let me live!
And all the secrets of our camp I'll show,
Their force, their purposes: nay, I'll speak that
Which you will wonder at.

1 SOLDIER. But wilt thou faithfully?

PAROLLES. If I do not, damn me.

1 SOLDIER. Acordo linta.
Come on, thou art granted space.
The interpreter and other soldiers carry off Parolles

2 LORD. Go, tell the Count Rousillon, and my brother,
We have caught the woodcock, and will keep him muffled
Till we do hear from them.

2 SOLDIER. Captain, I will.

2 LORD. A' will betray us all unto ourselves—
Inform 'em that.

2 SOLDIER. So I will, sir.

2 LORD. Till then, I'll keep him dark, and safely locked.
They go

Scene 2: The Widow's house at Florence

Enter Bertram and Diana

BERTRAM. They told me that your name was Fontibell.

DIANA. No, my good lord, Diana.

BERTRAM. Titled goddess!
And worth it, with addition... But, fair soul,
In your fine frame hath love no quality?
If the quick fire of youth light not your mind,
You are no maiden but a monument.
When you are dead, you should be such a one
As you are now, for you are cold and stern;
And now you should be as your mother was
When your sweet self was got.

DIANA. She then was honest.

BERTRAM. So should you be.

DIANA. No:
My mother did but duty—such, my lord,
As you owe to your wife.

BERTRAM. No more o' that:
I prithee, do not strive against my vows:
I was compelled to her, but I love thee
By love's own sweet constraint, and will for ever
Do thee all rights of service.

DIANA. Ay, so you serve us

Till we serve you: but when you have our roses,
You barely leave our thorns to prick ourselves,
And mock us with our bareness.
BERTRAM. How have I sworn!
DIANA. 'Tis not the many oaths that makes the truth,
But the plain single vow that is vowed true:
What is not holy, that we swear not by,
But take the High'st to witness: then, pray you, tell me,
If I should swear by Jove's great attributes
I loved you dearly, would you believe my oaths
When I did love you ill? This has no holding,
To swear by Him whom I protest to love,
That I will work against Him. Therefore your oaths
Are words and poor, conditions but unsealed,
At least in my opinion.
BERTRAM. Change it, change it;
Be not so holy-cruel: love is holy,
And my integrity ne'er knew the crafts
That you do charge men with . . . Stand no more off,
But give thyself unto my sick desires,
Who then recover. Say thou art mine, and ever
My love as it begins shall so persever.
DIANA. I see that men make rope's in such a scarre,
That we'll forsake ourselves. Give me that ring.
BERTRAM. I'll lend it thee, my dear; but have no power
To give it from me.
DIANA. Will you not, my lord?
BERTRAM. It is an honour 'longing to our house,
Bequeathéd down from many ancestors,
Which were the greatest obloquy i'th' world
In me to lose.
DIANA. Mine honour's such a ring,
My chastity's the jewel of our house,
Bequeathéd down from many ancestors,
Which were the greatest obloquy i'th' world
In me to lose. Thus your own proper wisdom
Brings in the champion Honour on my part,
Against your vain assault.
BERTRAM. Here, take my ring.
My house, mine honour, yea, my life be thine,
And I'll be bid by thee.
DIANA. When midnight comes, knock at my chamber window:
I'll order take my mother shall not hear.
Now will I charge you in the band of truth,
When you have conquered my yet maiden bed,
Remain there but an hour, nor speak to me:
My reasons are most strong, and you shall know them
When back again this ring shall be delivered:
And on your finger in the night I'll put
Another ring, that what in time proceeds
May token to the future our past deeds.
Adieu till then, then fail not: you have won
A wife of me, though there my hope be done.
BERTRAM. A heaven on earth I have won by wooing thee.
DIANA. For which live long to thank both heaven and me! He goes
You may so in the end.
My mother told me just how he would woo,
As if she sat in's heart. She says all men
Have the like oaths: he had sworn to marry me
When his wife's dead; therefore I'll lie with him
When I am buried. Since Frenchmen are so braid,
Marry that will, I live and die a maid:
Only in this disguise I think't no sin
To cozen him that would unjustly win. She goes

Scene 3: The Florentine camp

Enter the two French Lords, and two or three soldiers

2 LORD. You have not given him his mother's letter?

1 LORD. I have delivered it an hour since. There is something in't that stings his nature; for on the reading it he changed almost into another man.

2 LORD. He has much worthy blame laid upon him for shaking off so good a wife and so sweet a lady.

1 LORD. Especially he hath incurred the everlasting displeasure of the king, who had even tuned his bounty to sing happiness to him. I will tell you a thing, but you shall let it dwell darkly with you.

2 LORD. When you have spoken it, 'tis dead, and I am the grave of it.

1 LORD. He hath perverted a young gentlewoman here in Florence, of a most chaste renown, and this night he fleshes his will in the spoil of her honour: he hath given her his monumental ring, and thinks himself made in the unchaste composition.

2 LORD. Now, God lay our rebellion! as we are ourselves, what things are we!

1 LORD. Merely our own traitors. And as in the common course of all treasons, we still see them reveal themselves, till they attain to their abhorred ends; so he that in this action contrives against his own nobility in his proper stream o'erflows himself.

2 LORD. Is it not meant damnable in us, to be trumpeters of our unlawful intents? We shall not then have his company to-night?

1 LORD. Not till after midnight; for he is dieted to his hour.

2 LORD. That approaches apace: I would gladly have him see his company anatomized, that he might take a measure of his own judgement, wherein so curiously he had set this counterfeit.

1 LORD. We will not meddle with him till he come; for his presence must be the whip of the other.

2 LORD. In the mean time, what hear you of these wars?

1 LORD. I hear there is an overture of peace.

2 LORD. Nay, I assure you, a peace concluded.

1 LORD. What will Count Rousillon do then? will he travel higher, or return again into France?

2 LORD. I perceive, by this demand, you are not altogether of his council.

1 LORD. Let it be forbid, sir, so should I be a great deal of his act.

2 LORD. Sir, his wife some two months since fled from his house: her pretence is a pilgrimage to S. Jaques le Grand; which holy undertaking with most austere sanctimony she accomplished: and, there residing, the tenderness of her nature became as a prey to her grief; in fine, made a groan of her last breath, and now she sings in heaven.

1 LORD. How is this justified?

2 LORD. The stronger part of it by her own letters, which makes her story true, even to the point of her death: her death itself, which could not be her office to say is come, was faithfully confirmed by the rector of the place.

1 LORD. Hath the count all this intelligence?

2 LORD. Ay, and the particular confirmations, point from point, to the full arming of the verity.

1 LORD. I am heartily sorry that he'll be glad of this.

2 LORD. How mightily sometimes we make us comforts of our losses!

1 LORD. And how mightily some other times we drown our gain in tears! The great dignity that his valour hath here acquired for him shall at home be encountered with a shame as ample.

2 LORD. The web of our life is of a mingled yarn, good and ill together: our virtues would be proud, if our faults whipped them not, and our crimes would despair, if they were not cherished by our virtues.

A servant comes in

How now! where's your master?

SERVANT. He met the duke in the street, sir, of whom he hath taken a solemn leave; his lordship will next morning for France. The Duke hath offered him letters of commendations to the king.

2 LORD. They shall be no more than needful there, if they were more than they can commend.

1 LORD. They cannot be too sweet for the king's tartness.

Bertram enters

Here's his lordship now. How now, my lord, is't not after midnight?

BERTRAM. I have to-night dispatched sixteen businesses, a month's length a-piece, by an abstract of success: I have congied with the duke, done my adieu with his nearest, buried a wife, mourned for her, writ to my lady mother I am returning, entertained my convoy, and between these main parcels of dispatch, effected many nicer needs: the last was the greatest, but that I have not ended yet.

2 LORD. If the business be of any difficulty, and this morning your departure hence, it requires haste of your lordship.

BERTRAM. I mean, the business is not ended, as fearing to hear of it hereafter ... But shall we have this dialogue between the Fool and the Soldier? Come, bring forth this counterfeit module, has deceived me like a double-meaning prophesier.

2 LORD. Bring him forth. [a soldier goes out] Has sat i'th' stocks all night, poor gallant knave.

BERTRAM. No matter, his heels have deserved it, in usurping his spurs so long. How does he carry himself?

2 LORD. I have told your lordship already; the stocks carry him. But to answer you as you would be understood, he weeps like a wench that had shed her milk. He hath confessed himself to Morgan, whom he supposes to be a friar, from the time of his remembrance to this very instant disaster of his setting i'th' stocks: and what think you he hath confessed?

BERTRAM. Nothing of me, has a'?

2 LORD. His confession is taken, and it shall be read to his face. If your lordship be in't, as I believe you are, you must have the patience to hear it.

Soldiers bring in Parolles, with his Interpreter

BERTRAM. A plague upon him! muffled! he can say nothing of me.

1 LORD. Hush! hush! Hoodman comes! Portotartarossa.

INTERPRETER. He calls for the tortures. What will you say without 'em?

PAROLLES. I will confess what I know without constraint. If ye pinch me like a pasty, I can say no more.

INTERPRETER. Bosko chimurcho.

1 LORD. Boblibindo chicurmurco.

INTERPRETER. You are a merciful general ... Our general bids you answer to what I shall ask you out of a note.

PAROLLES. And truly, as I hope to live.

INTERPRETER. 'First demand of him how many horse the duke is strong.' What say you to that?

PAROLLES. Five or six thousand, but very weak and unserviceable: the troops are all scattered, and the commanders very poor rogues, upon my reputation and credit, and as I hope to live.

INTERPRETER. Shall I set down your answer so?

PAROLLES. Do, I'll take the sacrament on't, how and which way you will.

BERTRAM. All's one to him. What a past-saving slave is this!

1 LORD. Y'are deceived, my lord, this is Monsieur Parolles, the gallant militarist—that was his own phrase—that had the whole theoric of war in the knot of his scarf, and the practice in the chape of his dagger.

2 LORD. I will never trust a man again for keeping his sword clean, nor believe he can have every thing in him by wearing his apparel neatly.

INTERPRETER. Well, that's set down.

PAROLLES. Five or six thousand horse, I said—I will say true—or thereabouts, set down, for I'll speak truth.

1 LORD. He's very near the truth in this.

BERTRAM. But I con him no thanks for't, in the nature he delivers it.

PAROLLES. Poor rogues, I pray you, say.

INTERPRETER. Well, that's set down.

PAROLLES. I humbly thank you, sir—a truth's a truth—the rogues are marvellous poor.

INTERPRETER. 'Demand of him, of what strength they are a-foot.' What say you to that?

PAROLLES. By my troth, sir, if I were to leave this present hour, I will tell true. Let me see—Spurio a hundred and fifty, Sebastian so many, Corambus so many, Jaques so many; Guiltian, Cosmo, Lodowick, and Gratii, two hundred and fifty each: mine own company, Chitopher, Vaumond, Bentii, two hundred and fifty each: so that the muster-file, rotten and sound, upon my life, amounts not to fifteen thousand poll, half of the which dare not shake the snow from off their cassocks, lest they shake themselves to pieces.

BERTRAM. What shall be done to him?

1 LORD. Nothing, but let him have thanks. Demand of him my condition, and what credit I have with the duke.

INTERPRETER. Well, that's set down.
'You shall demand of him, whether one Captain Dumain be i'th' camp, a Frenchman: what his reputation is with the duke, what his valour, honesty, and expertness in wars; or whether he thinks it were not possible, with well-weighing sums of gold, to corrupt him to a revolt.'
What say you to this? what do you know of it?

PAROLLES. I beseech you, let me answer to the particular of the inter'gatories. Demand them singly.

INTERPRETER. Do you know this Captain Dumain?

PAROLLES. I know him, a' was a botcher's prentice in Paris, from whence he was whipped for getting the shrieve's fool with child—a dumb innocent, that could not say him nay.

BERTRAM. Nay, by your leave, hold your hands, though I know his brains are forfeit to the next tile that falls.

INTERPRETER. Well, is this captain in the Duke of Florence's camp?

PAROLLES. Upon my knowledge he is, and lousy.

1 LORD. Nay, look not so upon me; we shall hear of your lordship anon.

INTERPRETER. What is his reputation with the duke?

PAROLLES. The duke knows him for no other but a poor officer of mine, and writ to me this other day to turn him out o'th' band. I think I have his letter in my pocket.

INTERPRETER. Marry, we'll search.

PAROLLES. In good sadness, I do not know—either it is there, or it is upon a file with the duke's other letters in my tent.

INTERPRETER. Here 'tis, here's a paper, shall I read it to you?

PAROLLES. I do not know if it be it or no.

BERTRAM. Our interpreter does it well.

1 LORD. Excellently.

INTERPRETER [reads the paper]. 'Dian, the count's a fool, and full of gold'—

PAROLLES. That is not the duke's letter, sir; that is an advertisement to a proper maid in Florence, one Diana, to take heed of the allurement of one Count Rousillon, a foolish idle boy: but for all that very ruttish. I pray you, sir, put it up again.

INTERPRETER. Nay, I'll read it first, by your favour.

PAROLLES. My meaning in't, I protest, was very honest in the behalf of the maid: for I knew the young count to be a dangerous and lascivious boy, who is a whale to virginity, and devours up all the fry it finds.

BERTRAM. Damnable both-sides rogue!

INTERPRETER [reads]. 'When he swears oaths, bid him drop gold, and take it;
After he scores, he never pays the score:
Half won is match well made, match and well make it,
He ne'er pays after-debts, take it before.
And say a soldier, Dian, told thee this:
Men are to mell with, boys are but to kiss:
For count of this, the count's a fool, I know it,
Who pays before, but not when he does owe it.
Thine, as he vowed to thee in thine ear,
PAROLLES.'

BERTRAM. He shall be whipped through the army with this rhyme in's forehead.

2 LORD. This is your devoted friend, sir, the manifold linguist, and the armipotent soldier.

BERTRAM. I could endure any thing before but a cat, and now he's a cat to me.

INTERPRETER. I perceive, sir, by the general's looks, we shall be fain to hang you.

PAROLLES. My life, sir, in any case! not that I am afraid to die, but that my offences being many I would repent out the remainder of nature. Let me live, sir, in a dungeon, i'th' stocks, or any where, so I may live.

INTERPRETER. We'll see what may be done, so you confess freely; therefore, once more to this Captain Dumain: you have answered to his reputation with the duke and to his valour: what is his honesty?

PAROLLES. He will steal, sir, an egg out of a cloister: for rapes and ravishments he parallels Nessus. He professes not keeping of oaths, in breaking 'em he is stronger than Hercules. He will lie, sir, with such volubility, that you would think truth were a fool: drunkenness is his best virtue, for he will be swine-drunk, and in his sleep he does little harm, save to his bed-clothes about him; but they know his conditions and lay him in straw. I have but little more to say, sir, of his honesty—he has every thing that an honest man should not have; what an honest man should have, he has nothing.

1 LORD. I begin to love him for this.

BERTRAM. For this description of thine honesty? A pox upon him! For me, he's more and more a cat.

INTERPRETER. What say you to his expertness in war?

PAROLLES. Faith, sir, has led the drum before the English tragedians; to belie him, I will not, and more of his soldiership I know not, except in that country he had the honour to be the officer at a place there called Mile-end, to instruct for the doubling of files. I would do the man what honour I can, but of this I am not certain.

1 LORD. He hath out-villained villainy so far, that the rarity redeems him.

BERTRAM. A pox on him, he's a cat still.

INTERPRETER. His qualities being at this poor price, I need not to ask you, if gold will corrupt him to revolt.

PAROLLES. Sir, for a cardecue he will sell the fee-simple of his salvation, the inheritance of it; and cut th'entail from all remainders, and a perpetual succession for it perpetually.

INTERPRETER. What's his brother, the other Captain Dumain?

2 LORD. Why does he ask him of me?

INTERPRETER. What's he?

PAROLLES. E'en a crow o'th' same nest; not altogether so great as the first in goodness, but greater a great deal in evil. He excels his brother for a coward, yet his brother is reputed one of the best that is. In a retreat he outruns any lackey; marry, in coming on he has the cramp.

INTERPRETER. If your life be saved, will you undertake to betray the Florentine?

PAROLLES. Ay, and the captain of his horse, Count Rousillon.

INTERPRETER. I'll whisper with the general, and know his pleasure.

PAROLLES [aside]. I'll no more drumming, a plague of all drums. Only to seem to deserve well, and to beguile the supposition of that lascivious young boy, the count, have I run into this danger: yet, who would have suspected an ambush where I was taken?

INTERPRETER. There is no remedy, sir, but you must die: the general says, you that have so traitorously discovered the secrets of your army and made such pestiferous reports of men very nobly held, can serve the world for no honest use; therefore you must die. Come, headsman, off with his head.

PAROLLES. O Lord, sir, let me live, or let me see my death!

INTERPRETER. That shall you, and take your leave of all your friends ... He takes the scarf from his eyes So, look about you. Know you any here?

BERTRAM. Good morrow, noble captain.

2 LORD. God bless you, Captain Parolles.

1 LORD. God save you, noble captain.

2 LORD. Captain, what greeting will you to my Lord Lafeu? I am for France.

1 LORD. Good captain, will you give me a copy of the sonnet you writ to Diana in behalf of the Count Rousillon? an I were not a very coward, I'd compel it of you, but fare you well.

Bertram and the Lords go

INTERPRETER. You are undone, captain, all but your scarf—that has a knot on't yet.

PAROLLES. Who cannot be crushed with a plot?

INTERPRETER. If you could find out a country where but women were that had received so much shame, you might begin an impudent nation. Fare ye well, sir, I am for France too, we shall speak of you there.

He goes

PAROLLES. Yet am I thankful: if my heart were great,
'Twould burst at this ... Captain I'll be no more,
But I will eat and drink, and sleep as soft
As captain shall: simply the thing I am
Shall make me live. Who knows himself a braggart,
Let him fear this; for it will come to pass
That every braggart shall be found an ass.
Rust, sword! cool, blushes! and, Parolles, live
Safest in shame! being fooled, by foolery thrive!
There's place and means for every man alive.
I'll after them. He goes

Scene 4: The Widow's house at Florence

Enter Helena, Widow, and Diana

HELENA. That you may well perceive I have not wronged you,
One of the greatest in the Christian world
Shall be my surety: 'fore whose throne 'tis needful,
Ere I can perfect mine intents, to kneel.
Time was, I did him a desiréd office,
Dear almost as his life, which gratitude
Through flinty Tartar's bosom would peep forth,
And answer, thanks. I duly am informed
His grace is at Marseillës, to which place
We have convenient convoy ... You must know,
I am supposéd dead: the army breaking,
My husband hies him home, where, heaven aiding,
And by the leave of my good lord the king,
We'll be before our welcome.

WIDOW. Gentle madam,
You never had a servant to whose trust
Your business was more welcome.

HELENA. Nor you, mistress,
Ever a friend whose thoughts more truly labour
To recompense your love: doubt not but heaven
Hath brought me up to be your daughter's dower,
As it hath fated her to be my motive
And helper to a husband. But, O strange men,
That can such sweet use make of what they hate,
When saucy trusting of the cozened thoughts
Defiles the pitchy night! so lust doth play
With what it loathes, for that which is away.
But more of this hereafter ... You, Diana,
Under my poor instructions yet must suffer
Something in my behalf.

DIANA. Let death and honesty
Go with your impositions, I am yours
Upon your will to suffer.

HELENA. Yet, I pray you ...
But with the word, that time will bring on summer,
When briars shall have leaves as well as thorns,
And be as sweet as sharp ... We must away,
Our waggon is prepared, and time revives us.
'All's well that ends well,' still the fine's the crown;
Whate'er the course, the end is the renown.

They go

Scene 5: The palace of Rousillon

Enter Countess, Lafeu, and Clown

LAFEU. No, no, no, your son was misled with a snipt-taffeta fellow there, whose villainous saffron would have made all the unbaked and doughy youth of a nation in his colour: your daughter-in-law had been alive at this hour, and your son here at home, more advanced by the king than by that red-tailed humble-bee I speak of.

COUNTESS. I would I had not known him—it was the death of the most virtuous gentlewoman that ever nature had praise for creating. If she had partaken of my flesh, and cost me the dearest groans of a mother, I could not have owed her a more rooted love.

LAFEU. 'Twas a good lady, 'twas a good lady. We may pick a thousand salads ere we light on such another herb.

CLOWN. Indeed, sir, she was the sweet-marjoram of the salad, or rather, the herb of grace.

LAFEU. They are knot-herbs, you knave, they are nose-herbs.

CLOWN. I am no great Nebuchadnezzar, sir, I have not much skill in grass.

LAFEU. Whether dost thou profess thyself, a knave or a fool?

CLOWN. A fool, sir, at a woman's service, and a knave at a man's.

LAFEU. Your distinction?

CLOWN. I would cozen the man of his wife, and do his service.

LAFEU. So you were a knave at his service, indeed.

CLOWN. And I would give his wife my bauble, sir, to do her service.

LAFEU. I will subscribe for thee, thou art both knave and fool.

CLOWN. At your service.

LAFEU. No, no, no.

CLOWN. Why, sir, if I cannot serve you, I can serve as great a prince as you are.

LAFEU. Who's that? a Frenchman?

CLOWN. Faith, sir, a' has an English name, but his fisnamy is more hotter in France than there.

LAFEU. What prince is that?

CLOWN. The Black Prince, sir, alias the prince of darkness, alias the devil.

LAFEU. Hold thee, there's my purse. I give thee not this to suggest thee from thy master thou talk'st of—serve him still.

CLOWN. I am a woodland fellow, sir, that always loved a great fire, and the master I speak of ever keeps a good fire. But, sure, he is the prince of the world, let his nobility remain in's court. I am for the house with the narrow gate, which I take to be too little for pomp to enter: some that humble themselves may, but the many will be too chill and tender, and they'll be for the flowery way that leads to the broad gate and the great fire.

LAFEU. Go thy ways, I begin to aweary of thee, and I tell thee so before, because I would not fall out with thee. Go thy ways, let my horses be well looked to, without any tricks.

CLOWN. If I put any tricks upon 'em, sir, they shall be jades' tricks, which are their own right by the law of nature. He goes

LAFEU. A shrewd knave and an unhappy.

COUNTESS. So a' is. My lord that's gone made himself much sport out of him: by his authority he remains here, which he thinks is a patent for his sauciness, and indeed he has no pace, but runs where he will.

LAFEU. I like him well, 'tis not amiss.... And I was about to tell you, since I heard of the good lady's death and that my lord your son was upon his return home, I moved the king my master to speak in the behalf of my daughter—which, in the minority of them both, his majesty out of a self-gracious remembrance did first propose. His highness hath promised me to do it—and, to stop up the displeasure he hath conceived against your son, there is no fitter matter. How does your ladyship like it?

COUNTESS. With very much content, my lord, and I wish it happily effected.

LAFEU. His highness comes post from Marseilles, of as able body as when he numbered thirty—a' will be here to-morrow, or I am deceived by him that in such intelligence hath seldom failed.

COUNTESS. It rejoices me, that I hope I shall see him ere I die. I have letters that my son will be here to-night: I shall beseech your lordship to remain with me till they meet together.

LAFEU. Madam, I was thinking with what manners I might safely be admitted.

COUNTESS. You need but plead your honourable privilege.

LAFEU. Lady, of that I have made a bold charter, but I thank my God it holds yet.

Clown returns

CLOWN. O madam, yonder's my lord your son with a patch of velvet on's face—whether there be a scar under't or no, the velvet knows, but 'tis a goodly patch of velvet—his left cheek is a cheek of two pile and a half, but his right cheek is worn bare.

LAFEU. A scar nobly got, or a noble scar, is a good livery of honour—so belike is that.

CLOWN. But it is your carbonadoed face.

LAFEU. Let us go see your son, I pray you. I long to talk with the young noble soldier.

CLOWN. Faith, there's a dozen of 'em, with delicate fine hats and most courteous feathers, which bow the head, and nod at every man. They go

ACT 5

Scene 1: A street in Marseilles

Helena, Widow, and Diana, with two attendants

HELENA. But this exceeding posting day and night
Must wear your spirits low—we cannot help it:
But since you have made the days and nights as one,
To wear your gentle limbs in my affairs,
Be bold you do so grow in my requital
As nothing can unroot you.

Enter a gentle astringer

In happy time—
This man may help me to his majesty's ear,
If he would spend his power. God save you, sir.
GENTLEMAN. And you.
HELENA. Sir, I have seen you in the court of France.
GENTLEMAN. I have been sometimes there.
HELENA. I do presume, sir, that you are not fall'n
From the report that goes upon your goodness,
And therefore, goaded with most sharp occasions,
Which lay nice manners by, I put you to
The use of your own virtues, for the which
I shall continue thankful.
GENTLEMAN. What's your will?
HELENA. That it will please you
To give this poor petition to the king,
And aid me with that store of power you have
To come into his presence.
GENTLEMAN. The king's not here.
HELENA. Not here, sir!
GENTLEMAN. Not indeed,
He hence removed last night, and with more haste
Than is his use.
WIDOW. Lord, how we lose our pains!
HELENA. 'All's well that ends well' yet,
Though time seem so adverse and means unfit....
I do beseech you, whither is he gone?
GENTLEMAN. Marry, as I take it, to Rousillon,
Whither I am going.
HELENA. I do beseech you, sir,
Since you are like to see the king before me,
Commend the paper to his gracious hand,
Which I presume shall render you no blame
But rather make you thank your pains for it.
I will come after you with what good speed
Our means will make us means.
GENTLEMAN. This I'll do for you.
HELENA. And you shall find yourself to be well thanked,
Whate'er falls more. We must to horse again.
Go, go, provide. They go

Scene 2: In the park near the palace of Rousillon

Clown and Parolles

PAROLLES. Good Master Lavache, give my Lord Lafeu this letter. I have ere now, sir, been better known to you, when I have held familiarity with fresher clothes; but I am now, sir, muddied in fortune's mood, and smell somewhat strong of her strong displeasure.

CLOWN. Truly, fortune's displeasure is but sluttish, if it smell so strongly as thou speak'st of: I will henceforth eat no fish of fortune's butt'ring. Prithee, allow the wind.

PAROLLES. Nay, you need not to stop your nose, sir; I spake but by a metaphor.

CLOWN. Indeed, sir, if your metaphor stink, I will stop my nose, or against any man's metaphor. Prithee, get thee further.

PAROLLES. Pray you, sir, deliver me this paper.

CLOWN. Foh! prithee, stand away: a paper from fortune's close-stool to give to a nobleman! Look, here he comes himself.

Lafeu approaches

Here is a pur of fortune's, sir, or of fortune's cat—but not a musk-cat—that has fallen into the unclean fishpond of her displeasure, and, as he says, is muddied withal: pray you, sir, use the carp as you may, for he looks like a poor, decayed, ingenerous, foolish, rascally knave. I do pity his distress in my similes of comfort, and leave him to your lordship. He goes

PAROLLES. My lord, I am a man whom fortune hath cruelly scratched.

LAFEU. And what would you have me to do? 'tis too late to pare her nails now. Wherein have you played the knave with fortune, that she should scratch you, who of herself is a good lady and would not have knaves thrive long under her? There's a cardecue for you: let the justices make you and fortune friends; I am for other business.

PAROLLES. I beseech your honour to hear me one single word.

LAFEU. You beg a single penny more: come, you shall ha't—save your word.

PAROLLES. My name, my good lord, is Parolles.

LAFEU. You beg more than one word then. Cox my passion! give me your hand ... How does your drum?

PAROLLES. O my good lord, you were the first that found me.

LAFEU. Was I, in sooth? and I was the first that lost thee.

PAROLLES. It lies in you, my lord, to bring me in some grace, for you did bring me out.

LAFEU. Out upon thee, knave! dost thou put upon me at once both the office of God and the devil? one brings thee in grace and the other brings thee out. [trumpets sound] The king's coming, I know by his trumpets. Sirrah, inquire further after me. I had talk of you last night—though you are a fool and a knave, you shall eat. Go to, follow. He goes

PAROLLES. I praise God for you. He follows

Scene 3: The palace of Rousillon

Flourish. Enter King, Countess, Lafeu, lords, gentlemen, guards, etc.

KING. We lost a jewel of her, and our esteem
Was made much poorer by it: but your son,
As mad in folly, lacked the sense to know
Her estimation home.
COUNTESS. 'Tis past, my liege,
And I beseech your majesty to make it
Natural rebellion, done i'th' blaze of youth,
When oil and fire, too strong for reason's force,
O'erbears it and burns on.
KING. My honoured lady,
I have forgiven and forgotten all,
Though my revenges were high bent upon him,
And watched the time to shoot.
LAFEU. This I must say—
But first I beg my pardon—the young lord
Did to his majesty, his mother and his lady
Offence of mighty note; but to himself
The greatest wrong of all. He lost a wife
Whose beauty did astonish the survey
Of richest eyes, whose words all ears took captive,
Whose dear perfection hearts that scorned to serve
Humbly called mistress.
KING. Praising what is lost
Makes the remembrance dear. Well, call him hither—
We are reconciled, and the first view shall kill
All repetition: let him not ask our pardon,
The nature of his great offence is dead,
And deeper than oblivion we do bury
Th'incensing relics of it. Let him approach,
A stranger, no offender; and inform him
So 'tis our will he should.
GENTLEMAN. I shall, my liege.
He goes
KING. What says he to your daughter? have you spoke?
LAFEU. All that he is hath reference to your highness.
KING. Then shall we have a match. I have letters sent me,
That sets him high in fame.

Bertram enters

LAFEU. He looks well on't.
KING. I am not a day of season,
For thou mayst see a sunshine and a hail
In me at once: but to the brightest beams
Distracted clouds give way—so stand thou forth,
The time is fair again.
BERTRAM. My high-repented blames,
Dear sovereign pardon to me.
KING. All is whole,
Not one word more of the consuméd time.
Let's take the instant by the forward top:
For we are old, and on our quick'st decrees
Th'inaudible and noiseless foot of Time
Steals ere we can effect them. You remember
The daughter of this lord?
BERTRAM. Admiringly, my liege. At first
I stuck my choice upon her, ere my heart
Durst make too bold a herald of my tongue:
Where the impression of mine eye infixing,
Contempt his scornful perspective did lend me,
Which warped the line of every other favour,
Scorned a fair colour or expressed it stol'n,
Extended or contracted all proportions
To a most hideous object. Thence it came
That she whom all men praised and whom myself,
Since I have lost, have loved, was in mine eye
The dust that did offend it.
KING. Well excused:
That thou didst love her, strikes some scores away
From the great compt: but love that comes too late,
Like a remorseful pardon slowly carried,
To the great sender turns a sour offence,
Crying 'That's good that's gone' ... Our rash faults
Make trivial price of serious things we have,
Not knowing them, until we know their grave.
Oft our displeasures, to ourselves unjust,
Destroy our friends and after weep their dust:
Our own love waking cries to see what's done,
While shameful hate sleeps out the afternoon.
Be this sweet Helen's knell, and now forget her.
Send forth your amorous token for fair Maudlin.

The main consents are had, and here we'll stay
To see our widower's second marriage-day.
COUNTESS. Which better than the first, O dear heaven, bless!
Or, ere they meet, in me, O nature, cesse!
LAFEU. Come on, my son, in whom my house's name
Must be digested, give a favour from you,
To sparkle in the spirits of my daughter,
That she may quickly come.... [Bertram gives a ring]
By my old beard,
And every hair that's on't, Helen that's dead
Was a sweet creature: such a ring as this,
The last that e'er I took her leave at court,
I saw upon her finger.
BERTRAM. Hers it was not.
KING. Now pray you, let me see it; for mine eye,
While I was speaking, oft was fastened to't ...
This ring was mine, and when I gave it Helen
I bade her, if her fortunes ever stood
Necessitied to help, that by this token
I would relieve her. Had you that craft, to reave her
Of what should stead her most?
BERTRAM. My gracious sovereign,
Howe'er it pleases you to take it so,
The ring was never hers.
COUNTESS. Son, on my life,
I have seen her wear it, and she reckoned it
At her life's rate.
LAFEU. I am sure I saw her wear it.
BERTRAM. You are deceived, my lord, she never saw it:
In Florence was it from a casement thrown me,
Wrapped in a paper, which contained the name
Of her that threw it: noble she was, and thought
I stood ungaged: but when I had subscribed
To mine own fortune and informed her fully
I could not answer in that course of honour
As she had made the overture, she ceased
In heavy satisfaction and would never
Receive the ring again.
KING. Plutus himself,
That knows the tinct and multiplying med'cine,
Hath not in nature's mystery more science
Than I have in this ring. 'Twas mine, 'twas Helen's,
Whoever gave it you: then, if you know
That you are well acquainted with yourself,
Confess 'twas hers, and by what rough enforcement
You got it from her. She called the saints to surety,
That she would never put it from her finger,
Unless she gave it to yourself in bed—
Where you have never come—or sent it us
Upon her great disaster.
BERTRAM. She never saw it.
KING. Thou speak'st it falsely, as I love mine honour;
And mak'st conjectural fears to come into me,
Which I would fain shut out. If it should prove
That thou art so inhuman—'twill not prove so ...
And yet I know not—thou didst hate her deadly,
And she is dead, which nothing but to close
Her eyes myself could win me to believe,
More than to see this ring. Take him away.
Guards seize Bertram
My fore-past proofs, howe'er the matter fall,
Shall tax my fears of little vanity,
Having vainly feared too little. Away with him,
We'll sift this matter further.
BERTRAM. If you shall prove
This ring was ever hers, you shall as easy
Prove that I husbanded her bed in Florence,
Where yet she never was.
The guards lead him away
KING. I am wrapped in dismal thinkings.

A gentleman enters

GENTLEMAN. Gracious sovereign,
Whether I have been to blame or no, I know not,
Here's a petition from a Florentine,
Who hath for four or five removes come short
To tender it herself. I undertook it,
Vanquished thereto by the fair grace and speech
Of the poor suppliant, who by this I know
Is here attending: her business looks in her
With an importing visage, and she told me,
In a sweet verbal brief, it did concern
Your highness with herself.
KING [reads]. 'Upon his many protestations to marry me when his wife was dead, I blush to say it, he won me. Now is the Count Rousillon a widower, his vows are forfeited to me, and my honour's paid to him. He stole from Florence, taking no leave, and I follow him to his country for justice: grant it me, O king! in you it best lies, otherwise a seducer flourishes and a poor maid is undone.
DIANA CAPULET.'
LAFEU. I will buy me a son-in-law in a fair, and toll for this. I'll none of him.
KING. The heavens have thought well on thee, Lafeu,
To bring forth this discov'ry. Seek these suitors ...
The gentleman goes
Go, speedily and bring again the count.
Attendants go
I am afeard the life of Helen, lady,
Was foully snatched.
COUNTESS. Now, justice on the doers!

The guards return with Bertram

KING. I wonder, sir, sith wives are monsters to you,
And that you fly them as you swear them lordship,
Yet you desire to marry.

The gentleman returns with Widow and Diana

What woman's that?
DIANA. I am, my lord, a wretched Florentine,
Derivéd from the ancient Capulet.
My suit, as I do understand, you know,
And therefore know how far I may be pitied.
WIDOW. I am her mother, sir, whose age and honour
Both suffer under this complaint we bring,
And both shall cease, without your remedy.
KING. Come hither, count—do you know these women?
BERTRAM. My lord, I neither can nor will deny
But that I know them. Do they charge me further?
DIANA. Why do you look so strange upon your wife?
BERTRAM. She's none of mine, my lord.
DIANA. If you shall marry,
You give away this hand, and that is mine;
You give away heaven's vows, and those are mine;
You give away myself, which is known mine;
For I by vow am so embodied yours,
That she which marries you must marry me,
Either both or none.

LAFEU. Your reputation comes too short for my daughter, you are no husband for her.
BERTRAM. My lord, this is a fond and desp'rate creature,
Whom sometime I have laughed with: let your highness
Lay a more noble thought upon mine honour,
Than for to think that I would sink it here.
KING. Sir, for my thoughts, you have them ill to friend
Till your deeds gain them: fairer prove your honour
Than in my thought it lies.
DIANA. Good my lord,
Ask him upon his oath, if he does think
He had not my virginity.
KING. What say'st thou to her?
BERTRAM. She's impudent, my lord,
And was a common gamester to the camp.
DIANA. He does me wrong, my lord; if I were so,
He might have bought me at a common price.
Do not believe him. O, behold this ring,
Whose high respect and rich validity
Did lack a parallel; yet for all that
He gave it to a commoner o'th' camp,
If I be one.
COUNTESS. He blushes, and 'tis it!
Of six preceding ancestors, that gem,
Conferred by testament to th' sequent issue,
Hath it been owed and worn. This is his wife,
That ring's a thousand proofs.
KING. Methought you said
You saw one here in court could witness it.
DIANA. I did, my lord, but loath am to produce
So bad an instrument. His name's Parolles.
LAFEU. I saw the man to-day, if man he be.
KING. Find him, and bring him hither.
Lafeu goes out
BERTRAM. What of him?
He's quoted for a most perfidious slave,
With all the spots o'th' world taxed and deboshed;
Whose nature sickens but to speak a truth.
Am I or that or this for what he'll utter,
That will speak any thing?
KING. She hath that ring of yours.
BERTRAM. I think she has: certain it is I liked her,
And boarded her i'th' wanton way of youth:
She knew her distance, and did angle for me,
Madding my eagerness with her restraint—
As all impediments in fancy's course
Are motives of more fancy—and in fine
Her infinite cunning with her modern grace
Subdued me to her rate. She got the ring,
And I had that which any inferior might
At market-price have bought.
DIANA. I must be patient:
You that turned off a first so noble wife,
May justly diet me. I pray you yet—
Since you lack virtue I will lose a husband—
Send for your ring, I will return it home,
And give me mine again.
BERTRAM. I have it not.
KING. What ring was yours, I pray you?
DIANA. Sir, much like
The same upon your finger.
KING. Know you this ring? this ring was his of late.
DIANA. And this was it I gave him, being abed.
KING. The story then goes false, you threw it him
Out of a casement?
DIANA. I have spoke the truth.

Lafeu returns with Parolles

BERTRAM. My lord, I do confess, the ring was hers.
KING. You boggle shrewdly, every feather starts you...
Is this the man you speak of?
DIANA. Ay, my lord.
KING. Tell me, sirrah, but tell me true, I charge you,
Not fearing the displeasure of your master—
Which on your just proceeding I'll keep off—
By him and by this woman here what know you?
PAROLLES. So please your majesty, my master hath been an honourable gentleman: tricks he hath had in him, which gentlemen have.
KING. Come, come, to th' purpose: did he love this woman?
PAROLLES. Faith, sir, he did love her, but how?
KING. How, I pray you?
PAROLLES. He did love her, sir, as a gentleman loves a woman.
KING. How is that?
PAROLLES. He loved her, sir, and loved her not.
KING. As thou art a knave, and no knave. What an equivocal companion is this!
PAROLLES. I am a poor man, and at your majesty's command.
LAFEU. He's a good drum, my lord, but a naughty orator.
DIANA. Do you know he promised me marriage?
PAROLLES. Faith, I know more than I'll speak.
KING. But wilt thou not speak all thou know'st?
PAROLLES. Yes, so please your majesty ... I did go between them as I said—but more than that, he loved her, for indeed he was mad for her, and talked of Satan, and of Limbo, and of Furies, and I know not what: yet I was in that credit with them at that time, that I knew of their going to bed, and of other motions, as promising her marriage, and things which would derive me ill will to speak of—therefore I will not speak what I know.
KING. Thou hast spoken all already, unless thou canst say they are married. But thou art too fine in thy evidence, therefore stand aside....
This ring, you say, was yours?
DIANA. Ay, my good lord.
KING. Where did you buy it? or who gave it you?
DIANA. It was not given me, nor I did not buy it.
KING. Who lent it you?
DIANA. It was not lent me neither.
KING. Where did you find it then?
DIANA. I found it not.
KING. If it were yours by none of all these ways,
How could you give it him?
DIANA. I never gave it him.
LAFEU. This woman's an easy glove, my lord, she goes off and on at pleasure.
KING. This ring was mine, I gave it his first wife.
DIANA. It might be yours or hers, for aught I know.
KING. Take her away, I do not like her now,
To prison with her: and away with him.
Unless thou tell'st me where thou hadst this ring,
Thou diest within this hour.

DIANA. I'll never tell you.
KING. Take her away.
DIANA. I'll put in bail, my liege.
KING. I think thee now some common customer.
DIANA [to Lafeu]. By Jove, if ever I knew man, 'twas you.
KING. Wherefore hast thou accused him all this while?
DIANA. Because he's guilty, and he is not guilty:
He knows I am no maid, and he'll swear to't:
I'll swear I am a maid, and he knows not.
Great king, I am no strumpet, by my life,
I am either maid, or else this old man's wife.
KING. She does abuse our ears—to prison with her!
DIANA. Good mother, fetch my bail.... [Widow goes]
Stay, royal sir,
The jeweller that owes the ring is sent for,
And he shall surety me. But for this lord,
Who hath abused me, as he knows himself,
Though yet he never harmed me, here I quit him.
He knows himself my bed he hath defiled,
And at that time he got his wife with child:
Dead though she be, she feels her young one kick:
So there's my riddle—One that's dead is quick.
And now behold the meaning.

Widow returns with Helena

KING. Is there no exorcist
Beguiles the truer office of mine eyes?
Is't real that I see?
HELENA. No, my good lord,
'Tis but the shadow of a wife you see,
The name and not the thing.
BERTRAM [kneels]. Both, both. O, pardon!
HELENA. O, my good lord, when I was like this maid,
I found you wondrous kind. There is your ring,
And, look you, here's your letter: this it says,
'When from my finger you can get this ring,
And are by me with child,' &c. This is done.
Will you be mine, now you are doubly won?
BERTRAM. If she, my liege, can make me know this clearly,
I'll love her dearly, ever, ever dearly.
HELENA. If it appear not plain and prove untrue,
Deadly divorce step between me and you!
O, my dear mother, do I see you living?
LAFEU. Mine eyes smell onions, I shall weep anon: [to Parolles] Good Tom Drum, lend me a handkercher: so, I thank thee. Wait on me home, I'll make sport with thee: let thy curtsies alone, they are scurvy ones.
KING. Let us from point to point this story know,
To make the even truth in pleasure flow ...
[to Diana] If thou be'st yet a fresh uncroppéd flower,
Choose thou thy husband, and I'll pay thy dower,
For I can guess that by thy honest aid
Thou kept'st a wife herself, thyself a maid.
Of that and all the progress, more and less,
Resolvedly more leisure shall express:
All yet seems well, and if it end so meet,
The bitter past, more welcome is the sweet.

A flourish. The King advances to speak the Epilogue

EPILOGUE

The king's a beggar now the play is done.
All is well ended, if this suit be won,
That you express content; which we will pay,
With strife to please you, day exceeding day:
Ours be your patience then, and yours our parts,
Your gentle hands lend us, and take our hearts.

Twelfth Night, or What You Will

ACT 1

Scene 1: The Duke's palace

The Duke Orsino, Curio and Lords; musicians attending

DUKE. If music be the food of love, play on,
Give me excess of it; that, surfeiting,
The appetite may sicken, and so die....
That strain again! it had a dying fall:
O, it came o'er my ear like the sweet south
That breathes upon a bank of violets;
Stealing and giving odour.... Enough, no more!
'Tis not so sweet now as it was before.
O spirit of love, how quick and fresh art thou,
That, notwithstanding thy capacity
Receiveth as the sea, nought enters there,
Of what validity and pitch soe'er,
But falls into abatement and low price,
Even in a minute ... So full of shapes is fancy,
That it alone is high fantastical.
CURIO. Will you go hunt, my lord?
DUKE. What, Curio?
CURIO. The hart.
DUKE. Why, so I do, the noblest that I have:
O, when mine eyes did see Olivia first,
Methought she purged the air of pestilence;
That instant was I turned into a hart,
And my desires, like fell and cruel hounds,
E'er since pursue me....

Valentine enters

How now? what news from her?
VALENTINE. So please my lord, I might not be admitted,
But from her handmaid do return this answer:
The element itself, till seven years hence,
Shall not behold her face at ample view;
But like a cloistress she will veiléd walk,
And water once a day her chamber round
With eye-offending brine: all this to season
A brother's dead love, which she would keep fresh
And lasting, in her sad remembrance.
DUKE. O, she that hath a heart of that fine frame
To pay this debt of love but to a brother,
How will she love, when the rich golden shaft
Hath killed the flock of all affections else
That live in her; when liver, brain and heart,
These sovereign thrones, are all supplied and filled,
Her sweet perfections, with one self king!
Away before me to sweet beds of flowers—
Love-thoughts lie rich when canopied with bowers.
They go

Scene 2: Near the sea-coast

Enter Viola, Captain, and sailors

VIOLA. What country, friends, is this?
CAPTAIN. This is Illyria, lady.
VIOLA. And what should I do in Illyria?
My brother he is in Elysium.
Perchance he is not drowned: what think you, sailors?
CAPTAIN. It is perchance that you yourself were saved.
VIOLA. O my poor brother! and so perchance may he be.
CAPTAIN. True, madam, and to comfort you with chance,
Assure yourself, after our ship did split,
When you and those poor number saved with you
Hung on our driving boat ... I saw your brother,
Most provident in peril, bind himself—
Courage and hope both teaching him the practice—
To a strong mast that lived upon the sea;
Where, like Arion on the dolphin's back,
I saw him hold acquaintance with the waves
So long as I could see.
VIOLA. For saying so, there's gold:
Mine own escape unfoldeth to my hope,
Whereto thy speech serves for authority,
The like of him. Know'st thou this country?
CAPTAIN. Ay, madam, well, for I was bred and born
Not three hours' travel from this very place.
VIOLA. Who governs here?
CAPTAIN. A noble duke, in nature as in name.
VIOLA. What is his name?
CAPTAIN. Orsino.
VIOLA. Orsino: I have heard my father name him.
He was a bachelor then.
CAPTAIN. And so is now, or was so very late:
For but a month ago I went from hence,
And then 'twas fresh in murmur—as, you know,
What great ones do the less will prattle of—
That he did seek the love of fair Olivia.
VIOLA. What's she?
CAPTAIN. A virtuous maid, the daughter of a count
That died some twelvemonth since—then leaving her
In the protection of his son, her brother,
Who shortly also died: for whose dear love,
They say, she hath abjured the company
And sight of men.
VIOLA. O, that I served that lady,
And might not be delivered to the world,
Till I had made mine own occasion mellow,
What my estate is.
CAPTAIN. That were hard to compass,
Because she will admit no kind of suit,
No, not the duke's.
VIOLA. There is a fair behaviour in thee, captain,
And though that nature with a beauteous wall
Doth oft close in pollution, yet of thee
I will believe thou hast a mind that suits
With this thy fair and outward character.
I prithee, and I'll pay thee bounteously,
Conceal me what I am, and be my aid
For such disguise as haply shall become
The form of my intent. I'll serve this duke,
Thou shalt present me as an eunuch to him,
It may be worth thy pains: for I can sing,
And speak to him in many sorts of music,

That will allow me very worth his service.
What else may hap to time I will commit,
Only shape thou thy silence to my wit.

CAPTAIN. Be you his eunuch, and your mute I'll be,
When my tongue blabs, then let mine eyes not see!

VIOLA. I thank thee: lead me on. They go

Scene 3: Olivia's house

Enter Sir Toby Belch and Maria

SIR TOBY. What a plague means my niece, to take the death of her brother thus? I am sure care's an enemy to life.

MARIA. By my troth, Sir Toby, you must come in earlier o' nights: your cousin, my lady, takes great exceptions to your ill hours.

SIR TOBY. Why, let her except before excepted.

MARIA. Ay, but you must confine yourself within the modest limits of order.

SIR TOBY. Confine? I'll confine myself no finer than I am: these clothes are good enough to drink in, and so be these boots too: an they be not, let them hang themselves in their own straps.

MARIA. That quaffing and drinking will undo you: I heard my lady talk of it yesterday: and of a foolish knight, that you brought in one night here, to be her wooer.

SIR TOBY. Who? Sir Andrew Aguecheek?

MARIA. Ay, he.

SIR TOBY. He's as tall a man as any's in Illyria.

MARIA. What's that to th' purpose?

SIR TOBY. Why, he has three thousand ducats a year.

MARIA. Ay, but he'll have but a year in all these ducats; he's a very fool and a prodigal.

SIR TOBY. Fie, that you'll say so! he plays o'th' viol-de-gamboys, and speaks three or four languages word for word without book, and hath all the good gifts of nature.

MARIA. He hath, indeed almost natural: for, besides that he's a fool, he's a great quarreller: and but that he hath the gift of a coward to allay the gust he hath in quarrelling, 'tis thought among the prudent he would quickly have the gift of a grave.

SIR TOBY. By this hand, they are scoundrels and substractors that say so of him. Who are they?

MARIA. They that add, moreover, he's drunk nightly in your company.

SIR TOBY. With drinking healths to my niece: I'll drink to her as long as there is a passage in my throat and drink in Illyria: he's a coward and a coystrill that will not drink to my niece, till his brains turn o'th' toe like a parish-top.... [he seizes her about the waist and they dance a turn] What, wench! Castiliano vulgo; for here comes Sir Andrew Agueface.

Sir Andrew Aguecheek enters

SIR ANDREW. Sir Toby Belch! how now, Sir Toby Belch?

SIR TOBY. Sweet Sir Andrew!

SIR ANDREW. Bless you, fair shrew.

MARIA And you too, sir!

SIR TOBY. Accost, Sir Andrew, accost.

SIR ANDREW. What's that?

SIR TOBY. My niece's chambermaid.

SIR ANDREW. Good Mistress Accost, I desire better acquaintance.

MARIA. My name is Mary, sir.

SIR ANDREW. Good Mistress Mary Accost,—

SIR TOBY. You mistake, knight: 'accost' is front her, board her, woo her, assail her.

SIR ANDREW. By my troth, I would not undertake her in this company. Is that the meaning of 'accost'?

MARIA. Fare you well, gentlemen.

SIR TOBY. An thou let part so, Sir Andrew, would thou mightst never draw sword again.

SIR ANDREW. An you part so, mistress, I would I might never draw sword again... Fair lady, do you think you have fools in hand?

MARIA. Sir, I have not you by th'hand.

SIR ANDREW. Marry, but you shall have—and here's my hand.

MARIA. Now, sir, 'thought is free'... I pray you, bring your hand to th' buttery-bar, and let it drink.

SIR ANDREW. Wherefore, sweet-heart? what's your metaphor?

MARIA. It's dry, sir.

SIR ANDREW. Why, I think so; I am not such an ass, but I can keep my hand dry. But what's your jest?

MARIA. A dry jest, sir.

SIR ANDREW. Are you full of them?

MARIA. Ay, sir; I have them at my fingers' ends: marry, now I let go your hand, I am barren. She goes

SIR TOBY. O knight, thou lack'st a cup of canary: when did I see thee so put down?

SIR ANDREW. Never in your life, I think, unless you see canary put me down... Methinks sometimes I have no more wit than a Christian or an ordinary man has: but I am a great eater of beef and I believe that does harm to my wit.

SIR TOBY. No question.

SIR ANDREW. An I thought that, I'd forswear it. I'll ride home to-morrow, Sir Toby.

SIR TOBY. Pourquoi, my dear knight?

SIR ANDREW. What is 'pourquoi'? do or not do? I would I had bestowed that time in the tongues, that I have in fencing, dancing and bear-baiting: O, had I but followed the arts!

SIR TOBY. Then hadst thou had an excellent head of hair.

SIR ANDREW. Why, would that have mended my hair?

SIR TOBY. Past question, for thou seest it will not curl by nature.

SIR ANDREW. But it becomes me well enough, does't not?

SIR TOBY. Excellent! it hangs like flax on a distaff; and I hope to see a housewife take thee between her legs and spin it off.

SIR ANDREW. Faith, I'll home to-morrow, Sir Toby. Your niece will not be seen, or if she be it's four to one she'll none of me: the count himself here hard by woos her.

SIR TOBY. She'll none o'th' count—she'll not match above her degree, neither in estate, years, nor wit; I have heard her swear't. Tut, there's life in't, man.

SIR ANDREW. I'll stay a month longer.... I am a fellow o'th' strangest mind i'th' world: I delight in masques and revels sometimes altogether.

SIR TOBY. Art thou good at these kickshawses, knight?

SIR ANDREW. As any man in Illyria, whatsoever he be, under the degree of my betters, and yet I will not compare with an old man.

SIR TOBY. What is thy excellence in a galliard, knight?

SIR ANDREW. Faith, I can cut a caper.

SIR TOBY. And I can cut the mutton to't.

SIR ANDREW. And I think I have the back-trick simply as strong as any man in Illyria.

SIR TOBY. Wherefore are these things hid? wherefore have these gifts a curtain before 'em? are they like to take dust, like Mistress Mall's picture? why dost thou not go to church in a galliard and come home in a coranto? My very walk should be a jig; I would not so much as make water but in a sink-a-pace. What dost thou mean? Is it a world to hide virtues in? I did think, by the excellent constitution of thy leg, it was formed under the star of a galliard.

SIR ANDREW. Ay, 'tis strong, and it does indifferent well in a dun-coloured stock. Shall we set about some revels?

SIR TOBY. What shall we do else? were we not born under Taurus?

SIR ANDREW. Taurus! That's sides and heart.

SIR TOBY. No, sir, it is legs and thighs . . . Let me see thee caper. . . . Ha! higher: ha, ha! excellent!

They go

Scene 4: The Duke's palace

Enter Valentine, and Viola in man's attire

VALENTINE. If the duke continue these favours towards you, Cesario, you are like to be much advanced. He hath known you but three days, and already you are no stranger.

VIOLA. You either fear his humour or my negligence, that you call in question the continuance of his love. Is he inconstant, sir, in his favours?

VALENTINE. No, believe me.

VIOLA. I thank you. Here comes the count.

Enter Duke, Curio and attendants

DUKE. Who saw Cesario, ho!

VIOLA. On your attendance, my lord, here.

DUKE. Stand you awhile aloof. . . . Cesario,
Thou know'st no less but all: I have unclasped
To thee the book even of my secret soul.
Therefore, good youth, address thy gait unto her,
Be not denied access, stand at her doors,
And tell them, there thy fixéd foot shall grow
Till thou have audience.

VIOLA. Sure, my noble lord,
If she be so abandoned to her sorrow
As it is spoke, she never will admit me.

DUKE. Be clamorous and leap all civil bounds
Rather than make unprofited return.

VIOLA. Say I do speak with her, my lord, what then?

DUKE. O, then unfold the passion of my love,
Surprise her with discourse of my dear faith:
It shall become thee well to act my woes;
She will attend it better in thy youth
Than in a nuncio's of more grave aspect.

VIOLA. I think not so, my lord.

DUKE. Dear lad, believe it;
For they shall yet belie thy happy years,
That say thou art a man: Diana's lip
Is not more smooth and rubious; thy small pipe
Is as the maiden's organ, shrill and sound—
And all is semblative a woman's part.
I know thy constellation is right apt
For this affair . . . Some four or five attend him,
All if you will; for I myself am best
When least in company . . . Prosper well in this,
And thou shalt live as freely as thy lord,
To call his fortunes thine.

VIOLA. I'll do my best,
To woo your lady . . . [aside] Yet, a barful strife!
Whoe'er I woo, myself would be his wife.

They go

Scene 5: Olivia's house

Enter Maria and Clown

MARIA. Nay, either tell me where thou hast been, or I will not open my lips so wide as a bristle may enter in way of thy excuse: my lady will hang thee for thy absence.

CLOWN. Let her hang me: he that is well hanged in this world needs to fear no colours.

MARIA. Make that good.

CLOWN. He shall see none to fear.

MARIA. A good lenten answer: I can tell thee where that saying was born, of 'I fear no colours.'

CLOWN. Where, good Mistress Mary?

MARIA. In the wars—and that may you be bold to say in your foolery.

CLOWN. Well, God give them wisdom that have it; and those that are fools, let them use their talents.

MARIA. Yet you will be hanged for being so long absent; or to be turned away, is not that as good as a hanging to you?

CLOWN. Many a good hanging prevents a bad marriage; and, for turning away, let summer bear it out.

MARIA. You are resolute, then?

CLOWN. Not so neither, but I am resolved on two points—

MARIA. That if one break, the other will hold; or if both break, your gaskins fall.

CLOWN. Apt in good faith, very apt . . . [she turns to go] Well, go thy way—if Sir Toby would leave drinking, thou wert as witty a piece of Eve's flesh as any in Illyria.

MARIA. Peace, you rogue, no more o'that: here comes my lady: make your excuse wisely, you were best.

She goes

The Lady Olivia enters, Malvolio and attendants following

CLOWN. Wit, an't be thy will, put me into good fooling! Those wits that think they have thee, do very oft prove fools; and I, that am sure I lack thee, may pass for a wise man. For what says Quinapalus? 'Better a witty fool than a foolish wit.' God bless thee, lady!

OLIVIA. Take the fool away.

CLOWN. Do you not hear, fellows? Take away the lady.

OLIVIA. Go to, y'are a dry fool: I'll no more of you: besides, you grow dishonest.

CLOWN. Two faults, madonna, that drink and good counsel will amend: for give the dry fool drink, then is the fool not dry: bid the dishonest man mend himself; if he mend, he is no longer dishonest; if he cannot, let the botcher mend him: any thing that's mended is but patched: virtue that transgresses, is but patched with sin, and sin that amends is but patched with virtue. . . . If that this simple syllogism will serve, so: if it will not, what remedy? As there is no true cuckold but calamity, so beauty's a flower: the lady bade take away the fool, therefore I say again, take her away.

OLIVIA. Sir, I bade them take away you.

CLOWN. Misprision in the highest degree! Lady, 'Cucullus non facit monachum'; that's as much to say as I wear not motley in my brain ... Good madonna, give me leave to prove you a fool.

OLIVIA. Can you do it?

CLOWN. Dexteriously, good madonna.

OLIVIA. Make your proof.

CLOWN. I must catechize you for it, madonna. Good my mouse of virtue, answer me.

OLIVIA. Well, sir, for want of other idleness, I'll bide your proof.

CLOWN. Good madonna, why mourn'st thou?

OLIVIA. Good fool, for my brother's death.

CLOWN. I think his soul is in hell, madonna.

OLIVIA. I know his soul is in heaven, fool.

CLOWN. The more fool, madonna, to mourn for your brother's soul, being in heaven.... Take away the fool, gentlemen.

OLIVIA. What think you of this fool, Malvolio? doth he not mend?

MALVOLIO. Yes, and shall do, till the pangs of death shake him: infirmity, that decays the wise, doth ever make the better fool.

CLOWN. God send you, sir, a speedy infirmity, for the better increasing your folly! Sir Toby will be sworn that I am no fox, but he will not pass his word for two pence that you are no fool.

OLIVIA. How say you to that, Malvolio?

MALVOLIO. I marvel you ladyship takes delight in such a barren rascal: I saw him put down the other day with an ordinary fool that has no more brain than a stone. Look you now, he's out of his guard already; unless you laugh and minister occasion to him, he is gagged. I protest, I take these wise men, that crow so at these set kind of fools, no better than the fools' zanies.

OLIVIA. O, you are sick of self-love, Malvolio, and taste with a distempered appetite. To be generous, guiltless, and of free disposition, is to take those things for bird-bolts that you deem cannon-bullets: there is no slander in an allowed fool, though he do nothing but rail; nor no railing in a known discreet man, though he do nothing but reprove.

CLOWN. Now Mercury endue thee with leasing, for thou speakest well of fools!

Maria returns

MARIA. Madam, there is at the gate a young gentleman much desires to speak with you.

OLIVIA. From the Count Orsino, is it?

MARIA. I know not, madam—'tis a fair young man, and well attended.

OLIVIA. Who of my people hold him in delay?

MARIA. Sir Toby, madam, your kinsman.

OLIVIA. Fetch him off, I pray you! he speaks nothing but madman: fie on him.... [Maria goes] Go you, Malvolio: if it be a suit from the count, I am sick, or not at home ... what you will, to dismiss it. [Malvolio goes] Now you see, sir, how your fooling grows old, and people dislike it.

CLOWN. Thou hast spoke for us, madonna, as if thy eldest son should be a fool: whose skull Jove cram with brains! for—here he comes—one of thy kin, has a most weak pia mater.

Sir Toby Belch enters

OLIVIA. By mine honour, half drunk.... What is he at the gate, cousin?

SIR TOBY. A gentleman.

OLIVIA. A gentleman? What gentleman?

SIR TOBY. 'Tis a gentleman here ... A plague o'these pickle-herring.... How now, sot!

CLOWN. Good Sir Toby—

OLIVIA. Cousin, cousin, how have you come so early by this lethargy?

SIR TOBY. Lechery! I defy lechery ... There's one at the gate.

OLIVIA. Ay, marry, what is he?

SIR TOBY. Let him be the devil, an he will, I care not: give me 'faith,' say I.... Well, it's all one.
He goes

OLIVIA. What's a drunken man like, fool?

CLOWN. Like a drowned man, a fool, and a mad man: one draught above heat makes him a fool, the second mads him, and a third drowns him.

OLIVIA. Go thou and seek the crowner, and let him sit o' my coz; for he's in the third degree of drink: he's drowned: go look after him.

CLOWN. He is but mad yet, madonna, and the fool shall look to the madman. He follows Sir Toby

Malvolio returns

MALVOLIO. Madam, yon young fellow swears he will speak with you. I told him you were sick, he takes on him to understand so much, and therefore comes to speak with you. I told him you were asleep, he seems to have a foreknowledge of that too, and therefore comes to speak with you. What is to be said to him, lady? he's fortified against any denial.

OLIVIA. Tell him he shall not speak with me.

MALVOLIO. Has been told so; and he says he'll stand at your door like a sheriff's post, and be the supporter to a bench, but he'll speak with you.

OLIVIA. What kind o' man is he?

MALVOLIO. Why, of mankind.

OLIVIA. What manner of man?

MALVOLIO. Of very ill manner, he'll speak with you, will you, or no.

OLIVIA. Of what personage and years is he?

MALVOLIO. Not yet old enough for a man, nor young enough for a boy; as a squash is before 'tis a peascod, or a codling when 'tis almost an apple: 'tis with him in standing water between boy and man. He is very well-favoured and he speaks very shrewishly; one would think his mother's milk were scarce out of him.

OLIVIA. Let him approach ... Call in my gentlewoman.

MALVOLIO. Gentlewoman, my lady calls.
He departs

Maria returns

OLIVIA. Give me my veil: come, throw it o'er my face—
We'll once more hear Orsino's embassy.

Viola (as Cesario) enters

VIOLA. The honourable lady of the house, which is she?

OLIVIA. Speak to me, I shall answer for her: your will?

VIOLA. Most radiant, exquisite, and unmatchable beauty!—I pray you, tell me if this be the lady of the house, for I never saw her. I would be loath to cast away my speech; for besides that it is excellently well penned, I have taken great pains to con it. Good beauties, let me sustain no scorn; I am very comptible, even to the least sinister usage.

OLIVIA. Whence came you, sir?

VIOLA. I can say little more than I have studied, and that question's out of my part. Good gentle one, give me modest assurance if you be the lady of the house, that I may proceed in my speech.

OLIVIA. Are you a comedian?

VIOLA. No, my profound heart: and yet, by the very fangs of malice I swear, I am not that I play. Are you the lady of the house?

OLIVIA. If I do not usurp myself, I am.

VIOLA. Most certain, if you are she, you do usurp yourself; for what is yours to bestow, is not yours to reserve. But this is from my commission: I will on with my speech in your praise, and then show you the heart of my message.

OLIVIA. Come to what is important in't: I forgive you the praise.

VIOLA. Alas, I took great pains to study it, and 'tis poetical.

OLIVIA. It is the more like to be feigned, I pray you keep it in. I heard you were saucy at my gates, and allowed your approach rather to wonder at you than to hear you. If you be not mad, be gone; if you have reason, be brief: 'tis not that time of moon with me to make one in so skipping a dialogue.

MARIA. Will you hoist sail, sir? here lies your way.

VIOLA. No, good swabber; I am to hull here a little longer.... Some mollification for your giant, sweet lady!

OLIVIA. Tell me your mind.

VIOLA. I am a messenger.

OLIVIA. Sure, you have some hideous matter to deliver, when the courtesy of it is so fearful. Speak your office.

VIOLA. It alone concerns your ear. I bring no overture of war, no taxation of homage; I hold the olive in my hand: my words are as full of peace as matter.

OLIVIA. Yet you began rudely. What are you? what would you?

VIOLA. The rudeness that hath appeared in me have I learned from my entertainment. What I am, and what I would, are as secret as maidenhead: to your ears, divinity; to any other's, profanation.

OLIVIA. Give us the place alone: we will hear this divinity.... [Maria and attendants withdraw] Now, sir, what is your text?

VIOLA. Most sweet lady,—

OLIVIA. A comfortable doctrine, and much may be said of it. Where lies your text?

VIOLA. In Orsino's bosom.

OLIVIA. In his bosom! In what chapter of his bosom?

VIOLA. To answer by the method, in the first of his heart.

OLIVIA. O, I have read it; it is heresy. Have you no more to say?

VIOLA. Good madam, let me see your face.

OLIVIA. Have you any commission from your lord to negotiate with my face? you are now out of your text: but we will draw the curtain, and show you the picture.... [she unveils] Look you, sir, such a one I was—this present! Is't not well done?

VIOLA. Excellently done, if God did all.

OLIVIA. 'Tis in grain, sir, 'twill endure wind and weather.

VIOLA. 'Tis beauty truly blent, whose red and white
Nature's own sweet and cunning hand laid on:
Lady, you are the cruell'st she alive,
If you will lead these graces to the grave,
And leave the world no copy.

OLIVIA. O, sir, I will not be so hard-hearted; I will give out divers schedules of my beauty: it shall be inventoried, and every particle and utensil labelled to my will: as, Item, Two lips indifferent red; Item, Two grey eyes with lids to them; Item, One neck, one chin, and so forth. Were you sent hither to praise me?

VIOLA. I see you what you are, you are too proud;
But, if you were the devil, you are fair . . .
My lord and master loves you; O, such love
Could be but recompensed, though you were crowned
The nonpareil of beauty!

OLIVIA. How does he love me?

VIOLA. With adorations, fertile tears,
With groans that thunder love, with sighs of fire.

OLIVIA. Your lord does know my mind, I cannot love him:
Yet I suppose him virtuous, know him noble,
Of great estate, of fresh and stainless youth;
In voices well divulged, free, learned and valiant,
And in dimension and the shape of nature
A gracious person: but yet I cannot love him;
He might have took his answer long ago.

VIOLA. If I did love you in my master's flame,
With such a suff'ring, such a deadly life,
In your denial I would find no sense,
I would not understand it.

OLIVIA. Why, what would you?

VIOLA. Make me a willow cabin at your gate,
And call upon my soul within the house,
Write loyal cantons of contemnéd love,
And sing them loud even in the dead of night;
Holla your name to the reverberate hills,
And make the babbling gossip of the air
Cry out 'Olivia!' O, you should not rest
Between the elements of air and earth,
But you should pity me.

OLIVIA. You might do much:
What is your parentage?

VIOLA. Above my fortunes, yet my state is well:
I am a gentleman.

OLIVIA. Get you to your lord;
I cannot love him: let him send no more,
Unless—perchance—you come to me again,
To tell me how he takes it . . . Fare you well:
I thank you for your pains: spend this for me.

VIOLA. I am no fee'd post, lady; keep your purse.
My master, not myself, lacks recompense.
Love make his heart of flint that you shall love,
And let your fervour like my master's be Placed in contempt! Farewell, fair cruelty.

She goes

OLIVIA. 'What is your parentage?'
'Above my fortunes, yet my state is well:
I am a gentleman'.... I'll be sworn thou art!
Thy tongue, thy face, thy limbs, actions, and spirit,
Do give thee five-fold blazon ... Not too fast: soft! soft!
Unless the master were the man ... How now!
Even so quickly may one catch the plague?
Methinks I feel this youth's perfections
With an invisible and subtle stealth
To creep in at mine eyes.... Well, let it be....
What, ho, Malvolio!

Malvolio returns

MALVOLIO. Here, madam, at your service.
OLIVIA. Run after that same peevish messenger,
The county's man: he left this ring behind him,
Would I or not; tell him I'll none of it.
Desire him not to flatter with his lord,
Nor hold him up with hopes—I am not for him:
If that the youth will come this way to-morrow,
I'll give him reasons for't ... Hie thee, Malvolio.
MALVOLIO. Madam, I will. He goes
OLIVIA. I do I know not what, and fear to find
Mine eye too great a flatterer for my mind ...
Fate, show thy force—ourselves we do not owe—
What is decreed, must be; and be this so!
She goes

ACT 2

Scene 1: Antonio's house

Antonio and Sebastian

ANTONIO. Will you stay no longer? nor will you not that I go with you?

SEBASTIAN. By your patience, no: my stars shine darkly over me; the malignancy of my fate might perhaps distemper yours; therefore I shall crave of you your leave that I may bear my evils alone: it were a bad recompense for your love, to lay any of them on you.

ANTONIO. Let me yet know of you whither you are bound.

SEBASTIAN. No, sooth, sir: my determinate voyage is mere extravagancy. But I perceive in you so excellent a touch of modesty, that you will not extort from me what I am willing to keep in; therefore it charges me in manners the rather to express myself ... You must know of me then, Antonio, my name is Sebastian, which I called Roderigo. My father was that Sebastian of Messaline, whom I know you have heard of. He left behind him myself and a sister, both born in an hour: if the heavens had been pleased, would we had so ended! But you, sir, altered that, for some hour before you took me from the breach of the sea was my sister drowned.

ANTONIO. Alas, the day!

SEBASTIAN. A lady, sir, though it was said she much resembled me, was yet of many accounted beautiful: but, though I could not with such estimable wonder overfar believe that, yet thus far I will boldly publish her—she bore a mind that envy could not but call fair ... She is drowned already, sir, with salt water, though I seem to drown her remembrance again with more.

ANTONIO. Pardon me, sir, your bad entertainment.

SEBASTIAN. O, good Antonio, forgive me your trouble.

ANTONIO. If you will not murder me for my love, let me be your servant.

SEBASTIAN. If you will not undo what you have done, that is, kill him whom you have recovered, desire it not. Fare ye well at once. My bosom is full of kindness, and I am yet so near the manners of my mother, that upon the least occasion more mine eyes will tell tales of me ... I am bound to the Count Orsino's court—farewell! He goes

ANTONIO. The gentleness of all the gods go with thee!
I have many enemies in Orsino's court,
Else would I very shortly see thee there:
But, come what may, I do adore thee so,
That danger shall seem sport, and I will go.

Scene 2: A street near Olivia's house

Viola approaches, Malvolio following after

MALVOLIO. Were not you e'en now with the Countess Olivia?

VIOLA. Even now, sir. On a moderate pace I have since arrived but hither.

MALVOLIO. She returns this ring to you, sir; you might have saved me my pains, to have taken it away yourself. She adds moreover, that you should put your lord into a desperate assurance she will none of him: and one thing more, that you be never so hardy to come again in his affairs, unless it be to report your lord's taking of this ... Receive it so.

VIOLA. She took the ring of me ... I'll none of it.

MALVOLIO. Come, sir, you peevishly threw it to her; and her will is, it should be so returned: if it be worth stooping for, there it lies in your eye; if not, be it his that finds it. He goes

VIOLA. I left no ring with her: what means this lady?
Fortune forbid my outside have not charmed her!
She made good view of me, indeed so much,
That as methought her eyes had lost her tongue,
For she did speak in starts distractedly....
She loves me, sure—the cunning of her passion
Invites me in this churlish messenger ...
None of my lord's ring! why, he sent her none ...
I am the man—if it be so, as 'tis,
Poor lady, she were better love a dream ...
Disguise, I see thou art a wickedness,
Wherein the pregnant enemy does much.
How easy is it for the proper-false
In women's waxen hearts to set their forms!
Alas, our frailty is the cause, not we,
For such as we are made of, such we be ...
How will this fadge? My master loves her dearly,
And I (poor monster!) fond as much on him:
And she, mistaken, seems to dote on me:
What will become of this? As I am man,
My state is desperate for my master's love;
As I am woman—now alas the day!—
What thriftless sighs shall poor Olivia breathe?
O time, thou must untangle this, not I,
It is too hard a knot for me t'untie. She goes

Scene 3: Olivia's house

Enter Sir Toby Belch and Sir Andrew Aguecheek

SIR TOBY. Approach, Sir Andrew: not to be a-bed after midnight is to be up betimes; and 'diluculo surgere,' thou know'st,—

SIR ANDREW. Nay, by my troth, I know not: but I know, to be up late is to be up late.

SIR TOBY. A false conclusion: I hate it as an unfilled can. To be up after midnight and to go to bed then, is early; so that to go to bed after midnight is to go to bed betimes. Does not our life consist of the four elements?

SIR ANDREW. Faith, so they say—but I think it rather consists of eating and drinking.

SIR TOBY. Th'art a scholar; let us therefore eat and drink. Marian, I say! a stoup of wine!

The Clown comes in

SIR ANDREW. Here comes the fool, i'faith.

CLOWN. How now, my hearts! Did you never see the picture of 'we three'?

SIR TOBY. Welcome, ass. Now let's have a catch.

SIR ANDREW. By my troth, the fool has an excellent breast. I had rather than forty shillings I had such a leg, and so sweet a breath to sing, as the fool has. In sooth, thou wast in very gracious fooling last night, when thou spok'st of Pigrogromitus, of the Vapians passing the equinoctial of Queubus; 'twas very good, i'faith ... I sent thee sixpence for thy leman—hadst it?

CLOWN. I did impetticoat thy gratillity: for Malvolio's nose is no whipstock: my lady has a white hand, and the Myrmidons are no bottle-ale houses.

SIR ANDREW. Excellent! why, this is the best fooling, when all is done. Now, a song.

SIR TOBY. Come on, there is sixpence for you. Let's have a song.

SIR ANDREW. There's a testril of me too: if one knight give a—

CLOWN. Would you have a love-song, or a song of good life?

SIR TOBY. A love-song, a love-song.

SIR ANDREW. Ay, ay. I care not for good life.

CLOWN [sings].

O mistress mine, where are you roaming?
O, stay and hear, your true love's coming,
That can sing both high and low.
Trip no further pretty sweeting:
Journeys end in lovers meeting,
Every wise man's son doth know.

SIR ANDREW. Excellent good, i'faith!

SIR TOBY. Good, good.

CLOWN [sings].

What is love, 'tis not hereafter,
Present mirth hath present laughter:
What's to come is still unsure.
In delay there lies no plenty,
Then come kiss me, sweet and twenty:
Youth's a stuff will not endure.

SIR ANDREW. A mellifluous voice, as I am true knight.

SIR TOBY. A contagious breath.

SIR ANDREW. Very sweet and contagious, i'faith.

SIR TOBY. To hear by the nose, it is dulcet in contagion.... But shall we make the welkin dance indeed? Shall we rouse the night-owl in a catch, that will draw three souls out of one weaver? shall we do that?

SIR ANDREW. An you love me, let's do't: I am dog at a catch.

CLOWN. By'r lady, sir, and some dogs will catch well.

SIR ANDREW. Most certain ... Let our catch be, 'Thou knave.'

CLOWN. 'Hold thy peace, thou knave,' knight? I shall be constrained in't to call thee knave, knight.

SIR ANDREW. 'Tis not the first time I have constrained one to call me knave. Begin, fool; it begins, 'Hold thy peace.'

CLOWN. I shall never begin if I hold my peace.

SIR ANDREW. Good, i'faith! Come, begin.

They sing the catch

Maria enters

MARIA. What a caterwauling do you keep here! If my lady have not called up her steward Malvolio and bid him turn you out of doors, never trust me.

SIR TOBY. 'My lady''s a Cataian, we are politicians,
Malvolio's a Peg-a-Ramsey, and [sings] 'Three merry men be we.'
Am not I consanguineous? am I not of her blood?
Tillyvally! 'lady'!
[sings] 'There dwelt a man in Babylon,
Lady, lady!'

CLOWN. Beshrew me, the knight's in admirable fooling.

SIR ANDREW. Ay, he does well enough, if he be disposed, and so do I too; he does it with a better grace, but I do it more natural.

SIR TOBY [sings]. 'O' the twelfth day of December,'—

MARIA. For the love o' God, peace.

Malvolio enters

MALVOLIO. My masters, are you mad? or what are you? Have you no wit, manners, nor honesty, but to gabble like tinkers at this time of night? Do ye make an ale-house of my lady's house, that ye squeak out your coziers' catches without any mitigation or remorse of voice? Is there no respect of place, persons, nor time in you?

SIR TOBY. We did keep time, sir, in our catches. Sneck up!

MALVOLIO. Sir Toby, I must be round with you. My lady bade me tell you, that, though she harbours you as her kinsman, she's nothing allied to your disorders. If you can separate yourself and your misdemeanours, you are welcome to the house; if not, an it would please you to take leave of her, she is very willing to bid you farewell.

SIR TOBY [sings]. Farewell, dear heart, since I must needs be gone.'

MARIA. Nay, good Sir Toby.

CLOWN [sings]. 'His eyes do show his days are almost done.'

MALVOLIO. Is't even so?

SIR TOBY [sings]. 'But I will never die.'

CLOWN [sings]. Sir Toby, there you lie.

MALVOLIO. This is much credit to you.

SIR TOBY [sings]. 'Shall I bid him go?'

CLOWN [sings]. 'What an if you do?'

SIR TOBY [sings]. 'Shall I bid him go, and spare not?'

CLOWN [sings]. 'O no, no, no, no, you dare not.'

SIR TOBY [to Clown]. Out o' tune, sir! ye lie ... [to Malvolio] Art any more than a steward? Dost thou think because thou art virtuous, there shall be no more cakes and ale?

CLOWN. Yes, by Saint Anne, and ginger shall be hot i'th' mouth too.

SIR TOBY. Th'art i'th' right.... Go, sir, rub your chain with crumbs.... A stoup of wine, Maria!

MALVOLIO. Mistress Mary, if you prized my lady's favour at any thing more than contempt, you would not give means for this uncivil rule; she shall know of it, by this hand. He departs

MARIA. Go shake your ears.

SIR ANDREW. 'Twere as good a deed as to drink when a man's a-hungry, to challenge him the field, and then to break promise with him and make a fool of him.

SIR TOBY. Do't, knight. I'll write thee a challenge; or I'll deliver thy indignation to him by word of mouth.

MARIA. Sweet Sir Toby, be patient for to-night: since the youth of the count's was to-day with my lady, she is much out of quiet. For Monsieur Malvolio, let me alone with him: if I do not gull him into a nayword, and make him a common recreation, do not think I have wit enough to lie straight in my bed: I know I can do it.

SIR TOBY. Possess us, possess us, tell us something of him.

MARIA. Marry, sir, sometimes he is a kind of puritan.

SIR ANDREW. O, if I thought that, I'd beat him like a dog.

SIR TOBY. What, for being a puritan? thy exquisite reason, dear knight?

SIR ANDREW. I have no exquisite reason for't, but I have reason good enough.

MARIA. The devil a puritan that he is, or any thing constantly but a time-pleaser, an affectioned ass, that cons state without book and utters it by great swarths: the best persuaded of himself, so crammed, as he thinks, with excellencies, that it is his ground of faith that all that look on him love him; and on that vice in him will my revenge find notable cause to work.

SIR TOBY. What wilt thou do?

MARIA. I will drop in his way some obscure epistles of love, wherein by the colour of his beard, the shape of his leg, the manner of his gait, the expressure of his eye, forehead, and complexion, he shall find himself most feelingly personated. I can write very like my lady your niece, on a forgotten matter we can hardly make distinction of our hands.

SIR TOBY. Excellent! I smell a device.

SIR ANDREW. I have't in my nose too.

SIR TOBY. He shall think by the letters that thou wilt drop that they come from my niece, and that she's in love with him.

MARIA. My purpose is, indeed, a horse of that colour.

SIR ANDREW. And your horse now would make him an ass.

MARIA. Ass, I doubt not.

SIR ANDREW. O, 'twill be admirable.

MARIA. Sport royal, I warrant you: I know my physic will work with him. I will plant you two, and let the fool make a third, where he shall find the letter: observe his construction of it ... For this night, to bed, and dream on the event ... Farewell. She goes

SIR TOBY. Good night, Penthesilea.

SIR ANDREW. Before me, she's a good wench.

SIR TOBY. She's a beagle, true-bred, and one that adores me ... what o' that?

SIR ANDREW. I was adored once too.

SIR TOBY. Let's to bed, knight.... Thou hadst need send for more money.

SIR ANDREW. If I cannot recover your niece, I am a foul way out.

SIR TOBY. Send for money knight, if thou hast her not i'th'end, call me cut.

SIR ANDREW. If I do not, never trust me, take it how you will.

SIR TOBY. Come, come, I'll go burn some sack, 'tis too late to go to bed now: come knight; come knight. They go

Scene 4: The Duke's palace

Enter Duke, Viola, Curio and others

DUKE. Give me some music ... Now—good morrow, friends....
Now, good Cesario, but that piece of song,
That old and antic song we heard last night:
Methought it did relieve my passion much,
More than light airs and recollected terms
Of these most brisk and giddy-pacéd times.
Come, but one verse.

CURIO. He is not here, so please your lordship, that should sing it.

DUKE. Who was it?

CURIO. Feste, the jester, my lord, a fool that the Lady Olivia's father took much delight in. He is about the house.

DUKE. Seek him out, and play the tune the while.
Curio goes; music plays
Come hither, boy—if ever thou shalt love,
In the sweet pangs of it remember me:
For, such as I am all true lovers are,
Unstaid and skittish in all motions else,
Save in the constant image of the creature
That is beloved.... How dost thou like this tune?

VIOLA. It gives a very echo to the seat
Where Love is throned.

DUKE. Thou dost speak masterly.
My life upon't, young though thou art, thine eye
Hath stayed upon some favour that it loves:
Hath it not, boy?

VIOLA. A little, by your favour.

DUKE. What kind of woman is't?

VIOLA. Of your complexion.

DUKE. She is not worth thee then. What years, i'faith?

VIOLA. About your years, my lord.

DUKE. Too old, by heaven: let still the woman take
An elder than herself; so wears she to him,
So sways she level in her husband's heart:
For, boy, however we do praise ourselves,
Our fancies are more giddy and unfirm,
More longing, wavering, sooner lost and won,
Than women's are.

VIOLA. I think it well, my lord.

DUKE. Then let thy love be younger than thyself,
Or thy affection cannot hold the bent:
For women are as roses, whose fair flower
Being once displayed doth fall that very hour.

VIOLA. And so they are: alas, that they are so;
To die, even when they to perfection grow!

Curio re-enters with Clown

DUKE. O fellow, come, the song we had last night . . .
Mark it, Cesario, it is old and plain:
The spinsters and the knitters in the sun,
And the free maids that weave their thread with bones
Do use to chant it; it is silly sooth,
And dallies with the innocence of love,
Like the old age.

CLOWN. Are you ready, sir?

DUKE. Ay, prithee, sing. Music

CLOWN [sings].
Come away, come away death,
And in sad cypress let me be laid:
Fly away, fly away breath,
I am slain by a fair cruel maid:
My shroud of white, stuck all with yew,
O, prepare it!
My part of death no one so true
Did share it.
Not a flower, not a flower sweet
On my black coffin let there be strown:
Not a friend, not a friend greet
My poor corpse, where my bones shall be thrown:
A thousand thousand sighs to save,
Lay me O where
Sad true lover never find my grave,
To weep there.

DUKE. There's for thy pains.

CLOWN. No pains, sir, I take pleasure in singing, sir.

DUKE. I'll pay thy pleasure then.

CLOWN. Truly, sir, and pleasure will be paid, one time or another.

DUKE. Give me now leave to leave thee.

CLOWN. Now, the melancholy god protect thee, and the tailor make thy doublet of changeable taffeta, for thy mind is a very opal. I would have men of such constancy put to sea, that their business might be every thing and their intent every where, for that's it that always makes a good voyage of nothing. . . . Farewell. He goes

DUKE. Let all the rest give place . . .
Curio and attendants depart
Once more, Cesario,
Get thee to yon same sovereign cruelty:
Tell her, my love, more noble than the world,
Prizes not quantity of dirty lands;
The parts that fortune hath bestowed upon her,
Tell her, I hold as giddily as fortune;
But 'tis that miracle and queen of gems
That nature pranks her in attracts my soul.

VIOLA. But if she cannot love you, sir?

DUKE. I cannot be so answered.

VIOLA. Sooth, but you must.
Say that some lady, as perhaps there is,
Hath for your love as great a pang of heart
As you have for Olivia: you cannot love her;
You tell her so; must she not then be answered?

DUKE. There is no woman's sides
Can bide the beating of so strong a passion
As love doth give my heart: no woman's heart
So big, to hold so much, they lack retention.
Alas, their love may be called appetite—
No motion of the liver, but the palate—
That suffers surfeit, cloyment and revolt;
But mine is all as hungry as the sea,
And can digest as much. Make no compare
Between that love a woman can bear me
And that I owe Olivia.

VIOLA. Ay, but I know—

DUKE. What dost thou know?

VIOLA. Too well what love women to men may owe:
In faith they are as true of heart as we.
My father had a daughter loved a man,
As it might be, perhaps, were I a woman,
I should your lordship.

DUKE. And what's her history?

VIOLA. A blank, my lord: she never told her love,
But let concealment like a worm i'th' bud
Feed on her damask cheek: she pined in thought,
And with a green and yellow melancholy
She sat like Patience on a monument,
Smiling at grief. Was not this love, indeed?
We men may say more, swear more—but indeed
Our shows are more than will; for still we prove
Much in our vows, but little in our love.

DUKE. But died thy sister of her love, my boy?

VIOLA. I am all the daughters of my father's house,
And all the brothers too . . . and yet I know not. . . .
Sir, shall I to this lady?

DUKE. Ay, that's the theme.
To her in haste; give her this jewel; say,
My love can give no place, bide no denay.
They go

Scene 5: A garden adjoining the house of Olivia

Enter Sir Toby Belch with Sir Andrew Aguecheek

SIR TOBY. Come thy ways, Signior Fabian.

FABIAN. Nay, I'll come: if I lose a scruple of this sport, let me be boiled to death with melancholy.

SIR TOBY. Wouldst thou not be glad to have the niggardly rascally sheep-biter come by some notable shame?

FABIAN. I would exult, man: you know, he brought me out o'favour with my lady about a bear-baiting here.

SIR TOBY. To anger him, we'll have the bear again, and we will fool him black and blue—shall we not, Sir Andrew?

SIR ANDREW. An we do not, it is pity of our lives.

Maria appears

SIR TOBY. Here comes the little villain . . . How now, my metal of India?

MARIA. Get ye all three into the box-tree: Malvolio's coming down this walk, he has been yonder i'the sun practising behaviour to his own shadow this half hour: observe him, for the love of mockery; for I know this letter will make a contemplative idiot of him. Close, in the name of jesting! [the men hide in a box-tree] Lie thou there [throws down a letter] . . . for here comes the trout that must be caught with tickling. She goes within

Malvolio enters

MALVOLIO. 'Tis but fortune, all is fortune. . . . Maria once told me she did affect me, and I have heard herself come thus near, that should she fancy it should be one of my complexion. . . . Besides, she uses me with a more exalted respect than any one else that follows her.... What should I think on't?

SIR TOBY. Here's an overweening rogue!

FABIAN. O, peace! Contemplation makes a rare turkey-cock of him. How he jets under his advanced plumes!

SIR ANDREW. 'Slight, I could so beat the rogue!

FABIAN. Peace, I say.

MALVOLIO. To be Count Malvolio!

SIR TOBY. Ah, rogue!

SIR ANDREW. Pistol him, pistol him.

FABIAN. Peace, peace!

MALVOLIO. There is example for't; the lady of the Strachy married the yeoman of the wardrobe.

SIR ANDREW. Fie on him, Jezebel!

FABIAN. O, peace! now he's deeply in: look, how imagination blows him.

MALVOLIO. Having been three months married to her, sitting in my state—

SIR TOBY. O, for a stone-bow, to hit him in the eye!

MALVOLIO. Calling my officers about me, in my branched velvet gown; having come from a day-bed, where I have left Olivia sleeping—

SIR TOBY. Fire and brimstone!

FABIAN. O, peace, peace!

MALVOLIO. And then to have the humour of state: and after a demure travel of regard, telling them I know my place as I would they should do theirs, to ask for my kinsman Toby—

SIR TOBY. Bolts and shackles!

FABIAN. O, peace, peace, peace! now, now.

MALVOLIO. Seven of my people, with an obedient start, make out for him: I frown the while, and perchance wind up my watch, or play with my—some rich jewel ... Toby approaches; curtsies there to me—

SIR TOBY. Shall this fellow live?

FABIAN. Though our silence be drawn from us with cars, yet peace.

MALVOLIO. I extend my hand to him thus; quenching my familiar smile with an austere regard of control—

SIR TOBY. And does not 'Toby' take you a blow o'the lips then?

MALVOLIO. Saying, 'Cousin Toby, my fortunes having cast me on your niece give me this prerogative of speech'—

SIR TOBY. What, what?

MALVOLIO. 'You must amend your drunkenness.'

SIR TOBY. Out, scab!

FABIAN. Nay, patience, or we break the sinews of our plot.

MALVOLIO. 'Besides, you waste the treasure of your time with a foolish knight'—

SIR ANDREW. That's me, I warrant you.

MALVOLIO. 'One Sir Andrew'—

SIR ANDREW. I knew 'twas I, for many do call me fool.

MALVOLIO [takes up the letter]. What employment have we here?

FABIAN. Now is the woodcock near the gin.

SIR TOBY. O, peace! and the spirit of humours intimate reading aloud to him!

MALVOLIO. By my life, this is my lady's hand: these be her very c's, her u's, and her t's, and thus makes she her great P's. It is, in contempt of question, her hand.

SIR ANDREW. Her c's, her u's, and her t's: why that?

MALVOLIO [reads]. 'To the unknown beloved, this, and my good wishes' ... her very phrases! By your leave, wax. Soft!—and the impressure her Lucrece, with which she uses to seal: 'tis my lady ... To whom should this be?

FABIAN. This wins him, liver and all.

MALVOLIO [reads]. 'Jove knows I love:
But who?
Lips, do not move!
No man must know.'

'No man must know'.... What follows? the numbers altered ... 'No man must know'—if this should be thee, Malvolio!

SIR TOBY. Marry, hang thee, brock!

MALVOLIO [reads].
'I may command where I adore:
But silence, like a Lucrece knife,
With bloodless stroke my heart doth gore:
M, O, A, I, doth sway my life.'

FABIAN. A fustian riddle!

SIR TOBY. Excellent wench, say I.

MALVOLIO. 'M, O, A, I, doth sway my life.'—Nay, but first, let me see, let me see, let me see.

FABIAN. What dish o' poison has she dressed him!

SIR TOBY. And with what wing the stallion checks at it!

MALVOLIO. 'I may command where I adore' ... Why, she may command me; I serve her, she is my lady.... Why, this is evident to any formal capacity. There is no obstruction in this. And the end: what should that alphabetical position portend? If I could make that resemble something in me! Softly! 'M, O, A, I,'—

SIR TOBY. O, ay, make up that—he is now at a cold scent.

FABIAN. Sowter will cry upon't for all this, though it be as rank as a fox.

MALVOLIO. 'M,'—Malvolio—'M,'—why, that begins my name.

FABIAN. Did not I say he would work it out? the cur is excellent at faults.

MALVOLIO. 'M'—but then there is no consonancy in the sequel that suffers under probation: 'A' should follow, but 'O' does.

FABIAN. And O shall end, I hope.

SIR TOBY. Ay, or I'll cudgel him, and make him cry 'O!'

MALVOLIO. And then 'I' comes behind.

FABIAN. Ay, an you had any eye behind you, you might see more detraction at your heels, than fortunes before you.

MALVOLIO. 'M, O, A, I.' ... This simulation is not as the former: and yet, to crush this a little, it would bow to me, for every one of these letters are in my name. Soft! here follows prose....
[reads] 'If this fall into thy hand, revolve. In my stars I am above thee, but be not afraid of greatness: some are born great, some achieve greatness, and some have greatness thrust upon 'em. Thy Fates open their hands, let thy blood and spirit embrace them; and to inure thyself to what thou art like to be, cast thy humble slough, and appear fresh. Be opposite with a kinsman, surly with servants; let thy tongue tang arguments of state; put thyself into the trick of singularity. She thus advises thee that sighs for thee.

Remember who commended thy yellow stockings, and wished to see thee ever cross-gartered: I say, remember. Go to, thou art made, if thou desir'st to be so; if not, let me see thee a steward still, the fellow of servants, and not worthy to touch Fortune's fingers. Farewell. She, that would alter services with thee, THE FORTUNATE-UNHAPPY.'

Daylight and champian discovers not more: this is open. I will be proud, I will read politic authors, I will baffle Sir Toby, I will wash off gross acquaintance, I will be point-devise the very man. I do not now fool myself, to let imagination jade me; for every reason excites to this, that my lady loves me. She did commend my yellow stockings of late, she did praise my leg being cross-gartered, and in this she manifests herself to my love, and with a kind of injunction drives me to these habits of her liking. I thank my stars, I am happy ... I will be strange, stout, in yellow stockings, and cross-gartered, even with the swiftness of putting on. Jove, and my stars be praised! Here is yet a postscript.
[reads] 'Thou canst not choose but know who I am. If thou entertain'st my love, let it appear in thy smiling, thy smiles become thee well. Therefore in my presence still smile, dear, O my sweet, I prithee.' Jove, I thank thee! I will smile, I will do everything that thou wilt have me. He goes within

FABIAN. I will not give my part of this sport for a pension of thousands to be paid from the Sophy.

SIR TOBY. I could marry this wench for this device—

SIR ANDREW. So could I too.

SIR TOBY. And ask no other dowry with her but such another jest.

SIR ANDREW. Nor I neither.

Maria comes from the house

FABIAN. Here comes my noble gull-catcher.

SIR TOBY. Wilt thou set thy foot o' my neck?

SIR ANDREW. Or o' mine either?

SIR TOBY. Shall I play my freedom at trey-trip, and become thy bond-slave?

SIR ANDREW. I'faith or I either?

SIR TOBY. Why, thou hast put him in such a dream, that when the image of it leaves him he must run mad.

MARIA. Nay, but say true, does it work upon him?

SIR TOBY. Like aqua-vitæ with a midwife.

MARIA. If you will then see the fruits of the sport, mark his first approach before my lady: he will come to her in yellow stockings, and 'tis a colour she abhors, and cross-gartered, a fashion she detests; and he will smile upon her, which will now be so unsuitable to her disposition, being addicted to a melancholy as she is, that it cannot but turn him into a notable contempt: if you will see it, follow me.

SIR TOBY. To the gates of Tartar, thou most excellent devil of wit!

SIR ANDREW. I'll make one too. They enter the house

ACT 3
Scene 1

Enter Viola and the Clown, with his tabor

VIOLA. Save thee, friend, and thy music: dost thou live by thy tabor?

CLOWN. No, sir, I live by the church.

VIOLA. Art thou a churchman?

CLOWN. No such matter, sir, I do live by the church: for I do live at my house, and my house doth stand by the church.

VIOLA. So thou mayst say the king lies by a beggar, if a beggar dwell near him: or the church stands by thy tabor, if thy tabor stand by the church.

CLOWN. You have said, sir ... To see this age! A sentence is but a cheveril glove to a good wit—how quickly the wrong side may be turned outward!

VIOLA. Nay, that's certain; they that dally nicely with words may quickly make them wanton.

CLOWN. I would therefore my sister had had no name, sir.

VIOLA. Why, man?

CLOWN. Why, sir, her name's a word, and to dally with that word might make my sister want-one ... But indeed words are very rascals since bonds disgraced them.

VIOLA. Thy reason, man?

CLOWN. Troth, sir, I can yield you none without words, and words are grown so false I am loath to prove reason with them.

VIOLA. I warrant thou art a merry fellow and car'st for nothing.

CLOWN. Not so, sir, I do care for something: but in my conscience, sir, I do not care for you: if that be to care for nothing, sir, I would it would make you invisible.

VIOLA. Art not thou the Lady Olivia's fool?

CLOWN. No indeed sir, the Lady Olivia has no folly. She will keep no fool, sir, till she be married, and fools are as like husbands as pilchards are to herrings —the husband's the bigger. I am, indeed, not her fool, but her corrupter of words.

VIOLA. I saw thee late at the Count Orsino's.

CLOWN. Foolery, sir, does walk about the orb like the sun, it shines every where. I would be sorry, sir, but the fool should be as oft with your master as with my mistress: I think I saw your wisdom there.

VIOLA. Nay, an thou pass upon me, I'll no more with thee. Hold, there's expenses for thee.

CLOWN. Now Jove, in his next commodity of hair, send thee a beard!

VIOLA. By my troth I'll tell thee, I am almost sick for one—[aside] though I would not have it grow on my chin. Is thy lady within?

CLOWN. Would not a pair of these have bred, sir?

VIOLA. Yes, being kept together and put to use.

CLOWN. I would play Lord Pandarus of Phrygia, sir, to bring a Cressida to this Troilus.

VIOLA. I understand you, sir, 'tis well begged.

CLOWN. The matter, I hope, is not great, sir; begging but a beggar: Cressida was a beggar. My lady is within, sir. I will conster to them whence you come, who you are and what you would are out of my welkin—I might say 'element,' but the word is over-worn. He goes within

VIOLA. This fellow is wise enough to play the fool,
And to do that well craves a kind of wit:
He must observe their mood on whom he jests,
The quality of persons, and the time;
And, like the haggard, check at every feather
That comes before his eye. This is a practice,
As full of labour as a wise man's art:

For folly that he wisely shows is fit;
But wise men, folly-fall'n, quite taint their wit.

Sir Toby Belch and Sir Andrew Aguecheek enter

SIR TOBY. Save you, gentleman.
VIOLA. And you, sir.
SIR ANDREW. Dieu vous garde, monsieur.
VIOLA. Et vous aussi; votre serviteur.
SIR ANDREW. I hope, sir, you are—and I am yours.
SIR TOBY. Will you encounter the house? my niece is desirous you should enter, if your trade be to her.
VIOLA. I am bound to your niece, sir. I mean, she is the list of my voyage.
SIR TOBY. Taste your legs, sir, put them to motion.
VIOLA. My legs do better under-stand me, sir, than I understand what you mean by bidding me taste my legs.
SIR TOBY. I mean, to go, sir, to enter.
VIOLA. I will answer you with gate and entrance—but we are prevented.

Olivia comes from the house with Maria

Most excellent accomplished lady, the heavens rain odours on you!
SIR ANDREW. That youth's a rare courtier—'Rain odours'—well!
VIOLA. My matter hath no voice, lady, but to your own most pregnant and vouchsafed ear.
SIR ANDREW. 'Odours,' 'pregnant,' and 'vouchsafed': I'll get 'em all three all ready.
OLIVIA. Let the garden door be shut, and leave me to my hearing....
Sir Toby, Sir Andrew and Maria depart
Give me your hand, sir.
VIOLA. My duty, madam, and most humble service.
OLIVIA. What is your name?
VIOLA. Cesario is your servant's name, fair princess.
OLIVIA. My servant, sir! 'Twas never merry world,
Since lowly feigning was called compliment:
Y'are servant to the Count Orsino, youth.
VIOLA. And he is yours, and his must needs be yours;
Your servant's servant is your servant, madam.
OLIVIA. For him, I think not on him: for his thoughts,
Would they were blanks, rather than filled with me!
VIOLA. Madam, I come to whet your gentle thoughts
On his behalf.
OLIVIA. O, by your leave, I pray you;
I bade you never speak again of him:
But, would you undertake another suit,
I had rather hear you to solicit that
Than music from the spheres.
VIOLA. Dear lady,—
OLIVIA. Give me leave, beseech you: I did send,
After the last enchantment you did here,
A ring in chase of you; so did I abuse
Myself, my servant and, I fear me, you:
Under your hard construction must I sit,
To force that on you in a shameful cunning
Which you knew none of yours: what might you think?
Have you not set mine honour at the stake,
And baited it with all th'unmuzzled thoughts
That tyrannous heart can think?
To one of your receiving enough is shown,
A cypress, not a bosom, hides my heart:
So let me hear you speak.
VIOLA. I pity you.
OLIVIA. That's a degree to love.
VIOLA. No, not a grise;
For 'tis a vulgar proof,
That very oft we pity enemies.
OLIVIA. Why then methinks 'tis time to smile again:
O world, how apt the poor are to be proud!
If one should be a prey, how much the better
To fall before the lion than the wolf?
Clock strikes
The clock upbraids me with the waste of time . . .
Be not afraid, good youth, I will not have you:
And yet, when wit and youth is come to harvest,
Your wife is like to reap a proper man:
There lies your way, due west.
VIOLA. Then westward-ho!
Grace and good disposition attend your ladyship!
You'll nothing, madam, to my lord by me?
OLIVIA. Stay:
I prithee, tell me what thou think'st of me.
VIOLA. That you do think you are not what you are.
OLIVIA. If I think so, I think the same of you.
VIOLA. Then think you right; I am not what I am.
OLIVIA. I would you were as I would have you be!
VIOLA. Would it be better, madam, than I am,
I wish it might, for now I am your fool.
OLIVIA. O, what a deal of scorn looks beautiful
In the contempt and anger of his lip!
A murd'rous guilt shows not itself more soon
Than love that would seem hid: love's night is noon.
Cesario, by the roses of the spring,
By maidhood, honour, truth, and every thing,
I love thee so, that, maugre all thy pride,
Nor wit nor reason can my passion hide.
Do not extort thy reasons from this clause,
For that I woo, thou therefore hast no cause:
But rather reason thus with reason fetter,
Love sought is good . . . but given unsought is better.
VIOLA. By innocence I swear, and by my youth,
I have one heart, one bosom, and one truth,
And that no woman has, nor never none
Shall mistress be of it, save I alone.
And so adieu, good madam! never more
Will I my master's tears to you deplore.
OLIVIA. Yet come again: for thou perhaps mayst move
That heart, which now abhors, to like his love.
They go

Scene 2: Olivia's house

Enter Sir Toby Belch, Sir Andrew Aguecheek, and Fabian

SIR ANDREW. No, faith, I'll not stay a jot longer.
SIR TOBY. Thy reason, dear venom, give thy reason.
FABIAN. You must needs yield your reason, Sir Andrew.
SIR ANDREW. Marry, I saw your niece do more favours to the count's serving-man than ever she bestowed upon me; I saw't i'th'orchard.
SIR TOBY. Did she see thee the while, old boy? tell me that.
SIR ANDREW. As plain as I see you now.
FABIAN. This was a great argument of love in her toward you.
SIR ANDREW. 'Slight! will you make an ass o' me?

FABIAN. I will prove it legitimate, sir, upon the oaths of judgement and reason.

SIR TOBY. And they have been grand-jurymen since before Noah was a sailor.

FABIAN. She did show favour to the youth in your sight, only to exasperate you, to awake your dormouse valour, to put fire in your heart, and brimstone in your liver: you should then have accosted her, and with some excellent jests, fire-new from the mint, you should have banged the youth into dumbness: this was looked for at your hand, and this was balked: the double gilt of this opportunity you let time wash off, and you are now sailed into the north of my lady's opinion, where you will hang like an icicle on a Dutchman's beard, unless you do redeem it by some laudable attempt, either of valour or policy.

SIR ANDREW. An't be any way, it must be with valour, for policy I hate: I had as lief be a Brownist, as a politician.

SIR TOBY. Why then, build me thy fortunes upon the basis of valour. Challenge me the count's youth to fight with him, hurt him in eleven places—my niece shall take note of it, and assure thyself there is no love-broker in the world can more prevail in man's commendation with woman than report of valour.

FABIAN. There is no way but this, Sir Andrew.

SIR ANDREW. Will either of you bear me a challenge to him?

SIR TOBY. Go, write it in a martial hand, be curst and brief; it is no matter how witty, so it be eloquent and full of invention: taunt him with the license of ink: if thou 'thou'st' him some thrice, it shall not be amiss; and as many lies as will lie in thy sheet of paper, although the sheet were big enough for the bed of Ware in England, set'em down—go, about it. Let there be gall enough in thy ink, though thou write with a goose-pen, no matter: about it.

SIR ANDREW. Where shall I find you?

SIR TOBY. We'll call thee at thy cubicle: go.

Sir Andrew goes

FABIAN. This is a dear manakin to you, Sir Toby.

SIR TOBY. I have been dear to him, lad—some two thousand strong, or so.

FABIAN. We shall have a rare letter from him ... but you'll not deliver't?

SIR TOBY. Never trust me then; and by all means stir on the youth to an answer. I think oxen and wainropes cannot hale them together. For Andrew, if he were opened and you find so much blood in his liver as will clog the foot of a flea, I'll eat the rest of th'anatomy.

FABIAN. And his opposite, the youth, bears in his visage no great presage of cruelty.

Maria comes in

SIR TOBY. Look, where the youngest wren of nine comes.

MARIA. If you desire the spleen, and will laugh yourselves into stitches, follow me ... Yon gull Malvolio is turned heathen, a very renegado; for there is no Christian, that means to be saved by believing rightly, can ever believe such impossible passages of grossness.... He's in yellow stockings!

SIR TOBY. And cross-gartered?

MARIA. Most villainously; like a pedant that keeps a school i'th' church ... I have dogged him like his murderer. He does obey every point of the letter that I dropped to betray him: he does smile his face into more lines than is in the new map, with the augmentation of the Indies: you have not seen such a thing as 'tis ... I can hardly forbear hurling things at him, I know my lady will strike him: if she do, he'll smile and take't for a great favour.

SIR TOBY. Come, bring us, bring us where he is.

They go

Scene 3: A street

Antonio and Sebastian approach

SEBASTIAN. I would not by my will have troubled you,
But since you make your pleasure of your pains,
I will no further chide you.
ANTONIO. I could not stay behind you: my desire,
More sharp than filéd steel, did spur me forth;
And not all love to see you, though so much
As might have drawn one to a longer voyage,
But jealousy what might befall your travel,
Being skilless in these parts; which to a stranger,
Unguided and unfriended, often prove
Rough and unhospitable: my willing love,
The rather by these arguments of fear,
Set forth in your pursuit.
SEBASTIAN. My kind Antonio,
I can no other answer make but thanks,
And thanks, and ever thanks; and oft good turns
Are shuffled off with such uncurrent pay:
But, were my worth as is my conscience firm,
You should find better dealing ... What's to do?
Shall we go see the relics of this town?
ANTONIO. To-morrow sir—best first go see your lodging.
SEBASTIAN. I am not weary, and 'tis long to night:
I pray you, let us satisfy our eyes
With the memorials and the things of fame
That do renown this city.
ANTONIO. Would you'ld pardon me;
I do not without danger walk these streets.
Once in a sea-fight 'gainst the count his galleys
I did some service, of such note indeed
That were I ta'en here it would scarce be answered.
SEBASTIAN. Belike you slew great number of his people.
ANTONIO. Th'offence is not of such a bloody nature,
Albeit the quality of the time and quarrel
Might well have given us bloody argument:
It might have since been answered in repaying
What we took from them, which for traffic's sake
Most of our city did: only myself stood out,
For which, if I be lapséd in this place,
I shall pay dear.
SEBASTIAN. Do not then walk too open.
ANTONIO. It doth not fit me ... Hold, sir, here's my purse.
In the south suburbs, at the Elephant,
Is best to lodge: I will bespeak our diet,
Whiles you beguile the time and feed your knowledge
With viewing of the town; there shall you have me.
SEBASTIAN. Why I your purse?
ANTONIO. Haply your eye shall light upon some toy

You have desire to purchase; and your store,
I think, is not for idle markets, sir.

SEBASTIAN. I'll be your purse-bearer, and leave you for an hour.

ANTONIO. To th'Elephant.

SEBASTIAN. I do remember.

They go off in different directions

Scene 4: Olivia's garden

Olivia enters followed by Maria

OLIVIA [aside]. I have sent after him, he says he'll come;
How shall I feast him? what bestow of him?
For youth is bought more oft than begged or borrowed.
I speak too loud ...
[to Maria] Where's Malvolio? he is sad and civil,
And suits well for a servant with my fortunes—
Where is Malvolio?

MARIA. He's coming, madam; but in very strange manner. He is, sure, possessed, madam.

OLIVIA. Why, what's the matter? does he rave?

MARIA. No, madam, he does nothing but smile: your ladyship were best to have some guard about you, if he come, for sure the man is tainted in's wits.

OLIVIA. Go, call him hither....

Malvolio enters

I am as mad as he,
If sad and merry madness equal be.
How now, Malvolio?

MALVOLIO. Sweet lady, ho, ho.

OLIVIA. Smil'st thou?
I sent for thee upon a sad occasion.

MALVOLIO. Sad, lady? I could be sad: this does make some obstruction in the blood, this cross-gartering—but what of that? if it please the eye of one, it is with me as the very true sonnet is: 'Please one and please all.'

OLIVIA. Why, how dost thou, man? what is the matter with thee?

MALVOLIO. Not black in my mind, though yellow in my legs ... It did come to his hands, and commands shall be executed. I think we do know the sweet Roman hand.

OLIVIA. Wilt thou go to bed, Malvolio?

MALVOLIO. To bed! ay, sweet-heart, and I'll come to thee.

OLIVIA. God comfort thee! Why dost thou smile so, and kiss thy hand so oft?

MARIA. How do you, Malvolio?

MALVOLIO. At your request! yes, nightingales answer daws.

MARIA. Why appear you with this ridiculous boldness before my lady?

MALVOLIO. 'Be not afraid of greatness': 'twas well writ.

OLIVIA. What mean'st thou by that, Malvolio?

MALVOLIO. 'Some are born great,'—

OLIVIA. Ha?

MALVOLIO. 'Some achieve greatness,'—

OLIVIA. What say'st thou?

MALVOLIO. 'And some have greatness thrust upon them.'

OLIVIA. Heaven restore thee!

MALVOLIO. 'Remember, who commended thy yellow stockings'—

OLIVIA. Thy yellow stockings!

MALVOLIO. 'And wished to see thee cross-gartered.'

OLIVIA. Cross-gartered?

MALVOLIO. 'Go to, thou art made, if thou desir'st to be so'—

OLIVIA. Am I made?

MALVOLIO. 'If not, let me see thee a servant still.'

OLIVIA. Why, this is very midsummer madness.

A servant comes from the house

SERVANT. Madam, the young gentleman of the Count Orsino's is returned—I could hardly entreat him back: he attends your ladyship's pleasure.

OLIVIA. I'll come to him. [the servant goes] Good Maria, let this fellow be looked to. Where's my cousin Toby? let some of my people have a special care of him, I would not have him miscarry for the half of my dowry.

She enters the house followed by Maria

MALVOLIO. O, ho! do you come near me now? no worse man than Sir Toby to look to me! This concurs directly with the letter—she sends him on purpose, that I may appear stubborn to him; for she incites me to that in the letter. 'Cast thy humble slough,' says she; 'be opposite with a kinsman, surly with servants, let thy tongue tang with arguments of state, put thyself into the trick of singularity'; and consequently sets down the manner how; as, a sad face, a reverend carriage, a slow tongue, in the habit of some sir of note, and so forth. I have limed her, but it is Jove's doing, and Jove make me thankful! And when she went away now, 'Let this fellow be looked to': fellow! not Malvolio, nor after my degree, but 'fellow.' Why, every thing adheres together, that no dram of a scruple, no scruple of a scruple, no obstacle, no incredulous or unsafe circumstance—what can be said?—nothing that can be, can come between me and the full prospect of my hopes. Well, Jove, not I, is the doer of this, and he is to be thanked.

Maria returns with Sir Toby Belch and Fabian

SIR TOBY. Which way is he, in the name of sanctity? If all the devils of hell be drawn in little, and Legion himself possessed him, yet I'll speak to him.

FABIAN. Here he is, here he is ... How is't with you, sir?

SIR TOBY. How is't with you, man?

MALVOLIO. Go off, I discard you; let me enjoy my private: go off.

MARIA. Lo, how hollow the fiend speaks within him! did not I tell you? Sir Toby, my lady prays you to have a care of him.

MALVOLIO. Ah, ha! does she so!

SIR TOBY. Go to, go to: peace, peace, we must deal gently with him: let me alone. How do you, Malvolio? how is't with you? What, man! defy the devil: consider, he's an enemy to mankind.

MALVOLIO. Do you know what you say?

MARIA. La you! an you speak ill of the devil, how he takes it at heart! Pray God, he be not bewitched!

FABIAN. Carry his water to th'wise woman.

MARIA. Marry, and it shall be done to-morrow morning, if I live. My lady would not lose him for more than I'll say.

MALVOLIO. How now, mistress!

MARIA. O Lord!

SIR TOBY. Prithee, hold thy peace, this is not the way: do you not see you move him? let me alone with him.

FABIAN. No way but gentleness, gently, gently: the fiend is rough, and will not be roughly used.

SIR TOBY. Why, how now, my bawcock! how dost thou, chuck?

MALVOLIO. Sir!

SIR TOBY. Ay, Biddy, come with me. What, man! 'tis not for gravity to play at cherry-pit with Satan. Hang him, foul collier!

MARIA. Get him to say his prayers, good Sir Toby, get him to pray.

MALVOLIO. My prayers, minx!

MARIA. No, I warrant you, he will not hear of godliness.

MALVOLIO. Go, hang yourselves all! you are idle shallow things—I am not of your element—you shall know more hereafter. He goes

SIR TOBY. Is't possible?

FABIAN. If this were played upon a stage now, I could condemn it as an improbable fiction.

SIR TOBY. His very genius hath taken the infection of the device, man.

MARIA. Nay, pursue him now, lest the device take air and taint.

FABIAN. Why, we shall make him mad indeed.

MARIA. The house will be the quieter.

SIR TOBY. Come, we'll have him in a dark room and bound. My niece is already in the belief that he's mad; we may carry it thus, for our pleasure and his penance, till our very pastime, tired out of breath, prompt us to have mercy on him: at which time we will bring the device to the bar and crown thee for a finder of madmen . . . But see, but see.

Sir Andrew Aguecheek enters

FABIAN. More matter for a May morning!

SIR ANDREW. Here's the challenge, read it: I warrant there's vinegar and pepper in't.

FABIAN. Is't so saucy?

SIR ANDREW. Ay, is't! I warrant him: do but read.

SIR TOBY. Give me. [he reads] 'Youth, whatsoever thou art, thou art but a scurvy fellow.'

FABIAN. Good, and valiant.

SIR TOBY. 'Wonder not, nor admire not in thy mind, why I do call thee so, for I will show thee no reason for't.'

FABIAN. A good note, that keeps you from the blow of the law.

SIR TOBY. 'Thou com'st to the Lady Olivia, and in my sight she uses thee kindly: but thou liest in thy throat, that is not the matter I challenge thee for.'

FABIAN. Very brief, and to exceeding good sense—less.

SIR TOBY. 'I will waylay thee going home, where if it be thy chance to kill me,'—

FABIAN. Good.

SIR TOBY. 'Thou kill'st me like a rogue and a villain.'

FABIAN. Still you keep o'th' windy side of the law: good.

SIR TOBY. 'Fare thee well, and God have mercy upon one of our souls! He may have mercy upon mine, but my hope is better, and so look to thyself. Thy friend, as thou usest him, and thy sworn enemy,
ANDREW AGUECHEEK.'
If this letter move him not, his legs cannot: I'll give't him.

MARIA. You may have very fit occasion for't: he is now in some commerce with my lady, and will by and by depart.

SIR TOBY. Go, Sir Andrew; scout me for him at the corner of the orchard like a bum-baily: so soon as ever thou seest him, draw, and as thou draw'st, swear horrible; for it comes to pass oft that a terrible oath, with a swaggering accent sharply twanged off, gives manhood more approbation than ever proof itself would have earned him. Away!

SIR ANDREW. Nay, let me alone for swearing. He goes

SIR TOBY. Now will not I deliver his letter: for the behaviour of the young gentleman gives him out to be of good capacity and breeding; his employment between his lord and my niece confirms no less; therefore this letter, being so excellently ignorant, will breed no terror in the youth: he will find it comes from a clodpole. But, sir, I will deliver his challenge by word of mouth; set upon Aguecheek a notable report of valour; and drive the gentleman, as I know his youth will aptly receive it, into a most hideous opinion of his rage, skill, fury and impetuosity. This will so fright them both, that they will kill one another by the look, like cockatrices.

Olivia and Viola come from the house

FABIAN. Here he comes with your niece—give them way till he take leave, and presently after him.

SIR TOBY. I will meditate the while upon some horrid message for a challenge. Sir Toby, Fabian and Maria go

OLIVIA. I have said too much unto a heart of stone,
And laid mine honour too unchary out:
There's something in me that reproves my fault;
But such a headstrong potent fault it is,
That it but mocks reproof.

VIOLA. With the same 'haviour that your passion bears
Goes on my master's grief.

OLIVIA. Here, wear this jewel for me, 'tis my picture;
Refuse it not, it hath no tongue to vex you:
And I beseech you come again to-morrow.
What shall you ask of me, that I'll deny,
That honour saved may upon asking give?

VIOLA. Nothing but this—your true love for my master.

OLIVIA. How with mine honour may I give him that
Which I have given to you?

VIOLA. I will acquit you.

OLIVIA. Well, come again to-morrow: fare thee well.
A fiend, like thee, might bear my soul to hell.
She goes within

Sir Toby Belch and Fabian return

SIR TOBY. Gentleman, God save thee.

VIOLA. And you, sir.

SIR TOBY. That defence thou hast, betake thee to't: of what nature the wrongs are thou hast done him, I know not; but thy intercepter, full of despite, bloody as the hunter, attends thee at the orchard-end: dismount thy tuck, be yare in thy preparation, for thy assailant is quick, skilful and deadly.

VIOLA. You mistake, sir. I am sure no man hath any quarrel to me; my remembrance is very free and clear from any image of offence done to any man.

SIR TOBY. You'll find it otherwise, I assure you: therefore, if you hold your life at any price, betake you to your guard; for your opposite hath in him what youth, strength, skill and wrath can furnish man withal.

VIOLA. I pray you, sir, what is he?

SIR TOBY. He is knight, dubbed with unhatched rapier and on carpet consideration, but he is a devil in private brawl: souls and bodies hath he divorced three, and his incensement at this moment is so implacable, that satisfaction can be none but by pangs of death and sepulchre ... Hob, nob, is his word; give't or take't.

VIOLA. I will return again into the house and desire some conduct of the lady. I am no fighter. I have heard of some kind of men that put quarrels purposely on others, to taste their valour: belike this is a man of that quirk.

SIR TOBY. Sir, no; his indignation derives itself out of a very competent injury, therefore get you on and give him his desire. Back you shall not to the house, unless you undertake that with me which with as much safety you might answer him: therefore on, or strip your sword stark naked; for meddle you must, that's certain, or forswear to wear iron about you.

VIOLA. This is as uncivil as strange. I beseech you, do me this courteous office, as to know of the knight what my offence to him is; it is something of my negligence, nothing of my purpose.

SIR TOBY. I will do so. Signior Fabian, stay you by this gentleman till my return. He goes

VIOLA. Pray you, sir, do you know of this matter?

FABIAN. I know the knight is incensed against you, even to a mortal arbitrement, but nothing of the circumstance more.

VIOLA. I beseech you, what manner of man is he?

FABIAN. Nothing of that wonderful promise, to read him by his form, as you are like to find him in the proof of his valour. He is indeed, sir, the most skilful, bloody and fatal opposite that you could possibly have found in any part of Illyria ... Will you walk towards him? I will make your peace with him if I can.

VIOLA. I shall be much bound to you for't: I am one, that had rather go with sir priest than sir knight: I care not who knows so much of my mettle.

They go

Sir Toby and Sir Andrew enter

SIR TOBY. Why, man, he's a very devil, I have not seen such a firago ... I had a pass with him, rapier, scabbard and all, and he gives me the stuck in with such a mortal motion that it is inevitable; and on the answer, he pays you as surely as your feet hit the ground they step on. They say he has been fencer to the Sophy.

SIR ANDREW. Pox on't, I'll not meddle with him.

SIR TOBY. Ay, but he will not now be pacified: Fabian can scarce hold him yonder.

SIR ANDREW. Plague on't, an I thought he had been valiant and so cunning in fence, I'd have seen him damned ere I'd have challenged him. Let him let the matter slip, and I'll give him my horse, grey Capilet.

SIR TOBY. I'll make the motion: stand here, make a good show on't—this shall end without the perdition of souls. [aside] Marry, I'll ride your horse as well as I ride you.

Fabian and Viola enter. Sir Toby beckons Fabian aside

I have his horse to take up the quarrel; I have persuaded him the youth's a devil.

FABIAN. He is as horribly conceited of him; and pants and looks pale, as if a bear were at his heels.

SIR TOBY [to Viola]. There's no remedy, sir, he will fight with you for's oath sake: marry, he hath better bethought him of his quarrel, and he finds that now scarce to be worth talking of: therefore draw for the supportance of his vow, he protests he will not hurt you.

VIOLA [aside]. Pray God defend me! A little thing would make me tell them how much I lack of a man.

FABIAN. Give ground, if you see him furious.

SIR TOBY. Come, Sir Andrew, there's no remedy, the gentleman will for his honour's sake have one bout with you: he cannot by the duello avoid it: but he has promised me, as he is a gentleman and a soldier, he will not hurt you. Come on, to't!

SIR ANDREW. Pray God, he keep his oath!

VIOLA. I do assure you, 'tis against my will.

They make ready to fight; Antonio enters

ANTONIO [to Sir Andrew]. Put up your sword: if this young gentleman
Have done offence, I take the fault on me;
If you offend him, I for him defy you.

SIR TOBY. You, sir! why, what are you?

ANTONIO. One, sir, that for his love dares yet do more
Than you have heard him brag to you he will.

SIR TOBY. Nay, if you be an undertaker, I am for you.
They draw

Two officers approach

FABIAN. O good Sir Toby, hold; here come the officers.

SIR TOBY [to Antonio]. I'll be with you anon.
He hides from the officers behind a tree

VIOLA. Pray, sir, put your sword up, if you please.

SIR ANDREW. Marry, will I, sir; and, for that I promised you, I'll be as good as my word. He will bear you easily, and reins well.

1 OFFICER. This is the man, do thy office.

2 OFFICER. Antonio, I arrest thee at the suit
Of Count Orsino.

ANTONIO. You do mistake me, sir.

1 OFFICER. No, sir, no jot; I know your favour well:
Though now you have no sea-cap on your head ...
Take him away, he knows I know him well.

ANTONIO. I must obey. [to Viola] This comes with seeking you;
But there's no remedy, I shall answer it ...
What will you do, now my necessity
Makes me to ask you for my purse? it grieves me
Much more for what I cannot do for you
Than what befalls myself ... You stand amazed,
But be of comfort.

2 OFFICER. Come, sir, away.

ANTONIO. I must entreat of you some of that money.
VIOLA. What money, sir?
For the fair kindness you have showed me here,
And part being prompted by your present trouble,
Out of my lean and low ability
I'll lend you something . . . My having is not much,
I'll make division of my present with you:
Hold, there's half my coffer.
ANTONIO. Will you deny me now?
Is't possible that my deserts to you
Can lack persuasion? Do not tempt my misery,
Lest that it make me so unsound a man
As to upbraid you with those kindnesses
That I have done for you.
VIOLA. I know of none,
Nor know I you by voice or any feature:
I hate ingratitude more in a man,
Than lying vainness, babbling drunkenness,
Or any taint of vice whose strong corruption
Inhabits our frail blood.
ANTONIO. O heavens themselves!
2 OFFICER. Come, sir, I pray you, go.
ANTONIO. Let me speak a little.
This youth that you see here
I snatched one half out of the jaws of death,
Relieved him with such sanctity of love,
And to his image, which methought did promise
Most venerable worth, did I devotion.
1 OFFICER. What's that to us? The time goes by: away!
ANTONIO. But, O, how vile an idol proves this god!
Thou hast, Sebastian, done good feature shame.
In nature there's no blemish but the mind;
None can be called deformed but the unkind:
Virtue is beauty, but the beauteous evil
Are empty trunks o'erflourished by the devil.
1 OFFICER. The man grows mad, away with him!
Come, come, sir.
ANTONIO. Lead me on. They carry him off
VIOLA. Methinks his words do from such passion fly,
That he believes himself—so do not I?
Prove true, imagination, O prove true,
That I, dear brother, be now ta'en for you!

SIR TOBY. Come hither, knight—come hither, Fabian; we'll whisper o'er a couplet or two of most sage saws.

VIOLA. He named Sebastian; I my brother know
Yet living in my glass; even such and so
In favour was my brother, and he went
Still in this fashion, colour, ornament,
For him I imitate: O, if it prove,
Tempests are kind and salt waves fresh in love!
She goes

SIR TOBY. A very dishonest paltry boy, and more a coward than a hare. His dishonesty appears in leaving his friend here in necessity and denying him; and for his cowardship, ask Fabian.

FABIAN. A coward, a most devout coward, religious in it.

SIR ANDREW. 'Slid, I'll after him again and beat him.

SIR TOBY. Do, cuff him soundly, but never draw thy sword.

SIR ANDREW. An I do not,— He goes

FABIAN. Come, let's see the event.

SIR TOBY. I dare lay any money, 'twill be nothing yet. They follow

ACT 4

Scene 1: Before Olivia's house

Sebastian and Clown

CLOWN. Will you make me believe that I am not sent for you?

SEBASTIAN. Go to, go to, thou art a foolish fellow;
Let me be clear of thee.

CLOWN. Well held out, i'faith! No, I do not know you, nor I am not sent to you by my lady to bid you come speak with her, nor your name is not Master Cesario, nor this is not my nose neither: nothing that is so, is so.

SEBASTIAN. I prithee, vent thy folly somewhere else,
Thou know'st not me.

CLOWN. Vent my folly! He has heard that word of some great man and now applies it to a fool. Vent my folly! I am afraid this great lubber, the world, will prove a cockney . . . I prithee now, ungird thy strangeness and tell me what I shall vent to my lady: shall I vent to her that thou art coming?

SEBASTIAN. I prithee, foolish Greek, depart from me.
There's money for thee if you tarry longer
I shall give worse payment.

CLOWN. By my troth, thou hast an open hand . . . These wise men that give fools money get themselves a good report—after fourteen years' purchase.

Sir Andrew enters, Sir Toby and Fabian following

SIR ANDREW. Now, sir, have I met you again? there's for you. He strikes wide

SEBASTIAN [replies with his fists]. Why, there's for thee, and there, and there! He knocks him down
Are all the people mad? His hand upon his dagger

SIR TOBY [seizes him from behind]. Hold, sir, or I'll throw your dagger o'er the house.

CLOWN. This will I tell my lady straight: I would not be in some of your coats for two pence. He goes

SIR TOBY. Come on, sir! hold!

SIR ANDREW. Nay, let him alone, I'll go another way to work with him: I'll have an action of battery against him, if there be any law in Illyria: though I struck him first, yet it's no matter for that.

SEBASTIAN. Let go thy hand!

SIR TOBY. Come, sir, I will not let you go. Come, my young soldier, put up your iron: you are well fleshed . . . Come on.

SEBASTIAN. I will be free from thee. . . . [he throws him off] What wouldst thou now? He draws
If thou dar'st tempt me further, draw thy sword.

SIR TOBY. What, what? [he also draws] Nay, then I must have an ounce or two of this malapert blood from you.

Olivia enters

OLIVIA. Hold, Toby! on thy life, I charge thee, hold!
SIR TOBY. Madam!
OLIVIA. Will it be ever thus? Ungracious wretch,
Fit for the mountains and the barbarous caves,
Where manners ne'er were preached! out of my sight!
Be not offended, dear Cesario . . .
Rudesby, be gone!
Sir Toby, Sir Andrew and Fabian go
I prithee, gentle friend,
Let thy fair wisdom, not thy passion, sway

In this uncivil and unjust extent
Against thy peace. Go with me to my house,
And hear thou there how many fruitless pranks
This ruffian hath botched up, that thou thereby
Mayst smile at this . . . Thou shalt not choose but go;
Do not deny. Beshrew his soul for me,
He started one poor heart of mine in thee.

SEBASTIAN. What relish is in this? how runs the stream?
Or I am mad, or else this is a dream:
Let fancy still my sense in Lethe steep—
If it be thus to dream, still let me sleep!

OLIVIA. Nay, come, I prithee: would thou'dst be ruled by me!

SEBASTIAN. Madam, I will.

OLIVIA. O, say so, and so be!

They go

Scene 2: Olivia's house

Enter Clown and Maria

MARIA. Nay, I prithee, put on this gown and this beard, make him believe thou art Sir Topas the curate, do it quickly. I'll call Sir Toby the whilst. She goes out

CLOWN. Well, I'll put it on, and I will dissemble myself in't, and I would I were the first that ever dissembled in such a gown. I am not tall enough to become the function well, nor lean enough to be thought a good student: but to be said an honest man and a good housekeeper goes as fairly as to say a careful man and a great scholar. The competitors enter.

Maria returns with Sir Toby

SIR TOBY. Jove bless thee, Master Parson!

CLOWN [in feigned voice]. Bonos dies, Sir Toby: for as the old hermit of Prague, that never saw pen and ink, very wittily said to a niece of King Gorboduc, 'That that is, is': so I, being Master Parson, am Master Parson; for what is 'that' but that? and 'is' but is?

SIR TOBY. To him, Sir Topas.

CLOWN. What, ho, I say! peace in this prison!

SIR TOBY. The knave counterfeits well; a good knave.

MALVOLIO [within]. Who calls there?

CLOWN. Sir Topas the curate, who comes to visit Malvolio the lunatic.

MALVOLIO. Sir Topas, Sir Topas, good sir Topas, go to my lady.

CLOWN. Out, hyperbolical fiend! how vexest thou this man? talkest thou nothing but of ladies?

SIR TOBY. Well said, Master Parson.

MALVOLIO. Sir Topas, never was man thus wronged—good sir Topas, do not think I am mad; they have laid me here in hideous darkness.

CLOWN. Fie, thou dishonest Satan! I call thee by the most modest terms, for I am one of those gentle ones that will use the devil himself with courtesy: say'st thou that house is dark?

MALVOLIO. As hell, Sir Topas.

CLOWN. Why, it hath bay windows transparent as barricadoes, and the clerestories toward the south-north are as lustrous as ebony; and yet complainest thou of obstruction?

MALVOLIO. I am not mad, Sir Topas. I say to you, this house is dark.

CLOWN. Madman, thou errest: I say, there is no darkness but ignorance, in which thou art more puzzled than the Egyptians in their fog.

MALVOLIO. I say, this house is as dark as ignorance, though ignorance were as dark as hell; and I say, there was never man thus abused. I am no more mad than you are—make the trial of it in any constant question.

CLOWN. What is the opinion of Pythagoras concerning wild fowl?

MALVOLIO. That the soul of our grandam might haply inhabit a bird.

CLOWN. What think'st thou of his opinion?

MALVOLIO. I think nobly of the soul, and no way approve his opinion.

CLOWN. Fare thee well: remain thou still in darkness. Thou shalt hold th'opinion of Pythagoras ere I will allow of thy wits, and fear to kill a woodcock, lest thou dispossess the soul of thy grandam. Fare thee well.

MALVOLIO. Sir Topas, Sir Topas!

SIR TOBY. My most exquisite Sir Topas!

CLOWN. Nay, I am for all waters.

MARIA. Thou mightst have done this without thy beard and gown, he sees thee not.

SIR TOBY. To him in thine own voice, and bring me word how thou find'st him . . . I would we were well rid of this knavery. If he may be conveniently delivered, I would he were, for I am now so far in offence with my niece, that I cannot pursue with any safety this sport to the upshot. Come by and by to my chamber. Sir Toby and Maria go

CLOWN [sings]. 'Hey Robin, jolly Robin,
Tell me how thy lady does.'

MALVOLIO. Fool,—

CLOWN [sings]. 'My lady is unkind, perdy.'

MALVOLIO. Fool,—

CLOWN [sings]. 'Alas, why is she so?'

MALVOLIO. Fool, I say,—

CLOWN [sings]. 'She loves another'—Who calls, ha?

MALVOLIO. Good fool, as ever thou wilt deserve well at my hand, help me to a candle, and pen, ink and paper; as I am a gentleman, I will live to be thankful to thee for't.

CLOWN. Master Malvolio!

MALVOLIO. Ay, good fool.

CLOWN. Alas, sir, how fell you besides your five wits?

MALVOLIO. Fool, there was never man so notoriously abused: I am as well in my wits, fool, as thou art.

CLOWN. But as well? then you are mad indeed, if you be no better in your wits than a fool.

MALVOLIO. They have here propertied me; keep me in darkness, send ministers to me, asses, and do all they can to face me out of my wits.

CLOWN. Advise you what you say; the minister is here. . . . Malvolio, Malvolio, thy wits the heavens restore! endeavour thyself to sleep, and leave thy vain bibble babble.

MALVOLIO. Sir Topas,—

CLOWN. Maintain no words with him, good fellow.—Who, I, sir? not I, sir. God buy you, good Sir Topas.—Marry, amen.—I will, sir, I will.

MALVOLIO. Fool, fool, fool, I say,—

CLOWN. Alas, sir, be patient. What say you, sir? I am shent for speaking to you.

MALVOLIO. Good fool, help me to some light and some paper. I tell thee, I am as well in my wits, as any man in Illyria.

CLOWN. Well-a-day that you were, sir!

MALVOLIO. By this hand, I am... Good fool, some ink, paper and light: and convey what I will set down to my lady; it shall advantage thee more than ever the bearing of letter did.

CLOWN. I will help you to't. But tell me true, are you not mad indeed? or do you but counterfeit?

MALVOLIO. Believe me, I am not—I tell thee true.

CLOWN. Nay, I'll ne'er believe a madman till I see his brains. I will fetch you light and paper and ink.

MALVOLIO. Fool, I'll requite it in the highest degree: I prithee, be gone.

CLOWN [sings].

I am gone, sir, and anon, sir,
I'll be with you again:
  In a trice, like to the old Vice,
Your need to sustain.
Who with dagger of lath,
In his rage and his wrath,
  Cries ah ha, to the devil:
Like a mad lad,
Pare thy nails dad,
  Adieu goodman devil. He goes

Scene 3: Olivia's garden

Sebastian comes from the house

SEBASTIAN. This is the air, that is the glorious sun,
This pearl she gave me, I do feel't and see't,
And though 'tis wonder that enwraps me thus,
Yet 'tis not madness. Where's Antonio then?
I could not find him at the Elephant,
Yet there he was, and there I found this credit,
That he did range the town to seek me out.
His counsel now might do me golden service,
For though my soul disputes well with my sense,
That this may be some error, but no madness,
Yet doth this accident and flood of fortune
So far exceed all instance, all discourse,
That I am ready to distrust mine eyes
And wrangle with my reason, that persuades me
To any other trust but that I am mad,
Or else the lady's mad; yet, if 'twere so,
She could not sway her house, command her followers,
Take and give back affairs and their dispatch,
With such a smooth, discreet, and stable bearing
As I perceive she does: there's something in't
That is deceivable. But here the lady comes.

Olivia comes forth with a priest

OLIVIA. Blame not this haste of mine... If you mean well,
Now go with me and with this holy man
Into the chantry by: there, before him,
And underneath that consecrated roof,
Plight me the full assurance of your faith,
That my most jealous and too doubtful soul
May live at peace. He shall conceal it,
Whiles you are willing it shall come to note,
What time we will our celebration keep
According to my birth. What do you say?

SEBASTIAN. I'll follow this good man and go with you,
And having sworn truth, ever will be true.

OLIVIA. Then lead the way, good father, and heavens so shine,
That they may fairly note this act of mine!
They go

ACT 5

Scene 1: Before Olivia's house

Clown and Fabian

FABIAN. Now, as thou lov'st me, let me see his letter.

CLOWN. Good Master Fabian, grant me another request.

FABIAN. Any thing.

CLOWN. Do not desire to see this letter.

FABIAN. This is, to give a dog, and in recompense desire my dog again.

The Duke and Viola (as Cesario) enter with attendants

DUKE. Belong you to the Lady Olivia, friends?

CLOWN. Ay, sir, we are some of her trappings.

DUKE. I know thee well: how dost thou, my good fellow?

CLOWN. Truly, sir, the better for my foes and the worse for my friends.

DUKE. Just the contrary; the better for thy friends.

CLOWN. No, sir, the worse.

DUKE. How can that be?

CLOWN. Marry, sir, they praise me and make an ass of me; now my foes tell me plainly I am an ass: so that by my foes, sir, I profit in the knowledge of myself, and by my friends I am abused: so that, conclusions to be as kisses, if your four negatives make your two affirmatives, why then—the worse for my friends and the better for my foes.

DUKE. Why, this is excellent.

CLOWN. By my troth, sir, no; though it please you to be one of my friends.

DUKE. Thou shalt not be the worse for me—there's gold.

CLOWN. But that it would be double-dealing, sir, I would you could make it another.

DUKE. O, you give me ill counsel.

CLOWN. Put your grace in your pocket, sir, for this once, and let your flesh and blood obey it.

DUKE. Well, I will be so much a sinner, to be a double-dealer; there's another.

CLOWN. Primo, secundo, tertio, is a good play, and the old saying is, the third pays for all: the triplex, sir, is a good tripping measure, or the bells of St Bennet, sir, may put you in mind—one, two, three!

DUKE. You can fool no more money out of me at this throw: if you will let your lady know I am here to speak with her, and bring her along with you, it may awake my bounty further.

CLOWN. Marry, sir, lullaby to your bounty till I come again. I go, sir, but I would not have you to think that my desire of having is the sin of covetousness: but, as you say, sir, let your bounty take a nap, I will awake it anon. He goes

Officers approach with Antonio

VIOLA. Here comes the man, sir, that did rescue me.

DUKE. That face of his I do remember well,
Yet when I saw it last it was besmeared
As black as Vulcan in the smoke of war:

A baubling vessel was he captain of,
For shallow draught and bulk unprizable,
With which such scathful grapple did he make
With the most noble bottom of our fleet,
That very envy and the tongue of loss
Cried fame and honour on him. What's the matter?
I OFFICER. Orsino, this is that Antonio
That took the Phœnix and her fraught from Candy,
And this is he that did the Tiger board,
When your young nephew Titus lost his leg:
Here in the streets, desperate of shame and state,
In private brabble did we apprehend him.
VIOLA. He did me kindness, sir, drew on my side,
But in conclusion put strange speech upon me,
I know not what 'twas but distraction.
DUKE. Notable pirate! thou salt-water thief!
What foolish boldness brought thee to their mercies,
Whom thou, in terms so bloody and so dear,
Hast made thine enemies?
ANTONIO. Orsino, noble sir,
Be pleased that I shake off these names you give me;
Antonio never yet was thief or pirate,
Though I confess, on base and ground enough,
Orsino's enemy. A witchcraft drew me hither:
That most ingrateful boy there by your side,
From the rude sea's enraged and foamy mouth
Did I redeem; a wrack past hope he was:
His life I gave him and did thereto add
My love, without retention or restraint,
All his in dedication. For his sake
Did I expose myself—pure for his love!—
Into the danger of this adverse town,
Drew to defend him when he was beset:
Where being apprehended, his false cunning,
Not meaning to partake with me in danger,
Taught him to face me out of his acquaintance,
And grew a twenty years removéd thing
While one would wink; denied me mine own purse,
Which I had recommended to his use
Not half an hour before.
VIOLA. How can this be?
DUKE. When came he to this town?
ANTONIO. To-day, my lord; and for three months before,
No interim, not a minute's vacancy,
Both day and night did we keep company.

Olivia comes from her house, attended

DUKE. Here comes the countess! now heaven walks on earth . . .
But for thee, fellow—fellow, thy words are madness,
Three months this youth hath tended upon me.
But more of that anon. . . . Take him aside.
OLIVIA. What would my lord, but that he may not have,
Wherein Olivia may seem serviceable?
Cesario, you do not keep promise with me.
VIOLA. Madam?
DUKE. Gracious Olivia,—
OLIVIA. What do you say, Cesario?—Good my lord,—
VIOLA. My lord would speak, my duty hushes me.
OLIVIA. If it be aught to the old tune, my lord,
It is as fat and fulsome to mine ear
As howling after music.
DUKE. Still so cruel?
OLIVIA. Still so constant, lord.
DUKE. What, to perverseness? you uncivil lady,
To whose ingrate and unauspicious altars
My soul the faithfull'st off'rings hath breathed out,
That e'er devotion tendered! What shall I do?
OLIVIA. Even what it please my lord, that shall become him.
DUKE. Why should I not, had I the heart to do it,
Like to th'Egyptian thief, at point of death,
Kill what I love?—a savage jealousy
That sometime savours nobly. But hear me this:
Since you to non-regardance cast my faith,
And that I partly know the instrument
That screws me from my true place in your favour,
Live you, the marble-breasted tyrant, still;
But this your minion, whom I know you love,
And whom, by heaven I swear, I tender dearly,
Him will I tear out of that cruel eye,
Where he sits crownéd in his master's spite. . . .
Come boy with me. My thoughts are ripe in mischief:
I'll sacrifice the lamb that I do love,
To spite a raven's heart within a dove.
VIOLA. And I, most jocund, apt and willingly,
To do you rest, a thousand deaths would die.
OLIVIA. Where goes Cesario?
VIOLA. After him I love
More than I love these eyes, more than my life,
More, by all mores, than e'er I shall love wife.
If I do feign, you witnesses above
Punish my life for tainting of my love!
OLIVIA. Ay me, detested! how am I beguiled!
VIOLA. Who does beguile you? who does do you wrong?
OLIVIA. Hast thou forgot thyself? is it so long?
Call forth the holy father.
DUKE. Come, away!
OLIVIA. Whither, my lord? Cesario, husband, stay.
DUKE. Husband?
OLIVIA. Ay, husband. Can he that deny?
DUKE. Her husband, sirrah?
VIOLA. No, my lord, not I.
OLIVIA. Alas, it is the baseness of thy fear,
That makes thee strangle thy propriety:
Fear not, Cesario, take thy fortunes up,
Be that thou know'st thou art, and then thou art
As great as that thou fear'st.

The priest comes forth

O, welcome, father!
Father, I charge thee, by thy reverence,
Here to unfold—though lately we intended
To keep in darkness, what occasion now
Reveals before 'tis ripe—what thou dost know
Hath newly passed between this youth and me.
PRIEST. A contract of eternal bond of love,
Confirmed by mutual joinder of your hands,
Attested by the holy close of lips,
Strength'ned by interchangement of your rings,
And all the ceremony of this compact
Sealed in my function, by my testimony:
Since when, my watch hath told me, toward my grave,
I have travelled but two hours.

DUKE. O, thou dissembling cub! what wilt thou be
When time hath sowed a grizzle on thy case?
Or will not else thy craft so quickly grow,
That thine own trip shall be thine overthrow?
Farewell, and take her, but direct thy feet
Where thou and I henceforth may never meet.
VIOLA. My lord, I do protest—
OLIVIA. O, do not swear!
Hold little faith, though thou hast too much fear.

Sir Andrew Aguecheek enters

SIR ANDREW. For the love of God, a surgeon! Send one presently to Sir Toby.
OLIVIA. What's the matter?
SIR ANDREW. H'as broke my head across and has given Sir Toby a bloody coxcomb too: for the love of God, your help! I had rather than forty pound I were at home.
OLIVIA. Who has done this, Sir Andrew?
SIR ANDREW. The count's gentleman, one Cesario: we took him for a coward, but he's the very devil incardinate.
DUKE. My gentleman, Cesario?
SIR ANDREW. 'Od's lifelings, here he is! You broke my head for nothing, and that that I did, I was set on to do't by Sir Toby.
VIOLA. Why do you speak to me? I never hurt you:
You drew your sword upon me without cause,
But I bespake you fair, and hurt you not.
SIR ANDREW. If a bloody coxcomb be a hurt, you have hurt me; I think you set nothing by a bloody coxcomb.

Sir Toby approaches with the Clown

Here comes Sir Toby halting, you shall hear more: but if he had not been in drink, he would have tickled you othergates than he did.
DUKE. How now, gentleman! how is't with you?
SIR TOBY. That's all one—has hurt me, and there's th'end on't . . . Sot, didst see Dick surgeon, sot?
CLOWN. O he's drunk, Sir Toby, an hour agone; his eyes were set at eight i'th' morning.
SIR TOBY. Then he's a rogue, and a passy-measures pavin: I hate a drunken rogue.
OLIVIA. Away with him! Who hath made this havoc with them?
SIR ANDREW. I'll help you, Sir Toby, because we'll be dressed together.
SIR TOBY. Will you help? an ass-head, and a coxcomb, and a knave! a thin-faced knave, a gull!
OLIVIA. Get him to bed, and let his hurt be looked to.
Clown, Sir Toby, and Sir Andrew go

Sebastian enters

SEBASTIAN. I am sorry, madam, I have hurt your kinsman;
But, had it been the brother of my blood,
I must have done no less with wit and safety.
You throw a strange regard upon me, and by that
I do perceive it hath offended you;
Pardon me, sweet one, even for the vows
We made each other but so late ago.
DUKE. One face, one voice, one habit, and two persons,
A natural perspective, that is and is not.
SEBASTIAN. Antonio! O my dear Antonio!
How have the hours racked and tortured me,
Since I have lost thee!
ANTONIO. Sebastian are you?
SEBASTIAN. Fear'st thou that, Antonio?
ANTONIO. How have you made division of yourself?
An apple, cleft in two, is not more twin
Than these two creatures. Which is Sebastian?
OLIVIA. Most wonderful!
SEBASTIAN. Do I stand there? I never had a brother:
Nor can there be that deity in my nature,
Of here and every where. I had a sister,
Whom the blind waves and surges have devoured . . .
Of charity, what kin are you to me?
What countryman? what name? what parentage?
VIOLA. Of Messaline: Sebastian was my father—
Such a Sebastian was my brother too:
So went he suited to his watery tomb:
If spirits can assume both form and suit,
You come to fright us.
SEBASTIAN. A spirit I am indeed,
But am in that dimension grossly clad,
Which from the womb I did participate.
Were you a woman, as the rest goes even,
I should my tears let fall upon your cheek,
And say 'Thrice-welcome, drownéd Viola!'
VIOLA. My father had a mole upon his brow.
SEBASTIAN. And so had mine.
VIOLA. And died that day when Viola from her birth
Had numb'red thirteen years.
SEBASTIAN. O, that record is lively in my soul!
He finishéd indeed his mortal act,
That day that made my sister thirteen years.
VIOLA. If nothing lets to make us happy both,
But this my masculine usurped attire,
Do not embrace me till each circumstance
Of place, time, fortune, do cohere and jump
That I am Viola—which to confirm,
I'll bring you to a captain in this town,
Where lie my maiden weeds; by whose gentle help
I was preserved to serve this noble count . . .
All the occurrence of my fortune since
Hath been between this lady and this lord.
SEBASTIAN [to Olivia]. So comes it, lady, you have been mistook;
But nature to her bias drew in that.
You would have been contracted to a maid,
Nor are you therein, by my life, deceived,
You are betrothed both to a maid and man.
DUKE. Be not amazed—right noble is his blood . . .
If this be so, as yet the glass seems true,
I shall have share in this most happy wrack.
[to Viola] Boy, thou hast said to me a thousand times
Thou never shouldst love woman like to me.
VIOLA. And all those sayings will I over-swear,
And all those swearings keep as true in soul,
As doth that orbéd continent the fire
That severs day from night.
DUKE. Give me thy hand,
And let me see thee in thy woman's weeds.
VIOLA. The captain that did bring me first on shore,
Hath my maid's garments: he upon some action
Is now in durance, at Malvolio's suit,
A gentleman and follower of my lady's.
OLIVIA. He shall enlarge him . . . Fetch Malvolio hither—

And yet, alas, now I remember me,
They say, poor gentleman, he's much distract.

The Clown returns with a letter in his hand, Fabian following

A most extracting frenzy of mine own
From my remembrance clearly banished his.
How does he, sirrah?

CLOWN. Truly, madam, he holds Belzebub at the stave's end as well as a man in his case may do: has here writ a letter to you, I should have given't you to-day morning: but as a madman's epistles are no gospels, so it skills not much when they are delivered.

OLIVIA. Open't, and read it.

CLOWN. Look then to be well edified, when the fool delivers the madman. [he shrieks] 'By the Lord, madam,'—

OLIVIA. How now! art thou mad?

CLOWN. No, madam, I do but read madness: an your ladyship will have it as it ought to be, you must allow Vox.

OLIVIA. Prithee, read i'thy right wits.

CLOWN. So I do, madonna; but to read his right wits, is to read thus: therefore perpend, my princess, and give ear.

OLIVIA [to Fabian]. Read it you, sirrah.

FABIAN [reads]. 'By the Lord, madam, you wrong me, and the world shall know it: though you have put me into darkness, and given your drunken cousin rule over me, yet have I the benefit of my senses as well as your ladyship. I have your own letter that induced me to the semblance I put on; with the which I doubt not but to do myself much right, or you much shame. Think of me as you please. I leave my duty a little unthought of, and speak out of my injury.

THE MADLY-USED MALVOLIO.'

OLIVIA. Did he write this?

CLOWN. Ay, madam.

DUKE. This savours not much of distraction.

OLIVIA. See him delivered, Fabian, bring him hither... Fabian goes
My lord, so please you, these things further thought on,
To think me as well a sister as a wife,
One day shall crown th'alliance on't, so please you,
Here at my house and at my proper cost.

DUKE. Madam, I am most apt t'embrace your offer...
[to Viola] Your master quits you; and for your service done him,
So much against the mettle of your sex,
So far beneath your soft and tender breeding,
And since you called me master for so long,
Here is my hand—you shall from this time be
Your master's mistress.

OLIVIA. A sister! you are she.

Fabian returns with Malvolio

DUKE. Is this the madman?

OLIVIA. Ay, my lord, this same:
How now, Malvolio?

MALVOLIO. Madam, you have done me wrong,
Notorious wrong.

OLIVIA. Have I, Malvolio? no!

MALVOLIO. Lady, you have. Pray you, peruse that letter....
You must not now deny it is your hand,
Write from it, if you can, in hand or phrase,
Or say 'tis not your seal, not your invention:
You can say none of this. Well, grant it then,
And tell me, in the modesty of honour,
Why you have given me such clear lights of favour,
Bade me come smiling and cross-gartered to you,
To put on yellow stockings and to frown
Upon Sir Toby and the lighter people:
And, acting this in an obedient hope,
Why have you suffered me to be imprisoned,
Kept in a dark house, visited by the priest,
And made the most notorious geck and gull
That e'er invention played on? tell me why.

OLIVIA. Alas, Malvolio, this is not my writing,
Though, I confess, much like the character:
But, out of question, 'tis Maria's hand.
And now I do bethink me, it was she
First told me thou wast mad; then cam'st in smiling,
And in such forms which here were presupposed
Upon thee in the letter... Prithee, be content—
This practice hath most shrewdly passed upon thee;
But, when we know the grounds and authors of it,
Thou shalt be both the plaintiff and the judge
Of thine own cause.

FABIAN. Good madam, hear me speak;
And let no quarrel nor no brawl to come
Taint the condition of this present hour,
Which I have wond'red at. In hope it shall not,
Most freely I confess, myself and Toby
Set this device against Malvolio here,
Upon some stubborn and uncourteous parts
We had conceived in him: Maria writ
The letter at Sir Toby's great importance,
In recompense whereof he hath married her...
How with a sportful malice it was followed,
May rather pluck on laughter than revenge,
If that the injuries be justly weighed
That have on both sides passed.

OLIVIA. Alas, poor fool! how have they baffled thee!

CLOWN. Why, 'Some are born great, some achieve greatness, and some have greatness thrown upon them.' I was one, sir, in this interlude, one Sir Topas, sir—but that's all one... 'By the Lord, fool, I am not mad!' But do you remember? 'Madam, why laugh you at such a barren rascal? an you smile not, he's gagged'... And thus the whirligig of time brings in his revenges.

MALVOLIO. I'll be revenged on the whole pack of you.
He goes

OLIVIA. He hath been most notoriously abused.

DUKE. Pursue him, and entreat him to a peace:
He hath not told us of the captain yet.
When that is known, and golden time convents,
A solemn combination shall be made
Of our dear souls... Meantime, sweet sister,
We will not part from hence. Cesario, come!
For so you shall be, while you are a man;
But, when in other habits you are seen,
Orsino's mistress and his fancy's queen.
All save the Clown go

CLOWN [sings].
When that I was and a little tiny boy,
With hey, ho, the wind and the rain:

A foolish thing was but a toy,
  For the rain it raineth every day.

But when I came to man's estate,
  With hey, ho, the wind and the rain:
'Gainst knaves and thieves men shut their gate,
  For the rain it raineth every day.

But when I came alas to wive,
  With hey, ho, the wind and the rain:
By swaggering could I never thrive,
  For the rain it raineth every day.

But when I came unto my beds,
  With hey, ho, the wind and the rain:
With toss-pots still had drunken heads,
  For the rain it raineth every day.

A great while ago the world begun,
  With hey, ho, the wind and the rain:
But that's all one, our play is done,
  And we'll strive to please you every day.

He goes

The Winter's Tale

ACT 1

Scene 1: Sicilia. The Palace of Leontes

Enter Camillo and Archidamus

ARCHIDAMUS. If you shall chance, Camillo, to visit Bohemia, on the like occasion whereon my services are now on foot, you shall see, as I have said, great difference betwixt our Bohemia and your Sicilia.

CAMILLO. I think, this coming summer, the King of Sicilia means to pay Bohemia the visitation which he justly owes him.

ARCHIDAMUS. Wherein our entertainment shall shame us: we will be justified in our loves: for, indeed . . .

CAMILLO. Beseech you . . .

ARCHIDAMUS. Verily I speak it in the freedom of my knowledge: we cannot with such magnificence . . . in so rare . . . I know not what to say . . . We will give you sleepy drinks, that your senses (unintelligent of our insufficience) may, though they cannot praise us, as little accuse us.

CAMILLO. You pay a great deal too dear for what's given freely.

ARCHIDAMUS. Believe me, I speak as my understanding instructs me, and as mine honesty puts it to utterance.

CAMILLO. Sicilia cannot show himself over-kind to Bohemia . . . They were trained together in their childhoods; and there rooted betwixt them then such an affection, which cannot choose but branch now. Since their more mature dignities and royal necessities made separation of their society, their encounters (though not personal) have been royally attorneyed with interchange of gifts, letters, loving embassies—that they have seemed to be together, though absent; shook hands, as over a vast; and embraced as it were from the ends of opposed winds. The heavens continue their loves.

ARCHIDAMUS. I think there is not in the world, either malice or matter, to alter it. . . . You have an unspeakable comfort of your young prince Mamillius: it is a gentleman of the greatest promise that ever came into my note.

CAMILLO. I very well agree with you in the hopes of him: it is a gallant child; one that, indeed, physics the subject, makes old hearts fresh: they that went on crutches ere he was born desire yet their life to see him a man.

ARCHIDAMUS. Would they else be content to die?

CAMILLO. Yes; if there were no other excuse why they should desire to live.

ARCHIDAMUS. If the king had no son, they would desire to live on crutches till he had one. They go

Scene 2

Enter Leontes, Hermione, Mamillius, Polixenes, and attendants

POLIXENES. Nine changes of the wat'ry star hath been
The shepherd's note, since we have left our throne
Without a burthen: time as long again
Would be filled up, my brother, with our thanks,
And yet we should, for perpetuity,
Go hence in debt: and therefore, like a cipher
(Yet standing in rich place), I multiply,
With one 'We thank you,' many thousands moe
That go before it.

LEONTES. Stay your thanks a while,
And pay them when you part.

POLIXENES. Sir, that's to-morrow . . .
I am questioned by my fears, of what may chance
Or breed upon our absence, that may blow
No sneaping winds at home, to make us say
'This is put forth too truly' . . . Besides, I have stayed
To tire your royalty.

LEONTES. We are tougher, brother,
Than you can put us to't.

POLIXENES. No longer stay.

LEONTES. One se'nnight longer.

POLIXENES. Very sooth, to-morrow.

LEONTES. We'll part the time between's then: and in that
I'll no gainsaying.

POLIXENES. Press me not, beseech you, so:
There is no tongue that moves . . . none, none i'th' world,
So soon as yours, could win me: so it should now,
Were there necessity in your request, although
'Twere needful I denied it. My affairs
Do even drag me homeward: which to hinder
Were (in your love) a whip to me; my stay,
To you a charge and trouble: to save both,
Farewell, our brother.

LEONTES. Tongue-tied, our queen? speak you.

HERMIONE. I had thought, sir, to have held my peace, until
You had drawn oaths from him not to stay: you, sir,
Charge him too coldly. Tell him, you are sure
All in Bohemia's well: this satisfaction
The by-gone day proclaimed—say this to him,
He's beat from his best ward.

LEONTES. Well said, Hermione.

HERMIONE. To tell, he longs to see his son, were strong:
But let him say so then, and let him go;
But let him swear so, and he shall not stay,
We'll thwack him hence with distaffs. . . .
Yet of your royal presence I'll adventure
The borrow of a week. When at Bohemia
You take my lord, I'll give him my commission
To let him there a month behind the gest
Prefixed for's parting: yet, good deed, Leontes,
I love thee not a jar o'th' clock behind
What Lady She her lord. . . . You'll stay?

POLIXENES. No, madam.

HERMIONE. Nay, but you will?

POLIXENES. I may not, verily.

HERMIONE. 'Verily!'
You put me off with limber vows: but I,
Though you would seek t'unsphere the stars with oaths,
Should yet say, 'Sir, no going' . . . Verily
You shall not go; a lady's Verily 'is

As potent as a lord's. Will you go yet?
Force me to keep you as a prisoner,
Not like a guest; so you shall pay your fees
When you depart, and save your thanks. How say you?
My prisoner? or my guest? by your dread Verily,
One of them you shall be.
POLIXENES. Your guest then, madam:
To be your prisoner should import offending;
Which is for me less easy to commit
Than you to punish.
HERMIONE. Not your gaoler then,
But your kind hostess.... Come, I'll question you
Of my lord's tricks and yours, when you were boys:
You were pretty lordings then?
POLIXENES. We were, fair queen,
Two lads, that thought there was no more behind,
But such a day to-morrow, as to-day,
And to be boy eternal.
HERMIONE. Was not my lord
The verier wag o'th' two?
POLIXENES. We were as twinned lambs, that did frisk i'th' sun,
And bleat the one at th'other: what we changed
Was innocence for innocence; we knew not
The doctrine of ill-doing, nor dreamed
That any did ... Had we pursued that life,
And our weak spirits ne'er been higher reared
With stronger blood, we should have answered heaven
Boldly 'not guilty'; the imposition cleared,
Hereditary ours.
HERMIONE. By this we gather
You have tripped since.
POLIXENES. O my most sacred lady,
Temptations have since then been born to's: for
In those unfledged days was my wife a girl;
Your precious self had then not crossed the eyes
Of my young play-fellow.
HERMIONE. Grace to boot!
Of this make no conclusion, lest you say
Your queen and I are devils: yet, go on,
Th'offences we have made you do we'll answer,
If you first sinned with us; and that with us
You did continue fault; and that you slipped not
With any, but with us.
LEONTES. Is he won yet?
HERMIONE. He'll stay, my lord.
LEONTES. At my request he would not ...
Hermione, my dearest, thou never spok'st
To better purpose.
HERMIONE. Never?
LEONTES. Never, but once.
HERMIONE. What? have I twice said well? when was't before?
I prithee tell me: cram's with praise, and make's
As fat as tame things: one good deed, dying tongueless,
Slaughters a thousand waiting upon that.
Our praises are our wages: you may ride's
With one soft kiss a thousand furlongs ere
With spur we heat an acre. But to th' goal:
My last good deed was to entreat his stay;
What was my first? it has an elder sister,
Or I mistake you: O, would her name were Grace!
But once before I spoke to th' purpose? When?
Nay, let me have't: I long.
LEONTES. Why, that was when
Three crabbéd months had soured themselves to death,
Ere I could make thee open thy white hand,
And clap thyself my love; then didst thou utter
'I am yours for ever.'
HERMIONE. 'Tis Grace, indeed....
Why, lo you now, I have spoke to th' purpose twice:
The one, for ever earned a royal husband;
Th'other, for some while a friend.
She gives her hand to Polixenes; they talk apart
LEONTES. Too hot, too hot:
To mingle friendship far, is mingling bloods.
I have tremor cordis on me: my heart dances,
But not for joy; not joy.... This entertainment
May a free face put on; derive a liberty
From heartiness, from bounty, fertile bosom,
And well become the agent: 't may; I grant:
But to be paddling palms and pinching fingers,
As now they are, and making practised smiles
As in a looking-glass; and then to sigh, as 'twere
The mort o'th' deer; O, that is entertainment
My bosom likes not, nor my brows.... Mamillius,
Art thou my boy?
MAMILLIUS. Ay, my good lord.
LEONTES. I'fecks!
Why, that's my bawcock.... What! hast smutched thy nose?
They say it is a copy out of mine.... Come, captain,
We must be neat; not neat, but cleanly, captain:
And yet the steer, the heifer, and the calf,
Are all called 'neat'.... Still virginalling
Upon his palm.... How now, you wanton calf?
Art thou my calf?
MAMILLIUS. Yes, if you will, my lord.
LEONTES. Thou want'st a rough pash and the shoots that I have,
To be full like me: yet they say we are Almost as like as eggs; women say so
(That will say any thing!) but were they false
As o'er-dyed blacks, as wind, as waters; false
As dice are to be wished, by one that fixes
No bourn 'twixt his and mine; yet were it true
To say this boy were like me.... Come, sir page,
Look on me with your welkin eye: sweet villain!
Most dear'st! my collop! Can thy dam?—may't be?
Affection! thy intention stabs the centre:
Thou dost make possible things not so held,
Communicat'st with dreams—how can this be?—
With what's unreal thou coactive art,
And fellow'st nothing: then 'tis very credent
Thou mayst co-join with something, and thou dost
(And that beyond commission) and I find it,
(And that to the infection of my brains,
And hard'ning of my brows.)
POLIXENES. What means Sicilia?
HERMIONE. He something seems unsettled.
POLIXENES. How, my lord!
LEONTES. What cheer? how is't with you, best brother?
HERMIONE. You look
As if you held a brow of much distraction:
Are you moved, my lord?
LEONTES. No, in good earnest.
How sometimes nature will betray its folly!
Its tenderness! and make itself a pastime

To harder bosoms! Looking on the lines
Of my boy's face, methoughts I did recoil
Twenty-three years, and saw myself unbreeched,
In my green velvet coat; my dagger muzzled
Lest it should bite its master, and so prove
(As ornaments oft do) too dangerous . . .
How like, methought, I then was to this kernel,
This squash, this gentleman. Mine honest friend,
Will you take eggs for money?

MAMILLIUS. No, my lord, I'll fight.

LEONTES. You will? why, happy man be's dole! My brother,
Are you so fond of your young prince, as we
Do seem to be of ours?

POLIXENES. If at home, sir,
He's all my exercise, my mirth, my matter:
Now my sworn friend, and then mine enemy;
My parasite, my soldier, statesman, all:
He makes a July's day short as December;
And with his varying childness cures in me
Thoughts that would thick my blood.

LEONTES. So stands this squire
Officed with me: we two will walk, my lord,
And leave you to your graver steps. . . . Hermione,
How thou lov'st us, show in our brother's welcome;
Let what is dear in Sicily be cheap:
Next to thyself and my young rover, he's
Apparent to my heart.

HERMIONE. If you would seek us,
We are yours i'th' garden: shall's attend you there?

LEONTES. To your own bents dispose you: you'll be found,
Be you beneath the sky . . . [aside] I am angling now,
Though you perceive me not how I give line.
Go to, go to!
How she holds up the neb! the bill to him!
And arms her with the boldness of a wife
To her allowing husband! [they go out] Gone already,
Inch-thick, knee-deep! O'er head and ears a forked one. . . .
Go, play, boy, play: thy mother plays, and I
Play too; but so disgraced a part, whose issue
Will hiss me to my grave: contempt and clamour
Will be my knell. . . . Go, play, boy, play. There have been (Or I am much deceived) cuckolds ere now,
And many a man there is (even at this present,
Now, while I speak this) holds his wife by th'arm,
That little thinks she has been sluiced in's absence,
And his pond fished by his next neighbour (by Sir Smile, his neighbour): nay, there's comfort in't,
Whiles other men have gates, and those gates opened,
As mine, against their will. Should all despair
That have revolted wives, the tenth of mankind
Would hang themselves. Physic for't there's none:
It is a bawdy planet, that will strike
Where 'tis predominant; and 'tis powerful . . . think it . . .
From east, west, north, and south! be it concluded,
No barricado for a belly . . . know't,
It will let in and out the enemy,
With bag and baggage . . . many thousand on's
Have the disease, and feel't not. . . . How now, boy?

MAMILLUIS. I am like you, they say.

LEONTES. Why, that's some comfort.
What! Camillo there?

CAMILLO. Ay, my good lord.

LEONTES. Go play, Mamillius. Thou'rt an honest man . . . The boy goes
Camillo, this great sir will yet stay longer.

CAMILLO. You had much ado to make his anchor hold,
When you cast out, it still came home.

LEONTES. Didst note it?

CAMILLO. He would not stay at your petitions, made
His business more material.

LEONTES. Didst perceive it?
[aside] They're here with me already; whisp'ring, rounding:
'Sicilia is a—so-forth': 'tis far gone,
When I shall gust it last. . . . How came't, Camillo,
That he did stay?

CAMILLO. At the good queen's entreaty.

LEONTES. At the queen's be't: 'good,' should be pertinent,
But so it is, it is not. Was this taken
By any understanding pate but thine?
For thy conceit is soaking, will draw in
More than the common blocks . . . not noted, is't,
But of the finer natures? by some severals
Of head-piece extraordinary? lower messes
Perchance are to this business purblind? say.

CAMILLO. Business, my lord? I think most understand
Bohemia stays here longer.

LEONTES. Ha!

CAMILLO. Stays here longer.

LEONTES. Ay, but why?

CAMILLO. To satisfy your highness, and the entreaties
Of our most gracious mistress.

LEONTES. Satisfy?
Th'entreaties of your mistress? satisfy?
Let that suffice. . . . I have trusted thee, Camillo,
With all the nearest things to my heart, as well
My chamber-counsels, wherein, priest-like, thou
Hast cleansed my bosom; ay, from thee departed
Thy penitent reformed: but we have been Deceived in thy integrity, deceived
In that which seems so.

CAMILLO. Be it forbid, my lord!

LEONTES. To bide upon't: thou art not honest: or,
If thou inclin'st that way, thou art a coward,
Which hoxes honesty behind, restraining
From course required: or else thou must be counted
A servant, grafted in my serious trust,
And therein negligent; or else a fool,
That seest a game played home, the rich stake drawn,
And tak'st it all for jest.

CAMILLO. My gracious lord,
I may be negligent, foolish, and fearful—
In every one of these no man is free,
But that his negligence, his folly, fear,
Among the infinite doings of the world,
Sometime puts forth. In your affairs, my lord,
If ever I were wilful-negligent,
It was my folly; if industriously
I played the fool, it was my negligence,
Not weighing well the end; if ever fearful
To do a thing, where I the issue doubted,
Whereof the execution did cry out
Against the non-performance, 'twas a fear
Which oft infects the wisest: these, my lord,
Are such allowed infirmities, that honesty

Is never free of. But, beseech your grace,
Be plainer with me, let me know my trespass
By its own visage: if I then deny it,
'Tis none of mine.
LEONTES. Ha' not you seen, Camillo
(But that's past doubt: you have, or your eye-glass
Is thicker than a cuckold's horn), or heard
(For to a vision so apparent rumour
Cannot be mute) or thought (for cogitation
Resides not in that man that does not think)
My wife is slippery? If thou wilt confess,
Or else be impudently negative,
To have nor eyes, nor ears, nor thought, then say
My wife's a hobby-horse, deserves a name
As rank as any flax-wench that puts to
Before her troth-plight: say't, and justify't.
CAMILLO. I would not be a stander-by, to hear
My sovereign mistress clouded so, without
My present vengeance taken: 'shrew my heart,
You never spoke what did become you less
Than this; which to reiterate, were sin
As deep as that, though true.
LEONTES. Is whispering nothing?
Is leaning cheek to cheek? is meeting noses?
Kissing with inside lip? stopping the career
Of laughter with a sigh (a note infallible
Of breaking honesty)? horsing foot on foot?
Skulking in corners? wishing clocks more swift?
Hours, minutes? noon, midnight? and all eyes
Blind with the pin and web but theirs; theirs only,
That would unseen be wicked? Is this nothing?
Why then the world, and all that's in't, is nothing,
The covering sky is nothing, Bohemia nothing,
My wife is nothing, nor nothing have these nothings,
If this be nothing.
CAMILLO. Good my lord, be cured
Of this diseased opinion, and betimes,
For 'tis most dangerous.
LEONTES. Say it be, 'tis true.
CAMILLO. No, no, my lord.
LEONTES. It is; you lie, you lie:
I say thou liest, Camillo, and I hate thee,
Pronounce thee a gross lout, a mindless slave,
Or else a hovering temporizer, that
Canst with thine eyes at once see good and evil,
Inclining to them both: were my wife's liver
Infected as her life, she would not live
The running of one glass.
CAMILLO. Who does infect her?
LEONTES. Why, he that wears her like her medal, hanging
About his neck—Bohemia! who, if I
Had servants true about me, that bare eyes
To see alike mine honour, as their profits
(Their own particular thrifts) they would do that
Which should undo more doing: ay, and thou
His cupbearer, whom I from meaner form
Have benched and reared to worship, who mayst see
Plainly as heaven sees earth and earth sees heaven,
How I am galled, mightst bespice a cup,
To give mine enemy a lasting wink;
Which draught to me, were cordial.
CAMILLO. Sir, my lord,
I could do this, and that with no rash potion,
But with a ling'ring dram, that should not work
Maliciously like poison: but I cannot Believe this crack to be in my dread mistress
(So sovereignly being honourable!)
I have loved the—
LEONTES. Make that thy question, and go rot!
Dost think I am so muddy, so unsettled,
To appoint myself in this vexation, sully
The purity and whiteness of my sheets
(Which to preserve is sleep, which being spotted
Is goads, thorns, nettles, tails of wasps),
Give scandal to the blood o'th' prince my son
(Who I do think is mine, and love as mine),
Without ripe moving to't? Would I do this?
Could man so blench?
CAMILLO. I must believe you, sir,
I do, and will fetch off Bohemia for't:
Provided, that when he's removed, your highness
Will take again your queen, as yours at first,
Even for your son's sake, and thereby forestalling
The injury of tongues in courts and kingdoms
Known and allied to yours.
LEONTES. Thou dost advise me,
Even so as I mine own course have set down:
I'll give no blemish to her honour, none.
CAMILLO. My lord,
Go then; and with a countenance as clear
As friendship wears at feasts, keep with Bohemia,
And with your queen ... I am his cupbearer,
If from me he have wholesome beverage,
Account me not your servant.
LEONTES. This is all:
Do't, and thou hast the one half of my heart;
Do't not, thou spilt'st thine own.
CAMILLO. I'll do't, my lord.
LEONTES. I will seem friendly, as thou hast advised me.
He goes
CAMILLO. O miserable lady.... But, for me,
What case stand I in? I must be the poisoner
Of good Polixenes, and my ground to do't
Is the obedience to a master; one,
Who in rebellion with himself, will have
All that are his, so too.... To do this deed,
Promotion follows ... If I could find example
Of thousands that had struck anointed kings
And flourished after, I'ld not do't: but since
Nor brass, nor stone, nor parchment, bears not one,
Let villainy itself forswear't.... I must
Forsake the court: to do't, or no, is certain
To me a break-neck.... Happy star reign now!
Here comes Bohemia.

Polixenes enters

POLIXENES. This is strange: methinks
My favour here begins to warp. Not speak!
Good day, Camillo.
CAMILLO. Hail, most royal sir!
POLIXENES. What is the news i'th' court?
CAMILLO. None rare, my lord.
POLIXENES. The king hath on him such a countenance
As he had lost some province, and a region
Loved as he loves himself: even now I met him
With customary compliment, when he,
Wafting his eyes to th' contrary, and falling
A lip of much contempt, speeds from me, and
So leaves me, to consider what is breeding
That changes thus his manners.

CAMILLO. I dare not know, my lord.
POLIXENES. How! dare not? do not. Do you know, and dare not?
Be intelligent to me—'tis thereabouts:
For, to yourself, what you do know, you must,
And cannot say you dare not.... Good Camillo,
Your changed complexions are to me a mirror,
Which shows me mine changed too: for I must be
A party in this alteration, finding
Myself thus altered with't.
CAMILLO. There is a sickness
Which puts some of us in distemper, but
I cannot name the disease, and it is caught
Of you, that yet are well.
POLIXENES. How! caught of me?
Make me not sighted like the basilisk:
I have looked on thousands, who have sped the better
By my regard, but killed none so ... Camillo—
As you are certainly a gentleman, thereto
Clerk-like experienced, which no less adorns
Our gentry than our parents' noble names,
In whose success we are gentle—I beseech you,
If you know aught which does behove my knowledge
Thereof to be informed, imprison't not
In ignorant concealment.
CAMILLO. I may not answer.
POLIXENES. A sickness caught of me, and yet I well!
I must be answered.... Dost thou hear, Camillo,
I conjure thee, by all the parts of man
Which honour does acknowledge, whereof the least
Is not this suit of mine, that thou declare
What incidency thou dost guess of harm
Is creeping toward me; how far off, how near;
Which way to be prevented, if to be;
If not, how best to bear it.
CAMILLO. Sir, I will tell you,
Since I am charged in honour and by him
That I think honourable: therefore mark my counsel,
Which must be even as swiftly followed, as
I mean to utter it; or both yourself and me
Cry 'lost,' and so good night!
POLIXENES. On, good Camillo.
CAMILLO. I am appointed him to murder you.
POLIXENES. By whom, Camillo?
CAMILLO. By the king.
POLIXENES. For what!
CAMILLO. He thinks, nay with all confidence he swears,
As he had seen't, or been an instrument
To vice you to't, that you have touched his queen
Forbiddenly.
POLIXENES. O, then my best blood turn
To an infected jelly, and my name
Be yoked with his that did betray the Best!
Turn then my freshest reputation to
A savour that may strike the dullest nostril
Where I arrive, and my approach be shunned,
Nay hated too, worse than the great'st infection
That e'er was heard or read!
CAMILLO. Swear his thought over
By each particular star in heaven and
By all their influences! you may as well
Forbid the sea for to obey the moon,
As or by oath remove or counsel shake
The fabric of his folly, whose foundation
Is piled upon his faith, and will continue
The standing of his body.
POLIXENES. How should this grow?
CAMILLO. I know not: but I am sure 'tis safer to Avoid what's grown than question how 'tis born.
If therefore you dare trust my honesty,
That lies enclosèd in this trunk which you
Shall bear along impawned, away to-night!
Your followers I will whisper to the business,
And will by twos and threes, at several posterns,
Clear them o'th' city: for myself, I'll put
My fortunes to your service, which are here
By this discovery lost.... Be not uncertain,
For by the honour of my parents I
Have uttered truth: which if you seek to prove,
I dare not stand by; nor shall you be safer
Than one condemned by the king's own mouth:
Thereon his execution sworn.
POLIXENES. I do believe thee:
I saw his heart in's face.... Give me thy hand,
Be pilot to me, and thy places shall Still neighbour mine. My ships are ready, and
My people did expect my hence departure
Two days ago.... This jealousy
Is for a precious creature: as she's rare,
Must it be great; and, as his person's mighty,
Must it be violent; and as he does conceive
He is dishonoured by a man which ever
Professed to him, why, his revenges must
In that be made more bitter. Fear o'ershades me:
Good expedition be my friend, and comfort
The gracious queen, part of his theme, but nothing
Of his ill-ta'en suspicion! Come, Camillo,
I will respect thee as a father, if
Thou bear'st my life off. Hence: let us avoid.
CAMILLO. It is in mine authority to command
The keys of all the posterns: please your highness
To take the urgent hour.... Come, sir, away.
They go

ACT 2
Scene 1

Hermione enters with her ladies and Mamillius

HERMIONE. Take the boy to you: he so troubles me,
'Tis past enduring.
1 LADY. Come, my gracious lord,
Shall I be your playfellow?
MAMILLIUS. No, I'll none of you.
1 LADY. Why, my sweet lord?
MAMILLIUS. You'll kiss me hard, and speak to me as if I were a baby still.... I love you better.
2 LADY. And why so, my lord?
MAMILLIUS. Not for because
Your brows are blacker; yet black brows, they say,
Become some women best, so that there be not
Too much hair there, but in a semicircle,
Or a half-moon made with a pen.
2 LADY. Who taught' this?
MAMILLIUS. I learned it out of women's faces.... Pray now
What colour are your eyebrows?
1 LADY. Blue, my lord.

MAMILLIUS. Nay, that's a mock: I have seen a lady's nose
That has been blue, but not her eyebrows.
1 LADY. Hark ye,
The queen your mother rounds apace: we shall
Present our services to a fine new prince
One of these days, and then you'ld wanton with us,
If we would have you.
2 LADY. She is spread of late
Into a goodly bulk (good time encounter her!)
HERMIONE. What wisdom stirs amongst you? Come, sir, now
I am for you again: pray you, sit by us,
And tell's a tale.
MAMILLIUS. Merry, or sad, shall't be?
HERMIONE. As merry as you will.
MAMILLIUS. A sad tale's best for winter: I have one
Of sprites and goblins.
HERMIONE. Let's have that, good sir.
Come on, sit down, come on, and do your best
To fright me with your sprites: you're powerful at it.
MAMILLIUS. There was a man—
HERMIONE. Nay, come, sit down; then on.
MAMILLIUS. Dwelt by a churchyard ... I will tell it softly,
Yon crickets shall not hear it.
HERMIONE. Come on then,
And give't me in mine ear.

Leontes enters, with Antigonus, lords and a guard

LEONTES. Was he met there? his train? Camillo with him?
1 LORD. Behind the tuft of pines I met them, never Saw I men scour so on their way: I eyed them
Even to their ships.
LEONTES. How blest am I
In my just censure! in my true opinion!
Alack, for lesser knowledge! how accursed,
In being so blest! There may be in the cup
A spider steeped, and one may drink, depart,
And yet partake no venom (for his knowledge
Is not infected): but if one present
Th'abhorred ingredient to his eye, make known
How he hath drunk, he cracks his gorge, his sides,
With violent hefts: I have drunk, and seen the spider....
Camillo was his help in this, his pandar:
There is a plot against my life, my crown;
All's true that is mistrusted: that false villain
Whom I employed was pre-employed by him:
He has discovered my design, and I
Remain a pinched thing; yea, a very trick
For them to play at will ... How came the posterns
So easily open?
1 LORD. By his great authority,
Which often hath no less prevailed than so
On your command.
LEONTES. I know't too well....
Give me the boy, I am glad you did not nurse him:
Though he does bear some signs of me, yet you
Have too much blood in him.
HERMIONE. What is this? sport?
LEONTES. Bear the boy hence, he shall not come about her,
Away with him! and let her sport herself
With that she's big with—for 'tis Polixenes
Has made thee swell thus.
HERMIONE. But I'ld say he had not,
And I'll be sworn you would believe my saying,
Howe'er you lean to th' nayward.
They carry the boy away
LEONTES. You, my lords,
Look on her, mark her well; be but about
To say 'she is a goodly lady,' and
The justice of your hearts will thereto add
''Tis pity she's not honest ... honourable':
Praise her but for this her without-door form
(Which on my faith deserves high speech) and straight
The shrug, the hum or ha!—these petty brands
That calumny doth use; O, I am out,
That mercy does, for calumny will sear
Virtue itself—these shrugs, these hums, and ha's,
When you have said 'she's goodly,' come between
Ere you can say 'she's honest': but be't known,
(From him that has most cause to grieve it should be)
She's an adultress.
HERMIONE. Should a villain say so
(The most replenished villain in the world),
He were as much more villain ... You, my lord,
Do but mistake.
LEONTES. You have mistook, my lady,
Polixenes for Leontes: O thou thing!
Which I'll not call a creature of thy place,
Lest barbarism, making me the precedent,
Should a like language use to all degrees,
And mannerly distinguishment leave out
Betwixt the prince and beggar: I have said
She's an adultress, I have said with whom:
More; she's a traitor, and Camillo is
A fedary with her, and one that knows
What she should shame to know herself
But with her most vile principal ... that she's
A bed-swerver, even as bad as those
That vulgars give bold'st titles; ay, and privy
To this their late escape.
HERMIONE. No, by my life,
Privy to none of this ... How will this grieve you,
When you shall come to clearer knowledge, that
You thus have published me? Gentle my lord,
You scarce can right me throughly then, to say
You did mistake.
LEONTES. No: if I mistake
In those foundations which I build upon,
The Centre is not big enough to bear
A school-boy's top.... Away with her to prison:
He who shall speak for her is afar off guilty,
But that he speaks.
HERMIONE. There's some ill planet reigns:
I must be patient, till the heavens look
With an aspect more favourable.... Good my lords,
I am not prone to weeping, as our sex
Commonly are, the want of which vain dew
Perchance shall dry your pities: but I have
That honourable grief lodged here, which burns
Worse than tears drown: beseech you all, my lords,
With thoughts so qualified as your charities
Shall best instruct you, measure me; and so
The king's will be performed!
LEONTES. Shall I be heard?

HERMIONE. Who is't that goes with me? Beseech your highness,
My women may be with me, for you see
My plight requires it. Do not weep, good fools,
There is no cause: when you shall know your mistress
Has deserved prison, then abound in tears
As I come out: this action I now go on
Is for my better grace.... Adieu, my lord!
I never wished to see you sorry, now
I trust I shall.... My women come, you have leave.
LEONTES. Go, do our bidding; hence.
They lead the Queen away; her ladies follow
I LORD. Beseech your highness, call the queen again.
ANTIGONUS. Be certain what you do, sir, lest your justice
Prove violence, in the which three great ones suffer,
Yourself, your queen, your son.
I LORD. For her, my lord,
I dare my life lay down and will do't, sir,
Please you t'accept it, that the queen is spotless
I'th'eyes of heaven, and to you—I mean
In this which you accuse her.
ANTIGONUS. If it prove
She's otherwise, I'll keep my stables where
I lodge my wife, I'll go in couples with her;
Than when I feel and see her no farther trust her;
For every inch of woman in the world,
Ay, every dram of woman's flesh is false,
If she be.
LEONTES. Hold your peaces.
I LORD. Good my lord—
ANTIGONUS. It is for you we speak, not for ourselves:
You are abused, and by some putter-on
That will be damned for't; would I knew the villain,
I would lam-damn him ... Be she honour-flawed,
I have three daughters; the eldest is eleven;
The second and the third, nine and some five;
If this prove true, they'll pay for't: by mine honour,
I'll geld 'em all; fourteen they shall not see,
To bring false generations: they are co-heirs,
And I had rather glib myself, than they
Should not produce fair issue.
LEONTES. Cease, no more!
You smell this business with a sense as cold
As is a dead man's nose: but I do see't and feel't,
As you feel doing thus ... and see withal
The instruments that feel.
ANTIGONUS. If it be so,
We need no grave to bury honesty,
There's not a grain of it the face to sweeten
Of the whole dungy earth.
LEONTES. What! lack I credit?
I LORD. I had rather you did lack than I, my lord,
Upon this ground: and more it would content me
To have her honour true than your suspicion,
Be blamed for't how you might.
LEONTES. Why, what need we
Commune with you of this, but rather follow
Our forceful instigation? Our prerogative
Calls not your counsels, but our natural goodness
Imparts this: which if you, or stupefied,
Or seeming so in skill, cannot or will not
Relish a truth like us ... inform yourselves
We need no more of your advice: the matter,
The loss, the gain, the ord'ring on't, is all
Properly ours.
ANTIGONUS. And I wish, my liege,
You had only in your silent judgement tried it,
Without more overture.
LEONTES. How could that be?
Either thou art most ignorant by age,
Or thou wert born a fool ... Camillo's flight,
Added to their familiarity
(Which was as gross as ever touched conjecture,
That lacked sight only, nought for approbation
But only seeing, all other circumstances
Made up to th' deed) doth push on this proceeding:
Yet, for a greater confirmation
(For in an act of this importance, 'twere
Most piteous to be wild), I have dispatched in post
To sacred Delphos, to Apollo's temple,
Cleomenes and Dion, whom you know
Of stuffed sufficiency: now from the oracle
They will bring all—whose spiritual counsel had,
Shall stop or spur me.... Have I done well?
I LORD. Well done, my lord.
LEONTES. Though I am satisfied, and need no more
Than what I know, yet shall the oracle
Give rest to th' minds of others; such as he,
Points at Antigonus
Whose ignorant credulity will not
Come up to th' truth.... So have we thought it good,
From our free person she should be confined,
Lest that the treachery of the two fled hence
Be left her to perform. Come, follow us,
We are to speak in public; for this business
Will raise us all.
ANTIGONUS. To laughter, as I take it,
If the good truth were known. They go

Scene 2: A prison in Sicilia

Paulina, a gentleman, and attendants enter

PAULINA. The keeper of the prison, call to him;
Let him have knowledge who I am....
The gentleman goes
Good lady,
No court in Europe is too good for thee,
What dost thou then in prison?

The gentleman returns with the Gaoler.

Now, good sir,
You know me, do you not?
GAOLER. For a worthy lady,
And one whom much I honour.
PAULINA. Pray you then,
Conduct me to the queen.
GAOLER. I may not, madam.
To the contrary I have express commandment.
PAULINA. Here's ado,
To lock up honesty and honour from
Th'access of gentle visitors! Is't lawful, pray you,
To see her women? any of them? Emilia?
GAOLER. So please you, madam,
To put apart these your attendants, I
Shall bring Emilia forth.
PAULINA. I pray now, call her ...
Withdraw yourselves. The attendants depart
GAOLER. And, madam,
I must be present at your conference.

PAULINA. Well: be't so: prithee. The Gaoler goes
Here's such ado to make no stain a stain,
As passes colouring....

The Gaoler returns with Emilia

Dear gentlewoman,
How fares our gracious lady?
EMILIA. As well as one so great and so forlorn
May hold together: on her frights and griefs
(Which never tender lady hath borne greater)
She is, something before her time, delivered.
PAULINA. A boy?
EMILIA. A daughter—and a goodly babe,
Lusty and like to live: the Queen receives
Much comfort in't: says, 'My poor prisoner,
I am innocent as you.'
PAULINA. I dare be sworn ...
These dangerous unsafe lunes i'th' king, beshrew them!
He must be told on't, and he shall: the office
Becomes a woman best; I'll take't upon me,
If I prove honey-mouthed, let my tongue blister,
And never to my red-looked anger be
The trumpet any more ... Pray you, Emilia,
Commend my best obedience to the queen,
If she dares trust me with her little babe,
I'll show't the king and undertake to be
Her advocate to th' loud'st.... We do not know
How he may soften at the sight o'th' child:
The silence often of pure innocence
Persuades when speaking fails.
EMILIA. Most worthy madam,
Your honour and your goodness is so evident,
That your free undertaking cannot miss
A thriving issue: there is no lady living
So meet for this great errand.... Please your ladyship
To visit the next room, I'll presently
Acquaint the queen of your most noble offer,
Who, but to-day, hammered of this design,
But durst not tempt a minister of honour,
Lest she should be denied.
PAULINA. Tell her, Emilia,
I'll use that tongue I have: if wit flow from't
As boldness from my bosom, let't not be doubted
I shall do good.
EMILIA. Now be you blest for it!
I'll to the queen: please you, come something nearer. She goes
GAOLER. Madam, if't please the queen to send the babe,
I know not what I shall incur to pass it,
Having no warrant.
PAULINA. You need not fear it, sir:
This child was prisoner to the womb, and is
By law and process of great nature thence Freed and enfranchised—not a party to
The anger of the king, nor guilty of
(If any be) the trespass of the queen.
GAOLER. I do believe it.
PAULINA. Do not you fear: upon mine honour, I
Will stand betwixt you and danger.
They follow Emilia

Scene 3: The Palace (as before)

Enter Leontes

LEONTES. Nor night, nor day, no rest: it is but weakness
To bear the matter thus; mere weakness. If
The cause were not in being ... part o'th' cause,
She, th'adultress ... for the harlot king
Is quite beyond mine arm, out of the blank
And level of my brain: plot-proof: but she
I can hook to me: say that she were gone,
Given to the fire, a moiety of my rest
Might come to me again ... Who's there?

A servant enters

SERVANT. My lord!
LEONTES. How does the boy?
SERVANT. He took good rest to-night;
'Tis hoped his sickness is discharged.
LEONTES. To see his nobleness!
Conceiving the dishonour of his mother,
He straight declined, drooped, took it deeply,
Fastened and fixed the shame on't in himself;
Threw off his spirit, his appetite, his sleep,
And downright languished.... Leave me solely: go,
See how he fares ... [the servant goes] Fie, fie! no thought of him—
The very thought of my revenges that way
Recoil upon me: in himself too mighty,
And in his parties, his alliance; let him be,
Until a time may serve. For present vengeance,
Take it on her ... Camillo and Polixenes
Laugh at me; make their pastime at my sorrow:
They should not laugh if I could reach them, nor Shall she, within my power.

Paulina, with a baby, enters, followed by her husband Antigonus, lords, and the servant, who try to prevent her

1 LORD. You must not enter.
PAULINA. Nay, rather, good my lords, be second to me:
Fear you his tyrannous passion more, alas,
Than the queen's life? a gracious innocent soul,
More free than he is jealous.
ANTIGONUS. That's enough.
2 SERVANT. Madam; he hath not slept to-night, commanded
None should come at him.
PAULINA. Not so hot, good sir,
I come to bring him sleep.... 'Tis such as you,
That creep like shadows by him, and do sigh
At each his needless heavings ... such as you
Nourish the cause of his awaking. I
Do come with words as medicinal as true;
Honest, as either; to purge him of that humour,
That presses him from sleep.
LEONTES. What noise there, ho?
PAULINA. No noise, my lord, but needful conference,
About some gossips for your highness.
LEONTES. How!
Away with that audacious lady. Antigonus,
I charged thee that she should not come about me,
I knew she would.
ANTIGONUS. I told her so, my lord,
On your displeasure's peril, and on mine,
She should not visit you.
LEONTES. What! canst not rule her?
PAULINA. From all dishonesty he can: in this—
Unless he take the course that you have done,

Commit me for committing honour—trust it,
He shall not rule me.
ANTIGONUS. La you now! you hear!
When she will take the rein I let her run,
[aside] But she'll not stumble.
PAULINA. Good my liege, I come . . .
And I beseech you hear me, who profess
Myself your loyal servant, your physician,
Your most obedient counsellor; yet that dare
Less appear so, in comforting your evils,
Than such as most seem yours. . . . I say, I come
From your good queen.
LEONTES. Good queen!
PAULINA. Good queen, my lord, good queen, I say good queen,
And would by combat make her good, so were I
A man, the worst about you.
LEONTES. Force her hence.
PAULINA. Let him that makes but trifles of his eyes
First hand me; on mine own accord, I'll off,
But first I'll do my errand. The good queen
(For she is good) hath brought you forth a daughter—
Here 'tis . . . [she lays the child before him] commends it to your blessing.
LEONTES. Out!
A mankind witch! Hence with her, out o' door:
A most intelligencing bawd!
PAULINA. Not so:
I am as ignorant in that, as you
In so entitling me: and no less honest
Than you are mad; which is enough, I'll warrant,
As this world goes, to pass for honest.
LEONTES. Traitors!
Will you not push her out? [to Antigonus] Give her the bastard,
Thou dotard—thou art woman-tired, unroosted
By thy Dame Partlet here . . . Take up the bastard,
Take't up, I say; give't to thy crone.
PAULINA. For ever
Unvenerable be thy hands, if thou
Tak'st up the princess, by that forcéd baseness
Which he has put upon't!
LEONTES. He dreads his wife.
PAULINA. So I would you did; then 'twere past all doubt,
You'ld call your children yours.
LEONTES. A nest of traitors!
ANTIGONUS. I am none, by this good light.
PAULINA. Nor I; nor any
But one that's here; and that's himself: for he
The sacred honour of himself, his queen's,
His hopeful son's, his babe's, betrays to slander,
Whose sting is sharper than the sword's; and will not
(For, as the case now stands, it is a curse
He cannot be compelled to't) once remove
The root of his opinion, which is rotten,
As ever oak or stone was sound.
LEONTES. A callet
Of boundless tongue, who late hath beat her husband,
And now baits me! This brat is none of mine,
It is the issue of Polixenes. . . .
Hence with it, and together with the dam
Commit them to the fire!
PAULINA. It is yours;
And, might we lay th'old proverb to your charge,
So like you, 'tis the worse. Behold, my lords,
Although the print be little, the whole matter
And copy of the father: eye, nose, lip,
The trick of's frown, his forehead, nay, the valley,
The pretty dimples of his chin and cheek; his smiles;
The very mould and frame of hand, nail, finger:
And, thou, good goddess Nature, which hast made it
So like to him that got it, if thou hast
The ordering of the mind too, 'mongst all colours
No yellow in't, lest she suspect, as he does,
Her children not her husband's!
LEONTES. A gross hag!
And, lozel, thou art worthy to be hanged,
That wilt not stay her tongue.
ANTIGONUS. Hang all the husbands
That cannot do that feat, you'll leave yourself
Hardly one subject.
LEONTES. Once more, take her hence.
PAULINA. A most unworthy and unnatural lord
Can do no more.
LEONTES. I'll ha' thee burnt.
PAULINA. I care not:
It is an heretic that makes the fire,
Not she which burns in't. I'll not call you tyrant;
But this most cruel usage of your queen
(Not able to produce more accusation
Than your own weak-hinged fancy) something savours
Of tyranny, and will ignoble make you,
Yea, scandalous to the world.
LEONTES. On your allegiance,
Out of the chamber with her! Were I a tyrant,
Where were her life? she durst not call me so,
If she did know me one. Away with her!
PAULINA. I pray you, do not push me, I'll be gone.
Look to your babe, my lord, 'tis yours: Jove send her
A better guiding spirit! What needs these hands?
You, that are thus so tender o'er his follies,
Will never do him good, not one of you.
So, so: farewell, we are gone. She goes
LEONTES. Thou, traitor, hast set on thy wife to this.
My child! away with't! Even thou, that hast
A heart so tender o'er it, take it hence,
And see it instantly consumed with fire;
Even thou and none but thou. Take it up straight:
Within this hour bring me word 'tis done,
And by good testimony, or I'll seize thy life,
With what thou else call'st thine . . . If thou refuse,
And wilt encounter with my wrath, say so;
The bastard brains with these my proper hands
Shall I dash out. Go, take it to the fire,
For thou set'st on thy wife.
ANTIGONUS. I did not, sir:
These lords, my noble fellows, if they please,
Can clear me in't.
LORDS. We can; my royal liege,
He is not guilty of her coming hither.
LEONTES. You're liars all.
1 LORD. Beseech your highness, give us better credit:
We have always truly served you, and beseech'
So to esteem of us: and on our knees we beg
(As recompense of our dear services,
Past, and to come) that you do change this purpose,
Which being so horrible, so bloody, must

Lead on to some foul issue... We all kneel.
LEONTES. I am a feather for each wind that blows:
Shall I live on, to see this bastard kneel
And call me father? better burn it now
Than curse it then.... But be it: let it live....
It shall not neither.... [to Antigonus] You, sir, come you hither;
You, that have been so tenderly officious
With Lady Margery, your midwife there,
To save this bastard's life; for 'tis a bastard,
So sure as this beard's grey.... What will you adventure
To save this brat's life?
ANTIGONUS. Any thing, my lord,
That my ability may undergo,
And nobleness impose: at least, thus much;
I'll pawn the little blood which I have left
To save the innocent: any thing possible.
LEONTES. It shall be possible... Swear by this sword
Thou wilt perform my bidding.
ANTIGONUS. I will, my lord.
LEONTES. Mark and perform it: seest thou? for the fail
Of any point in't shall not only be
Death to thyself, but to thy lewd-tongued wife
(Whom for this time we pardon). We enjoin thee,
As thou art liege-man to us, that thou carry
This female bastard hence, and that thou bear it
To some remote and desert place, quite out
Of our dominions; and that there thou leave it
(Without more mercy) to it own protection
And favour of the climate: as by strange fortune
It came to us, I do in justice charge thee,
On thy soul's peril and thy body's torture,
That thou commend it strangely to some place
Where chance may nurse or end it: take it up.
ANTIGONUS. I swear to do this; though a present death
Had been more merciful.... Come on, poor babe!
Some powerful spirit instruct the kites and ravens
To be thy nurses! Wolves and bears, they say,
Casting their savageness aside, have done
Like offices of pity.... Sir, be prosperous
In more than this deed does require; and blessing,
Against this cruelty, fight on thy side,
Poor thing, condemned to loss!
He bears away the child
LEONTES. No! I'll not rear
Another's issue.

A servant enters

SERVANT. Please your highness, posts
From those you sent to th'oracle are come
An hour since: Cleomenes and Dion,
Being well arrived from Delphos, are both landed,
Hasting to th' court.
I LORD. So please you, sir, their speed
Hath been beyond accompt.
LEONTES. Twenty three days
They have been absent: 'tis good speed; foretells
The great Apollo suddenly will have
The truth of this appear... Prepare you, lords,
Summon a session, that we may arraign
Our most disloyal lady: for as she hath
Been publicly accused, so shall she have
A just and open trial.... While she lives,
My heart will be a burthen to me.... Leave me,
And think upon my bidding. They go

ACT 3

Scene 1: A high road in Sicilia

Cleomenes and Dion

CLEOMENES. The climate's delicate, the air most sweet,
Fertile the isle, the temple much surpassing
The common praise it bears.
DION. I shall report,
For most it caught me, the celestial habits
(Methinks I so should term them) and the reverence
Of the grave wearers. O, the sacrifice!
How ceremonious, solemn, and unearthly
It was i'th' off'ring!
CLEOMENES. But of all, the burst
And the ear-deaf'ning voice o'th'oracle,
Kin to Jove's thunder, so surprised my sense,
That I was nothing.
DION. If th'event o'th' journey
Prove as successful to the queen (O be't so!)
As it hath been to us, rare, pleasant, speedy,
The time is worth the use on't.
CLEOMENES. Great Apollo,
Turn all to th' best! These proclamations,
So forcing faults upon Hermione,
I little like.
DION. The violent carriage of it
Will clear or end the business; when the oracle
(Thus by Apollo's great divine sealed up)
Shall the contents discover, something rare
Even then will rush to knowledge.... Go: fresh horses!
And gracious be the issue! They go

Scene 2: A Court of Justice

Enter Leontes, his lords and officers about him. A great concourse of people

LEONTES. This sessions (to our great grief we pronounce)
Even pushes 'gainst our heart: the party tried,
The daughter of a king, our wife, and one
Of us too much beloved.... Let us be cleared
Of being tyrannous, since we so openly
Proceed in justice, which shall have due course,
Even to the guilt or the purgation...
Produce the prisoner.
OFFICER. It is his highness' pleasure, that the queen
Appear in person, here in court.

Hermione is brought in guarded, Paulina and ladies attending.

OFFICER. Silence!
LEONTES. Read the indictment.
OFFICER [reads]. 'Hermione, queen to the worthy Leonites, King of Sicilia, thou art here accused and arraigned of high treason, in committing adultery with Polixenes, King of Bohemia, and conspiring with Camillo to take away the life of our sovereign lord the king, thy royal husband: the pretence whereof being by circumstances partly laid open, thou, Hermione, contrary to the faith and allegiance of a true subject, didst counsel and aid them, for their better safety, to fly away by night.'

HERMIONE. Since what I am to say must be but that
Which contradicts my accusation, and
The testimony on my part no other
But what comes from myself, it shall scarce boot me
To say 'not guilty': mine integrity,
Being counted falsehood, shall, as I express it,
Be so received.... But thus, if powers divine
Behold our human actions (as they do),
I doubt not then but innocence shall make
False accusation blush, and tyranny
Tremble at patience.... You, my lord, best know
(Who least will seem to do so) my past life
Hath been as continent, as chaste, as true,
As I am now unhappy; which is more
Than history can pattern, though devised
And played to take spectators. For behold me,
A fellow of the royal bed, which owe
A moiety of the throne ... a great king's daughter,
The mother to a hopeful prince, here standing
To prate and talk for life and honour, 'fore
Who please to come and hear. For life, I prize it
As I weigh grief (which I would spare): for honour,
'Tis a derivative from me to mine,
And only that I stand for.... I appeal
To your own conscience, sir, before Polixenes
Came to your court, how I was in your grace,
How merited to be so; since he came,
With what encounter so uncurrent I
Have strained t'appear thus: if one jot beyond
The bound of honour, or in act or will
That way inclining, hard'ned be the hearts
Of all that hear me, and my near'st of kin
Cry fie upon my grave!
LEONTES. I ne'er heard yet,
That any of these bolder vices wanted
Less impudence to gainsay what they did,
Than to perform it first.
HERMIONE. That's true enough,
Though 'tis a saying, sir, not due to me.
LEONTES. You will not own it.
HERMIONE. More than mistress of
Which comes to me in name of fault, I must not
At all acknowledge.... For Polixenes
(With whom I am accused) I do confess
I loved him, as in honour he required;
With such a kind of love as might become
A lady like me; with a love, even such,
So, and no other, as yourself commanded:
Which not to have done, I think had been in me
Both disobedience and ingratitude
To you, and toward your friend, whose love had spoke,
Even since it could speak, from an infant, freely,
That it was yours. Now, for conspiracy,
I know not how it tastes, though it be dished
For me to try how: all I know of it,
Is, that Camillo was an honest man;
And why he left your court, the gods themselves
(Wotting no more than I) are ignorant.
LEONTES. You knew of his departure, as you know
What you have underta'en to do in's absence.
HERMIONE. Sir,
You speak a language that I understand not:
My life stands in the level of your dreams,
Which I'll lay down.
LEONTES. Your actions are my dreams.
You had a bastard by Polixenes,
And I but dreamed it! As you were past all shame
(Those of your fact are so), so past all truth;
Which to deny, concerns more than avails: for as
Thy brat hath been cast out, like to itself,
No father owning it (which is indeed
More criminal in thee than it) so thou
Shalt feel our justice; in whose easiest passage
Look for no less than death.
HERMIONE. Sir, spare your threats:
The bug which you would fright me with I seek:
To me can life be no commodity:
The crown and comfort of my life (your favour)
I do give lost, for I do feel it gone,
But know not how it went. My second joy,
And first-fruits of my body, from his presence
I am barred, like one infectious. My third comfort
(Starred most unluckily!) is from my breast,
The innocent milk in it most innocent mouth,
Haled out to murder. Myself on every post
Proclaimed a strumpet: with immodest hatred
The child-bed privilege denied, which 'longs
To women of all fashion. Lastly, hurried
Here, to this place, i'th' open air, before
I have got strength of limit. Now, my liege,
Tell me what blessings I have here alive,
That I should fear to die? Therefore, proceed ...
But yet hear this: mistake me not: no life!—
I prize it not a straw—but for mine honour,
Which I would free ... If I shall be condemned
Upon surmises (all proofs sleeping else
But what your jealousies awake) I tell you,
'Tis rigour and not law.... Your honours all,
I do refer me to the oracle;
Apollo be my judge.
I LORD. This your request
Is altogether just: therefore bring forth,
And in Apollo's name, his oracle. Officers depart
HERMIONE. The Emperor of Russia was my father:
O that he were alive, and here beholding
His daughter's trial! that he did but see
The flatness of my misery; yet with eyes
Of pity, not revenge!

Officers return with Cleomenes and Dion

OFFICERS. You here shall swear upon this sword of justice,
That you, Cleomenes and Dion, have
Been both at Delphos, and from thence have brought
This sealed-up oracle, by the hand delivered
Of great Apollo's priest; and that since then
You have not dared to break the holy seal,
Nor read the secrets in't.
CLEOMENES, DION. All this we swear.
LEONTES. Break up the seals and read.
OFFICER [reads]. 'Hermione is chaste, Polixenes blameless, Camillo a true subject, Leontes a jealous tyrant, his innocent babe truly begotten, and the king shall live without an heir, if that which is lost be not found.'
LORDS. Now blessed be the great Apollo!
HERMIONE. Praised!
LEONTES. Hast thou read truth?
OFFICER. Ay, my lord, even so
As it is here set down.

LEONTES. There is no truth at all i'th'oracle:
The sessions shall proceed; this is mere falsehood.

A servant enters

SERVANT. My lord the king ... the king!
LEONTES. What is the business?
SERVANT. O sir, I shall be hated to report it!
The prince your son, with mere conceit and fear
Of the queen's speed, is gone.
LEONTES. How! gone!
SERVANT. Is dead.
LEONTES. Apollo's angry, and the heavens themselves
Do strike at my injustice. [Hermione faints] How now there!
PAULINA. This news is mortal to the queen: look down
And see what death is doing.
LEONTES. Take her hence:
Her heart is but o'ercharged: she will recover....
I have too much believed mine own suspicion:
Beseech you, tenderly apply to her
Some remedies for life....
Paulina and ladies carry Hermione away
Apollo, pardon
My great profaneness 'gainst thine oracle!
I'll reconcile me to Polixenes,
New woo my queen, recall the good Camillo,
Whom I proclaim a man of truth, of mercy ...
For being transported by my jealousies
To bloody thoughts and to revenge, I chose
Camillo for the minister to poison
My friend Polixenes: which had been done,
But that the good mind of Camillo tardied
My swift command; though I with death, and with
Reward, did threaten and encourage him,
Not doing it, and being done; he (most humane,
And filled with honour) to my kingly guest
Unclasped my practice, quit his fortunes here
(Which you knew great) and to the certain hazard
Of all incertainties himself commended,
No richer than his honour ... How he glisters
Thorough my rust! and how his piety
Does my deeds make the blacker!

Paulina returns

PAULINA. Woe the while!
O, cut my lace, lest my heart, cracking it,
Break too!
I LORD. What fit is this, good lady?
PAULINA. What studied torments, tyrant, hast for me?
What wheels? racks? fires? what flaying? boiling,
In leads or oils? what old or newer torture
Must I receive, whose every word deserves
To taste of thy most worst? Thy tyranny
(Together working with thy jealousies,
Fancies too weak for boys, too green and idle
For girls of nine) O, think what they have done,
And then run mad indeed: stark mad! for all
Thy by-gone fooleries were but spices of it.
That thou betray'dst Polixenes, 'twas nothing—
That did but show thee, of a fool, inconstant,
And damnable ingrateful: nor was't much,
Thou wouldst have poisoned good Camillo's honour,
To have him kill a king; poor trespasses,
More monstrous standing by: whereof I reckon
The casting forth to crows thy baby-daughter,
To be or none or little; though a devil
Would have shed water out of fire, ere done't:
Nor is't directly laid to thee, the death
Of the young prince, whose honourable thoughts
(Thoughts high for one so tender) cleft the heart
That could conceive a gross and foolish sire
Blemished his gracious dam: this is not, no,
Laid to thy answer: but the last ... O lords,
When I have said, cry 'woe!' The queen, the queen,
The sweet'st, dear'st creature's dead! and vengeance for't
Not dropped down yet.
I LORD. The higher powers forbid!
PAULINA. I say she's dead: I'll swear't. If word nor oath
Prevail not, go and see: if you can bring
Tincture or lustre in her lip, her eye,
Heat outwardly, or breath within, I'll serve you
As I would do the gods.... But, O thou tyrant!
Do not repent these things, for they are heavier
Than all thy woes can stir: therefore betake thee
To nothing but despair.... A thousand knees
Ten thousand years together, naked, fasting,
Upon a barren mountain, and still winter
In storm perpetual, could not move the gods
To look that way thou wert.
LEONTES. Go on, go on:
Thou canst not speak too much, I have deserved
All tongues to talk their bitt'rest.
I LORD Say no more;
Howe'er the business goes, you have made fault
I'th' boldness of your speech.
PAULINA. I am sorry for't;
All faults I make, when I shall come to know them,
I do repent: alas, I have showed too much
The rashness of a woman: he is touched
To th' noble heart.... What's gone, and what's past help,
Should be past grief: do not receive affliction
At my petition; I beseech you, rather
Let me be punished, that have minded you
Of what you should forget. Now (good my liege!)
Sir, royal sir, forgive a foolish woman:
The love I bore your queen—lo, fool again!
I'll speak of her no more, nor of your children;
I'll not remember you of my own lord,
(Who is lost too) ... Take your patience to you,
And I'll say nothing.
LEONTES. Thou didst speak but well,
When most the truth; which I receive much better
Than to be pitied of thee. Prithee, bring me
To the dead bodies of my queen and son.
One grave shall be for both; upon them shall
The causes of their death appear (unto
Our shame perpetual). Once a day I'll visit
The chapel where they lie, and tears shed there
Shall be my recreation. So long as nature
Will bear up with this exercise, so long
I daily vow to use it. Come, and lead me
To these sorrows. They go

Scene 3: Bohemia. Near the sea

Enter Antigonus carrying the babe, with a mariner

ANTIGONUS. Thou art perfect then, our ship hath touched upon

The deserts of Bohemia?
MARINER. Ay, my lord, and fear
We have landed in ill time; the skies look grimly,
And threaten present blusters. In my conscience,
The heavens with that we have in hand are angry,
And frown upon's.
ANTIGONUS. Their sacred wills be done! Go, get aboard,
Look to thy bark, I'll not be long before
I call upon thee.
MARINER. Make your best haste, and go not
Too far i'th' land: 'tis like to be loud weather;
Besides, this place is famous for the creatures
Of prey that keep upon't.
ANTIGONUS. Go thou away,
I'll follow instantly.
MARINER. I am glad at heart
To be so rid o'th' business. He goes
ANTIGONUS. Come, poor babe . . .
I have heard (but not believed) the spirits o'th' dead
May walk again: if such thing be, thy mother
Appeared to me last night; for ne'er was dream
So like a waking. To me comes a creature,
Sometimes her head on one side, some another—
I never saw a vessel of like sorrow,
So filled, and so becoming: in pure white robes,
Like very sanctity, she did approach
My cabin where I lay: thrice bowed before me,
And (gasping to begin some speech) her eyes
Became two spouts; the fury spent, anon
Did this break from her. 'Good Antigonus,
Since fate (against thy better disposition)
Hath made thy person for the thrower-out
Of my poor babe according to thine oath,
Places remote enough are in Bohemia,
There weep and leave it crying; and for the babe
Is counted lost for ever, Perdita
I prithee call't . . . For this ungentle business,
Put on thee by my lord, thou ne'er shalt see
Thy wife Paulina more' . . . and so, with shrieks
She melted into air. Affrighted much,
I did in time collect myself, and thought
This was so, and no slumber . . . Dreams are toys,
Yet for this once, yea superstitiously,
I will be squared by this. I do believe,
Hermione hath suffered death, and that
Apollo would (this being indeed the issue
Of King Polixenes) it should here be laid
(Either for life or death) upon the earth
Of its right father. . . . [he lays down the child]
Blossom, speed thee well!
There lie, and there thy character: there these,
He sets a box and papers beside it
Which may, if fortune please, both breed thee, pretty,
And still rest thine. . . . [thunder heard] The storm begins! Poor wretch,
That for thy mother's fault art thus exposed
To loss, and what may follow! Weep I cannot,
But my heart bleeds: and most accursed am I,
To be by oath enjoined to this. Farewell!
The day frowns more and more; thou'rt like to have
A lullaby too rough: I never saw
The heavens so dim by day. A savage clamour!
Well may I get aboard! This is the chase—
I am gone for ever! Exit pursued by a bear

An old Shepherd enters

SHEPHERD. I would there were no age between ten and three-and-twenty, or that youth would sleep out the rest; for there is nothing in the between but getting wenches with child, wronging the ancientry, stealing, fighting. Hark you now! Would any but these boiled-brains of nineteen and two-and-twenty hunt this weather? They have scared away two of my best sheep, which I fear the wolf will sooner find than the master: if any where I have them, 'tis by the seaside, browsing of ivy. . . . Good-luck (an't be thy will) what have we here? Mercy on's, a barne? a very pretty barne! A boy or a child, I wonder?—a pretty one, a very pretty one! Sure, some scape: though I am not bookish, yet I can read waiting-gentlewoman in the scape: this has been some stair-work, some trunk-work, some behind-door-work: they were warmer that got this than the poor thing is here. I'll take it up for pity—yet I'll tarry till my son come; he hollaed but even now. . . . Whoa, ho hoa!

Clown enters

CLOWN. Hilloa, loa!

SHEPHERD. What, art so near? If thou'lt see a thing to talk on when thou art dead and rotten, come hither . . . What ailest thou, man?

CLOWN. I have seen two such sights, by sea and by land! but I am not to say it is a sea, for it is now the sky— betwixt the firmament and it you cannot thrust a bodkin's point.

SHEPHERD. Why, boy, how is it?

CLOWN. I would you did but see how it chafes, how it rages, how it takes up the shore! but that's not to the point . . . O, the most piteous cry of the poor souls! sometimes to see 'em, and not to see 'em: now the ship boring the moon with her main-mast, and anon swallowed with yeast and froth, as you'ld thrust a cork into a hogshead. . . . And then for the land-service! to see how the bear tore out his shoulder-bone, how he cried to me for help, and said his name was Antigonus, a nobleman . . . But to make an end of the ship—to see how the sea flap-dragoned it: but first, how the poor souls roared, and the sea mocked them: and how the poor gentleman roared, and the bear mocked him, both roaring louder than the sea or weather.

SHEPHERD. Name of mercy, when was this, boy?

CLOWN. Now, now: I have not winked since I saw these sights: the men are not yet cold under water, nor the bear half dined on the gentleman: he's at it now.

SHEPHERD. Would I had been by, to have helped the old man!

CLOWN. I would you had been by the ship side, to have helped her; there your charity would have lacked footing.

SHEPHERD. Heavy matters, heavy matters . . . but look thee here, boy. Now bless thyself; thou met'st with things dying, I with things new-born. Here's a sight for thee; look thee, a bearing-cloth for a squire's child! look thee here, take up, take up, boy; open't . . . So, let's see, it was told me I should be rich by the fairies. This is some changeling . . . Open't: what's within, boy?

CLOWN. You're a made old man; if the sins of your youth are forgiven you, you're well to live. Gold! all gold!

SHEPHERD. This is fairy gold, boy, and 'twill prove so: up with't, keep it close; home, home, the next way. We are lucky, boy, and to be so still requires nothing but secrecy. Let my sheep go: come, good boy, the next way home.

CLOWN. Go you the next way with your findings. I'll go see if the bear be gone from the gentleman, and how much he hath eaten: they are never curst but when they are hungry: if there be any of him left, I'll bury it.

SHEPHERD. That's a good deed: if thou mayest discern by that which is left of him, what he is, fetch me to th' sight of him.

CLOWN. Marry, will I; and you shall help to put him i'th' ground.

SHEPHERD. 'Tis a lucky day, boy, and we'll do good deeds on't. They go

ACT 4
Scene I

Enter Time, the Chorus

TIME. I that please some, try all: both joy and terror
Of good and bad, that makes and unfolds error,
Now take upon me, in the name of Time,
To use my wings . . . Impute it not a crime
To me, or my swift passage, that I slide
O'er sixteen years, and leave the growth untried
Of that wide gap, since it is in my power
To o'erthrow law and in one self-born hour
To plant and o'erwhelm custom. Let me pass—
The same I am, ere ancient'st order was,
Or what is now received: I witness to
The times that brought them in, so shall I do
To th' freshest things now reigning, and make stale
The glistering of this present, as my tale
Now seems to it . . . . Your patience this allowing,
I turn my glass, and give my scene such growing,
As you had slept between: Leontes leaving—
Th'effects of his fond jealousies so grieving
That he shuts up himself—imagine me,
Gentle spectators, that I now may be
In fair Bohemia, and remember well
I mentioned a son o'th' king's, which Florizel
I now name to you; and with speed so pace
To speak of Perdita, now grown in grace
Equal with wond'ring: what of her ensues,
I list not prophesy; but let Time's news
Be known when 'tis brought forth. A shepherd's daughter,
And what to her adheres, which follows after,
Is th'argument of Time: of this allow,
If ever you have spent time worse ere now;
If never, yet that Time himself doth say
He wishes earnestly you never may. Exit

Scene 2: Bohemia. The palace of Polixenes

Enter Polixenes and Camillo

POLIXENES. I pray thee, good Camillo, be no more importunate: 'tis a sickness denying thee any thing; a death to grant this.

CAMILLO. It is fifteen years since I saw my country: though I have, for the most part, been aired abroad, I desire to lay my bones there. Besides, the penitent kings, my master, hath sent for me, to whose feeling sorrows I might be some allay (or I o'erween to think so) which is another spur to my departure.

POLIXENES. As thou lov'st me, Camillo, wipe not out the rest of thy services by leaving me now: the need I have of thee, thine own goodness hath made; better not to have had thee than thus to want thee: thou, having made me businesses, which none without thee can sufficiently manage, must either stay to execute them thyself, or take away with thee the very services thou hast done: which if I have not enough considered (as too much I cannot), to be more thankful to thee shall be my study, and my profit therein the heaping friendships. Of that fatal country Sicilia prithee speak no more, whose very naming punishes me with the remembrance of that penitent, as thou call'st him, and reconciled king, my brother, whose loss of his most precious queen and children are even now to be afresh lamented. Say to me, when saw'st thou the Prince Florizel my son? Kings are no less unhappy, their issue not being gracious, than they are in losing them when they have approved their virtues.

CAMILLO. Sir, it is three days since I saw the prince: what his happier affairs may be, are to me unknown: but I have (missingly) noted he is of late much retired from court, and is less frequent to his princely exercises then formerly he hath appeared.

POLIXENES. I have considered so much, Camillo, and with some care—so far that I have eyes under my service which look upon his removedness: from whom I have this intelligence, that he is seldom from the house of a most homely shepherd; a man, they say, that from very nothing, and beyond the imagination of his neighbours, is grown into an unspeakable estate.

CAMILLO. I have heard, sir, of such a man, who hath a daughter of most rare note: the report of her is extended more than can be thought to begin from such a cottage.

POLIXENES. That's likewise part of my intelligence: but, I fear, the angle that plucks our son thither. Thou shalt accompany us to the place, where we will (not appearing what we are) have some question with the shepherd; from whose simplicity I think it not uneasy to get the cause of my son's resort thither. Prithee, be my present partner in this business, and lay aside the thoughts of Sicila.

CAMILLO. I willingly obey your command.

POLIXENES. My best Camillo! We must disguise ourselves. They go

Scene 3: Bohemia. A field-path hard by the Shepherd's cottage

Enter Autolycus singing

When daffodils begin to peer,
With, heigh! the doxy over the dale,
Why then comes in the sweet o'the year,
For the red blood reigns in the winter's pale.

The white sheet bleaching on the hedge,
With hey! the sweet birds, O how they sing:
Doth set my pugging tooth on edge,
For a quart of ale is a dish for a king.

The lark, that tirra-lyra chants,
With heigh! with hey! the thrush and the jay:
Are summer songs for me and my aunts,
While we lie tumbling in the hay.

I have served Prince Florizel, and in my time wore three-pile, but now I am out of service.

But shall I go mourn for that, my dear?
The pale moon shines by night:
And when I wander here and there,
I then do most go right.

If tinkers may have leave to live,
And bear the sow-skin budget,
Then my account I well may give,
And in the stocks avouch it.

My traffic is sheets: when the kite builds, look to lesser linen. My father named me Autolycus, who being, as I am, littered under Mercury, was likewise a snapper-up of unconsidered trifles ... With die and drab I purchased this caparison, and my revenue is the silly cheat. Gallows and knock are too powerful on the highway: beating and hanging are terrors to me: for the life to come, I sleep out the thought of it. A prize! a prize!

Clown enters

CLOWN. Let me see—every 'leven wether tods, every tod yields pound and odd shilling: fifteen hundred shorn—what comes the wool to?

ANTOLYCUS [aside]. If the springe hold, the cock's mine.

CLOWN. I cannot do't without counters.... Let me see, what am I to buy for our sheep-shearing feast? Three pound of sugar, five pound of currants, rice ... what will this sister of mine do with rice? but my father hath made her Mistress of the Feast, and she lays it on. She hath made me four and twenty nosegays for the shearers—three-man song-men all, and very good ones; but they are most of them means and bases; but one puritan amongst them, and he sings psalms to hornpipes.... I must have saffron to colour the warden pies: mace: dates, none; that's out of my note: nutmegs, seven; a race or two of ginger—but that I may beg: four pound of prunes, and as many of raisins o'th' sun.

AUTOLYCUS [staggers forward and falls upon the ground]. O, that ever I was born!

CLOWN. I'th' name of me!

AUTOLYCUS. O, help me, help me! pluck but off these rags; and then, death, death!

CLOWN. Alack, poor soul! thou hast need of more rags to lay on thee, rather than have these off.

AUTOLYCUS. O, sir, the loathsomeness of them offends me more than the stripes I have received, which are mighty ones and millions.

CLOWN. Alas, poor man! a million of beating may come to a great matter.

AUTOLYCUS. I am robbed, sir, and beaten; my money and apparel ta'en from me, and these detestable things put upon me.

CLOWN. What, by a horseman or a footman?

AUTOLYCUS. A footman, sweet sir, a footman.

CLOWN. Indeed, he should be a footman, by the garments he has left with thee; if this be a horseman's coat, it hath seen very hot service. Lend me thy hand, I'll help thee: come, lend me thy hand.

AUTOLYCUS. O, good sir, tenderly, O!

CLOWN. Alas, poor soul.

AUTOLYCUS. O, good sir, softly, good sir: I fear, sir, my shoulder-blade is out.

CLOWN. How now? canst stand?

AUTOLYCUS. Softly, dear sir ... [picking his pocket] good sir, softly ... you ha' done me a charitable office.

CLOWN. Dost lack any money? I have a little money for thee.

AUTOLYCUS. No, good sweet sir; no, I beseech you, sir: I have a kinsman not past three quarters of a mile hence, unto whom I was going; I shall there have money, or any thing I want ... Offer me no money, I pray you—that kills my heart.

CLOWN. What manner of fellow was he that robbed you?

AUTOLYCUS. A fellow, sir, that I have known to go about with troll-my-dames: I knew him once a servant of the prince; I cannot tell, good sir, for which of his virtues it was, but he was certainly whipped out of the court.

CLOWN. His vices, you would say; there's no virtue whipped out of the court: they cherish it to make it stay there; and yet it will no more but abide.

AUTOLYCUS. Vices I would say, sir. I know this man well, he hath been since an ape-bearer, then a process-server, a bailiff, then he compassed a motion of the Prodigal Son, and married a tinker's wife within a mile where my land and living lies; and having flown over many knavish professions, he settled only in rogue: some call him Autolycus.

CLOWN. Out upon him! prig, for my life, prig: he haunts wakes, fairs, and bear-baitings.

AUTOLYCUS. Very true, sir; he, sir, he; that's the rogue that put me into this apparel.

CLOWN. Not a more cowardly rogue in all Bohemia; if you had but looked big, and spit at him, he'ld have run.

AUTOLYCUS. I must confess to you, sir, I am no fighter: I am false of heart that way, and that he knew, I warrant him.

CLOWN. How do you now?

AUTOLYCUS. Sweet sir, much better than I was; I can stand, and walk: I will even take my leave of you, and pace softly towards my kinsman's.

CLOWN. Shall I bring thee on the way?

AUTOLYCUS. No, good-faced sir, no, sweet sir.

CLOWN. Then fare thee well, I must go buy spices for our sheep-shearing.

AUTOLYCUS. Prosper you, sweet sir! [the Clown goes] Your purse is not hot enough to purchase your spice: I'll be with you at your sheep-shearing too: if I make not this cheat bring out another, and the shearers prove sheep, let me be unrolled, and my name put in the book of virtue!

[sings] Jog on, jog on, the foot-path way,
And merrily hent the stile-a:
A merry heart goes all the day,
Your sad tires in a mile-a.

He goes

Scene 4: The Shepherd's cottage

Florizel and Perdita

FLORIZEL. These your unusual weeds to each part of you

Do give a life: no shepherdess, but Flora
Peering in April's front. This your sheep-shearing
Is as a meeting of the petty gods,
And you the queen on't.

PERDITA. Sir . . . my gracious lord,
To chide at your extremes, it not becomes me:
(O, pardon, that I name them!) Your high self,
The gracious mark o'th' land, you have obscured
With a swain's wearing; and me (poor lowly maid)
Most goddess-like pranked up . . . But that our feasts
In every mess have folly and feeders
Digest it with a custom, I should blush
To see you so attired; swoon, I think,
To show myself a glass.

FLORIZEL. I bless the time
When my good falcon made her flight across
Thy father's ground.

PERDITA. Now Jove afford you cause!
To me the difference forges dread (your greatness
Hath not been used to fear): even now I tremble
To think your father, by some accident,
Should pass this way, as you did: O the Fates!
How would he look, to see his work, so noble,
Vilely bound up? What would he say? Or how Should I (in these my borrowed flaunts) behold
The sternness of his presence?

FLORIZEL. Apprehend
Nothing but jollity: the gods themselves
(Humbling their deities to love) have taken
The shapes of beasts upon them: Jupiter
Became a bull, and bellowed; the green Neptune
A ram, and bleated; and the fire-robed god,
Golden Apollo, a poor humble swain,
As I seem now. . . . Their transformations
Were never for a piece of beauty rarer,
Nor in a way so chaste: since my desires
Run not before mine honour; nor my lusts
Burn hotter than my faith.

PERDITA. O but, sir,
Your resolution cannot hold, when 'tis
Opposed (as it must be) by th' power of the king:
One of these two must be necessities,
Which then will speak, that you must change this purpose,
Or I my life.

FLORIZEL. Thou dearest Perdita,
With these forced thoughts, I prithee, darken not
The mirth o'th' feast: or I'll be thine, my fair,
Or not my father's: for I cannot be Mine own, nor any thing to any, if
I be not thine: to this I am most constant,
Though destiny say no. Be merry, gentle,
Strangle such thoughts as these with any thing
That you behold the while. . . . Your guests are coming:
Lift up your countenance, as it were the day
Of celebration of that nuptial which
We two have sworn shall come.

PERDITA. O lady Fortune,
Stand you auspicious!

The Shepherd, Clown, Mopsa, Dorcas and others enter, with Polixenes and Camillo, disguised

FLORIZEL. See, your guests approach,
Address yourself to entertain them sprightly,
And let's be red with mirth.

SHEPHERD. Fie, daughter! when my old wife lived, upon
This day she was both pantler, butler, cook,
Both dame and servant: welcomed all, served all:
Would sing her song and dance her turn: now here,
At upper end o'th' table; now i'th' middle:
On his shoulder, and his: her face o'fire
With labour, and the thing she took to quench it
She would to each one sip. . . . You are retired,
As if you were a feasted one, and not
The hostess of the meeting: pray you, bid
These unknown friends to's welcome, for it is
A way to make us better friends, more known:
Come, quench your blushes, and present yourself
That which you are, Mistress o'th' Feast. Come on,
And bid us welcome to your sheep-shearing,
As your good flock shall prosper.

PERDITA [to Polixenes]. Sir, welcome:
It is my father's will, I should take on me
The hostess-ship o'th' day . . . [to Camillo] You're welcome, sir!
Give me those flowers there, Dorcas. . . . Reverend sirs,
For you there's rosemary and rue—these keep
Seeming and savour all the winter long:
Grace and remembrance be to you both,
And welcome to our shearing!

POLIXENES. Shepherdess,
(A fair one are you!) well you fit our ages
With flowers of winter.

PERDITA. Sir, the year growing ancient—
Not yet on summer's death nor on the birth
Of trembling winter—the fairest flowers o'th' season
Are our carnations and streaked gillyvors,
Which some call nature's bastards. Of that kind
Our rustic garden's barren, and I care not
To get slips of them.

POLIXENES. Wherefore, gentle maiden,
Do you neglect them?

PERDITA. For I have heard it said
There is an art which in their piedness shares
With great creating Nature.

POLIXENES. Say, there be;
Yet nature is made better by no mean,
But nature makes that mean: so, over that art
Which you say adds to nature, is an art
That nature makes . . . You see, sweet maid, we marry
A gentler scion to the wildest stock,
And make conceive a bark of baser kind
By bud of nobler race. This is an art
Which does mend nature . . . change it rather, but
The art itself, is nature.

PERDITA. So it is.

POLIXENES. Then make your garden rich in gillyvors,
And do not call them bastards.

PERDITA. I'll not put
The dibble in earth to set one slip of them:
No more than, were I painted, I would wish
This youth should say 'twere well; and only therefore Desire to breed by me. . . . Here's flowers for you;
Hot lavender, mints, savory, marjoram,
The marigold, that goes to bed with' sun,
And with him rises, weeping: these are flowers

Of middle summer, and I think they are given
To men of middle age... Y'are very welcome.
CAMILLO. I should leave grazing, were I of your flock,
And only live by gazing.
PERDITA. Out, alas!
You'ld be so lean, that blasts of January
Would blow you through and through.... Now, my fair'st friend,
I would I had some flowers o'th' spring that might Become your time of day; and yours and yours,
That wear upon your virgin branches yet
Your maidenheads growing: O Proserpina,
For the flowers now, that frighted thou let'st fall
From Dis's waggon! daffodils,
That come before the swallow dares, and take
The winds of March with beauty; violets (dim,
But sweeter than the lids of Juno's eyes
Or Cytherea's breath); pale primroses,
That die unmarried, ere they can behold
Bright Phœbus in his strength (a malady
Most incident to maids); bold oxlips and
The crown imperial; lilies of all kinds,
The flower-de-luce being one! O, these I lack,
To make you garlands of—and my sweet friend,
To strew him o'er and o'er.
FLORIZEL. What, like a corse?
PERDITA. No, like a bank, for love to lie and play on;
Not like a corse: or if... not to be buried,
But quick, and in mine arms. Come, take your flowers,
Methinks I play as I have seen them do
In Whitsun-pastorals: sure this rôbe of mine
Does change my disposition.
FLORIZEL. What you do
Still betters what is done. When you speak, sweet,
I'ld have you do it ever: when you sing,
I'ld have you buy and sell so; so give alms,
Pray so; and for the ord'ring your affairs,
To sing them too: when you do dance, I wish you
A wave o'th' sea, that you might ever do
Nothing but that; move still, still so;
And own no other function. Each your doing
(So singular in each particular)
Crowns what you are doing in the present deeds,
That all your acts are queens.
PERDITA. O Doricles,
Your praises are too large: but that your youth,
And the true blood which peepeth fairly through't,
Do plainly give you out an unstained shepherd,
With wisdom I might fear, my Doricles,
You wooed me the false way.
FLORIZEL. I think you have
As little skill to fear, as I have purpose
To put you to't.... But, come, our dance I pray,
Your hand, my Perdita! so turtles pair,
That never mean to part.
PERDITA. I'll swear for 'em.
POLIXENES. This is the prettiest low-born lass that ever
Ran on the green-sward: nothing she does or seems
But smacks of something greater than herself,
Too noble for this place.
CAMILLO. He tells her something
That makes her blood look out: good sooth she is
The queen of curds and cream.
CLOWN. Come on: strike up!
DORCAS. Mopsa must be your mistress: marry, garlic,
To mend her kissing with!
MOPSA. Now, in good time!
CLOWN. Not a word, a word, we stand upon our manners.
Come, strike up. Music

Here a dance of shepherds and shepherdesses

POLIXENES. Pray, good shepherd, what fair swain is this,
Which dances with your daughter?
SHEPHERD. They call him Doricles, and boasts himself
To have a worthy feeding: but I have it
Upon his own report, and I believe it;
He looks like sooth... He says he loves my daughter,
I think so too; for never gazed the moon
Upon the water, as he'll stand and read
As 'twere my daughter's eyes: and to be plain,
I think there is not half a kiss to choose,
Who loves another best.
POLIXENES. She dances featly.
SHEPHERD. So she does any thing, though I report it,
That should be silent: if young Doricles
Do light upon her, she shall bring him that
Which he not dreams of.

A servant enters

SERVANT. O master! if you did but hear the pedlar at the door, you would never dance again after a tabor and pipe; no, the bagpipe could not move you: he sings several tunes, faster than you'll tell money: he utters them as he had eaten ballads, and all men's ears grew to his tunes.

CLOWN. He could never come better: he shall come in: I love a ballad but even too well, if it be doleful matter merrily set down, or a very pleasant thing indeed and sung lamentably.

SERVANT. He hath songs for man, or woman, of all sizes; no milliner can so fit his customers with gloves: he has the prettiest love-songs for maids, so without bawdry (which is strange), with such delicate burthens of dildos and fadings, 'jump her and thump her'; and where some stretch-mouthed rascal would, as it were, mean mischief, and break a foul gap into the matter, he makes the maid to answer, 'Whoop, do me no harm, good man'; puts him off, slights him, with 'Whoop, do me no harm, good man.'

POLIXENES. This is a brave fellow.

CLOWN. Believe me, thou talkest of an admirable conceited fellow. Has he any unbraided wares?

SERVANT. He hath ribbons of all the colours i'th' rainbow; points, more than all the lawyers in Bohemia can learnedly handle, though they come to him by th' gross; inkles, caddisses, cambrics, lawns: why, he sings 'em over, as they were gods or goddesses; you would think a smock were a she-angel, he so chants to the sleeve-hand, and the work about the square on't.

CLOWN. Prithee, bring him in, and let him approach singing.

PERDITA. Forewarn him that he use no scurrilous words in's tunes.

CLOWN. You have of these pedlars, that have more in them than you'ld think, sister.

PERDITA. Ay, good brother, or go about to think.

Enter Autolycus, singing

Lawn as white as driven snow,
Cypress black as e'er was crow,
Gloves as sweet as damask roses,
Masks for faces and for noses:
Bugle-bracelet, necklace amber,
Perfume for a lady's chamber:
Golden quoifs and stomachers
For my lads to give their dears:
Pins and poking-sticks of steel,
What maids lack from head to heel:
Come buy of me, come: come buy, come buy,
Buy lads, or else your lasses cry:
Come, buy!

CLOWN. If I were not in love with Mopsa, thou shouldst take no money of me, but being enthralled as I am, it will also be the bondage of certain ribbons and gloves.

MOPSA. I was promised them against the feast, but they come not too late now.

DORCAS. He hath promised you more than that, or there be liars.

MOPSA. He hath paid you all he promised you: may be he has paid you more, which will shame you to give him again.

CLOWN. Is there no manners left among maids? will they wear their plackets where they should bear their faces? Is there not milking-time? when you are going to bed? or kill-hole? to whistle off these secrets, but you must be tittle-tattling before all our guests? 'tis well they are whisp'ring: clammer your tongues, and not a word more.

MOPSA. I have done ... Come, you promised me a tawdry-lace and a pair of sweet gloves.

CLOWN. Have I not told thee how I was cozened by the way and lost all my money?

AUTOLYCUS. And, indeed, sir, there are cozeners abroad, therefore it behoves men to be wary.

CLOWN. Fear not thou, man, thou shalt lose nothing here.

AUTOLYCUS. I hope so, sir, for I have about me many parcels of charge.

CLOWN. What hast here? ballads?

MOPSA. Pray now, buy some: I love a ballad in print o' life, for then we are sure they are true.

AUTOLYCUS. Here's one, to a very doleful tune, How a usurer's wife was brought to bed of twenty money-bags at a burthen, and how she longed to eat adders' heads and toads carbonadoed.

MOPSA. Is it true, think you?

AUTOLYCUS. Very true, and but a month old.

DORCAS. Bless me from marrying a usurer!

AUTOLYCUS. Here's the midwife's name to't, one Mistress Tale-porter, and five or six honest wives that were present. Why should I carry lies abroad?

MOPSA. Pray you now, buy it.

CLOWN. Come on, lay it by: and let's first see moe ballads; we'll buy the other things anon.

AUTOLYCUS. Here's another ballad of a fish, that appeared upon the coast, on Wednesday the fourscore of April, forty thousand fathom above water, and sung this ballad against the hard hearts of maids: it was thought she was a woman, and was turned into a cold fish, for she would not exchange flesh with one that loved her: the ballad is very pitiful, and as true.

DORCAS. Is it true too, think you?

AUTOLYCUS. Five justices' hands at it, and witnesses more than my pack will hold.

CLOWN. Lay it by too: another.

AUTOLYCUS. This is a merry ballad, but a very pretty one.

MOPSA. Let's have some merry ones.

AUTOLYCUS. Why, this is a passing merry one, and goes to the tune of 'Two maids wooing a man': there's scarce a maid westward but she sings it; 'tis in request, I can tell you.

MOPSA. We can both sing it; if thou'lt bear a part, thou shalt hear—'tis in three parts.

DORCAS. We had the tune on't a month ago.

AUTOLYCUS. I can bear my part—you must know 'tis my occupation: have at it with you.

SONG

AUTOLYCUS. Get you hence, for I must go
Where it fits not you to know.
DORCAS. Whither?
MOPSA. O, whither?
DORCAS. Whither?
MOPSA. It becomes thy oath full well,
Thou to me thy secrets tell.
DORCAS. Me too: let me go thither.
MOPSA. Or thou goest to th' grange or mill.
DORCAS. If to either, thou dost ill.
AUTOLYCUS. Neither.
DORCAS. What, neither?
AUTOLYCUS. Neither.
DORCAS. Thou hast sworn my love to be.
MOPSA. Thou hast sworn it more to me.
Then, whither goest? say, whither?

CLOWN. We'll have this song out anon by ourselves: my father and the gentlemen are in sad talk, and we'll not trouble them ... Come, bring away thy pack after me. Wenches, I'll buy for you both: pedlar, let's have the first choice: follow me, girls.
They go

AUTOLYCUS. And you shall pay well for 'em.
He goes out after them, singing

Will you buy any tape, or lace for your cape,
My dainty duck, my dear-a?
Any silk, any thread, any toys for your head,
Of the new'st, and fin'st, fin'st wear-a?
Come to the pedlar, money's a meddler,
That doth utter all men's ware-a.

The servant enters again

SERVANT. Master, there is three carters, three shepherds, three neat-herds, three swine-herds, that have made themselves all men of hair, they call themselves Saltiers, and they have a dance which the wenches say is a gallimaufry of gambols, because they are not in't: but they themselves are o'th' mind (if it be not too rough for some that know little but bowling) it will please plentifully.

SHEPHERD. Away! we'll none on't; here has been too much homely foolery already.... I know, sir, we weary you.

POLIXENES. You weary those that refresh us: pray, let's see these four threes of herdsmen.

SERVANT. One three of them, by their own report, sir, hath danced before the king; and not the worst of the three but jumps twelve foot and a half by th' squier.

SHEPHERD. Leave your prating—since these good men are pleased, let them come in; but quickly now.
SERVANT. Why, they stay at door, sir.
He lets the herdsmen in

Here a dance of twelve Satyrs

POLIXENES. O, father, you'll know more of that hereafter . . .
[to Camillo] Is it not too far gone? 'Tis time to part them—
He's simple, and tells much. . . . [to Florizel] How now, fair shepherd!
Your heart is full of something that does take
Your mind from feasting. Sooth, when I was young
And handed love as you do, I was wont
To load my She with knacks: I would have ransacked
The pedlar's silken treasury, and have poured it
To her acceptance; you have let him go,
And nothing marted with him. If your lass
Interpretation should abuse, and call this
Your lack of love or bounty, you were straited
For a reply, at least if you make a care
Of happy holding her.
FLORIZEL. Old sir, I know
She prizes not such trifles as these are:
The gifts she looks from me are packed and locked
Up in my heart, which I have given already,
But not delivered. . . . O, hear me breathe my life
Before this ancient sir, who, it should seem,
Hath sometime loved: I take thy hand, this hand,
As soft as dove's down and as white as it,
Or Ethiopian's tooth, or the fanned snow that's bolted
By th' northern blasts twice o'er.
POLIXENES. What follows this?
How prettily th' young swain seems to wash
The hand was fair before! I have put you out—
But to your protestation; let me hear
What you profess.
FLORIZEL. Do, and be witness to't.
POLIXENES. And this my neighbour too?
FLORIZEL. And he, and more
Than he, and men, the earth, the heavens, and all . . .
That, were I crowned the most imperial monarch,
Thereof most worthy; were I the fairest youth
That ever made eye swerve, had force and knowledge
More than was ever man's—I would not prize them,
Without her love: for her, employ them all,
Commend them and condemn them to her service
Or to their own perdition.
POLIXENES. Fairly offered.
CAMILLO. This shows a sound affection.
SHEPHERD. But, my daughter,
Say you the like to him?
PERDITA. I cannot speak
So well (nothing so well), no, nor mean better:
By th' pattern of mine own thoughts I cut out
The purity of his.
SHEPHERD. Take hands, a bargain . . .
And, friends unknown, you shall bear witness to't:
I give my daughter to him, and will make
Her portion equal his.
FLORIZEL. O, that must be
I'th' virtue of your daughter; one being dead,
I shall have more than you can dream of yet,
Enough then for your wonder . . . But, come on,
Contract us 'fore these witnesses.
SHEPHERD. Come, your hand;
And, daughter, yours.
POLIXENES. Soft, swain, awhile, beseech you—
Have you a father?
FLORIZEL. I have: but what of him?
POLIXENES. Knows he of this?
FLORIZEL. He neither does nor shall.
POLIXENES. Methinks, a father
Is at the nuptial of his son a guest
That best becomes the table . . . Pray you once more,
Is not your father grown incapable
Of reasonable affairs? is he not stupid
With age and alt'ring rheums? can he speak? hear?
Know man from man? dispute his own estate?
Lies he not bed-rid? and again does nothing,
But what he did being childish?
FLORIZEL. No, good sir;
He has his health, and ampler strength indeed
Than most have of his age.
POLIXENES. By my white beard,
You offer him, if this be so, a wrong
Something unfilial: reason my son
Should choose himself a wife, but as good reason
The father (all whose joy is nothing else
But fair posterity) should hold some counsel
In such a business.
FLORIZEL. I yield all this;
But for some other reasons, my grave sir,
Which 'tis not fit you know, I not acquaint
My father of this business.
POLIXENES. Let him know't.
FLORIZEL. He shall not.
POLIXENES. Prithee, let him.
FLORIZEL. No, he must not.
SHEPHERD. Let him, my son, he shall not need to grieve
At knowing of thy choice.
FLORIZEL. Come, come he must not:
Mark our contract.
POLIXENES [discovers himself]. Mark your divorce, young sir,
Whom son I dare not call; thou art too base
To be acknowledged. . . . Thou a sceptre's heir,
That thus affects a sheep-hook! Thou, old traitor,
I am sorry, that by hanging thee, I can
But shorten thy life one week. . . . And thou, fresh piece
Of excellent witchcraft, who, of force, must know
The royal fool thou cop'st with—
SHEPHERD. O, my heart!
POLIXENES. I'll have thy beauty scratched with briars, and made
More homely than thy state. . . . For thee, fond boy,
If I may ever know thou dost but sigh
That thou no more shalt see this knack (as never
I mean thou shalt) we'll bar thee from succession,
Not hold thee of our blood, no not our kin,
Farre than Deucalion off: mark thou my words!
Follow us to the court. . . . Thou churl, for this time
(Though full of our displeasure) yet we free thee
From the dead blow of it. . . . And you, enchantment—
Worthy enough a herdsman; yea, him too,
That makes himself (but for our honour therein)

Unworthy thee—if ever henceforth thou
These rural latches to his entrance open,
Or hoop his body more with thy embraces,
I will devise a death as cruel for thee,
As thou art tender to't. He goes
PERDITA. Even here, undone,
I was not much afeard: for once or twice
I was about to speak and tell him plainly,
The selfsame sun that shines upon his court
Hides not his visage from our cottage, but
Looks on alike.... Will't please you, sir, be gone?
I told you what would come of this: beseech you,
Of your own state take care: this dream of mine—
Being now awake, I'll queen it no inch farther,
But milk my ewes, and weep.
CAMILLO. Why, how now, father!
Speak ere thou diest.
SHEPHERD. I cannot speak, nor think,
Nor dare to know that which I know.... [to Florizel] O, sir.
You have undone a man of fourscore three,
That thought to fill his grave in quiet; yea,
To die upon the bed my father died,
To lie close by his honest bones: but now
Some hangman must put on my shroud, and lay me
Where no priest shovels-in dust.... [to Perdita] O cursèd wretch!
That knew'st this was the prince, and wouldst adventure
To mingle faith with him.... Undone! undone!
If I might die within this hour, I have lived
To die when I desire.
FLORIZEL. Why look you so upon me?
I am but sorry, not afeard; delayed,
But nothing alt'red: what I was, I am:
More straining on for plucking back; not following
My leash unwillingly.
CAMILLO. Gracious my lord,
You know your father's temper: at this time
He will allow no speech ... which, I do guess,
You do not purpose to him ... and as hardly
Will he endure your sight as yet, I fear:
Then, till the fury of his highness settle,
Come not before him.
FLORIZEL. I not purpose it ...
I think, Camillo?
CAMILLO. Even he, my lord.
PERDITA. How often have I told you 'twould be thus?
How often said, my dignity would last
But till 'twere known?
FLORIZEL. It cannot fail but by
The violation of my faith, and then
Let nature crush the sides o'th'earth together,
And mar the seeds within! Lift up thy looks:
From my succession wipe me, father, I
Am heir to my affection.
CAMILLO. Be advised.
FLORIZEL. I am; and by my fancy: if my reason
Will thereto be obedient, I have reason;
If not, my senses, better pleased with madness,
Do bid it welcome.
CAMILLO. This is desperate, sir.
FLORIZEL. So call it: but it does fulfil my vow;
I needs must think it honesty.... Camillo,
Not for Bohemia, nor the pomp that may
Be thereat gleaned; for all the sun sees, or
The close earth wombs, or the profound seas hides
In unknown fathoms, will I break my oath
To this my fair beloved: therefore, I pray you,
As you have ever been my father's honoured friend,
When he shall miss me (as, in faith, I mean not
To see him any more) cast your good counsels
Upon his passion; let myself and Fortune
Tug for the time to come.... This you may know
And so deliver, I am put to sea
With her whom here I cannot hold on shore;
And most opportune to our need I have
A vessel rides fast by, but not prepared
For this design.... What course I mean to hold
Shall nothing benefit your knowledge, nor Concern me the reporting.
CAMILLO. O my lord,
I would your spirit were easier for advice,
Or stronger for your need.
FLORIZEL. Hark, Perdita! He draws her aside
[to Camillo] I'll hear you by and by.
CAMILLO. He's irremoveable,
Resolved for flight ... Now were I happy, if
His going I could frame to serve my turn,
Save him from danger, do him love and honour,
Purchase the sight again of dear Sicilia,
And that unhappy king, my master, whom
I so much thirst to see.
FLORIZEL. Now, good Camillo,
I am so fraught with curious business, that
I leave out ceremony.
CAMILLO. Sir, I think
You have heard of my poor services i'th' love
That I have borne your father?
FLORIZEL. Very nobly
Have you deserved: it is my father's music
To speak your deeds; not little of his care
To have them recompensed as thought on.
CAMILLO. Well, my lord,
If you may please to think I love the king,
And through him what is nearest to him, which is
Your gracious self, embrace but my direction,
If your more ponderous and settled project
May suffer alteration. On mine honour
I'll point you where you shall have such receiving
As shall become your highness, where you may
Enjoy your mistress; from the whom, I see,
There's no disjunction to be made, but by
(As heavens forfend!) your ruin; marry her;
And—with my best endeavours in your absence—
Your discontenting father strive to qualify,
And bring him up to liking.
FLORIZEL. How, Camillo,
May this (almost a miracle) be done?
That I may call thee something more than man,
And after that trust to thee.
CAMILLO. Have you thought on
A place whereto you'll go?
FLORIZEL. Not any yet:
But as th'unthought-on accident is guilty
To what we wildly do, so we profess
Ourselves to be the slaves of chance, and flies
Of every wind that blows.
CAMILLO. Then list to me:
This follows, if you will not change your purpose,
But undergo this flight; make for Sicilia,
And there present yourself and your fair princess,

(For so I see she must be) 'fore Leontes:
She shall be habited, as it becomes
The partner of your bed.... Methinks I see
Leontes opening his free arms and weeping
His welcomes forth: asks thee, the son, forgiveness,
As 'twere i'th' father's person: kisses the hands
Of your fresh princess: o'er and o'er divides him
'Twixt his unkindness and his kindness; th'one
He chides to hell and bids the other grow
Faster than thought or time.

FLORIZEL. Worthy Camillo,
What colour for my visitation shall I
Hold up before him?

CAMILLO. Sent by the king your father
To greet him, and to give him comforts. Sir,
The manner of your bearing towards him, with
What you (as from your father) shall deliver,
Things known betwixt us three, I'll write you down,
The which shall point you forth at every sitting
What you must say; that he shall not perceive,
But that you have your father's bosom there,
And speak his very heart.

FLORIZEL. I am bound to you:
There is some sap in this.

CAMILLO. A course more promising
Than a wild dedication of yourselves
To unpathed waters, undreamed shores; most certain,
To miseries enough: no hope to help you,
But as you shake off one to take another:
Nothing so certain as your anchors, who
Do their best office, if they can but stay you
Where you'll be loath to be: besides you know
Prosperity's the very bond of love,
Whose fresh complexion and whose heart together
Affliction alters.

PERDITA. One of these is true.
I think affliction may subdue the cheek,
But not take in the mind.

CAMILLO. Yea? say you so?
There shall not at your father's house these seven years
Be born another such.

FLORIZEL. My good Camillo,
She is as forward of her breeding as
She is i'th' rear 'our birth.

CAMILLO. I cannot say 'tis pity
She lacks instructions, for she seems a mistress
To most that teach.

PERDITA. Your pardon, sir. For this
I'll blush you thanks.

FLORIZEL. My prettiest Perdita....
But, O, the thorns we stand upon! Camillo—
Preserver of my father, now of me,
The medicine of our house ... how shall we do?
We are not furnished like Bohemia's son,
Nor shall appear in Sicilia.

CAMILLO. My lord,
Fear none of this: I think you know my fortunes
Do all lie there: it shall be so my care
To have you royally appointed, as if
The scene you play, were mine. For instance, sir,
That you may know you shall not want ... one word. They draw apart

Autolycus enters

AUTOLYCUS. Ha, ha! what a fool Honesty is! and Trust, his sworn brother, a very simple gentleman! I have sold all my trumpery: not a counterfeit stone, not a ribbon, glass, pomander, brooch, table-book, ballad, knife, tape, glove, shoe-tie, bracelet, horn-ring, to keep my pack from fasting: they throng who should buy first, as if my trinkets had been hallowed, and brought a benediction to the buyer: by which means I saw whose purse was best in picture; and, what I saw, to my good use I remembered. My clown (who wants but something to be a reasonable man) grew so in love with the wenches' song, that he would not stir his pettitoes till he had both tune and words, which so drew the rest of the herd to me, that all their other senses stuck in ears: you might have pinched a placket, it was senseless; 'twas nothing to geld a codpiece of a purse; I would have filed keys off that hung in chains: no hearing, no feeling, but my sir's song, and admiring the nothing of it. So that, in this time of lethargy, I picked and cut most of their festival purses: and had not the old man come in with a hubbub against his daughter and the king's son, and scared my choughs from the chaff, I had not left a purse alive in the whole army.

Camillo, Florizel, and Perdita come forward

CAMILLO. Nay, but my letters, by this means being there
So soon as you arrive, shall clear that doubt.

FLORIZEL. And those that you'll procure from King Leontes?

CAMILLO. Shall satisfy your father.

PERDITA. Happy be you!
All that you speak shows fair.

CAMILLO [seeing Autolycus]. Who have we here?
We'll make an instrument of this; omit
Nothing may give us aid.

AUTOLYCUS. If they have overheard me now ... why, hanging!

CAMILLO. How now, good fellow! Why shak'st thou so? Fear not, man—here's no harm intended to thee.

AUTOLYCUS. I am a poor fellow, sir.

CAMILLO. Why, be so still; here's nobody will steal that from thee: yet for the outside of thy poverty, we must make an exchange; therefore discase thee instantly (thou must think there's a necessity in't) and change garments with this gentleman: though the pennyworth, on his side, be the worst, yet hold thee, there's some boot. Gives him money

AUTOLYCUS. I am a poor fellow, sir ... [aside] I know ye well enough.

CAMILLO. Nay, prithee, dispatch: the gentleman is half flayed already.

AUTOLYCUS. Are you in earnest, sir? [aside] I smell the trick on't.

FLORIZEL. Dispatch, I prithee.

AUTOLYCUS. Indeed, I have had earnest, but I cannot with conscience take it.

CAMILLO. Unbuckle, unbuckle!

Autolycus exchanges Florizel garments

Fortunate mistress (let my prophecy
Come home to ye!) you must retire yourself
Into some covert: take your sweetheart's hat
And pluck it o'er your brows, muffle your face,
Dismantle you, and (as you can) disliken
The truth of your own seeming, that you may

(For I do fear eyes over) to shipboard
Get undescried.
PERDITA. I see the play so lies
That I must bear a part.
CAMILLO. No remedy....
Have you done there?
FLORIZEL. Should I now meet my father,
He would not call me son. Takes his hat
CAMILLO [snatches it and gives it to Perdita]. Nay, you shall have no hat....
Come, lady, come ... Farewell, my friend.
AUTOLYCUS. Adieu, sir.
FLORIZEL. O Perdita! what have we twain forgot?
Pray you, a word. They talk apart
CAMILLO [aside]. What I do next, shall be to tell the king
Of this escape and whither they are bound;
Wherein, my hope is, I shall so prevail,
To force him after: in whose company
I shall review Sicilia; for whose sight
I have a woman's longing.
FLORIZEL. Fortune speed us!
Thus we set on, Camillo, to th' sea-side.
CAMILLO. The swifter speed, the better.
Florizel, Perdita, and Camillo go out

AUTOLYCUS. I understand the business, I hear it: to have an open ear, a quick eye, and a nimble hand, is necessary for a cut-purse; a good nose is requisite also, to smell out work for th'other senses. I see this is the time that the unjust man doth thrive. What an exchange had this been, without boot! What a boot is here, with this exchange! Sure, the gods do this year connive at us, and we may do any thing extempore. The prince himself is about a piece of iniquity, stealing away from his father, with his clog at his heels: if I thought it were a piece of honesty to acquaint the king withal, I would not do't: I hold it the more knavery to conceal it; and therein am I constant to my profession.

The Clown and Shepherd enter

Aside, aside! here is more matter for a hot brain: every lane's end, every shop, church, session, hanging, yields a careful man work.

CLOWN. See, see; what a man you are now! there is no other way but to tell the king she's a changeling and none of your flesh and blood.

SHEPHERD. Nay, but hear me.

CLOWN. Nay, but hear me.

SHEPHERD. Go to then.

CLOWN. She being none of your flesh and blood, your flesh and blood has not offended the king, and so your flesh and blood is not to be punished by him. Show those things you found about her—those secret things, all but what she has with her: this being done, let the law go whistle; I warrant you.

SHEPHERD. I will tell the king all, every word, yea, and his son's pranks too; who, I may say, is no honest man, neither to his father nor to me, to go about to make me the king's brother-in-law.

CLOWN. Indeed, brother-in-law was the farthest off you could have been to him, and then your blood had been the dearer by I know not how much an ounce.

AUTOLYCUS [aside]. Very wisely—puppies!

SHEPHERD. Well; let us to the king ... [takes a bundle from the press] There is that in this fardel will make him scratch his beard.

AUTOLYCUS [aside]. I know not what impediment this complaint may be to the flight of my master.

CLOWN. Pray heartily he be at' palace.

AUTOLYCUS [aside]. Though I am not naturally honest, I am so sometimes by chance: let me pocket up my pedlar's excrement.... [takes off his false beard and steps forth] How now, rustics? whither are you bound?

SHEPHERD. To th' palace, an it like your worship.

AUTOLYCUS. Your affairs there? what? with whom? the condition of that fardel, the place of your dwelling, your names, your ages, of what having, breeding, and any thing that is fitting to be known, discover.

CLOWN. We are but plain fellows, sir.

AUTOLYCUS. A lie; you are rough and hairy: let me have no lying; it becomes none but tradesmen, and they often give us soldiers the lie, but we pay them for it with stamped coin, not stabbing steel, therefore they do not give us the lie.

CLOWN. Your worship had like to have given us one, if you had not taken yourself with the manner.

SHEPHERD. Are you a courtier, an't like you, sir?

AUTOLYCUS. Whether it like me or no, I am a courtier. Seest thou not the air of the court in these enfoldings? hath not my gait in it the measure of the court? receives not thy nose court-odour from me? reflect I not on thy baseness court-contempt? Think'st thou, for that I insinuate to toaze from thee thy business, I am therefore no courtier? I am courtier cap-a-pe; and one that will either push on or pluck back thy business there: whereupon I command thee to open thy affair.

SHEPHERD. My business, sir, is to the king.

AUTOLYCUS. What advocate hast thou to him?

SHEPHERD. I know not, an't like you.

CLOWN. Advocate's the court-word for a pheasant; say you have none.

SHEPHERD. None, sir; I have no pheasant, cock nor hen.

AUTOLYCUS. How blessed are we that are not simple men!
Yet nature might have made me as these are,
Therefore I will not disdain.

CLOWN. This cannot but be a great courtier!

SHEPHERD. His garments are rich, but he wears them not handsomely.

CLOWN. He seems to be the more noble in being fantastical: a great man, I'll warrant; I know by the picking on's teeth.

AUTOLYCUS. The fardel there? what's i'th' fardel? Wherefore that box?

SHEPHERD. Sir, there lies such secrets in this fardel and box, which none must know but the king, and which he shall know within this hour, if I may come to th' speech of him.

AUTOLYCUS. Age, thou hast lost thy labour.

SHEPHERD. Why, sir?

AUTOLYCUS. The king is not at the palace, he is gone aboard a new ship to purge melancholy and air himself: for, if thou beest capable of things serious, thou must know the king is full of grief.

SHEPHERD. So 'tis said, sir; about his son, that should have married a shepherd's daughter.

AUTOLYCUS. If that shepherd be not in hand-fast, let him fly; the curses he shall have, the tortures he shall feel, will break the back of man, the heart of monster.

CLOWN. Think you so, sir?

AUTOLYCUS. Not he alone shall suffer what wit can make heavy and vengeance bitter; but those that are germane to him, though removed fifty times, shall all come under the hangman: which though it be great pity, yet it is necessary. An old sheep-whistling rogue, a ram-tender, to offer to have his daughter come into grace! Some say he shall be stoned; but that death is too soft for him, say I: draw our throne into a sheep-cote! all deaths are too few, the sharpest too easy.

CLOWN. Has the old man e'er a son, sir, do you hear, an't like you, sir?

AUTOLYCUS. He has a son . . . who shall be flayed alive, then 'nointed over with honey, set on the head of a wasp's nest, then stand till he be three quarters and a dram dead; then recovered again with aqua-vitæ or some other hot infusion; then, raw as he is, and in the hottest day prognostication proclaims, shall he be set against a brick-wall, the sun looking with a southward eye upon him; where he is to behold him with flies blown to death. But what talk we of these traitorly rascals, whose miseries are to be smiled at, their offences being so capital? Tell me (for you seem to be honest plain men) what you have to the king: being something gently considered, I'll bring you where he is aboard, tender your persons to his presence, whisper him in your behalfs; and, if it be in man, besides the king, to effect your suits, here is man shall do it.

CLOWN. He seems to be of great authority: close with him, give him gold; and though authority be a stubborn bear, yet he is oft led by the nose with gold: show the inside of your purse to the outside of his hand, and no more ado. Remember 'stoned,' and 'flayed alive!'

SHEPHERD. An't please you, sir, to undertake the business for us, here is that gold I have: I'll make it as much more, and leave this young man in pawn, till I bring it you.

AUTOLYCUS. After I have done what I promised?

SHEPHERD. Ay, sir.

AUTOLYCUS. Well, give me the moiety . . . Are you a party in this business?

CLOWN. In some sort, sir: but though my case be a pitiful one, I hope I shall not be flayed out of it.

AUTOLYCUS. O, that's the case of the shepherd's son: hand him, he'll be made an example.

CLOWN. Comfort, good comfort! We must to the king, and show our strange sights: he must know 'tis none of your daughter nor my sister; we are gone else. . . . [to Autolycus] Sir, I will give you as much as this old man does, when the business is performed, and remain, as he says, your pawn till it be brought you.

AUTOLYCUS. I will trust you. Walk before toward the sea-side, go on the right hand, I will but look upon the hedge and follow you.

CLOWN. We are blest in this man, as I may say, even blest.

SHEPHERD. Let's before, as he bids us: he was provided to do us good. Shepherd and Clown go

AUTOLYCUS. If I had a mind to be honest, I see Fortune would not suffer me; she drops booties in my mouth. I am courted now with a double occasion: gold and a means to do the prince my master good; which who knows how that may turn back to my advancement? I will bring these two moles, these blind ones, aboard him: if he think it fit to shore them again, and that the complaint they have to the king concerns him nothing, let him call me rogue for being so far officious, for I am proof against that title and what shame else belongs to't . . . To him will I present them, there may be matter in it.
He goes

ACT 5

Scene 1: Sicilia. The palace of Leontes

Leontes, Cleomenes, Dion, Paulina, and others

CLEOMENES. Sir, you have done enough, and have performed
A saint-like sorrow: no fault could you make,
Which you have not redeemed; indeed, paid down
More penitence than done trespass: at the last,
Do as the heavens have done, forget your evil;
With them forgive yourself.
LEONTES. Whilst I remember
Her and her virtues, I cannot forget
My blemishes in them, and so still think of
The wrong I did myself: which was so much,
That heirless it hath made my kingdom, and
Destroyed the sweet'st companion that e'er man
Bred his hopes out of.
PAULINA. True, too true, my lord:
If, one by one, you wedded all the world,
Or from the all that are took something good
To make a perfect woman . . . she you killed
Would be unparalleled.
LEONTES. I think so. . . . Killed!
She I killed! I did so: but thou strik'st me
Sorely, to say I did; it is as bitter
Upon thy tongue, as in my thought. . . . Now, good now,
Say so but seldom.
CLEOMENES. Not at all, good lady:
You might have spoken a thousand things that would
Have done the time more benefit and graced
Your kindness better.
PAULINA. You are one of those
Would have him wed again.
DION. If you would not so,
You pity not the state, nor the remembrance
Of his most sovereign name; consider little
What dangers, by his highness' fail of issue,
May drop upon his kingdom, and devour
Incertain lookers on. What were more holy
Than to rejoice the former queen is well?
What holier than, for royalty's repair,
For present comfort and for future good,
To bless the bed of majesty again
With a sweet fellow to't?
PAULINA. There is none worthy,
Respecting her that's gone . . . Besides, the gods
Will have fulfilled their secret purposes:
For has not the divine Apollo said,
Is't not the tenour of his oracle,
That King Leontes shall not have an heir

Till his lost child be found? which, that it shall,
Is all as monstrous to our human reason,
As my Antigonus to break his grave,
Did perish with the infant. 'Tis your counsel
My lord should to the heavens be contrary,
Oppose against their wills.... [to Leontes] Care not for issue—
The crown will find an heir: great Alexander
Left his to th' worthiest; so his successor
Was like to be the best.
LEONTES. Good Paulina,
Who hast the memory of Hermione
I know in honour ... O, that ever I
Had squared me to thy counsel! then, even now,
I might have looked upon my queen's full eyes,
Have taken treasure from her lips—
PAULINA. And left them
More rich for what they yielded.
LEONTES. Thou speak'st truth:
No more such wives, therefore no wife: one worse,
And better used, would make her sainted spirit
Again possess her corpse, and on this stage,
Where we offenders move, appear soul-vexed,
And begin, 'Why to me?'
PAULINA. Had she such power,
She had just cause.
LEONTES. She had, and would incense me
To murder her I married.
PAULINA. I should so:
Were I the ghost that walked, I'ld bid you mark
Her eye, and tell me for what dull part in't
You chose her: then I'ld shriek, that even your ears
Should rift to hear me, and the words that followed
Should be, 'Remember mine!'
LEONTES. Stars, stars,
And all eyes else dead coals! Fear thou no wife;
I'll have no wife, Paulina.
PAULINA. Will you swear
Never to marry, but by my free leave?
LEONTES. Never, Paulina, so be blest my spirit!
PAULINA. Then, good my lords, bear witness to his oath.
CLEOMENES. You tempt him over-much.
PAULINA. Unless another,
As like Hermione as is her picture,
Affront his eye.
CLEOMENES. Good madam,—
PAULINA. I have done.
Yet, if my lord will marry ... if you will, sir ...
No remedy, but you will ... give me the office
To choose you a queen: she shall not be so young
As was your former, but she shall be such
As, walked your first queen's ghost, it should take joy
To see her in your arms.
LEONTES. My true Paulina,
We shall not marry, till thou bid'st us.
PAULINA. That
Shall be when your first queen's again in breath;
Never till then.

A gentleman enters

GENTLEMAN. One that gives out himself Prince
Florizel,
Son of Polixenes, with his princess (she
The fairest I have yet beheld) desires access
To your high presence.
LEONTES. What with him? he comes not
Like to his father's greatness: his approach
(So out of circumstance and sudden) tells us
'Tis not a visitation framed, but forced
By need and accident. What train?
GENTLEMAN. But few,
And those but mean.
LEONTES. His princess, say you, with him?
GENTLEMAN. Ay; the most peerless piece of earth, I think,
That e'er the sun shone bright on.
PAULINA. O Hermione,
As every present time doth boast itself
Above a better gone, so must thy grave
Give way to what's seen now! Sir, you yourself
Have said and writ so; but your writing now
Is colder than that theme: 'She had not been,
Nor was not to be equalled'—thus your verse
Flowed with her beauty once; 'tis shrewdly ebbed,
To say you have seen a better.
GENTLEMAN. Pardon, madam:
The one I have almost forgot—your pardon—
The other, when she has obtained your eye,
Will have your tongue too. This is a creature,
Would she begin a sect, might quench the zeal
Of all professors else; make proselytes
Of who she but bid follow.
PAULINA. How! not women?
GENTLEMAN. Women will love her, that she is a woman
More worth than any man; men, that she is
The rarest of all women.
LEONTES. Go, Cleomenes,
Yourself, assisted with your honoured friends,
Bring them to our embracement....
Cleomenes and others go
Still, 'tis strange,
He thus should steal upon us.
PAULINA. Had our prince
(Jewel of children) seen this hour, he had paired
Well with this lord; there was not full a month
Between their births.
LEONTES. Prithee, no more; cease; thou know'st,
He dies to me again when talked of: sure,
When I shall see this gentleman, thy speeches
Will bring me to consider that which may
Unfurnish me of reason. They are come.

Cleomenes returns with Florizel, Perdita, and attendants

Your mother was most true to wedlock, prince,
For she did print your royal father off,
Conceiving you: were I but twenty-one,
Your father's image is so hit in you
(His very air!) that I should call you brother,
As I did him, and speak of something wildly
By us performed before. Most dearly welcome!
And your fair princess—goddess! O! ... Alas,
I lost a couple, that 'twixt heaven and earth
Might thus have stood begetting wonder, as
You, gracious couple, do: and then I lost
(All mine own folly) the society,
Amity too, of your brave father, whom
(Though bearing misery) I desire my life
Once more to look on him.

FLORIZEL. By his command
Have I here touched Sicilia, and from him
Give you all greetings, that a king, at friend,
Can send his brother: and, but infirmity,
Which waits upon worn times, hath something seized
His wished ability, he had himself
The lands and waters 'twixt your throne and his Measured to look upon you; whom he loves
(He bade me say so) more than all the sceptres,
And those that bear them, living.
LEONTES. O my brother
(Good gentleman!) the wrongs I have done thee stir
Afresh within me; and these thy offices,
So rarely kind, are as interpreters
Of my behind-hand slackness.... Welcome hither,
As is the spring to th'earth. And hath he too
Exposed this paragon to th' fearful usage
(At least ungentle) of the dreadful Neptune,
To greet a man not worth her pains, much less
Th'adventure of her person?
FLORIZEL. Good my lord,
She came from Libya.
LEONTES. Where the warlike Smalus,
That noble honoured lord, is feared and loved?
FLORIZEL. Most royal sir, from thence; from him, whose daughter
His tears proclaimed his, parting with her: thence
(A prosperous south-wind friendly) we have crossed,
To execute the charge my father gave me,
For visiting your highness: my best train
I have from your Sicilian shores dismissed;
Who for Bohemia bend, to signify
Not only my success in Libya, sir,
But my arrival, and my wife's, in safety
Here, where we are.
LEONTES. The blessed gods
Purge all infection from our air, whilst you
Do climate here! You have a holy father,
A graceful gentleman, against whose person
(So sacred as it is) I have done sin,
For which the heavens, taking angry note,
Have left me issueless; and your father's blessed
(As he from heaven merits it) with you,
Worthy his goodness.... What might I have been,
Might I a son and daughter now have looked on,
Such goodly things as you?

A lord enters

LORD. Most noble sir,
That which I shall report will bear no credit,
Were not the proof so nigh. Please you, great sir,
Bohemia greets you from himself, by me:
Desires you to attach his son, who has
(His dignity and duty both cast off)
Fled from his father, from his hopes, and with
A shepherd's daughter.
LEONTES. Where's Bohemia? speak!
LORD. Here in your city; I now came from him.
I speak amazedly, and it becomes
My marvel and my message. To your court
Whiles he was hast'ning (in the chase, it seems,
Of this fair couple) meets he on the way
The father of this seeming lady, and
Her brother, having both their country quitted
With this young prince.
FLORIZEL. Camillo has betrayed me;
Whose honour and whose honesty till now
Endured all weathers.
LORD. Lay't so to his charge:
He's with the king your father.
LEONTES. Who? Camillo?
LORD. Camillo, sir; I spake with him; who now
Has these poor men in question. Never saw I
Wretches so quake: they kneel, they kiss the earth;
Forswear themselves as often as they speak:
Bohemia stops his ears, and threatens them
With divers deaths in death.
PERDITA. O, my poor father!
The heaven sets spies upon us, will not have
Our contract celebrated.
LEONTES. You are married?
FLORIZEL. We are not, sir, nor are we like to be;
The stars, I see, will kiss the valleys first:
The odds for high and low's alike.
LEONTES. My lord,
Is this the daughter of a king?
FLORIZEL. She is,
When once she is my wife.
LEONTES. That 'once,' I see, by your good father's speed,
Will come on very slowly. I am sorry
(Most sorry) you have broken from his liking,
Where you were tied in duty: and as sorry,
Your choice is not so rich in worth as beauty,
That you might well enjoy her.
FLORIZEL. Dear, look up:
Though Fortune, visible an enemy,
Should chase us with my father; power no jot
Hath she to change our loves.... Beseech you, sir,
Remember since you owed no more to time
Than I do now: with thought of such affections,
Step forth mine advocate; at your request,
My father will grant precious things as trifles.
LEONTES. Would he do so, I'ld beg your precious mistress,
Which he counts but a trifle.
PAULINA. Sir, my liege,
Your eye hath too much youth in't: not a month
'Fore your queen died, she was more worth such gazes
Than what you look on now.
LEONTES. I thought of her.
Even in these looks I made.... [to Florizel] But your petition
Is yet unanswered: I will to your father:
Your honour not o'erthrown by your desires,
I am friend to them and you: upon which errand
I now go toward him; therefore follow me,
And mark what way I make; come, good my lord.
They go

Scene 2: Before the palace of Leontes

Enter Autolycus and a gentleman

AUTOLYCUS. Beseech you, sir, were you present at this relation?

1 GENTLEMAN. I was by at the opening of the fardel, heard the old shepherd deliver the manner how he found it: whereupon, after a little amazedness, we were all commanded out of the chamber; only this methought I heard the shepherd say, he found the child.

AUTOLYCUS. I would most gladly know the issue of it.

1 GENTLEMAN. I make a broken delivery of the business: but the changes I perceived in the king and Camillo were very notes of admiration: they seemed almost, with staring on one another, to tear the cases of their eyes; there was speech in their dumbness, language in their very gesture; they looked as they had heard of a world ransomed, or one destroyed: a notable passion of wonder appeared in them: but the wisest beholder, that knew no more but seeing, could not say if th'importance were joy or sorrow; but in the extremity of the one, it must needs be.

Another gentleman comes up

Here comes a gentleman, that haply knows more: the news, Rogero?

2 GENTLEMAN. Nothing but bonfires: the oracle is fulfilled; the king's daughter is found: such a deal of wonder is broken out within this hour, that ballad-makers cannot be able to express it.

A third gentleman approaches

Here comes the Lady Paulina's steward, he can deliver you more. How goes it now, sir? this news which is called true is so like an old tale, that the verity of it is in strong suspicion: has the king found his heir?

3 GENTLEMAN. Most true, if ever Truth were pregnant by Circumstance: that which you hear you'll swear you see, there is such unity in the proofs. The mantle of Queen Hermione's: her jewel about the neck of it: the letters of Antigonus found with it, which they know to be his character: the majesty of the creature, in resemblance of the mother: the affection of nobleness, which nature shows above her breeding—and many other evidences, proclaim her, with all certainty, to be the king's daughter. Did you see the meeting of the two kings?

2 GENTLEMAN. No.

3 GENTLEMAN. Then have you lost a sight, which was to be seen, cannot be spoken of. There might you have beheld one joy crown another, so and in such manner, that it seemed sorrow wept to take leave of them; for their joy waded in tears. There was casting up of eyes, holding up of hands, with countenance of such distraction, that they were to be known by garment, not by favour. Our king being ready to leap out of himself for joy of his found daughter; as if that joy were now become a loss, cries, 'O, thy mother, thy mother!' then asks Bohemia forgiveness, then embraces his son-in-law; then again worries he his daughter, with clipping her; now he thanks the old shepherd, which stands by, like a weather-bitten conduit of many kings' reigns. I never heard of such another encounter, which lames report to follow it, and undoes description to do it.

2 GENTLEMAN. What, pray you, became of Antigonus, that carried hence the child?

3 GENTLEMAN. Like an old tale still, which will have matter to rehearse, though credit be asleep and not an ear open; he was torn to pieces with a bear: this avouches the shepherd's son; who has not only his innocence (which seems much) to justify him, but a handkerchief and rings of his that Paulina knows.

1 GENTLEMAN. What became of his bark and his followers?

3 GENTLEMAN. Wracked the same instant of their master's death, and in the view of the shepherd: so that all the instruments which aided to expose the child were even then lost, when it was found. But, O, the noble combat that 'twixt joy and sorrow was fought in Paulina! She had one eye declined for the loss of her husband, another elevated that the oracle was fulfilled: she lifted the princess from the earth, and so locks her in embracing, as if she would pin her to her heart, that she might no more be in danger of losing.

1 GENTLEMAN. The dignity of this act was worth the audience of kings and princes, for by such was it acted.

3 GENTLEMAN. One of the prettiest touches of all, and that which angled for mine eyes (caught the water, though not the fish) was, when at the relation of the queen's death (with the manner how she came to't, bravely confessed and lamented by the king) how attentiveness wounded his daughter, till, from one sign of dolour to another, she did, with an 'Alas,' I would fain say, bleed tears; for, I am sure, my heart wept blood. Who was most marble, there changed colour; some swooned, all sorrowed: if all the world could have seen't, the woe had been universal.

1 GENTLEMAN. Are they returned to the court?

3 GENTLEMAN. No: the princess hearing of her mother's statue, which is in the keeping of Paulina—a piece many years in doing, and now newly performed, by that rare Italian master, Julio Romano, who, had he himself eternity and could put breath into his work, would beguile nature of her custom, so perfectly he is her ape: he so near to Hermione hath done Hermione, that they say one would speak to her and stand in hope of answer. Thither with all greediness of affection are they gone, and there they intend to sup.

2 GENTLEMAN. I thought she had some great matter there in hand, for she hath privately twice or thrice a day, ever since the death of Hermione, visited that removed house. Shall we thither, and with our company piece the rejoicing?

1 GENTLEMAN. Who would be thence that has the benefit of access? Every wink of an eye, some new grace will be born: our absence makes us unthrifty to our knowledge. Let's along.

The three gentlemen go

AUTOLYCUS. Now, had I not the dash of my former life in me, would preferment drop on my head. I brought the old man and his son aboard the prince; told him I heard them talk of a fardel and I know not what: but he at that time, over-fond of the shepherd's daughter (so he then took her to be) who began to be much sea-sick, and himself little better, extremity of weather continuing, this mystery remained undiscovered. But 'tis all one to me: for had I been the finder out of this secret, it would not have relished among my other discredits.

The Shepherd and Clown approach

Here come those I have done good to against my will, and already appearing in the blossoms of their fortune.

SHEPHERD. Come, boy; I am past moe children; but thy sons and daughters will be all gentlemen born.

CLOWN. You are well met, sir. You denied to fight with me this other day, because I was no gentleman born. See you these clothes? Say you see them not and think me still no gentleman born: you were best say these robes are not gentleman born. Give me the lie; do; and try whether I am not now a gentleman born.

AUTOLYCUS. I know, you are now, sir, a gentleman born.

CLOWN. Ay, and have been so any time these four hours.

SHEPHERD. And so have I, boy.

CLOWN. So you have: but I was a gentleman born before my father: for the king's son took me by the hand, and called me brother; and then the two kings called my father brother; and then the prince, my brother, and the princess, my sister, called my father father; and so we wept: and there was the first gentleman-like tears that ever we shed.

SHEPHERD. We may live, son, to shed many more.

CLOWN. Ay; or else 'twere hard luck, being in so preposterous estate as we are.

AUTOLYCUS. I humbly beseech you, sir, to pardon me all the faults I have committed to your worship, and to give me your good report to the prince my master.

SHEPHERD. Prithee, son, do; for we must be gentle, now we are gentlemen.

CLOWN. Thou wilt amend thy life?

AUTOLYCUS. Ay, an it like your good worship.

CLOWN. Give me thy hand: I will swear to the prince thou art as honest a true fellow as any is in Bohemia.

SHEPHERD. You may say it, but not swear it.

CLOWN. Not swear it, now I am a gentleman? Let boors and franklins say it, I'll swear it.

SHEPHERD. How if it be false, son?

CLOWN. If it be ne'er so false, a true gentleman may swear it, in the behalf of his friend: and I'll swear to the prince thou art a tall fellow of thy hands, and that thou wilt not be drunk; but I know thou art no tall fellow of thy hands and that thou wilt be drunk; but I'll swear it, and I would thou wouldst be a tall fellow of thy hands.

AUTOLYCUS. I will prove so, sir, to my power.

CLOWN. Ay, by any means prove a tall fellow: if I do not wonder how thou darest venture to be drunk, not being a tall fellow, trust me not. Hark! the kings and the princes, our kindred, are going to see the queen's picture. Come, follow us: we'll be thy good masters. They go

Scene 3: Paulina's house

Leontes, Polixenes, Florizel, Perdita, Camillo, and Paulina enter with lords and attendants

LEONTES. O grave and good Paulina, the great comfort
That I have had of thee!
PAULINA. What, sovereign sir,
I did not well, I meant well; all my services
You have paid home: but that you have vouchsafed,
With your crowned brother and these contracted
Heirs of your kingdoms, my poor house to visit,
It is a surplus of your grace, which never
My life may last to answer.
LEONTES. O Paulina,
We honour you with trouble: but we came
To see the statue of our queen: your gallery
Have we passed through, not without much content
In many singularities; but we saw not
That which my daughter came to look upon,
The statue of her mother.
PAULINA. As she lived peerless,
So her dead likeness, I do well believe,
Excels whatever yet you looked upon,
Or hand of man hath done; therefore I keep it
Lonely, apart. But here it is: prepare
To see the life as lively mocked, as ever
Still sleep mocked death: behold, and say 'tis well....
Paulina draws the curtain, and discovers the figure
I like your silence, it the more shows off
Your wonder: but yet speak—first, you, my liege—
Comes it not something near?
LEONTES. Her natural posture!
Chide me, dear stone, that I may say indeed
Thou art Hermione; or rather, thou art she
In thy not chiding; for she was as tender
As infancy and grace. But yet, Paulina,
Hermione was not so much wrinkled, nothing
So agéd as this seems.
POLIXENES. O, not by much.
PAULINA. So much the more our carver's excellence,
Which lets go by some sixteen years, and makes her
As she lived now.
LEONTES. As now she might have done,
So much to my good comfort, as it is
Now piercing to my soul. O, thus she stood,
Even with such life of majesty (warm life,
As now it coldly stands) when first I wooed her!
I am ashamed: does not the stone rebuke me,
For being more stone than it? O royal piece!
There's magic in thy majesty, which has
My evils conjured to remembrance, and
From thy admiring daughter took the spirits,
Standing like stone with thee!
PERDITA. And give me leave,
And do not say 'tis superstition, that
I kneel and then implore her blessing.... Lady,
Dear queen, that ended when I but began,
Give me that hand of yours to kiss.
PAULINA [prevents her]. O, patience;
The statue is but newly fixed; the colour's
Not dry.
CAMILLO. My lord, your sorrow was too sore laid on,
Which sixteen winters cannot blow away,
So many summers dry: scarce any joy
Did ever so long live; no sorrow,
But killed itself much sooner.
POLIXENES. Dear my brother,
Let him that was the cause of this have power
To take off so much grief from you, as he
Will piece up in himself.
PAULINA. Indeed, my lord,
If I had thought the sight of my poor image
Would thus have wrought you (for the stone is mine)
I'ld not have showed it.
LEONTES. Do not draw the curtain.

PAULINA. No longer shall you gaze on't, lest your fancy
May think anon it moves.
LEONTES. Let be, let be!
Would I were dead, but that, methinks, already!—
What was he that did make it?—See, my lord,
Would you not deem it breathed? and that those veins
Did verily bear blood?
POLIXENES. Masterly done:
The very life seems warm upon her lip.
LEONTES. The fixure of her eye has motion in't,
As we are mocked with art.
PAULINA. I'll draw the curtain:
My lord's almost so far transported that
He'll think anon it lives.
LEONTES. O sweet Paulina,
Make me to think so twenty years together;
No settled senses of the world can match
The pleasure of that madness. Let't alone.
PAULINA. I am sorry, sir, I have thus far stirred you: but
I could afflict you farther.
LEONTES. Do, Paulina;
For this affliction has a taste as sweet
As any cordial comfort. Still methinks
There is an air comes from her. What fine chisel
Could ever yet cut breath? Let no man mock me,
For I will kiss her.
PAULINA. Good my lord, forbear:
The ruddiness upon her lip is wet;
You'll mar it, if you kiss it; stain your own
With oily painting . . . Shall I draw the curtain?
LEONTES. No! not these twenty years.
PERDITA. So long could I
Stand by, a looker on.
PAULINA. Either forbear,
Quit presently the chapel, or resolve you
For more amazement: if you can behold it,
I'll make the statue move indeed; descend,
And take you by the hand: but then you'll think
(Which I protest against) I am assisted
By wicked powers.
LEONTES. What you can make her do,
I am content to look on: what to speak,
I am content to hear; for 'tis as easy
To make her speak, as move.
PAULINA. It is required
You do awake your faith: then all stand still;
Or those that think it is unlawful business
I am about, let them depart.
LEONTES. Proceed:
No foot shall stir.
PAULINA. Music; awake her: strike!
Music
'Tis time; descend; be stone no more; approach;
Strike all that look upon with marvel; come;
I'll fill your grave up; stir; nay, come away;
Bequeath to death your numbness, for from him
Dear life redeems you! You perceive, she stirs:
Hermione comes down from the pedestal
Start not: her actions shall be holy, as
You hear my spell is lawful: do not shun her
Until you see her die again; for then
You kill her double: nay, present your hand:
When she was young, you wooed her; now, in age,
Is she become the suitor?
LEONTES. O, she's warm!
If this be magic, let it be an art
Lawful as eating.
POLIXENES. She embraces him!
CAMILLO. She hangs about his neck—
If she pertain to life, let her speak too.
POLIXENES. Ay, and make it manifest where she has lived,
Or how stol'n from the dead.
PAULINA. That she is living,
Were it but told you, should be hooted at
Like an old tale; but it appears she lives,
Though yet she speak not. Mark a little while . . .
Please you to interpose, fair madam, kneel
And pray your mother's blessing. . . . Turn, good lady,
Our Perdita is found.
HERMIONE. You gods look down,
And from your sacred vials pour your graces
Upon my daughter's head! Tell me (mine own)
Where hast thou been preserved? where lived? how found
Thy father's court? for thou shalt hear that I,
Knowing by Paulina that the oracle
Gave hope thou wast in being, have preserved
Myself to see the issue.
PAULINA. There's time enough for that,
Lest they desire (upon this push) to trouble
Your joys with like relation. . . . Go together,
You precious winners all; your exultation
Partake to every one: I (an old turtle)
Will wing me to some withered bough, and there
My mate (that's never to be found again)
Lament, till I am lost.
LEONTES. O peace, Paulina!
Thou shouldst a husband take by my consent,
As I by thine a wife: this is a match,
And made between's by vows. Thou hast found mine,
But how, is to be questioned: for I saw her,
As I thought, dead; and have, in vain, said many
A prayer upon her grave: I'll not seek far
(For him, I partly know his mind) to find thee
An honourable husband—come, Camillo,
And take her by the hand—whose worth and honesty
Is richly noted; and here justified
By us, a pair of kings. . . . Let's from this place. . . .
What? look upon my brother: both your pardons,
That e'er I put between your holy looks
My ill suspicion. . . . This' your son-in-law,
And son unto the king, whom heavens directing,
Is troth-plight to your daughter. Good Paulina,
Lead us from hence, where we may leisurely
Each one demand and answer to his part
Performed in this wide gap of time, since first
We were dissevered: hastily lead away. They go

King John

ACT 1

Scene I: England. The palace of King John

Enter King John, Queen Elinor, Pembroke, Essex, Salisbury, with the Chatillion of France, Attendants

K. JOHN. Now, say, Chatillion, what would France with us?
CHATILLION. Thus, after greeting, speaks the King of France
In my behaviour to the majesty,
The borrowed majesty, of England here.
ELINOR. A strange beginning: 'borrowed majesty'!
K. JOHN. Silence, good mother, hear the embassy.
CHATILLION. Philip of France, in right and true behalf
Of thy deceaséd brother Geffrey's son,
Arthur Plantagenet, lays most lawful claim
To this fair island and the territories,
To Ireland, Poictiers, Anjou, Touraine, Maine,
Desiring thee to lay aside the sword
Which sways usurpingly these several titles,
And put the same into young Arthur's hand,
Thy nephew and right royal sovereign.
K. JOHN. What follows if we disallow of this?
CHATILLION. The proud control of fierce and bloody war,
To enforce these rights so forcibly withheld.
K. JOHN. Here have we war for war and blood for blood,
Controlment for control: so answer France.
CHATILLION. Then take my king's defiance from my mouth,
The farthest limit of my embassy.
K. JOHN. Bear mine to him, and so depart in peace:
Be thou as lightning in the eyes of France;
For ere thou canst report I will be there,
The thunder of my cannon shall be heard.
So hence! Be thou the trumpet of our wrath,
And sullen presage of your own decay:
An honourable conduct let him have,
Pembroke, look to't: farewell, Chatillion.
Chatillion and Pembroke depart
ELINOR. What now, my son? have I not ever said
How that ambitious Constance would not cease
Till she had kindled France and all the world,
Upon the right and party of her son?
This might have been prevented and made whole
With very easy arguments of love,
Which now the manage of two kingdoms must
With fearful-bloody issue arbitrate.
K. JOHN. Our strong possession and our right for us.
ELINOR. Your strong possession much more than your right,
Or else it must go wrong with you and me—
So much my conscience whispers in your ear,
Which none but heaven, and you, and I, shall hear.

Enter a Sheriff and speaks aside with Essex

ESSEX. My liege, here is the strangest controversy,
Come from the country to be judged by you,
That e'er I heard: shall I produce the men?
K. JOHN. Let them approach . . .
Our abbeys and our priories shall pay
This expedition's charge . . .

Robert Faulconbridge, and Philip his bastard brother enter

What men are you?
BASTARD. Your faithful subject I, a gentleman,
Born in Northamptonshire, and eldest son,
As I suppose, to Robert Faulconbridge,
A soldier, by honour-giving hand
Of Cordelion knighted in the field.
K. JOHN. What art thou?
ROBERT. The son and heir to that same Faulconbridge.
K. JOHN. Is that the elder, and art thou the heir?
You came not of one mother then, it seems.
BASTARD. Most certain of one mother, mighty king—
That is well known—and as I think one father:
But for the certain knowledge of that truth
I put you o'er to heaven and to my mother;
Of that I doubt, as all men's children may.
ELINOR. Out on thee, rude man! thou dost shame thy mother,
And wound her honour with this diffidence.
BASTARD. I, madam? no, I have no reason for it,
That is my brother's plea and none of mine,
The which if he can prove, a' pops me out
At least from fair five hundred pound a year:
Heaven guard my mother's honour, and my land!
K. JOHN. A good blunt fellow . . . Why, being younger born,
Doth he lay claim to thine inheritance?
BASTARD. I know not why, except to get the land:
But once he slandered me with bastardy:
Now whe'r I be as true begot or no,
That still I lay upon my mother's head,
But that I am as well begot, my liege,
(Fair fall the bones that took the pains for me!)
Compare our faces and be judge yourself.
If old Sir Robert did beget us both,
And were our father, and this son like him,
O old Sir Robert, father, on my knee
I give heaven thanks I was not like to thee!
K. JOHN. Why, what a madcap hath heaven lent us here!
ELINOR. He hath a trick of Cordelion's face,
The accent of his tongue affecteth him:
Do you not read some tokens of my son
In the large composition of this man?
K. JOHN. Mine eye hath well examinéd his parts,
And finds them perfect Richard . . . Sirrah, speak,
What doth move you to claim your brother's land?
BASTARD. Because he hath a half-face like my father!
With half that face would he have all my land—
A half-faced groat five hundred pound a year!
ROBERT. My gracious liege, when that my father lived,
Your brother did employ my father much—
BASTARD. Well, sir, by this you cannot get my land,
Your tale must be how he employed my mother.
ROBERT. And once dispatched him in an embassy
To Germany, there with the emperor

To treat of high affairs touching that time:
Th' advantage of his absence took the king,
And in the mean time sojourned at my father's;
Where how he did prevail I shame to speak,
But truth is truth: large lengths of seas and shores
Between my father and my mother lay,
As I have heard my father speak himself,
When this same lusty gentleman was got:
Upon his death-bed he by will bequeathed
His lands to me, and took it on his death
That this my mother's son was none of his;
And if he were, he came into the world
Full fourteen weeks before the course of time:
Then, good my liege, let me have what is mine,
My father's land, as was my father's will.
K. JOHN. Sirrah, your brother is legitimate,
Your father's wife did after wedlock bear him:
And if she did play false, the fault was hers,
Which fault lies on the hazards of all husbands
That marry wives: tell me, how if my brother,
Who as you say took pains to get this son,
Had of your father claimed this son for his?
In sooth, good friend, your father might have kept
This calf, bred from his cow, from all the world:
In sooth, he might: then, if he were my brother's,
My brother might not claim him, nor your father
Being none of his refuse him: this concludes—
My mother's son did get your father's heir,
Your father's heir must have your father's land.
ROBERT. Shall then my father's will be of no force
To dispossess that child which is not his?
BASTARD. Of no more force to dispossess me, sir,
Than was his will to get me, as I think.
ELINOR. Whether hadst thou rather be a Faulconbridge,
And like thy brother, to enjoy thy land,
Or the reputed son of Cordelion,
Lord of thy presence and no land beside?
BASTARD. Madam, an if my brother had my shape,
And I had his, Sir Robert's his, like him,
And if my legs were two such riding-rods,
My arms such eel-skins stuffed, my face so thin
That in mine ear I durst not stick a rose
Lest men should say 'Look, where three-farthings goes!'
And, to his shape, were heir to all this land,
Would I might never stir from off this place,
I would give it every foot to have this face;
I would not be Sir Nob in any case.
ELINOR. I like thee well: wilt thou forsake thy fortune,
Bequeath thy land to him, and follow me?
I am a soldier, and now bound to France.
BASTARD. Brother, take you my land, I'll take my chance;
Your face hath got five hundred pound a year,
Yet sell your face for five pence and 'tis dear:
Madam, I'll follow you unto the death.
ELINOR. Nay, I would have you go before me thither.
BASTARD. Our country manners give our betters way.
K. JOHN. What is thy name?
BASTARD. Philip, my liege, so is my name begun,
Philip, good old Sir Robert's wife's eldest son.
K. JOHN. From henceforth bear his name whose form thou bearest:
Kneel thou down Philip, but rise more great—
Arise Sir Richard, and Plantagenet.
BASTARD. Brother, by th'mother's side, give me your hand.
My father gave me honour, yours gave land...
Now blessèd be the hour, by night or day,
When I was got, Sir Robert was away.
ELINOR. The very spirit of Plantagenet!
I am thy grandam, Richard, call me so.
BASTARD. Madam, by chance but not by truth, what though?
Something about, a little from the right,
In at the window, or else o'er the hatch:
Who dares not stir by day must walk by night,
And have is have, however men do catch:
Near or far off, well won is still well shot,
And I am I, howe'er I was begot.
K. JOHN. Go, Faulconbridge, now hast thou thy desire,
A landless knight makes thee a landed squire:
Come, madam, and come, Richard, we must speed
For France, for France, for it is more than need.
BASTARD. Brother, adieu, good fortune come to thee!
For thou was got i'th' way of honesty....

Exeunt all but Bastard

A foot of honour better than I was,
But many a many foot of land the worse....
Well, now can I make any Joan a lady.
'Good den, Sir Richard!'—'God-a-mercy, fellow'—
And if his name be George, I'll call him Peter;
For new-made honour doth forget men's names;
'Tis too respective and too sociable
For your conversion. Now your traveller,
He and his toothpick at my worship's mess,
And when my knightly stomach is sufficed,
Why then I suck my teeth, and catechize
My pickèd man of countries: 'My dear sir',
Thus leaning on mine elbow I begin,
'I shall beseech you'—that is question now;
And then comes answer like an Absey book:
'O sir,' says answer, 'at your best command,
At your employment, at your service, sir:'
'No, sir,' says question, 'I, sweet sir, at yours.'
And so, ere answer knows what question would,
Saving in dialogue of compliment,
And talking of the Alps and Apennines,
The Pyrenean and the river Po,
It draws toward supper in conclusion so....
But this is worshipful society,
And fits the mounting spirit like myself;
For he is but a bastard to the time
That doth not smack of observation.
And so am I, whether I smack or no:
And not alone in habit and device,
Exterior form, outward accoutrement;
But from the inward motion to deliver
Sweet, sweet, sweet poison for the age's tooth—
Which, though I will not practise to deceive,
Yet, to avoid deceit, I mean to learn;
For it shall strew the footsteps of my rising...
But who comes in such haste in riding-robes?
What woman-post is this? hath she no husband
That will take pains to blow a horn before her?

Enter Lady Faulconbridge and James Gurney

O me! it is my mother: how now, good lady?

What brings you here to court so hastily?
LADY FAULCONBRIDGE. Where is that slave, thy brother? where is he,
That holds in chase mine honour up and down?
BASTARD. My brother Robert? old Sir Robert's son?
Colbrand the giant, that same mighty man?
Is it Sir Robert's son that you seek so?
LADY FAULCONBRIDGE. Sir Robert's son! Ay, thou unreverend boy,
Sir Robert's son: why scorn'st thou at Sir Robert?
He is Sir Robert's son, and so art thou.
BASTARD. James Gurney, wilt thou give us leave awhile?
GURNEY. Good leave, good Philip.
BASTARD. Philip Sparrow, James!
There's toys abroad, anon I'll tell thee more....
Gurney goes
Madam, I was not old Sir Robert's son,
Sir Robert might have eat his part in me
Upon Good-Friday and ne'er broke his fast:
Sir Robert could do well—marry, to confess—
Could he get me. Sir Robert could not do it;
We know his handiwork. Therefore, good mother,
To whom am I beholding for these limbs?
Sir Robert never holp to make this leg.
LADY FAULCONBRIDGE. Hast thou conspiréd with thy brother too,
That for thine own gain shouldst defend mine honour?
What means this scorn, thou most untoward knave?
BASTARD. Knight, knight, good mother, Basilisco-like:
What! I am dubbed, I have it on my shoulder:
But, mother, I am not Sir Robert's son,
I have disclaimed Sir Robert and my land,
Legitimation, name, and all is gone:
Then, good my mother, let me know my father,
Some proper man I hope, who was it, mother?
LADY FAULCONBRIDGE. Hast thou denied thyself a Faulconbridge?
BASTARD. As faithfully as I deny the devil.
LADY FAULCONBRIDGE. King Richard Cordelion was thy father.
By long and vehement suit I was seduced
To make room for him in my husband's bed:
Heaven lay not my transgression to thy charge,
That art the issue of my dear offence,
Which was so strongly urged past my defence.
BASTARD. Now, by this light, were I to get again,
Madam, I would not wish a better father:
Some sins do bear their privilege on earth,
And so doth yours; your fault was not your folly.
Needs must you lay your heart at his dispose,
Subjected tribute to commanding love,
Against whose fury and unmatchéd force
The aweless lion could not wage the fight,
Nor keep his princely heart from Richard's hand:
He that perforce robs lions of their hearts
May easily win a woman's.... Ay, my mother,
With all my heart I thank thee for my father!
Who lives and dares but say thou didst not well
When I was got, I'll send his soul to hell....
Come, lady, I will show thee to my kin,
And they shall say, when Richard me begot,
If thou hadst said him nay, it had been sin:
Who says it was, he lies; I say 'twas not.
They go

ACT 2

Scene 1: France. Before Angiers

Enter King Philip of France, Lewis the Dauphin, Constance and Arthur, meeting the Duke of Austria and his forces

K. PHILIP. Before Angiers well met, brave Austria.
Arthur, that great forerunner of thy blood,
Richard, that robbed the lion of his heart
And fought the holy wars in Palestine,
By this brave duke came early to his grave:
And for amends to his posterity,
At out importance hither is he come,
To spread his colours, boy, in thy behalf,
And to rebuke the usurpation
Of thy unnatural uncle, English John.
Embrace him, love him, give him welcome hither.
ARTHUR. God shall forgive you Cordelion's death
The rather that you give his offspring life,
Shadowing their right under your wings of war:
I give you welcome with a powerless hand,
But with a heart full of unstainéd love.
Welcome before the gates of Angiers, duke.
K. PHILIP. A noble boy! Who would not do thee right?
AUSTRIA. Upon thy cheek lay I this zealous kiss,
As seal to this indenture of my love:
That to my home I will no more return,
Till Angiers and the right thou hast in France,
Together with that pale, that white-faced shore,
Whose foot spurns back the ocean's roaring tides
And coops from other lands her islanders,
Even till that England, hedged in with the main,
That water-walléd bulwark, still secure
And confident from foreign purposes,
Even till that utmost corner of the west
Salute thee for her king—till then, fair boy,
Will I not think of home, but follow arms.
CONSTANCE. O, take his mother's thanks, a widow's thanks,
Till your strong hand shall help to give him strength,
To make a more requital to your love.
AUSTRIA. The peace of heaven is theirs that lift their swords
In such a just and charitable war.
K. PHILIP. Well then, to work; our cannon shall be bent
Against the brows of this resisting town.
Call for our chiefest men of discipline,
To cull the plots of best advantages:
We'll lay before this town our royal bones,
Wade to the market-place in Frenchmen's blood,
But we will make it subject to this boy.
CONSTANCE. Stay for an answer to your embassy,
Lest unadvised you stain your swords with blood.
My Lord Chatillion may from England bring
That right in peace which here we urge in war,
And then we shall repent each drop of blood
That hot rash haste so indirectly shed.

Enter Chatillion

K. PHILIP. A wonder, lady! lo, upon thy wish,
Our messenger Chatillion is arrived.
What England says, say briefly, gentle lord,
We coldly pause for thee, Chatillion, speak.
CHATILLION. Then turn your forces from this paltry siege,
And stir them up against a mightier task:
England, impatient of your just demands,
Hath put himself in arms. The adverse winds,
Whose leisure I have stayed, have given him time
To land his legions all as soon as I:
His marches are expedient to this town,
His forces strong, his soldiers confident:
With him along is come the mother-queen,
An Até stirring him to blood and strife,
With her her niece, the Lady Blanch of Spain,
With them a bastard of the king's deceased,
And all th'unsettled humours of the land,
Rash, inconsiderate, fiery voluntaries,
With ladies' faces and fierce dragons' spleens,
Have sold their fortunes at their native homes,
Bearing their birthrights proudly on their backs,
To make a hazard of new fortunes here:
In brief, a braver choice of dauntless spirits
Than now the English bottoms have waft o'er
Did never float upon the swelling tide,
To do offence and scath in Christendom:
Drum beats
The interruption of their churlish drums
Cuts off more circumstance. They are at hand,
To parley or to fight, therefore prepare.
K. PHILIP. How much unlooked for is this expedition!
AUSTRIA. By how much unexpected, by so much
We must awake endeavour for defence,
For courage mounteth with occasion.
Let them be welcome then, we are prepared.

Enter King John, Elinor, Blanch, the Bastard, Pembroke, and forces

K. JOHN. Peace be to France: if France in peace permit
Our just and lineal entrance to our own;
If not, bleed France, and peace ascend to heaven,
Whiles we, God's wrathful agent, do correct
Their proud contempt that beats his peace to heaven.
K. PHILIP. Peace be to England, if that war return
From France to England, there to live in peace:
England we love, and for that England's sake
With burden of our armour here we sweat:
This toil of ours should be a work of thine;
But thou from loving England art so far,
That thou hast under-wrought his lawful king,
Cut off the sequence of posterity,
Out-facéd infant state, and done a rape
Upon the maiden virtue of the crown:
Look here upon thy brother Geffrey's face—
These eyes, these brows, were moulded out of his;
This little abstract doth contain that large
Which died in Geffrey; and the hand of time
Shall draw this brief into as huge a volume:
That Geffrey was thy elder brother born,
And this his son: England was Geffrey's right,
And this is Geffrey's in the name of God:
How comes it then that thou art called a king,
When living blood doth in these temples beat,
Which owe the crown that thou o'ermasterest?
K. JOHN. From whom hast thou this great commission, France,
To draw my answer from thy articles?
K. PHILIP. From that supernal judge, that stirs good thoughts
In any breast of strong authority,
To look into the blots and stains of right.
That judge hath made me guardian to this boy,
Under whose warrant I impeach thy wrong,
And by whose help I mean to chastise it.
K. JOHN. Alack, thou dost usurp authority.
K. PHILIP. Excuse it is, to beat usurping down.
ELINOR. Who is it thou dost call usurper, France?
CONSTANCE. Let me make answer: thy usurping son.
ELINOR. Out, insolent! thy bastard shall be king,
That thou mayst be a queen, and check the world!
CONSTANCE. My bed was ever to thy son as true,
As thine was to thy husband, and this boy
Liker in feature to his father Geffrey
Than thou and John in manners; being as like
As rain to water, or devil to his dam . . .
My boy a bastard! By my soul, I think
His father never was so true begot—
It cannot be an if thou wert his mother.
ELINOR. There's a good mother, boy, that blots thy father.
CONSTANCE. There's a good grandam, boy, that would blot thee.
AUSTRIA. Peace!
BASTARD. Hear the crier.
AUSTRIA. What the devil art thou?
BASTARD. One that will play the devil, sir, with you,
An a' may catch your hide and you alone:
You are the hare of whom the proverb goes,
Whose valour plucks dead lions by the beard;
I'll smoke your skin-coat an I catch you right.
Sirrah, look to't, i'faith I will, i'faith.
BLANCH. O, well did he become that lion's robe
That did disrobe the lion of that robe!
BASTARD. It lies as sightly on the back of him,
As great Alcides' shows upon an ass:
But, ass, I'll take that burden from your back,
Or lay on that shall make your shoulders crack.
AUSTRIA. What cracker is this same that deafs our ears
With this abundance of superfluous breath?
King Philip, determine what we shall do straight.
K. PHILIP. Women and fools, break off your conference. . . .
King John, this is the very sum of all:
England and Ireland, Anjou, Touraine, Maine,
In right of Arthur do I claim of thee:
Wilt thou resign them and lay down thy arms?
K. JOHN. My life as soon: I do defy thee, France.
Arthur of Britain, yield thee to my hand,
And out of my dear love I'll give thee more
Than e'er the coward hand of France can win:
Submit thee, boy.
ELINOR. Come to thy grandam, child.
CONSTANCE. Do, child, go to it grandam, child,
Give grandam kingdom, and it grandam will
Give it a plum, a cherry, and a fig.
There's a good grandam.
ARTHUR. Good my mother, peace!
I would that I were low laid in my grave,
I am not worth this coil that's made for me.

ELINOR. His mother shames him so, poor boy, he weeps.
CONSTANCE. Now shame upon you, whe'r she does or no!
His grandam's wrongs, and not his mother's shames,
Draw those heaven-moving pearls from his poor eyes,
Which heaven shall take in nature of a fee:
Ay, with these crystal beads heaven shall be bribed
To do him justice and revenge on you.
ELINOR. Thou monstrous slanderer of heaven and earth!
CONSTANCE. Thou monstrous injurer of heaven and earth!
Call not me slanderer; thou and thine usurp
The dominations, royalties and rights
Of this oppresséd boy: this is thy eldest son's son,
Infortunate in nothing but in thee:
Thy sins are visited in this poor child,
The canon of the law is laid on him,
Being but the second generation
Removéd from thy sin-conceiving womb.
K. JOHN. Bedlam, have done.
CONSTANCE. I have but this to say,
That he's not only plagued for her sin,
But God hath made her sin and her the plague
On this removéd issue, plagued for her
And with her plague, her sin; his injury
Her injury, the beadle to her sin—
All punished in the person of this child,
And all for her—a plague upon her!
ELINOR. Thou unadviséd scold, I can produce
A will that bars the title of thy son.
CONSTANCE. Ay, who doubts that? a will! a wicked will,
A woman's will, a cank'red grandam's will!
K. PHILIP. Peace, lady! pause, or be more temperate.
It ill beseems this presence to cry aim
To these ill-tunéd repetitions:
Some trumpet summon hither to the walls
These men of Angiers—let us hear them speak
Whose title they admit, Arthur's or John's.

Trumpet sounds. Enter a Citizen upon the walls

CITIZEN. Who is it that hath warned us to the walls?
K. PHILIP. 'Tis France, for England.
K. JOHN. England, for itself:
You men of Angiers, and my loving subjects—
K. PHILIP. You loving men of Angiers, Arthur's subjects,
Our trumpet called you to this gentle parle.
K. JOHN. For our advantage—therefore, hear us first:
These flags of France, that are advancéd here
Before the eye and prospect of your town,
Have hither marched to your endamagement:
The cannons have their bowels full of wrath,
And ready mounted are they to spit forth
Their iron indignation 'gainst your walls:
All preparation for a bloody siege
And merciless proceeding by these French
Confronts your city's eyes, your winking gates;
And but for our approach those sleeping stones,
That as a waist doth girdle you about,
By the compulsion of their ordinance
By this time from their fixéd beds of lime
Had been dishabited, and wide havoc made
For bloody power to rush upon your peace.
But on the sight of us your lawful king,
Who painfully with much expedient march
Have brought a countercheck before your gates,
To save unscratched your city's threat'ned cheeks,
Behold, the French amazed vouchsafe a parle:
And now, instead of bullets wrapped in fire,
To make a shaking fever in your walls,
They shoot but calm words folded up in smoke,
To make a faithless error in your ears:
Which trust accordingly, kind citizens,
And let us in, your king, whose laboured spirits,
Forwearied in this action of swift speed,
Crave harbourage within your city walls.
K. PHILIP. When I have said, make answer to us both.
Lo, in this right hand, whose protection
Is most divinely vowed upon the right
Of him it holds, stands young Plantagenet,
Son to the elder brother of this man,
And king o'er him and all that he enjoys:
For this down-trodden equity, we tread
In warlike march these greens before your town,
Being no further enemy to you
Than the constraint of hospitable zeal
In the relief of this oppresséd child
Religiously provokes. Be pleaséd then
To pay that duty which you truly owe
To him that owes it, namely this young prince,
And then our arms, like to a muzzled bear,
Save in aspect, hath all offence sealed up:
Our cannons' malice vainly shall be spent
Against th'invulnèrable clouds of heaven,
And with a blesséd and unvexed retire,
With unhacked swords and helmets all unbruised,
We will bear home that lusty blood again
Which here we came to spout against your town,
And leave your children, wives, and you in peace....
But if you fondly pass our proffered offer,
'Tis not the roundure of your old-faced walls
Can hide you from our messengers of war,
Though all these English and their discipline
Were harboured in their rude circumference:
Then tell us, shall your city call us lord,
In that behalf which we have challenged it?
Or shall we give the signal to our rage
And stalk in blood to our possession?
CITIZEN. In brief, we are the King of England's subjects:
For him, and in his right, we hold this town.
K. JOHN. Acknowledge then the king, and let me in.
CITIZEN. That can we not: but he that proves the king,
To him will we prove loyal. Till that time
Have we rammed up our gates against the world.
K. JOHN. Doth not the crown of England prove the king?
And, if not that, I bring you witnesses,
Twice fifteen thousand hearts of England's breed—
BASTARD. Bastards and else.
K. JOHN. To verify our title with their lives.
K. PHILIP. As many and as well-born bloods as those—
BASTARD. Some bastards too.
K. PHILIP. Stand in his face to contradict his claim.
CITIZEN. Till you compound whose right is worthiest,
We for the worthiest hold the right from both.
K. JOHN. Then God forgive the sin of all those souls

That to their everlasting residence,
Before the dew of evening fall, shall fleet,
In dreadful trial of our kingdom's king!

K. PHILIP. Amen, amen! Mount, chevaliers! to arms!

BASTARD. Saint George, that swinged the dragon, and e'er since
Sits on his horse back at mine hostess' door,
Teach us some fence! [to Austria] Sirrah, were I at home,
At your den, sirrah, with your lioness,
I would set an ox-head to your lion's hide,
And make a monster of you.

AUSTRIA. Peace, no more.

BASTARD. O, tremble! for you hear the lion roar.

K. JOHN. Up higher to the plain, where we'll set forth
In best appointment all our regiments.

BASTARD. Speed then to take advantage of the field.

K. PHILIP. It shall be so, and at the other hill
Command the rest to stand, God, and our right!
They go

Here, after excursions, enter the Herald of France with Trumpets to the gates

FRENCH HERALD. You men of Angiers, open wide your gates,
And let young Arthur, Duke of Britain, in,
Who by the hand of France this day hath made
Much work for tears in many an English mother,
Whose sons lie scattered on the bleeding ground:
Many a widow's husband grovelling lies,
Coldly embracing the discoloured earth,
And victory with little loss doth play
Upon the dancing banners of the French,
Who are at hand, triumphantly displayed,
To enter conquerors, and to proclaim
Arthur of Britain England's king and yours.

Enter English Herald with Trumpet

ENGLISH HERALD. Rejoice, you men of Angiers, ring your bells,
King John, your king and England's, doth approach,
Commander of this hot malicious day!
Their armours, that marched hence so silver-bright,
Hither return all gilt with Frenchmen's blood:
There stuck no plume in any English crest,
That is removéd by a staff of France:
Our colours do return in those same hands
That did display them when we first marched forth;
And like a jolly troop of huntsmen come
Our lusty English, all with purpled hands,
Dyed in the dying slaughter of their foes.
Open your gates and give the victors way.

CITIZEN. Heralds, from off our towers we might behold,
From first to last, the onset and retire
Of both your armies, whose equality
By our best eyes cannot be censuréd:
Blood hath bought blood, and blows have answered blows;
Strength matched with strength, and power confronted power.
Both are alike, and both alike we like:
One must prove greatest: while they weigh so even,
We hold our town for neither; yet for both.

Enter the two Kings with their powers severally

K. JOHN. France, hast thou yet more blood to cast away?
Say, shall the current of our right run on?
Whose passage, vexed with thy impediment,
Shall leave his native channel, and o'erswell
With course disturbed even thy confining shores,
Unless thou let his silver water keep
A peaceful progress to the ocean.

K. PHILIP. England, thou hast not saved one drop of blood
In this hot trial more than we of France,
Rather lost more. And by this hand I swear,
That sways the earth this climate overlooks,
Before we will lay down our just-borne arms,
We'll put thee down, 'gainst whom these arms we bear,
Or add a royal number to the dead,
Gracing the scroll that tells of this war's loss
With slaughter coupled to the name of kings.

BASTARD. Ha, majesty! how high thy glory towers,
When the rich blood of kings is set on fire!
O, now doth death line his dead chaps with steel,
The swords of soldiers are his teeth, his fangs,
And now he feasts, mousing the flesh of men,
In undetermined differences of kings....
Why stand these royal fronts amazéd thus?
Cry 'havoc!' kings, back to the stainéd field,
You equal potents, fiery-kindled spirits!
Then let confusion of one part cónfirm
The other's peace; till then, blows, blood, and death!

K. JOHN. Whose party do the townsmen yet admit?

K. PHILIP. Speak, citizens, for England; who's your king?

CITIZEN. The King of England, when we know the king.

K. PHILIP. Know him in us, that here hold up his right.

K. JOHN. In us, that are our own great deputy,
And bear possession of our person here,
Lord of our presence, Angiers, and of you.

CITIZEN. A greater power than we denies all this,
And till it be undoubted, we do lock
Our former scruple in our strong-barred gates:
Kinged of our fears, until our fears, resolved,
Be by some certain king purged and deposed.

BASTARD. By heaven, these scroyles of Angiers flout you, kings,
And stand securely on their battlements,
As in a theatre, whence they gape and point
At your industrious scenes and acts of death.
Your royal presences be ruled by me,
Do like the mutines of Jerusalem
Be friends awhile and both conjointly bend
Your sharpest deeds of malice on this town:
By east and west let France and England mount
Their battering cannon chargéd to the mouths,
Till their soul-fearing clamours have brawled down
The flinty ribs of this contemptuous city.
I'ld play incessantly upon these jades,
Even till unfencéd desolation
Leave them as naked as the vulgar air:
That done, dissever your united strengths,
And part your mingled colours once again,
Turn face to face, and bloody point to point:
Then in a moment Fortune shall cull forth
Out of one side her happy minion,

To whom in favour she shall give the day,
And kiss him with a glorious victory . . .
How like you this wild counsel, mighty states?
Smacks it not something of the policy?
K. JOHN. Now, by the sky that hangs above our heads,
I like it well. France, shall we knit our powers
And lay this Angiers even with the ground,
Then after fight who shall be king of it?
BASTARD. An if thou hast the mettle of a king,
Being wronged as we are by this peevish town,
Turn thou the mouth of thy artillery,
As we will ours, against these saucy walls,
And when that we have dashed them to the ground,
Why then defy each other, and pell-mell
Make work upon ourselves, for heaven or hell.
K. PHILIP. Let it be so: say, where will you assault?
K. JOHN. We from the west will send destruction
Into this city's bosom.
AUSTRIA. I from the north.
K. PHILIP. Our thunder from the south,
Shall rain their drift of bullets on this town.
BASTARD [aside]. O prudent discipline! From north to south:
Austria and France shoot in each other's mouth.
I'll stir them to it . . . [shouts] Come, away, away!
CITIZEN. Hear us, great kings, vouchsafe awhile to stay
And I shall show you peace and fair-faced league:
Win you this city without stroke or wound,
Rescue those breathing lives to die in beds,
That here comes sacrifices for the field:
Persever not, but hear me, mighty kings.
K. JOHN. Speak on with favour, we are bent to hear.
CITIZEN. That daughter there of Spain, the Lady Blanch,
Is niece to England. Look upon the years
Of Lewis the Dauphin and that lovely maid:
If lusty love should go in quest of beauty,
Where should he find it fairer than in Blanch?
If zealous love should go in search of virtue,
Where should he find it purer than in Blanch?
If love ambitious sought a match of birth,
Whose veins bound richer blood than Lady Blanch?
Such as she is, in beauty, virtue, birth,
Is the young Dauphin every way complete:
If not complete of, say he is not she,
And she again wants nothing, to name want,
If want it be not that she is not he:
He is the half part of a blessèd man,
Left to be finishèd by such a she;
And she a fair divided excellence,
Whose fulness of perfection lies in him.
O, two such silver currents when they join
Do glorify the banks that bound them in:
And two such shores to two such streams made one,
Two such controlling bounds shall you be, kings,
To these two princes, if you marry them:
This union shall do more than battery can
To our fast-closèd gates; for at this match,
With swifter spleen than powder can enforce,
The mouth of passage shall we fling wide ope,
And give you entrance; but, without this match,
The sea enragèd is not half so deaf,
Lions more confident, mountains and rocks
More free from motion, no, not Death himself
In mortal fury half so peremptory,
As we to keep this city.
BASTARD. Here's a stay
That shakes the rotten carcass of old Death
Out of his rags! Here's a large mouth, indeed,
That spits forth death and mountains, rocks and seas,
Talks as familiarly of roaring lions
As maids of thirteen do of puppy-dogs!
What cannoneer begot this lusty blood?
He speaks plain cannon fire, and smoke and bounce,
He gives the bastinado with his tongue:
Our ears are cudgelled—not a word of his
But buffets better than a fist of France:
Zounds! I was never so bethumped with words
Since I first called my brother's father 'dad'.
ELINOR. Son, list to this conjunction, make this match;
Give with our niece a dowry large enough,
For by this knot thou shalt so surely tie
Thy now unsured assurance to the crown,
That yon green boy shall have no sun to ripe
The bloom that promiseth a mighty fruit.
I see a yielding in the looks of France:
Mark how they whisper, urge them while their souls
Are capable of this ambition,
Lest zeal, now melted by the windy breath
Of soft petitions, pity and remorse,
Cool and congeal again to what it was.
CITIZEN. Why answer not the double majesties
This friendly treaty of our threat'ned town?
K. PHILIP. Speak England first, that hath been forward first
To speak unto this city: what say you?
K. JOHN. If that the Dauphin there, thy princely son,
Can in this book of beauty read 'I love',
Her dowry shall weigh equal with a queen:
For Anjou, and fair Touraine, Maine, Poictiers,
And all that we upon this side the sea
(Except this city now by us besieged)
Find liable to our crown and dignity,
Shall gild her bridal bed, and make her rich
In titles, honours and promotions,
As she in beauty, education, blood,
Holds hand with any princess of the world.
K. PHILIP. What say'st thou, boy? look in the lady's face.
LEWIS. I do, my lord, and in her eye I find
A wonder, or a wondrous miracle,
The shadow of myself formed in her eye,
Which, being but the shadow of your son,
Becomes a sun, and makes your son a shadow:
I do protest, I never loved myself,
Till now infixèd I beheld myself,
Drawn in the flattering table of her eye.
Whispers with Blanch
BASTARD [aside]. Drawn in the flattering table of her eye,
Hanged in the frowning wrinkle of her brow,
And quartered in her heart, he doth espy
Himself love's traitor. This is pity now:
That hanged, and drawn, and quartered, there should be
In such a love so vile a lout as he.
BLANCH. My uncle's will in this respect is mine.
If he see aught in you that makes him like,
That anything he sees, which moves his liking,
I can with ease translate it to my will:
Or if you will, to speak more properly,

I will enforce it easily to my love.
Further I will not flatter you, my lord,
That all I see in you is worthy love,
Than this—that nothing do I see in you,
Though churlish thoughts themselves should be your judge,
That I can find should merit any hate.

K. JOHN. What say these young ones? What say you, my niece?

BLANCH. That she is bound in honour still to do
What you in wisdom still vouchsafe to say.

K. JOHN. Speak then, Prince Dauphin, can you love this lady?

LEWIS. Nay, ask me if I can refrain from love,
For I do love her most unfeignedly.

K. JOHN. Then do I give Volquessen, Touraine, Maine,
Poictiers and Anjou, these five provinces,
With her to thee, and this addition more,
Full thirty thousand marks of English coin:
Philip of France, if thou be pleased withal,
Command thy son and daughter to join hands.

K. PHILIP. It likes us well; young princes, close your hands.

AUSTRIA. And your lips too, for I am well assured
That I did so when I was first assured.

K. PHILIP. Now, citizens of Angiers, ope your gates,
Let in that amity which you have made,
For at Saint Mary's chapel presently
The rites of marriage shall be solemnized.
Is not the Lady Constance in this troop?
I know she is not, for this match made up
Her presence would have interrupted much:
Where is she and her son? tell me, who knows.

LEWIS. She is sad and passionate at your highness' tent.

K. PHILIP. And, by my faith, this league that we have made
Will give her sadness very little cure:
Brother of England, how may we content
This widow lady? In her right we came,
Which we, God knows, have turned another way,
To our own vantage.

K. JOHN. We will heal up all,
For we'll create young Arthur Duke of Britain
And Earl of Richmond, and this rich fair town
We make him lord of.... Call the Lady Constance.
Some speedy messenger bid her repair
To our solemnity: I trust we shall,
If not fill up the measure of her will,
Yet in some measure satisfy her so
That we shall stop her exclamation.
Go we, as well as haste will suffer us,
To this unlooked for, unpreparéd pomp.

They all go, except the Bastard

BASTARD. Mad world! mad kings! mad composition!
John, to stop Arthur's title in the whole,
Hath willingly departed with a part,
And France—whose armour conscience buckled on,
Whom zeal and charity brought to the field
As God's own soldier—rounded in the ear
With that same purpose-changer, that sly devil,
That broker that still breaks the pate of faith,
That daily break-vow, he that wins of all,
Of kings, of beggars, old men, young men, maids,
Who, having no external thing to lose
But the word 'maid', cheats the poor maid of that,
That smooth-faced gentleman, tickling Commodity,
Commodity, the bias of the world,
The world, who of itself is peiséd well,
Made to run even upon even ground,
Till this advantage, this vile-drawing bias,
This sway of motion, this Commodity,
Makes it take head from all indifferency,
From all direction, purpose, course, intent:
And this same bias, this Commodity,
This bawd, this broker, this all-changing word,
Clapped on the outward eye of fickle France,
Hath drawn him from his own determined aid,
From a resolved and honourable war,
To a most base and vile-concluded peace....
And why rail I on this Commodity?
But for because he hath not wooed me yet:
Not that I have the power to clutch my hand,
When his fair angels would salute my palm,
But for my hand, as unattempted yet,
Like a poor beggar, raileth on the rich:
Well, whiles I am a beggar, I will rail,
And say there is no sin but to be rich;
And being rich, my virtue then shall be
To say there is no vice but beggary:
Since kings break faith upon commodity,
Gain, be my lord, for I will worship thee.

He goes

ACT 3

Scene 1: The French King's tent

Enter Constance, Arthur, and Salisbury

CONSTANCE. Gone to be married! gone to swear a peace!
False blood to false blood joined! gone to be friends!
Shall Lewis have Blanch, and Blanch those provinces?
It is not so, thou hast misspoke, misheard,
Be well advised, tell o'er thy tale again.
It cannot be, thou dost but say 'tis so.
I trust I may not trust thee, for thy word
Is but the vain breath of a common man:
Believe me, I do not believe thee, man,
I have a king's oath to the contrary.
Thou shalt be punished for thus frighting me,
For I am sick and capable of fears,
Oppressed with wrongs, and therefore full of fears,
A widow, husbandless, subject to fears,
A woman naturally born to fears;
And though thou now confess thou didst but jest,
With my vexed spirits I cannot take a truce,
But they will quake and tremble all this day....
What dost thou mean by shaking of thy head?
Why dost thou look so sadly on my son?
What means that hand upon that breast of thine?
Why holds thine eye that lamentable rheum,
Like a proud river peering o'er his bounds?
Be these sad signs confirmers of thy words?
Then speak again, not all thy former tale,
But this one word, whether thy tale be true.

SALISBURY. As true as I believe you think them false
That give you cause to prove my saying true.

CONSTANCE. O, if thou teach me to believe this sorrow,
Teach thou this sorrow how to make me die,
And let belief and life encounter so

As doth the fury of two desperate men
Which in the very meeting fall and die....
Lewis marry Blanch! O boy, then where art thou?
France friend with England, what becomes of me?
Fellow, be gone: I cannot brook thy sight—
This news hath made thee a most ugly man.
SALISBURY. What other harm have I, good lady, done,
But spoke the harm that is by others done?
CONSTANCE. Which harm within itself so heinous is
As it makes harmful all that speak of it.
ARTHUR. I do beseech you, madam, be content.
CONSTANCE. If thou, that bid'st me be content, wert grim,
Ugly and sland'rous to thy mother's womb,
Full of unpleasing blots and sightless stains,
Lame, foolish, crooked, swart, prodigious,
Patched with foul moles and eye-offending marks,
I would not care, I then would be content,
For then I should not love thee; no, nor thou
Become thy great birth nor deserve a crown.
But thou art fair, and at thy birth, dear boy,
Nature and Fortune joined to make thee great.
Of Nature's gifts thou mayst with lilies boast
And with the half-blown rose. But Fortune, O,
She is corrupted, changed and won from thee;
Sh'adulterates hourly with thine uncle John,
And with her golden hand hath plucked on France
To tread down fair respect of sovereignty,
And made his majesty the bawd to theirs.
France is a bawd to Fortune and King John,
That strumpet Fortune, that usurping John:
Tell me, thou fellow, is not France forsworn?
Envenom him with words, or get thee gone,
And leave those woes alone which I alone
Am bound to under-bear.
SALISBURY. Pardon me, madam,
I may not go without you to the kings.
CONSTANCE. Thou mayst, thou shalt, I will not go with thee.
I will instruct my sorrows to be proud,
For grief is proud and makes his owner stoop.
To me and to the state of my great grief
Let kings assemble; for my grief's so great
That no supporter but the huge firm earth
Can hold it up: here I and sorrows sit,
Here is my throne, bid kings come bow to it.
She seats herself on the ground

Enter King John, King Philip, Lewis, Blanch, Elinor, the Bastard, Austria, and attendants

K. PHILIP. 'Tis true, fair daughter, and this blessed day
Ever in France shall be kept festival:
To solemnize this day, the glorious sun
Stays in his course and plays the alchemist,
Turning with splendour of his precious eye
The meagre cloddy earth to glittering gold:
The yearly course that brings this day about
Shall never see it but a holiday.
CONSTANCE [rising]. A wicked day, and not a holy day!
What hath this day deserved? what hath it done,
That it in golden letters should be set
Among the high tides in the calendar?
Nay, rather turn this day out of the week,
This day of shame, oppression, perjury.
Or, if it must stand still, let wives with child
Pray that their burdens may not fall this day,
Lest that their hopes prodigiously be crossed:
But on this day let seamen fear no wrack,
No bargains break that are not this day made:
This day, all things begun come to ill end;
Yea, faith itself to hollow falsehood change!
K. PHILIP. By heaven, lady, you shall have no cause
To curse the fair proceedings of this day:
Have I not pawned to you my majesty?
CONSTANCE. You have beguiled me with a counterfeit
Resembling majesty, which being touched and tried
Proves valueless: you are forsworn, forsworn!
You came in arms to spill mine enemies' blood,
But now in arms you strengthen it with yours.
The grappling vigour and rough frown of war
Is cold in amity and painted peace,
And our oppression hath made up this league ...
Arm, arm, you heavens, against these perjured kings!
A widow cries; be husband to me, heavens!
Let not the hours of this ungodly day
Wear out the day in peace; but, ere sun set,
Set armèd discord 'twixt these perjured kings!
Hear me, O, hear me!
AUSTRIA. Lady Constance, peace.
CONSTANCE. War! war! no peace! peace is to me a war:
O Lymoges! O Austria! thou dost shame
That bloody spoil: thou slave, thou wretch, thou coward,
Thou little valiant, great in villany!
Thou ever strong upon the stronger side!
Thou Fortune's champion, that dost never fight
But when her humorous ladyship is by
To teach thee safety! thou art perjured too,
And sooth'st up greatness. What a fool art thou,
A ramping fool, to brag and stamp and swear
Upon my party! Thou cold-blooded slave,
Hast thou not spoke like thunder on my side,
Been sworn my soldier, bidding me depend
Upon thy stars, thy fortune and thy strength,
And dost thou now fall over to my foes?
Thou wear a lion's hide! doff it for shame,
And hang a calf's-skin on those recreant limbs.
AUSTRIA. O, that a man should speak those words to me!
BASTARD. And hang a calf's-skin on those recreant limbs.
AUSTRIA. Thou dar'st not say so, villain, for thy life.
BASTARD. And hang a calf's-skin on those recreant limbs.
K. JOHN. We like not this, thou dost forget thyself.

Enter Pandulph

K. PHILIP. Here comes the holy legate of the Pope.
PANDULPH. Hail, you anointed deputies of heaven!
To thee, King John, my holy errand is:
I Pandulph, of fair Milan cardinal,
And from Pope Innocent the legate here,
Do in his name religiously demand
Why thou against the church, our holy mother,
So wilfully dost spurn; and force perforce
Keep Stephen Langton, chosen archbishop
Of Canterbury, from that holy see:
This, in our foresaid holy father's name,
Pope Innocent, I do demand of thee.
K. JOHN. What earthly name to interrogatories
Can task the free breath of a sacred king?

Thou canst not, cardinal, devise a name
So slight, unworthy and ridiculous,
To charge me to an answer, as the Pope:
Tell him this tale, and from the mouth of England
Add thus much more, that no Italian priest
Shall tithe or toll in our dominions;
But as we, under heaven, are supreme head,
So under Him that great supremacy,
Where we do reign, we will alone uphold,
Without th' assistance of a mortal hand:
So tell the Pope, all reverence set apart
To him and his usurped authority.

K. PHILIP. Brother of England, you blaspheme in this.

K. JOHN. Though you and all the kings of Christendom
Are led so grossly by this meddling priest,
Dreading the curse that money may buy out,
And by the merit of vile gold, dross, dust,
Purchase corrupted pardon of a man,
Who in that sale sells pardon from himself;
Though you and all the rest so grossly led
This juggling witchcraft with revenue cherish,
Yet I alone, alone do me oppose
Against the Pope and count his friends my foes.

PANDULPH. Then, by the lawful power that I have,
Thou shalt stand cursed and excommunicate,
And blesséd shall he be that doth revolt
From his allegiance to an heretic,
And meritorious shall that hand be called,
Canónizéd and worshipped as a saint,
That takes away by any secret course
Thy hateful life.

CONSTANCE. O, lawful let it be
That I have room with Rome to curse awhile!
Good father cardinal, cry thou amen
To my keen curses; for without my wrong
There is no tongue hath power to curse him right.

PANDULPH. There's law and warrant, lady, for my curse.

CONSTANCE. And for mine too. When law can do no right,
Let it be lawful that law bar no wrong:
Law cannot give my child his kingdom here;
For he that holds his kingdom holds the law:
Therefore, since law itself is perfect wrong,
How can the law forbid my tongue to curse?

PANDULPH. Philip of France, on peril of a curse,
Let go the hand of that arch-heretic,
And raise the power of France upon his head,
Unless he do submit himself to Rome.

ELINOR. Look'st thou pale, France? do not let go thy hand.

CONSTANCE. Look to that, devil, lest that France repent,
And by disjoining hands, hell lose a soul.

AUSTRIA. King Philip, listen to the cardinal.

BASTARD. And hang a calf's-skin on his recreant limbs.

AUSTRIA. Well, ruffian, I must pocket up these wrongs,
Because—

BASTARD. Your breeches best may carry them.

K. JOHN. Philip, what say'st thou to the cardinal?

CONSTANCE. What should he say, but as the cardinal?

LEWIS. Bethink you, father, for the difference
Is purchase of a heavy curse from Rome,
Or the light loss of England for a friend:
Forgo the easier.

BLANCH. That's the curse of Rome.

CONSTANCE. O Lewis, stand fast, the devil tempts thee here
In likeness of a new untrimméd bride.

BLANCH. The Lady Constance speaks not from her faith,
But from her need.

CONSTANCE. O, if thou grant my need,
Which only lives but by the death of faith,
That need must needs infer this principle,
That faith would live again by death of need:
O then, tread down my need, and faith mounts up,
Keep my need up, and faith is trodden down.

K. JOHN. The king is moved, and answers not to this.

CONSTANCE. O, be removed from him, and answer well.

AUSTRIA. Do so, King Philip, hang no more in doubt.

BASTARD. Hang nothing but a calf's-skin, most sweet lout.

K. PHILIP. I am perplexed, and know not what to say.

PANDULPH. What canst thou say but will perplex thee more,
If thou stand excommunicate and cursed?

K. PHILIP. Good reverend father, make my person yours,
And tell me how you would bestow yourself.
This royal hand and mine are newly knit,
And the conjunction of our inward souls
Married in league, coupled and linked together
With all religious strength of sacred vows:
The latest breath that gave the sound of words
Was deep-sworn faith, peace, amity, true love
Between our kingdoms and our royal selves,
And even before this truce, but new before,
No longer than we well could wash our hands
To clap this royal bargain up of peace,
Heaven knows, they were besmeared and overstained
With slaughter's pencil, where revenge did paint
The fearful difference of incenséd kings:
And shall these hands, so lately purged of blood,
So newly joined in love, so strong in both,
Unyoke this seizure and this kind regreet?
Play fast and loose with faith? so jest with heaven,
Mak such unconstant children of ourselves,
As now again to snatch our palm from palm,
Unswear faith sworn, and on the marriage-bed
Of smiling peace to march a bloody host,
And make a riot on the gentle brow
Of true sincerity? O holy sir,
My reverend father, let it not be so:
Out of your grace, devise, ordain, impose
Some gentle order, and then we shall be blest
To do your pleasure and continue friends.

PANDULPH. All form is formless, order orderless,
Save what is opposite to England's love.
Therefore, to arms! be champion of our church,
Or let the church, our mother, breathe her curse,
A mother's curse, on her revolting son:
France, thou mayst hold a serpent by the tongue,
A chaféd lion by the mortal paw,
A fasting tiger safer by the tooth,
Than keep in peace that hand which thou dost hold.

K. PHILIP. I may disjoin my hand, but not my faith.

PANDULPH. So mak'st thou faith an enemy to faith,

And like a civil war set'st oath to oath,
Thy tongue against thy tongue. O, let thy vow
First made to heaven, first be to heaven performed,
That is, to be the champion of our church.
What since thou swor'st is sworn against thyself
And may not be performéd by thyself,
For that which thou hast sworn to do amiss
Is not amiss when it is truly done;
And being not done, where doing tends to ill,
The truth is then most done not doing it:
The better act of purposes mistook
Is to mistake again; though indirect,
Yet indirection thereby grows direct,
And falsehood falsehood cures, as fire cools fire
Within the scorchéd veins of one new-burned:
It is religion that doth make vows kept,
But thou hast sworn against religion,
By what thou swear'st against the thing thou swear'st,
And mak'st an oath the surety for thy truth
Against an oath: the truth thou art unsure
To swear, swears only not to be forsworn;
Else what a mockery should it be to swear!
But thou dost swear only to be forsworn,
And most forsworn to keep what thou dost swear.
Therefore thy later vows against thy first
Is in thyself rebellion to thyself:
And better conquest never canst thou make
Than arm thy constant and thy nobler parts
Against these giddy loose suggestions:
Upon which better part our prayers come in,
If thou vouchsafe them: but if not, then know
The peril of our curses light on thee
So heavy as thou shalt not shake them off,
But in despair die under their black weight.
AUSTRIA. Rebellion, flat rebellion!
BASTARD. Will't not be?
Will not a calf's-skin stop that mouth of thine?
LEWIS. Father, to arms!
BLANCH. Upon thy wedding-day?
Against the blood that thou hast marriéd?
What, shall our feast be kept with slaughtered men?
Shall braying trumpets and loud churlish drums,
Clamours of hell, be measures to our pomp?
O husband, hear me! ay, alack, how new
Is husband in my mouth! even for that name,
Which till this time my tongue did ne'er pronounce,
Upon my knee I beg, go not to arms
Against mine uncle.
CONSTANCE. O, upon my knee,
Made hard with kneeling, I do pray to thee,
Thou virtuous Dauphin, alter not the doom
Forethought by heaven.
BLANCH. Now shall I see thy love. What motive may
Be stronger with thee than the name of wife?
CONSTANCE. That which upholdeth him that thee upholds,
His honour. O, thine honour, Lewis, thine honour!
LEWIS. I muse your majesty doth seem so cold,
When such profound respects do pull you on.
PANDULPH. I will denounce a curse upon his head.
K. PHILIP. Thou shalt not need. England, I will fall from thee.
CONSTANCE. O fair return of banished majesty!
ELINOR. O foul revolt of French inconstancy!
K. JOHN. France, thou shalt rue this hour within this hour.
BASTARD. Old Time the clock-setter, that bald sexton Time,
Is it as he will? well then, France shall rue.
BLANCH. The sun's o'ercast with blood: fair day, adieu!
Which is the side that I must go withal?
I am with both. Each army hath a hand,
And in their rage, I having hold of both,
They whirl asunder and dismember me.
Husband, I cannot pray that thou mayst win;
Uncle, I needs must pray that thou mayst lose;
Father, I may not wish the fortune thine;
Grandam, I will not wish thy wishes thrive:
Whoever wins, on that side shall I lose;
Assuréd loss before the match be played.
LEWIS. Lady, with me, with me thy fortune lies.
BLANCH. There where my fortune lives, there my life dies.
K. JOHN. Cousin, go draw our puissance together.
The Bastard goes
France, I am burned up with inflaming wrath,
A rage whose heat hath this condition,
That nothing can allay, nothing but blood,
The blood, and dearest-valued blood, of France.
K. PHILIP. Thy rage shall burn thee up, and thou shalt turn.
To ashes, ere our blood shall quench that fire:
Look to thyself, thou art in jeopardy.
K. JOHN. No more than he that threats. To arms let's hie! They go

Scene 2: Before Angiers

Alarums, excursions: enter the Bastard, with Austria's head

BASTARD. Now, by my life, this day grows wondrous hot,
Some airy devil hovers in the sky,
And pours down mischief. Austria's head lie there,
While Philip breathes.

Enter King John, Arthur, and Hubert

K. JOHN. Hubert, keep this boy ... Philip, make up.
My mother is assailéd in our tent,
And ta'en, I fear.
BASTARD. My lord, I rescued her,
Her highness is in safety, fear you not:
But on, my liege, for very little pains
Will bring this labour to an happy end.
They go

Scene 3

After further alarums and excursions a retreat is sounded, and King John enters with Elinor, Arthur, the Bastard, Hubert, and Lords

K. JOHN [to Elinor]. So shall it be; your grace shall stay behind,
More strongly guarded ... [to Arthur] Cousin, look not sad.
Thy grandam loves thee, and thy uncle will
As dear be to thee as thy father was.
ARTHUR. O, this will make my mother die with grief.
K. JOHN [to the Bastard]. Cousin, away for England! haste before,

And ere our coming see thou shake the bags
Of hoarding abbots; imprisoned angels
Set at liberty: the fat ribs of peace
Must by the hungry now be fed upon:
Use our commission in his utmost force.
BASTARD. Bell, book, and candle shall not drive me back,
When gold and silver becks me to come on.
I leave your highness: Grandam, I will pray
(If ever I remember to be holy)
For your fair safety; so I kiss your hand.
ELINOR. Farewell, gentle cousin.
K. JOHN. Coz, farewell. The Bastard goes
ELINOR. Come hither, little kinsman; hark, a word.
K. JOHN. Come hither, Hubert. O my gentle Hubert,
We owe thee much; within this wall of flesh
There is a soul counts thee her creditor,
And with advantage means to pay thy love:
And, my good friend, thy voluntary oath
Lives in this bosom, dearly cherishèd....
Give me thy hand. I had a thing to say,
But I will fit it with some better time....
By heaven, Hubert, I am almost ashamed
To say what good respect I have of thee.
HUBERT. I am much bounden to your majesty.
K. JOHN. Good friend, thou hast no cause to say so yet,
But thou shalt have; and creep time ne'er so slow,
Yet it shall come for me to do thee good....
I had a thing to say, but let it go:
The sun is in the heaven, and the proud day,
Attended with the pleasures of the world,
Is all too wanton and too full of gawds
To give me audience: if the midnight bell
Did, with his iron tongue and brazen mouth,
Sound on into the drowsy ear of night;
If this same were a churchyard where we stand,
And thou possessèd with a thousand wrongs;
Or if that surly spirit, melancholy,
Had baked thy blood and made it heavy-thick,
Which else runs tickling up and down the veins,
Making that idiot, laughter, keep men's eyes
And strain their cheeks to idle merriment,
A passion hateful to my purposes;
Or if that thou couldst see me without eyes,
Hear me without thine ears, and make reply
Without a tongue, using conceit alone,
Without eyes, ears and harmful sound of words;
Then, in despite of broad-eyed watchful day,
I would into thy bosom pour my thoughts:
But, ah, I will not! yet I love thee well,
And, by my troth, I think, thou lov'st me well.
HUBERT. So well, that what you bid me undertake,
Though that my death were adjunct to my act,
By heaven, I would do it.
K. JOHN. Do not I know thou wouldst?
Good Hubert, Hubert, Hubert, throw thine eye
On yon young boy: I'll tell thee what, my friend,
He is a very serpent in my way,
And wheresoe'er this foot of mine doth tread,
He lies before me: dost thou understand me?
Thou art his keeper.
HUBERT. And I'll keep him so,
That he shall not offend your majesty.
K. JOHN. Death.
HUBERT. My lord?
K. JOHN. A grave.
HUBERT. He shall not live.
K. JOHN. Enough....
I could be merry now. Hubert, I love thee.
Well, I'll not say what I intend for thee:
Remember... Madam, fare you well,
I'll send those powers o'er to your majesty.
ELINOR. My blessings go with thee!
K. JOHN. For England, cousin, go.
Hubert shall be your man, attend on you
With all true duty... On toward Calais, ho!
They go

Scene 4: Before the French King's tent

Enter King Philip, Lewis, Pandulph, and attendants

K. PHILIP. So, by a roaring tempest on the flood,
A whole armado of convicted sail
Is scattered and disjoined from fellowship.
PANDULPH. Courage and comfort! all shall yet go well.
K. PHILIP. What can go well, when we have run so ill?
Are we not beaten? Is not Angiers lost?
Arthur ta'en prisoner? divers dear friends slain?
And bloody England into England gone,
O'erbearing interruption, spite of France?
LEWIS. What he hath won, that hath he fortified:
So hot a speed with such advice disposed,
Such temperate order in so fierce a cause,
Doth want example: who hath read or heard
Of any kindred action like to this?
K. PHILIP. Well could I bear that England had this praise,
So we could find some pattern of our shame.

Constance enters

Look, who comes here! a grave unto a soul,
Holding th'eternal spirit, against her will,
In the vile prison of afflicted breath...
I prithee, lady, go away with me.
CONSTANCE. Lo, now! now see the issue of your peace!
K. PHILIP. Patience, good lady! comfort, gentle Constance!
CONSTANCE. No, I defy all counsel, all redress,
But that which ends all counsel, true redress...
Death, death. O amiable lovely death!
Thou odoriferous stench! sound rottenness!
Arise forth from the couch of lasting night,
Thou hate and terror to prosperity,
And I will kiss thy detestable bones,
And put my eyeballs in thy vaulty brows,
And ring these fingers with thy household worms,
And stop this gap of breath with fulsome dust,
And be a carrion monster like thyself;
Come, grin on me, and I will think thou smil'st,
And buss thee as thy wife! Misery's love,
O, come to me!
K. PHILIP. O fair affliction, peace.
CONSTANCE. No, no, I will not, having breath to cry:
O, that my tongue were in the thunder's mouth!
Then with a passion would I shake the world,
And rouse from sleep that fell anatomy,
Which cannot hear a lady's feeble voice,
Which scorns a modern invocation.
PANDULPH. Lady, you utter madness, and not sorrow.
CONSTANCE. Thou art not holy to belie me so.
I am not mad: this hair I tear is mine,

My name is Constance, I was Geffrey's wife,
Young Arthur is my son, and he is lost:
I am not mad, I would to heaven I were,
For then 'tis like I should forget myself:
O, if I could, what grief should I forget!
Preach some philosophy to make me mad,
And thou shalt be canónized, cardinal;
For, being not mad but sensible of grief,
My reasonable part produces reason
How I may be delivered of these woes,
And teaches me to kill or hang myself:
If I were mad, I should forget my son,
Or madly think a babe of clouts were he:
I am not mad; too well, too well I feel
The different plague of each calamity.
K. PHILIP. Bind up those tresses... O, what love I note
In the fair multitude of those her hairs!
Where but by chance a silver drop hath fallen,
Even to that drop ten thousand wiry friends
Do glue themselves in sociable grief,
Like true, inseparable, faithful loves,
Sticking together in calamity.
CONSTANCE. To England, if you will.
K. PHILIP. Bind up your hairs.
CONSTANCE. Yes, that I will; and wherefore will I do it?
I tore them from their bonds and cried aloud,
'O that these hands could so redeem my son,
As they have given these hairs their liberty!'
But now I envy at their liberty,
And will again commit them to their bonds,
Because my poor child is a prisoner....
And, father cardinal, I have heard you say
That we shall see and know our friends in heaven:
If that be true, I shall see my boy again;
For, since the birth of Cain, the first male child,
To him that did but yesterday suspire,
There was not such a gracious creature born:
But now will canker-sorrow eat my bud
And chase the native beauty from his cheek,
And he will look as hollow as a ghost,
As dim and meagre as an ague's fit,
And so he'll die; and, rising so again,
When I shall meet him in the court of heaven
I shall not know him: therefore never, never
Must I behold my pretty Arthur more.
PANDULPH. You hold too heinous a respect of grief.
CONSTANCE. He talks to me that never had a son.
K. PHILIP. You are as fond of grief as of your child.
CONSTANCE. Grief fills the room up of my absent child:
Lies in his bed, walks up and down with me,
Puts on his pretty looks, repeats his words,
Remembers me of all his gracious parts,
Stuffs out his vacant garments with his form;
Then have I reason to be fond of grief!
Fare you well: had you such a loss as I,
I could give better comfort than you do.
I will not keep this form upon my head,
When there is such disorder in my wit...
She tears her hair
O Lord! my boy, my Arthur, my fair son!
My life, my joy, my food, my all the world!
My widow-comfort, and my sorrows' cure!
She goes
K. PHILIP. I fear some outrage, and I'll follow her.
He goes
LEWIS. There's nothing in this world can make me joy:
Life is as tedious as a twice-told tale
Vexing the dull ear of a drowsy man;
And bitter shame hath spoiled the sweet world's taste,
That it yields nought but shame and bitterness.
PANDULPH. Before the curing of a strong disease,
Even in the instant of repair and health,
The fit is strongest; evils that take leave,
On their departure most of all show evil:
What have you lost by losing of this day?
LEWIS. All days of glory, joy and happiness.
PANDULPH. If you had won it, certainly you had.
No, no: when Fortune means to men most good,
She looks upon them with a threat'ning eye:
'Tis strange to think how much King John hath lost
In this which he accounts so clearly won:
Are not you grieved that Arthur is his prisoner?
LEWIS. As heartily as he is glad he hath him.
PANDULPH. Your mind is all as youthful as your blood.
Now hear me speak with a prophetic spirit;
For even the breath of what I mean to speak
Shall blow each dust, each straw, each little rub,
Out of the path which shall directly lead
Thy foot to England's throne: and therefore mark.
John hath seized Arthur, and it cannot be
That, whiles warm life plays in that infant's veins,
The misplaced John should entertain an hour,
One minute, nay, one quiet breath of rest.
A sceptre snatched with an unruly hand
Must be as boisterously maintained as gained;
And he that stands upon a slippery place
Makes nice of no vile hold to stay him up:
That John may stand, then Arthur needs must fall,
So be it, for it cannot be but so.
LEWIS. But what shall I gain by young Arthur's fall?
PANDULPH. You, in the right of Lady Blanch your wife,
May then make all the claim that Arthur did.
LEWIS. And lose it, life and all, as Arthur did.
PANDULPH. How green you are, and fresh in this old world!
John lays you plots; the times conspire with you;
For he that steeps his safety in true blood
Shall find but bloody safety and untrue.
This act so evilly borne shall cool the hearts
Of all his people and freeze up their zeal,
That none so small advantage shall step forth
To check his reign, but they will cherish it;
No natural exhalation in the sky,
No scope of nature, no distempered day,
No common wind, no customéd event,
But they will pluck away his natural cause,
And call them meteors, prodigies and signs,
Abortives, presages and tongues of heaven,
Plainly denouncing vengeance upon John.
LEWIS. May be he will not touch young Arthur's life,
But hold himself safe in his prisonment.
PANDULPH. O, sir, when he shall hear of your approach,
If that young Arthur be not gone already,
Even at that news he dies; and then the hearts
Of all his people shall revolt from him,
And kiss the lips of unacquainted change,
And pick strong matter of revolt and wrath
Out of the bloody fingers' ends of John....

Methinks I see this hurly all on foot;
And, O, what better matter breeds for you
Than I have named! The bastard Faulconbridge
Is now in England, ransacking the church,
Offending charity: if but a dozen French
Were there in arms, they would be as a call
To train ten thousand English to their side;
Or as a little snow, tumbled about,
Anon becomes a mountain.... O noble Dauphin,
Go with me to the king. 'Tis wonderful
What may be wrought out of their discontent,
Now that their souls are topfull of offence.
For England go! I will whet on the king.
LEWIS. Strong reasons make strong actions: let us go.
If you say ay, the king will not say no. They go

ACT 4

Scene 1: England. A room in a castle

Enter Hubert and Executioners

HUBERT. Heat me these irons hot, and look thou stand
Within the arras: when I strike my foot
Upon the bosom of the ground, rush forth,
And bind the boy which you shall find with me
Fast to the chair: be heedful: hence, and watch.
1 EXECUTIONER. I hope your warrant will bear out the deed.
HUBERT. Uncleanly scruples! fear not you: look to't.... The Executioners go
Young lad, come forth; I have to say with you.

Arthur enters

ARTHUR. Good morrow, Hubert.
HUBERT. Good morrow, little prince.
ARTHUR. As little prince, having so great a title
To be more prince, as may be ... You are sad.
HUBERT. Indeed, I have been merrier.
ARTHUR. Mercy on me!
Methinks no body should be sad but I:
Yet I remember, when I was in France,
Young gentlemen would be as sad as night,
Only for wantonness: by my christendom,
So I were out of prison and kept sheep,
I should be as merry as the day is long;
And so I would be here, but that I doubt
My uncle practises more harm to me:
He is afraid of me and I of him:
Is it my fault that I was Geffrey's son?
No, indeed is't not; and I would to heaven
I were your son, so you would love me, Hubert.
HUBERT [aside]. If I talk to him, with his innocent prate
He will awake my mercy which lies dead:
Therefore I will be sudden and dispatch.
ARTHUR. Are you sick, Hubert? you look pale to-day.
In sooth, I would you were a little sick,
That I might sit all night and watch with you.
I warrant I love you more than you do me.
HUBERT [aside]. His words do take possession of my bosom....
[he shows a paper] Read here, young Arthur....
[aside] How now, foolish rheum!
Turning dispiteous torture out of door!
I must be brief, lest resolution drop
Out at mine eyes in tender womanish tears....
Can you not read it? is it not fair writ?
ARTHUR. Too fairly, Hubert, for so foul effect.
Must you, with hot irons, burn out both mine eyes?
HUBERT. Young boy, I must.
ARTHUR. And will you?
HUBERT. And I will.
ARTHUR. Have you the heart? When your head did but ache,
I knit my handkercher about your brows,
(The best I had, a princess wrought it me)
And I did never ask it you again:
And with my hand at midnight held your head;
And like the watchful minutes to the hour,
Still and anon cheered up the heavy time;
Saying, 'What lack you?' and 'Where lies your grief?'
Or 'What good love may I perform for you?'
Many a poor man's son would have lien still,
And ne'er have spoke a loving word to you;
But you at your sick service had a prince:
Nay, you may think my love was crafty love,
And call it cunning: do, an if you will:
If heaven be pleased that you must use me ill,
Why then you must.... Will you put out mine eyes?
These eyes that never did nor never shall
So much as frown on you?
HUBERT. I have sworn to do it;
And with hot irons must I burn them out.
ARTHUR. Ah, none but in this iron age would do it!
The iron of itself, though heat red-hot,
Approaching near these eyes, would drink my tears,
And quench his fiery indignation,
Even in the matter of mine innocence:
Nay, after that, consume away in rust,
But for containing fire to harm mine eye:
Are you more stubborn-hard than hammered iron?
An if an angel should have come to me,
And told me Hubert should put out mine eyes,
I would not have believed him ... no tongue but Hubert's!
HUBERT [stamps]. Come forth.

The Executioners enter with cord, irons, etc.

Do as I bid you do.
ARTHUR. O, save me, Hubert, save me! my eyes are out,
Even with the fierce looks of these bloody men.
HUBERT. Give me the iron, I say, and bind him here.
ARTHUR. Alas, what need you be so boist'rous-rough?
I will not struggle, I will stand stone-still:
For heaven sake, Hubert, let me not be bound!
Nay, hear me, Hubert, drive these men away,
And I will sit as quiet as a lamb;
I will not stir, not wince, nor speak a word,
Nor look upon the iron angerly:
Thrust but these men away, and I'll forgive you,
Whatever torment you do put to me.
HUBERT. Go, stand within: let me alone with him.
1 EXECUTIONER. I am best pleased to be from such a deed. The Executioners go
ARTHUR. Alas! I then have chid away my friend!
He hath a stern look, but a gentle heart:
Let him come back, that his compassion may
Give life to yours.
HUBERT. Come, boy, prepare yourself.
ARTHUR. Is there no remedy?
HUBERT. None, but to lose your eyes.

ARTHUR. O heaven! that there were but a mote in yours,
A grain, a dust, a gnat, a wandering hair,
Any annoyance in that precious sense!
Then, feeling what small things are boisterous there,
Your vile intent must needs seem horrible.
HUBERT. Is this your promise? go to, hold your tongue.
ARTHUR. Hubert, the utterance of a brace of tongues
Must needs want pleading for a pair of eyes:
Let me not hold my tongue; let me not, Hubert!
Or, Hubert, if you will, cut out my tongue,
So I may keep mine eyes.... O, spare mine eyes,
Though to no use, but still to look on you!
Lo, by my troth, the instrument is cold,
And would not harm me.
HUBERT. I can heat it, boy.
ARTHUR. No, in good sooth; the fire is dead with grief,
Being create for comfort, to be used
In undeserved extremes: see else yourself,
There is no malice in this burning coal,
The breath of heaven hath blown his spirit out,
And strewed repentant ashes on his head.
HUBERT. But with my breath I can revive it, boy.
ARTHUR. An if you do, you will but make it blush,
And glow with shame of your proceedings, Hubert:
Nay, it perchance will sparkle in your eyes;
And like a dog that is compelled to fight,
Snatch at his master that doth tarre him on.
All things that you should use to do me wrong
Deny their office: only you do lack
That mercy which fierce fire and iron extend,
Creatures of note for mercy-lacking uses.
HUBERT. Well, see to live; I will not touch thine eyes
For all the treasure that thine uncle owes.
Yet am I sworn, and I did purpose, boy,
With this same very iron to burn them out.
ARTHUR. O, now you look like Hubert! all this while
You were disguiséd.
HUBERT. Peace: no more. Adieu.
Your uncle must not know but you are dead.
I'll fill these doggéd spies with false reports:
And, pretty child, sleep doubtless and secure,
That Hubert, for the wealth of all the world,
Will not offend thee.
ARTHUR. O heaven! I thank you, Hubert
HUBERT. Silence, no more: go closely in with me.
Much danger do I undergo for thee. They go

Scene 2: King John's palace

Enter King John, Pembroke, Salisbury and other lords

K. JOHN. Here once again we sit; once again crowned,
And looked upon, I hope, with cheerful eyes.
PEMBROKE. This 'once again' (but that your highness pleased)
Was once superfluous: you were crowned before,
And that high royalty was ne'er plucked off;
The faiths of men ne'er stainéd with revolt;
Fresh expectation troubled not the land,
With any longed-for change or better state.
SALISBURY. Therefore, to be possessed with double pomp,
To guard a title that was rich before,
To gild refinéd gold, to paint the lily,
To throw a perfume on the violet,
To smooth the ice, or add another hue
Unto the rainbow, or with taper-light
To seek the beauteous eye of heaven to garnish,
Is wasteful and ridiculous excess.
PEMBROKE. But that your royal pleasure must be done,
This act is as an ancient tale new told,
And in the last repeating troublesome,
Being urgéd at a time unseasonable.
SALISBURY. In this the antique and well noted face
Of plain old form is much disfiguréd,
And like a shifted wind unto a sail,
It makes the course of thoughts to fetch about,
Startles and frights consideration,
Makes sound opinion sick and truth suspected,
For putting on so new a fashioned robe.
PEMBROKE. When workmen strive to do better than well,
They do confound their skill in covetousness,
And oftentimes excusing of a fault
Doth make the fault the worse by the excuse;
As patches set upon a little breach
Discredit more in hiding of the fault
Than did the fault before it was so patched.
SALISBURY. To this effect, before you were new crowned,
We breathed our counsel: but it pleased your highness
To overbear it, and we are all well pleased,
Since all and every part of what we would
Doth make a stand at what your highness will.
K. JOHN. Some reasons of this double coronation
I have possessed you with and think them strong;
And more, more strong when lesser is my fear,
I shall indue you with: meantime but ask
What you would have reformed that is not well,
And well shall you perceive how willingly
I will both hear and grant you your requests.
PEMBROKE. Then I, as one that am the tongue of these,
To sound the purposes of all their hearts,
Both for myself and them ... but, chief of all,
Your safety ... for the which myself and they
Bend their best studies, heartily request
Th'enfranchisement of Arthur, whose restraint
Doth move the murmuring lips of discontent
To break into this dangerous argument,—
If what in rest you have in right you hold,
Why then your fears, which as they say attend
The steps of wrong, should move you to mew up
Your tender kinsman, and to choke his days
With barbarous ignorance, and deny his youth
The rich advantage of good exercise.
That the time's enemies may not have this
To grace occasions, let it be our suit
That you have bid us ask his liberty,
Which for our goods we do no further ask
Than whereupon our weal, on you depending,
Counts it your weal he have this liberty.

Hubert enters

K. JOHN. Let it be so: I do commit his youth
To your direction.... Hubert, what news with you?
They talk apart
PEMBROKE. This is the man should do the bloody deed;
He showed his warrant to a friend of mine.
The image of a wicked heinous fault
Lives in his eye; that close aspect of his

Doth show the mood of a much troubled breast,
And I do fearfully believe 'tis done,
What we so feared he had a charge to do.
SALISBURY. The colour of the king doth come and go
Between his purpose and his conscience,
Like heralds 'twixt two dreadful battles set:
His passion is so ripe, it needs must break.
PEMBROKE. And when it breaks, I fear will issue thence
The foul corruption of a sweet child's death.
K. JOHN. We cannot hold mortality's strong hand . . .
Good lords, although my will to give is living,
The suit which you demand is gone and dead.
He tells us Arthur is deceased to-night.
SALISBURY. Indeed we feared his sickness was past cure.
PEMBROKE. Indeed we heard how near his death he was,
Before the child himself felt he was sick:
This must be answered either here or hence.
K. JOHN. Why do you bend such solemn brows on me?
Think you I bear the shears of destiny?
Have I commandment on the pulse of life?
SALISBURY. It is apparent foul-play, and 'tis shame
That greatness should so grossly offer it:
So thrive it in your game! and so farewell.
PEMBROKE. Stay yet, Lord Salisbury, I'll go with thee,
And find th'inheritance of this poor child,
His little kingdom of a forcéd grave.
That blood which owed the breadth of all this isle,
Three foot of it doth hold: bad world the while!
This must not be thus borne: this will break out
To all our sorrows, and ere long I doubt.
The Lords depart
K. JOHN. They burn in indignation . . . I repent . . .
There is no sure foundation set on blood . . .
No certain life achieved by others' death . . .

A Messenger enters

A fearful eye thou hast. Where is that blood
That I have seen inhabit in those cheeks?
So foul a sky clears not without a storm.
Pour down thy weather: how goes all in France?
MESSENGER. From France to England. Never such a power
For any foreign preparation
Was levied in the body of a land!
The copy of your speed is learned by them;
For when you should be told they do prepare,
The tidings comes that they are all arrived.
K. JOHN. O, where hath our intelligence been drunk?
Where hath it slept? Where is my mother's care,
That such an army could be drawn in France,
And she not hear of it?
MESSENGER. My liege, her ear
Is stopped with dust: the first of April died
Your noble mother; and as I hear, my lord,
The Lady Constance in a frenzy died
Three days before: but this from rumour's tongue
I idly heard; if true or false I know not.
K. JOHN. Withhold thy speed, dreadful occasion!
O, make a league with me, till I have pleased
My discontented peers! What! mother dead!
How wildly then walks my estate in France!
Under whose conduct came those powers of France
That thou for truth giv'st out are landed here?
MESSENGER. Under the Dauphin.
K. JOHN. Thou hast made me giddy
With these ill tidings . . .

The Bastard enters with Peter of Pomfret

Now, what says the world
To your proceedings? do not seek to stuff
My head with more ill news, for it is full.
BASTARD. But if you be afeard to hear the worst,
Then let the worst unheard fall on your head.
K. JOHN. Bear with me, cousin, for I was amazed
Under the tide; but now I breathe again
Aloft the flood, and can give audience
To any tongue, speak it of what it will.
BASTARD. How I have sped among the clergymen,
The sums I have collected shall express:
But as I travelled hither through the land,
I find the people strangely fantasied,
Possessed with rumours, full of idle dreams,
Not knowing what they fear, but full of fear.
And here's a prophet, that I brought with me
From forth the streets of Pomfret, whom I found
With many hundreds treading on his heels;
To whom he sung, in rude harsh-sounding rhymes,
That, ere the next Ascension-day at noon,
Your highness should deliver up your crown.
K. JOHN. Thou idle dreamer, wherefore didst thou so?
PETER. Foreknowing that the truth will fall out so.
K. JOHN. Hubert, away with him! imprison him,
And on that day at noon, whereon he says
I shall yield up my crown, let him be hanged.
Deliver him to safety, and return,
For I must use thee. . . . Hubert takes Peter away
O, my gentle cousin,
Hear'st thou the news abroad, who are arrived?
BASTARD. The French, my lord. Men's mouths are full of it:
Besides, I met Lord Bigot and Lord Salisbury,
With eyes as red as new-enkindled fire,
And others more, going to seek the grave
Of Arthur, whom they say is killed to-night
On your suggestion.
K. JOHN. Gentle kinsman, go,
And thrust thyself into their companies.
I have a way to win their loves again;
Bring them before me.
BASTARD. I will seek them out.
K. JOHN. Nay, but make haste; the better foot before.
O, let me have no subject enemies,
When adverse foreigners affright my towns
With dreadful pomp of stout invasion!
Be Mercury, set feathers to thy heels,
And fly—like thought—from them to me again.
BASTARD. The spirit of the time shall teach me speed.
He goes
K. JOHN. Spoke like a sprightful noble gentleman. . . .
Go after him; for he perhaps shall need
Some messenger betwixt me and the peers,
And be thou he.
MESSENGER. With all my heart, my liege.
He goes
K. JOHN. My mother dead!

Hubert returns

HUBERT. My lord, they say five moons were seen tonight:
Four fixéd, and the fifth did whirl about

The other four in wondrous motion.
K. JOHN. Five moons!
HUBERT. Old men and beldams in the streets
Do prophesy upon it dangerously:
Young Arthur's death is common in their mouths,
And when they talk of him, they shake their heads
And whisper one another in the ear;
And he that speaks doth gripe the hearer's wrist,
Whilst he that hears makes fearful action,
With wrinkled brows, with nods, with rolling eyes.
I saw a smith stand with his hammer, thus,
The whilst his iron did on the anvil cool,
With open mouth swallowing a tailor's news,
Who with his shears and measure in his hand,
Standing on slippers, which his nimble haste
Had falsely thrust upon contrary feet,
Told of a many thousand warlike French
That were embattléd and ranked in Kent:
Another lean unwashed artificer
Cuts off his tale and talks of Arthur's death.
K. JOHN. Why seek'st thou to possess me with these fears?
Why urgest thou so oft young Arthur's death?
Thy hand hath murdered him: I had a mighty cause
To wish him dead, but thou hadst none to kill him.
HUBERT. No had, my lord? why, did you not provoke me?
K. JOHN. It is the curse of kings to be attended
By slaves that take their humours for a warrant
To break within the bloody house of life,
And on the winking of authority
To understand a law; to know the meaning
Of dangerous majesty, when perchance it frowns
More upon humour than advised respect.
HUBERT. Here is your hand and seal for what I did.
K. JOHN. O, when the last account 'twixt heaven and earth
Is to be made, then shall this hand and seal
Witness against us to damnation!
How oft the sight of means to do ill deeds
Make deeds ill done! Hadst not thou been by,
A fellow by the hand of nature marked,
Quoted and signed to do a deed of shame,
This murder had not come into my mind:
But taking note of thy abhorred aspect,
Finding thee fit for bloody villany,
Apt, liable to be employed in danger,
I faintly broke with thee of Arthur's death;
And thou, to be endearéd to a king,
Made it no conscience to destroy a prince.
HUBERT. My lord—
K. JOHN. Hadst thou but shook thy head or made a pause
When I spake darkly what I purposéd,
Or turned an eye of doubt upon my face,
As bid me tell my tale in express words,
Deep shame had struck me dumb, made me break off,
And those thy fears might have wrought fears in me:
But thou didst understand me by my signs
And didst in signs again parley with sin;
Yea, without stop, didst let thy heart consent,
And consequently thy rude hand to act
The deed, which both our tongues held vile to name....
Out of my sight, and never see me more!
My nobles leave me, and my state is braved,
Even at my gates, with ranks of foreign powers:
Nay, in the body of this fleshly land,
This kingdom, this confine of blood and breath,
Hostility and civil tumult reigns
Between my conscience and my cousin's death.
HUBERT. Arm you against your other enemies,
I'll make a peace between your soul and you.
Young Arthur is alive: this hand of mine
Is yet a maiden and an innocent hand,
Not painted with the crimson spots of blood.
Within this bosom never entered yet
The dreadful motion of a murderous thought,
And you have slandered nature in my form,
Which, howsoever rude exteriorly,
Is yet the cover of a fairer mind
Than to be butcher of an innocent child.
K. JOHN. Doth Arthur live? O, haste thee to the peers,
Throw this report on their incenséd rage,
And make them tame to their obedience!
Forgive the comment that my passion made
Upon thy feature, for my rage was blind,
And foul imaginary eyes of blood
Presented thee more hideous than thou art.
O, answer not; but to my closet bring
The angry lords, with all expedient haste.
I conjure thee but slowly; run more fast.
They go

Scene 3: Before the castle

Arthur appears on the walls

ARTHUR. The wall is high, and yet will I leap down.
Good ground, be pitiful and hurt me not!
There's few or none do know me—if they did,
This ship-boy's semblance hath disguised me quite....
I am afraid, and yet I'll venture it....
If I get down, and do not break my limbs,
I'll find a thousand shifts to get away:
As good to die and go, as die and stay....
He leaps
O me! my uncle's spirit is in these stones.
Heaven take my soul, and England keep my bones!
He dies

Pembroke, Salisbury, and Bigot enter

SALISBURY. Lords, I will meet him at Saint Edmundsbury.
It is our safety, and we must embrace
This gentle offer of the perilous time.
PEMBROKE. Who brought that letter from the cardinal?
SALISBURY. The Count Melun, a noble lord of France;
Whose private with me of the Dauphin's love
Is much more general than these lines import.
BIGOT. To-morrow morning let us meet him then.
SALISBURY. Or rather then set forward, for 'twill be
Two long days' journey, lords, or ere we meet.

The Bastard approaches

BASTARD. Once more to-day well met, distempered lords!
The king by me requests your presence straight.
SALISBURY. The king hath dispossessed himself of us.
We will not line his thin bestainéd cloak

With our pure honours, not attend the foot
That leaves the print of blood where’er it walks.
Return and tell him so: we know the worst.
BASTARD. Whate’er you think, good words, I think, were best.
SALISBURY. Our griefs, and not our manners, reason now.
BASTARD. But there is little reason in your grief,
Therefore ’twere reason you had manners now.
PEMBROKE. Sir, sir, impatience hath his privilege.
BASTARD. ’Tis true, to hurt his master, no man else.
SALISBURY. This is the prison . . . [sees Arthur] What is he lies here?
PEMBROKE. O death, made proud with pure and princely beauty!
The earth had not a hole to hide this deed.
SALISBURY. Murder, as hating what himself hath done,
Doth lay it open to urge on revenge.
BIGOT. Or, when he doomed this beauty to a grave,
Found it too precious-princely for a grave.
SALISBURY. Sir Richard, what think you? have you beheld,
Or have you read or heard? or could you think?
Or do you almost think, although you see,
That you do see? could thought, without this object,
Form such another? This is the very top,
The height, the crest, or crest unto the crest,
Of murder’s arms: this is the bloodiest shame,
The wildest savagery, the vilest stroke,
That ever wall-eyed wrath or staring rage
Presented to the tears of soft remorse.
PEMBROKE. All murders past do stand excused in this:
And this, so sole and so unmatchable,
Shall give a holiness, a purity,
To the yet unbegotten sin of times;
And prove a deadly bloodshed but a jest,
Exampled by this heinous spectacle.
BASTARD. It is a damnéd and a bloody work,
The graceless action of a heavy hand,
If that it be the work of any hand.
SALISBURY. If that it be the work of any hand!
We had a kind of light what would ensue:
It is the shameful work of Hubert’s hand,
The practice and the purpose of the king:
From whose obedience I forbid my soul,
Kneeling before this ruin of sweet life,
And breathing to his breathless excellence
The incense of a vow, a holy vow,
Never to taste the pleasures of the world,
Never to be infected with delight,
Nor conversant with ease and idleness,
Till I have set a glory to this hand,
By giving it the worship of revenge.
PEMBROKE. BIGOT. Our souls religiously confirm thy words.

Hubert enters

HUBERT. Lords, I am hot with haste in seeking you,
Arthur doth live, the king hath sent for you.
SALISBURY. O, he is bold, and blushes not at death.
Avaunt, thou hateful villain, get thee gone!
HUBERT. I am no villain.
SALISBURY [draws his sword]. Must I rob the law?
BASTARD. Your sword is bright, sir, put it up again.
SALISBURY. Not till I sheathe it in a murderer’s skin.
HUBERT. Stand back, Lord Salisbury, stand back, I say;
By heaven, I think my sword’s as sharp as yours.
I would not have you, lord, forget yourself,
Nor tempt the danger of my true defence;
Lest I, by marking of your rage, forget
Your worth, your greatness, and nobility.
BIGOT. Out, dunghill! dar’st thou brave a nobleman?
HUBERT. Not for my life: but yet I dare defend
My innocent life against an emperor.
SALISBURY. Thou art a murderer.
HUBERT. Do not prove me so;
Yet I am none. Whose tongue soe’er speaks false,
Not truly speaks; who speaks not truly, lies.
PEMBROKE. Cut him to pieces.
BASTARD. Keep the peace, I say.
SALISBURY. Stand by, or I shall gall you, Faulconbridge.
BASTARD. Thou wert better gall the devil, Salisbury.
If thou but frown on me, or stir thy foot,
Or teach thy hasty spleen to do me shame,
I’ll strike thee dead. Put up thy sword betime,
Or I’ll so maul you and your toasting-iron,
That you shall think the devil is come from hell.
BIGOT. What wilt thou do, renownéd Faulconbridge?
Second a villain and a murderer?
HUBERT. Lord Bigot, I am none.
BIGOT. Who killed this prince?
HUBERT. ’Tis not an hour since I left him well:
I honoured him, I loved him, and will weep
My date of life out for his sweet life’s loss.
SALISBURY. Trust not those cunning waters of his eyes,
For villany is not without such rheum,
And he, long traded in it, makes it seem
Like rivers of remorse and innocency.
Away, with me, all you whose souls abhor
Th’uncleanly savours of a slaughter-house,
For I am stifled with this smell of sin.
BIGOT. Away toward Bury, to the Dauphin there!
PEMBROKE. There, tell the king, he may inquire us out.
The Lords depart
BASTARD. Here’s a good world! Knew you of this fair work?
Beyond the infinite and boundless reach
Of mercy (if thou didst this deed of death)
Art thou damned, Hubert.
HUBERT. Do but hear me, sir.
BASTARD. Ha! I’ll tell thee what;
Thou’rt damned as black—nay, nothing is so black.
Thou art more deep damned than Prince Lucifer:
There is not yet so ugly a fiend of hell
As thou shalt be, if thou didst kill this child.
HUBERT. Upon my soul—
BASTARD. If thou didst but consent
To this most cruel act, do but despair,
And if thou want’st a cord, the smallest thread
That ever spider twisted from her womb
Will serve to strangle thee; a rush will be a beam
To hang thee on; or, wouldst thou drown thyself,
Put but a little water in a spoon,
And it shall be as all the ocean,
Enough to stifle such a villain up.
I do suspect thee very grievously.
HUBERT. If I in act, consent, or sin of thought,
Be guilty of the stealing that sweet breath
Which was embounded in this beauteous clay,
Let hell want pains enough to torture me . . .
I left him well.

BASTARD. Go, bear him in thine arms:
I am amazed, methinks, and lose my way
Among the thorns and dangers of this world.
How easy dost thou take all England up
From forth this morsel of dead royalty,
The life, the right and truth of all this realm
Is fled to heaven; and England now is left
To tug and scamble, and to part by th'teeth
The unowed interest of proud-swelling state:
Now, for the bare-picked bone of majesty,
Doth doggéd war bristle his angry crest,
And snarleth in the gentle eyes of peace:
Now powers from home and discontents at home
Meet in one line; and vast confusion waits,
As doth a raven on a sick-fall'n beast,
The imminent decay of wrested pomp.
Now happy he whose cloak and centure can
Hold out this tempest. Bear away that child,
And follow me with speed; I'll to the king:
A thousand businesses are brief in hand,
And heaven itself doth frown upon the land.

They go

ACT 5

Scene 1: King John's palace

Pandulph, King John, Lords, and others in attendance

K. JOHN. Thus have I yielded up into your hand
The circle of my glory.

PANDULPH [places the crown upon John's head]. Take again
From this my hand, as holding of the Pope,
Your sovereign greatness and authority.

K. JOHN. Now keep your holy word, go meet the French,
And from his holiness use all your power
To stop their marches 'fore we are inflamed:
Our discontented counties do revolt;
Our people quarrel with obedience,
Swearing allegiance and the love of soul
To stranger blood, to foreign royalty:
This inundation of mistempered humour
Rests by you only to be qualified.
Then pause not; for the present time's so sick,
That present medicine must be ministered,
Or overthrow incurable ensues.

PANDULPH. It was my breath that blew this tempest up,
Upon your stubborn usage of the Pope;
But since you are a gentle convertite,
My tongue shall hush again this storm of war,
And make fair weather in your blust'ring land...
On this Ascension-day, remember well,
Upon your oath of service to the Pope,
Go I to make the French lay down their arms.

He departs

K. JOHN. Is this Ascension-day? Did not the prophet
Say that before Ascension-day at noon
My crown I should give off? Even so I have:
I did suppose it should be on constraint,
But, heaven be thanked, it is but voluntary.

The Bastard enters

BASTARD. All Kent hath yielded; nothing there holds out
But Dover castle: London hath received,
Like a kind host, the Dauphin and his powers:
Your nobles will not hear you, but are gone
To offer service to your enemy;
And wild amazement hurries up and down
The little number of your doubtful friends.

K. JOHN. Would not my lords return to me again,
After they heard young Arthur was alive?

BASTARD. They found him dead and cast into the streets,
An empty casket, where the jewel of life
By some damned hand was robbed and ta'en away.

K. JOHN. That villain Hubert told me he did live.

BASTARD. So, on my soul, he did, for aught he knew....
But wherefore do you droop? why look you sad?
Be great in act, as you have been in thought;
Let not the world see fear and sad distrust
Govern the motion of a kingly eye:
Be stirring as the time, be fire with fire,
Threaten the threat'ner, and outface the brow
Of bragging horror: so shall inferior eyes,
That borrow their behaviours from the great,
Grow great by your example and put on
The dauntless spirit of resolution....
Away, and glister like the god of war;
When he intendeth to become the field:
Show boldness and aspiring confidence:
What, shall they seek the lion in his den?
And fright him there? and make him tremble there?
O, let it not be said: forage, and run
To meet displeasure farther from the doors,
And grapple with him, ere he come so nigh.

K. JOHN. The legate of the Pope hath been with me,
And I have made a happy peace with him,
And he hath promised to dismiss the powers
Led by the Dauphin.

BASTARD. O inglorious league!
Shall we, upon the footing of our land,
Send fair-play orders and make compromise,
Insinuation, parley and base truce
To arms invasive? shall a beardless boy,
A cock'red silken wanton, brave our fields,
And flesh his spirit in a warlike soil,
Mocking the air with colours idly spread,
And find no check? Let us, my liege, to arms:
Perchance the cardinal cannot make your peace;
Or if he do, let it at least be said
They saw we had a purpose of defence.

K. JOHN. Have thou the ordering of this present time.

BASTARD. Away then, with good courage! yet, I know,
Our party may well meet a prouder foe.

They go

Scene 2: The Dauphin's camp near St Edmundsbury

Enter, in arms, Lewis, Salisbury, Melun, Pembroke, Bigot, Soldiers

LEWIS. My Lord Melun, let this be copied out,
And keep it safe for our remembrance:
Return the precedent to these lords again,
That, having our fair order written down,
Both they and we, perusing o'er these notes,
May know wherefore we took the sacrament
And keep our faiths firm and inviolable.

SALISBURY. Upon our sides it never shall be broken.

And, noble Dauphin, albeit we swear
A voluntary zeal and an unurgéd faith
To your proceedings; yet believe me, prince,
I am not glad that such a sore of time
Should seek a plaster by contemned revolt,
And heal the inveterate canker of one wound
By making many: O, it grieves my soul,
That I must draw this metal from my side
To be a widow-maker! O, and there
Where honourable rescue and defence
Cries out upon the name of Salisbury!
But such is the infection of the time,
That, for the health and physic of our right,
We cannot deal but with the very hand
Of stern injustice and confuséd wrong:
And is't not pity, O my grievéd friends,
That we, the sons and children of this isle,
Were born to see so sad an hour as this,
Wherein we step after a stranger, march
Upon her gentle bosom, and fill up
Her enemies' ranks—I must withdraw and weep
Upon the spot of this enforcéd cause—
To grace the gentry of a land remote,
And follow unacquainted colours here?
What, here? O nation, that thou could'st remove!
That Neptune's arms, who clippeth thee about,
Would bear thee from the knowledge of thyself,
And grapple thee unto a pagan shore,
Where these two Christian armies might combine
The blood of malice in a vein of league,
And not to spend it so unneighbourly!
LEWIS. A noble temper dost thou show in this;
And great affections wrastling in thy bosom
Doth make an earthquake of nobility:
O, what a noble combat hast thou fought,
Between compulsion and a brave respect!
Let me wipe off this honourable dew,
That silverly doth progress on thy cheeks:
My heart hath melted at a lady's tears,
Being an ordinary inundation;
But this effusion of such manly drops,
This shower, blown up by tempest of the soul,
Startles mine eyes, and makes me more amazed
Than had I seen the vaulty top of heaven
Figured quite o'er with burning meteors.
Lift up thy brow, renownéd Salisbury,
And with a great heart heave away this storm:
Commend these waters to those baby eyes
That never saw the giant world enraged,
Nor met with fortune other than at feasts,
Full of warm blood, of mirth, of gossiping:
Come, come; for thou shalt thrust thy hand as deep
Into the purse of rich prosperity
As Lewis himself: so, nobles, shall you all,
That knit your sinews to the strength of mine....
And even there, methinks, an angel spake.

Pandulph approaches

Look, where the holy legate comes apace,
To given us warrant from the hand of heaven,
And on our actions set the name of right
With holy breath.
PANDULPH. Hail, noble prince of France!
The next is this: King John hath reconciled
Himself to Rome, his spirit is come in,
That so stood out against the holy church,
The great metropolis and see of Rome:
Therefore thy threat'ning colours now wind up,
And tame the savage spirit of wild war,
That, like a lion fostered up at hand,
It may lie gently at the foot of peace,
And be no further harmful than in show.
LEWIS. Your grace shall pardon me, I will not back:
I am too high-born to be propertied,
To be a secondary at control,
Or useful serving-man and instrument
To any sovereign state throughout the world.
Your breath first kindled the dead coal of wars
Between this chastised kingdom and myself,
And brought in matter that should feed this fire;
And now 'tis far too huge to be blown out
With that same weak wind which enkindled it:
You taught me how to know the face of right,
Acquainted me with interest to this land,
Yea, thrust this entèrprise into my heart,
And come ye now to tell me John hath made
His peace with Rome? What is that peace to me?
I, by the honour of my marriage-bed,
After young Arthur, claim this land for mine,
And now it is half-conquered must I back,
Because that John hath made his peace with Rome?
Am I Rome's slave? What penny hath Rome borne,
What men provided, what munition sent,
To underprop this action? Is't not I
That undergo this charge? who else but I,
And such as to my claim are liable,
Sweat in this business and maintain this war?
Have I not heard these islanders shout out,
'Vive le roy!' as I have banked their towns?
Have I not here the best cards for the game,
To win this easy match played for a crown?
And shall I now give o'er the yielded set?
No, no, on my soul, it never shall be said.
PANDULPH. You look but on the outside of this work.
LEWIS. Outside or inside, I will not return
Till my attempt so much be glorified
As to my ample hope was promiséd
Before I drew this gallant head of war,
And culled these fiery spirits from the world,
To outlook conquest and to win renown
Even in the jaws of danger and of death . . .
A trumpet sounds
What lusty trumpet thus doth summon us?

The Bastard enters, attended by officers

BASTARD. According to the fair-play of the world,
Let me have audience; I am sent to speak:
My holy lord of Milan, from the king
I come, to learn how you have dealt for him;
And, as you answer, I do know the scope
And warrant limited unto my tongue.
PANDULPH. The Dauphin is too wilful-opposite,
And will not temporize with my entreaties;
He flatly says he'll not lay down his arms.
BASTARD. By all the blood that ever fury breathed,
The youth says well.... Now hear our English king
For thus his royalty doth speak in me:
He is prepared, and reason too he should.
This apish and unmannerly approach,
This harnessed masque and unadviséd revel,
This unhaired sauciness and boyish troops,
The king doth smile at, and is well prepared

To whip this dwarfish war, these pigmy arms,
From out the circle of his territories.
That hand which had the strength, even at your door,
To cudgel you and make you take the hatch,
To dive like buckets in concealéd wells,
To crouch in litter of your stable planks,
To lie like pawns locked up in chests and trunks,
To hug with swine, to seek sweet safety out
In vaults and prisons, and to thrill and shake
Even at the crying of your nation's crow,
Thinking his voice an arméd Englishman;
Shall that victorious hand be feebled here,
That in your chambers gave you chastisement?
No: know, the gallant monarch is in arms,
And like an eagle o'er his aery towers,
To souse annoyance that comes near his nest . . .
And you degenerate, you ingrate revolts,
You bloody Neroes, ripping up the womb
Of your dear mother England, blush for shame:
For your own ladies and pale-visaged maids
Like Amazons come tripping after drums,
Their thimbles into arméd gauntlets change,
Their needles to lances, and their gentle hearts
To fierce and bloody inclination.
LEWIS. There end thy brave, and turn thy face in peace.
We grant thou canst outscold us: fare thee well.
We hold our time too precious to be spent
With such a brabbler.
PANDULPH. Give me leave to speak.
BASTARD. No, I will speak.
LEWIS. We will attend to neither . . .
Strike up the drums, and let the tongue of war
Plead for our interest and our being here.
BASTARD. Indeed, your drums, being beaten, will cry out;
And so shall you, being beaten: do but start
An echo with the clamour of thy drum,
And even at hand a drum is ready braced
That shall reverberate all as loud as thine;
Sound but another, and another shall
(As loud as thine) rattle the welkin's ear,
And mock the deep-mouthed thunder: for at hand
(Not trusting to this halting legate here,
Whom he hath used rather for sport than need)
Is warlike John; and in his forehead sits
A bare-ribbed death, whose office is this day
To feast upon whole thousands of the French.
LEWIS. Strike up our drums, to find this danger out.
BASTARD. And thou shalt find it, Dauphin, do not doubt. They go

Scene 3: The field of battle

Alarums. Enter King John and Hubert

K. JOHN. How goes the day with us? O, tell me, Hubert.
HUBERT. Badly, I fear: how fares your majesty?
K. JOHN. This fever, that hath troubled me so long,
Lies heavy on me; O, my heart is sick!

A Messenger enters

MESSENGER. My lord, your valiant kinsman, Faulconbridge,
Desires your majesty to leave the field,
And send him word by me which way you go.
K. JOHN. Tell him, toward Swinstead, to the abbey there.
MESSENGER. Be of good comfort; for the great supply
That were expected by the Dauphin here,
Are wracked three nights ago on Goodwin Sands.
This news was brought to Richard but even now.
The French fight coldly, and retire themselves.
K. JOHN. Ay me! this tyrant fever burns me up,
And will not let me welcome this good news.
Set on toward Swinstead: to my litter straight,
Weakness possesseth me, and I am faint.
They go

Scene 4

Enter Salisbury, Pembroke, and Bigot

SALISBURY. I did not think the king so stored with friends.
PEMBROKE. Up once again: put spirit in the French.
If they miscarry, we miscarry too.
SALISBURY. That misbegotten devil, Faulconbridge,
In spite of spite, alone upholds the day.
PEMBROKE. They say King John sore sick hath left the field.

Enter Melun, wounded

MELUN. Lead me to the revolts of England here.
SALISBURY. When we were happy we had other names.
PEMBROKE. It is the Count Melun.
SALISBURY. Wounded to death.
MELUN. Fly, noble English, you are bought and sold,
Unthread the rude eye of rebellion,
And welcome home again discarded faith.
Seek out King John and fall before his feet;
For if the French be lord of this loud day,
He means to recompense the pains you take
By cutting off your heads: thus hath he sworn,
And I with him, and many moe with me,
Upon the altar at Saint Edmundsbury,
Even on that altar where we swore to you
Dear amity and everlasting love.
SALISBURY. May this be possible? may this be true?
MELUN. Have I not hideous death within my view,
Retaining but a quantity of life,
Which bleeds away, even as a form of wax
Resolveth from his figure 'gainst the fire?
What in the world should make me now deceive,
Since I must lose the use of all deceit?
Why should I then be false, since it is true
That I must die here and live hence by Truth?
I say again, if Lewis do win the day,
He is forsworn, if e'er those eyes of yours
Behold another day break in the east:
But even this night, whose black contagious breath
Already smokes about the burning crest
Of the old, feeble and day-wearied sun,
Even this ill night, your breathing shall expire,
Paying the fine of rated treachery,
Even with a treacherous fine of all your lives,
If Lewis by your assistance win the day. . . .
Commend me to one Hubert, with your king;
The love of him, and this respect besides,
For that my grandsire was an Englishman,
Awakes my conscience to confess all this. . . .
In lieu whereof, I pray you, bear me hence

From forth the noise and rumour of the field,
Where I may think the remnant of my thoughts
In peace, and part this body and my soul
With contemplation and devout desires.
SALISBURY. We do believe thee—and beshrew my soul
But I do love the favour and the form
Of this most fair occasion, by the which
We will untread the steps of damnéd flight,
And like a bated and retired flood,
Leaving our rankness and irregular course,
Stoop low within those bounds we have o'erlooked,
And calmly run on in obedience,
Even to our ocean, to our great King John....
My arm shall give thee help to bear thee hence,
For I do see the cruel pangs of death
Right in thine eye.... Away, my friends! New flight!
And happy newness, that intends old right.
They go, bearing Melun in their arms

Scene 5: The Dauphin's camp

Enter Lewis and his train return after the battle

LEWIS. The sun of heaven methought was loath to set,
But stayed, and made the western welkin blush,
When English measured backward their own ground
In faint retire: O, bravely came we off,
When with a volley of our needless shot,
After such bloody toil, we bid good night,
And wound our tattering colours clearly up,
Last in the field, and almost lords of it!

A Messenger enters

MESSENGER. Where is my prince, the Dauphin?
LEWIS. Here: what news?
MESSENGER. The Count Melun is slain; the English lords
By his persuasion are again fall'n off,
And your supply, which you have wished so long,
Are cast away and sunk on Goodwin Sands.
LEWIS. Ah, foul shrewd news! beshrew thy very heart!
I did not think to be so sad to-night
As this hath made me.... Who was he that said
King John did fly an hour or two before
The stumbling night did part our weary powers?
MESSENGER. Whoever spoke it, it is true, my lord.
LEWIS. Well; keep good quarter and good care to-night.
The day shall not be up so soon as I,
To try the fair adventure of to-morrow.
They go

Scene 6: Near Swineshead Abbey

Enter the Bastard and Hubert, meeting

BASTARD. Who's there? speak, ho! speak quickly, or I shoot.
HUBERT. A friend.... What art thou?
BASTARD. Of the part of England.
HUBERT. Whither dost thou go?
BASTARD. What's that to thee?
HUBERT. Why may not I demand
Of thine affairs, as well as thou of mine?
BASTARD. Hubert, I think.
HUBERT. Thou hast a perfect thought:
I will upon all hazards well believe
Thou art my friend, that know'st my tongue so well:
Who art thou?
BASTARD. Who thou wilt: and if thou please,
Thou mayst befriend me so much as to think
I come one way of the Plantagenets.
HUBERT. Unkind remembrance! thou and eyeless night
Have done me shame: brave soldier, pardon me,
That any accent breaking from thy tongue
Should 'scape the true acquaintance of mine ear.
BASTARD. Come, come; sans compliment, what news abroad?
HUBERT. Why, here walk I in the black brow of night
To find you out.
BASTARD. Brief, then; and what's the news?
HUBERT. O, my sweet sir, news fitting to the night,
Black, fearful, comfortless, and horrible.
BASTARD. Show me the very wound of this ill news—
I am no woman, I'll not swoon at it.
HUBERT. The king, I fear, is poisoned by a monk.
I left him almost speechless, and broke out
To acquaint you with this evil, that you might
The better arm you to the sudden time,
Than if you had at leisure known of this.
BASTARD. How did he take it? who did taste to him?
HUBERT. A monk, I tell you, a resolvéd villain,
Whose bowels suddenly burst out: the king
Yet speaks and peradventure may recover.
BASTARD. Who didst thou leave to tend his majesty?
HUBERT. Why, know you not? the lords are all come back,
And brought Prince Henry in their company,
At whose request the king hath pardoned them,
And they are all about his majesty.
BASTARD. Withhold thine indignation, mighty heaven,
And tempt us not to bear above our power!
I'll tell thee, Hubert, half my power this night,
Passing these flats, are taken by the tide.
These Lincoln Washes have devouréd them.
Myself, well mounted, hardly have escaped....
Away before: conduct me to the king.
I doubt he will be dead or ere I come.
They go

Scene 7: The orchard of Swinestead Abbey

Enter Prince Henry, Salisbury and Bigot

P. HENRY. It is too late! the life of all his blood
Is touched corruptibly: and his pure brain
(Which some suppose the soul's frail dwelling-house)
Doth by the idle comments that it makes
Foretell the ending of mortality.

Pembroke enters

PEMBROKE. His highness yet doth speak, and holds belief
That, being brought into the open air,
It would allay the burning quality
Of that fell poison which assaileth him.

P. HENRY. Let him be brought into the orchard here...
Doth he still rage? Bigot goes
PEMBROKE. He is more patient
Than when you left him; even now he sung.
P. HENRY. O vanity of sickness! fierce extremes
In their continuance will not feel themselves.
Death, having preyed upon the outward parts,
Leaves them invisible, and his siege is now
Against the mind, the which he pricks and wounds
With many legions of strange fantasies,
Which, in their throng and press to that last hold,
Confound themselves.... 'Tis strange, that death should sing:
I am the cygnet to this pale faint swan,
Who chants a doleful hymn to his own death,
And from the organ-pipe of frailty sings
His soul and body to their lasting rest.
SALISBURY. Be of good comfort, prince, for you are born
To set a form upon that indigest
Which he hath left so shapeless and so rude.

Bigot returns with attendants carrying King John in a chair

K. JOHN. Ay, marry, now my soul hath elbow-room.
It would not out at windows nor at doors.
There is so hot a summer in my bosom,
That all my bowels crumble up to dust:
I am a scribbled form drawn with a pen
Upon a parchment, and against this fire
Do I shrink up.
P. HENRY. How fares your majesty?
K. JOHN. Poisoned—ill fare: dead, forsook, cast off,
And none of you will bid the winter come
To thrust his icy fingers in my maw;
Nor let my kingdom's rivers take their course
Through my burned bosom; nor entreat the north
To make his bleak winds kiss my parchéd lips
And comfort me with cold.... I do not ask you much,
I beg cold comfort; and you are so strait
And so ingrateful, you deny me that.
P. HENRY. O, that there were some virtue in my tears,
That might relieve you!
K. JOHN. The salt in them is hot....
Within me is a hell, and there the poison
Is, as a fiend, confined to tyrannize
On unreprievable condemnéd blood.

The Bastard enters

BASTARD. O, I am scalded with my violent motion,
And spleen of speed to see your majesty!
K. JOHN. O cousin, thou art come to set mine eye:
The tackle of my heart is cracked and burnt,
And all the shrouds wherewith my life should sail
Are turnéd to one thread, one little hair:
My heart hath one poor string to stay it by,
Which holds but till thy news be utteréd,
And then all this thou see'st is but a clod
And module of confounded royalty.
BASTARD. The Dauphin is preparing hitherward,
Where heaven He knows how we shall answer him:
For in a night the best part of my power,
As I upon advantage did remove,
Were in the Washes all unwarily
Devouréd by the unexpected flood. The King dies
SALISBURY. You breathe these dead news in as dead an ear.
My liege! my lord! but now a king, now thus.
P. HENRY. Even so must I run on, and even so stop!
What surety of the world, what hope, what stay,
When this was now a king, and now is clay!
BASTARD. Art thou gone so? I do but stay behind
To do the office for thee of revenge,
And then my soul shall wait on thee to heaven,
As it on earth hath been thy servant still....
Now, now, you stars, that move in your right spheres,
Where be your powers? show now your mended faiths,
And instantly return with me again,
To push destruction and perpetual shame
Out of the weak door of our fainting land:
Straight let us seek, or straight we shall be sought—
The Dauphin rages at our very heels.
SALISBURY. It seems you know not, then, so much as we.
The Cardinal Pandulph is within at rest,
Who half an hour since came from the Dauphin,
And brings from him such offers of our peace
As we with honour and respect may take,
With purpose presently to leave this war.
BASTARD. He will the rather do it, when he sees Ourselves well sinewéd to our defence.
SALISBURY. Nay, it is in a manner done already,
For many carriages he hath dispatched
To the sea-side, and put his cause and quarrel
To the disposing of the cardinal:
With whom yourself, myself and other lords,
If you think meet, this afternoon will post
To consummate this business happily.
BASTARD. Let it be so. And you, my noble prince,
With other princes that may best be spared,
Shall wait upon your father's funeral.
P. HENRY. At Worcester must his body be interred,
For so he willed it.
BASTARD. Thither shall it then.
And happily may your sweet self put on
The lineal state and glory of the land!
To whom, with all submission, on my knee
I do bequeath my faithful services
And true subjection everlastingly.
SALISBURY. And the like tender of our love we make,
To rest without a spot for evermore.
P. HENRY. I have a kind soul that would give you thanks,
And knows not how to do it but with tears.
BASTARD. O, let us pay the time but needful woe,
Since it hath been beforehand with our griefs....
This England never did, nor never shall,
Lie at the proud foot of a conqueror,
But when it first did help to wound itself....
Now these her princes are come home again,
Come the three corners of the world in arms,
And we shall shock them: nought shall make us rue,
If England to itself do rest but true. They go

King Richard II

ACT 1

Scene I: The castle at Windsor

Enter King Richard, John of Gaunt, with the Duke of Surrey, other nobles and attendants

K. RICHARD. Old John of Gaunt, time-honoured Lancaster,
Hast thou according to thy oath and band
Brought hither Henry Hereford thy bold son,
Here to make good the boist'rous late appeal,
Which then our leisure would not let us hear,
Against the Duke of Norfolk, Thomas Mowbray?
GAUNT. I have, my liege.
K. RICHARD. Tell me, moreover, hast thou sounded him,
If he appeal the duke on ancient malice,
Or worthily as a good subject should
On some known ground of treachery in him?
GAUNT. As near as I could sift him on that argument,
On some apparent danger seen in him
Aimed at your highness, no inveterate malice.
K. RICHARD. Then call them to our presence—face to face,
And frowning brow to brow, ourselves will hear
The accuser and the accused freely speak:
High-stomached are they both and full of ire,
In rage, deaf as the sea, hasty as fire.

Enter Bolingbroke and Mowbray

BOLINGBROKE. Many years of happy days befal
My gracious sovereign, my most loving liege!
MOWBRAY. Each day still better other's happiness,
Until the heavens, envying earth's good hap,
Add an immortal title to your crown!
K. RICHARD. We thank you both, yet one but flatters us,
As well appeareth by the cause you come,
Namely, to appeal each other of high treason:
Cousin of Hereford, what dost thou object
Against the Duke of Norfolk, Thomas Mowbray?
BOLINGBROKE. First—heaven be the record to my speech
In the devotion of a subject's love,
Tend'ring the precious safety of my prince,
And free from other misbegotten hate,
Come I appellant to this princely presence....
Now Thomas Mowbray do I turn to thee,
And mark my greeting well: for what I speak
My body shall make good upon this earth,
Or my divine soul answer it in heaven:
Thou art a traitor and a miscreant,
Too good to be so, and too bad to live,
Since the more fair and crystal is the sky,
The uglier seem the clouds that in it fly:
Once more, the more to aggravate the note,
With a foul traitor's name stuff I thy throat,
And wish (so please my sovereign) ere I move,
What my tongue speaks my right drawn sword may prove.
MOWBRAY. Let not my cold words here accuse my zeal.
'Tis not the trial of a woman's war,
The bitter clamour of two eager tongues,
Can arbitrate this cause betwixt us twain.
The blood is hot that must be cooled for this.
Yet can I not of such tame patience boast
As to be hushed and nought at all to say....
First the fair reverence of your highness curbs me
From giving reins and spurs to my free speech,
Which else would post until it had returned
These terms of treason doubled down his throat:
Setting aside his high blood's royalty,
And let him be no kinsman to my liege,
I do defy him, and I spit at him,
Call him a slanderous coward, and a villain,
Which to maintain I would allow him odds,
And meet him were I tied to run afoot,
Even to the frozen ridges of the Alps,
Or any other ground inhabitable,
Where ever Englishman durst set his foot.
Mean time, let this defend my loyalty—
By all my hopes most falsely doth he lie.
BOLINGBROKE. Pale trembling coward there I throw my gage,
Disclaiming here the kindred of the king,
And lay aside my high blood's royalty,
Which fear, not reverence, makes thee to except....
If guilty dread have left thee so much strength,
As to take up mine honour's pawn, then stoop.
By that, and all the rites of knighthood else,
Will I make good against thee, arm to arm,
What I have spoke, or thou canst worse devise.
MOWBRAY. I take it up, and by that sword I swear,
Which gently laid my knighthood on my shoulder,
I'll answer thee in any fair degree,
Or chivalrous design of knightly trial:
And when I mount, alive may I not light,
If I be traitor or unjustly fight!
K. RICHARD. What doth our cousin lay to Mowbray's charge?
It must be great that can inherit us
So much as of a thought of ill in him.
BOLINGBROKE. Look what I speak, my life shall prove it true,
That Mowbray hath received eight thousand nobles
In name of 'lendings' for your highness' soldiers,
The which he hath detained for lewd employments,
Like a false traitor, and injurious villain:
Besides I say, and will in battle prove,
Or here, or elsewhere to the furthest verge
That ever was surveyed by English eye,
That all the treasons for these eighteen years,
Complotted and contrived in this land ...
Fetch from false Mowbray their first head and spring!

Further I say, and further will maintain
Upon his bad life to make all this good,
That he did plot the Duke of Gloucester's death,
Suggest his soon-believing adversaries,
And consequently like a traitor coward,
Sluiced out his innocent soul through streams of blood,
Which blood, like sacrificing Abel's, cries,
Even from the tongueless caverns of the earth,
To me for justice and rough chastisement:
And by the glorious worth of my descent,
This arm shall do it, or this life be spent.
K. RICHARD. How high a pitch his resolution soars!
Thomas of Norfolk, what say'st thou to this?
MOWBRAY. O, let my sovereign turn away his face,
And bid his ears a little while be deaf,
Till I have told this slander of his blood,
How God and good men hate so foul a liar.
K. RICHARD. Mowbray, impartial are our eyes and ears,
Were he my brother, nay, my kingdom's heir,
As he is but my father's brother's son,
Now by my sceptre's awe I make a vow,
Such neighbour nearness to our sacred blood
Should nothing privilege him nor partialize
The unstooping firmness of my upright soul.
He is our subject, Mowbray, so art thou,
Free speech and fearless I to thee allow.
MOWBRAY. Then Bolingbroke as low as to thy heart
Through the false passage of thy throat thou liest!
Three parts of that receipt I had for Calais
Disbursed I duly to his highness' soldiers,
The other part reserved I by consent,
For that my sovereign liege was in my debt,
Upon remainder of a dear account,
Since last I went to France to fetch his queen:
Now swallow down that lie.... For Gloucester's death,
I slew him not, but to my own disgrace
Neglected my sworn duty in that case:
For you, my noble lord of Lancaster,
The honourable father to my foe,
Once did I lay an ambush for your life,
A trespass that doth vex my grievéd soul:
But ere I last received the sacrament,
I did confess it, and exactly begged
Your grace's pardon, and I hope I had it....
This is my fault—as for the rest appealed
It issues from the rancour of a villain,
A recreant and most degenerate traitor,
Which in myself I boldly will defend,
And interchangeably hurl down my gage
Upon this overweening traitor's foot,
To prove myself a loyal gentleman,
Even in the best blood chambered in his bosom,
In haste whereof most heartily I pray
Your highness to assign our trial day.
K. RICHARD. Wrath-kindled gentlemen, be ruled by me,
Let's purge this choler without letting blood.
This we prescribe, though no physician—
Deep malice makes too deep incision—
Forget, forgive, conclude and be agreed.
Our doctors say this is no month to bleed...
Good uncle, let this end where it begun,
We'll calm the Duke of Norfolk, your son.
GAUNT. To be a make-peace shall become my age.
Throw down, my son, the Duke of Norfolk's gage.
K. RICHARD. And, Norfolk, throw down his.
GAUNT. When, Harry? when?
Obedience bids I should not bid again.
K. RICHARD. Norfolk, throw down we bid, there is no boot.
MOWBRAY. Myself I throw, dread sovereign, at thy foot,
My life thou shalt command, but not my shame,
The one my duty owes, but my fair name,
Despite of death that lives upon my grave,
To dark dishonour's use thou shalt not have:
I am disgraced, impeached, and baffled here,
Pierced to the soul with slander's venomed spear,
The which no calm can cure but his heart-blood
Which breathed this poison.
K. RICHARD. Rage must be withstood.
Give me his gage; lions make leopards tame.
MOWBRAY. Yea, but not change his spots: take but my shame,
And I resign my gage. My dear dear lord,
The purest treasure mortal times afford,
Is spotless reputation—that away
Men are but gilded loam, or painted clay.
A jewel in a ten-times-barred-up chest
Is a bold spirit in a loyal breast:
Mine honour is my life, both grow in one,
Take honour from me, and my life is done:
Then, dear my liege, mine honour let me try—
In that I live, and for that will I die.
K. RICHARD. Cousin, throw up your gage, do you begin.
BOLINGBROKE. O God defend my soul from such deep sin!
Shall I seem crest-fallen in my father's sight?
Or with pale beggar-fear impeach my height
Before this out-dared dastard? ere my tongue
Shall wound my honour with such feeble wrong,
Or sound so base a parle, my teeth shall tear
The slavish motive of recanting fear,
And spit it bleeding in his high disgrace,
Where shame doth harbour, even in Mowbray's face.
K. RICHARD. We were not born to sue, but to command.
Which since we cannot do, to make you friends,
Be ready, as your lives shall answer it,
At Coventry upon Saint Lambert's day.
There shall your swords and lances arbitrate
The swelling difference of your settled hate.
Since we not atone you, we shall see
Justice design the victor's chivalry.
Lord marshal, command our officers at arms
Be ready to direct these home alarms. They go

Scene 2: The Duke of Lancaster's house

Enter John of Gaunt with the Duchess of Gloucester

GAUNT. Alas, the part I had in Woodstock's blood
Doth more solicit me than your exclaims
To stir against the butchers of his life,
But since correction lieth in those hands,
Which made the fault that we cannot correct...

Put we our quarrel to the will of heaven,
Who, when they see the hours ripe on earth,
Will rain hot vengeance on offenders' heads.
DUCHESS. Finds brotherhood in thee no sharper spur?
Hath love in thy old blood no living fire?
Edward's seven sons, whereof thyself art one,
Were as seven vials of his sacred blood,
Or seven fair branches springing from one root:
Some of those seven are dried by nature's course,
Some of those branches by the Destinies cut:
But Thomas, my dear lord, my life, my Gloucester,
One vial full of Edward's sacred blood,
One flourishing branch of his most royal root,
Is cracked, and all the precious liquor spilt,
Is hacked down, and his summer leaves all faded,
By envy's hand, and murder's bloody axe....
Ah, Gaunt, his blood was thine! that bed, that womb,
That mettle, that self mould, that fashioned thee
Made him a man; and though thou livest and breathest,
Yet art thou slain in him. Thou dost consent
In some large measure to thy father's death,
In that thou seest thy wretched brother die,
Who was the model of thy father's life ...
Call it not patience, Gaunt, it is despair.
In suff'ring thus thy brother to be slaught'red,
Thou showest the naked pathway to thy life,
Teaching stern murder how to butcher thee:
That which in mean men we intitle patience,
Is pale cold cowardice in noble breasts....
What shall I say? to safeguard thine own life,
The best way is to venge my Gloucester's death.
GAUNT. God's is the quarrel—for God's substitute,
His deputy anointed in His sight,
Hath caused his death, the which if wrongfully,
Let heaven revenge, for I may never lift
An angry arm against His minister.
DUCHESS. Where then, alas, may I complain myself?
GAUNT. To God, the widow's champion and defence.
DUCHESS. Why then, I will ... Farewell, old Gaunt.
Thou goest to Coventry, there to behold
Our cousin Hereford and fell Mowbray fight.
O, sit my husband's wrongs on Hereford's spear,
That it may enter butcher Mowbray's breast!
Or if misfortune miss the first career,
Be Mowbray's sins so heavy in his bosom,
That they may break his foaming courser's back,
And throw the rider headlong in the lists,
A caitiff recreant to my cousin Hereford!
Farewell old Gaunt, thy sometimes brother's wife
With her companion Grief must end her life.
GAUNT. Sister farewell, I must to Coventry,
As much good stay with thee, as go with me!
DUCHESS. Yet one word more—Grief boundeth where it falls,
Not with the empty hollowness, but weight:
I take my leave before I have begun,
For sorrow ends not when it seemeth done:
Commend me to thy brother, Edmund York.
Lo, this is all ... nay, yet depart not so,
Though this be all, do not so quickly go ...
I shall remember more ... Bid him—ah, what?—
With all good speed at Plashy visit me.
Alack and what shall good old York there see
But empty lodgings and unfurnished walls,
Unpeopled offices, untrodden stones?
And what hear there for welcome but my groans?
Therefore commend me, let him not come there,
To seek out sorrow that dwells every where.
Desolate, desolate, will I hence and die:
The last leave of thee takes my weeping eye.
They go

Scene 3: The lists at Coventry

Enter the Lord Marshall and the Duke Aumerle

MARSHAL. My Lord Aumerle, is Harry Hereford armed?
AUMERLE. Yea, at all points, and longs to enter in.
MARSHAL. The Duke of Norfolk, sprightfully and bold,
Stays but the summons of the appellant's trumpet.
AUMERLE. Why then, the champions are prepared and stay
For nothing but his majesty's approach.

The trumpets sound and the King enters with his nobles (Gaunt among them): when they are set, enter the Duke of Norfolk in arms defendant

K. RICHARD. Marshal, demand of yonder champion
The cause of his arrival here in arms,
Ask him his name, and orderly proceed
To swear him in the justice of his cause.
MARSHAL. In God's name and the king's way who thou art,
And why thou comest thus knightly clad in arms,
Against what man thou com'st, and what thy quarrel.
Speak truly, on thy knighthood, and thy oath,
And so defend thee heaven and thy valour!
MOWBRAY. My name is Thomas Mowbray, Duke of Norfolk,
Who hither come engagéd by my oath
(Which God defend a knight should violate!)
Both to defend my loyalty and truth,
To God, my king, and my succeeding issue,
Against the Duke of Hereford that appeals me,
And by the grace of God, and this mine arm,
To prove him, in defending of myself,
A traitor to my God, my king, and me—
And as I truly fight, defend me heaven!

The trumpets sound. Enter the Duke of Hereford appellant in armour

K. RICHARD. Marshal, ask yonder knight in arms,
Both who he is, and why he cometh hither,
Thus plated in habiliments of war,
And formally, according to our law,
Depose him in the justice of his cause.
MARSHAL. What is thy name? and wherefore com'st thou hither,
Before King Richard in his royal lists?
Against whom comest thou? and what's thy quarrel?
Speak like a true knight, so defend thee heaven!
BOLINGBROKE. Harry of Hereford, Lancaster and Derby
Am I, who ready here do stand in arms
To prove by God's grace, and my body's valour
In lists, on Thomas Mowbray Duke of Norfolk,

That he is a traitor foul and dangerous,
To God of heaven, King Richard and to me:
And as I truly fight, defend me heaven!
MARSHAL. On pain of death, no person be so bold,
Or daring-hardy, as to touch the lists,
Except the marshal and such officers
Appointed to direct these fair designs.
BOLINGBROKE. Lord marshal, let me kiss my sovereign's hand,
And bow my knee before his majesty,
For Mowbray and myself are like two men
That vow a long and weary pilgrimage,
Then let us take a ceremonious leave,
And loving farewell of our several friends.
MARSHAL. The appellant in all duty greets your highness,
And craves to kiss your hand, and take his leave.
K. RICHARD. We will descend and fold him in our arms.
Cousin of Hereford, as thy cause is right,
So be thy fortune in this royal fight . . .
Farewell, my blood, which if to-day thou shed,
Lament we may, but not revenge thee dead.
BOLINGBROKE. O, let no noble eye profane a tear
For me, if I be gored with Mowbray's spear:
As confident as is the falcon's flight
Against a bird, do I with Mowbray fight. . . .
My loving lord, I take my leave of you:
Of you, my noble cousin, Lord Aumerle—
Not sick, although I have to do with death,
But lusty, young, and cheerly drawing breath:
Lo, as at English feasts, so I regreet
The daintiest last, to make the end most sweet. . . .
O thou, the earthly author of my blood,
Whose youthful spirit in me regenerate
Doth with a twofold vigour lift me up
To reach at victory above my head . . .
Add proof unto mine armour with thy prayers,
And with thy blessings steel my lance's point,
That it may enter Mowbray's waxen coat,
And furbish new the name of John a Gaunt,
Even in the lusty haviour of his son.
GAUNT. God in thy good cause make thee prosperous,
Be swift like lightning in the execution,
And let thy blows, doubly redoubled,
Fall like amazing thunder on the casque
Of thy adverse pernicious enemy!
Rouse up thy youthful blood, be valiant and live.
BOLINGBROKE. —Mine innocency and Saint George to thrive!
MOWBRAY. However God or fortune cast my lot,
There lives or dies true to King Richard's throne.
A loyal, just, and upright gentleman:
Never did captive with a freer heart
Cast off his chains of bondage, and embrace
His golden uncontrolled enfranchisement,
More than my dancing soul doth celebrate
This feast of battle with mine adversary.
Most mighty liege, and my companion peers,
Take from my mouth the wish of happy years:
As gentle and as jocund as to jest
Go I to fight—truth hath a quiet breast.
K. RICHARD. Farewell, my lord, securely I espy
Virtue with valour couchéd in thine eye.
Order the trial, marshal, and begin.
MARSHAL. Harry of Hereford, Lancaster and Derby,
Receive thy lance, and God defend the right!
BOLINGBROKE. Strong as a tower in hope I cry 'amen'.
MARSHAL [to a knight]. Go bear this lance to Thomas, Duke of Norfolk.
1 HERALD. Harry of Hereford, Lancaster, and Derby,
Stands here, for God, his sovereign, and himself,
On pain to be found false and recreant,
To prove the Duke of Norfolk, Thomas Mowbray,
A traitor to his God, his king, and him,
And dares him to set forward to the fight.
2 HERALD. Here standeth Thomas Mowbray, Duke of Norfolk,
On pain to be found false and recreant,
Both to defend himself, and to approve
Henry of Hereford, Lancaster, and Derby,
To God, his sovereign, and to him disloyal,
Courageously, and with a free desire,
Attending but the signal to begin.
MARSHAL. Sound, trumpets, and set forward, combatants . . .

A charge sounded.

Stay, the king hath thrown his warder down.
K. RICHARD. Let them lay by their helmets and their spears,
And both return back to their chairs again.
Withdraw with us, and let the trumpets sound,
While we return these dukes what we decree. . . .

The trumpets sound a long flourish

Draw near
And list what with our council we have done . . .
For that our kingdom's earth should not be soiled
With that dear blood which it hath fosteréd;
And for our eyes do hate the dire aspect
Of civil wounds ploughed up with neighbours' sword,
And for we think the eagle-wingéd pride
Of sky-aspiring and ambitious thoughts,
With rival-hating envy, set on you
To wake our peace, which in our country's cradle
Draws the sweet infant breath of gentle sleep;
Which so roused up with boist'rous untuned drums,
With harsh-resounding trumpets' dreadful bray,
And grating shock of wrathful iron arms,
Might from our quiet confines fright fair peace,
And make us wade even in our kindred's blood;
Therefore we banish you our territories:
You, cousin Hereford, upon pain of life,
Till twice five summers have enriched our fields,
Shall not regreet our fair dominions,
But tread the stranger paths of banishment.
BOLINGBROKE. Your will be done; this must my comfort be,
That sun that warms you here, shall shine on me,
And those his golden beams to you here lent,
Shall point on me, and gild my banishment.
K. RICHARD. Norfolk, for thee remains a heavier doom,
Which I with some unwillingness pronounce.
The sly slow hours shall not determinate

The dateless limit of thy dear exile.
The hopeless word of 'never to return'
Breathe I against thee, upon pain of life.
MOWBRAY. A heavy sentence, my most sovereign liege,
And all unlooked for from your highness' mouth.
A dearer merit, not so deep a maim
As to be cast forth in the common air,
Have I deservéd at your highness' hands . . .
The language I have learnt these forty years,
My native English, now I must forego,
And now my tongue's use is to me no more
Than an unstringéd viol or a harp,
Or like a cunning instrument cased up—
Or being open, put into his hands
That knows no touch to tune the harmony:
Within my mouth you have engaoled my tongue,
Doubly portcullised with my teeth and lips,
And dull unfeeling barren ignorance
Is made my gaoler to attend on me:
I am too old to fawn upon a nurse,
Too far in years to be a pupil now,
What is thy sentence then but speechless death,
Which robs my tongue from breathing native breath?
K. RICHARD. It boots thee not to be compassionate,
After our sentence plaining comes too late.
MOWBRAY. Then thus I turn me from my country's light,
To dwell in solemn shades of endless night.
K. RICHARD. Return again, and take an oath with thee.
Lay on our royal sword your banished hands,
Swear by the duty that you owe to God
(Our part therein we banish with yourselves,)
To keep the oath that we administer:
You never shall, so help you truth and God,
Embrace each other's love in banishment,
Nor never look upon each other's face,
Nor never write, regreet, nor reconcile
This louring tempest of your home-bred hate,
Nor never by advised purpose meet,
To plot, contrive, or complot any ill,
'Gainst us, our state, our subjects, or our land.
BOLINGBROKE. I swear.
MOWBRAY. And I, to keep all this.
BILINGBROKE. Norfolk, so fare as to mine enemy . . .
By this time, had the king permitted us,
One of our souls had wand'red in the air,
Banished this frail sepulchre of our flesh,
As now our flesh is banished from this land.
Confess thy treasons ere thou fly the realm—
Since thou hast far to go, bear not along
The clogging burthen of a guilty soul.
MOWBRAY. No, Bolingbroke, if ever I were traitor,
My name be blotted from the book of life,
And I from heaven banished as from hence:
But what thou art, God, thou, and I do know,
And all too soon, I fear, the king shall rue:
Farewell, my liege. Now no way can I stray—
Save back to England all the world's my way.
He goes
K. RICHARD. Uncle, even in the glasses of thine eyes
I see thy grievéd heart: thy sad aspect
Hath from the number of his banished years
Plucked four away. [to Bolingbroke] Six frozen winters spent,
Return with welcome home from banishment.
BOLINGBROKE. How long a time lies in one little word!
Four lagging winters and four wanton springs
End in a word—such is the breath of kings.
GAUNT. I thank my liege that, in regard of me,
He shortens four years of my son's exile,
But little vantage shall I reap thereby:
For, ere the six years that he hath to spend
Can change their moons, and bring their times about,
My oil-dried lamp and time-bewasted light
Shall be extinct with age and endless night,
My inch of taper will be burnt and done,
And blindfold Death not let me see my son.
K. RICHARD. Why, uncle, thou hast many years to live.
GAUNT. But not a minute, king, that thou canst give,
Shorten my days thou canst with sullen sorrow,
And pluck nights from me, but not lend a morrow:
Thou canst help time to furrow me with age,
But stop no wrinkle in his pilgrimage:
Thy word is current with him for my death,
But dead, thy kingdom cannot buy my breath.
K. RICHARD. Thy son is banished upon good advice,
Whereto thy tongue a party-verdict gave,
Why at our justice seem'st thou then to lour?
GAUNT. Things sweet to taste, prove in digestion sour. . . .
You urged me as a judge, but I had rather,
You would have bid me argue like a father:
O, had it been a stranger, not my child,
To smooth his fault I should have been more mild:
A partial slander sought I to avoid,
And in the sentence my own life destroyed:
Alas, I looked when some of you should say,
I was too strict to make mine own away:
But you gave leave to my unwilling tongue,
Against my will to do myself this wrong.
K. RICHARD. Cousin, farewell—and uncle, bid him so,
Six years we banish him and he shall go.
Flourish. K. Richard departs with his train
AUMERLE. Cousin, farewell, what presence must not know,
From where you do remain let paper show.
MARSHAL. My lord, no leave take I, for I will ride
As far as land will let me by your side.
GAUNT. O, to what purpose dost thou hoard thy words,
That thou returnest no greeting to thy friends?
BOLINGBROKE. I have too few to take my leave of you,
When the tongue's office should be prodigal
To breathe the abundant dolour of the heart.
GAUNT. Thy grief is but thy absence for a time.
BOLINGBROKE. Joy absent, grief is present for that time.
GAUNT. What is six winters? they are quickly gone—
BOLINGBROKE. To men in joy, but grief makes one hour ten.
GAUNT. Call it a travel that thou tak'st for pleasure.
BOLINGBROKE. My heart will sigh when I miscall it so,
Which finds it an inforcéd pilgrimage.
GAUNT. The sullen passage of thy weary steps
Esteem as foil wherein thou art to set
The precious jewel of thy home return.
BOLINGBROKE. Nay, rather, every tedious stride I make
Will but remember me what a deal of world
I wander from the jewels that I love. . . .
Must I not serve a long apprenticehood

To foreign passages, and in the end,
Having my freedom, boast of nothing else,
But that I was a journeyman to grief?
GAUNT. All places that the eye of heaven visits
Are to a wise man ports and happy havens:
Teach thy necessity to reason thus—
There is no virtue like necessity.
Think not the king did banish thee,
But thou the king.... Woe doth the heavier sit,
Where it perceives it is but faintly borne:
Go, say I sent thee forth to purchase honour,
And not the king exiled thee; or suppose
Devouring pestilence hangs in our air,
And thou art flying to a fresher clime:
Look, what thy soul holds dear, imagine it
To lie that way thou goest, not whence thou com'st:
Suppose the singing birds musicians,
The grass whereon thou tread'st the presence strewed,
The flowers fair ladies, and thy steps no more
Than a delightful measure or a dance,
For gnarling sorrow hath less power to bite
The man that mocks at it and sets it light.
BOLINGBROKE. O, who can hold a fire in his hand
By thinking on the frosty Caucasus?
Or cloy the hungry edge of appetite
By bare imagination of a feast?
Or wallow naked in December snow
By thinking on fantastic summer's heat?
O no, the apprehension of the good
Gives but the greater feeling to the worse:
Fell sorrow's tooth doth never rankle more
Than when he bites, but lanceth not the sore.
GAUNT. Come, come, my son, I'll bring thee on thy way,
Had I thy youth and cause, I would not stay.
BOLINGBROKE. Then England's ground farewell, sweet soil adieu,
My mother and my nurse that bears me yet!
Where'er I wander boast of this I can,
Though banished, yet a trueborn Englishman.
They go

Scene 4: The court

Enter the King with Bagot and Green at one door, and the Lord Aumerle at another

K. RICHARD. We did observe.... Cousin Aumerle,
How far brought you high Hereford on his way?
AUMERLE. I brought high Hereford, if you call him so,
But to the next highway, and there I left him.
K. RICHARD. And say, what store of parting tears were shed?
AUMERLE. Faith, none for me, except the north-east wind
Which then blew bitterly against our faces,
Awaked the sleeping rheum, and so by chance
Did grace our hollow parting with a tear.
K. RICHARD. What said our cousin when you parted with him?
AUMERLE. 'Farewell'—
And for my heart disdainéd that my tongue
Should so profane the word, that taught me craft
To counterfeit oppression of such grief
That words seemed buried in my sorrow's grave:
Marry, would the word 'farewell' have length'ned hours,
And added years to his short banishment,
He should have had a volume of farewells:
But since it would not, he had none of me.
K. RICHARD. He is our cousin's cousin, but 'tis doubt,
When time shall call him home from banishment,
Whether our kinsman come to see his friends....
Ourself and Bushy
Observed his courtship to the common people,
How he did seem to dive into their hearts,
With humble and familiar courtesy,
What reverence he did throw away on slaves,
Wooing poor craftsmen with the craft of smiles
And patient underbearing of his fortune,
As 'twere to banish their affects with him.
Off goes his bonnet to an oyster-wench,
A brace of draymen bid God speed him well,
And had the tribute of his supple knee,
With 'Thanks, my countrymen, my loving friends'—
As were our England in reversion his,
And he our subjects' next degree in hope.
GREEN. Well, he is gone; and with him go these thoughts.
Now for the rebels which stand out in Ireland,
Expedient manage must be made, my liege,
Ere further leisure yield them further means
For their advantage and your highness' loss.
K. RICHARD. We will ourself in person to this war,
And for our coffers with too great a court
And liberal largess are grown somewhat light,
We are inforced to farm our royal realm,
The revenue whereof shall furnish us
For our affairs in hand—if that come short,
Our substitutes at home shall have blank charters,
Whereto, when they shall know what men are rich,
They shall subscribe them for large sums of gold,
And send them after to supply our wants,
For we will make for Ireland presently....

Bushy enters

What news?
BUSHY. Old John of Gaunt is grievous sick, my lord,
Suddenly taken, and hath sent post haste
To entreat your majesty to visit him.
K. RICHARD. Where lies he?
BUSHY. At Ely House.
K. RICHARD. Now put it, God, in the physician's mind,
To help him to his grave immediately!
The lining of his coffers shall make coats
To deck our soldiers for these Irish wars....
Come, gentlemen, let's all go visit him,
Pray God we may make haste and come too late!
ALL. Amen. They go

ACT 2

Scene 1: Ely House

Enter John of Gaunt sick borne in a chair, with the Duke of York, etc.

GAUNT. Will the king come that I may breathe my last
In wholesome counsel to his unstaid youth?
YORK. Vex not yourself, nor strive not with your breath,

For all in vain comes counsel to his ear.
GAUNT. O, but they say the tongues of dying men
Enforce attention like deep harmony:
Where words are scarce they are seldom spent in vain,
For they breathe truth that breathe their words in pain:
He that no more must say is listened more
Than they whom youth and ease have taught to glose,
More are men's ends marked than their lives before:
The setting sun, and music at the close,
As the last taste of sweets, is sweetest last,
Writ in remembrance more than things lost past.
Though Richard my life's counsel would not hear,
My death's sad tale may yet undeaf his ear.
YORK. No, it is stopped with other flattering sounds,
As praises, of whose taste the wise are fond,
Lascivious metres, to whose venom sound
The open ear of youth doth always listen,
Report of fashions in proud Italy,
Whose manners still our tardy apish nation
Limps after in base imitation:
Where doth the world thrust forth a vanity—
So it be new, there's no respect how vile—
That is not quickly buzzed into his ears?
Then all too late comes counsel to be heard,
Where will doth mutiny with wit's regard:
Direct not him whose way himself will choose,
'Tis breath thou lack'st, and that breath wilt thou lose.
GAUNT. Methinks I am a prophet new inspired—
And thus expiring do foretell of him—
His rash fierce blaze of riot cannot last;
For violent fires soon burn out themselves,
Small showers last long, but sudden storms are short:
He tires betimes that spurs too fast betimes:
With eager feeding food doth choke the feeder:
Light vanity, insatiate cormorant,
Consuming means, soon preys upon itself:
This royal throne of kings, this sceptred isle,
This earth of majesty, this seat of Mars,
This other Eden, demi-paradise,
This fortress built by nature for herself
Against infection and the hand of war,
This happy breed of men, this little world,
This precious stone set in the silver sea,
Which serves it in the office of a wall,
Or as a moat defensive to a house,
Against the envy of less happier lands....
This blessed plot, this earth, this realm, this England,
This nurse, this teeming womb of royal kings,
Feared by their breed, and famous by their birth,
Renownéd for their deeds as far from home,
For Christian service and true chivalry,
As is the sepulchre in stubborn Jewry
Of the world's ransom, blessed Mary's Son:
This land of such dear souls, this dear dear land,
Dear for her reputation through the world,
Is now leased out—I die pronouncing it—
Like to a tenement or pelting farm....
England, bound in with the triumphant sea,
Whose rocky shore beats back the envious siege
Of wat'ry Neptune, is now bound in with shame,
With inky blots, and rotten parchment bonds:
That England, that was wont to conquer others,
Hath made a shameful conquest of itself:
Ah, would the scandal vanish with my life,
How happy then were my ensuing death!

Enter King, Queen, Aumerle, Bushy, Green, Bagot, Ross, and Willoughby

YORK. The king is come, deal mildly with his youth,
For young hot colts, being ragged, do rage the more.
QUEEN. How fares our noble uncle, Lancaster?
K. RICHARD. What comfort, man? how is't with aged Gaunt?
GAUNT. O, how that name befits my composition!
Old Gaunt indeed, and gaunt in being old:
Within me grief hath kept a tedious fast,
And who abstains from meat that is not gaunt?
For sleeping England long time have I watched,
Watching breeds leanness, leanness is all gaunt:
The pleasure that some fathers feed upon
Is my strict fast; I mean my children's looks,
And therein fasting hast thou made me gaunt:
Gaunt am I for the grave, gaunt as a grave,
Whose hollow womb inherits nought but bones.
K. RICHARD. Can sick men play so nicely with their names?
GAUNT. No, misery makes sport to mock itself—
Since thou dost seek to kill my name in me,
I mock my name, great king, to flatter thee.
K. RICHARD. Should dying men flatter with those that live?
GAUNT. No, no, men living flatter those that die.
K. RICHARD. Thou now a-dying sayest thou flatterest me.
GAUNT. Oh no, thou diest, though I the sicker be.
K. RICHARD. I am in health, I breathe, and see thee ill.
GAUNT. Now He that made me knows I see thee ill,
Ill in myself to see, and in thee, seeing ill.
Thy death-bed is no lesser than thy land,
Wherein thou liest in reputation sick,
And thou too careless patient as thou art
Commit'st thy anointed body to the cure
Of those physicians that first wounded thee.
A thousand flatterers sit within thy crown,
Whose compass is no bigger than thy head,
And yet incagéd in so small a verge,
The waste is no whit lesser than thy land:
O, had thy grandsire with a prophet's eye
Seen how his son's son should destroy his sons.
From forth thy reach he would have laid thy shame,
Deposing thee before thou wert possessed,
Which art possessed now to depose thyself:
Why, cousin, wert thou regent of the world,
It were a shame to let this land by lease:
But for thy world enjoying but this land,
Is it not more than shame to shame it so?
Landlord of England art thou now, not king,
Thy state of law is bondslave to the law,
And thou—
K. RICHARD. A lunatic lean-witted fool,
Presuming on an ague's privilege,
Darest with thy frozen admonition
Make pale our cheek, chasing the royal blood
With fury from his native residence....
Now by my seat's right royal majesty,
Wert thou not brother to great Edward's son,

This tongue that runs so roundly in thy head
Should run thy head from thy unreverent shoulders.
GAUNT. O, spare me not, my brother Edward's son,
For that I was his father Edward's son,
That blood already, like the pelican,
Hast thou tapped out and drunkenly caroused.
My brother Gloucester, plain well-meaning soul,
Whom fair befal in heaven 'mongst happy souls,
May be a precedent and witness good ...
That thou respect'st not spilling Edward's blood!
Join with the present sickness that I have,
And thy unkindness be like crooked age,
To crop at once a too long withered flower.
Live in thy shame, but die not shame with thee!
These words hereafter thy tormentors be!
Convey me to my bed, then to my grave—
Love they to live that love and honour have.
He is borne out by attendants
K. RICHARD. And let them die that age and sullens have,
For both hast thou, and both become the grave.
YORK. I do beseech your majesty, impute his words
To wayward sickliness and age in him.
He loves you, on my life, and holds you dear
As Harry Duke of Hereford, were he here.
K. RICHARD. Right, you say true—as Hereford's love, so his,
As theirs, so mine, and all be as it is.

Northumberland enters

NORTHUMBERLAND. My liege, old Gaunt commends him to your majesty.
K. RICHARD. What says he?
NORTHUMBERLAND. Nay nothing, all is said:
His tongue is now a stringless instrument,
Words, life, and all, old Lancaster hath spent.
YORK. Be York the next that must be bankrupt so!
Though death be poor, it ends a mortal woe.
K. RICHARD. The ripest fruit first falls, and so doth he,
His time is spent, our pilgrimage must be;
So much for that.... Now for our Irish wars—
We must supplant those rough rug-headed kerns,
Which live like venom, where no venom else
But only they have privilege to live.
And for these great affairs do ask some chargè,
Towards our assistance we do seize to us ...
The plate, coin, revenues, and moveables,
Whereof our uncle Gaunt did stand possessed.
YORK. How long shall I be patient? ah, how long
Shall tender duty make me suffer wrong?
Not Gloucester's death, nor Hereford's banishment,
Not Gaunt's rebukes, nor England's private wrongs,
Nor the prevention of poor Bolingbroke
About his marriage, nor my own disgrace,
Have ever made me sour my patient cheek,
Or bend one wrinkle on my sovereign's face:
I am the last of noble Edward's sons,
Of whom thy father, Prince of Wales, was first.
In war was never lion raged more fierce,
In peace was never gentle lamb more mild,
Than was that young and princely gentleman:
His face thou hast, for even so looked he,
Accomplished with the number of thy hours;
But when he frowned it was against the French,
And not against his friends; his noble hand
Did win what he did spend, and spent not that
Which his triumphant father's hand had won:
His hands were guilty of no kindred blood,
But bloody with the enemies of his kin:
O, Richard ... York is too far gone with grief,
Or else he never would compare between....
K. RICHARD. Why, uncle, what's the matter?
YORK. O, my liege,
Pardon me, if you please—if not, I pleased
Not to be pardoned, am content withal.
Seek you to seize and gripe into your hands
The royalties and rights of banished Hereford?
Is not Gaunt dead? and doth not Hereford live?
Was not Gaunt just? and is not Harry true?
Did not the one deserve to have an heir?
Is not his heir a well-deserving son?
Take Hereford's rights away, and take from Time
His charters and his customary rights;
Let not to-morrow then ensue to-day;
Be not thyself.... for how art thou a king
But by fair sequence and succession?
Now, afore God—God forbid I say true!—
If you do wrongfully seize Hereford's rights,
Call in the letters-patents that he hath
By his attorneys-general to sue
His livery, and deny his off'red homage,
You pluck a thousand dangers on your head,
You lose a thousand well-disposèd hearts,
And prick my tender patience to those thoughts
Which honour and allegiance cannot think.
K. RICHARD. Think what you will, we seize into our hands
His plate, his goods, his money and his lands.
YORK. I'll not be by the while—my liege, farewell—
What will ensue hereof there's none can tell:
But by bad courses may be understood,
That their events can never fall out good. He goes
K. RICHARD. Go, Bushy, to the Earl of Wiltshire straight,
Bid him repair to us to Ely House,
To see this business: to-morrow next
We will for Ireland, and 'tis time, I trow.
And we create, in absence of ourself,
Our uncle York lord governor of England;
For he is just, and always loved us well ...
Come on, our queen, to-morrow must we part,
Be merry, for our time of stay is short.
He leads out the Queen, followed by Bushy, Aumerle, Green, and Bagot
NORTHUMBERLAND. Well, lords, the Duke of Lancaster is dead.
ROSS. And living too, for now his son is duke.
WILLOUGHBY. Barely in title, not in revenues.
NORTHUMBERLAND. Richly in both, if justice had her right.
ROSS. My heart is great, but it must break with silence,
Ere't be disburdened with a liberal tongue.
NORTHUMBERLAND. Nay, speak thy mind, and let him ne'er speak more
That speaks thy words again to do thee harm.
WILLOUGHBY. Tends that thou wouldst speak to the Duke of Hereford?
If it be so, out with it boldly, man.
Quick is mine ear to hear of good towards him.
ROSS. No good at all that I can do for him,
Unless you call it good to pity him,
Bereft, and gelded of his patrimony.

NORTHUMBERLAND. Now afore God 'tis shame such wrongs are borne
In him, a royal prince, and many moe
Of noble blood in this declining land.
The king is not himself, but basely led
By flatterers, and what they will inform,
Merely in hate, 'gainst any of us all,
That will the king severely prosecute
'Gainst us, our lives, our children, and our heirs.
ROSS. The commons hath he pilled with grievous taxes,
And quite lost their hearts. The nobles hath he fined
For ancient quarrels, and quite lost their hearts.
WILLOUGHBY. And daily new exactions are devised,
As blanks, benevolences, and I wot not what:
But what a God's name doth become of this?
NORTHUMBERLAND. Wars hath not wasted it, for warred he hath not,
But basely yielded upon compromise
That which his noble ancestors achieved with blows.
More hath he spent in peace than they in wars.
ROSS. The Earl of Wiltshire hath the realm in farm.
WILLOUGHBY. The king's grown bankrupt like a broken man.
NORTHUMBERLAND. Reproach and dissolution hangeth over him.
ROSS. He hath not money for these Irish wars,
His burthenous taxations notwithstanding,
But by the robbing of the banished duke.
NORTHUMBERLAND. His noble kinsman—most degenerate king!
But, lords, we hear this fearful tempest sing,
Yet seek no shelter to avoid the storm:
We see the wind sit sore upon our sails,
And yet we strike not, but securely perish.
ROSS. We see the very wrack that we must suffer,
And unavoided is the danger now,
For suffering so the causes of our wrack.
NORTHUMBERLAND. Not so, even through the hollow eyes of death
I spy life peering, but I dare not say
How near the tidings of our comfort is.
WILLOUGHBY. Nay, let us share thy thoughts as thou dost ours.
ROSS. Be confident to speak, Northumberland,
We three are but thyself, and speaking so
Thy words are but as thoughts, therefore be bold.
NORTHUMBERLAND. Then thus—I have from le Port Blanc,
A bay in Britain, received intelligence
That Harry Duke of Hereford, Rainold Lord Cobham,
[The son of Richard Earl of Arundel,]
That late broke from the Duke of Exeter,
His brother, Archbishop late of Canterbury,
Sir Thomas Erpingham, Sir John Ramston,
Sir John Norbery, Sir Robert Waterton and Francis Coint;
All these, well furnished by the Duke of Britain,
With eight tall ships, three thousand men of war,
Are making hither with all due expedience,
And shortly mean to touch our northern shore:
Perhaps they had ere this, but that they stay
The first departing of the king for Ireland....
If then we shall shake off our slavish yoke,
Imp out our drooping country's broken wing,
Redeem from broking pawn the blemished crown,
Wipe off the dust that hides our sceptre's gilt,
And make high majesty look like itself,
Away with me in post to Ravenspurgh:
But if you faint, as fearing to do so,
Stay, and be secret, and myself will go.
ROSS. To horse, to horse! urge doubts to them that fear.
WILLOUGHBY. Hold out my horse, and I will first be there. They go

Scene 2: Windsor Castle

Enter the Queen, Bushy, Bagot

BUSHY. Madam, your majesty is too much sad.
You promised, when you parted with the king,
To lay aside life-harming heaviness,
And entertain a cheerful disposition.
QUEEN. To please the king I did—to please myself
I cannot do it; yet I know no cause
Why I should welcome such a guest as grief,
Save bidding farewell to so sweet a guest
As my sweet Richard: yet again methinks
Some unborn sorrow ripe in Fortune's womb
Is coming towards me, and my inward soul
With nothing trembles, yet at something grieves,
More than with parting from my lord the king.
BUSHY. Each substance of a grief hath twenty shadows,
Which shows like grief itself, but is not so:
For Sorrow's eye glazéd with blinding tears,
Divides one thing entire to many objects,
Like perspectives, which rightly gazed upon
Show nothing but confusion; eyed awry
Distinguish form: so your sweet majesty,
Looking awry upon your lord's departure,
Find shapes of grief more than himself to wail,
Which looked on as it is, is nought but shadows
Of what it is not; then, thrice-gracious queen,
More than your lord's departure weep not—more is not seen,
Or if it be, 'tis with false Sorrow's eye,
Which, for things true, weeps things imaginary.
QUEEN. It may be so; but yet my inward soul
Persuades me it is otherwise: howe'er it be,
I cannot but be sad; so heavy sad,
As, though on thinking on no thought I think,
Makes me with heavy nothing faint and shrink.
BUSHY. 'Tis nothing but conceit, my gracious lady.
QUEEN. 'Tis nothing less: conceit is still derived
From some forefather grief. Mine is not so,
For nothing hath begot my something grief,
Or something hath the nothing that I grieve—
'Tis in reversion that I do possess—
But what it is that is not yet known, what
I cannot name, 'tis nameless woe I wot.

Green enters

GREEN. God save your majesty! and well met, gentlemen.
I hope the king is not yet shipped for Ireland.
QUEEN. Why hopest thou so? 'tis better hope he is,
For his designs crave haste, his haste good hope:
Then wherefore dost thou hope he is not shipped?
GREEN. That he, our hope, might have retired his power,
And driven into despair an enemy's hope,

Who strongly hath set footing in this land.
The banished Bolingbroke repeals himself,
And with uplifted arms is safe arrived
At Ravenspurgh.
QUEEN. Now God in heaven forbid!
GREEN. Ah madam, 'tis too true, and that is worse . . .
The Lord Northumberland, his son young Henry Percy,
The Lords of Ross, Beaumond, and Willoughby,
With all their powerful friends are fled to him.
BUSHY. Why have you not proclaimed Northumberland
And all the rest revolted faction traitors?
GREEN. We have, whereupon the Earl of Worcester
Hath broken his staff, resigned his stewardship,
And all the household servants fled with him
To Bolingbroke.
QUEEN. So, Green, thou art the midwife to my woe,
And Bolingbroke my sorrow's dismal heir.
Now hath my soul brought forth her prodigy,
And I, a gasping new-delivered mother,
Have woe to woe, sorrow to sorrow joined.
BUSHY. Despair, not, madam.
QUEEN. Who shall hinder me?
I will despair, and be at enmity
With cozening Hope—he is a flatterer,
A parasite, a keeper back of Death,
Who gently would dissolve the bands of life,
Which false Hope lingers in extremity.

York enters

GREEN. Here comes the Duke of York.
QUEEN. With signs of war about his aged neck.
O, full of careful business are his looks!
Uncle, for God's sake, speak comfortable words.
YORK. Should I do so, I should belie my thoughts.
Comfort's in heaven, and we are on the earth,
Where nothing lives but crosses, cares, and grief:
Your husband he is gone to save far off,
Whilst others come to make him lose at home:
Here am I left to underprop his land,
Who weak with age cannot support myself.
Now comes the sick hour that his surfeit made,
Now shall he try his friends that flattered him.

A servingman enters

SERVINGMAN. My lord, your son was gone before I came.
YORK. He was? Why, so! go all which way it will!
The nobles they are fled, the commons cold,
And will, I fear, revolt on Hereford's side. . . .
Sirrah,
Get thee to Plashy, to my sister Gloucester,
Bid her send me presently a thousand pound.
Hold, take my ring.
SERVINGMAN. My lord, I had forgot to tell your lordship:
To-day as I came by I calléd there—
But I shall grieve you to report the rest.
YORK. What is't, knave?
SERVINGMAN. An hour before I came the duchess died.
YORK. God for his mercy, what a tide of woes
Comes rushing on this woeful land at once!
I know not what to do: I would to God
(So my untruth had not provoked him to it)
The king had cut off my head with my brother's. . . .
What, are there no posts dispatched for Ireland?
How shall we do for money for these wars?
Come, sister—cousin, I would say, pray pardon me:
Go, fellow, get thee home, provide some carts,
And bring away the armour that is there. . . .
The servingman goes
Gentlemen, will you go muster men?
If I know
How or which way to order these affairs,
Thus thrust disorderly into my hands,
Never believe me . . . Both are my kinsmen—
Th'one is my sovereign, whom both my oath
And duty bids defend; th'other again
Is my kinsman, whom the king hath wronged,
Whom conscience and my kindred bids to right. . . .
Well, somewhat we must do. . . . Come, cousin, I'll Dispose of you:
Gentlemen, go, muster up your men,
And meet me presently at Berkeley:
I should to Plashy too,
But time will not permit: all is uneven,
And every thing is left at six and seven.
He leads the Queen out
BUSHY. The wind sits fair for news to go to Ireland,
But none returns. For us to levy power
Proportionable to the enemy
Is all unpossible.
GREEN. Besides, our nearness to the king in love
Is near the hate of those love not the king.
BAGOT. And that is the wavering commons, for their love
Lies in their purses, and whoso empties them,
By so much fills their hearts with deadly hate.
BUSHY. Wherein the king stands generally condemned.
BAGOT. If judgement lie in them, then so do we,
Because we ever have been near the king.
GREEN. Well, I will for refuge straight to Bristol Castle—
The Earl of Wiltshire is already there.
BUSHY. Thither will I with you, for little office
The hateful commons will perform for us,
Except like curs to tear us all to pieces:
Will you go along with us?
BAGOT. No, I will to Ireland to his majesty.
Farewell—if heart's presages be not vain,
We three here part that ne'er shall meet again.
BUSHY. That's as York thrives to beat back Bolingbroke.
GREEN. Alas, poor duke! the task he undertakes
Is numb'ring sands, and drinking oceans dry—
Where one on his side fights, thousands will fly:
Farewell at once, for once, for all, and ever.
BUSHY. Well, we may meet again.
BAGOT. I fear me, never.
They go

Scene 3: Near Berkeley Castle

Enter Bolingbroke and Northumberland with forces

BOLINGBROKE. How far is it, my lord, to Berkeley now?
NORTHUMBERLAND. Believe me, noble lord,
I am a stranger here in Gloucestershire.
These high wild hills and rough uneven ways
Draws out our miles and makes them wearisome,

And yet your fair discourse hath been as sugar,
Making the hard way sweet and delectable.
But I bethink me what a weary way
From Ravenspurgh to Cotswold will be found
In Ross and Willoughby, wanting your company,
Which I protest hath very much beguiled
The tediousness and process of my travel:
But theirs is sweet'ned with the hope to have
The present benefit which I possess,
And hope to joy is little less in joy
Than hope enjoyed: by this the weary lords
Shall make their way seem short, as mine hath done
By sight of what I have, your noble company.
BOLINGBROKE. Of much less value is my company
Than your good words.... But who comes here?

Harry Percy enters

NORTHUMBERLAND. It is my son, young Harry Percy,
Sent from my brother Worcester, whencesoever....
Harry, how fares your uncle?
PERCY. I had thought, my lord, to have learned his health of you.
NORTHUMBERLAND. Why, is he not with the queen?
PERCY. No, my good lord, he hath forsook the court,
Broken his staff of office, and dispersed
The household of the king.
NORTHUMBERLAND. What was his reason?
He was not so resolved, when last we spake together.
PERCY. Because your lordship was proclaiméd traitor.
But he, my lord is gone to Ravenspurgh,
To offer service to the Duke of Hereford,
And sent me over by Berkeley to discover
What power the Duke of York has levied there,
Then with directions to repair to Ravenspurgh.
NORTHUMBERLAND. Have you forgot the Duke of Hereford, boy?
PERCY. No, my good lord, for that is not forgot
Which ne'er I did remember—to my knowledge
I never in my life did look on him.
NORTHUMBERLAND. Then learn to know him now. This is the duke.
PERCY. My gracious lord, I tender you my service,
Such as it is, being tender, raw, and young,
Which elder days shall ripen and confirm
To more approvéd service and desert.
BOLINGBROKE. I thank thee, gentle Percy, and be sure
I count myself in nothing else so happy
As in a soul rememb'ring my good friends,
And as my fortune ripens with thy love,
It shall be still thy true love's recompense.
My heart this covenant makes, my hand thus seals it.
NORTHUMBERLAND. How far is it to Berkeley? And what stir
Keep good old York there with his men of war?
PERCY. There stands the castle, by yon tuft of trees,
Manned with three hundred men, as I have heard,
And in it are the Lords of York, Berkeley, and Seymour—
None else of name and noble estimate.

Ross and Willoughby enter

NORTHUMBERLAND. Here come the Lords of Ross and Willoughby,
Bloody with spurring, fiery-red with haste.
BOLINGBROKE. Welcome, my lords. I wot your love pursues
A banished traitor: all my treasury
Is yet but unfelt thanks, which more enriched
Shall be your love and labour's recompense.
ROSS. Your presence makes us rich, most noble lord.
WILLOUGHBY. And far surmounts our labour to attain it.
BOLINGBROKE. Evermore thank's the exchequer of the poor,
Which till my infant fortune comes to years,
Stands for my bounty: but who comes here?

Berkeley approaches

NORTHUMBERLAND. It is my Lord of Berkeley, as I guess.
BERKELEY. My Lord of Hereford, my message is to you.
BOLINGBROKE. My lord, my answer is to 'Lancaster,'
And I am come to seek that name in England,
And I must find that title in your tongue,
Before I make reply to aught you say.
BERKELEY. Mistake me not, my lord, 'tis not my meaning
To raze one title of your honour out:
To you, my lord, I come, what lord you will,
From the most gracious regent of this land,
The Duke of York; to know what pricks you on
To take advantage of the absent time,
And fright our native peace with self-borne arms.

York enters, with a retinue

BOLINGBROKE. I shall not need transport my words by you,
Here comes his grace in person.
My noble uncle! He kneels
YORK. Show me thy humble heart, and not thy knee,
Whose duty is deceivable and false.
BOLINGBROKE. My gracious uncle!
YORK. Tut, tut!
Grace me no grace, nor uncle me no uncle,
I am no traitor's uncle, and that word 'grace'
In an ungracious mouth is but profane:
Why have those banished and forbidden legs
Dared once to touch a dust of England's ground?
But then more 'why?' why have they dared to march
So many miles upon her peaceful bosom,
Frighting her pale-faced villages with war,
And ostentation of despiséd arms?
Com'st thou because the anointed king is hence?
Why, foolish boy, the king is left behind,
And in my loyal bosom lies his power.
Were I but now the lord of such hot youth,
As when brave Gaunt, thy father, and myself,
Rescued the Black Prince, that young Mars of men,
From forth the ranks of many thousand French,
O, then how quickly should this arm of mine,
Now prisoner to the palsy, chastise thee,
And minister correction to thy fault!
BOLINGBROKE. My gracious uncle, let me know my fault,
On what condition stands it and wherein?
YORK. Even in condition of the worst degree—
In gross rebellion and detested treason.

Thou art a banished man, and here art come,
Before the expiration of thy time,
In braving arms against thy sovereign.
BOLINGBROKE. As I was banished, I was banished Hereford,
But as I come, I come for Lancaster....
And, noble uncle, I beseech your grace
Look on my wrongs with an indifferent eye:
You are my father, for methinks in you
I see old Gaunt alive.... O then my father,
Will you permit that I shall stand condemned
A wandering vagabond, my rights and royalties
Plucked from my arms perforce ... and given away
To upstart unthrifts? Wherefore was I born?
If that my cousin king be king in England,
It must be granted I am Duke of Lancaster:
You have a son, Aumerle, my noble cousin,
Had you first died, and he been thus trod down,
He should have found his uncle Gaunt a father,
To rouse his wrongs and chase them to the bay...
I am denied to sue my livery here,
And yet my letters-patent give me leave....
My father's goods are all distrained and sold,
And these and all are all amiss employed....
What would you have me do? I am a subject;
And I challenge law. Attorneys are denied me,
And therefore personally I lay my claim
To my inheritance of free descent.
NORTHUMBERLAND. The noble duke hath been too much abused.
ROSS. It stands your grace upon to do him right.
WILLOUGHBY. Base men by his endowments are made great.
YORK. My lords of England, let me tell you this:
I have had feeling of my cousin's wrongs,
And laboured all I could to do him right:
But in this kind to come, in braving arms,
Be his own carver and cut out his way,
To find out right with wrong, it may not be:
And you that do abet him in this kind
Cherish rebellion, and are rebels all.
NORTHUMBERLAND. The noble duke hath sworn his coming is
But for his own; and for the right of that
We all have strongly sworn to give him aid:
And let him never see joy that breaks that oath.
YORK. Well, well, I see the issue of these arms.
I cannot mend it, I must needs confess,
Because my power is weak and all ill left:
But if I could, by Him that gave me life,
I would attach you all, and make you stoop
Unto the sovereign mercy of the king;
But, since I cannot, be it known unto you,
I do remain as neuter. So, fare you well,
Unless you please to enter in the castle,
And there repose you for this night.
BOLINGBROKE. An offer, uncle, that we will accept.
But we must win your grace to go with us
To Bristow castle, which, they say, is held
By Bushy, Bagot, and their complices,
The caterpillars of the commonwealth,
Which I have sworn to weed and pluck away.
YORK. It may be I will go with you—but yet I'll pause,
For I am loath to break our country's laws.
Nor friends nor foes, to me welcome you are:
Things past redress are now with me past care.
They go

Scene 4: A camp in Wales

Enter Salisbury, and a Welsh Captain

CAPTAIN. My Lord of Salisbury, we have stayed ten days,
And hardly kept our countrymen together,
And yet we hear no tidings from the king,
Therefore we will disperse ourselves. Farewell.
SALISBURY. Stay yet another day, thou trusty Welshman.
The king reposeth all his confidence in thee.
CAPTAIN. 'Tis thought the king is dead; we will not stay.
The bay-trees in our country are all withered,
And meteors fright the fixéd stars of heaven,
The pale-faced moon looks bloody on the earth,
And lean-looked prophets whisper fearful change,
Rich men look sad, and ruffians dance and leap—
The one in fear to lose what they enjoy,
The other to enjoy by rage and war:
These signs forerun the death or fall of kings....
Farewell. Our countrymen are gone and fled,
As well assured Richard their king is dead. He goes
SALISBURY. Ah, Richard! with the eyes of heavy mind
I see thy glory like a shooting star
Fall to the base earth from the firmament.
Thy sun sets weeping in the lowly west,
Witnessing storms to come, woe, and unrest.
Thy friends are fled to wait upon thy foes,
And crossly to thy good all fortune goes. He goes

ACT 3

Scene 1: Bristol. Before the castle

Enter Bolingbroke, York, Northumberland, with Bushy and Green, prisoners

BOLINGBROKE. Bring forth these men....
Bushy and Green, I will not vex your souls,
Since presently your souls must part your bodies,
With too much urging your pernicious lives,
For 'twere no charity; yet to wash your blood
From off my hands, here in the view of men,
I will unfold some causes of your deaths:
You have misled a prince, a royal king,
A happy gentleman in blood and lineaments,
By you unhappied and disfigured clean.
You have in manner with your sinful hours
Made a divorce betwixt his queen and him,
Broke the possession of a royal bed,
And stained the beauty of a fair queen's cheeks
With tears, drawn from her eyes by your foul wrongs.
Myself, a prince by fortune of my birth,
Near to the king in blood, and near in love,
Till you did make him misinterpret me,
Have stooped my neck under your injuries,
And sighed my English breath in foreign clouds,
Eating the bitter bread of banishment,
Whilst you have fed upon my signories,
Disparked my parks, and felled my forest woods;
From my own windows torn my household coat,
Razed out my imprese, leaving me no sign,

Save men's opinions and my living blood,
To show the world I am a gentleman....
This and much more, much more than twice all this,
Condemns you to the death ... See them delivered over
To execution and the hand of death.
BUSHY. More welcome is the stroke of death to me
Than Bolingbroke to England. Lords, farewell.
GREEN. My comfort is, that heaven will take our souls,
And plague injustice with the pains of hell.
BOLINGBROKE. My Lord Northumberland, see them dispatched ...

Northumberland and others depart with the prisoners

Uncle, you say, the queen is at your house,
For God's sake fairly let her be entreated,
Tell her I send to her my kind commends;
Take special care my greetings be delivered.
YORK. A gentleman of mine I have dispatched
With letters of your love to her at large.
BOLINGBROKE. Thanks, gentle uncle ... Come, lords, away,
To fight with Glendower and his complices.
Awhile to work, and after holiday. They go

Scene 2: Near the coast of Wales

Enter King Richard, the Bishop of Carlisle, Aumerle, and Soldiers

K. RICHARD. Barkloughly castle call they this at hand?
AUMERLE. Yea, my lord. How brooks your grace the air,
After your late tossing on the breaking seas?
K. RICHARD. Needs must I like it well. I weep for joy
To stand upon my kingdom once again:
Dear earth, I do salute thee with my hand,
Though rebels wound thee with their horses' hoofs:
As a long-parted mother with her child
Plays fondly with her tears and smiles in meeting;
So, weeping, smiling, greet I thee, my earth,
And do thee favours with my royal hands;
Feed not thy sovereign's foe, my gentle earth,
Nor with thy sweets comfort his ravenous sense,
But let thy spiders that suck up thy venom
And heavy-gaited toads lie in their way,
Doing annoyance to the treacherous feet,
Which with usurping steps do trample thee.
Yield stinging nettles to mine enemies:
And when they from thy bosom pluck a flower,
Guard it, I pray thee, with a lurking adder,
Whose double tongue may with a mortal touch
Throw death upon thy sovereign's enemies....
Mock not my senseless conjuration, lords,
This earth shall have a feeling, and these stones
Prove arméd soldiers, ere her native king
Shall falter under foul rebellion's arms.
CARLISLE. Fear not, my lord. That Power that made you king,
Hath power to keep you king in spite of all.
The means that heaven yields must be embraced,
And not neglected; else, if heaven would,
And we will not, heaven's offer we refuse,
The proffered means of succour and redress.
AUMERLE. He means, my lord, that we are too remiss,
Whilst Bolingbroke, through our security,
Grows strong and great in substance and in power.
K. RICHARD. Discomfortable cousin! know'st thou not
That when the searching eye of heaven is hid,
Behind the globe, that lights the lower world,
Then thieves and robbers range abroad unseen,
In murders and in outrage, boldly here,
But when from under this terrestrial ball
He fires the proud tops of the eastern pines,
And darts his light through every guilty hole,
Then murders, treasons, and detested sins,
The cloak of night being plucked from off their backs,
Stand bare and naked, trembling at themselves?
So when this thief, this traitor, Bolingbroke,
Who all this while hath revelled in the night,
Whilst we were wand'ring with the antipodes,
Shall see us rising in our throne the east,
His treasons will sit blushing in his face,
Not able to endure the sight of day,
But self-affrighted tremble at his sin.
Not all the water in the rough rude sea
Can wash the balm off from an anointed king.
The breath of worldly men cannot depose
The deputy elected by the Lord,
For every man that Bolingbroke hath pressed
To lift shrewd steel against our golden crown,
God for his Richard hath in heavenly pay
A glorious angel; then, if angels fight,
Weak men must fall, for heaven still guards the right.

Salisbury enters

Welcome, my lord: how far off lies your power?
SALISBURY. Nor near nor farther off, my gracious lord,
Than this weak arm; discomfort guides my tongue,
And bids me speak of nothing but despair.
One day too late, I fear me, noble lord,
Hath clouded all thy happy days on earth:
O, call back yesterday, bid time return,
And thou shalt have twelve thousand fighting men!
To-day, to-day, unhappy day too late,
O'erthrows thy joys, friends, fortune and thy state,
For all the Welshmen, hearing thou wert dead,
Are gone to Bolingbroke, dispersed and fled.
AUMERLE. Comfort, my liege, why looks your grace so pale?
K. RICHARD. But now the blood of twenty thousand men
Did triumph in my face, and they are fled:
And till so much blood thither come again,
Have I not reason to look pale and dead?
All souls that will be safe, fly from my side,
For time hath set a blot upon my pride.
AUMERLE. Comfort, my liege, remember who you are.
K. RICHARD. I had forgot myself, am I not king?
Awake thou coward majesty! thou sleepest.
Is not the king's name twenty thousand names?
Arm, arm, my name! a puny subject strikes
At thy great glory. Look not to the ground,
Ye favourites of a king, are we not high?
High be our thoughts. I know my uncle York
Hath power enough to serve our turn: but who comes here?

Scroop enters

SCROOP. More health and happiness betide my liege
Than can my care-tuned tongue deliver him.
K. RICHARD. Mine ear is open, and my heart prepared,
The worst is worldly loss thou canst unfold.
Say, is my kingdom lost? why, 'twas my care,
And what loss is it to be rid of care?
Strives Bolingbroke to be as great as we?
Greater he shall not be. If he serve God,
We'll serve him too, and be his fellow so:
Revolt our subjects? that we cannot mend,
They break their faith to God as well as us:
Cry, woe, destruction, ruin, and decay,
The worst is death, and death will have his day.
SCROOP. Glad am I, that your highness is so armed
To bear the tidings of calamity.
Like an unseasonable stormy day,
Which makes the silver rivers drown their shores,
As if the world were all dissolved to tears;
So high above his limits swells the rage
Of Bolingbroke, covering your fearful land
With hard bright steel, and hearts harder than steel.
White-beards have armed their thin and hairless scalps
Against thy majesty: boys, with women's voices,
Strive to speak big and clap their female joints
In stiff unwieldy arms against thy crown,
Thy very beadsmen learn to bend their bows
Of double-fatal yew against thy state,
Yea, distaff-women manage rusty bills
Against thy seat. Both young and old rebel,
And all goes worse than I have power to tell.
K. RICHARD. Too well, too well thou tell'st a tale so ill.
Where is the Earl of Wiltshire? where is Bagot?
What is become of Bushy? where is Green?
That they have let the dangerous enemy
Measure our confines with such peaceful steps?
If we prevail, their heads shall pay for it:
I warrant they have made peace with Bolingbroke.
SCROOP. Peace have they made with him, indeed, my lord.
K. RICHARD. O villains, vipers, damned without redemption!
Dogs, easily won to fawn on any man!
Snakes, in my heart-blood warmed, that sting my heart!
Three Judases, each one thrice worse than Judas!
Would they make peace? terrible hell
Make war upon their spotted souls for this!
SCROOP. Sweet love, I see, changing his property,
Turns to the sourest and most deadly hate.
Again uncurse their souls, their peace is made
With heads and not with hands, those whom you curse
Have felt the worst of death's destroying wound,
And lie full low graved in the hollow ground.
AUMERLE. Is Bushy, Green, and the Earl of Wiltshire dead?
SCROOP. Ay, all of them at Bristow lost their heads.
AUMERLE. Where is the duke my father with his power?
K. RICHARD. No matter where, of comfort no man speak:
Let's talk of graves, of worms, and epitaphs,
Make dust our paper, and with rainy eyes
Write sorrow on the bosom of the earth....
Let's choose executors and talk of wills:
And yet not so, for what can we bequeath,
Save our deposéd bodies to the ground?
Our lands, our lives, and all are Bolingbroke's,
And nothing can we call our own, but death;
And that small model of the barren earth,
Which serves as paste and cover to our bones.
For God's sake let us sit upon the ground,
And tell sad stories of the death of kings—
How some have been deposed, some slain in war,
Some haunted by the ghosts they have deposed,
Some poisoned by their wives, some sleeping killed;
All murdered—for within the hollow crown
That rounds the mortal temples of a king,
Keeps Death his court, and there the antic sits,
Scoffing his state and grinning at his pomp,
Allowing him a breath, a little scene,
To monarchize, be feared, and kill with looks,
Infusing him with self and vain conceit,
As if this flesh which walls about our life,
Were brass impregnable: and humoured thus,
Comes at the last, and with a little pin
Bores through his castle wall, and farewell king!
Cover your heads, and mock not flesh and blood
With solemn reverence, throw away respect,
Tradition, form, and ceremonious duty,
For you have but mistook me all this while:
I live with bread like you, feel want,
Taste grief, need friends—subjected thus,
How can you say to me, I am a king?
CARLISLE. My lord, wise men ne'er sit and wail their woes,
But presently prevent the ways to wail.
To fear the foe, since fear oppresseth strength,
Gives in your weakness strength unto your foe,
And so your follies fight against yourself:
Fear and be slain, no worse can come to fight,
And fight and die is death destroying death,
Where fearing dying pays death servile breath.
AUMERLE. My father hath a power, inquire of him,
And learn to make a body of a limb.
K. RICHARD. Thou chid'st me well—proud Bolingbroke, I come
To change blows with thee for our day of doom:
This ague fit of fear is over-blown.
An easy task it is to win our own....
Say, Scroop, where lies our uncle with his power?
Speak sweetly, man, although thy looks be sour.
SCROOP. Men judge by the complexion of the sky
The state and inclination of the day;
So may you by my dull and heavy eye,
My tongue hath but a heavier tale to say.
I play the torturer by small and small
To lengthen out the worst that must be spoken:
Your uncle York is joined with Bolingbroke,
And all the northern castles yielded up,
And all your southern gentlemen in arms
Upon his party.
K. RICHARD. Thou hast said enough:
To Aumerle
Beshrew thee, cousin, which didst lead me forth
Of that sweet way I was in to despair!
What say you now? what comfort have we now?
By heaven I'll hate him everlastingly
That bids me be of comfort any more....
Go to Flint castle, there I'll pine away—
A king, woe's slave, shall kingly woe obey:

That power I have, discharge, and let them go
To ear the land that hath some hope to grow,
For I have none. Let no man speak again,
To alter this, for counsel is but vain.
AUMERLE. My liege, one word.
K. RICHARD. He does me double wrong,
That wounds me with the flatteries of his tongue....
Discharge my followers, let them hence away,
From Richard's night, to Bolingbroke's fair day.
They go

Scene 3: Wales. Before Flint Castle

Enter marching with drum and colours, Bolingbroke, York, Northumberland, and their forces

BOLINGBROKE. So that by this intelligence we learn
The Welshmen are dispersed, and Salisbury
Is gone to meet the king, who lately landed
With some few private friends upon this coast.
NORTHUMBERLAND. The news is very fair and good, my lord,
Richard, not far from hence, hath hid his head.
YORK. It would beseem the Lord Northumberland,
To say 'King Richard': alack the heavy day,
When such a sacred king should hide his head.
NORTHUMBERLAND. Your grace mistakes; only to be brief
Left I his title out.
YORK. The time hath been,
Would you have been so brief with him, he would
Have been so brief with you, to shorten you,
For taking so the head, your whole head's length.
BOLINGBROKE. Mistake not, uncle, further than you should.
YORK. Take not, good cousin, further than you should,
Lest you mis-take: the heavens are o'er our heads.
BOLINGBROKE. I know it, uncle, and oppose not myself
Against their will.... But who comes here?

Enter Percy

Welcome, Harry; what, will not this castle yield?
PERCY. The castle royally is manned, my lord,
Against thy entrance.
BOLINGBROKE. Royally!
Why, it contains no king?
PERCY. Yes, my good lord,
It doth contain a king. King Richard lies
Within the limits of yon lime and stone,
And with him are the Lord Aumerle, Lord Salisbury,
Sir Stephen Scroop, besides a clergyman
Of holy reverence, who I cannot learn.
NORTHUMBERLAND. O belike it is the Bishop of Carlisle.
BOLINGBROKE. Noble lord, To Northumberland
Go to the rude ribs of that ancient castle,
Through brazen trumpet send the breath of parley
Into his ruined ears, and thus deliver....
Henry Bolingbroke
On both his knees doth kiss King Richard's hand,
And sends allegiance and true faith of heart
To his most royal person: hither come
Even at his feet to lay my arms and power;
Provided that my banishment repealed
And lands restored again be freely granted;
If not, I'll use the advantage of my power,
And lay the summer's dust with showers of blood,
Rained from the wounds of slaughtered Englishmen,
The which, how far off from the mind of Bolingbroke
It is such crimson tempest should bedrench
The fresh green lap of fair King Richard's land,
My stooping duty tenderly shall show:
Go, signify as much, while here we march
Upon the grassy carpet of this plain ...
Northumberland advances to the castle, with a trumpeter
Let's march without the noise of threat'ning drum,
That from this castle's tattered battlements
Our fair appointments may be well perused....
Methinks, King Richard and myself should meet
With no less terror than the elements
Of fire and water, when their thund'ring shock
At meeting tears the cloudy cheeks of heaven.
Be he the fire, I'll be the yielding water;
The rage be his, whilst on the earth I rain
My waters—on the earth, and not on him....
March on, and mark King Richard how he looks.

Northumberland sounds a parle without, and is answered by another trumpet within: then a flourish. Enter on the walls King Richard, the Bishop of Carlisle, Aumerle, Scroop, and Salisbury

See, see, King Richard doth himself appear,
As doth the blushing discontented sun
From out the fiery portal of the east,
When he perceives the envious clouds are bent
To dim his glory, and to stain the track
Of his bright passage to the occident.
YORK. Yet looks he like a king! behold his eye,
As bright as is the eagle's, lightens forth
Controlling majesty; alack, alack, for woe,
That any harm should stain so fair a show!
K. RICHARD [to Northumberland]. We are amazed, and thus long have we stood
To watch the fearful bending of thy knee,
Because we thought ourself thy lawful king:
And if we be, how dare thy joints forget
To pay their awful duty to our presence?
If we be not, show us the hand of God
That hath dismissed us from our stewardship,
For well we know no hand of blood and bone
Can gripe the sacred handle of our sceptre,
Unless he do profane, steal, or usurp.
And though you think that all, as you have done,
Have torn their souls, by turning them from us,
And we are barren and bereft of friends ...
Yet know, my master, God omnipotent,
Is mustering in his clouds, on our behalf,
Armies of pestilence, and they shall strike
Your children yet unborn, and unbegot,
That lift your vassal hands against my head,
And threat the glory of my precious crown....
Tell Bolingbroke—for yon methinks he stands—
That every stride he makes upon my land,
Is dangerous treason: he is come to open
The purple testament of bleeding war:
But ere the crown he looks for live in peace,
Ten thousand bloody crowns of mothers' sons
Shall ill become the flower of England's face,
Change the complexion of her maid-pale peace

To scarlet indignation and bedew
Her pasture's grass with faithful English blood.
NORTHUMBERLAND. The king of heaven forbid our lord the king
Should so with civil and uncivil arms
Be rushed upon! Thy thrice noble cousin,
Harry Bolingbroke, doth humbly kiss thy hand,
And by the honourable tomb he swears,
That stands upon your royal grandsire's bones,
And by the royalties of both your bloods,
Currents that spring from one most gracious head,
And by the buried hand of warlike Gaunt,
And by the worth and honour of himself,
Comprising all that may be sworn or said,
His coming hither hath no further scope
Than for his lineal royalties, and to beg
Enfranchisement immediate on his knees,
Which on thy royal party granted once,
His glittering arms he will commend to rust,
His barbéd steeds to stables, and his heart
To faithful service of your majesty....
This swears he, as he is a prince, is just;
And, as I am a gentleman, I credit him.
K. RICHARD. Northumberland, say thus the king returns—
His noble cousin is right welcome hither,
And all the number of his fair demands
Shall be accomplished without contradiction.
With all the gracious utterance thou hast,
Speak to his gentle hearing kind commends....
Northumberland retires to Bolingbroke
[to Aumerle] We do debase ourselves, cousin, do we not,
To look so poorly, and to speak so fair?
Shall we call back Northumberland and send
Defiance to the traitor, and so die?
AUMERLE. No, good my lord; let's fight with gentle words,
Till time lend friends, and friends their helpful swords.
K. RICHARD. O God! O God! that e'er this tongue of mine,
That laid the sentence of dread banishment
On yon proud man, should take it off again
With words of sooth! O, that I were as great
As is my grief, or lesser than my name!
Or that I could forget what I have been!
Or not remember what I must be now!
Swell'st thou, proud heart? I'll give thee scope to beat,
Since foes have scope to beat both thee and me.
AUMERLE. Northumberland comes back from Bolingbroke.
K. RICHARD. What must the king do now? must he submit?
The king shall do it: must he be deposed?
The king shall be contented: must he lose
The name of king? a God's name let it go:
I'll give my jewels for a set of beads:
My gorgeous palace for a hermitage:
My gay apparel for an almsman's gown:
My figured goblets for a dish of wood:
My sceptre for a palmer's walking-staff:
My subjects for a pair of carvéd saints,
And my large kingdom for a little grave,
A little little grave, an obscure grave,
Or I'll be buried in the king's highway,
Some way of common trade, where subjects' feet
May hourly trample on their sovereign's head;
For on my heart they tread now whilst I live:
And buried once, why not upon my head?
Aumerle, thou weep'st (my tender-hearted cousin!),
We'll make foul weather with despiséd tears;
Our sighs and they shall lodge the summer corn,
And make a dearth in this revolting land:
Or shall we play the wantons with our woes,
And make some pretty match with shedding tears?
As thus to drop them still upon one place,
Till they have fretted us a pair of graves
Within the earth, and therein laid ... there lies
Two kinsmen digged their graves with weeping eyes!
Would not this ill do well? Well, well, I see
I talk but idly, and you laugh at me....
Most mighty prince, my Lord Northumberland,
What says King Bolingbroke? will his majesty
Give Richard leave to live till Richard die?
You make a leg, and Bolingbroke says 'ay'.
NORTHUMBERLAND. My lord, in the base court he doth attend,
To speak with you, may it please you to come down?
K. RICHARD. Down, down I come, like glist'ring Phaethon:
Wanting the manage of unruly jades....
In the base court? Base court, where kings grow base,
To come at traitors' calls, and do them grace.
In the base court? Come down? Down court! down king!
For night-owls shriek where mounting larks should sing.
He goes from the battlements
BOLINGBROKE. What says his majesty?
NORTHUMBERLAND. Sorrow and grief of heart
Makes him speak fondly like a frantic man,
Yet he is come.

Enter King Richard, the Duke of York and attendants

BOLINGBROKE. Stand all apart,
And show fair duty to his majesty ...
My gracious lord. He kneels down
K. RICHARD. Fair cousin, you debase your princely knee,
To make the base earth proud with kissing it:
Me rather had my heart might feel your love,
Than my unpleased eye see your courtesy:
Up, cousin, up—your heart is up, I know,
Thus high [touching his own head] at least, although your knee be low.
BOLINGBROKE. My gracious lord, I come but for mine own.
K. RICHARD. Your own is yours, and I am yours and all.
BOLINGBROKE. So far be mine, my most redoubted lord,
As my true service shall deserve your love.
K. RICHARD. Well you deserve: they well deserve to have,
That know the strong'st and surest way to get.
Uncle, give me your hands, nay, dry your eyes,
Tears show their love, but want their remedies....

Cousin, I am too young to be your father,
Though you are old enough to be my heir.
What you will have, I'll give, and willing too,
For do we must, what force will have us do . . .
Set on towards London, cousin, is it so?
BOLINGBROKE. Yea, my good lord.
K. RICHARD. Then I must not say no.
They go

Scene 4: The Duke of York's garden

Enter the Queen and two Ladies

QUEEN. What sport shall we devise here in this garden,
To drive away the heavy thought of care?
LADY. Madam, we'll play at bowls.
QUEEN. 'Twill make me think the world is full of rubs,
And that my fortune runs against the bias.
LADY. Madam, we'll dance.
QUEEN. My legs can keep no measure in delight,
When my poor heart no measure keeps in grief:
Therefore, no dancing, girl—some other sport.
LADY. Madam, we'll tell tales.
QUEEN. Of sorrow or of joy?
LADY. Of either, madam.
QUEEN. Of neither, girl:
For if of joy, being altogether wanting,
It doth remember me the more of sorrow;
Or if of grief, being altogether had,
It adds more sorrow to my want of joy:
For what I have I need not to repeat,
And what I want it boots not to complain.
LADY. Madam, I'll sing.
QUEEN. 'Tis well that thou hast cause,
But thou shouldst please me better, wouldst thou weep.
LADY. I could weep, madam, would it do you good.
QUEEN. And I could sing, would weeping do me good,
And never borrow any tear of thee. . . .

Enter Gardeners with spades etc.

But stay, here comes the gardeners.
Let's step into the shadow of these trees.
My wretchedness unto a row of pins,
They will talk of state, for every one doth so
Against a change: woe is forerun with woe.
Queen and her ladies retire
GARDENER. Go, bind thou up yon dangling apricocks,
Which like unruly children make their sire
Stoop with oppression of their prodigal weight,
Give some supportance to the bending twigs.
Go thou, and like an executioner
Cut off the heads of too fast growing sprays,
That look too lofty in our commonwealth—
All must be even in our government. . . .
You thus employed, I will go root away
The noisome weeds which without profit suck
The soil's fertility from wholesome flowers.
MAN. Why should we, in the compass of a pale,
Keep law and form and due proportion,
Showing as in a model our firm estate,
When our sea-wallèd garden, the whole land,
Is full of weeds, her fairest flowers choked up,
Her fruit-trees all unpruned, her hedges ruined,
Her knots disordered, and her wholesome herbs
Swarming with caterpillars?
GARDENER. Hold thy peace—
He that hath suffered this disordered spring
Hath now himself met with the fall of leaf:
The weeds which his broad-spreading leaves did shelter,
That seemed in eating him to hold him up,
Are plucked up root and all by Bolingbroke—
I mean the Earl of Wiltshire, Bushy, Green.
MAN. What, are they dead?
GARDENER. They are, and Bolingbroke
Hath seized the wasteful king. O! what pity is it
That he had not so trimmed and dressed his land,
As we this garden! We at time of year
Do wound the bark, the skin of our fruit-trees,
Lest being over-proud in sap and blood,
With too much riches it confound itself.
Had he done so to great and growing men,
They might have lived to bear, and he to taste,
Their fruits of duty: superfluous branches
We lop away, that bearing boughs may live:
Had he done so, himself had borne the crown,
Which waste of idle hours hath quite thrown down.
MAN. What, think you then the king shall be deposed?
GARDENER. Depressed he is already, and deposed
'Tis doubt he will be. . . . Letters came last night
To a dear friend of the good Duke of York's,
That tell black tidings.
QUEEN. O, I am pressed to death through want of speaking! Comes forth
Thou, old Adam's likeness, set to dress this garden,
How dares thy harsh rude tongue sound this unpleasing news?
What Eve, what serpent, hath suggested thee
To make a second fall of cursèd man?
Why dost thou say King Richard is deposed?
Dar'st thou, thou little better thing than earth,
Divine his downfal? Say, where, when, and how,
Cam'st thou by these ill tidings? speak, thou wretch!
GARDENER. Pardon me, madam. Little joy have I
To breathe this news, yet what I say is true:
King Richard, he is in the mighty hold
Of Bolingbroke: their fortunes both are weighed:
In your lord's scale is nothing but himself,
And some few vanities that make him light;
But in the balance of great Bolingbroke,
Besides himself, are all the English peers,
And with that odds he weighs King Richard down;
Post you to London, and you will find it so,
I speak no more than every one doth know.
QUEEN. Nimble mischance, that art so light of foot,
Doth not thy embassage belong to me,
And am I last that knows it? O, thou thinkest
To serve me last, that I may longest keep
Thy sorrow in my breast . . . Come, ladies, go,
To meet at London London's king in woe. . . .
What, was I born to this, that my sad look
Should grace the triumph of great Bolingbroke?
Gardener, for telling me these news of woe,
Pray God the plants thou graft'st may never grow.
She leaves the garden with her ladies
GARDENER. Poor queen! so that thy state might be no worse,
I would my skill were subject to thy curse:
Here did she fall a tear, here in this place

I'll set a bank of rue, sour herb of grace.
Rue, even for ruth, here shortly shall be seen,
In the remembrance of a weeping queen. They go

ACT 4

Scene 1: Westminster Hall

Enter as to the Parliament Bolingbroke, Aumerle, Surrey, Northumberland, Percy, Fitzwater, and other lords, the Bishop of Carlisle, and the Abbot of Westminster. Herald and Officers with Bagot

BOLINGBROKE. Call forth Bagot....
He is brought forward
Now, Bagot, freely speak thy mind,
What thou dost know of noble Gloucester's death,
Who wrought it with the king, and who performed
The bloody office of his timeless end.
BAGOT. Then set before my face the Lord Aumerle.
BOLINGBROKE. Cousin, stand forth, and look upon that man.
BAGOT. My Lord Aumerle, I know your daring tongue
Scorns to unsay what once it hath delivered.
In that dead time when Gloucester's death was plotted,
I heard you say, 'Is not my arm of length,
That reacheth from the restful English court
As far as Calais, to my uncle's head?'
Amongst much other talk that very time
I heard you say that you had rather refuse
The offer of an hundred thousand crowns
Than Bolingbroke's return to England—
Adding withal, how blest this land would be,
In this your cousin's death.
AUMERLE. Princes and noble lords,
What answer shall I make to this base man?
Shall I so much dishonour my fair stars,
On equal terms to give him chastisement?
Either I must, or have mine honour soiled
With the attainder of his slanderous lips.
There is my gage, the manual seal of death,
That marks thee out for hell! I say thou liest,
And will maintain what thou hast said is false
In thy heart-blood, though being all too base
To stain the temper of my knightly sword.
BOLINGBROKE. Bagot, forbear, thou shalt not take it up.
AUMERLE. Excepting one, I would he were the best
In all this presence that hath moved me so.
FITZWATER. If that thy valour stand on sympathy,
There is my gage, Aumerle, in gage to thine:
By that fair sun which shows me where thou stand'st,
I heard thee say, and vauntingly thou spak'st it,
That thou wert cause of noble Gloucester's death.
If thou deny'st it twenty times, thou liest,
And I will turn thy falsehood to thy heart,
Where it was forgéd, with my rapier's point.
AUMERLE. Thou dar'st not, coward, live to see that day.
FITZWATER. Now, by my soul, I would it were this hour.
AUMERLE. Fitzwater, thou art damned to hell for this.
PERCY. Aumerle, thou liest, his honour is as true
In this appeal as thou art all unjust,
And that thou art so, there I throw my gage,
To prove it on thee to the extremest point
Of mortal breathing—seize if thou dar'st.
AUMERLE. An if I do not, may my hands rot off,
And never brandish more revengeful steel
Over the glittering helmet of my foe!
ANOTHER LORD. I task the earth to the like, forsworn Aumerle,
And spur thee on with full as many lies
As may be holloaed in thy treacherous ear
From sun to sun: there is my honour's pawn—
Engage it to the trial if thou darest.
AUMERLE. Who sets me else? by heaven, I'll throw at all!
I have a thousand spirits in one breast,
To answer twenty thousand such as you.
SURREY. My Lord Fitzwater, I do remember well
The very time Aumerle and you did talk.
FITZWATER. 'Tis very true, you were in presence then,
And you can witness with me this is true.
SURREY. As false, by heaven, as heaven itself is true.
FITZWATER. Surrey, thou liest.
SURREY. Dishonourable boy!
That lie shall lie so heavy on my sword,
That it shall render vengeance and revenge,
Till thou the lie-giver, and that lie, do lie
In earth as quiet as thy father's skull....
In proof whereof, there is my honour's pawn—
Engage it to the trial if thou dar'st.
FITZWATER. How fondly dost thou spur a forward horse!
If I dare eat, or drink, or breathe, or live,
I dare meet Surrey in a wilderness,
And spit upon him, whilst I say he lies,
And lies, and lies: there is my bond of faith,
To tie thee to my strong correction:
As I intend to thrive in this new world,
Aumerle is guilty of my true appeal:
Besides, I heard the banished Norfolk say,
That thou, Aumerle, didst send two of thy men
To execute the noble duke at Calais.
AUMERLE. Some honest Christian trust me with a gage,
That Norfolk lies—here do I throw down this,
If he may be repealed to try his honour.
BOLINGBROKE. These differences shall all rest under gage,
Till Norfolk be repealed. Repealed he shall be,
And, though mine enemy, restored again
To all his lands and signories: when he's returned,
Against Aumerle we will enforce his trial.
CARLISLE. That honourable day shall ne'er be seen.
Many a time hath banished Norfolk fought
For Jesu Christ in glorious Christian field,
Streaming the ensign of the Christian cross
Against black pagans, Turks, and Saracens,
And toiled with works of war, retired himself
To Italy, and there at Venice gave
His body to that pleasant country's earth,
And his pure soul unto his captain Christ
Under whose colours he had fought so long.
BOLINGBROKE. Why, bishop, is Norfolk dead?
CARLISLE. As surely as I live, my lord.
BOLINGBROKE. Sweet peace conduct his sweet soul to the bosom
Of good old Abraham! Lord appellants,
Your differences shall all rest under gage,

Till we assign you to your days of trial.

York enters

YORK. Great Duke of Lancaster, I come to thee
From plume-plucked Richard, who with willing soul
Adopts thee heir, and his high sceptre yields
To the possession of thy royal hand:
Ascend his throne, descending now from him,
And long live Henry, of that name the fourth!
BOLINGBROKE. In God's name, I'll ascend the regal throne.
CARLISLE. Marry, God forbid!
Worst in this royal presence may I speak,
Yet best beseeming me to speak the truth.
Would God that any in this noble presence
Were enough noble to be upright judge
Of noble Richard.... Then true noblesse would
Learn him forbearance from so foul a wrong.
What subject can give sentence on his king?
And who sits here that is not Richard's subject?
Thieves are not judged but they are by to hear,
Although apparent guilt be seen in them,
And shall the figure of God's majesty,
His captain, steward, deputy-elect,
Anointed, crowned, planted many years,
Be judged by subject and inferior breath,
And he himself not present? O, forfend it, God,
That in a Christian climate souls refined
Should show so heinous, black, obscene a deed!
I speak to subjects, and a subject speaks,
Stirred up by God thus boldly for his king.
My Lord of Hereford here, whom you call king,
Is a foul traitor to proud Hereford's king,
And if you crown him, let me prophesy,
The blood of English shall manure the ground,
And future ages groan for this foul act,
Peace shall go sleep with Turks and infidels,
And, in this seat of peace, tumultous wars
Shall kin with kin, and kind with kind confound;
Disorder, horror, fear, and mutiny
Shall here inhabit, and this land be called
The field of Golgotha and dead men's skulls.
O, if you raise this house against this house,
It will the woefullest division prove
That ever fell upon this curséd earth:
Prevent it, resist it, let it not be so,
Lest child, child's children, cry against you 'woe!'
NORTHUMBERLAND. Well have you argued, sir, and, for your pains,
Of capital treason we arrest you here:
My Lord of Westminster, be it your charge
To keep him safely till his day of trial....
May it please you, lords, to grant the commons' suit?
BOLINGBROKE. Fetch hither Richard, that in common view
He may surrender; so we shall proceed
Without suspicion.
YORK. I will be his conduct. He goes
BOLINGBROKE. Lords, you that here are under our arrest,
Procure your sureties for your days of answer:
Little are we beholding to your love,
And little looked for at your helping hands.

York returns with King Richard; Officers follow bearing the Crown, etc.

K. RICHARD. Alack, why am I sent for to a king,
Before I have shook off the regal thoughts
Wherewith I reigned? I hardly yet have learned
To insinuate, flatter, bow, and bend my knee:
Give sorrow leave awhile to tutor me
To this submission.... Yet I well remember
The favours of these men: were they not mine?
Did they not sometime cry 'all hail!' to me?
So Judas did to Christ: but he, in twelve,
Found truth in all, but one; I, in twelve thousand, none....
God save the king! Will no man say amen?
Am I both priest and clerk? well then, amen.
God save the king! although I be not he;
And yet, amen, if heaven do think him me....
To do what service am I sent for hither?
YORK. To do that office of thine own good will,
Which tired majesty did make thee offer:
The resignation of thy state and crown
To Henry Bolingbroke.
K. RICHARD. Give me the crown.... Here, cousin, seize the crown:
Here, cousin,
On this side, my hand, and on that side, thine....
Now is this golden crown like a deep well
That owes two buckets, filling one another,
The emptier ever dancing in the air,
The other down, unseen, and full of water:
That bucket down, and full of tears, am I,
Drinking my griefs, whilst you mount up on high.
BOLINGBROKE. I thought you had been willing to resign.
K. RICHARD. My crown I am, but still my griefs are mine:
You may my glories and my state depose,
But not my griefs; still am I king of those.
BOLINGBROKE. Part of your cares you give me with your crown.
K. RICHARD. Your cares set up do not pluck my cares down.
My care is loss of care, by old care done,
Your care is gain of care, by new care won:
The cares I give, I have, though given away,
They tend the crown, yet still with me they stay.
BOLINGBROKE. Are you contented to resign the crown?
K. RICHARD. Ay, no; no, ay; for I must nothing be:
Therefore no 'no,' for I resign to thee....
Now mark me how I will undo myself:
I give this heavy weight from off my head,
And this unwieldy sceptre from my hand,
The pride of kingly sway from out my heart;
With mine own tears I wash away my balm,
With mine own hands I give away my crown,
With mine own tongue deny my sacred state,
With mine own breath release all duteous oaths:
All pomp and majesty I do forswear;
My manors, rents, revenues, I forgo;
My acts, decrees, and statutes, I deny:
God pardon all oaths that are broke to me!
God keep all vows unbroke are made to thee!
Make me, that nothing have, with nothing grieved,
And thou with all pleased, that hast all achieved!
Long mayst thou live in Richard's seat to sit,

And soon lie Richard in an earthy pit....
God save King Henry, unkinged Richard says,
And send him many years of sunshine days....
What more remains?
NORTHUMBERLAND. No more, but that you read
These accusations and these grievous crimes,
Committed by your person and your followers
Against the state and profit of this land;
That, by confessing them, the souls of men
May deem that you are worthily deposed.
K. RICHARD. Must I do so? and must I ravel out
My weaved-up follies? Gentle Northumberland,
If thy offences were upon record,
Would it not shame thee, in so fair a troop,
To read a lecture of them? If thou wouldst,
There shouldst thou find one heinous article,
Containing the deposing of a king,
And cracking the strong warrant of an oath,
Marked with a blot, damned in the book of heaven....
Nay, all of you, that stand and look upon me,
Whilst that my wretchedness doth bait myself,
Though some of you, with Pilate, wash your hands,
Showing an outward pity; yet you Pilates
Have here delivered me to my sour cross,
And water cannot wash away your sin.
NORTHUMBERLAND. My lord, dispatch, read o'er these articles.
K. RICHARD. Mine eyes are full of tears, I cannot see:
And yet salt water blinds them not so much,
But they can see a sort of traitors here.
Nay, if I turn mine eyes upon myself,
I find myself a traitor with the rest:
For I have given here my soul's consent
T' undeck the pompous body of a king;
Made glory base; and sovereignty, a slave;
Proud majesty, a subject; state, a peasant.
NORTHUMBERLAND. My lord—
K. RICHARD. No lord of thine, thou haught, insulting man;
Nor no man's lord; I have no name, no title;
No, not that name was given me at the font,
But 'tis usurped: alack the heavy day,
That I have worn so many winters out,
And know not now what name to call myself!
O, that I were a mockery king of snow,
Standing before the sun of Bolingbroke,
To melt myself away in water-drops!
Good king, great king, and yet not greatly good,
An if my word be sterling yet in England,
Let it command a mirror hither straight,
That it may show me what a face I have,
Since it is bankrupt of his majesty.
BOLINGBROKE. Go some of you, and fetch a looking-glass. An attendant goes out
NORTHUMBERLAND. Read o'er this paper, while the glass doth come.
K. RICHARD. Fiend, thou torments me ere I come to hell.
BOLINGBROKE. Urge it no more, my Lord Northumberland.
NORTHUMBERLAND. The commons will not then be satisfied.
K. RICHARD. They shall be satisfied; I'll read enough,
When I do see the very book indeed
Where all my sins are writ, and that's myself.

The attendant returns with a glass

Give me that glass, and therein will I read....
No deeper wrinkles yet? hath sorrow struck
So many blows upon this face of mine,
And made no deeper wounds? O, flatt'ring glass,
Like to my followers in prosperity,
Thou dost beguile me! Was this face the face
That every day under his household roof
Did keep ten thousand men? Was this the face,
That, like the sun, did make beholders wink?
Was this the face, that faced so many follies,
And was at last out-faced by Bolingbroke?
A brittle glory shineth in this face,
As brittle as the glory is the face,
He dashes the glass to the ground
For there it is, cracked in a hundred shivers....
Mark, silent king, the moral of this sport,
How soon my sorrow hath destroyed my face.
BOLINGBROKE. The shadow of your sorrow hath destroyed
The shadow of your face.
K. RICHARD. Say that again.
The shadow of my sorrow ... ha! let's see—
'Tis very true, my grief lies all within,
And these external manners of lament
Are merely shadows to the unseen grief,
That swells with silence in the tortured soul....
There lies the substance: and I thank thee, king,
For thy great bounty, that not only giv'st
Me cause to wail, but teachest me the way
How to lament the cause.... I'll beg one boon,
And then be gone, and trouble you no more.
Shall I obtain it?
BOLINGBROKE. Name it, fair cousin.
K. RICHARD. 'Fair cousin'? I am greater than a king:
For when I was a king, my flatterers
Were then but subjects; being now a subject,
I have a king here to my flatterer:
Being so great, I have no need to beg.
BOLINGBROKE. Yet ask.
K. RICHARD. And shall I have?
BOLINGBROKE. You shall.
K. RICHARD. Then give me leave to go.
BOLINGBROKE. Whither?
K. RICHARD. Whither you will, so I were from your sights.
BOLINGBROKE. Go, some of you, convey him to the Tower.
K. RICHARD. O, good! convey? conveyers are you all,
That rise thus nimbly by a true king's fall.
Certain lords conduct Richard guarded from the hall
BOLINGBROKE. On Wednesday next we solemnly set down
Our coronation: lords, prepare yourselves.

Bolingbroke and the Lords depart: the Abbot of Westminster, the Bishop of Carlisle and Aumerle remain behind

ABBOT. A woeful pageant have we here beheld.
CARLISLE. The woe's to come—the children yet unborn
Shall feel this day as sharp to them as thorn.
AUMERLE. You holy clergymen, is there no plot
To rid the realm of this pernicious blot?
ABBOT. My lord,

Before I freely speak with my mind herein,
You shall not only take the sacrament
To bury mine intents, but also to effect
Whatever I shall happen to devise:
I see your brows are full of discontent,
Your hearts of sorrow, and your eyes of tears:
Come home with me to supper; I will lay
A plot shall show us all a merry day. They go

ACT 5

Scene 1: London. A street leading to the Tower

Enter the Queen with her attendants

QUEEN. This way the king will come, this is the way
To Julius Cæsar's ill-erected tower,
To whose flint bosom my condemnéd lord
Is doomed a prisoner by proud Bolingbroke....
Here let us rest, if this rebellious earth
Have any resting for her true king's queen.

Enter Richard with guards

But soft, but see, or rather do not see,
My fair rose wither—yet look up, behold,
That you in pity may dissolve to dew,
And wash him fresh again with true-love tears ...
Ah, thou, the model where old Troy did stand!
Thou map of honour, thou King Richard's tomb,
And not King Richard; thou most beauteous inn,
Why should hard-favoured grief be lodged in thee,
When triumph is become an alehouse guest?

RICHARD. Join not with grief, fair woman, do not so,
To make my end too sudden. Learn, good soul,
To think our former state a happy dream,
From which awaked, the truth of what we are
Shows us but this: I am sworn brother, sweet,
To grim Necessity, and he and I
Will keep a league till death.... Hie thee to France,
And cloister thee in some religious house.
Our holy lives must win a new world's crown,
Which our profane hours here have throwen down.

QUEEN. What, is my Richard both in shape and mind
Transformed and weak'ned? hath Bolingbroke deposed
Thine intellect? hath he been in thy heart?
The lion dying thrusteth forth his paw,
And wounds the earth, if nothing else, with rage
To be o'erpowered, and wilt thou pupil-like
Take the correction, mildly kiss the rod,
And fawn on rage with base humility,
Which art a lion and the king of beasts?

RICHARD. A king of beasts, indeed! if aught but beasts,
I had been still a happy king of men....
Good sometimes queen, prepare thee hence for France.
Think I am dead, and that even here thou takest
As from my death-bed thy last living leave;
In winter's tedious nights sit by the fire
With good old folks, and let them tell thee tales
Of woeful ages long ago betid;
And ere thou bid good night, to quit their griefs,
Tell thou the lamentable fall of me,
And send the hearers weeping to their beds:
For why, the senseless brands will sympathize
The heavy accent of thy moving tongue,
And in compassion weep the fire out,
And some will mourn in ashes, some coal-black,
For the deposing of a rightful king.

Northumberland comes up

NORTHUMBERLAND. My lord, the mind of Bolingbroke is changed,
You must to Pomfret, not unto the Tower....
And, madam, there is order ta'en for you,
With all swift speed you must away to France.

RICHARD. Northumberland, thou ladder wherewithal
The mounting Bolingbroke ascends my throne,
The time shall not be many hours of age
More than it is, ere foul sin gathering head
Shall break into corruption. Thou shalt think,
Though he divide the realm and give thee half,
It is too little, helping him to all....
And he shall think that thou, which knowest the way
To plant unrightful kings, wilt know again,
Being ne'er so little urged another way
To pluck him headlong from the usurped throne:
The love of wicked men converts to fear,
That fear to hate, and hate turns one or both
To worthy danger and deservéd death.

NORTHUMBERLAND. My guilt be on my head, and there an end:
Take leave and part, for you must part forthwith.

RICHARD. Doubly divorced! Bad men, you violate
A twofold marriage—'twixt my crown and me,
And then betwixt me and my married wife....
Let me unkiss the oath 'twixt thee and me;
And yet not so, for with a kiss 'twas made....
Part us, Northumberland—I towards the north,
Where shivering cold and sickness pines the clime;
My wife to France, from whence set forth in pomp
She came adornéd hither like sweet May,
Sent back like Hallowmas or short'st of day.

QUEEN. And must we be divided? must we part?

RICHARD. Ay, hand from hand, my love, and heart from heart.

QUEEN. Banish us both, and send the king with me.

NORTHUMBERLAND. That were some love, but little policy.

QUEEN. Then whither he goes, thither let me go.

RICHARD. So two, together weeping, make one woe.
Weep thou for me in France, I for thee here;
Better far off than near, be ne'er the near.
Go, count thy way with sighs, I mine with groans.

QUEEN. So longest way shall have the longest moans.

RICHARD. Twice for one step I'll groan, the way being short,
And piece the way out with a heavy heart....
Come, come, in wooing sorrow let's be brief,
Since, wedding it, there is such length in grief:
One kiss shall stop our mouths, and dumbly part—
Thus give I mine, and thus take I thy heart.

QUEEN. Give me mine own again, 'twere no good part
To take on me to keep and kill thy heart:
So, now I have mine own again, be gone,
That I may strive to kill it with a groan.

RICHARD. We make woe wanton with this fond delay,
Once more, adieu, the rest let sorrow say. They go

Scene 2: The Duke of York's palace

Enter the Duke of York and the Duchess

DUCHESS. My lord, you told me you would tell the rest,

When weeping made you break the story off
Of our two cousins coming into London.
YORK. Where did I leave?
DUCHESS. At that sad stop, my lord,
Where rude misgoverned hands, from windows' tops,
Threw dust and rubbish on King Richard's head.
YORK. Then, as I said, the duke, great Bolingbroke,
Mounted upon a hot and fiery steed,
Which his aspiring rider seemed to know,
With slow but stately pace kept on his course,
Whilst all tongues cried 'God save thee, Bolingbroke!'
You would have thought the very windows spake,
So many greedy looks of young and old
Through casements darted their desiring eyes
Upon his visage, and that all the walls
With painted imagery had said at once
'Jesu preserve thee! welcome, Bolingbroke!'
Whilst he from one side to the other turning
Bareheaded, lower than his proud steed's neck,
Bespake them thus: 'I thank you, countrymen':
And thus still doing, thus he passed along.
DUCHESS. Alack poor Richard! where rode he the whilst?
YORK. As in a theatre the eyes of men,
After a well-graced actor leaves the stage,
Are idly bent on him that enters next,
Thinking his prattle to be tedious;
Even so, or with much more contempt, men's eyes
Did scowl on Richard; no man cried, 'God save him!'
No joyful tongue gave him his welcome home,
But dust was thrown upon his sacred head;
Which with such gentle sorrow he shook off,
His face still combating with tears and smiles,
The badges of his grief and patience,
That had not God for some strong purpose steeled
The hearts of men, they must perforce have melted,
And barbarism itself have pitied him:
But heaven hath a hand in these events,
To whose high will we bound our calm contents....
To Bolingbroke are we sworn subjects now,
Whose state and honour I for aye allow.

Aumerle enters

DUCHESS. Here comes my son Aumerle.
YORK. Aumerle that was,
But that is lost for being Richard's friend:
And, madam, you must call him Rutland now:
I am in parliament pledge for his truth
And lasting fealty to the new made king.
DUCHESS. Welcome, my son. Who are the violets now,
That strew the green lap of the new come spring?
AUMERLE. Madam, I know not, nor I greatly care not.
God knows I had as lief be none as one.
YORK. Well, bear you well in this new spring of time,
Lest you be cropped before you come to prime.
What news from Oxford? do these justs and triumphs hold?
AUMERLE. For aught I know, my lord, they do.
YORK. You will be there, I know.
AUMERLE. If God prevent not, I purpose so.
YORK. What seal is that, that hangs without thy bosom?
Yea, look'st thou pale? let me see the writing.
AUMERLE. My lord, 'tis nothing.
YORK. No matter then who see it.
I will be satisfied, let me see the writing.
AUMERLE. I do beseech your grace to pardon me;
It is a matter of small consequence,
Which for some reasons I would not have seen.
YORK. Which for some reasons, sir, I mean to see....
I fear, I fear—
DUCHESS. What should you fear?
'Tis nothing but some bond that he is ent'red into
For gay apparel 'gainst the triumph day.
YORK. Bound to himself! what doth he with a bond,
That he is bound to! Wife, thou art a fool....
Boy, let me see the writing.
AUMERLE. I do beseech you, pardon me, I may not show it.
YORK. I will be satisfied, let me see it, I say.
He plucks it out of his bosom and reads it
Treason! foul treason! villain! traitor! slave!
DUCHESS. What is the matter, my lord?
YORK. Ho! who is within there? saddle my horse.
God for his mercy! what treachery is here!
DUCHESS. Why, what is it, my lord?
YORK. Give me my boots I say, saddle my horse.
Now by mine honour, by my life, by my troth,
I will appeach the villain.
DUCHESS. What is the matter?
YORK. Peace, foolish woman.
DUCHESS. I will not peace. What is the matter, Aumerle?
AUMERLE. Good mother, be content—it is no more
Than my poor life must answer.
DUCHESS. Thy life answer!
YORK. Bring me my boots, I will unto the king.

His man enters with his boots

DUCHESS. Strike him, Aumerle. Poor boy, thou art amazed.
Hence, villain! never more come in my sight.
YORK. Give me my boots, I say.
The man helps him into them
DUCHESS. Why, York, what wilt thou do?
Wilt thou not hide the trespass of thine own?
Have we more sons? or are we like to have?
Is not my teeming date drunk up with time?
And wilt thou pluck my fair son from mine age,
And rob me of a happy mother's name?
Is he not like thee? is he not thine own?
YORK. Thou fond mad woman,
Wilt thou conceal this dark conspiracy?
A dozen of them here have ta'en the sacrament,
And interchangeably set down their hands,
To kill the king at Oxford.
DUCHESS. He shall be none.
We'll keep him here, then what is that to him?
YORK. Away, fond woman! were he twenty times my son,
I would appeach him.
DUCHESS. Hadst thou groaned for him
As I have done, thou wouldst be more pitiful.
But now I know thy mind, thou dost suspect
That I have been disloyal to thy bed,

And that he is a bastard, not thy son:
Sweet York, sweet husband, be not of that mind,
He is as like thee as a man may be,
Not like to me, or any of my kin,
And yet I love him.
YORK. Make way, unruly woman. He goes
DUCHESS. After, Aumerle; mount thee upon his horse,
Spur post, and get before him to the king,
And beg thy pardon ere he do accuse thee.
I'll not be long behind—though I be old,
I doubt not but to ride as fast as York,
And never will I rise up from the ground,
Till Bolingbroke have pardoned thee: away, be gone! They go

Scene 3: Windsor Castle

Enter Bolingbroke, Percy and other nobles

BOLINGBROKE. Can no man tell me of my unthrifty son?
'Tis full three months since I did see him last,
If any plague hang over us, 'tis he:
I would to God, my lords, he might be found:
Inquire at London, 'mongst the taverns there,
For there, they say, he daily doth frequent,
With unrestrainéd loose companions,
Even such, they say, as stand in narrow lanes,
And beat our watch, and rob our passengers,
While he, young wanton and effeminate boy,
Takes on the point of honour to support
So dissolute a crew.
PERCY. My lord, some two days since I saw the prince,
And told him of those triumphs held at Oxford.
BOLINGBROKE. And what said the gallant?
PERCY. His answer was, he would unto the stews,
And from the common'st creature pluck a glove,
And wear it as a favour, and with that
He would unhorse the lustiest challenger.
BOLINGBROKE. As dissolute as desperate—yet through both
I see some sparks of better hope, which elder years
May happily bring forth.... But who comes here?

Enter Aumerle amazed

AUMERLE. Where is the king?
BOLINGBROKE. What means our cousin, that he stares and looks
So wildly?
AUMERLE. God save your grace, I do beseech your majesty,
To have some conference with your grace alone.
BOLINGBROKE. Withdraw yourselves, and leave us here alone.... Percy and the rest withdraw
What is the matter with our cousin now?
AUMERLE [kneels]. For ever may my knees grow to the earth,
My tongue cleave to my roof within my mouth,
Unless a pardon ere I rise or speak.
BOLINGBROKE. Intended, or committed, was this fault?
If on the first, how heinous e'er it be,
To win thy after-love, I pardon thee.
AUMERLE. Then give me leave that I may turn the key,
That no man enter till my tale be done.
BOLINGBROKE. Have thy desire. The key is turned

The Duke of York knocks at the door and crieth

YORK [without]. My liege, beware, look to thyself,
Thou hast a traitor in thy presence there.
BOLINGBROKE. Villain, I'll make thee safe. He draws
AUMERLE. Stay thy revengeful hand, thou hast no cause to fear.
YORK [without]. Open the door, secure, foolhardy king,
Shall I for love speak treason to thy face?
Open the door, or I will break it open.

Bolingbroke opens, admits York and locks the door again

BOLINGBROKE. What is the matter, uncle? speak, recover breath,
Tell us how near is danger,
That we may arm us to encounter it.
YORK. Peruse this writing here, and thou shalt know
The treason that my haste forbids me show.
AUMERLE. Remember, as thou read'st, thy promise passed.
I do repent me, read not my name there,
My heart is not confederate with my hand.
YORK. It was, villain, ere thy hand did set it down....
I tore it from the traitor's bosom, king.
Fear, and not love, begets his penitence:
Forget to pity him, lest thy pity prove
A serpent that will sting thee to the heart.
BOLINGBROKE. O heinous, strong, and bold conspiracy!
O loyal father of a treacherous son!
Thou sheer, immaculate and silver fountain,
From whence this stream, through muddy passages,
Hath held his current, and defiled himself!
Thy overflow of good converts to bad;
And thy abundant goodness shall excuse
This deadly blot in thy digressing son.
YORK. So shall my virtue be his vice's bawd,
And he shall spend mine honour with his shame,
As thriftless sons their scraping fathers' gold:
Mine honour lives when his dishonour dies,
Or my shamed life in his dishonour lies.
Thou kill'st me in his life—giving him breath,
The traitor lives, the true man's put to death.
DUCHESS [without]. What ho, my liege! for God's sake, let me in.
BOLINGBROKE. What shrill-voiced suppliant makes this eager cry?
DUCHESS. A woman, and thy aunt, great king—'tis I
Speak with me, pity me, open the door,
A beggar begs that never begged before.
BOLINGBROKE. Our scene is altered from a serious thing,
And now changed to 'The Beggar and the King':
My dangerous cousin, let your mother in,
I know she is come to pray for your foul sin.
YORK. If thou do pardon, whosoever pray,
More sins for this forgiveness prosper may:
This fest'red joint cut off, the rest rest sound,
This let alone with all the rest confound.

Aumerle admits the Duchess

DUCHESS. O king, believe not this hard-hearted man!
Love loving not itself none other can.
YORK. Thou frantic woman, what dost thou make here?

Shall thy old dugs once more a traitor rear?
DUCHESS. Sweet York, be patient. Hear me, gentle liege. She kneels
BOLINGBROKE. Rise up, good aunt.
DUCHESS. Not yet, I thee beseech.
For ever will I walk upon my knees,
And never see day that the happy sees,
Till thou give joy—until thou bid me joy,
By pardoning Rutland, my transgressing boy.
AUMERLE. Unto my mother's prayers I bend my knee. Kneels
YORK. Against them both my true joints bended be. Kneels
Ill mayst thou thrive, if thou grant any grace!
DUCHESS. Pleads he in earnest? look upon his face;
His eyes do drop no tears, his prayers are in jest.
His words come from his mouth, ours from our breast.
He prays but faintly, and would be denied,
We pray with heart and soul, and all beside.
His weary joints would gladly rise, I know,
Our knees shall kneel till to the ground they grow.
His prayers are full of false hypocrisy,
Ours of true zeal and deep integrity.
Our prayers do out-pray his—then let them have
That mercy which true prayer ought to have.
BOLINGBROKE. Good aunt, stand up.
DUCHESS. Nay, do not say 'stand up';
Say 'pardon' first, and afterwards 'stand up'.
An if I were thy nurse, thy tongue to teach,
'Pardon' should be the first word of thy speech:
I never longed to hear a word till now,
Say 'pardon,' king, let pity teach thee how.
The word is short, but not so short as sweet,
No words like 'pardon' for kings' mouths so meet.
YORK. Speak it in French, king, say 'pardonne moy'.
DUCHESS. Dost thou teach pardon pardon to destroy?
Ah, my sour husband, my hard-hearted lord,
That sets the word itself against the word!
Speak 'pardon' as 'tis current in our land—
The chopping French we do not understand.
Thine eye begins to speak, set thy tongue there:
Or in thy piteous heart plant thou thine ear,
That hearing how our plaints and prayers do pierce,
Pity may move thee 'pardon' to rehearse.
BOLINGBROKE. Good aunt, stand up.
DUCHESS. I do not sue to stand.
Pardon is all the suit I have in hand.
BOLINGBROKE. I pardon him, as God shall pardon me.
DUCHESS. O happy vantage of a kneeling knee!
Yet am I sick for fear, speak it again,
Twice saying 'pardon' doth not pardon twain,
But makes one pardon strong.
BOLINGBROKE. With all my heart
I pardon him.
DUCHESS. A god on earth thou art.
BOLINGBROKE. But for our trusty brother-in-law, and the abbot,
With all the rest of that consorted crew,
Destruction straight shall dog them at the heels.
Good uncle, help to order several powers
To Oxford, or where'er these traitors are.
They shall not live within this world, I swear,
But I will have them, if I once know where....
Uncle, farewell, and cousin too, adieu—
Your mother well hath prayed, and prove you true!
DUCHESS. Come, my old son—I pray God make thee new. They go

Scene 4

Sir Pierce of Exton enters with his manservant

EXTON. Didst thou mark the king, what words he spake?
'Have I no friend will rid me of this living fear?'
Was it not so?
SERVANT. These were his very words.
EXTON. 'Have I no friend?' quoth he—he spake it twice,
And urged it twice together, did he not?
SERVANT. He did.
EXTON. And, speaking it, he wishtly looked on me,
As who should say, 'I would thou wert the man
That would divorce this terror from my heart,'
Meaning the king at Pomfret.... Come, let's go,
I am the king's friend, and will rid his foe. They go

Scene 5: Pomfret Castle

Enter Richard alone

RICHARD. I have been studying how I may compare
This prison where I live unto the world:
And for because the world is populous,
And here is not a creature but myself,
I cannot do it; yet I'll hammer it out.
My brain I'll prove the female to my soul,
My soul the father, and these two beget
A generation of still-breeding thoughts:
And these same thoughts people this little world,
In humours like the people of this world:
For no thought is contented: the better sort,
As thoughts of things divine, are intermixed
With scruples, and do set the word itself
Against the word,
As thus: 'Come, little ones', and then again,
'It is as hard to come, as for a camel
To thread the postern of a small needle's eye' ...
Thoughts tending to ambition, they do plot
Unlikely wonders: how these vain weak nails
May tear a passage through the flinty ribs
Of this hard world, my ragged prison walls;
And, for they cannot, die in their own pride.
Thoughts tending to content flatter themselves
That they are not the first of fortune's slaves,
Nor shall not be the last—like silly beggars
Who sitting in the stocks refuge their shame,
That many have and others must sit there:
And in this thought they find a kind of ease,
Bearing their own misfortunes on the back
Of such as have before endured the like....
Thus play I in one person many people,
And none contented: sometimes am I king,
Then treasons make me wish myself a beggar,
And so I am: then crushing penury
Persuades me I was better when a king;
Then am I kinged again, and by and by
Think that I am unkinged by Bolingbroke,
And straight am nothing.... But whate'er I be,
Nor I, nor any man that but man is,
With nothing shall be pleased, till he be eased
With being nothing.... Music do I hear? Music plays

Ha, ha! keep time—how sour sweet music is,
When time is broke and no proportion kept!
So is it in the music of men's lives:
And here have I the daintiness of ear
To check time broke in a disordered string;
But for the concord of my state and time
Had not an ear to hear my true time broke.
I wasted time, and now doth time waste me:
For now hath time made me his numb'ring clock;
My thoughts are minutes, and with sighs they jar
Their watches on unto mine eyes, the outward watch,
Whereto my finger, like a dial's point,
Is pointing still, in cleansing them from tears.
Now, sir, the sound that tells what hour it is
Are clamorous groans which strike upon my heart,
Which is the bell—so sighs, and tears, and groans,
Show minutes, times, and hours: but my time
Runs posting on in Bolingbroke's proud joy,
While I stand fooling here, his Jack of the clock. . . .
This music mads me, let it sound no more,
For though it have holp madmen to their wits,
In me it seems it will make wise men mad:
Yet blessing on his heart that gives it me!
For 'tis a sign of love; and love to Richard
Is a strange brooch in this all-hating world.

Enter a Groom of the stable

GROOM. Hail, royal prince!
RICHARD. Thanks, noble peer;
The cheapest of us is ten groats too dear.
What art thou? and how comest thou hither,
Where no man never comes, but that sad dog
That brings me food to make misfortune live?
GROOM. I was a poor groom of thy stable, king,
When thou wert king; who, travelling towards York,
With much ado at length have gotten leave
To look upon my sometimes royal master's face:
O, how it erned my heart when I beheld,
In London streets that coronation day,
When Bolingbroke rode on roan Barbary!
That horse that thou so often hast bestrid,
That horse that I so carefully have dressed!
RICHARD. Rode he on Barbary? tell me, gentle friend,
How went he under him?
GROOM. So proudly as if he disdained the ground.
RICHARD. So proud that Bolingbroke was on his back . . .
That jade hath eat bread from my royal hand,
This hand hath made him proud with clapping him:
Would he not stumble? would he not fall down,
Since pride must have a fall, and break the neck
Of that proud man that did usurp his back?
Forgiveness, horse! why do I rail on thee,
Since thou, created to be awed by man,
Wast born to bear? I was not made a horse,
And yet I bear a burthen like an ass,
Spurred, galled, and tired by jauncing Bolingbroke.

Enter one to Richard with meat

KEEPER. Fellow, give place, here is no longer stay.
RICHARD. If thou love me' tis time thou wert away.
GROOM. What my tongue dares not, that my heart shall say. He goes
KEEPER. My lord, will't please you to fall to?
RICHARD. Taste of it first, as thou art wont to do.
KEEPER. My lord, I dare not, Sir Pierce of Exton, who lately came from the king, commands the contrary.
RICHARD. The devil take Henry of Lancaster and thee!
Patience is stale, and I am weary of it.
He beats the Keeper
KEEPER. Help, help, help!

Exton and the other murderers rush in

RICHARD. How now! what means death in this rude assault?
Villain, thy own hand yields thy death's instrument. . . .
He snatches an axe from one and kills him
Go thou, and fill another room in hell.
He kills another, but here Exton strikes him down
That hand shall burn in never-quenching fire
That staggers thus my person: Exton, thy fierce hand
Hath with the king's blood stained the king's own land. . . .
Mount, mount, my soul! thy seat is up on high,
Whilst my gross flesh sinks downward, here to die.
He dies
EXTON. As full of valour as of royal blood:
Both have I spilled. O, would the deed were good!
For now the devil that told me I did well
Says that this deed is chronicled in hell:
This dead king to the living king I'll bear. . . .
Take hence the rest, and give them burial here.
They carry out the bodies

Scene 6: Windsor Castle

Enter Bolingbroke and the Duke of York

BOLINGBROKE. Kind uncle York, the latest news we hear,
Is that the rebels have consumed with fire
Our town of Cicester in Gloucestershire,
But whether they be ta'en or slain we hear not.

Northumberland enters

Welcome, my lord, what is the news?
NORTHUMBERLAND. First, to thy sacred state wish I all happiness.
The next news is, I have to London sent
The heads of Salisbury, Spencer, Blunt and Kent.
The manner of their taking may appear
At large discoursèd in this paper here.
BOLINGBROKE. We thank thee, gentle Percy, for thy pains,
And to thy worth will add right worthy gains.

Fitzwater enters

FITZWATER. My lord, I have from Oxford sent to London
The heads of Brocas and Sir Bennet Seely,
Two of the dangerous consorted traitors,
That sought at Oxford thy dire overthrow.
BOLINGBROKE. Thy pains, Fitzwater, shall not be forgot,
Right noble is thy merit, well I wot.

Percy enters, with the Bishop of Carlisle guarded

PERCY. The grand conspirator, Abbot of Westminster,
With clog of conscience and sour melancholy
Hath yielded up his body to the grave.
But here is Carlisle living, to abide
Thy kingly doom and sentence of his pride.
BOLINGBROKE. Carlisle, this is your doom:
Choose out some secret place, some reverend room,
More than thou hast, and with it joy thy life;
So as thou liv'st in peace, die free from strife,
For though mine enemy thou hast ever been,
High sparks of honour in thee have I seen.

Enter Exton, with persons bearing a coffin

EXTON. Great king, within this coffin I present
Thy buried fear: herein all breathless lies
The mightiest of thy greatest enemies,
Richard of Bordeaux, by me hither brought.
BOLINGBROKE. Exton, I thank thee not, for thou hast wrought
A deed of slander with thy fatal hand
Upon my head and all this famous land.
EXTON. From your own mouth, my lord, did I this deed.
BOLINGBROKE. They love not poison that do poison need,
Nor do I thee; though I did wish him dead,
I hate the murderer, love him murderéd:
The guilt of conscience take thou for thy labour,
But neither my good word, nor princely favour:
With Cain go wander through the shades of night,
And never show thy head by day nor light....
Lords, I protest, my soul is full of woe,
That blood should sprinkle me to make me grow:
Come, mourn with me for what I do lament,
And put on sullen black incontinent.
I'll make a voyage to the Holy Land,
To wash this blood off from my guilty hand:
March sadly after, grace my mournings here,
In weeping after this untimely bier.

The coffin is borne slowly out, Bolingbroke and the rest following

The First Part of the History of Henry IV

ACT 1

Scene I: London. The Palace

King Henry with Sir Walter Blunt, meeting Westmoreland and others

KING. So shaken as we are, so wan with care,
Find we a time for frighted peace to pant,
And breathe short-winded accents of new broils
To be commenced in strands afar remote:
No more the thirsty entrance of this soil
Shall daub her lips with her own children's blood,
No more shall trenching war channel her fields,
Nor bruise her flowerets with the armèd hoofs
Of hostile paces: those opposèd eyes,
Which, like the meteors of a troubled heaven,
All of one nature, of one substance bred,
Did lately meet in the intestine shock
And furious close of civil butchery,
Shall now, in mutual well-beseeming ranks,
March all one way, and be no more opposed
Against acquaintance, kindred, and allies....
The edge of war, like an ill-sheathèd knife,
No more shall cut his master ... Therefore, friends,
As far as to the sepulchre of Christ,
Whose soldier now, under whose blessèd cross
We are impressèd and engaged to fight,
Forthwith a power of English shall we levy,
Whose arms were moulded in their mothers' womb
To chase these pagans in those holy fields
Over whose acres walked those blessèd feet
Which fourteen hundred years ago were nailed
For our advantage on the bitter cross....
But this our purpose now is twelve month old,
And bootless 'tis to tell you we will go:
Therefore we meet not now. Then let me hear
Of you, my gentle cousin Westmoreland,
What yesternight our council did decree
In forwarding this dear expedience.
WESTMORELAND. My liege, this haste was hot in question,
And many limits of the charge set down
But yesternight, when all athwart there came
A post from Wales, loaden with heavy news,
Whose worst was that the noble Mortimer,
Leading the men of Herefordshire to fight
Against the irregular and wild Glendower,
Was by the rude hands of that Welshman taken,
A thousand of his people butcherèd,
Upon whose dead corpse there was such misuse,
Such beastly shameless transformation,
By those Welshwomen done, as may not be Without much shame retold or spoken of.
KING. It seems then that the tidings of this broil
Brake off our business for the Holy Land.
WESTMORELAND. This matched with other did, my gracious lord,
For more uneven and unwelcome news
Came from the north, and thus it did import:
On Holy-rood day the gallant Hotspur there,
Young Harry Percy, and brave Archibald,
That ever-valiant and approvèd Scot,
At Holmedon met,
Where they did spend a sad and bloody hour;
As by discharge of their artillery,
And shape of likelihood, the news was told;
For he that brought them, in the very heat
And pride of their contention did take horse,
Uncertain of the issue any way.
KING. Here is a dear, a true industrious friend,
Sir Walter Blunt, new lighted from his horse,
Stained with the variation of each soil
Betwixt that Holmedon and this seat of ours;
And he hath brought us smooth and welcome news.
The Earl of Douglas is discomfited,
Ten thousand bold Scots, two and twenty knights,
Balked in their own blood did Sir Walter see
On Holmedon's plains. Of prisoners, Hotspur took Mordake Earl of Fife, and eldest son
To beaten Douglas, and the Earl of Athol,
Of Murray, Angus, and Menteith ...
And is not this an honourable spoil?
A gallant prize? ha, cousin, is it not?
WESTMORELAND. In faith,
It is a conquest for a prince to boast of.
KING. Yea, there thou mak'st me sad, and mak'st me sin
In envy, that my Lord Northumberland
Should be the father to so blest a son ...
A son who is the theme of honour's tongue,
Amongst a grove the very straightest plant,
Who is sweet Fortune's minion and her pride,
Whilst I by looking on the praise of him
See riot and dishonour stain the brow
Of my young Harry.... O that it could be proved
That some night-tripping fairy had exchanged
In cradle-clothes our children where they lay,
And called mine Percy, his Plantagenet,
Then would I have his Harry, and he mine:
But let him from my thoughts.... What think you, coz,
Of this young Percy's pride? The prisoners,
Which he in this adventure hath surprised,
To his own use he keeps, and sends me word,
I shall have none but Mordake Earl of Fife.
WESTMORELAND. This is his uncle's teaching, this is Worcester,
Malevolent to you in all aspects,
Which makes him prune himself, and bristle up
The crest of youth against your dignity.
KING. But I have sent for him to answer this;
And for this cause awhile we must neglect
Our holy purpose to Jerusalem....
Cousin, on Wednesday next our council we
Will hold at Windsor, so inform the lords:
But come yourself with speed to us again,
For more is to be said and to be done
Than out of anger can be utterèd.
WESTMORELAND. I will, my liege. Exeunt

Scene 2: London. The house of the Prince of Wales

Enter Sir John Falstaff and the Prince of Wales

FALSTAFF. Now, Hal, what time of day is it, lad?

PRINCE. Thou art so fat-witted with drinking of old sack, and unbuttoning thee after supper, and sleeping upon benches after noon, that thou hast forgotten to demand that truly which thou wouldest truly know. What a devil hast thou to do with the time of the day? Unless hours were cups of sack, and minutes capons, and clocks the tongues of bawds, and dials the signs of leaping-houses, and the blessed sun himself a fair hot wench in flame-coloured taffeta, I see no reason why thou shouldst be so superfluous to demand the time of the day.

FALSTAFF. Indeed, you come near me now, Hal, for we that take purses go by the moon and the seven stars, and not by Phœbus, he, 'that wandering knight so fair'.... And, I prithee, sweet wag, when thou art king, as God save thy grace—majesty I should say, for grace thou wilt have none.

PRINCE. What, none?

FALSTAFF. No, by my troth, not so much as will serve to be prologue to an egg and butter.

PRINCE. Well, how then? come, roundly, roundly.

FALSTAFF. Marry then, sweet wag, when thou art king let not us that are squires of the night's body be called thieves of the day's beauty; let us be Diana's foresters, gentlemen of the shade, minions of the moon, and let men say we be men of good government, being governed as the sea is by our noble and chaste mistress the moon, under whose countenance we steal.

PRINCE. Thou sayest well, and it holds well too, for the fortune of us that are the moon's men doth ebb and flow like the sea, being governed as the sea is by the moon—as for proof now, a purse of gold most resolutely snatched on Monday night and most dissolutely spent on Tuesday morning, got with swearing 'lay by' and spent with crying 'bring in'—now in as low an ebb as the foot of the ladder, and by and by in as high a flow as the ridge of the gallows.

FALSTAFF. By the Lord, thou sayst true, lad, and is not my hostess of the tavern a most sweet wench?

PRINCE. As the honey of Hybla, my old lad of the castle, and is not a buff jerkin a most sweet robe of durance?

FALSTAFF. How now, how now, mad wag? what, in thy quips and thy quiddities? what a plague have I to do with a buff jerkin?

PRINCE. Why, what a pox have I to do with my hostess of the tavern?

FALSTAFF. Well, thou hast called her to a reckoning many a time and oft.

PRINCE. Did I ever call for thee to pay thy part?

FALSTAFF. No, I'll give thee thy due, thou hast paid all there.

PRINCE. Yea, and elsewhere, so far as my coin would stretch, and where it would not, I have used my credit.

FALSTAFF. Yea, and so used it that, were it not here apparent that thou art heir apparent—But, I prithee, sweet wag, shall there be gallows standing in England when thou art king? and resolution thus fubbed as it is with the rusty curb of old father Antic the law? Do not thou, when thou art king, hang a thief.

PRINCE. No, thou shalt.

FALSTAFF. Shall I? O rare! By the Lord, I'll be a brave judge!

PRINCE. Thou judgest false already. I mean, thou shalt have the hanging of the thieves and so become a rare hangman.

FALSTAFF. Well, Hal, well—and in some sort it jumps with my humour, as well as waiting in the court, I can tell you.

PRINCE. For obtaining of suits?

FALSTAFF. Yea, for obtaining of suits, whereof the hangman hath no lean wardrobe.... 'Sblood, I am as melancholy as a gib cat or a lugged bear.

PRINCE. Or an old lion, or a lover's lute.

FALSTAFF. Yea, or the drone of a Lincolnshire bagpipe.

PRINCE. What sayest thou to a hare, or the melancholy of Moor-ditch?

FALSTAFF. Thou hast the most unsavoury similes and art indeed the most comparative, rascalliest, sweet young prince.... But, Hal, I prithee, trouble me no more with vanity. I would to God thou and I knew where a commodity of good names were to be bought: an old lord of the council rated me the other day in the street about you, sir, but I marked him not, and yet he talked very wisely, but I regarded him not, and yet he talked wisely and in the street too.

PRINCE. Thou didst well, for wisdom cries out in the streets, and no man regards it.

FALSTAFF. O, thou hast damnable iteration, and art indeed able to corrupt a saint: thou hast done much harm upon me, Hal—God forgive thee for it: before I knew thee, Hal, I knew nothing, and now am I, if a man should speak truly, little better than one of the wicked ... I must give over this life, and I will give it over: by the Lord, an I do not, I am a villain. I'll be damned for never a king's son in Christendom.

PRINCE. Where shall we take a purse to-morrow, Jack?

FALSTAFF. 'Zounds, where thou wilt, lad, I'll make one, an I do not, call me villain and baffle me.

PRINCE. I see a good amendment of life in thee, from praying to purse-taking.

FALSTAFF. Why, Hal, 'tis my vocation, Hal, 'tis no sin for a man to labour in his vocation.

Poins enters

Poins! Now shall we know if Gadshill have set a match. [points] O, if men were to be saved by merit, what hole in hell were hot enough for him? This is the most omnipotent villain that ever cried 'Stand' to a true man.

PRINCE. Good morrow, Ned.

POINS. Good morrow, sweet Hal. What says Monsieur. Remorse? What says Sir John Sack and Sugar? Jack, how agrees the devil and thee about thy soul, that thou soldest him on Good Friday last, for a cup of Madeira and a cold capon's leg?

PRINCE. Sir John stands to his word, the devil shall have his bargain, for he was never yet a breaker of proverbs: he will give the devil his due.

POINTS. Then art thou damned for keeping thy word with the devil.

PRINCE. Else he had been damned for cozening the devil.

POINS. But, my lads, my lads, to-morrow morning, by four o'clock, early at Gad's Hill, there are pilgrims going to Canterbury with rich offerings, and traders riding to London with fat purses.... I have vizards for you all, you have horses for yourselves, Gadshill lies to-night in Rochester, I have bespoke supper to-morrow night in Eastcheap: we may do it as secure as sleep. If you will go, I will stuff your purses full of crowns; if you will not, tarry at home and be hanged.

FALSTAFF. Hear ye, Yedward, if I tarry at home and go not, I'll hang you for going.

POINS. You will, chops?

FALSTAFF. Hal, wilt thou make one?

PRINCE. Who, I? rob? I a thief? not I, by my faith.

FALSTAFF. There's neither honesty, manhood, nor good fellowship in thee, nor thou cam'st not of the blood royal, if thou darest not stand for ten shillings.

PRINCE. Well then, once in my days I'll be a madcap.

FALSTAFF. Why, that's well said.

PRINCE. Well, come what will, I'll tarry at home.

FALSTAFF. By the Lord, I'll be a traitor then, when thou art king.

PRINCE. I care not.

POINS. Sir John, I prithee, leave the prince and me alone, I will lay him down such reasons for this adventure that he shall go.

FALSTAFF. Well, God give thee the spirit of persuasion, and him the ears of profiting, that what thou speakest may move, and what he hears may be believed, that the true prince may (for recreation sake) prove a false thief, for the poor abuses of the time want countenance... Farewell, you shall find me in Eastcheap.

PRINCE. Farewell, the latter spring! Farewell, All-hallown summer! Falstaff goes

POINS. Now, my good sweet honey lord, ride with us to-morrow. I have a jest to execute that I cannot manage alone. Falstaff, Bardolph, Peto and Gadshill shall rob those men that we have already waylaid—yourself and I will not be there: and when they have the booty, if you and I do not rob them, cut this head off from my shoulders.

PRINCE. How shall we part with them in setting forth?

POINS. Why, we will set forth before or after them, and appoint them a place of meeting, wherein it is at our pleasure to fail; and then will they adventure upon the exploit themselves, which they shall have no sooner achieved but we'll set upon them.

PRINCE. Yea, but 'tis like that they will know us by our horses, by our habits, and by every other appointment, to be ourselves.

POINS. Tut! our horses they shall not see, I'll tie them in the wood; our vizards we will change after we leave them; and, sirrah, I have cases of buckram for the nonce, to immask our noted outward garments.

PRINCE. Yea, but I doubt they will be too hard for us.

POINS. Well, for two of them, I know them to be as true-bred cowards as ever turned back; and for the third, if he fight longer than he sees reason, I'll forswear arms. The virtue of this jest will be the incomprehensible lies that this same fat rogue will tell us when we meet at supper, how thirty at least he fought with, what wards, what blows, what extremities he endured, and in the reproof of this lives the jest.

PRINCE. Well, I'll go with thee. Provide us all things necessary, and meet me to-morrow night in Eastcheap, there I'll sup... Farewell.

POINS. Farewell, my lord. Poins goes

PRINCE. I know you all, and will awhile uphold
The unyoked humour of your idleness.
Yet herein will I imitate the sun,
Who doth permit the base contagious clouds
To smother up his beauty from the world,
That when he please again to be himself,
Being wanted he may be more wond'red at,
By breaking through the foul and ugly mists
Of vapours that did seem to strangle him.
If all the year were playing holidays,
To sport would be as tedious as to work;
But when they seldom come, they wished for come,
And nothing pleaseth but rare accidents:
So, when this loose behaviour I throw off,
And pay the debt I never promiséd,
By how much better than my word I am,
By so much shall I falsify men's hopes,
And like bright metal on a sullen ground,
My reformation, glitt'ring o'er my fault,
Shall show more goodly, and attract more eyes,
Than that which hath no foil to set it off.
I'll so offend, to make offence a skill,
Redeeming time when men think least I will.
He goes

Scene 3: Windsor. The Council Chamber

Enter the King, Northumberland, Worcester, Hotspur, Sir Walter Blunt, with others

KING. My blood hath been too cold and temperate,
Unapt to stir at these indignities,
And you have found me—for accordingly
You tread upon my patience. But be sure
I will from henceforth rather be myself,
Mighty and to be feared, than my condition,
Which hath been smooth as oil, soft as young down,
And therefore lost that title of respect
Which the proud soul ne'er pays but to the proud.

WORCESTER. Our house, my sovereign liege, little deserves
The scourge of greatness to be used on it,
And that same greatness too which our own hands
Have holp to make so portly.

NORTHUMBERLAND. My lord,—

KING. Worcester, get thee gone, for I do see
Danger and disobedience in thine eye:
O, sir, your presence is too bold and peremptory,
And majesty might never yet endure
The moody frontier of a servant brow.
You have good leave to leave us. When we need
Your use and counsel, we shall send for you....
Worcester goes
You were about to speak.

NORTHUMBERLAND. Yea, my good lord.
Those prisoners in your highness' name demanded,
Which Harry Percy here at Holmedon took,
Were, as he says, not with such strength denied
As is delivered to your majesty.
Either envy, therefore, or misprision
Is guilty of this fault, and not my son.

HOTSPUR. My liege, I did deny no prisoners,
But I remember, when the fight was done,
When I was dry with rage and extreme toil,
Breathless and faint, leaning upon my sword,
Came there a certain lord, neat and trimly dressed,
Fresh as a bridegroom, and his chin new reaped
Showed like a stubble-land at harvest-home.
He was perfuméd like a milliner,
And 'twixt his finger and his thumb he held
A pouncet-box, which ever and anon
He gave his nose and took't away again—
Who therewith angry, when it next came there,
Took it in snuff—and still he smiled and talked:
And as the soldiers bore dead bodies by,
He called them untaught knaves, unmannerly,
To bring a slovenly unhandsome corse
Betwixt the wind and his nobility:
With many holiday and lady terms
He questioned me, amongst the rest demanded
My prisoners in your majesty's behalf.
I then, all smarting with my wounds being cold,
To be so pest'red with a popinjay,
Out of my grief and my impatience,
Answered neglectingly I know not what,
He should, or he should not, for he made me mad
To see him shine so brisk, and smell so sweet,
And talk so like a waiting-gentlewoman
Of guns, and drums, and wounds, God save the mark!
And telling me the sovereignest thing on earth
Was parmaceti for an inward bruise,
And that it was great pity, so it was,
This villainous salt-petre should be digged
Out of the bowels of the harmless earth,
Which many a good tall fellow had destroyed
So cowardly, and but for these vile guns
He would himself have been a soldier....
This bald unjointed chat of his, my lord,
I answered indirectly, as I said,
And I beseech you, let not his report
Come current for an accusation
Betwixt my love and your high majesty.

BLUNT. The circumstance considered, good my lord,
Whate'er Lord Harry Percy then had said
To such a person, and in such a place,
At such a time, with all the rest retold,
May reasonably die, and never rise
To do him wrong, or any way impeach
What then he said, so he unsay it now.

KING. Why, yet he doth deny his prisoners,
But with proviso and exception,
That we at our own charge shall ransom straight
His brother-in-law, the foolish Mortimer,
Who, on my soul, hath wilfully betrayed
The lives of those that he did lead to fight
Against the great magician, damned Glendower,
Whose daughter, as we hear, that Earl of March
Hath lately married ... Shall our coffers then
Be emptied to redeem a traitor home?
Shall we buy treason? and indent with fears,
When they have lost and forfeited themselves?
No, on the barren mountains let him starve;
For I shall never hold that man my friend,
Whose tongue shall ask me for one penny cost
To ransom home revolted Mortimer.

HOTSPUR. Revolted Mortimer!
He never did fall off, my sovereign liege,
But by the chance of war. To prove that true
Needs no more but one tongue for all those wounds,
Those mouthéd wounds, which valiantly he took,
When on the gentle Severn's sedgy bank,
In single opposition, hand to hand,
He did confound the best part of an hour
In changing hardiment with great Glendower.
Three times they breathed and three times did they drink,
Upon agreement, of swift Severn's flood,
Who then affrighted with their bloody looks,
Ran fearfully among the trembling reeds,
And hid his crisp head in the hollow bank
Bloodstainéd with these valiant combatants.
Never did bare and rotten policy
Colour her working with such deadly wounds,
Nor never could the noble Mortimer
Receive so many, and all willingly.
Then let him not be slandered with revolt.

KING. Thou dost belie him, Percy, thou dost belie him.
He never did encounter with Glendower:
I tell thee,
He durst as well have met the devil alone,
As Owen Glendower for an enemy.
Art thou not ashamed? But, sirrah, henceforth
Let me not hear you speak of Mortimer:
Send me your prisoners with the speediest means,
Or you shall hear in such a kind from me
As will displease you.... My Lord Northumberland,
We license your departure with your son.
Send us your prisoners, or you'll hear of it.

King Henry, Blunt and other nobles leave

HOTSPUR. And if the devil come and roar for them,
I will not send them: I will after straight
And tell him so, for I will ease my heart,
Albeit I make a hazard of my head.

NORTHUMBERLAND. What, drunk with choler? stay and pause awhile,
Here comes your uncle.

Worcester returns

HOTSPUR. Speak of Mortimer!
'Zounds, I will speak of him, and let my soul
Want mercy if I do not join with him:
Yea, on his part, I'll empty all these veins,
And shed my dear blood drop by drop in the dust,
But I will lift the down-trod Mortimer
As high in the air as this unthankful king,
As this ingrate and cank'red Bolingbroke.

NORTHUMBERLAND. Brother, the king hath made your nephew mad.

WORCESTER. Who struck this heat up after I was gone?

HOTSPUR. He will forsooth have all my prisoners,
And when I urged the ransom once again
Of my wife's brother, then his cheek looked pale,
And on my face he turned an eye of death,
Trembling even at the name of Mortimer.

WORCESTER. I cannot blame him, was not he proclaimed,
By Richard that dead is, the next of blood?

NORTHUMBERLAND. He was, I heard the proclamation:
And then it was when the unhappy king
(Whose wrongs in us God pardon!) did set forth

Upon his Irish expedition;
From whence he intercepted did return
To be deposed and shortly murderéd.
WORCESTER. And for whose death we in the world's wide mouth
Live scandalized and foully spoken of.
HOTSPUR. But soft, I pray you, did King Richard then Proclaim my brother Edmund Mortimer
Heir to the crown?
NORTHUMBERLAND. He did, myself did hear it.
HOTSPUR. Nay, then I cannot blame his cousin king,
That wished him on the barren mountains starve.
But shall it be that you, that set the crown
Upon the head of this forgetful man,
And for his sake wear the detested blot
Of murderous subornation, shall it be
That you a world of curses undergo,
Being the agents, or base second means,
The cords, the ladder, or the hangman rather?—
O, pardon me that I descend so low,
To show the line, and the predicament,
Wherein you range under this subtle king!—
Shall it for shame be spoken in these days,
Or fill up chronicles in time to come,
That men of your nobility and power
Did gage them both in an unjust behalf
(As both of you, God pardon it! have done)
To put down Richard, that sweet lovely rose,
And plant this thorn, this canker, Bolingbroke?
And shall it in more shame be further spoken,
That you are fooled, discarded, and shook off
By him for whom these shames ye underwent?
No, yet time serves wherein you may redeem
Your banished honours, and restore yourselves
Into the good thoughts of the world again:
Revenge the jeering and disdained contempt
Of this proud king, who studies day and night
To answer all the debt he owes to you,
Even with the bloody payment of your deaths:
Therefore, I say—
WORCESTER. Peace, cousin, say no more.
And now I will unclasp a secret book,
And to your quick-conceiving discontents
I'll read you matter deep and dangerous,
As full of peril and adventurous spirit
As to o'er-walk a current roaring loud
On the unsteadfast footing of a spear.
HOTSPUR. If he fall in, good night! or sink or swim.
Send danger from the east unto the west,
So honour cross it from the north to south,
And let them grapple: O, the blood more stirs
To rouse a lion than to start a hare!
NORTHUMBERLAND. Imagination of some great exploit
Drives him beyond the bounds of patience.
HOTSPUR. By heaven, methinks it were an easy leap,
To pluck bright honour from the pale-faced moon,
Or dive into the bottom of the deep,
Where fathom-line could never touch the ground,
And pluck up drownéd honour by the locks,
So he that doth redeem her thence might wear
Without corrival all her dignities:
But out upon this half-faced fellowship!
WORCESTER. He apprehends a world of figures here,
But not the form of what he should attend.
Good cousin, give me audience for a while.
HOTSPUR. I cry you mercy.
WORCESTER. Those same noble Scots
That are your prisoners,—
HOTSPUR. I'll keep them all;
By God, he shall not have a Scot of them.
No, if a Scot would save his soul, he shall not.
I'll keep them, by this hand.
WORCESTER. You start away,
And lend no ear unto my purposes . . .
Those prisoners you shall keep.
HOTSPUR. Nay, I will: that's flat:
He said he would not ransom Mortimer,
Forbad my tongue to speak of Mortimer,
But I will find him when he lies asleep,
And in his ear I'll holla 'Mortimer!'
Nay,
I'll have a starling shall be taught to speak
Nothing but 'Mortimer', and give it him
To keep his anger still in motion.
WORCESTER. Hear you, cousin, a word.
HOTSPUR. All studies here I solemnly defy,
Save how to gall and pinch this Bolingbroke.
And that same sword-and-buckler Prince of Wales,
But that I think his father loves him not
And would be glad he met with some mischance,
I would have him poisoned with a pot of ale.
WORCESTER. Farewell, kinsman! I'll talk to you
When you are better tempered to attend.
NORTHUMBERLAND. Why, what a wasp-stung and impatient fool
Art thou, to break into this woman's mood,
Tying thine ear to no tongue but thine own!
HOTSPUR. Why, look you, I am whipped and scourged with rods,
Nettled, and stung with pismires, when I hear
Of this vile politician, Bolingbroke.
In Richard's time—what de'ye call the place?—
A plague upon't, it is in Gloucestershire;
'Twas where the madcap duke his uncle kept,
His uncle York—where I first bowed my knee
Unto this king of smiles, this Bolingbroke—
'Sblood! When you and he came back from Ravenspurgh—
NORTHUMBERLAND. At Berkeley castle.
HOTSPUR. You say true.
Why, what a candy deal of courtesy
This fawning greyhound then did proffer me!
'Look when his infant fortune came to age',
And, 'gentle Harry Percy', and 'kind cousin':
O, the devil take such cozeners! God forgive me!
Good uncle, tell your tale—I have done.
WORCESTER. Nay, if you have not, to it again,
We will stay your leisure.
HOTSPUR. I have done, i'faith.
WORCESTER. Then once more to your Scottish prisoners.
Deliver them up without their ransom straight,
And make the Douglas' son your only mean
For powers in Scotland, which, for divers reasons
Which I shall send you written, be assured
Will easily be granted. You, my lord,
To Northumberland
Your son in Scotland being thus employed,
Shall secretly into the bosom creep
Of that same noble prelate, well beloved,
The archbishop.
HOTSPUR. Of York, is't not?

WORCESTER. True; who bears hard
His brother's death at Bristow, the Lord Scroop.
I speak not this in estimation,
As what I think might be, but what I know
Is ruminated, plotted, and set down,
And only stays but to behold the face
Of that occasion that shall bring it on.
HOTSPUR. I smell it. Upon my life, it will do well.
NORTHUMBERLAND. Before the game's afoot thou still let'st slip.
HOTSPUR. Why, it cannot choose but be a noble plot.
And then the power of Scotland and of York,
To join with Mortimer, ha?
WORCESTER. And so they shall.
HOTSPUR. In faith, it is exceedingly well aimed.
WORCESTER. And 'tis no little reason bids us speed,
To save our heads by raising of a head,
For, bear ourselves as even as we can,
The king will always think him in our debt,
And think we think ourselves unsatisfied,
Till he hath found a time to pay us home.
And see already how he doth begin
To make us strangers to his looks of love.
HOTSPUR. He does, he does, we'll be revenged on him.
WORCESTER. Cousin, farewell. No further go in this
Than I by letters shall direct your course.
When time is ripe, which will be suddenly,
I'll steal to Glendower and Lord Mortimer,
Where you and Douglas and our powers at once,
As I will fashion it, shall happily meet,
To bear our fortunes in our own strong arms,
Which now we hold at much uncertainty.
NORTHUMBERLAND. Farewell, good brother, we shall thrive, I trust.
HOTSPUR. Uncle, adieu: O, let the hours be short,
Till fields, and blows, and groans applaud our sport! They go

ACT 2

Scene 1: An inn yard at Rochester

Enter a Carrier with a lantern in his hand

1 CARRIER. Heigh-ho! An't be not four by the day, I'll be hanged. Charles' wain is over the new chimney, and yet our horse not packed. What, ostler!

OSTLER [within]. Anon, anon.

1 CARRIER. I prithee, Tom, beat Cut's saddle, put a few flocks in the point, poor jade is wrung in the withers, out of all cess.

Enter another Carrier

2 CARRIER. Peas and beans are as dank here as a dog, and that is the next way to give poor jades the bots: this house is turned upside down since Robin Ostler died.

1 CARRIER. Poor fellow never joyed since the price of oats rose, it was the death of him.

2 CARRIER. I think this be the most villainous house in all London road for fleas, I am stung like a tench.

1 CARRIER. Like a tench! by the mass, there is ne'er a king christen could be better bit than I have been since the first cock.

2 CARRIER. Why, they will allow us ne'er a jordan, and then we leak in your chimney, and your chamber-lye breeds fleas like a loach.

1 CARRIER. What, ostler! come away, and be hanged, come away.

2 CARRIER. I have a gammon of bacon, and two razes of ginger, to be delivered as far as Charing-cross.

1 CARRIER. God's body! the turkeys in my pannier are quite starved.... What, ostler! a plague on thee! hast thou never an eye in thy head? canst not hear? An 'twere not as good deed as drink, to break the pate on thee, I am a very villain. Come, and be hanged! hast no faith in thee?

Enter Gadshill

GADSHILL. Good morrow, carriers, what's o'clock?

1 CARRIER. I think it be two o'clock.

GADSHILL. I prithee, lend me thy lantern to see my gelding in the stable.

1 CARRIER. Nay, by God, soft, I know a trick worth two of that, ay, faith!

GADSHILL. I pray thee, lend me thine.

2 CARRIER. Ay, when? canst tell? Lend me thy lantern, quoth-a? marry, I'll see thee hanged first.

GADSHILL. Sirrah carrier, what time do you mean to come to London?

2 CARRIER. Time enough to go to bed with a candle, I warrant thee. Come, neighbour Mugs, we'll call up the gentlemen. They will along with company, for they have great charge. The carriers go

GADSHILL. What, ho! chamberlain!

VOICE FROM WITHIN. At hand, quoth pick-purse.

GADSHILL. That's even as fair as—at hand, quoth the chamberlain: for thou variest no more from picking of purses than giving direction doth from labouring; thou layest the plot how.

A Chamberlain comes from the inn

CHAMBERLAIN. Good morrow, Master Gadshill. It holds current that I told you yesternight. There's a franklin in the wild of Kent, hath brought three hundred marks with him in gold, I heard him tell it to one of his company last night at supper, a kind of auditor, one that hath abundance of charge too, God knows what. They are up already, and call for eggs and butter. They will away presently.

GADSHILL. Sirrah, if they meet not with Saint Nicholas' clerks, I'll give thee this neck.

CHAMBERLAIN. No, I'll none of it. I pray thee, keep that for the hangman, for I know thou worshippest Saint Nicholas, as truly as a man of falsehood may.

GADSHILL. What talkest thou to me of the hangman? if I hang, I'll make a fat pair of gallows: for, if I hang, old Sir John hangs with me, and thou knowest he's no starveling. Tut! there are other Trojans that thou dream'st not of, the which for sport sake are content to do the profession some grace, that would, if matters should be looked into, for their own credit sake make all whole. I am joined with no foot-land-rakers, no long-staff sixpenny strikers, none of these mad mustachio purple-hued malt-worms, but with nobility and tranquillity, burgomasters and great onyers, such as can hold in, such as will strike sooner than speak, and speak sooner than drink, and drink sooner than pray. And yet, 'zounds, I lie, for they pray continually to their saint, the commonwealth, or rather not pray to her, but prey on her, for they ride up and down on her, and make her their boots.

CHAMBERLAIN. What, the commonwealth their boots? will she hold out water in foul way?

GADSHILL. She will, she will—Justice hath liquored her: we steal as in a castle, cock-sure: we have the receipt of fern-seed, we walk invisible.

CHAMBERLAIN. Nay, by my faith, I think you are more beholding to the night than to fern-seed for your walking invisible.

GADSHILL. Give me thy hand, thou shalt have a share in our purchase, as I am a true man.

CHAMBERLAIN. Nay, rather let me have it, as you are a false thief.

GADSHILL. Go to, 'homo' is a common name to all men: bid the ostler bring my gelding out of the stable. Farewell, you muddy knave. They go

Scene 2: A lane near Gad's Hill, some two miles from Rochester

Enter the Prince, Peto and Bardolph; Poins hurrying after

POINS. Come, shelter, shelter! I have removed Falstaff's horse, and he frets like a gummed velvet.

PRINCE. Stand close. Poins hides behind a bush

Falstaff enters

FALSTAFF. Poins! Poins, and be hanged! Poins!

PRINCE. Peace, ye fat-kidneyed rascal! what a brawling dost thou keep!

FALSTAFF. Where's Poins, Hal?

PRINCE. He is walked up to the top of the hill, I'll go seek him. He joins Poins

FALSTAFF. I am accursed to rob in that thief's company. The rascal hath removed my horse, and tied him I know not where. If I travel but four foot by the squier further afoot, I shall break my wind.... Well, I doubt not but to die a fair death for all this, if I 'scape hanging for killing that rogue. I have forsworn his company hourly any time this two and twenty years, and yet I am bewitched with the rogue's company. If the rascal have not given me medicines to make me love him, I'll be hanged. It could not be else—I have drunk medicines. Poins! Hal! a plague upon you both! Bardolph! Peto! I'll starve ere I'll rob a foot further. An 'twere not as good a deed as drink, to turn true man and to leave these rogues, I am the veriest varlet that ever chewed with a tooth ... Eight yards of uneven ground is threescore and ten miles afoot with me, and the stony-hearted villains know it well enough. A plague upon't, when thieves cannot be true one to another! [they whistle] Whew! A plague upon you all! Give me my horse, you rogues, give me my horse and be hanged.

PRINCE [coming forward]. Peace, ye fat-guts! lie down, lay thine ear close to the ground and list if thou canst hear the tread of travellers.

FALSTAFF. Have you any levers to lift me up again, being down? 'Sblood, I'll not bear mine own flesh so far afoot again for all the coin in thy father's exchequer. What a plague mean ye to colt me thus?

PRINCE. Thou liest, thou art not colted, thou art uncolted.

FALSTAFF. I prithee, good Prince Hal, help me to my horse, good king's son.

PRINCE. Out, ye rogue! shall I be your ostler?

FALSTAFF. Go hang thyself in thine own heir-apparent garters! If I be ta'en, I'll peach for this... An I have not ballads made on you all and sung to filthy tunes, let a cup of sack be my poison—when a jest is so forward, and afoot too! I hate it.

Gadshill approaches

GADSHILL. Stand!

FALSTAFF. So I do, against my will.

Poins, Bardolph, and Peto come forward

POINS. O, 'tis our setter. I know his voice.

BARDOLPH. What news?

GADSHILL. Case ye, case ye, on with your vizards, there's money of the king's coming down the hill, 'tis going to the king's exchequer.

FALSTAFF. You lie, ye rogue, 'tis going to the king's tavern.

GADSHILL. There's enough to make us all.

FALSTAFF. —To be hanged.

PRINCE. Sirs, you four shall front them in the narrow lane: Ned Poins and I will walk lower. If they 'scape from your encounter, then they light on us.

PETO. How many be there of them?

GADSHILL. Some eight, or ten.

FALSTAFF. 'Zounds, will they not rob us?

PRINCE. What, a coward, Sir John Paunch?

FALSTAFF. Indeed, I am not John of Gaunt, your grandfather, but yet no coward, Hal.

PRINCE. Well, we leave that to the proof.

POINS. Sirrah Jack, thy horse stands behind the hedge, when thou need'st him, there thou shalt find him... Farewell, and stand fast.

FALSTAFF. Now cannot I strike him, if I should be hanged.

PRINCE. Ned, where are our disguises?

POINS. Here, hard by, stand close. The Prince and Poins go

FALSTAFF. Now, my masters, happy man be his dole! say I; every man to his business.

The Travellers enter

1 TRAVELLER. Come, neighbour, the boy shall lead our horses down the hill, we'll walk afoot awhile and ease our legs.

THIEVES. Stand!

TRAVELLERS. Jesus bless us!

FALSTAFF. Strike, down with them, cut the villains' throats! Ah, whoreson caterpillars! bacon-fed knaves! they hate us youth. Down with them, fleece them.

1 TRAVELLER. O, we are undone, both we and ours for ever.

FALSTAFF. Hang ye, gorbellied knaves, are ye undone? No, ye fat chuffs. I would your store were here! On, bacons, on! What, ye knaves? young men must live. You are grandjurors, are ye? We'll jure ye, faith.

Here they rob them and bind them and then drive them down the hill

The Prince and Poins return, disguised in buckram

PRINCE. The thieves have bound the true men. Now could thou and I rob the thieves, and go merrily to London, it would be argument for a week, laughter for a month, and a good jest for ever.

POINS. Stand close, I hear them coming.

The Thieves return

FALSTAFF. Come, my masters, let us share, and then to horse before day. An the Prince and Poins be not two arrant cowards, there's no equity stirring. There's no more valour in that Poins than in a wild-duck.

As they are sharing, the Prince and Poins set upon them

PRINCE. Your money!

POINS. Villains!

They all run away, leaving the booty behind them, and Falstaff, after a blow or two, runs away too

PRINCE. Got with much ease. Now merrily to horse: the thieves are all scattered, and possessed with fear so strongly that they dare not meet each other. Each takes his fellow for an officer. Away, good Ned. Falstaff sweats to death, and lards the lean earth as he walks along. Were't not for laughing, I should pity him.

POINS. How the fat rogue roared! They go

Scene 3: Warkworth Castle

Enter Hotspur, solus, reading a letter

HOTSPUR. 'But, for mine own part, my lord, I could be well contented to be there, in respect of the love I bear your house.'

He could be contented: why is he not then? In respect of the love he bears our house: he shows in this, he loves his own barn better than he loves our house. Let me see some more.

'The purpose you undertake is dangerous.'

Why, that's certain. 'Tis dangerous to take a cold, to sleep, to drink, but I tell you, my lord fool, out of this nettle, danger, we pluck this flower, safety.

'The purpose you undertake is dangerous, the friends you have named uncertain, the time itself unsorted, and your whole plot too light for the counterpoise of so great an opposition.'

Say you so, say you so? I say unto you again, you are a shallow cowardly hind, and you lie . . . What a lack-brain is this! By the Lord, our plot is a good plot as ever was laid, our friends true and constant: a good plot, good friends, and full of expectation: an excellent plot, very good friends . . . What a frosty-spirited rogue is this! Why, my lord of York commends the plot and the general course of the action. 'Zounds, an I were now by this rascal, I could brain him with his lady's fan. Is there not my father, my uncle, and myself? Lord Edmund Mortimer, my lord of York, and Owen Glendower? is there not besides the Douglas? have I not all their letters to meet me in arms by the ninth of the next month? and are they not some of them set forward already? What a pagan rascal is this! an infidel! Ha! you shall see now, in very sincerity of fear and cold heart, will he to the king, and lay open all our proceedings! O, I could divide myself and go to buffets, for moving such a dish of skim milk with so honourable an action! Hang him! let him tell the king, we are prepared: I will set forward to-night.

Enter his Lady

How now, Kate? I must leave you within these two hours.

LADY PERCY. O my good lord, why are you thus alone?
For what offence have I this fortnight been
A banished woman from my Harry's bed?
Tell me, sweet lord, what is't that takes from thee
Thy stomach, pleasure, and thy golden sleep?
Why dost thou bend thine eyes upon the earth,
And start so often when thou sit'st alone?
Why hast thou lost the fresh blood in thy cheeks,
And given my treasures and my rights of thee
To thick-eyed musing and curst melancholy?
In thy faint slumbers I by thee have watched,
And heard thee murmur tales of iron wars,
Speak terms of manage to thy bounding steed,
Cry 'Courage! to the field!' And thou hast talked
Of sallies and retires, of trenches, tents,
Of palisadoes, frontiers, parapets,
Of basilisks, of cannon, culverin,
Of prisoners' ransom, and of soldiers slain,
And all the currents of a heady fight.
Thy spirit within thee hath been so at war,
And thus hath so bestirred thee in thy sleep,
That beads of sweat have stood upon thy brow,
Like bubbles in a late-disturbéd stream,
And in thy face strange motions have appeared,
Such as we see when men restrain their breath
On some great sudden hest. O, what portents are these?
Some heavy business hath my lord in hand,
And I must know it, else he loves me not.

HOTSPUR. What, ho!

A servant enters

Is Gilliams with the packet gone?

SERVANT. He is, my lord, an hour ago.

HOTSPUR Hath Butler brought those horses from the sheriff?

SERVANT. One horse, my lord, he brought even now.

HOTSPUR. What horse? a roan, a crop-ear, is it not?

SERVANT. It is, my lord.

HOTSPUR [rapt]. That roan shall be my throne.
Well, I will back him straight: O esperance!
Bid Butler lead him forth into the park.

The servant goes

LADY PERCY. But hear you, my lord.

HOTSPUR. What say'st thou, my lady?

LADY PERCY. What is it carries you away?

HOTSPUR. Why, my horse, my love, my horse.

LADY PERCY. Out, you mad-headed ape!
A weasel hath not such a deal of spleen
As you are tossed with. In faith,
I'll know your business, Harry, that I will.
I fear my brother Mortimer doth stir
About his title, and hath sent for you
To line his enterprize. But if you go—

HOTSPUR. So far afoot, I shall be weary, love.

LADY PERCY. Come, come, you paraquito, answer me
Directly unto this question that I ask.
In faith, I'll break thy little finger, Harry,
An if thou wilt not tell me all things true.

HOTSPUR. Away,
Away, you trifler! Love! I love thee not,
I care not for thee, Kate. This is no world
To play with mammets and to tilt with lips.
We must have bloody noses and cracked crowns,
And pass them current too. . . . God's me, my horse!

What say'st thou, Kate? what wouldst thou have with me?
LADY PERCY. Do you not love me? do you not, indeed?
Well, do not then, for since you love me not
I will not love myself. Do you not love me?
Nay, tell me if you speak in jest or no.
HOTSPUR. Come, wilt thou see me ride?
And when I am a-horseback, I will swear
I love thee infinitely. But hark you, Kate,
I must not have you henceforth question me
Whither I go, nor reason whereabout.
Whither I must, I must. And, to conclude,
This evening must I leave you, gentle Kate.
I know you wise, but yet no farther wise
Than Harry Percy's wife; constant you are,
But yet a woman, and for secrecy,
No lady closer, for I well believe
Thou wilt not utter what thou dost not know.
And so far will I trust thee, gentle Kate!
LADY PERCY. How! so far?
HOTSPUR. Not an inch further. But hark you, Kate,
Whither I go, thither shall you go too:
To-day will I set forth, to-morrow you—
Will this content you, Kate?
LADY PERCY. It must, of force.
They go

Scene 4: The Boar's Head Tavern in Eastcheap

The Prince enters

PRINCE. Ned, prithee, come out of that fat room, and lend me thy hand to laugh a little.

POINS. Where hast been, Hal? Comes forth

PRINCE. With three or four loggerheads, amongst three or four score hogsheads. I have sounded the very base-string of humility. Sirrah, I am sworn brother to a leash of drawers, and can call them all by their christen names, as Tom, Dick, and Francis. They take it already upon their salvation, that though I be but Prince of Wales, yet I am the king of Courtesy, and tell me flatly I am no proud Jack like Falstaff, but a Corinthian, a lad of mettle, a good boy (by the Lord, so they call me!) and when I am king of England, I shall command all the good lads in Eastcheap. They call drinking deep 'dyeing scarlet', and when you breathe in your watering, they cry 'hem!' and bid you 'play if off'. To conclude, I am so good a proficient in one quarter of an hour, that I can drink with any tinker in his own language during my life. I tell thee, Ned, thou hast lost much honour, that thou wert not with me in this action . . . But, sweet Ned—to sweeten which name of Ned, I give thee this pennyworth of sugar, clapped even now into my hand by an underskinker, one that never spake other English in his life than 'Eight shillings and sixpence', and 'You are welcome', with this shrill addition, 'Anon, anon, sir! Score a pint of bastard in the Half-moon', or so. But, Ned, to drive away the time till Falstaff come, I prithee, do thou stand in some by-room, while I question my puny drawer to what end he gave me the sugar, and do thou never leave calling 'Francis', that his tale to me may be nothing but 'Anon'. Step aside, and I'll show thee a precedent.

Poins returns to the room whence he came

POINS [calls]. Francis!

PRINCE. Thou art perfect.

POINS. Francis!

Francis enters

FRANCIS. Anon, anon, sir.
Look down into the Pomgarnet, Ralph.

PRINCE. Come hither, Francis.

FRANCIS. My lord?

PRINCE. How long hast thou to serve, Francis?

FRANCIS. Forsooth, five years, and as much as to—

POINS [within]. Francis!

FRANCIS. Anon, anon, sir.

PRINCE. Five year! by'r lady, a long lease for the clinking of pewter . . . But, Francis, darest thou be so valiant as to play the coward with thy indenture and show it a fair pair of heels and run from it?

FRANCIS. O Lord, sir! I'll be sworn upon all the books in England, I could find in my heart—

POINS [within]. Francis!

FRANCIS. Anon, sir.

PRINCE. How old art thou, Francis?

FRANCIS. Let me see—about Michaelmas next I shall be—

POINS [within]. Francis!

FRANCIS. Anon, sir. Pray stay a little, my lord.

PRINCE. Nay, but hark you, Francis. For the sugar thou gavest me—'twas a pennyworth, was't not?

FRANCIS. O Lord, I would it had been two!

PRINCE. I will give thee for it a thousand pound. Ask me when thou wilt, and thou shalt have it—

POINS [within]. Francis!

FRANCIS. Anon, anon.

PRINCE. Anon, Francis? No, Francis, but to-morrow, Francis; or, Francis, a-Thursday; or, indeed, Francis, when thou wilt. But, Francis!

FRANCIS. My lord?

PRINCE. Wilt thou rob this leathern jerkin, crystal-button, not-pated, agate-ring, puke-stocking, caddis-garter, smooth-tongue, Spanish-pouch,—

FRANCIS. O Lord, sir, who do you mean?

PRINCE. Why then, your brown bastard is your only drink! for, look you, Francis, your white canvas doublet will sully. In Barbary, sir, it cannot come to so much.

FRANCIS. What, sir?

POINS [within]. Francis!

PRINCE. Away, you rogue, dost thou not hear them call?

Here they both call him; the drawer stands amazed, not knowing which way to go

The Vintner comes in

VINTNER. What! stand'st thou still, and hear'st such a calling? Look to the guests within. [Francis goes] My lord, old Sir John, with half-a-dozen more, are at the door. Shall I let them in?

PRINCE. Let them alone awhile, and then open the door. [Vintner goes] Poins!

POINS [returning]. Anon, anon, sir.

PRINCE. Sirrah, Falstaff and the rest of the thieves are at the door. Shall we be merry?

POINS. As merry as crickets, my lad. But hark ye, what cunning match have you made with this jest of the drawer? come, what's the issue?

PRINCE. I am now of all humours that have showed themselves humours since the old days of goodman Adam to the pupil age of this present twelve o'clock at midnight. What's o'clock, Francis?

FRANCIS. Anon, anon, sir. He goes out

PRINCE. That ever this fellow should have fewer words than a parrot, and yet the son of a woman! His industry is up-stairs and down-stairs, his eloquence the parcel of a reckoning. . . . I am not yet of Percy's mind, the Hotspur of the north, he that kills me some six or seven dozen of Scots at a breakfast, washes his hands, and says to his wife, 'Fie upon this quiet life! I want work.' 'O my sweet Harry,' says she, 'how many hast thou killed to-day?' 'Give my roan horse a drench', says he, and answers, 'Some fourteen', an hour after; 'a trifle, a trifle.' I prithee, call in Falstaff. I'll play Percy, and that damned brawn shall play Dame Mortimer his wife. 'Rivo!' says the drunkard: call in Ribs, call in Tallow.

Falstaff enters with Gadshill, Bardolph and Peto; Francis follows with cups of sack

POINS. Welcome, Jack. Where hast thou been?

FALSTAFF. A plague of all cowards, I say, and a vengeance too! marry, and amen! Give me a cup of sack, boy. Ere I lead this life long, I'll sew netherstocks, and mend them, and foot them too. A plague of all cowards! Give me a cup of sack, rogue. Is there no virtue extant? He drinketh

PRINCE. Didst thou never see Titan kiss a dish of butter (pitiful-hearted Titan!) that melted at the sweet tale of the sun's? If thou didst, then behold that compound.

FALSTAFF. You rogue, here's lime in this sack too . . . There is nothing but roguery to be found in villainous man, yet a coward is worse than a cup of sack with lime in it. A villainous coward! Go thy ways, old Jack, die when thou wilt. If manhood, good manhood, be not forgot upon the face of the earth, then am I a shotten herring . . . There lives not three good men unhanged in England, and one of them is fat, and grows old. God help the while! a bad world, I say. I would I were a weaver—I could sing psalms or any thing. A plague of all cowards, I say still.

PRINCE. How now, wool-sack! what mutter you?

FALSTAFF. A king's son! If I do not beat thee out of thy kingdom with a dagger of lath, and drive all thy subjects afore thee like a flock of wild-geese, I'll never wear hair on my face more. You, Prince of Wales!

PRINCE. Why, you whoreson round man! what's the matter?

FALSTAFF. Are not you a coward? answer me to that—and Poins there?

POINS. 'Zounds, ye fat paunch, an ye call me coward, by the Lord I'll stab thee.

FALSTAFF. I call thee coward! I'll see thee damned ere I call thee coward—but I would give a thousand pound I could run as fast as thou canst. You are straight enough in the shoulders, you care not who sees your back: call you that backing of your friends? A plague upon such backing! give me them that will face me. Give me a cup of sack—I am a rogue, if I drunk to-day.

PRINCE. O villain! thy lips are scarce wiped since thou drunk'st last.

FALSTAFF. All's one for that. [he drinketh] A plague of all cowards, still say I.

PRINCE. What's the matter?

FALSTAFF. What's the matter? there be four of us here have ta'en a thousand pound this day morning.

PRINCE. Where is it, Jack? where is it?

FALSTAFF. Where is it? taken from us it is: a hundred upon poor four of us.

PRINCE. What, a hundred, man?

FALSTAFF. I am a rogue, if I were not at half-sword with a dozen of them two hours together. I have 'scaped by miracle. I am eight times thrust through the doublet, four through the hose, my buckler cut through and through, my sword hacked like a handsaw, ecce signum! I never dealt better since I was a man: all would not do. A plague of all cowards! Let them speak. If they speak more or less than truth, they are villains and the sons of darkness.

PRINCE. Speak, sirs, how was it?

GADSHILL. We four set upon some dozen—

FALSTAFF. Sixteen at least, my lord.

GADSHILL. And bound them.

PETO. No, no, they were not bound.

FALSTAFF. You rogue, they were bound, every man of them, or I am a Jew else, an Ebrew Jew.

GADSHILL. As we were sharing, some six or seven fresh men set upon us—

FALSTAFF. And unbound the rest, and then come in the other.

PRINCE. What, fought you with them all?

FALSTAFF. All! I know not what you call all, but if I fought not with fifty of them I am a bunch of radish: if there were not two or three and fifty upon poor old Jack, then am I no two-legged creature.

PRINCE. Pray God you have not murdered some of them.

FALSTAFF. Nay, that's past praying for. I have peppered two of them. Two I am sure I have paid, two rogues in buckram suits . . . I tell thee what, Hal, if I tell thee a lie, spit in my face, call me horse. Thou knowest my old ward: here I lay, and thus I bore my point. Four rogues in buckram let drive at me—

PRINCE. What, four? thou said'st but two even now.

FALSTAFF. Four, Hal, I told thee four.

POINS. Ay, ay, he said four.

FALSTAFF. These four came all afront, and mainly thrust at me. I made me no more ado, but took all their seven points in my target, thus.

PRINCE. Seven? why, there were but four even now.

FALSTAFF. In buckram?

POINS. Ay, four, in buckram suits.

FALSTAFF. Seven, by these hilts, or I am a villain else.

PRINCE. Prithee, let him alone, we shall have more anon.

FALSTAFF. Dost thou hear me, Hal?

PRINCE. Ay, and mark thee too, Jack.

FALSTAFF. Do so, for it is worth the listening to. These nine in buckram that I told thee of—

PRINCE. So, two more already.

FALSTAFF. Their points being broken—

POINS. Down fell their hose.

FALSTAFF. Began to give me ground: but I followed me close, came in foot and hand, and with a thought, seven of the eleven I paid.

PRINCE. O monstrous! eleven buckram men grown out of two!

FALSTAFF. But, as the devil would have it, three misbegotten knaves in Kendal green came at my back, and let drive at me, for it was so dark, Hal, that thou couldest not see thy hand.

PRINCE. These lies are like their father that begets them, gross as a mountain, open, palpable. Why, thou clay-brained guts, thou knotty-pated fool, thou whoreson, obscene, greasy tallow-catch—

FALSTAFF. What, art thou mad? art thou mad? is not the truth the truth?

PRINCE. Why, how couldst thou know these men in Kendal green, when it was so dark thou couldst not see thy hand? come tell us your reason. What sayest thou to this?

POINS. Come, your reason, Jack, your reason.

FALSTAFF. What, upon compulsion? 'Zounds, an I were at the strappado, or all the racks in the world, I would not tell you on compulsion. Give you a reason on compulsion! if reasons were as plentiful as blackberries, I would give no man a reason upon compulsion, I.

PRINCE. I'll be no longer guilty of this sin. This sanguine coward, this bed-presser, this horseback-breaker, this huge hill of flesh—

FALSTAFF. 'Sblood, you starveling, you eel-skin, you dried neat's-tongue, you bull's-pizzle, you stock-fish! O, for breath to utter what is like thee! you tailor's-yard, you sheath, you bow-case, you vile standing tuck—

PRINCE. Well, breathe awhile, and then to it again, and when thou hast tired thyself in base comparisons, hear me speak but this.

POINS. Mark, Jack.

PRINCE. We two saw you four set on four, and bound them and were masters of their wealth: mark now, how a plain tale shall put you down. Then did we two set on you four, and with a word, out-faced you from your prize, and have it, yea, and can show it you here in the house: and, Falstaff, you carried your guts away as nimbly, with as quick dexterity, and roared for mercy, and still run and roared, as ever I heard bull-calf. What a slave art thou, to hack thy sword as thou hast done, and then say it was in fight! What trick, what device, what starting-hole, canst thou now find out, to hide thee from this open and apparent shame?

POINS. Come, let's hear, Jack—what trick hast thou now?

FALSTAFF. By the Lord, I knew ye as well as he that made ye.... Why, hear you, my masters—was it for me to kill the heir-apparent? should I turn upon the true prince? why, thou knowest I am as valiant as Hercules: but beware instinct—the lion will not touch the true prince. Instinct is a great matter—I was now a coward on instinct. I shall think the better of myself and thee during my life; I for a valiant lion, and thou for a true prince... But, by the Lord, lads, I am glad you have the money. Hostess, clap to the doors. Watch to-night, pray to-morrow. Gallants, lads, boys, hearts of gold, all the titles of good fellowship come to you! What, shall we be merry? shall we have a play extempore?

PRINCE. Content—and the argument shall be thy running away.

FALSTAFF. Ah! no more of that, Hal, an thou lovest me.

Hostess enters

HOSTESS. O Jesu, my lord the prince,—

PRINCE. How now, my lady the hostess! what say'st thou to me?

HOSTESS. Marry, my lord, there is a nobleman of the court at door would speak with you: he says he comes from your father.

PRINCE. Give him as much as will make him a royal man, and send him back again to my mother.

FALSTAFF. What manner of man is he?

HOSTESS. An old man.

FALSTAFF. What doth gravity out of his bed at midnight? Shall I give him his answer?

PRINCE. Prithee, do, Jack.

FALSTAFF. Faith, and I'll send him packing.

He goes out

PRINCE. Now, sirs! By'r lady, you fought fair, so did you, Peto, so did you, Bardolph. You are lions too, you ran away upon instinct, you will not touch the true prince, no, fie!

BARDOLPH. Faith, I ran when I saw others run.

PRINCE. Faith, tell me now in earnest, how came Falstaff's sword so hacked?

PETO. Why, he hacked it with his dagger, and said he would swear truth out of England but he would make you believe it was done in fight, and persuaded us to do the like.

BARDOLPH. Yea, and to tickle our noses with spear-grass to make them bleed, and then to beslubber our garments with it, and swear it was the blood of true men. I did that I did not this seven year before, I blushed to hear his monstrous devices.

PRINCE. O villain, thou stolest a cup of sack eighteen years ago, and wert taken with the manner, and ever since thou hast blushed extempore. Thou hadst fire and sword on thy side, and yet thou ran'st away. What instinct hadst thou for it?

BARDOLPH [thrusts forward his face]. My lord, do you see these meteors? do you behold these exhalations?

PRINCE. I do.

BARDOLPH. What think you they portend?

PRINCE. Hot livers, and cold purses.

BARDOLPH. Choler, my lord, if rightly taken.

PRINCE. No, if rightly taken, halter.

Falstaff returns

Here comes lean Jack, here comes bare-bone: how now, my sweet creature of bombast? how long is't ago, Jack, since thou sawest thine own knee?

FALSTAFF. My own knee! when I was about thy years, Hal, I was not an eagle's talon in the waist, I could have crept into any alderman's thumb-ring: a plague of sighing and grief! it blows a man up like a bladder. There's villainous news abroad. Here was Sir John Bracy from your father: you must to the court in the morning. That same mad fellow of the north, Percy, and he of Wales, that gave Amaimon the bastinado, and made Lucifer cuckold, and swore the devil his true liegeman upon the cross of a Welsh hook... what a plague call you him?

POINS. Owen Glendower.

FALSTAFF. Owen, Owen, the same—and his son-in-law, Mortimer, and old Northumberland, and that sprightly Scot of Scots, Douglas, that runs a-horseback up a hill perpendicular—

PRINCE. He that rides at high speed, and with his pistol kills a sparrow flying.

FALSTAFF. You have hit it.

PRINCE. So did he never the sparrow.

FALSTAFF. Well, that rascal hath good mettle in him, he will not run.

PRINCE. Why, what a rascal art thou then, to praise him so for running.

FALSTAFF. A-horseback, ye cuckoo, but afoot he will not budge a foot.

PRINCE. Yes, Jack, upon instinct.

FALSTAFF. I grant ye, upon instinct... Well, he is there too, and one Mordake, and a thousand blue-caps more. Worcester is stolen away to-night, thy father's beard is turned white with the news, you may buy land now as cheap as stinking mackerel.

PRINCE. Why then, it is like, if there come a hot June, and this civil buffeting hold, we shall buy maidenheads as they buy hob-nails, by the hundreds.

FALSTAFF. By the mass, lad, thou sayest true, it is like we shall have good trading that way... But, tell me, Hal, art not thou horrible afeard? thou being heir-apparent, could the world pick thee out three such enemies again, as that fiend Douglas, that spirit Percy, and that devil Glendower? art thou not horribly afraid? doth not thy blood thrill at it?

PRINCE. Not a whit, i'faith, I lack some of thy instinct.

FALSTAFF. Well, thou wilt be horribly chid to-morrow when thou comest to thy father. If thou love me, practise an answer.

PRINCE. Do thou stand for my father, and examine me upon the particulars of my life.

FALSTAFF. Shall I? content. This chair shall be my state, this dagger my sceptre, and this cushion my crown.

PRINCE. Thy state is taken for a joined-stool, thy golden sceptre for a leaden dagger, and thy precious rich crown for a pitiful bald crown!

FALSTAFF. Well, an the fire of grace be not quite out of thee, now shalt thou be moved. Give me a cup of sack to make my eyes look red, that it may be thought I have wept—for I must speak in passion, and I will do it in King Cambyses' vein.

PRINCE. Well, here is my leg.

FALSTAFF. And here is my speech.... Stand aside, nobility.

HOSTESS. O Jesu, this is excellent sport, i'faith.

FALSTAFF. Weep not, sweet queen, for trickling tears are vain.

HOSTESS. O, the father, how he holds his countenance!

FALSTAFF. For God's sake, lords, convey my tristful queen,
For tears do stop the flood-gates of her eyes.

HOSTESS. O Jesu, he doth it as like one of these harlotry players as ever I see!

FALSTAFF. Peace, good pint-pot, peace, good tickle-brain.

Harry, I do not only marvel where thou spendest thy time, but also how thou art accompanied: for though the camomile, the more it is trodden on the faster it grows, yet youth, the more it is wasted the sooner it wears... That thou art my son, I have partly thy mother's word, partly my own opinion, but chiefly a villainous trick of thine eye, and a foolish hanging of thy nether lip, that doth warrant me. If then thou be son to me, here lies the point—why, being son to me, art thou so pointed at? Shall the blessed sun of heaven prove a micher and eat blackberries? a question not to be asked. Shall the son of England prove a thief and take purses? a question to be asked. There is a thing, Harry, which thou hast often heard of, and it is known to many in our land by the name of pitch: this pitch (as ancient writers do report) doth defile, so doth the company thou keepest: for, Harry, now I do not speak to thee in drink, but in tears; not in pleasure, but in passion; not in words only, but in woes also: and yet there is a virtuous man whom I have often noted in thy company, but I know not his name.

PRINCE. What manner of man, an it like your majesty?

FALSTAFF. A goodly portly man, i'faith, and a corpulent, of a cheerful look, a pleasing eye, and a most noble carriage, and as I think his age some fifty, or by'r lady inclining to threescore. And now I remember me, his name is Falstaff. If that man should be lewdly given, he deceiveth me; for, Harry, I see virtue in his looks... If then the tree may be known by the fruit, as the fruit by the tree, then, peremptorily I speak it, there is virtue in that Falstaff—him keep with, the rest banish. And tell me now, thou naughty varlet, tell me, where hast thou been this month?

PRINCE. Dost thou speak like a king? Do thou stand for me, and I'll play my father.

FALSTAFF. Depose me? if thou dost if half so gravely, so majestically, both in word and matter, hang me up by the heels for a rabbit-sucker, or a poulter's hare.

PRINCE. Well, here I am set.

FALSTAFF. And here I stand—judge, my masters.

PRINCE. Now, Harry, whence come you?

FALSTAFF. My noble lord, from Eastcheap.

PRINCE. The complaints I hear of thee are grievous.

FALSTAFF. 'Sblood, my lord, they are false: nay, I'll tickle ye for a young prince, i'faith.

PRINCE. Swearest thou, ungracious boy? henceforth ne'er look on me. Thou art violently carried away from grace, there is a devil haunts thee in the likeness of an old fat man, a tun of man is thy companion: why dost thou converse with that trunk of humours, that bolting-hutch of beastliness, that swollen parcel of dropsies, that huge bombard of sack, that stuffed cloak-bag of guts, that roasted Manningtree ox with the pudding in his belly, that reverend vice, that grey iniquity, that father ruffian, that vanity in years? Wherein is he good, but to taste sack and drink it? wherein neat and cleanly, but to carve a capon and eat it? wherein cunning, but in craft? wherein crafty, but in villainy? wherein villainous, but in all things? wherein worthy, but in nothing?

FALSTAFF. I would your grace would take me with you. Whom means your grace?

PRINCE. That villainous abominable misleader of youth, Falstaff, that old white-bearded Satan.

FALSTAFF. My lord, the man I know.

PRINCE. I know thou dost.

FALSTAFF. But to say I know more harm in him than in myself, were to say more than I know: that he is old, the more the pity, his white hairs do witness it, but that he is, saving your reverence, a whoremaster, that I utterly deny: if sack and sugar be a fault, God help the wicked! if to be old and merry be a sin, then many an old host that I know is damned: if to be fat be to be hated, then Pharaoh's lean kine are to be loved. No, my good lord—banish Peto, banish Bardolph, banish Poins, but for sweet Jack Falstaff, kind Jack Falstaff, true Jack Falstaff, valiant Jack Falstaff, and therefore more valiant being as he is old Jack Falstaff, banish not him thy Harry's company, banish not him thy Harry's company, banish plump Jack, and banish all the world.

PRINCE. I do, I will.

Enter Bardolph, running

BARDOLPH. O, my lord, my lord, the sheriff with a most monstrous watch is at the door!

FALSTAFF. Out, ye rogue! play out the play. I have much to say in the behalf of that Falstaff.

Enter the Hostess

HOSTESS. O Jesu, my lord, my lord!—

PRINCE. Heigh, heigh! the devil rides upon a fiddlestick. What's the matter?

HOSTESS. The sheriff and all the watch are at the door, they are come to search the house, shall I let them in?

FALSTAFF. Dost thou hear, Hal? never call a true piece of gold a counterfeit. Thou art essentially made, without seeming so.

PRINCE. And thou a natural coward, without instinct.

FALSTAFF. I deny your major, if you will deny the sheriff, so, if not, let him enter. If I become not a cart as well as another man, a plague on my bringing up! I hope I shall as soon be strangled with a halter as another.

PRINCE. Go, hide thee behind the arras, the rest walk up above. Now, my masters, for a true face and good conscience.

FALSTAFF. Both which I have had, but their date is out, and therefore I'll hide me.

He does so; all but the Prince and Poins go out

PRINCE. Call in the sheriff.—

Enter Sheriff and the Carrier

Now, master sheriff, what is your will with me?

SHERIFF. First, pardon me, my lord. A hue and cry
Hath followed certain men unto this house.

PRINCE. What men?

SHERIFF. One of them is well known, my gracious lord,
A gross fat man.

CARRIER. As fat as butter.

PRINCE. The man, I do assure you, is not here,
For I myself at this time have employed him:
And, sheriff, I will engage my word to thee
That I will by to-morrow dinner-time
Send him to answer thee, or any man,
For any thing he shall be charged withal.
And so let me entreat you leave the house.

SHERIFF. I will, my lord ... There are two gentlemen
Have in this robbery lost three hundred marks.

PRINCE. It may be so: if he have robbed these men,
He shall be answerable—and so, farewell.

SHERIFF. Good night, my noble lord.

PRINCE. I think it is good morrow, is it not?

SHERIFF. Indeed, my lord, I think it be two o'clock.

Sheriff and Carrier depart

PRINCE. This oily rascal is known as well as Paul's ... Go, call him forth.

POINS. Falstaff! fast asleep behind the arras, and snorting like a horse.

PRINCE. Hark, how hard he fetches breath. Search his pockets. [He searcheth his pocket, and findeth certain papers] What hast thou found?

POINS. Nothing but papers, my lord.

PRINCE. Let's see what they be—read them.

POINS.

Item, A capon	2s. 2d.
Item, Sauce	4d.
Item, Sack, two gallons	5s. 8d.
Item, Anchovies and sack after supper	2s. 6d.
Item, Bread	ob.

PRINCE. O monstrous! but one half-pennyworth of bread to this intolerable deal of sack! What there is else keep close, we'll read it at more advantage; there let him sleep till day. I'll to the court in the morning. We must all to the wars, and thy place shall be honourable. I'll procure this fat rogue a charge of foot, and I know his death will be a march of twelve-score. The money shall be paid back again with advantage.... Be with me betimes in the morning, and so good morrow, Poins.

POINS. Good morrow, good my lord. They go

ACT 3

Scene 1: Wales. Glendower's house

Enter Hotspur, Worcester, Lord Mortimer, and Owen Glendower

MORTIMER. These promises are fair, the parties sure,
And our induction full of prosperous hope.

HOTSPUR. Lord Mortimer, and cousin Glendower, will you sit down? and uncle Worcester: a plague upon it, I have forgot the map!

GLENDOWER. No, here it is ... Sit cousin Percy, sit good cousin Hotspur, for by that name as oft as Lancaster doth speak of you, his cheek looks pale, and with a rising sigh he wisheth you in heaven.

HOTSPUR. And you in hell, as oft as he hears Owen Glendower spoke of.

GLENDOWER. I cannot blame him: at my nativity
The front of heaven was full of fiery shapes,
Of burning cressets, and at my birth
The frame and huge foundation of the earth
Shaked like a coward.

HOTSPUR. Why, so it would have done at the same season, if your mother's cat had but kittened, though yourself had never been born.

GLENDOWER. I say the earth did shake, when I was born.

HOTSPUR. And I say the earth was not of my mind,
If you suppose as fearing you it shook.

GLENDOWER. The heavens were all on fire, the earth did tremble.

HOTSPUR. O, then the earth shook to see the heavens on fire,
And not in fear of your nativity.
Diseaséd nature oftentimes breaks forth
In strange eruptions; oft the teeming earth
Is with a kind of colic pinched and vexed
By the imprisoning of unruly wind
Within her womb, which for enlargement striving
Shakes the old beldam earth, and topples down
Steeples and moss-grown towers. At your birth

Our grandam earth, having this distemperature,
In passion shook.
GLENDOWER. Cousin, of many men
I do not bear these crossings. Give me leave
To tell you once again that at my birth
The front of heaven was full of fiery shapes,
The goats ran from the mountains, and the herds
Were strangely clamorous to the frighted fields.
These signs have marked me extraordinary,
And all the courses of my life do show
I am not in the roll of common men...
Where is he living, clipped in with the sea
That chides the banks of England, Scotland, Wales,
Which calls me pupil or hath read to me?
And bring him out that is but woman's son
Can trace me in the tedious ways of art,
And hold me pace in deep experiments.
HOTSPUR. I think there's no man speaks better Welsh:
I'll to dinner.
MORTIMER. Peace, cousin Percy, you will make him mad.
GLENDOWER. I can call spirits from the vasty deep.
HOTSPUR. Why, so can I, or so can any man,
But will they come when you do call for them?
GLENDOWER. Why, I can teach you, cousin, to command the devil.
HOTSPUR. And I can teach thee, coz, to shame the devil,
By telling truth. Tell truth and shame the devil...
If thou have power to raise him, bring him hither,
And I'll be sworn I have power to shame him hence:
O, while you live, tell truth and shame the devil.
MORTIMER. Come, come, no more of this unprofitable chat.
GLENDOWER. Three times hath Henry Bolingbroke made head
Against my power—thrice from the banks of Wye
And sandy-bottomed Severn have I sent him
Bootless home and weather-beaten back.
HOTSPUR. Home without boots, and in foul weather too!
How 'scapes he agues, in the devil's name?
GLENDOWER. Come, here's the map, shall we divide our right,
According to our threefold order ta'en?
MORTIMER. The archdeacon hath divided it
Into three limits, very equally:
England, from Trent to Severn hitherto,
By south and east is to my part assigned:
All westward, Wales beyond the Severn shore,
And all the fertile land within that bound,
To Owen Glendower: and, dear coz, to you
The remnant northward, lying off from Trent.
And our indentures tripartite are drawn,
Which being sealéd interchangeably,
(A business that this night may execute)
To-morrow, cousin Percy, you and I
And my good Lord of Worcester will set forth
To meet your father and the Scottish power,
As is appointed us, at Shrewsbury.
My father Glendower is not ready yet,
Nor shall we need his help these fourteen days.
Within that space you may have drawn together
Your tenants, friends, and neighbouring gentlemen.
GLENDOWER. A shorter time shall send me to you, lords,
And in my conduct shall your ladies come,
From whom you now must steal and take no leave,
For there will be a world of water shed
Upon the parting of your wives and you.
HOTSPUR. Methinks, my moiety, north from Burton here,
In quantity equals not one of yours.
See how this river comes me cranking in,
And cuts me from the best of all my land
A huge half-moon, a monstrous cantle out.
I'll have the current in this place dammed up,
And here the smug and silver Trent shall run
In a new channel, fair and evenly.
It shall not wind with such a deep indent,
To rob me of so rich a bottom here.
GLENDOWER. Not wind? it shall, it must—you see, it doth.
MORTIMER. Yea, but
Mark how he bears his course, and runs me up
With like advantage on the other side,
Gelding the opposéd continent as much
As on the other side it takes from you.
WORCESTER. Yea, but a little charge will trench him here,
And on this north side win this cape of land,
And then he runs straight and even.
HOTSPUR. I'll have it so, a little charge will do it.
GLENDOWER. I'll not have it altered.
HOTSPUR. Will not you?
GLENDOWER. No, nor you shall not.
HOTSPUR. Who shall say me nay?
GLENDOWER. Why, that will I.
HOTSPUR. Let me not understand you then, speak it in Welsh.
GLENDOWER. I can speak English, lord, as well as you,
For I was trained up in the English court,
Where being but young I framéd to the harp
Many an English ditty, lovely well,
And gave the tongue a helpful ornament,
A virtue that was never seen in you.
HOTSPUR. Marry,
And I am glad of it with all my heart!
I had rather be a kitten and cry mew
Than one of these same metre ballad-mongers—
I had rather hear a brazen canstick turned,
Or a dry wheel grate on the axle-tree,
And that would set my teeth nothing on edge,
Nothing so much as mincing poetry—
'Tis like the forced gait of a shuffling nag.
GLENDOWER. Come, you shall have Trent turned.
HOTSPUR. I do not care, I'll give thrice so much land
To any well-deserving friend:
But in the way of bargain, mark ye me,
I'll cavil on the ninth part of a hair.
Are the indentures drawn? shall we be gone?
GLENDOWER. The moon shines fair, you may away by night:
I'll haste the writer, and withal
Break with your wives of your departure hence.
I am afraid my daughter will run mad,
So much she doteth on her Mortimer. He goes
MORTIMER. Fie, cousin Percy! how you cross my father!
HOTSPUR. I cannot choose. Sometime he angers me
With telling me of the moldwarp and the ant,
Of the dreamer Merlin and his prophecies,

And of a dragon and a finless fish,
A clip-winged griffin and a moulten raven,
A couching lion and a ramping cat,
And such a deal of skimble-skamble stuff
As puts me from my faith. I tell you what—
He held me last night at least nine hours
In reckoning up the several devils' names
That were his lackeys. I cried, 'hum', and 'well, go to',
But marked him not a word. O, he is as tedious
As a tired horse, a railing wife,
Worse than a smoky house—I had rather live
With cheese and garlic in a windmill, far,
Than feed on cates and have him talk to me
In any summer house in Christendom.

MORTIMER. In faith, he is a worthy gentleman,
Exceedingly well read, and profited
In strange concealments, valiant as a lion,
And wondrous affable, and as bountiful
As mines of India . . . Shall I tell you, cousin?
He holds your temper in a high respect,
And curbs himself even of his natural scope,
When you come 'cross his humour, faith, he does.
I warrant you, that man is not alive
Might so have tempted him as you have done,
Without the taste of danger and reproof—
But do not use it oft, let me entreat you.

WORCESTER. In faith, my lord, you are too wilful blame,
And since your coming hither have done enough
To put him quite beside his patience.
You must needs learn, lord, to amend this fault.
Though sometimes it show greatness, courage, blood—
And that's the dearest grace it renders you—
Yet oftentimes it doth present harsh rage,
Defect of manners, want of government,
Pride, haughtiness, opinion, and disdain,
The least of which haunting a nobleman
Loseth men's hearts, and leaves behind a stain
Upon the beauty of all parts besides,
Beguiling them of commendation.

HOTSPUR. Well, I am schooled—good manners be your speed!
Here come our wives, and let us take our leave.

Enter Glendower with the Ladies

MORTIMER. This is the deadly spite that angers me—
My wife can speak no English, I no Welsh.

GLENDOWER. My daughter weeps, she'll not part with you,
She'll be a soldier too, she'll to the wars.

MORTIMER. Good father, tell her that she and my aunt Percy
Shall follow in your conduct speedily.

Glendower speaks to her in Welsh, and she answers him in the same

GLENDOWER. She is desperate here, a peevish self-willed harlotry, one that no persuasion can do good upon.

She turns to Mortimer and speaks in Welsh

MORTIMER. I understand thy looks. That pretty Welsh
Which thou pourest down from these swelling heavens
I am too perfect in, and but for shame
In such a parley should I answer thee.

The lady speaks again in Welsh

I understand thy kisses and thou mine,
And that's a feeling disputation,
But I will never be a truant, love,
Till I have learned thy language, for thy tongue
Makes Welsh as sweet as ditties highly penned,
Sung by a fair queen in a summer's bower,
With ravishing division, to her lute.

GLENDOWER. Nay, if you melt, then will she run mad.

The lady speaks again in Welsh

MORTIMER. O, I am ignorance itself in this!

GLENDOWER. She bids you on the wanton rushes lay you down,
And rest your gentle head upon her lap,
And she will sing the song that pleaseth you,
And on your eyelids crown the god of sleep,
Charming your blood with pleasing heaviness,
Making such difference 'twixt wake and sleep
As is the difference betwixt day and night,
The hour before the heavenly-harnessed team
Begins his golden progress in the east.

MORTIMER. With all my heart I'll sit and hear her sing,
By that time will our book, I think, be drawn.

GLENDOWER. Do so,
And those musicians that shall play to you
Hang in the air a thousand leagues from hence,
And straight they shall be here. Sit and attend.

HOTSPUR. Come, Kate, thou art perfect in lying down.
Come, quick, quick, that I may lay my head in thy lap.

LADY PERCY. Go, ye giddy goose.

The music plays

HOTSPUR. Now I perceive the devil understands Welsh,
And 'tis no marvel, he is so humorous.
By'r lady, he is a good musician.

LADY PERCY. Then should you be nothing but musical, for you are altogether governed by humours. Lie still, ye thief, and hear the lady sing in Welsh.

HOTSPUR. I had rather hear Lady, my brach, howl in Irish.

LADY PERCY. Wouldst thou have thy head broken?

HOTSPUR. No.

LADY PERCY. Then be still.

HOTSPUR. Neither—'tis a woman's fault.

LADY PERCY. Now God help thee!

HOTSPUR. To the Welsh lady's bed.

LADY PERCY. What's that?

HOTSPUR. Peace! she sings.

Here the lady sings a Welsh song

HOTSPUR. Come, Kate, I'll have your song too.

LADY PERCY. Not mine, in good sooth.

HOTSPUR. Not yours, in good sooth! Heart! you swear like a comfit-maker's wife—'not you, in good sooth', and 'as true as I live', and 'as God shall mend me', and 'as sure as day'—
And givest such sarcenet surety for thy oaths,
As if thou never walk'st further than Finsbury.
Swear me, Kate, like a lady as thou art,
A good mouth-filling oath, and leave 'in sooth',
And such protest of pepper-gingerbread,
To velvet-guards and Sunday citizens.
Come, sing.

LADY PERCY. I will not sing.

HOTSPUR. 'Tis the next way to turn tailor, or be red-breast teacher. An the indentures be drawn, I'll away within these two hours—and so come in when ye will. He goes

GLENDOWER. Come, come, Lord Mortimer, you are as slow
As hot Lord Percy is on fire to go.
By this our book is drawn. We'll but seal,
And then to horse immediately.
MORTIMER. With all my heart.
They go

Scene 2: London. The palace

The King, Prince of Wales, and others

KING. Lords, give us leave. The Prince of Wales and I
Must have some private conference. But be near at hand,
For we shall presently have need of you....
Lords withdraw
I know not whether God will have it so
For some displeasing service I have done,
That, in his secret doom, out of my blood
He'll breed revengement and a scourge for me;
But thou dost in thy passages of life
Make me believe that thou art only marked
For the hot vengeance and the rod of heaven,
To punish my mistreadings. Tell me else,
Could such inordinate and low desires,
Such poor, such bare, such lewd, such mean attempts,
Such barren pleasures, rude society,
As thou art matched withal, and grafted to,
Accompany the greatness of thy blood,
And hold their level with thy princely heart?
PRINCE. So please your majesty, I would I could
Quit all offences with as clear excuse
As well as I am doubtless I can purge
Myself of many I am charged withal.
Yet such extenuation let me beg,
As, in reproof of many tales devised,
Which oft the ear of greatness needs must hear,
By smiling pickthanks and base newsmongers,
I may for some things true, wherein my youth
Hath faulty wand'red and irregular,
Find pardon on my true submission.
KING. God pardon thee! yet let me wonder, Harry,
At thy affections, which do hold a wing
Quite from the flight of all thy ancestors.
Thy place in council thou hast rudely lost,
Which by thy younger brother is supplied,
And art almost an alien to the hearts
Of all the court and princes of my blood.
The hope and expectation of thy time
Is ruined, and the soul of every man
Prophetically do forethink thy fall ...
Had I so lavish of my presence been,
So common-hackneyed in the eyes of men,
So stale and cheap to vulgar company,
Opinion, that did help me to the crown,
Had still kept loyal to possession,
And left me in reputeless banishment,
A fellow of no mark nor likelihood.
By being seldom seen, I could not stir
But like a comet I was wond'red at;
That men would tell their children 'This is he!'
Others would say 'Where? which is Bolingbroke?'
And then I stole all courtesy from heaven,
And dressed myself in such humility
That I did pluck allegiance from men's hearts,
Loud shouts and salutations from their mouths,
Even in the presence of the crownéd king....
Thus did I keep my person fresh and new,
My presence like a robe pontifical,
Ne'er seen but wond'red at, and so my state,
Seldom but sumptuous, showéd like a feast,
And wan by rareness such solemnity....
The skipping king, he ambled up and down
With shallow jesters and rash bavin wits,
Soon kindled and soon burnt, carded his state,
Mingled his royalty with cap'ring fools,
Had his great name profanéd with their scorns,
And gave his countenance, against his name,
To laugh at gibing boys, and stand the push
Of every beardless vain comparative,
Grew a companion to the common streets,
Enfeoffed himself to popularity,
That, being daily swallowed by men's eyes,
They surfeited with honey and began
To loathe the taste of sweetness, whereof a little
More than a little is by much too much.
So when he had occasion to be seen,
He was but as the cuckoo is in June,
Heard, not regarded; seen, but with such eyes
As, sick and blunted with community,
Afford no extraordinary gaze,
Such as is bent on sun-like majesty,
When it shines seldom in admiring eyes;
But rather drowzed and hung their eyelids down,
Slept in his face, and rend'red such aspect
As cloudy men use to their adversaries,
Being with his presence glutted, gorged, and full.
And in that very line, Harry, standest thou,
For thou hast lost thy princely privilege
With vile participation. Not an eye
But is a-weary of thy common sight,
Save mine, which hath desired to see thee more,
Which now doth that I would not have it do,
Make blind itself with foolish tenderness.
PRINCE. I shall hereafter, my thrice gracious lord,
Be more myself.
KING. For all the world
As thou art to this hour was Richard then,
When I from France set foot at Ravenspurgh,
And even as I was then is Percy now.
Now by my sceptre and my soul to boot,
He hath more worthy interest to the state
Than thou the shadow of succession.
For of no right, nor colour like to right,
He doth fill fields with harness in the realm,
Turns head against the lion's arméd jaws,
And, being no more in debt to years than thou,
Leads ancient lords and reverend bishops on
To bloody battles and to bruising arms.
What never-dying honour hath he got
Against renownéd Douglas! whose high deeds,
Whose hot incursions and great name in arms
Holds from all soldiers chief majority,
And military title capital,
Through all the kingdoms that acknowledge Christ.
Thrice hath this Hotspur, Mars in swathling clothes,
This infant warrior, in his enterprizes

Discomfited great Douglas, ta'en him once,
Enlargéd him and made a friend of him,
To fill the mouth of deep defiance up,
And shake the peace and safety of our throne.
And what say you to this? Percy, Northumberland,
The Archbishop's grace of York, Douglas, Mortimer,
Capitulate against us and are up....
But wherefore do I tell these news to thee?
Why, Harry, do I tell thee of my foes,
Which art my nearest and dearest enemy?
Thou that art like enough, through vassal fear,
Base inclination and the start of spleen,
To fight against me under Percy's pay,
To dog his heels and curtsy at his frowns,
To show how much thou art degenerate.

PRINCE. Do not think so, you shall not find it so;
And God forgive them that so much have swayed
Your majesty's good thoughts away from me!
I will redeem all this on Percy's head,
And in the closing of some glorious day
Be bold to tell you that I am your son,
When I will wear a garment all of blood,
And stain my favours in a bloody mask,
Which washed away shall scour my shame with it.
And that shall be the day, whene'er it lights,
That this same child of honour and renown,
This gallant Hotspur, this all-praiséd knight,
And your unthought-of Harry chance to meet.
For every honour sitting on his helm
Would they were multitudes, and on my head
My shames redoubled! for the time will come,
That I shall make this northern youth exchange
His glorious deeds for my indignities.
Percy is but my factor, good my lord,
To engross up glorious deeds on my behalf,
And I will call him to so strict account
That he shall render every glory up,
Yea, even the slightest worship of his time,
Or I will tear the reckoning from his heart....
This, in the name of God, I promise here,
The which if He be pleased I shall perform,
I do beseech your majesty may salve
The long-grown wounds of my intemperature:
If not, the end of life cancels all bands,
And I will die a hundred thousand deaths
Ere break the smallest parcel of this vow.

KING. A hundred thousand rebels die in this—
Thou shalt have charge and sovereign trust herein.

Enter Blunt

How now, good Blunt? thy looks are full of speed.

BLUNT. So hath the business that I come to speak of.
Lord Mortimer of Scotland hath sent word
That Douglas and the English rebels met
The eleventh of this month at Shrewsbury.
A mighty and a fearful head they are,
If promises be kept on every hand,
As ever off'red foul play in a state.

KING. The Earl of Westmoreland set forth to-day,
With him my son, Lord John of Lancaster,
For this advertisement is five days old.
On Wednesday next, Harry, you shall set forward,
On Thursday, we ourselves will march: our meeting
Is Bridgenorth, and, Harry, you shall march
Through Gloucestershire; by which account,
Our business valuéd, some twelve days hence
Our general forces at Bridgenorth shall meet.
Our hands are full of business, let's away,
Advantage feeds him fat while men delay.

They go

Scene 3: The Boar's Head Tavern in Eastcheap

Enter Falstaff and Bardolph

FALSTAFF. Bardolph, am I not fallen away vilely since this last action? do I not bate? do I not dwindle? Why, my skin hangs about me like an old lady's loose gown, I am withered like an old apple-John. Well, I'll repent, and that suddenly, while I am in some liking. I shall be out of heart shortly, and then I shall have no strength to repent. An I have not forgotten what the inside of a church is made of, I am a peppercorn, a brewer's horse. The inside of a church! Company, villainous company, hath been the spoil of me.

BARDOLPH. Sir John, you are so fretful you cannot live long.

FALSTAFF. Why, there is it: come, sing me a bawdy song, make me merry.... I was as virtuously given as a gentleman need to be; virtuous enough, swore little, diced not above seven times a week, went to a bawdy-house not above once in a quarter of an hour, paid money that I borrowed three or four times, lived well, and in good compass: and now I live out of all order, out of all compass.

BARDOLPH. Why, you are so fat, Sir John, that you must needs be out of all compass; out of all reasonable compass, Sir John.

FALSTAFF. Do thou amend thy face, and I'll amend my life: thou art our admiral, thou bearest the lantern in the poop, but 'tis in the nose of thee: thou art the Knight of the Burning Lamp.

BARDOLPH. Why, Sir John, my face does you no harm.

FALSTAFF. No, I'll be sworn—I make as good use of it as many a man doth of a death's-head or a memento mori. I never see thy face but I think upon hell-fire, and Dives that lived in purple; for there he is in his robes, burning, burning. If thou wert any way given to virtue, I would swear by thy face; my oath should be, 'by this fire, that's God's angel'. But thou art altogether given over; and wert indeed, but for the light in thy face, the son of utter darkness. When thou ran'st up Gad's Hill in the night to catch my horse, if I did not think thou hadst been an ignis fatuus or a ball of wildfire, there's no purchase in money. O, thou art a perpetual triumph, an everlasting bonfire-light! Thou hast saved me a thousand marks in links and torches, walking with thee in the night betwixt tavern and tavern: but sack that thou hast drunk me would have bought me lights as good cheap at the dearest chandler's in Europe. I have maintained that salamander of yours with fire any time this two and thirty years, God reward me for it!

BARDOLPH. 'Sblood, I would my face were in your belly!

FALSTAFF. God-a-mercy! so should I be sure to be heartburned.

Hostess enters

How now, Dame Partlet the hen! have you inquired yet who picked my pocket!

HOSTESS. Why, Sir John, what do you think, Sir John? do you think I keep thieves in my house? I have searched, I have inquired, so has my husband, man by man, boy by boy, servant by servant. The tithe of a hair was never lost in my house before.

FALSTAFF. Ye lie, hostess—Bardolph was shaved, and lost many a hair, and I'll be sworn my pocket was picked: go to, you are a woman, go.

HOSTESS. Who, I? no, I defy thee: God's light, I was never called so in mine own house before.

FALSTAFF. Go to, I know you well enough.

HOSTESS. No, Sir John, you do not know me, Sir John. I know you, Sir John. You owe me money, Sir John, and now you pick a quarrel to beguile me of it. I bought you a dozen of shirts to your back.

FALSTAFF. Dowlas, filthy dowlas. I have given them away to bakers' wives. They have made bolters of them.

HOSTESS. Now, as I am a true woman, holland of eight shillings an ell! You owe money here besides, Sir John, for your diet and by-drinkings, and money lent you, four and twenty pound.

FALSTAFF. He had his part of it, let him pay.

HOSTESS. He? alas, he is poor, he hath nothing.

FALSTAFF. How! poor? look upon his face. What call you rich? let them coin his nose, let them coin his cheeks. I'll not pay a denier! What, will you make a younker of me? shall I not take mine ease in mine inn but I shall have my pocket picked? I have lost a seal-ring of my grandfather's worth forty mark.

HOSTESS. O Jesu! I have heard the prince tell him, I know not how oft, that that ring was copper.

FALSTAFF. How! the prince is a Jack, a sneak-up. 'Sblood, an he were here, I would cudgel him like a dog, if he would say so.

Enter the Prince and Poins, marching; Falstaff meets them playing upon his truncheon like a fife

FALSTAFF. How now, lad! is the wind in that door, i'faith? must we all march?

BARDOLPH. Yea, two and two, Newgate fashion.

HOSTESS. My lord, I pray you, hear me.

PRINCE. What say'st thou, Mistress Quickly? How doth thy husband? I love him well, he is an honest man.

HOSTESS. Good my lord, hear me.

FALSTAFF. Prithee, let her alone, and list to me.

PRINCE. What say'st thou, Jack?

FALSTAFF. The other night I fell asleep here, behind the arras, and had my pocket picked. This house is turned bawdy-house, they pick pockets.

PRINCE. What didst thou lose, Jack?

FALSTAFF. Wilt thou believe me, Hal? three or four bonds of forty pound a-piece, and a seal-ring of my grandfather's.

PRINCE. A trifle, some eight-penny matter.

HOSTESS. So I told him, my lord, and I said I heard your grace say so: and, my lord, he speaks most vilely of you, like a foul-mouthed man as he is, and said he would cudgel you.

PRINCE. What! he did not?

HOSTESS. There's neither faith, truth, nor womanhood in me else.

FALSTAFF. There's no more faith in thee than in a stewed prune, nor no more truth in thee than in a drawn fox—and for womanhood, Maid Marian may be the deputy's wife of the ward to thee. Go, you thing, go.

HOSTESS. Say, what thing? what thing?

FALSTAFF. What thing? why, a thing to thank God on.

HOSTESS. I am nothing to thank God on, I would thou shouldst know it. I am an honest man's wife, and setting thy knighthood aside, thou art a knave to call me so.

FALSTAFF. Setting thy womanhood aside, thou art a beast to say otherwise.

HOSTESS. Say, what beast, thou knave, thou?

FALSTAFF. What beast? why, an otter.

PRINCE. An otter, Sir John! why an otter?

FALSTAFF. Why? she's neither fish nor flesh, a man knows not where to have her.

HOSTESS. Thou art an unjust man in saying so, thou or any man knows where to have me, thou knave, thou!

PRINCE. Thou say'st true, hostess, and he slanders thee most grossly.

HOSTESS. So he doth you, my lord, and said this other day you ought him a thousand pound.

PRINCE. Sirrah, do I owe you a thousand pound?

FALSTAFF. A thousand pound, Hal? a million. Thy love is worth a million, thou owest me thy love.

HOSTESS. Nay, my lord, he called you Jack, and said he would cudgel you.

FALSTAFF. Did I, Bardolph?

BARDOLPH. Indeed, Sir John, you said so.

FALSTAFF. Yea, if he said my ring was copper.

PRINCE. I say 'tis copper. Darest thou be as good as thy word now?

FALSTAFF. Why, Hal, thou knowest, as thou art but man I dare, but as thou art prince I fear thee as I fear the roaring of the lion's whelp.

PRINCE. And why not as the lion?

FALSTAFF. The king himself is to be feared as the lion. Dost thou think I'll fear thee as I fear thy father? nay, an I do, I pray God my girdle break.

PRINCE. O, if it should, how would thy guts fall about thy knees! But, sirrah, there's no room for faith, truth, nor honesty, in this bosom of thine—it is all filled up with guts and midriff. Charge an honest woman with picking thy pocket! why, thou whoreson, impudent, embossed rascal, if there were anything in thy pocket but tavern-reckonings, memorandums of bawdy-houses, and one poor pennyworth of sugar-candy to make thee long-winded—if thy pocket were enriched with any other injuries but these, I am a villain. And yet you will stand to it, you will not pocket up wrong! Art thou not ashamed?

FALSTAFF. Dost thou hear, Hal? thou knowest in the state of innocency Adam fell, and what should poor Jack Falstaff do in the days of villainy? Thou seest I have more flesh than another man, and therefore more frailty . . . You confess then, you picked my pocket?

PRINCE. It appears so by the story.

FALSTAFF. Hostess, I forgive thee. Go, make ready breakfast, love thy husband, look to thy servants, cherish thy guests. Thou shalt find me tractable to any honest reason, thou seest I am pacified still. Nay, prithee, be gone. [Hostess goes] Now Hal, to the news at court: for the robbery, lad, how is that answered?

PRINCE. O, my sweet beef, I must still be good angel to thee. The money is paid back again.

FALSTAFF. O, I do not like that paying back, 'tis a double labour.

PRINCE. I am good friends with my father, and may do any thing.

FALSTAFF. Rob me the exchequer the first thing thou doest, and do it with unwashed hands too.

BARDOLPH. Do, my lord.

PRINCE. I have procured thee, Jack, a charge of foot.

FALSTAFF. I would it had been of horse. Where shall I find one that can steal well? O for a fine thief, of the age of two and twenty or thereabouts! I am heinously unprovided. Well, God be thanked for these rebels, they offend none but the virtuous; I laud them, I praise them.

PRINCE. Bardolph—

BARDOLPH. My lord.

PRINCE. Go bear this letter to Lord John of Lancaster, to my brother John, this to my Lord of Westmoreland.
Go, Poins, to horse, to horse, for thou and I
Have thirty miles to ride yet ere dinner time.
Jack, meet me to-morrow in the Temple hall
at two o'clock in the afternoon.
There shalt thou know thy charge, and there receive
Money and order for their furniture.
The land is burning, Percy stands on high,
And either we or they must lower lie.

He follows Bardolph and Poins

FALSTAFF. Rare words! brave world! Hostess, my breakfast, come!
O, I could wish this tavern were my drum.

He goes

ACT 4

Scene 1: The rebel camp near Shrewsbury

Hotspur, Worcester, and Douglas

HOTSPUR. Well said, my noble Scot! If speaking truth
In this fine age were not thought flattery,
Such attribution should the Douglas have,
As not a soldier of this season's stamp
Should go so general current through the world.
By God, I cannot flatter, I do defy
The tongues of soothers, but a braver place
In my heart's love hath no man than yourself.
Nay, task me to my word, approve me, lord.

DOUGLAS. Thou art the king of honour.
No man so potent breathes upon the ground
But I will beard him.

HOTSPUR. Do so, and 'tis well.

Enter one with letters

What letters hast thou there?—I can but thank you.

MESSENGER. These letters come from your father—

HOTSPUR. Letters from him! why comes he not himself?

MESSENGER. He cannot come, my lord, he is grievous sick.

HOTSPUR. 'Zounds! how has he the leisure to be sick
In such a justling time? Who leads his power?
Under whose government come they along?

MESSENGER. His letters bear his mind, not I, my lord.

WORCESTER. I prithee, tell me, doth he keep his bed?

MESSENGER. He did, my lord, four days ere I set forth,
And at the time of my departure thence
He was much feared by his physicians.

WORCESTER. I would the state of time had first been whole,
Ere he by sickness had been visited.
His health was never better worth than now.

HOTSPUR. Sick now! droop now! this sickness doth infect
The very life-blood of our enterprise,
'Tis catching hither, even to our camp.
He writes me here that inward sickness—
And that his friends by deputation could not
So soon be drawn, nor did he think it meet
To lay so dangerous and dear a trust
On any soul removed but on his own.
Yet doth he give us bold advertisement
That with our small conjunction we should on,
To see how fortune is disposed to us.
For as he writes there is no quailing now,
Because the king is certainly possessed
Of all our purposes. What say you to it?

WORCESTER. Your father's sickness is a maim to us.

HOTSPUR. A perilous gash, a very limb lopped off—
And yet, in faith, it is not. His present want
Seems more than we shall find it: were it good
To set the exact wealth of all our states
All at one cast? to set so rich a main
On the nice hazard of one doubtful hour?
It were not good, for therein should we read
The very bottom and the soul of hope,
The very list, the very utmost bound
Of all our fortunes.

DOUGLAS. Faith, and so we should.
Where now remains a sweet reversion,
We may boldly spend upon the hope of what
Is to come in.
A comfort of retirement lives in this.

HOTSPUR. A rendezvous, a home to fly unto,
If that the devil and mischance look big
Upon the maidenhead of our affairs.

WORCESTER. But yet I would your father had been here . . .
The quality and hair of our attempt
Brooks no division. It will be thought,
By some that know not why he is away,
That wisdom, loyalty, and mere dislike
Of our proceedings kept the earl from hence.
And think how such an apprehension
May turn the tide of fearful faction,
And breed a kind of question in our cause:
For well you know we of the off'ring side
Must keep aloof from strict arbitrement,
And stop all sight-holes, every loop from whence
The eye of reason may pry in upon us.
This absence of your father's draws a curtain
That shows the ignorant a kind of fear
Before not dreamt of.

HOTSPUR. You strain too far.
I rather of his absence make this use—
It lends a lustre and more great opinion,
A larger dare to our great enterprise,
Than if the earl were here; for men must think,

If we without his help can make a head
To push against a kingdom, with his help
We shall o'erturn it topsy-turvy down.
Yet all goes well, yet all our joints are whole.
DOUGLAS. As heart can think. There is not such a word
Spoke of in Scotland as this term of fear.

Sir Richard Vernon enters

HOTSPUR. My cousin Vernon! welcome, by my soul.
VERNON. Pray God, my news be worth a welcome, lord.
The Earl of Westmoreland, seven thousand strong,
Is marching hitherwards, with him Prince John.
HOTSPUR. No harm—what more?
VERNON. And further, I have learned,
The king himself in person is set forth,
Or hitherwards intended speedily,
With strong and mighty preparation.
HOTSPUR. He shall be welcome too: where is his son,
The nimble-footed madcap Prince of Wales,
And his comrades, that daffed the world aside,
And bid it pass?
VERNON. All furnished, all in arms;
All plumed like estridges that wing the wind,
Baited like eagles having lately bathed,
Glittering in golden coats like images,
As full of spirit as the month of May,
And gorgeous as the sun at midsummer,
Wanton as youthful goats, wild as young bulls.
I saw young Harry with his beaver on,
His cushes on his thighs, gallantly armed,
Rise from the ground like feathered Mercury,
And vaulted with such ease into his seat,
As if an angel dropped down from the clouds,
To turn and wind a fiery Pegasus,
And witch the world with noble horsemanship.
HOTSPUR. No more, no more! worse than the sun in March,
This praise doth nourish agues. Let them come,
They come like sacrifices in their trim,
And to the fire-eyed maid of smoky war
All hot and bleeding will we offer them.
The mailéd Mars shall on his altar sit,
Up to the ears in blood. I am on fire
To hear this rich reprisal is so nigh,
And yet not ours . . . Come, let me taste my horse,
Who is to bear me like a thunderbolt
Against the bosom of the Prince of Wales.
Harry to Harry shall, hot horse to horse,
Meet and ne'er part till one drop down a corse.
O, that Glendower were come!
VERNON. There is more news.
I learned in Worcester, as I rode along,
He cannot draw his power this fourteen days.
DOUGLAS. That's the worst tidings that I hear of yet.
WORCESTER. Ay, by my faith, that bears a frosty sound.
HOTSPUR. What may the king's whole battle reach unto?
VERNON. To thirty thousand.
HOTSPUR. Forty let it be!
My father and Glendower being both away,
The powers of us may serve so great a day.
Come, let us take a muster speedily—
Doomsday is near—die all, die merrily.
DOUGLAS. Talk not of dying, I am out of fear
Of death or death's hand for this one half year.
They go

Scene 2: A highway near Coventry

Enter Falstaff with Bardolph

FALSTAFF. Bardolph, get thee before to Coventry, fill me a bottle of sack, our soldiers shall march through. We'll to Sutton Co'fil' to-night.

BARDOLPH. Will you give me money, captain?

FALSTAFF. Lay out, lay out.

BARDOLPH. This bottle makes an angel.

FALSTAFF. An if it do, take it for thy labour—and if it make twenty, take them all, I'll answer the coinage. Bid my lieutenant Peto meet me at town's end.

BARDOLPH. I will, captain. Farewell. He goes

FALSTAFF. If I be not ashamed of my soldiers, I am a soused gurnet. I have misused the king's press damnably. I have got in exchange of a hundred and fifty soldiers three hundred and odd pounds. I press me none but good householders, yeomen's sons, inquire me out contracted bachelors, such as had been asked twice on the banns, such a commodity of warm slaves, as had as lieve hear the devil as a drum, such as fear the report of a caliver worse than a struck fowl or a hurt wild-duck: I pressed me none but such toasts-and-butter, with hearts in their bellies no bigger than pins' heads, and they have bought out their services, and now my whole charge consists of ancients, corporals, lieutenants, gentlemen of companies—slaves as ragged as Lazarus in the painted cloth, where the Glutton's dogs licked his sores, and such as indeed were never soldiers, but discarded unjust serving-men, younger sons to younger brothers, revolted tapsters, and ostlers trade-fallen, the cankers of a calm world and a long peace, ten times more dishonourable ragged than an old feazed ancient; and such have I to fill up the rooms of them as have bought out their services, that you would think that I had a hundred and fifty tattered prodigals, lately come from swine-keeping, from eating draff and husks. A mad fellow met me on the way, and told me I had unloaded all the gibbets and pressed the dead bodies. No eye hath seen such scarecrows. I'll not march through Coventry with them, that's flat: nay, and the villains march wide betwixt the legs as if they had gyves on, for indeed I had the most of them out of prison. There's not a shirt and a half in all my company, and the half shirt is two napkins tacked together and thrown over the shoulders like a herald's coat without sleeves, and the shirt, to say the truth, stolen from my host at Saint Alban's or the red-nose innkeeper of Daventry. But that's all one; they'll find linen enough on every hedge.

Enter Prince Henry and Westmoreland

PRINCE. How now, blown Jack? how now, quilt?

FALSTAFF. What, Hal? how now, mad wag? what a devil dost thou in Warwickshire?—My good Lord of Westmoreland, I cry you mercy. I thought your honour had already been at Shrewsbury.

WESTMORELAND. Faith, Sir John, 'tis more than time that I were there, and you too; but my powers are there already. The king, I can tell you, looks for us all, we must away all night.

FALSTAFF. Tut, never fear me, I am as vigilant as a cat to steal cream.
PRINCE. I think, to steal cream indeed, for thy theft hath already made thee butter. But tell me, Jack, whose fellows are these that come after?
FALSTAFF. Mine, Hal, mine.
PRINCE. I did never see such pitiful rascals.
FALSTAFF. Tut, tut, good enough to toss, food for powder, food for powder—they'll fill a pit as well as better; tush, man, mortal men, mortal men.
WESTMORELAND. Ay, but, Sir John, methinks they are exceeding poor and bare, too beggarly.
FALSTAFF. Faith, for their poverty, I know not where they had that, and for their bareness I am sure they never learned that of me.
PRINCE. No, I'll be sworn, unless you call three fingers in the ribs, bare. But, sirrah, make haste. Percy is already in the field. He goes
FALSTAFF. What, is the king encamped?
WESTMORELAND. He is, Sir John. I fear we shall stay too long. He goes
FALSTAFF. Well,
To the latter end of a fray and the beginning of a feast
Fits a dull fighter and a keen guest. He follows

Scene 3: The rebel camp near Shrewsbury

Enter Hotspur, Worcester, Douglas, and Vernon

HOTSPUR. We'll fight with him to-night.
WORCESTER. It may not be.
